August Stock, son and head miller of F. Btock, proprietor of the large flouring mi at Hillsdale was on the 24th inst., caught in the. cog gearing of the boiling apparatus in the mill and fearfully injured. Both his arms were cruebed from the wrist to the shoulders, and he was otherwise badly bruised about the body. There is slight hope that he may live, as he is young and of strong constitution. He is a man of exemplary habits, and held in the highest esteem by the entire community.

On the evening of February 23, while Mr. and Mrs. Porter Brown, an old couple living in-Hartland, 10 miles south of Fenton, were quietly seated in their home, four masked men suddenly burst the doon open with a large fence post, grabbed Mr. Brown, gagged him and cowered him with a revolver. They then immediately entered the bedroom and procured $1,800 ately entered the bedroom and produced e1,000 in bills and $600 in gold. They seemed very cool and sarcastic, and left the old couple bound hand and foot to their bed, where they remained two hours. Mr. Brown found his team partly harnessed, but not removed. arp in Cleveland Leader.

In looking over the Senate one in surprisod at seeing how many men reprosent different states than those of their birth. Most of the western states are represented by eastern men and many of the eastern by men from other states. By careful investigation 1 tind that seven Senators were born in Ohio, four in Tennessee, four in Vermouf, three in Georgia, six in Kentucky, four in Virginia, one in Indiana, one in Connecticut, three in North Carolina. two in Delaware, three in South Carolina, iour in Maryland, two in Illinois, three in Massachusetts, three in Maine, one in Michigan, six in New York, three in Pennsylvania, one in Missouri, two In New Hampshire, two in Rhode Island, one in West Virginia, one in Scotland, and one in Ireland.

Iowa and Indiana are represented by Ohioans; Mississippi, by Georgians; Louisiana, by a Vermonter and a Ken tuckian; California, by a Virginian and an Indianian; Arkansas, by a Tennesseean and a Kentuckian; Minnesota, by a Pennsylvanian and an Ohioan; Atabama, by a Tennesseean and Georgian; New Jersey, by a New Yorker. and an Irishman; Oregon, by men from Maine and Illinois; Texas, by men from Kentucky and Virginia; and Wisconsin, by men from New York and Vermont; Virginia, Tennessee, South Caro-lina, Rhode Island, Pennsylvania, North Carolina, New York, New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Maryland, Maine, Ohio and Delwaare are represented by natives, while Connecticut, Georgia. Kentucky, Missouri and West Virginia are represented by one native born Senator, and one born elsewhere.

AGES OF SENATORS.

The youngest senator is Nelson, W. Aldrich, of Rhode Island, who is 42 years of age, and the oldest is Senator Morrill of Vermont. who is 73. Twelve senators are under 50: thirty-eight between 50 and 60; seventeen between 60 and 70; and only one, Senator Morrill, is over 70 years of age. Senators Sherman, Grover, Henry E. Davis, and Pugh are just 60. Pendleton, Maxey, Lamar are 58; Cameron, Slater, Ransom, Robbins, Van Wyek, McMillan, Hoar and Hawley are 57; Platt, Voorhees, Windom and Mahone 56; Bayard, George, Miller, Edmunds and Camden, 55; Farley, Allison and Coke, 50; Walker, Vest, and Vance, 53: Miller, of California. Kellogg-and Frye, 52; Garland and Jackson, 51; Cameron, Harrison and Ingails, 50 years of age. The senators under 50 are Gorman; Hale, Jonas, Plumb, McDill, Barrow, Cockrell, Blair, Sewell, Mitchell, Aldrich and Butler; and those over 60 are Sawyer, Johnson, Morrill, Hampton, Lapham. Saunders, Conger, Dawes, David Davis, Joe Brown, and Eli Saulsbury. John A. Logan never gives his age, and the place is filled with a dash in the directory. EDUCATION OF THE SENATE. Sixty of the senators had academic educations, and twenty-seven' of these are college bred-nien. Nine senators were educated in the common schools, four were brought up under military discipline and two-are put down as hav. ing no education whatever. Senator Dawes is a product of Yale, Hoar of Harvard, Saulsbury of Dickinson, Camof Princeton, Grover eron" and Frye of Bowdoin, Ben Harrison and McDill of Miami university, and Allison and Conger of the Western Reserve college, now located at Cleveland. Nearly all the senators are lawyers by profession, fifty three having studied law and nearly all practicing it. There are a couple of business men, several farmers and a half dozen bankers, but the lawyers have the monopoly of the Senate. Fair of Nevada, is the richest senator; Harris-of-Tennossee, is the peorest: Sherman of Ohio, is the leanest: David and Plumb the least so; Morgan of Alabama, talks the most, and Johnson of Virginia, the least; Saulsbury of Delsware, is the tallest, and Sawyer the shortest; Edmunds is the best lawyer, Davis of West Virginia, the best busithe proper local land office, and shall ness man; Logan the most noted genermake affidavit that he is an actual resi- al, and Frye of Maine, the most elo-

Repeal of the Pre-emption Laws.

The sundry civil bill now before congress has a clause repealing the existing law for the pre-emption of public lands. These laws are extensively perverted by speculators who have no intention of occupying the lands entered by them, as was originally contemplated by congress, but make them a means of withholding the land from actual settlement. NAPOLEON'S THREE WARNINGS.

A Strange Story of the Great Corsican, as Narrated by Fouche.

The celebrated Fouche, Duke of Dtsanto, some time chief of police to Napoleon, was retained but a short time, it is well-known, in the service of the Bourbons, after their restoration to the throne of France. He retired to the town of Aix. in Provence. and there lived in affluence and ease upon the gains of his long and busy career. On one occasion the company assembled in his salon, heard from his Hps the following story:

By degrees, as Napoleon assumed the authority of a king, everything about him, even in the days of the Consulate, began to wear a court-like appearance. All the old, monarchial habitudes were revived, one by one. Among other revivals of this kind, the custom of attending mass previous to the hour of audience was restored by Bonaparte, and he himself was punctual in his appearance at the chapel of St. ('loud_on accompany Bonparte, and held forth a such occasions. Nothing could be more mundane than the mode of performing these religious services. The actresses of the opera were the chorists, and great crowds of busy thikative people were in the habit of frequenting the gallery of the chapel, from the windows of which the First Consul and Josephine could always be seen, with their suites and friends. The whole formed merely ' a daily exhibition of the consular court for the people." At one particular time the punctuality of Bonaparte in his attendance on mass was rather distressing to his wife. The quick and jealous Josephine had discovered that the eye of her husband was too much directed to a window in the gallery where there regularly appeared the form and face of a girl of uncominon beauty. The chestnut tresses, the brilliant eyes and graceful young. tigure of this pursonage caused the more uneasiness to the Consul's wife; as the stranger's glances.were bent not less often upon Bonaparte thân his were upon her.

Saturday, March 2d was a memorable day in the House. "The protectionists have won a great victory. It is to be attributed largely to the astuteness of their Senatorial Teaders and and desire to return to their original allegi- able and cunning management of the principal and most powerful protected interests. After the action of the Senate on the conference report on the tariff bill, there was no longer viny. doubt that the House would take the same action. A vigorous effort was made by the opponents of the bill to defeat its final passage, and hours-were spent quibbling over points of order, and other questions of no importance whatever, except as a means of de-ferring action on the bill. All attempts to defeat its passage were in vain, and when a vote citizens of the United States, and Great Britain | was taken at five o'clock its final passage was announced. Air and Seas on Venus, Among the items of news received. sespecting the recent transit have been; some which have little bearing; or none; on the question of the sun's distance, yet are full of interest to those who wish to learn something of the real condition of other planets than our own. We have been apt, perhaps, to regard Venus in transit more as an adjunct to our telescopio measuring instruments (micrometers, heliometers, and so forth.) the air were cloudy over that part of forgetting how much interest attaches to forgetting how mach interest attaches to the earth's convexity, the sun would not the passage of a world like our own (in be seen there, and the arc of light would all probability) between us and the all probability) between us and the be either wanting altogether or incom-source of our light and heat. But even plets. For it is to be observed that the the telescope scrutiny of a planet so situated is likely to reveal much that is instructive, if exrefully studied; while with so wonderful an instrument of research as the spectroscope we may hope to learn such things about Venas or Mercury in transit as men a century ago would have deemed hopplessly beyond our means of investigation. Fortunately, these inquiries have not wholly been overlooked during the late transit, though the observations for determining the sun's. distance have occupied so large a share of attention, at least among official astronomers.

The most important of these physical inquiries are those relating to the atmos-phere of Venus; and of these the most promising are those directed to her appearance during the few minutes when mearly but not the whole of her disk is on the face of the sun. If we place enrselves in imagination at that point of Venus' surface which, as seen from the earth at such a time, doubt those clouds were, like ours; Hes farthest from the solar disk. it clouds of water-drops, or cirrus clouds will be manifest on a little consideration of ice particles. It follows that Venus that from that point no part of the sun can be visible unless Venus has an at-kind of material vitality which is shown mosphere. But if Venus has an atmos- on the earth in meteorological phenphere like our own, then from the point we are considering a large part of the for the benefit of living creatures theresun's disk must be visible, being raised into view by the retractive power of that atmosphere, precisely as our sun when in a geometrical sense he has set (that is, when a straight line from the eye-to him encounters the convexity of the in disseminating infectious diseases is not earth) is brought wholly into view by at aufficiently regarded by health authori-mospheric refraction. Now, an ob-server on earth, directing his sight to that point of Venus, is looking along pre-cisely the same visual line toward the sun as our supposed observer on the unast only from a greater distance laid until the time of buriel comerces and are hable in all cases of possible infection; but we doubt its being done very generally. planet, only from a greater distance. laid until the time of burial comes, are The terrestrial observer, then, would see still more liable to carry the germs of the sun in the direction of his visual line disease. The ice-boxes are costly, are toward that part of Venus, as certainly seldom renewed, and are scarcely more as the observer on Venus would, and, frequently disinfected, - That they are a for the same reason, he would see the source of public peril is gradually be-sun through the refractive action of the coming recognized by physicians and planet's atmosphere. It follows that, Boards of Health; and not a few have planet's atmosphere. It follows that, supposing Venus to have an atmosphere like that of our earth, and still more if, as other observations have tended to show, Venus has an even denser atmosphere, light-real but refracted sunlight | system. Quite a number of prominent would come to the terrestrial observer around that part of the convexity of Venus' disk. And it is clear, further, that the whole of that part of Venus' cir-cumference which lies outside the sun would, on this - apposition, be surrounded by an arc of light; whereas, if Venus by an arc of light; whereas, if Venus as no atmosphere, or an atmosphere artery for the injection of the fluid. There are several fluids which answer arc of light would be seen. Now, during the transic of 1874, not only was such an arc of light visible tround the part of Venus which was artery for the injection of the fluid. There are several fluids which answer for the purpose, and the cost of embalm. Ing is said to be little if any greater than the charge for the use of an ice box. Janssen has obtained good pict-ures of the sun three feet in diameter, Singular with an exposite of less than the two-Several m thousandth part of a second, and although in 1844 the exposures were nothing like so short as this, they lasted much less than a second. If, during this short ex-posure, the arc of light round Venus left its photographic record, we may be sure it was very much brighter light than that of Venus herself as we see her when she is a morning or evening star. It was, in fact, as certainly sunlight as that which we receive from the setting sun when the air is at its clearest. Thus we have in that Venus has an atmosphere with a re-fractive power not falling much short. The set is of the short of the short of the short of the set is a morning of the short of the short of the set is a morning of the set is a set is clearest. Thus we have in that Venus has an atmosphere with a re-fractive power not falling much short. The set is a morning much short, the set is a morning much short. times altogether absent. We have atready put an observer, in imagination, on the surface of Venus; let us now an agine the earth, itself put in Venus' place at the time of the transit. If the air chanced to be cloudless, what we have considered would happen-the sun would be visible through the refractive power of the earth's atmosphere, round that part of the convexity of the earth which was outside the solar disk (viewed as we view Venus in transit). FBut if greater part of the refractive action of the earth's atmosphere is exerted below the level at which the higher clouds appear, and a very important part below the level even of the cumulus clouds. Evidence is not wanting to show precisely what happens when our earth comes between a heavenly body and the sun. We obtain such evidence during total hinar eclipses, in which sometimes the disk of the moon continues to shine with a bright-red light, really such light as we get from the setting sun, while on other occasions (doubtless when the earth's atmosphere is heavily laden with clouds) the moon's disk is entirely lost to sight during total eclipse.

Thus, then, we can safely infer that the incompleteness of the arc of light. around Venus on the 6th was due to clouds in the air of Venus. Spectroscopic analysis indicated the presence of aqueous vapor in the atmosphere of Venus at that time. Hence, beyond all kind of material vitality which is shown omena exists also on Venus, but whether no man can safely say. - London Times.

Oscar's Welcome Home.

The London prest received the great-sun-ilower Oscar Wilde on his return from America with sneers and derision. They speak of him as a played-out hum-The Pall Mall Gasette said that "although his mission is an admitted failure he has been allowed to leave the United States in peace." Then quoting Mme. Nilsson's remark that in England Mr. Wilde did not appear clad as he did, in America because "that would not be tolerated there," the Pall Mall added with almost brutal directness: "In this the songstress does wrong to the measureless toleration of contempt which pre-vails in this country. Except the little street boys no one would take any notice of the way in which Mr. Wilde was clad, so long as he condescended to be clad at all," From the St. James Gazette he received even harsher treatment. The editor hoped that Mr. Wilde would profit by the melancholy failure of his visit, for. "not to put too fine a point on it, he has been laughed at all through the States," and that on his return he would " fall into the hands of other ladies as sensible and as chastening to his ignoble spirit as Mme. Nilsson. For from women alone is his hope of salvation. Men, who are often rather brutally contemphious of such creatures as Mr. Wilde will have nothing to do with him, even in the way of remonstrance. But, fortunately, it is not so with wom-en. They are over helpful to the weak, and soft to the soft; and besides, there is much in Mr. Wilde's demonstrations which leads to the inference that he himself is a woman spoiled. Worst of all were the comments in the Daily News. 'They represented Mr. Wilde as returning to England a "sadder if not a wiser man,' leaving the "Americans a merrier but not less wise people," who "laughed at him, and when they were tired of laughing forgot him." "Perhaps," continued the commentator, "Mr. Oscar Wilde may have more sympathy with the Atlantic Ocean, as itself a gigantic failure, now that he is returning home despondent, than he had when he set out full of hope and confidence in his mission. He may have a certain indulgence for it as a melancholy and Ocean, Niagara Falls, the American people-they are all vast delusions, each as indifferent as the others to the majestic personality of Mr. Oscar Wilden! These are all painfully blunt observations, and savor strongly of that "idreadful personality" which so grieved Mr. Wilde in the American press. He will be dissatisfied with his home and will find exist-ence there as "utterly dreary" as it was here. A prophet and apostle cannot be said to be greatly honored in his own such unpleasant names as "oreature,", "weak and soft," a "woman spoiled," and a "melancholy and monotonous impostor." This is not exactly receiving a-man with open arms. It comes nearer to the "fervid reception" with a basin of hot water which Artemus Ward's wife once extended to him on his return from a lecturing tour. - Chicago Tribune.
