A 4th of July celebration seems to strike the people about right here, and as will be seen elsewhere a meeting is to be called at the Monitor House tomorrow evening to get a public expression on the subject. This is something that should interest the whole community and we expect to see a large crowd out. Do not fail to come.

When people stoop to personal abuse Mrs. J. J. Teeple, accompanied by and say they have not space to answer some painfully pointed facts then it shows very conclusively that they have no argument to make. This is the case with the South Lyon Excelsior. They could say nothing in their own defense, but bore down on the "Newkirks." We care nothing for this, but it shows the inconsistency of our narrow-minded brother publishers.

Kidd's Report.

Inspector-General Kidd's report of his tour of inspection will show a laudable interest exhibited by the 26 companies of the four regiments of state troops. The percentage of attendance at the inspection, compared with the number on the rolls, was as follows: Monroe 98 per cent; National Guard, Detroit 97; Scott Guard, Detroit 83; Adrian, 80; Grand Rapids, 80; Big Rapids. 77; Grand Haven, 75; Teeum-sch, 75; Coldwater, 75; Manistee, 74; Light Infantry, Detroit, 69; Ionia, 67; Port Huron, 67; Lansing, 70; Yysilanti, 62; Ann Arbor, 59; Three Rivers, 58; Custer Guard, Grand Rapids, 57; Flint, 58; East Saginaw, 50; Saginaw, 55; Bay City, 50; Mason, 54; Kalamazoo, 43. Gen. Kidd esserts that there are too many men on the rolls of each company, and that those who do no duty and join for the benefits of the annual encampment should be weeded out. Again, some men have been known to furnish substitutes who go to camp, answer to their names and draw pay, the same as though the man himself had been present. About half of the men need new clothing; and he recommends issuing new trousers to all the troops at once, and the old ones kept for future use. About 200 new uniform coats, 500 new pair of trousers and 100 new helmets would equip the 26 companies. All the clothing and equipment of the Marquette company were burned, and it-must be furnished new arms, uniforms, and accontrements throughout. Among other recommendations the inspector-general favors the discontinuance of the Sharpe rifle and the issuing of the Springfield, caliber 45.

Thomson's lumber and shingle mill, twenty-one houses, four flat cars and a large quantity of lumber and shingles were destroyed. Only two or three houses were left. Twenty-one families had to campout in a wheat field. The loss will approximate $20,000, with very little insurance. M. Shelman, a farmer near Bellaire, Antrim county, has just finished digging about 100 bushels of potatoes, and pronounces them much better than any dug last fall at the usual time. Several farmers thereabouts have heretofore tried the plan of leaving their potatoes ering it that there has been no danger of freezing. The plan has not only worked well, but three crops have been raised from "volunteers" potatoes missed in digging and remaining in the ground. These would grow, and in some cases have yielded 300 to 400 bushels to the acre for two years in succession. Just how long this freedom from the trouble of planting will continue cannot be said, but time will tell, as these farmers propose to try it again on the

OF INTEREST TO LAND HOLDERS.

The commissioner of the general land office has issued a circular regarding suspension of inal action on timber culture and land claims n a number of western states and territories which is causing a great controversy and dedied opp: sition from agents and attorneys en gaged in securing patents for claimants. It is flaimed to be a great hardship to settlers wishing to prove up land and borrow money to continue improvements. Commissioner Sparks says the order was intended for what he called "infected districts." He has dozens of letters from residents of such districts approving the order. They say in many regions not one entry in fifty is bona fide. He says: "Timber entries are almost uniformly fraudulent. Now it is to catch these people that I have said that we would suspend final action on claims. I believe fully one-half of them were fraudulent. In this way I believe I have saved to the public domain fully 1,000,000 acres since April 3. The charge has been made that the order was political and geographical in character—that the South was excepted, What we are really after is to prevent the publie domain from going into the hands of ranchmen and speculators. A bona fide settler can/ borrow just as much money on his certificate of entry or his duplicate papers as he can upon a patent. The south was excepted because the bulk of fraud is not in the south. There is not included in the order. Michigan, Wisconsin, Iowa, nearly all Minnesota, Nebruska and Kansas are not included, and in two of those states, Michigan and Wisconsin, I know there is fraud that we ought to look after. When I am satisfied that there is good faith on the part am satisfied that there is good faith on the part of a settler there will be no difficulty in his see me, but for getting a patent. I shall satisfy myself by means of special agents and detectives whom I can thoroughy trust and upon them I shall put such checks and counter detection as will make it absolutely certain that no false swearing or fraud can secure a patent.

Gen. Sir Charles Wilson, who succeeded Gen. Sir Herhert Stewart in command of the advance corps of the Khartoum relief expedition, has sent in his official report in response to the charge that Gen. Gordon might have been rescued silve if the troops under command of Sir Charles had not been unnecessarily halted at Gubat for three days. The report explains this three days' delay in starting up the Nile to relieve Gen. Gordon by the necessity of securing the small force at Gubat against an attack, then threatened from Berber on the north and from Omdarman on the south. The report further states that after the arrival of the troops at Gubat it required a gread desl of time to select the crews and prepare the steamers for the advance to Khartoum.

Michigan Take Heed.

Prof. Kedzie of the agricultural college, has been making an analysis of the well and hydrant water which has been sent him from Plymouth, Pa., the village in which the malignant typhoid fever epidemic rages. He is positive that the disease is due to the water which has been consumed. Upon one side of a certain street where hydrant water is used the fever rages, while upon the opposite side where there are wells there is no fever. For a period this spring water was taken from the Susquehanna river, where the reservoirs of the water company were low. This water held the sewerage of Wilke barre, Pittam and Scranton and also the sulphur water from several mines. The water which Prof. Kedzie analyzed was taken from a well and hydrant. The well was in a yard near a prive vault and seven children of the family which used the water have been ill. Both jars upon being opened emitted an offensive odor. The water was filled with white flecky substances and both specimens, when experiments were made for nitrates, give a marked precipitate. Both waters turned very dark. In the bottom of a test tube containing three inches of well water, there is a dark-posit of one inch does. The microscope disclosed the fact that the water was full of low animal and vegetable life. The outline of one of the forms suggested a bed bug with a semi-transparent center, which moved rapidly through the drop in the slide or else swung around in a circle. Another form moved by alternately contracting and expanding itself. Many of the forms Prof. Kedzie had 'never seen before. He pronounced the water as unfit for even culinary use, and as being the worst he had ever analyzed. The hydrant water disclosed the same bad composition as the well water.

A Unique Race with Many of the Virtues and of the Vices of Civilization. From a lecture by Joseph Thompson: A more remarkable or unique race does not exist on the continent of Africa—indeed, I might safely say in the two hemispheres. In their physique, manners and customs and religious beliefs they are distinct alike from the true negroes and from the Galla and Somali. They are the most magnificently modeled savages I have seen or even read of. Beautifully proportioned, they are characterized by the smooth and rounded outline of the Apollo type, rarely showing the knotted and brawny muscles of the true athlete. The women are very decently dressed in bullock's hide. They wear, by the way of ornament, from twenty to thirty pounds of thick iron wire coiled round the limbs, arms and neck, besides a great assortment of beads and iron chains. The men wear only a small kidskin garment round the shoulders and breast, that being of somewhat more ample dimensions among the married men. The most remarkable distinctions characterize the various epochs in the life-history of the Masai. The boys and girls up to a certain age live with their parents, and feed upon curdled milk, meat and grain. At the age of 12, with the girls, and from 12 to 14 years with the boys, they are sent from the married men's kraal to one in which there are only young unmarried men and women. There they live till they are married. At this stage the men are warriors, and their sole occupation is cattle-lifting abroad and amusing themselves at home. The young women attend to the cattle, build the huts, and perform other necessary household duties. Both sexes are on the strictest diet. Absolutely nothing but milk and meat passes their lips. Spirits and bear, tobacco, or vegetable food are alike eschewed. So peculiar indeed are they in their notions, that they will not even eat the meat of any wild animal. Moreover, the meat and milk are never taken together. For several days the one is their sole diet, to be followed by the other after partaking of a powerful purgative. On killing a bullock they drink the blood raw, which doubtless supplies them with the necessary salts. In eating meat they always retire to the forests in small parties, accompanied by a young woman. So pleasant does the Masai warrior find this life that he seldom marries till he has passed the prime of life and begins to find his strength decline. The great war-spear and heavy buffalo-hide shield, the sword and the knobkerry, are then laid aside. For a month he dons the dress of an unmarried woman, and then becomes a stad and respectable member of Marai society. He goes no more to | pared to her. Chirography vs. Phrenology.

"I tell you it is all humbug about an expert being able to tell all about a person's character by his handwriting," said Raymond Smythe.

"I don't ageee with you. The bold man writes a bold, reckless hand. Just look at the signature of the great Napolean. It, looks more like a flash of lightning than a signature. The business man writes a business hand. The close, stingy man can be detected in his handwriting," replied Andrew Wells.

"That's what these experts all say. I gave the matter a practical test, and I am in a condition to say that is a fraud."

"How did you make the test?" "For more than six months I had been paying serious attention to Miss Birdie McGinnis, one of the belles of Austin. As far as I could judge, she was the right kind of a girl to make an excellent wife. She was mild and as gentle as a lamb, whenever I called on her. The liberal professions seem to occupy but a small proportion of the population. All combined do not amount to 200,-000. The great majority are in public service, which employs more than medicine, law and divinity combined. But after the public service it is art which gives employment and livelihood to the greatest number of Parisians. Forty-two thousand get their income from this branch of industry. The doctors come after, but a long way after. Medicine, in its branches, supports 18,000, the branches, of course, including chemists and all compounders and vendors of medicine. Then comes the law, with all its 16,000 votaries, from judges to erier. Literature figures very low on the list, for, grouped with science and journalism, it gives employment to only 11,000 other branches of business. Well, I ity commissioners. THE HIRED GIRL to Keep Her.

The discovery was made by a newstion will be held at Richmond, under paper paragrapher some years ago that it takes three to make a pair—he, she, and the hired girl. This truth was suspected for a previous decade or more, but no mind had been discerning enough to emulate it. Since it has become an axiom of family life, it raises the party of the third part to dress to the people of Virginia, call an important rank in the domestic attention to the losses of the state by circle. That she is important no one states. Good results are likely to arise find out. Happy are they who meet in her a treasure. Twice happy are they who can get along without her. Here in Springfield the servant girls are Irish, and form two distinct classes, the natives of the realm of St. Patrick and those of American birth. As a rulo the latter, having had at least the rudiments of a common school education, are to a marked degree more intelligent and capable than the former. The wages paid these domestics range from $2 to $4 a week, the former sum going to the least experienced and efficient, and the latter to the favorites of wealthy families and cooks in restaurants, whose work is especially hard. The average pay of the girl who can wash and iron and do part or the whole cooking for a family of reasonable size is $3; and it is a price which makes these girls one of the most independent classes in the community. Some business men would be glad in these times after paying all their bills for food, fuel. rent, washing and lights, to have $3 a week left for clothing and other purely personal comforts. When the average domestic appears on the streets in her Sunday clothes she carries about her an air of comfort and respectability which is often painfully lacking among a crowd of shop girls. And there are some kitchen maidens of whom it can truly be said, "she is very much of a lady." It is common to accuse this class of putting every cent they can earn on their backs, and that, too, in a fashion that will cause the most possible display. Still there are Springfield hired girls who are real estate owners, and "forehanded" in other respects. Many of them have money laid by in the savings bank, and one local instithousand depositors from this class. The amounts invested are also considerable, some of the books bearing credits of $1,000 and even $1,200. The usages of society are as firmly established in the kitchen as the parlor. Calls are made and returned with due formality. As a general thing, the domestic does not associate with the shop girl, the feeling of superiority of one over the other being mutual. And the domestic has a set of her own, into which not every servant need apply for admission. The standing of the employer's family is generally considered when a new-comer sceks to mingle in the highest circles, education, ability to do fancy work, and a few similar accomplishments being also regarded. Some of the Springfield domestics have married very well and maintain orderly and attractive homes to which they welcome their unmarried associates. Others who were carefully brought up in our best families, have married poorly, and the places where they live are as untidy and fever-breeding as any in the city. The contrast between the knowledge of this class and their use of it is painful enough to sicken the most hopeful union relief visitor in the land. They hold themselves to step into any hogse to which they may be called on an emergency, and do up the work, whatever it may be, in excellent' shave, and they teach their children to do the same, for a consideration. But in their own quarters

The hired girls' privileges vary considerably in different families. It is generally understood that after the Sunday dinner is out of the way she shall have the rest of the day to herself, even though the family are forced to be content with a bread-and-milk supper. Some housekeepers think they must be very strict with their help for the sake of maintaining discipline. They lay down the law that their girls can have only one afternoon and one evening out each week, while others allow their servants to be away whenever their absence does not inconvenience the family. And the contrast is kept up all along the scale. One woman was heard to remark a while since that when she caught the girls reading the daily paper she guessed they'd catch it. But other families are glad to keep help intelligent chough to care for the papers. These people are willing their domestics shall have Ip"-Arkansaw Traveler. a fire in their sleeping-rooms a part of the day, so that a place may be afforded for sewing and recreation, and they need not be tied down to the kitchen during all their working hours. The he intelligence offices. A well-to-do family will do almost anything in order to keep a first-class girl. Cases have been known where they paid her full wages and also paid her board during their absence in California or Europe. It is probably more common to pay her half-wages in such cases.

they sometimes live with a very unciv-

How much it costs to keep a girl is a much mooted question. Some mistresses of experience put the amount fully. They allow $3 for wages, $3 pleases. The last item seems a large | New York Post.

one and doubtless it depends very much on the character of the "secretary of the interior" as the kitchenmaid is sometimes called and the amount of outside relief which she dispenses to the army of cousins with which any girl of self respect provides herself. There are a few American girls who still drift into house service. and of course there are Springfield kitchens which employ other nationalities, but the Irish Crtholics almost monopolize the business. And most house-keepers will admit that on the whole they prefer Cotholics, the restraints of the church being found tobe salutary and more effective than those which usually rest on other servants. This whole subject has many possible ramifications, and the presentarticle shall close with a reference to a glowing argument for protection, which a prominent Fourth ward manufacturer recently made at. a New York hotel dinner-table, because of the prosperous condition of the Springfield hired girls. "Gentlemen," said he, "let me tell you that when my wife and I start for church Sunday morning from the front door there is just as much finery going out at the back door as my wife can support. This is a glorious country which pays its domestics so that they can afford to dress in that way, and help swell the demand for such goods. And protection has done it."-Springfield Republican.

A Wise Father.

"So you are going to start a humorous paper," said an old gentleman to his son.

"Yes, sir. Have you any advice to offer?"

Don't start it."

"Why? "Oh, there are many reasons, some of which, in a most serious manner, I shall give you. The quality of humor is inborn, but the employment of its finer forces requires the most careful cultivation. The rough semi-vulgar sketch is not humor. It may create a laugh, but is not humor. Do you remember what Addison says of humor?" "No. sir."

"Have you ever read Addison?"

"Very little."

"What have you read?"

"Oh, I don't know what all. It would take me some time to enumerattempt to make people laugh?" "Oh, yes, sir."

"A fatal error, young man. People can be drawn into mirth, but you cannot shove them into it. We can persuade men to weep, but we cannot force them. You no doubt have a good supply of original jokes."

"Yes, sir, I think so"

"Tell me a few?" "I can't tell them."

"Well, sit down there and write me-

The young man wrote the following: Sebleson went to see his girl the other night. The old man was at the lodge. Sebleson enjoyed himself pretty well. The girl brought in some pie. The young fellow said it was first rate, and asked her if she made it. She said yes. 'Ah,' replied the young man, anybody who can makesuch pie ought to make a good wife." Then they both lauged. Did you ever make any pie? she asked. 'No,' said he. 'but I have killed a sight of it.'

"Is that all?" asked the old gentleman when the humorist had, with elocutionary effect, read the production. "Yes, but I could make it longer."

"Don't do it." "Father, I am afraid you don't like

"You didn't smile, but will you lend me two thousand dollars?" "What. do you want to pay people

"Oh, no, I cannot let you have the money.

"I tell you what I thought, father. You have been suggested as a suitable candidate for congress. Well, nothing more than a good joke helps a man politically. I thought that you might get off several good jokes about yourself and that I could print them. Of course everything from you would be interesting. You have a great imagination, and have read Addison you-'"

PINCKNEY DISPATCH.

J. I. NEWEIRE, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

Pinckney, Michigan, Thursday, May 28, 1865.

The uncertainty of riches is illustrated in the career of Mr. Geo. R. Graham, who during the decade between 1840-1850 was to the Ameriean literary world what the publishers of Harper's Monthly, the Century and the Atlantic are to-day Graham's Magazine, published at Philadelphia, was the most popular periodical of the day, and numbered among its contributors the most distinguished writers of the time, among | s them being Lougfellow, Bryant, Fenimore Cooper, Lowell, and Bayard Taylor. Many of Longfellow's most popular poems first appeared in this magazine, one of them being "The Village Blacksmith." Mr Graham was one of the most liberal patrons, and authors received from his compensation for articles that, as compared with the usual rates then paid. was princely. He amassed a large fortune, which he lost in the Philadelphia North American and in speculation. He afterward recovered partially from this loss, but in 1853 sold his magazine, and since then has been a comparatively poor man and for some months past entirely dependent upon the charity of friends. During his prosperous days he entertained the most noted men and women of the time, and was libberal and charitable to all who were in need. After his failure he was employed on newspapers until some months ago his eyesight failed and he is now an inmate of the aims hospital in New York, supported by few old time friends who feel it an honor to contribute generously to the necessities of others. His will and relatives (children he had nonc) all dead, so far as known; but he is said to be so cheerful and kind to all that the attendants speak of him as the most lovable patient ever at the hospital.

The Republicans of Illinois and of the entire country congratulate Gen. John A. Logan on the spleudid victory he has won. The struggle at Springfield has enhanced his reputation as a resolute fighter and as/a winner. It was a contest that with respect to the element of uncertainty was without a precedent in our history. At the beginning of the session the Legislature was evenly divided between the parties, with a prospect that it would remain so, and that no election would be possible except by the use of money on one side or the other. The Republican caucus nominated Logan, all but two Republican members pledging themselves to his support. One member was opposed to him on personal grounds, and another refused to be bound by the decision of the caucus. feeling free to vote for any Republican. The 100 were for "Logan or nobody." Backed by this array of honest and sturdy supporters, General Logan resolved to stay in the fight till there was an election or an adjournment. His determination was almost universally approved, by none with more ardor and enthusiasm than the members who had enlisted in his cause displayed. Their devotion to Logan, under the circumstances, was such a tribute as few men have ever been honored with. It was inspired by admiration of the man and an appreciation of his services and deserts. Their allegiance was voluntary. In no instance did it rest on the promise or prospect of a reward. General Logan is poor, and moreover he spurns the methods of disreputable politicans. He controls no patronage. Not a single office is at his disposal. Nothing more is needed to show the personal popularity and power of "Black" Jake" among the Republicans of Illinois. The fact that victory was won by a coup d'etat in the election of a Representative should not, and dues not, distract attention from the strong and firm allegiance of the men who at the outset pledged their votes to Logan and gallantly stood/by him.—

On June 1, says the Philadelphia Times, the Pennsylvania railroad company will introduce a new air system of signals in their passenger trains, to fourth class offices, who have remained in office take the place of the bell rope now in use. When the air brake was first used it was discovered that the pipes were too small, and larger ones were put in. These old pipes will now be used to signal from the conductor to the engineer when the former wishes to stop the train. The pipes will communicate with a small whistle in the engineer's | quired to render monthly for reimbursement of cab, and the signal will be given by the conductor pulling a small rope, which will hang on one side of the car. The main advantage in this arrangement will be that it will be more difficult for the passengers to stop the train. Trains are quite often stopped by some excited or intoxicated passengers, and accidents are likely to occur when such a thing happens.

There is certainly a grim and comfortable joy in going in search of a we can buy in market as good as we an exciting hunger in the eye and in the heart as we follow, Jim by day and camp on his trail at him up with the green sward, and up his proud nose, and put an olive- hardy as the smooth varieties. The eye and a cigarette pocket on his cheek, and erect little knobs all over him in places where nature did not design to have them, we walk away with the idea that we are taller and wider and draw more water and exert more, influence than we did before. Even when we ask the police judge how much it will be if we pay it in advance, and we use up the funds in vest them in other channels, we cannot say that we regret it if the cause seemed just and the provocation great. But what shall we do with the warm, personal friend who sets up nights to love us but hurts us in every corner by his discretion? We cannot whip him and throw him away. We cannot get him shut up in an insane asylum, as it was not designed for idiois. It was made for people who | soil is dry and warm, can be covered once had brains. It is a conundrum with two, three, four, or even five which more than one of us has given

An enemy may say mean things of you, but they lose force because people know at once by his bitterness that how you smile through the day and have sown them when sprouted an and a thousand other little glimpses into your home life which none but a friend may know, when he has no brains to balance his warm affection for you, think what ruin he can furnish you at ear-load rates.

In matters wholiy political it is really safer to have the endersement of one who is wise and wicked, sometimes, than the carnest but misguided efforts of the man whose motives are good but whose brains, in the hurry and confusion incident to creation, were bestowed upon a large mouse-colored mule.

When your friend forgets himself, forgets his business, forgets his own interests and his hopes of bright immortality beyond the grave, in order to go about and do you good, when he goes- without sleep and food and rest that he may labor for you, and at last, when the campaign is drawing toward a close and all at once you come upon the wreck and ruin that mark the pathway of the hurricane, and you follow it in great bitterness the work of your friend, what can you French Canadians are unanimous in the do? Can you take a club and mush his smiling face? Can you stab his warm heart whose every throb through life has been for you? Can you send the swift-winged bullet crashing through the massive skull of your friend, thus tearing the cobwebs loose from his cranium and allowing the gas to escape?

Ah no. Better far to accept defeat than to stain your hands with blood of one whose very devotion to you has snowed you under so deep that you will have to live on the leather ends of your suspenders till relief can come. I sometimes think that if the fool killer would give a little more attention to his business and would try a little harder to earn his salary, there would be less complaint and less dissatisfaction on the part of the intelligent taxpayer. Now, for instance, suppose that he should, prior to each election, shold a kind of competitive examination of fools, to close with a grand tournament of fool-shot at thirty yards rise; or the fool could be made to pay each year for a license, the revenue to go to the government, partial fools to pay a tifty dollar license, chronic fools one hundred dollars, and hopeless fools two hundred dollars per year. Then when we meet and mix It is desirable, therefore, to get peas as early as possible. The sweet, wrinkknock his front teeth loose and swell led peas are not, and never will be, as green and cadet-blue dado over his same is true of sweet corn; the extra early kinds are not as sweet as the later varieties; but, like peas, they are very good until we get something better. The small, hardy varieties of peas, like the Early Kent, will stand rough treatment. They can be sown the moment the frost is out of the surface soil, and after they are up, it is soldom, if ever, that they are seriously injured by frost. A warm, sandy that way when we had intended to in soil is desirable, with a southern exposure, and if on the eastern or southern side of a wall or board fence or building, so much the better. The soil can hardly be too rich. It is a mistake to spade fine, light, sandy land deep for early peas. The surface soil, which has been exposed to the sun is many degrees warmer than the soil below, which has only just thawed. The later varieties, planted when the inches of soil, deeper or shallower as the soil is heavy or light; but the If the fool friend could have his jaws small, early peas should rarely be covered over two inches deep, and if fed by an attendant through the vest- the soil is wet and cold, an inch is sufficient. As soon as the peas appear, draw some earth up to the row with a hoe or rake, and if the soil is dry and light, half an inch or so of soil may be pulled between or over the peas. If that. The jaw of the fool friend wags | the soil is moist and heavy, it may be well to scatter a little stable manure on the side and on the top of the row. A board placed edgewise on the north side of the row will reflect the rays of Another method of hastening early he is your enemy; but he who knows peas is to soak them in warm water your inmost heart, who knows what for twenty-four hours and then mix salary you receive and how much it them with moss or light sand and keep lacks of maintaining you, how mean them warm and moist until they you are in your family and he pleas- sprout. If the land is rich, thick planting is desirable, as it favors early maturity. We make the row three or four inches wide and deep, and sow the peas in the rows, for their whole width, almost as thick as they will lie without touching each other. - American Agriculturist for April.

Forwarding Garden Vegetables.

When the gardener gives a plant a special advantage the result of which is to cause it to produce or mature earlier than it otherwise would, he is said to "forward" it. Tomatoes will bear long before frost, if the seeds are sown in the open ground. By sowing seeds in a hot-bod and raising the plants, the tomato is forwarded. If the seeds were sown last fall, and the plants kept in a hot-house to produce fruit in the early spring, that would be "forcing." Cucumbers are forced under glass, but they may also be forwarded. For illustration: to forward the cucumber, fill some four-inch pots with fine, rich soil, sow half a dozen cucumber seeds in each, and set the pots in a hot-bed, or stand them in a box which can be set on the sill of the kitchen window. Another method of starting the seeds, if a good piece of turf can be had, is this: Take up a thick, strong sod, and fit it to a shallow box with the grassy side down. The sides of the box need not be over three inches high. With a strong knife, cut the sod into squares, which should be according to the size of the box, three or four inches square. Cut quite down through the grass-roots and tops, to the bottom of the box, to make sure that the pieces can be separated readily. Sow several seeds in the earth of each piece of sod, which is of course bottom or earth-side up. Set this box of sods in the window or in a hot-bed, as directed for the pots. Either pots or sods must be watered as needed. When the seeds are up and the plants begin to show their rough leaves, remove all but two or three in each pot, or piece of sod. Do not pull out the extra plants, as it will disturb the roots of those which are to be left, but cut them off with a knife, or pinch them off with the thumb and finger nails, close to the ground.—American Agriculturist for April.

An Important Arrest

The arrest of a suspicious character upon his general appearance, movements or companionship, without waiting until he has robbed a traveler, fired a house, or murdered a fellow-man, is an important function of a shrewd detective. Even more important is the arrest of a disease which, if not checked, will blight and destroy a human life. The frequent cough, loss of appetite, general languor or debility, pallid skin, and bodily aches and pains, announces the approach of pulmonary consumption, which is promptly arrested and permanently cured by Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery." "I have come," faltered the reporter, with a nervous glance around him, "with a little----

"Ah, yes," interrupted the gentleman smilingly; "yes, yes. Tom" (in a very low key), "will you let Michael loose for a few moments?"

With a superhuman effort the reporter explained that he had only come up stairs with a little request. He wished to know why that sign had been placed in the hallway.

"Oh! that is a different thing," remarked the gentleman; "sit down and I will tell you all about it. That sign is placed there to inform would-be literary people who haunt publishing houses that their effusions are not required. I have counted as many as 500 persons in one day who have visited this office with manuscripts for consideration. Aspirants for literary fame are of both sexes, all ages and conditions in life. Lately we got so wearied out with people coming up with matter that they wished to submit to us that we had to do something in self defense. You will observe that our loathsome contemporaries have adopted the canvas sign. All through this vicinity you can come across them. They are very effective. For instance, a young lady graduate comes tripping down town with a romance which her mother declares an ideal composition. She reads the allusion made to the "blood-stained pup" on the sign down stairs. Fear overcomes ambition and s' retreats in tears. Yes, we still receive effusions through the mails. Every morning we send a hand-cart over to the postoffice, and twelve or fifteen sacks of manuscript are delivered to us. Do we examine them? Why we should have to employ about thirty readers to do so. It would be rather an expensive undertaking. But there is a moral to all this, And it is, writing as a means of subsistence is played out.
