TOPICS OF THE TIME.

THE Albuquerque Indian school established by the United States Government is in a flourishing condition, but is much crowded, and needs more accommodations. When the proposed new buildings are completed, there will probably be 300 pupils enrolled in the school. These pupils come mainly from the Pueblos of New Mexico, a semi-civilized race. There are in this tribe about 2,500 children of school age, who live within easy access of Albuquerque. There is a great desire among these Indians to have their children educated.

THE tallest man in the country is said to be Heary Thurston, who first beheld the light of day near Jefferson City, Mo:, but who now owns a cattle ranch in Texas. Mr. Thurston is seven feet seven and a half inchestall, and as he is thin and gaunt, and invariably wears a stove-pipe hat, he never fails to produce a positively startling effect upon the beholder. Moreover, he has acquired several habits of posture which add to the impression. For instance, if in the street he is accustomed to rest himself by dropping his arms over a swinging sign and reclining his chin up-

A TRIBUTE TO OUR WOMEN.

Extract from A. H. Stoduard's poem read at the Kalamazoo Pioneers' meeting: "I know St. Paul has strangely said The manshould always go shead,

In other words should have his way And that the women should obey; And further seemed the thought to earry That twas not best for men to marry. If Paul had been a ploneer, And had your forest lands to clear,

After he'd tried it for a year, Had had old-fashioned ague shake him And bilious fever overtake him, With no one near to soothe his woes, () pholo the exempler to his near, Do you suppose he would have said. It was not best for men to wedf I cannot say, I do not know About their wives so long ago. They may have been so worthless then They were a puisance to the men, And he had reason in his head No doubt for saving what he said. But if St. Paul were here to-day, To look upon this fine array Of faithful and devoted wives, Could read the record of their lives, Could look upon these lovely girls, Their sparkling eyes and glossy curls, He'd doubtless say—I do declare I must have been mistaken there; And then acknowledge to his credit He had dyspepsis when he said it."

AN ENTERPRISING POLICEMAN.

A policeman was awaking echoes on a silent night by the measured tread of his heavy footsteps on the pavement of Fifth avenue, when he was startled by shrill cries of "thieves!" and "murder!" close at hand. Being a young man, eager to distinguish himself, he ran at the top of his speed in the direction whence the sound proceeded, and found a small group of men, including another patrolman, congregated outside of a large house.

"What's up?" he inquired of his side

"Blessed if I know! The women seemed too frightened to do anything except scream," growled the officer an old hand-apostrophising the row of heads which were thrust out from the upper windows. "Hi, there! come down and open the door!"

"I believe somebody has been shot. I'm sure I heard a report as I turned the corner," said a young gentleman in evening dress, who was apparently returning from a ball.

"Here, you run round to the back," said the first patrolman to the other; "make your way in, if you can, and I'll stay here till the door is opened.'

The patrolman started off on his errand with alacrity, and, turning the adjacent corner, climbed over the railings into a garden at the rear of the premises. He had no difficulty ia identifying the house in its altered aspect, for a light in the basement at tracted his attention. The dmingroom had French windows opening on to an ornamental iron bridge or gangway, which spanned the area, and led into the garden. One of these windows was slightly ajar, and the officer, grasping his bull's eye lantern firmly with his left hand, walked across the bridge and entered the room. The moment after he had entered I heard voices, followed by a loud report, a grean and a heavy fall. By chance I came across a box of matches. I struck one with great difficulty, and then lit a candle which was standing on the dresser.— The poor butler was uttering low moans, which ceased as I bent over him. I then perceived he was dead."

The unfortunate gentleman was evidently quite unmanned by the scene which he had witnessed. He seemed almost hysterical, showing that the shock had seriously affected his nerves.

An inquest was held, at which the householder repeated his story, and the inquest, which gave the coroner an excellent opportunity of airing his importance, terminated in a verdict of willful murder against some person or persons unknown. The police, as usual, expressed themselves confident of being able to capture the guilty parties at any moment, and asserted that they were in possession of an important clew, though nothing ever transpired to verify the allegation.

About a month or six weeks afterward the householder was one day seated in his office when a clerk entered and announced that a young man wished to see him. The caller declined to give his name, but declared that he had something important to communicate.

"He says you wouldn't know his name, sir; but he seems quite respectable," said the clerk, who presently ushered in a tall young man of military aspect.

"Oh, yes, I remember," said the other, changing color. "What brings you here?" he added, lowering his voice. "Has anything transpired?"

"No, sir; not that I know of," said the man, taking a chair.

"Have you left the police?" "No, sir. That just brings me to what I want to sav. I haven't left the police, but I'm thinking of doing so. I've a brother doing very well in Oregon, and I wish to join him. But of course, it is no use going without some capital. I shail require $500."

REMINISCENCE OF ACTORS.

Two of the most popular comedians in London are Toole, of the Galety, they are not singers, press them into ance thereof whatever." Offenbach's tuneful tomfoolery; and as those who can sing usually do not act, a sort of dramatic balance is established. Some time ago the two appeared conjointly in a drama in which they wore very ragged and woe be gone costumes, and at the desire of eminent artists in Regent street, they went in their rags to be photographed. While waiting "between the plates," Toole, who is fond of a lark, suggested to his brother comedian to sally out and call on a certain mutual acquaintance—a stuckup, pompous sort of person, and who would be horribly shocked at receiv- ume, for 7 days. ing in such a garb. Brough, who is ; a confirmed joker, at once assented, and popping on their battered hats, out into the street the pair slipped, and made for the house of their wouldbe-swell friend.

"Rat! tat! tat!" went the knocker in a most decided manner, and in order to make it appear that the visit. the library. ors of more than ordinary distinction, they pulled the bell almost out of its peaceful socket. The house resounded with its tintinabulatory din.

A neat but flurried housemaid followed by a boy in buttons, rushed to the door with great anxiety of expression. At the sight of the two codger-looking men their first impulse was to shut the door in their faces.

"Hey! stop—is Mr.—in?"

"No, he's not: and we don't open to beggars," said the maid. the door to beggars," said the maid. "We've no cold meat here." "Get out, do," squeaked out the page from the rear of the maid's crinoline.

"I axes your pardon," said Toole in an assumed tone; "you're making a slight mistake my pretty maid."

"We have important business with him," chimed in Brough, giving his tatters a twist; "it's awful important."

The girl's face wore a dazed aspect, and then said: "Master never sees the likes of you at his house. He's most partickler, ain't he Charles? appealing to the page. "You must be making a mistake."

"Oh! no we ain't," responded Toole with extreme gravity. "But I'm sorry William is out (the christian name of the gentleman); I haven't got a card about me (pretending to fumble among his rags), but when he comes in to dinner, just say that his two cousins from the workhouse as they were passing through London."

The maid stood aghast, "the buttons" let out a wild laugh, and the two comedians turned back to the photographic studio to see how the last plate had developed. Teple protests that the mind of the maid will have undergone a curious revolution in regard to the lofty character of her master since the cousins called.

COULDN'T SWEAR TO IT.

I happened to be in court the other day, just as Sam Dunlap was called to the witness-hox. Sam's testimony had to do with events which had transpired years before, and when the side took up questions, his evident aim was to show that the witness at the period in question must have been too young to bear a reliable memory of the events therein occurring. AN EXPLANATION.

Justice Bradley delivered the opinion of the supreme court on the civil rights decision the sentence: "Congress cannot legislate upon subjects within the domain of state legislation." Further in the decision he says: "Civil rights acts, such as are guaranteed by the constitution against state agression cannot be/impaired by the wrongful acts of individuals unsupported by state authority in the shape of laws, customs or judicial or executive proceedings. The wrongful act of an individual, unsupported by any such authority, is simply a private wrong or crime of that individual, an invasion of the rights of the injured party, it is true, whether they affect his person, his property, or his reputation, but if not sanctioned in some way by the state, or not done under its authority, his rights remain in full force and | banding of Washington's army was celebrated may presumably be vindicated by a resort to at Newburg, N. He will only render himself amenable to satisfaction or punishment, and amenable, therefore, to the laws of the state where the wrongful act is committed. If the principles of the interpretation we have laid down are correct, as we deem them to be, it is clear that the law in question cannot be sustained by any grant of legislative power made to congress by the fourteenth amendment. Of the thirteen amendment, he said, by its own force it abolished slavery and established free-dom. This amendment is not a new prohibition of state laws, but an absolute declaration that slavery or involuntary servitude shall not exist in any part of the United States. Ind-keepers and public carriers, by the law of all-States, so far as we are aware, are bound to extend their facilities, and to furnish proper accommodation to all unobjectionable persons who, in good faith, apply for them. If the laws themselves make any unjust discrimination amenable to the prohibitions of the fourteenth amendment Congress has full power to afford a remedy under that amendment and in accordance with in. When a man has emerged from slavery, and by the aid of deficient legislation has shaken off the inseparable concomitants of that state, there must be some stage in the progress of his elevation when he takes rank as a mere citizen and ceases to be a special favorite of the laws, and when his rights as a citizen or man are to be protected in the ordinary modes by which other men's rights are protected. There were thousands of free colored people in this country before the abolition of slavery, enjoying all the essential rights of life, liberty and property the same as white citizens, yet no one at that time thought it was any invasion of their personal status as free men because they were not admitted to all the privileges enjoyed by white citizens, or because they were subjected to dis-criminations in the enjoyment of the accommodations of inns, public conveyances and places of amusement. Mere discriminations on acount of race or color were not regarded as a badge of slavery. If, since that time, the enjoyment of equal rights in all these respects has become established by constitutional enact ment, it is not by the force of the thirteenth amendment, which merely abolished slavery,

Lieut. Kobbe, stationed at Mount Vernon barracks. Alabama, reported to the war department that a white mule which had been at that post 45 years was about to be sold, and the officers asked permission to buy him and keep him at their own expense. The petition went through the regular channels and Gen. Sherman submitted the case to the secretary of war with the following report: "I have seen that mule, and whether true or false, the soldiers believe it was left at Big Spring where the Mount Vernon barracks now are, at the time Gen. Jackson's army camped there about 1819 20. The tradition is that it was once sor rel, but now it is white from age. The quartermaster's department will be chargeable with ingratitude if that mule is sold, or the care or maintenance of it is thrown on the charitable officers of the post. I advise that it be kept in the department, fed and maintained till death. I think the mule was at Fort Morgan at Mobile Point when I was there in 1842." The secretary of war thereupon made the following order: "Let this mule be kept and well cared for as long as he lives."

NEWS NOTES

ONE UNFORTUNATE'S STORY. Helyn Leonard, the young woman who shot and seriously wounded Mrs. Clarence Smith, in New York city several weeks ago, was convicted of assault in the second degree and sentenced to the penitentiary for three and a half years. The young woman became an orphan early, was educated in a convent in Canada, later was a governess in Cuba, and later still became identified with a wealthy man here, who abandoned her. She charged the abandonment to the influence of the woman whom she shot. Then followed arrest, imprisorment, trial, conviction and sentence.

AN UNEXPECTED LOOP-HOLE.

Suspicions for some time have existed that many Chinese have been permitted to laud from Chinese steamers who under the restrictions act were not entitled to that privilege. A loophole was discovered to exist under article 2 of the treaty which permits any Chinaman other than laborers to come to the United States if provided with a certificate issued by the Chinese government identifying him as enthem to cordially co-operate with officers of gaged in other pursuits than that of laborer. The steamer Rio Janeiro, which arrived at San Francisco the other day, brought 132 letter or circular concerning lotteries shall be Chinamen for San Francisco, 77 of carried in the mail. GLIDDEN GOES UNDER.

Business circles of Cleveland, O., are greatly excited over the failure of John N. Glidden, Secretary of the Republic Iron Company. The company has filed in court a claim against him for upwards of $111,000, on which he confessed judgment. As security the company holds his stock, the market value of which is about $250,000, but it is understood that considerable of this is pledged for other debts, and questions of priority of claims are likely to arise. Mr. Glidden stated to an Associated Press reporter that his failure is solely attributable to shrinkage of values in legitimate iron usiness. His indebtedness to the company is for ore purchased on his own account and sold to other parties, and for transportation. He says that in a year and a half he lost over $300,-000 from this cause. He will call a meeting of creditors and ask an extension of time. Glidden's embarrasement will not effect the Republie Iron Company, whose capital stock is $2, 500,000, and which owns perhaps the most valuable mining property in America, nor will it affect the firm of Glidden & Manning, which does a strictly commission business and has no

The jury said the difficulty had been with them as to the malice aforethought, but thought from the evidence they were justified in bringing in their verdict The jury then again retired, and returned in half an hour with a verdict of "manslaughter." Andrews was at once placed on trial for shooting with intent to kill Constable Cuddy. while the latter was arresting him a few min-utes after the shooting of Maroney.

THE FAT WOMAN'S DEATH.

It is stated that Mrs. Moses, of Detroit, the fat woman who was found dead in bed in Baltimore was in an advanced stage of preg nancy, having been enciente for at least five months back. The announcement of this fact has given rise to the utterance of not a few snspicions as to the indirect cause of the woman's death. Mrs. Moses was buried in Mount Olive cemetery in Baltimere. The corpse was carried down stairs in a piece of canvass and placed in a coffin in the lower hall and thence casried to the undertaker's wagon by 12 pall bearers attached to the museum. The coffin of black walnut, was six feet four inches long, three feet two inches deep, and three feet

CRIME.

A FATHER'S CRIME. There is great excitement in the little town of Newcomerstown, Ohio, over a frightiul fragedy which occurred about ten miles north-east of that place. All that is known at the present time is that Alfred Finzer murdered his wife and three children, and then terminated the fearful tragedy by putting an end to his own miserable existence. Finzer resided in Frier's Cree Valley, and when last seen was very despondent because the doctor had advised him to quit work on account of ill-health He eeemed much worried about his family. neighbor named Neishaum visited the home of Finzer, and found the doors, locked and the curtains down. After summoning neighbors the door was forced open, when a horrible sight met their gaze. On a bed in one corner of the room lay the dead body of Mrs. Finzer with her throat cut from car to ear, while by her side was the youngest child cold in death, with its head mashed. In a little crib cot on the east side of the room lay the two oldest children with their heads crushed in, and near the north window of the room lay Mr. Finzer, with the side of his face torn; off by the discharge of a gun. The mother and child on the bed were lying as if asleep, both being covered up with quitts. It is supposed that brooding over his ill-health and inability to work deranged Finzer's mind, and that while his wife and children were sleeping he murdered them and then killed himself, as there is no evidence in the room that there was a southe. The manner in which the murderous father killed himself is certainly diabolical. By his side was an empty gun barrel with no hammer or the stock. He must have loaded the barrel and held one end in the slame of a lamp that stood near by and the other in his face, and held it this it exploded from heat, and blew his brains out HE WAS AVENCED.

The doctrine of devotion to the Blessed Virgin meets with so much opposition from the fact that this doctrine is especially precious to Catholics. Why it is so, the Virgin herself explains: 'He that is mighty hath done to me great things.' These were inspired words, dictated by the Holy Ghost. Why was she to be called blessed? What greater things could even God Himself do in her, than he has done? Gifted as no mortal before or since, has been, or can be; the very Son of God dwelling in her, partaking of her own nature; admitted to a union with Delty as intimate as that of soul and body—what grace could exceed hers? Can there be any more sacred thing on earth /than the union of mother and child? It is so intimate that the latter partakes/ even externally of the nature of the former. Some persons are shocked at the words Mother of God, because they will not look closely at dogmatic truths. They think of Christ only as a man, and not, as the very God. It was the very God which Mary bore, and therefore she cannot possibly be termed other than the Mother of God. Among men the holder of a dignity is treated with the honor belonging to that dignity. Mary was raised to the highest dignity because tue of the son she bore. She was fitter of marvellous victues. No angel could compare with her, and it was no wonder that one saluted her with the words. 'Hail, full of grace!' Virginity was the brightest jewel in her crown; then humility. The incarnation trembled in the balance, waiting for her lowly answer. Behold the handmaid of the Lord, be it unto me according to thy word.

"God be praised for woman, the companion of man through life. The sweet domestic life where she shines mest in a little thought of. In these days, women aspire to what they are p to call woman's rights, to an education wholly masculine, employments much more suited to man, to the ignoring of he proper duties of woman, we ask, can such a woman ever resemble Mary the Mother of God? Woman's sphere is home—near to God and far from the world. Purity. humility, retirement should characterize her—the very opposite of what men most admire now. God forbid that you Catholics should ever adopt, such baneful ideas. Bring up your girls to imitate the blessed Virgin; make them the daughters of Our Lady, that imbued with her virtues that may go forth as lights to bless man-kind. 'The saints gone hence are still one with us in heart and love. They have power to help us. But who among them has so much power to do so as Mary? Woman can never be attractive until she copies her sublime example. What men would not wish the woman he knows to be like Mary in all

You see at Sunday-school the lesson was about the prodigal son and the minister told us all about how the boy took all the money he could scrape up and went away to a distant country and painted the towns red, and spent his money like a countryman at a circus, and how he took in all the sights, and got broke, and got hungry and took a job at the stock yards feeding pigs, and he was so hungry he used to help the pigs eat their rations, and finally he thought of his home, where they had pie, and he went home expecting to be fired out, but his pa was tickled to see him, and set up a talked about the lesson, and pa said it sky pilot's interference, and ma said,

Worn, Weary, and Wretched.

"As weak as a cat" is an expression frequently used by debilitated sufferers who are trying to tell how forlorn they feel. It is an incorrect expression, for a cat is one of the most agile and vigorous animals in existence. It would be more correct to say, "as weak as a limp old rag," for that gives the idea of utter inability to hold one's self up. The weary person who feels thus is generally worn, worried, woeful, and wretched.

Sometimes it is a case of overwork, and sometimes of imperfect nourishment. The blood in the system of a person who is "as weak as a rag" is in a wretchedly thin condition. It needs iron, to impart richness, redness, and strength. This is to be had by taking Brown's Iron BITTERS, the only safe and proper preparation of iron in connection with gentle and powerful tonics. The physician and the druggist can tell the worn and weary how valuable a remedy Brown's Iron Bitters has been found in actual every-day use. 14
