By reference to advertisement in another column it will be found that Geo. W. Reason will have a grand delivery day of machinery on Thursday next. A traction engine will draw a large load and a fine display is promised. The Cornet Band will also be in attendance.

We are in receipt of the catalogue of the Michigan Military Academy of 1885, which very neatly sets forth the advantages of that institution as a military school. It has able and efficient officers and instructors, and Michigan citizens are proud of the success it is achieving.

Jerome Winchell has purchased the "Beebe store," occupied by him the past two years and a half as a drug store, and will continue the business therein with unabated zeal. Mr. Winchell now carries a large and well assorted stock of drugs, medicines, etc., and is meeting with very liberal patronage.

The Children's Day exercises at the M. E. church on Sunday last drew out a large attendance both in the morning and evening. The interior of the church was finely decorated, while the perfume of flowers and songs of merry birds made the air redolent with good cheer and happiness. The exercises were all pronounced good.

Members of the Congregational church and society (both at Pinckney and Hamburg) are invited to meet at the church in Pinckney Sunday next, June 21st, at the usual Sunday school hour (half past eleven) for the purpose of making arrangements to secure a pastor for said churches. The attendance of all interested is requested.

An exchange says it has been truly said that when an editor makes a mistake in his paper, all the world sees and calls him a fool. When a private citizen makes a mistake, nobody knows it except a few friends, and they come around and ask the editor to keep it out of the paper. When a private citizen dies the editor is asked to write of his good qualities and leave the bad out. When the editor dies the private citizen says: "Now that darn him."

liar will get his deserts."

Mr. Thomas Gawley died at the Pontiac insane asylum, on Saturday, June 13th, and Monday the remains were brought to this place for burial.

Deceased was born in Drinberk county, Ireland, in 1801—making him 84 at his death—and came to Michigan in 1844. He became insane nine years after coming here and has now been relieved by death. He lived a christian life for some time before overtaken by this malady and was much beloved and respected. He leaves a wife, three daughters and two sons.

"We" editorially and, otherwise, know how it feels to be in a cedar swamp after cub bears and expect the old one to show up every minute. Last Wednesday, the writer, his father and brother, were fishing at George Lake, when an old bear and two cubs were seen on the bank. The boat was pushed toward shore, the old bear ran away and the cubs treed. After cutting five or six trees the little varmints were captured and tied, and although they made a great noise, old mother bruin did not put in an appearance. Under the tutelage of his majesty, our devil, the young bears will be taught how to deal with the man who calls in to know, "who wrote that article?"—Ogemaw Co. Herald.

For the benefit of M. B. Darrow we will say that we did not expect he would feel very elated over the item appearing in our paper concerning his theft, but did not suppose he would have the cheek and gall to appear before us and denounce and heap upon our head all sorts of enconiums and abuses for the publication of the simple facts which rightfully belonged to the public. Whatever truth there is in the quibbling stories he tells about intending to replace it, etc., it is clear to all minds that the taking of the money was a theft, as he acknowledged the same when he pleaded guilty to the charge. It has never been and is not now our object to defame or ruin any one's character, but when it comes to being insulted and our items dictated to by a thief and a gambler it is crowding our good nature too far. It is not to please this kind of people that we are laboring—nor will we aid in shielding their crimes—but we will endeavor to furnish the news in as explicit a manner as possible, with equality and justice to all.

PINCKNEY'S EXCHANGE BANK.

To the above named institution the people of this village have begun to turn their thoughts with pride. Over a year and a half ago Mr. G. W. Teeple conceived the idea of establishing a bank here; and, although the town was pretty small and many thought the enterprise would prove a failure, he finally concluded that by energy, determination and grit he could build up a business in this branch. April 29, 1884, Mr. Teeple opened a general banking business in one of the rear rooms of Mann Bros.' brick store and in a short time by strict attention to business, by being manly, upright and liberal in his dealings, he had a good and steadily increasing patronage. One year sufficed to show that his judgement had not been amiss; that the Pinckney Exchange Bank had gained a solid footing and that its permanency would insure both a financial success and a benefit to the business interests of the village and community. He accordingly purchased a site just east of H. Clark's harness shop and has erected thereon a fine little building, which he has fitted up in the most approved style, the furniture and fixtures being of superior workmanship, and an elegant three-ton time-lock safe secures his valuables. While Mr. Teeple's integrity and good business qualities are so well known here a recommendation at our hands is needless, we can but wish him the abundant success in the future which we predict surely awaits him.

TO CORRESPONDENTS

All communications for this paper should be accompanied by the name of the author, and necessary for publication, but as an evidence of good faith on the part of the writer. Write only on one side of the paper. Be particularly careful about giving names and dates. To name the letters and figures plain and distinct. Proper names are often difficult to decipher because of the careless manner in which they are written.

A Woman Who Will Fight.

Suit has been entered in the Kent county circuit court against the Detroit, Grand Haven & Milwaukee railroad company by Mrs. Sarah McMahon, claiming damages in the sum of $15,000. In her declaration Mrs. McMahon charges that on September 27, 1894, she and a 6-year-old child boarded the train at Coopersville, where she had procured a ticket to Spring Lake, which was taken up by the conductor. The train did not stop at Spring Lake but at the swing bridge a half a mile west of there. She was informed that they had reached the station, and stepping on the platform of the car was pushed off by the brakeman. It was midnight, and she struck her knee on a railroad tie, causing her great pain. She was then in delicate health and the injuries received caused her to be sick for three months.

Colby, one and a half miles north of Middleville, hanging from a tree with a revolver in his hand, one bullet hole in his head and one in the region of the heart. Coroner Evans held an inquest and the jury rendered a verdict of death by suicide.

The weather is unusually cold in the vicinity of Houghton, frosts prevailing almost nightly. Farmers are all at work plowing. Until last year no regular attempt was made to raise wheat in the upper peninsula, and the success was so encouraging that a number of farmers are experimenting this year. As there is not a mill in the district the crop raised will have to be taken outside to be ground or fed to stock.

Bee-keepers in Galesburg and vicinity have been greatly troubled lately by the depredations of a few swarms of bees. One swarm, out of a 150 swarms last fall has but seventeen left; J. R. Cummings, out of fifty swarms has but eight left; Dr. J. S. Martin and Henry Sutterton, both of Galesburg, have lost all they had. Various causes are assigned. Bee-keepers are greatly discouraged, and they have great difficulty in disposing of swarms, as those who would buy fear a similar experience next winter.

A plowing match, under the direction of Capital grant, will be held at the farm of John Holbrook, three miles south of Lansing, on June 19, commencing at 9 o'clock a. m. Three premiums will be given of $5, $3 and $2, respectively, for the best work done, as determined by a committee. An entrance fee of 50 cents will be charged for those wishing to compete. The match is open to all, and will be a good opportunity for the farmers to show their wares. A basket dinner will be served by the ladies.—Lansing Republican.

The corresponding and journal clerks were granted extra compensation at the rate of $2 per day for the session. Resolutions of thanks to James B. Wilson and Gil R. Osmon private counselor and secretary respectively to the governor, were adopted. The governor communicated his approval of the following acts: Amending section 874, How, relative to the reorganization of the state troops; providing for fencing or filling in holes and shafts; amending the labor bureau act. Adjourned until 2 p. m. Monday.

DETROIT MARKETS.

The grain market is irregular but generally higher, showing considerable strength after an early decline, which is induced by the visible statement showing an increase. Provisions are firmer but not notably higher. The general produce market is quiet. The receipts of strawberries are large and the market somewhat overstocked. Eggs are a little stronger and generally higher. Butter is unchanged and as dull as ever. Salt fish show a decline of about 1c per lb., caused chiefly by the liberal receipts of fresh fish. The hardware market shows some changes, nails having advanced 6c per keg, while tin plates have declined.

Foraker for Governor.

The Ohio Republican convention held in Springfield on the 11th inst. for the nomination of a state ticket was most enthusiastic. The party strength was well represented, and fully 6,000 people were packed in the wigwam where the convention was held.

After the usual routine of convention work, and the adoption of a platform of principles, the convention proceeded at once to the nomination of candidates for governor.

Judge Joseph B. Foraker of Cincinnati, was nominated on the first ballot after the adoption of the platform by a vote of 460%, and the nomination was made unanimous.

The nominations of Gen. Robt. P. Kennedy, for lieutenant-governor, Judge Geo. W. McKim for supreme judge, and John C. Brown of Jefferson, for treasurer, were by acclamation. J. A. Kohler of Summit, was nominated for attorney-general, Wells S. Jones of Pike, for board of public works.

The nominations are well received by Republicans throughout the state with every indication of satisfaction, and a feeling that the influence of this state election upon the general election of 1895 will be most salutary.

She Accepts.

In the house of lords the other afternoon Lord Granville announced that Mr. Gladstone had tendered to the queen the resignation of himself and his entire cabinet. Lord Granville also stated that the queen had accepted the resignations and had summoned to her presence the marquis of Salisbury, who is now at Balmoral in conference with her majesty. Therefore, Lord Granville said he hoped the House would abandon all ordinary business. Now that it has become apparent that the Tories will assume the reins of government, the Parnellite members of parliament have begun conferring with leading Conservatives with regard to the government of Ireland. Parnell and his followers strongly urge the Tories to adopt the home rule measure for Ireland, stating that the advocacy of such a step by the Conservatives would completely dish the Liberals.

BACK AGAIN

The chill, snows lingered, the spring was late, It seemed a weary while to wait For warmth, and fragrance, and song, and flowers,
And balmy airs and delicious showers.

But we bided our time, and with patient eyes We watched the slow relenting skies, Till at last one April morning we woke To find we were free of the winter's yoke.

And a rush of wings through the rushing rain Told us the birds were back again.
A joyous tumult we heard aloft—Clear, rippling music and flutterings soft.

So light of heart and so light of wing, All hope of summer, delight of spring,
They seemed to utter with voices sweet, Upborne on their airy pinions fleet.

Beauty, delicate, lovely things!
Would that my thoughts, like you, had wings To match your grace, your charm, your cheer, Your fine, melodious atmosphere!

Precious and beautiful gifts of God, Bestowed through heaven and earth abroad,
Who, ungrateful, would do you wrong, Check your flight and your golden song?

O friendly spirits! O sweet, sweet birds!
Would I could put my welcome in words Fit for such singers as you to hear, Sky-born minstrels and poets dear!

AN OLD MAID

A lowering morning which made one wish for the sunny South or for Italy, for any place which would make one feel happier than could this dismal morning in Wisconsin. And then to think that this train could not make connection with the eastward bound train! It is hard enough to stop at such a miserable little junction at any time, but to spend three hours there this dark morning must prove the very refinement of torture. There are a dozen passengers who must wait and who prepare to make the best of their stay here. One couple, evidently just married, find the clouds of a rosy color, and they walk out of the smoky old depot to make a tour of the little town, talking eagerly the while.

Two young fellows wander uneasily about, reading all the old tattered posters, glowing inducements to go West, and ancient time tables, which invariably decorate the stained walls of a country depot. These young fellows finally utter exclamations of impascience at the dreary monotony, and go across the street to the hotel, hoping to find something there more congenial to them. Two ladies at once take their departure for the hotel, and other people stroll about the depot, and there are left two persons, a man and woman, who, after a little time, settle themselves to reading to pass away the weary moments. He reads his paper, she her book, and occasionally, woman like, she casts a look at her silent companion, wondering what loved ones are awaiting his ar-ival and whether he is impatient to greet them, or if he feels a man's stoicism is required to it; wondering, too, how it is that each woman thinks the masculine lives connected with hers so full of manly graces and beauty, and who could find manly beauty in those rugged features? Then she turned her gentle eyes toward the window and looked out at the dreary landscape, looked with eyes which saw not outward objects, but were in-trospective solely. An old maid, commonly supposed to be the type of discontent and unrest; but here, evidently, the type failed, for this face expressed the utmost of content. Life had been filled with much of sorrow for her, all her bright plans had failed of fruition; one after another she had bitten good-by to them and had turned bravely again to face the coming of a new future, a future to be peopled again by her bright fancies—the old fancies all dead and gone from her except as they lingered in memory. An old maid she is, so far as years go, but no home is happier than her little ideal home. She has filled its rooms with bright little faces eagerly calling to mother and the dream-father is strong, earnest, helpful and loving. Her dream-home is happier far than many a fine lady's real home, although she has not pictured any grandeur about it. Oh, no, she dreams that the carpets are faded from much sunlight and worn from the tread of many little feet, that there is much planning to "make both ends meet," but she has imagined unselfishness living in this ideal home, and loving selfishness can make all trials in regard to ways and means seem very slight indeed. Her companion in this depot is an elderly person, a stout, large man, with keen eyes and a mouth at complete odds with the eyes, not belonging to them apparently. Often eyes do not harmonize in coloring with the rest of a face, but generally expressions are strangely akin. This man had a sensible mouth, one with a mournful droop to it. Those who looked at him caught themselves wondering which would conquer—keen, hard eyes, or sensitive mouth. He read for some time, then gave a quick look at the thoughtful face near him, and said, abruptly: "Not a very pleasant arrangement, this."

A quick flush passed over the gentle face before him—a flush which his keen eyes noted instantly and understood—a flush which told of the girlishness yet left to this lonely woman.

"Not that it matters much to me where I am," he continued. "Life can't give me anything harder than I've had."

"That is a bad thing to say," she said, in her timid way.

"A true thing, though," he responded, and the corners of his sensible mouth drooped a little more. "I feel as if I had nothing left to live for.

My wife died a year ago and—" here the voice broke. Distress ever calls some souls out from their reserve, and here was such a one, and she said quickly: "Ah, but you have all those vanished days and months and years to remember, all the loveliness of her life to think of now."

"How did you know her life was lovely," he queried, a little sharply.
She hesitated a moment and then said, simply: "It must have been, or you would not miss her from your living so much," a tribute to the manly worth in the face she saw before her which was keenly relished by the owner of the face. He sighed and then looked for a time out of the smoky window, then said: "After all, life is a strange muddle," and, receiving a look of understanding in response to this sentiment, he went on:

"We don't know what is right to do, and yet we're punished by fixed laws if we don't do the right. That doesn't seem just to me."

"Oh, but it will come out straight in next life," she cried eagerly.

"I don't know whether it will or not," he responded. "I haven't seen the next life yet, and I don't know what it is like—don't even know if there will be a next life. I only know that we are hedged in and around in this life."

"But surely the next life will take away all the rough places of this," she said; "it will make us understand all that seems so strange about this and —there must be a future life; God surely would not put us into this life and let so much go out of it incomplete. That seems to me the strongest reason for a future, that so many die with their life work only just begun."

"Is that a reason or a hope with you?" he asked. She hesitated and did not answer, and just then one of the restless young men who had been a fellow-passenger of theirs came in and glanced casually at the two.

That glance made her self-conscious, and a blush dyed the delicate face and she turned, in a decided way, the pages of her book, as if she were determined not to let this stranger get possession of her wandering thoughts again. The young man passed out of the station, and the elderly one rose and walked restlessly about the room, knitting the shaggy brows occasionally at some troubled thought. The three hours passed, and 1 o'clock came, and a train came. "Can't I assist you?" he asked gently, reaching out a hand, brown hand for some of the numerous bundles she was carrying. She handed some to him and followed his sturdy footsteps to the train. They wondered a little why their fellow-passengers of the morning were not in greater haste, but forgot them presently in the bustle of departure. He secured a pleasant seat for her and then one for himself at some distance from her. A few minutes of waiting, of idle watching of the dark landscape, so soon to be among remembered things, and the train moved slowly out of town, and as it moved away another train steamed in. She looked curiously at the second train, but remembered that this was a junction and did not obey her first nervous impulse, which was to go to her window protector and ask him if he were sure they were on the right train. She forgot the train soon, and watched his stern set face, and felt sorry for him, and wished he might feel as sure of the future as did she. Soon the conductor came, and she watched him as he made his way toward her. When he reached her protector, as she already called him in her inner consciousness, that individual gave a quick start at some words uttered by the conductor, after examination of his ticket. A troubled look settled upon the resolute face, and he conversed earnestly with the conductor a few moments, then glanced at her and rose and came to her. "I told you," said he, "that we don't know what is right and then we get punished by unalterable laws, and here is a speedy illustration of the fact, only that I feel now that I might have known the right, if I had taken pains to inquire. We are on the wrong train."

She looked deeply troubled, but said after a moment:

"How can we get back?"

"It is of no use to go back to that junction. We might as well go on to Chicago now and go from there; it will really take not much longer, and as you trusted to my leading in the first place, I will, if you will let me, see you safe out of this trouble."

"I am used to taking care of myself," she said, but her lips trembled a little.

"Where are you going?" he asked, and upon receiving his reply, added:
"I am going beyond there, so it will be no trouble to me to see you safe. I will telegraph your dilemma to your friends at the next station; we shall reach Chicago in two hours, and the conductor tells me we can immediately take another train back, so that really the worst of it will be the extra four or five hours in the train."

He remained sitting with her, and chatted lightly for a time, till her mind was diverted from the unpleasantness of her situation. Gradually they wandered to deeper waters, and talked again, as they had earlier in the day, of the problems of life, and into those queries and answers of theirs crept, ever and anon, a bit of the personal history of each. He learned what a desolate life hers had seemed to be; he learned, too, what a sweet, cheery courage must underlie her whole being, that the desolation she should have been so ignored, and he grew ashamed of his own repining over a lot which had so much of brightness in it.

When the train drew into the great depot at Chicago he felt that he had learned to know a pure soul, and she felt a deep pity for the lonely life that opened to her view. And as they took the other train, which was to take them rapidly to their destination, each felt a regret that a few hours more would part them.

He sat silent for a long time after this, wondering if he dared to do the thing he wished. He was lonely, set adrift in the great world by the death of his wife, and he wanted a true, womanly heart to sympathize with his. Could he do better than to ask this lonely woman, who had no kith or kin in the world, to share his lot with him? Could she do better than take him, she who evidently had summer-land in her heart and could make a bit of brightness wherever she was? Each surely needed the other. He asked her if she knew anyone in his town, and finding she did know a person residing a few miles from him, he took his resolution quickly.

"I have a good farm out there," he said; "one hundred and sixty acres under fine improvement, house and outbuilding all in fine shape. You can find out all about me from Mr.

A moment he hesitated as he saw that she did not realize what he meant; then he continued earnestly, looking down into the clear eyes lifted so fearlessly to his: "I feel as if I was looking into the eyes of my wife.

Am I mistaken?" The last words were breathed rather than uttered, and then she understood, and the flame color mounted over the delicate features once more, and she said quietly: "Do I look so much like your wife?"

He was baffled, and for a moment knew not what to say, then rallied and said:

"She has come into the future. I don't know what or where that life may be, and I am lost and lonely without her. I want that which has gone out of my life, and I believe you can supply that want. You are alone in the world, and I can make your life pleasant, I am sure."

It was a temptation, such as only homeless ones can understand; but after a moment, she shook her head, and then, reading the questioning look in those keen gray eyes, she said, while the color deepened in her face:

"I loved once, and have loved ever since, and it would not be right for me to marry any one, feeling as I do."

The door opened, and the brakeman called out the name of the place where she was to stop, and the next moments were spent in gathering together her belongings. He helped her off the train, and grasped her hand heartily as she stood one instant there:

"I shall always remember you and your happy way of looking at life, and your faith will help me," and then he swung on to the slowly moving train, and she walked away in the gloom, a tear or two falling as she thought of the lonely days to come.

The Joys of Camel Riding.

A few days ago I had my first ride on a camel, and I thought it would be my last. It was to go to camp that I got crossed-legged upon an Arab saddle, insensitively fastened by strings upon the back of a great, humbering, hump-backed brute. I never sooner attempted to take my place on the saddle than the camel, which was lying prone, into which position he had been forced, began grunting like an old village pump violently worked.

At the same time he turned his prehensible lips aside, grinning like a bull dog, and showed a grinning row of teeth, which he sought to close upon me. I got aboard without accident, and had not long to wait for a rise.

The first movement, as he lifted his forelegs, nearly sent me over backward; the next, as he straightened his hind legs, still more nearly tipped me over his head. I had been warned to hold tight, but it was only the clutch of desperation that saved me. After several lunges and plunges, the brute got fairly on his legs. The reins consisted of a rope round his neck for steering, and a string fastened to a ring thrust in his nostrils, to pull up his head, and stop him when going too fast. My camel began to move for-

THE DIAMOND'S VALUE.

It Depends More Upon the Cutting Than Upon the Size.

"The first point to be considered about a diamond is its fire," said Mr.
Charles K. Giles, "by which I mean its reflected light, its brilliancy. The white and bluish-white diamonds are the most expensive, and the steel-white are the cheapest. The latter has a kind of hard, light-brownish look, just like newly broken steel. They are all kinds of shades. In fact, they are innumerable, since no two stones are exactly alike in color. The bluish-white is the costliest, because the rarest, outside of the decidedly brown diamonds, which are very rare, very hard and very brilliant, and which a good fancier will prefer to any other except the bluish-white. Then there are the slightly brownish, the slightly yellow, the straw color, the greenishyellow, the rose color, and the canary yellow. The greenish-yellow are the least desirable, but even a little tinge of yellow, not noticeable to the purchaser except by comparison with others, will bring down the price of a stone one-half to one-quarter. You see those two sparklers, for instance," and Mr. Giles, exhibited two beautifully brilliant stones intended for ear-drops. "Well, they are only worth $500, because they are a little 'off,' what we call 'by-water.' If of a fine bluish-white they would be worth $2,000. The so-called rose-colored stones, which some ignorant people suppose to be very valuable, are only the result of their being cut flat, such stones being generally the clearings from larger stones, the refuse, so to speak. Now, as to shape, there are different opinions. Some prefer the cushion shape and others the round shape. The latter is an American invention, and is at present the most popular shape. The cushion shape is of English taste. The old Dutch stones, cut in Amsterdam, are getting out of date, in this country at least.

You see, there in Amsterdam the dealers buy the rough diamonds by the bagful, just as they come from the mines, and they have a system of exchanging out stones for rough stones, 500 carats of rough for 300 carats of cut ones, for instance, so that it is to their interest to lose as little of the stone's weight as possible in the cutting process. Here things are quite different. We are just now recutting a good many of these old Dutch stones.

Here is one, you see," and the expert unwrapped a very fine stone, "which weighed 9 1/4 carats when it went upstairs to our cutters, and which now weighs but 7 1/2 carats. Yet its value has been increased by this procedure, although its size diminished, so that it is now worth $2,500, while before that it was worth but $2,000. There is a great deal in the cutting of a stone.

The old English single-cut, where only one side had facets, while the lower one was left in straight lines, is out of demand now. A stone is cut in proportion to its shape and size, there being valuable stones of all numbers of facets. You see, there is a grain to a diamond, just as much as there is to a slab of wood. An expert diamond-cutter will see that grain and cut the diamond accordingly. The shape of the stone must be made so that the angles throw the greatest amount of light toward the gazer. Some stones have their angles cut so that the rays of light converge before they reach the eye. That is a point which even a great many experts overlook in purchasing. They will hold the stone six inches from their eyes, instead of looking at it from a distance. And yet the latter is the proper way, for diamonds are intended to show brilliancy from some distance."

"Where are the largest diamonds found just now?"

"In Southern Africa. The mines there are, however, pretty old, too, and are getting fairly exhausted. I think that among our undeveloped resources in the United States diamonds will loom up largely before long. The other day I bought a 17-karat stone of a man who had bought it for $1, taking it to be a topaz. It was found near Wankesha, Wis. It had much the appearance of the South African stones.

Two or three months ago a party brought me one from Central Iowa. It was a very good stone and I should say that there must be more where that one came from. I believe there are many spots in this country where diamonds are to be found. Only when found the general public wouldn't know them from rough diamonds."

"How does a rough diamond look?"

"Generally, it is a little six-pointed crystal, or it may look like a roundish, semi-transparent pebble. In its rough state it generally doesn't look as pretty as a piece of quartz. The opinion of experts ought to be had whenever stones are found suspected to be di-monds. Search, besides, ought to be made not by individuals but by communities, for diamonds are scarce wherever they are lodged, and many eyes looking for them are more likely to find them than one pair, however keen."

"What qualifications must a good expert in diamonds possess?"

"Experience. A judge of these stones must have a constant experience in order to enable him to adjust properly and recognize the various points that give a diamond its value, shape, cut and color. Not one in a thousand knows enough about di-monds to tell if a diamond is worth $1,000 or $200. There are very few experts. There are, of course, quite a number of them among the dealers, but very few outside of them. The value of a stone, depends of course, after all, a good deal on individual tastes and prejudices, and really its market price is governed more by its relative scarcity than by anything else.

If, for instance, some prolific mines were discovered now yielding lots of bluish-white diamonds they would decline in price, and those of color, the yellowish and brownish ones, would rise. Only 10 per cent of the di-monds found are worthy to be set in jewelry, you know. The rest are refuse stones, which are bought up by sharp dealers, who palm them off afterward on an unsuspecting public as great bargains. Lots of men are ta-

A Nation of Egg Eaters.

"There are at least fifty million eggs consumed daily in the United States," said a wholesale dealer near Washington Market to a reporter. "That is over four million dozen, and at an average price will amount to at least $80,000. Think of the outlay and business activity required to handle this enormous quantity. The American people are egg eaters. As a general thing the supply is equal to the demand, but about three years ago, late after January, we ran ashore on domestic eggs. What was the result?

Europe began to ship us pickled eggs by the millions. Shiploads came over.
Prices went down, and the European pickled eggs at fourteen cents per dozen became immensely popular.

This almost ruined our home egg market. During the months of April and May the eggs are pickled by means of a solution of lime water.
They are kept until November and December, and then come in to lower the market. Fresh eggs, though, are worth thirty cents a dozen."

"Where do the eggs in the United States principally come from?"

"From Jersey, Delaware, Virginia, North and South Carolina and Maryland. The Western States of course furnish large quantities, but not so much as the States mentioned. Nineteen million two hundred thousand eggs were shipped from Europe to this country since the 1st of April to September. They come from Belgium, Copenhagen, Hamburg and the greatest egg market in the world, Antwerp.

But all these European eggs are pickled, and although not half so good as the fresh, yet they have the effect of lowering prices. All of the peasantry in Germany, Belgium and Holland raise large quantities of fowl.

But in the United States a few farm-

Reduced Newspaper Postage.

Orders have been issued by the postoffice department for the preparation of a new one-cent newspaper postage stamp, which will be needed after July 1st because of the law passed at the recent session of congress reducing the rate on newspapers. The stamp is to be similar in design to the present series of newspaper stamps ranging from 2 to 10 cents. During the last fiscal year 47,240 tons of matter subject to newspaper rates was sent through the mail from 5,785 post-

Dust and Dust.

The minister, last Sunday morning, had preached a very long, parched sermon on the creation of man, and one little girl in the congregation was utterly worn out. After the services, she said to her mother:

"Mamma, were we all made of dust?"

"Certainly, my child."

"The preacher, too?"

"Of course. Why did you think he was not made like the rest of us?"

"Oh, because he is so awful dry, mamma, I don't see how the Creator could make him stick together."

Pinckney, Michigan, Thursday, June 18, 1885

There is some talk in the Eastern States of doing away with the morning and afternoon recess, and closing the day sessions of city public schools as much earlier than at present as the length of recess. The reasons assigned for the talked of change are that the recess affords bad children an opportunity to corrupt the morals of their schoolmates, which they are very ready to take advantage of; that the school bullies can then worry if not beat the smaller boys who are unwilling and afraid to fight; that 12 o'clock being the universal dinner hour many mothers, especially among the poorer classes, need their children a few minutes before noon to assist them in various ways and often to carry dinner to fathers and brothers at their work. In some cities hundreds of scholars are daily excused before twelve o'clock for the purpose. The recess has so long been a feature of the school system that it is very probable it will not be abandoned for years to come, if ever. The objections offered against it do not apply in the country as they do in the cities, and in both they could in a great degree be overcome if the teachers would occasionally mingle with the pupils during recess, as is done in some private schools.

[By James Bently.]

I was but a small boy when the war closed, residing with relatives in Chicago not far distant from that fashionable thoroughfare, Washington street in the vicinity of Ann, in a marble front building that fronted on the former and ran parallel with the latter lived the Lincoln family whom I subsequently saw almost daily with the exception of Mrs. L., who rarely appeared in public and when she did so her features were scarcely discernible beneath the teary veil she wore for Robert T., ex-Sectary of War; I conceived a strong liking, but to Tad, his younger and only brother my whole heart went out toward him, he became my daily companion and his merry laugh rings in my memory yet, we pursued the same studies at school and joined actively in the sports of the school grounds, while not particularly brilliant in his studies he was smart, certainly not dull. His perceptive faculties were unusually well developed and he also had as well a keen sense of the ridiculous that made the humor of his character stand out in bold relief. I do not think any one could have been his enemy for his life was gentle, with malice toward none, charity for all, his friends were legion, his generosity knew no limit—to better illustrate the latter I will mention in this connection—a boy, Marshall by name, the son of an auctioneer, toward this youth Tad had shown a decided partiality although he well knew the comparative poverty of the family and that Charley contributed toward their support by mental service. One morning he (Marshall) was on his way to work as was his custom, at Kinzie street railway crossing he stopped while a freight train went by, it had consumed several minutes in passing, but it is the same old story, two trains moving in opposite direction, danger apprehended only from one—a terribly mutilated form is taken from under the cruel wheels, a weekly, almost daily occurrence in this famed western city. Marshall lingered several days, during this time Tad scarcely even left his bedside except to personally attend to supplying the table with an abundance of fruits and flowers, and when the last sad rites were over no more sincere mourner returned from the cemetery than the worthy son of America's martyred President. No social prominence or considerations of wealth ever raised a barrier where integrity and honesty characterized the conduct of those whom he was thrown in contact with. By the side of his illustrious father he slumbers to-day, but his memory is cherished by thousands who learned to love him for his manly deportment during the short time vouchsafed to him in this earthly sphere.

FOULERVILLE PARAGRAPHS.

From the Review.

Mr. Will Hawley left yesterday for Detroit to join the U. S. troops.

Mr. H. N. Dawley opened his dental office at Williamston Monday.

The dates for "The Drummer Boy of the Rappahannock" have been fixed on June 23, 24, 25 and 27.

Fred Jones has opened a barber shop in the building formerly occupied by E. P. Kent's meat market.

R. Fowler has purchased D. D. Shane's vegetable garden on Garden Lane. We understand Mr. Shane will remove the plants to Grand Lodge this fall.

Mrs. Laura Kenyon died at the residence of her son, A. C. Kenyon, on Thursday, June 4th, aged 81 years. She was taken to her old home at Davisonburg, Oakland county, for burial on Sunday.

DEXTER CLIPPINGS.

Miss E. Dancer, of Lima, was buried on Sunday last.

James Smith, one of the old pioneers of Dexter township, was buried last Monday.

Wm. Scadin, of Webster, lately lost a cow by lightning. Insured in the Washtenaw Mutual.

We publish this week, according to the old-time custom, the bans of marriage between two of our best-known and most highly esteemed young people, Mr. Hunyadi Simotuke and Miss H. Halima. The ceremony will be performed in Sill's Hall on Tuesday evening, June 23d. In our next Leader we will give in full the names of the bridesmaids and invitations to the guests.

Mrs. Nancy Lee, of Webster, died June 3, 1885, aged 81 years and six months. She was born in Sempronis, Cayuga county, N. Y., and came to Michigan in 1830. She was married to Frederick Lee, of Freedom, in 1851. They settled in Webster in 1868. She was a member of the Pioneer Society of Washtenaw county, and was very much respected. She was kind and gentle to all, and departed this life in hope of a glorious resurrection. After the funeral services by Rev. Mr. Lockwood, her remains were deposited in the cemetery at Hudson.

SOUTH LYON DOTS.

From the Picket.

The new bank is to be a brown stone front.

Two drunks, from near Northfield, made quite a disgraceful show of themselves to a large audience on our streets Saturday night.

Looks like business to see the masons, teamsters, stone cutters, carpenters, and others all at work on the various buildings that are in process of erection in this village.

Geo. Mapes, a carpenter, employed on Geo. Hughes' new barn, fell from the roof, a distance of 33 feet, last Saturday and sustained quite serious injuries. Dr. Brown dressed his wounds and he is now doing as well as could be expected.

A full house greeted Miss Watts and Mrs. Noble at the M. E. church last Friday and $18.00 net receipts of the evening were turned over to the Y. L. M. treasury.

From the Excelsior.

Will Hudgeman, having a grudge against large feet, took the adzs Tuesday and trimmed one of his down a little.

Reports came from some of our No. 1 farmers that their heaviest pieces of wheat have already lodged with no prospect of gaining its perpendicular again.

It's rumored on pretty strong authority that Wm. Greig is about to associate an old lumber firm with him in his mill and lumber enterprise. If present arrangements are consummated a large assortment of lumber will soon be laid off at South Lyon, for which there has been and still is a lively demand.

The remains of Mrs. Helen Pinckney, of Whitmore Lake, were laid at rest in the Hamburg cemetery last Friday. The deceased was 63 years of age, and one of the early pioneers of that neighborhood, and was well esteemed by her large number of acquaintances. She leaves two sons to mourn her loss.

Under this caption an old physician writes to a Cincinnati Medical Journal, that in view of the fact that people living at a distance from cities are frequently obliged to resort to cough mixtures already put up for use, they should provide themselves with only such remedies as are known to be free from opiates, poisons and narcotics; thus, avoiding not only danger, but even fatal results. He recommends the recently discovered Red-Start Cough Cure which analyses and tests by various Boards of Health proved to be purely vegetable as well as prompt, effective and entirely harmless.

FOUR ACTS PLAYED!
SAD REPORT ABOUT EX-PRESIDENT ARTHUR.
Will the Fifth and Final Act be a Tragedy.

Rochester Democrat and Chronicle.
"Dr. Lincoln, who was at the funeral of ex-Secretary Frelinghuysen," says ex-President Arthur looked "very unwell. He is suffering from Bright's disease. During the past year it has assumed a very aggravated form."

That telegram is act IV. of a drama written by ex-President Arthur's physicians. In act I, he was made to appear in "Malaria," of which all the country was told when he went to Florida.

In act II, he represented a tired man, worn down, walking the sands at Old Point Comfort and looking eastward over the Atlantic toward Europe for a longer rest.

The curtain rolls up for act III, upon the distinguished actor affected with melancholy from Bright's disease, while act IV, discovers him with the disease "in an aggravated form, suffering intensely, (which is unusual) and about to take a sea voyage."

Just such as this is the plot of many dramas by play-wrights of the medical profession. They write the first two or three acts with no conception of what their character will develop in the final one.

They have not the discernment for tracing in the early, what the latter impregnations will be. Not one physician in a hundred has the adequate microscopic and chemical appliances for discovering bright's disease in its early stages, and when many do finally comprehend that their patients are dying with it, when death occurs, they will to cover up their ignorance of it, pronounce the fatality to have been caused by ordinary ailments, whereas these ailments are really results of bright's disease of which they are unconscious victims.

Beyond any doubt, 80 per cent. of all deaths except from epidemics and accidents, result from diseased kidneys or livers. If the dying be distinguished and his friends too intelligent to be easily deceived, his physicians perhaps pronounce the complaint to be pericarditis, pyemia, septicemia, bronchitis, pleuritis, valvular lesions of the heart, pneumonia, etc. If the diseased be less noted, "malaria" is now the fashionable assignment of the cause of death.

But all the same, named right or named wrong, this fearful scourge gathers them in. While it prevails among persons of sedentary habits,—lawyers, clergymen, congressmen,—it also plays great havoc among farmers, day laborers and mechanics, though they do not suspect it, because their physicians keep it far from them, if indeed they are able to detect it.

It sweeps thousands of women and children into untimely graves every year. The health gives away gradually, the strength is variable, the appetite feeble, the vigor gets less and less. This isn't malaria—it is the beginning of kidney disease and will end—who does not know how?

No, nature has not been remiss. Independent research has given an infallible remedy for this common disorder; but of course the bigoted physicians will not use Warner's safe cure, because it is a private affair and cuts up their practice by restoring the health of those who have been invalids for years.

The new saying of "how common bright's disease is becoming among prominent men!" is getting old, and as the Englishman would say, sounds "stupid"—especially "stupid" since this disease is readily detected by the more learned men and specialists of this disease. But the "common run" of physicians, not detecting it, give the patient Epsom salts or other drugs prescribed by the old code of treatment under which their grandfathers and great-grandfathers practiced!

Anon, we hear that the patient is "comfortable." But ere long, maybe, they "tap" him and take some water from him and the "comfortable" story is told. Torture him rather than allow him to use Warner's safe cure! With such variations the doctors play upon the unfortunate until his shroud is made, when we learn that he died from heart disease, pyemia, septicemia or some other deceptive though "dignified" cause.

Ex-President Arthur's case is not singular—it is typical of every such case. "He is suffering intensely." This is not usual. Generally there is almost no suffering. He may recover, if he will act independently of his physicians. The agency named has cured thousands of persons even in the extreme stages—is to-day the mainstay of the health of hundreds of thousands. It is an unfortunate fact that physicians will not admit there is any virtue outside their own sphere, but as each school denies virtue to all others, the people act on their own judgment and accept things by the record of merit they make.

The facts are cause for alarm, but there is abundant hope in prompt and independent action.

A SOAR THROAT OR COUGH, if suffered to progress, often results in an incurable throat or lung trouble. "Brown's Bronchial Troche" give instant relief.

The simplest and best regulator of the Disordered Liver in the world, are Carter's Little Liver Pills. They give prompt relief in Sick Headache, Dizziness, Nausea, etc.; prevent and cure Constipation and Piles; remove skin eruptions and pimples from the complexion, and are mild and gentle in their operation on the bowels. Carter's Little Liver Pills are small and as easy to take as sugar. One pill a dose. Price 25 cents.

THAT TIRED FEELING
Everybody knows what "that tired feeling" is. It afflicts nearly every one at this time of year, being caused by the depressing effects of the changing season and the debilitated condition of the body. The refreshing, tonic and invigorating influence for which the system appeals will be found in Hood's Sarsaparilla, the reliable tonic and blood purifier. Give it a trial.

"I took Hood's Sarsaparilla for loss of appetite, dyspepsia and general languor. It did me a vast amount of good, and I have no hesitancy in recommending it to my friends and all needing medicine." J. W. WILKINSON, Quincy, Ill.

"I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla when I was so weak I could not do my work. It has made a new person of me. All I ask of any one is to try Hood's Sarsaparilla and see its quick effect. It takes less time and quantity to show its effect than any other preparation I ever heard of." Mrs. C. A. M. HUBBARD, North Chili, N. Y.

The Poor Little Ones.
We often see children with red eruptions on face and hands, rough, scaly skin, and often sores on the head. These things indicate a depraved condition of the blood. In the growing period, children have need of pure blood by which to build up strong and healthy bodies. If Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery" is given, the blood is purged of its bad elements, and the child's development will be healthy, and as it should be. Scrofulous affections, rickets, fever-sores, hip-joint disease or other grave maladies and suffering are sure to result from neglect and lack of proper attention to such cases.

A Lovely Complexion.
"What a lovely complexion," we often hear persons say. "I wonder what she does for it?" In every case the purity and real loveliness of the complexion depends upon the blood. Those who have sallow, blotchy faces may make their skin smooth and healthy by taking enough of Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery" to drive out the humors lurking in the system.

PLAINFIELD SPLASHES

From our Correspondent.

Mrs. W. M. Smith is improving from her severe illness very slowly.

The warm rains the past week have caused corn and oats to grow rapidly.

The dance at the cheese factory was well attended, about 40 numbers being sold.

Mrs. Avery and daughter, from near Howell, are visiting at Elder Dailey's this week.

Sheep shearing is in full blast and will soon be done, and we hope a share will be marketed here.

The hair lip operated on in the case of George Taylor as short time since, has healed and is in good shape.

Geo. Fitch and wife and J. Richmond and wife, of west Howell, were the guests of Rev. and Mrs. Dailey over Sunday.

G. L. Smith is moving his goods to Gregory where he has built a new store, and will carry the same line of goods as he did here.

Children's Day at M. P. church last Sunday was a success. The exercises were nice in every respect and the choir rendered some fine music.

The M. P. society will have an ice cream social at Plainfield Tuesday, June 23. It will be held in the store building vacated by O. L. Smith. All are invited.

Rev. Mr. Dailey, will attend quarterly meeting at Dansville next Sunday, and Rev. E. G. Brumbaugh, former pastor of M. P. church in this place, will occupy the pulpit here.

J. C. Dickerson and family have moved to Gregory where J. C. will wield the hammer. He is a good mechanic and we are sorry to lose him. A good blacksmith could do well to rent the shop formerly occupied by Mr. Dickerson, as a good blacksmith is very much needed here especially a good horse shoer.

UNADILLA REMARKS.

From our Correspondent.

Died, Wednesday morning, June 10th, 1885, Earnest, youngest son of G. S. and Myra May. He was nearly seven years old. He had suffered terribly for nearly five weeks, and was very patient through it all.

Dear little Earnest has left us.
He's gone to that beautiful land Where Angels, bright Angels, are waiting To receive him as one of their band.

He has crossed o'er the dark rolling river.
He is walking the bright golden shore, Where he'll never know sorrow or sadness;
Where he'll never feel pain any more.

He is beckoning to papa and mama, To sisters and brothers and friends,
To join him in that blessed city Where his song of sweet praise never ends.

Let us strive to live true, faithful Christians, Let us walk in the straight and narrow way Which leads to that beautiful city Where we shall meet Earnest some day.

BRIGHTON SAYINGS.

From the Citizen.

A burglar entered the sleeping room of George Lawson, through the window, by the use of a ladder, Saturday night, took his pants and made his exit unnoticed. In the morning George found his pants down in the yard, minus his pocket-book, suspenders and handkerchief.

From the Argus.

Frank Abrams, of Green Oak, will be tried at Howell next week for the larceny of a fine nickel plated harness, worth about $50, from Sam Starks, of Genoa, about three years ago. Young Crippen, who was concerned in the matter turned State's evidence and laid the crime all at Abram's door, but the harness could never be found. Yesterday while Messrs. C. E. Cushing and Peter Loch were down to Woodruff's lake fishing, they found a harness buried near the shore, within about 80 rods of Crippen's house. Word was sent to Mr. Starks and he came down and identified it this morning.

HOWELL COMMENTS.

From the Republican.

Last Sunday night while the village lamp lighter, Ed. Carpenter, was engaged in his duty his horse stepped into the ditch while turning the corner at the junction of Grand River and Lake streets, causing sad equine to turn a head spring and otherwise interrupt the proceedings of its master. The damage was slight, aside from necessitating the cutting of the harness in order to get the horse out of his dilemma.

A seven-year-old son of Mrs. Hirst, housekeeper for Jason McFall, died of dropsy last Saturday and was buried Sunday afternoon.
