As our sporting editor was looking around last week for an item (and by the way, news is scarce,) he saw a genuine "bow-wow" or what bid fair to be a full-fledged dog fight. ## BIG WILL CONTEST.

$250,000 INVOLVED AND SENSATIONAL EVIDENCE GIVEN.

Three Men Arrested at Ypsilanti on the Charge of Attempted Train Wrecking.—Michigan Mention.

A Sensational Will Case.

A very sensational will case was heard in the probate court of Kent county on Tuesday. A year ago Mr. J. H. Brown died leaving an estate valued at $250,000, the bulk of which was left to his eldest daughter, Mrs. Margaret L. Haines, while the younger daughter, Mrs. Sarah L. Hayden, of Denver, was left barely the proverbial shilling. She commenced proceedings to contest the will. The main witness on the stand was Mrs. Haines, who is alleged to have exerted undue influence over her father. Her testimony was considerable of a surprise, and the nature of it very sensational. She said that her father had told her that the younger sister was not his child, but that she was the fruit of undue intimacy between his wife and Dr. Hoyt, of Adrian, who was their family physician. Witness also said that her father told her that he had several times given the younger sister's husband money to start him in business, but he had always squandered it and he didn't propose to give him any more. Hon. J. W. Ransom, the attorney who drew up the will, swore that Mr. Brown told him the same story, but he did not believe it, because he knew Mrs. Brown to be a very estimable woman. The probate judge deemed the evidence insufficient and ordered the will admitted to probate. An appeal was at once taken to the circuit court, and the case may end in the supreme court.

A Slippery Barber.

A. Fox, of Ionia, called on Chief of Police Winney, of Jackson, last week and said that his young daughter Lillie had run away from home with a young barber named Ralph Skellinger, who already has a wife at Ionia, and that Skellinger and the girl were in Jackson. The officers began a search, and found Skellinger, who had been employed as a barber at the Hibbard house. He was arrested, and the girl returned to her bereaved father, who took her home. Later the officers concluded to remove the young scapegrace from the police station to the jail, and he was taken into the corridor to receive the handcuffs. He saw a chance to obtain his liberty, and dashed for the door, upsetting a number of officers and dodging the chief and captain. His escape was a grand success.

Arrested on a Serious Charge.

Monday evening Deputy Sheriff Shemeld of Ypsilanti arrested six men for attempting to ditch train No. 7, on the Michigan Central track, near this city. Roland Bresnan, S. H. Shae, T. H. Cronin, Frank Malone, Thomas Brady and John Porter are the names of the men arrested. Their attempt was made late Saturday night. They were put off at Ward's Crossing, of train No. 9, and for revenge placed obstructions on the track for No. 7. They were identified today by the fireman of No. 7 and bound over to the circuit court.

AROUND THE STATE.

Diphtheria is prevalent at Imlay City. Gov. Winans attended the Flint fair last week. Hudson has a new "down town" telegraph office. An addition is being built to Northport school house. The band tournament held at Coldwater last week was a grand success. Senator Stockbridge was at Muskegon Wednesday inspecting the harbor. From four to seven car loads of grapes are being shipped from Lawton daily. Mrs. B. Johnson, postmistress at Ferrysburg, died on Monday, aged 50 years. Grand Rapids wheelmen are considering the question of consolidating the clubs of the city. The mining school has opened at Houghton with 62 students, of which 22 are from Houghton. Portsmouth Lodge, F. & A. M., of Bay City, will erect a handsome two-story brick building. Log driving on the Pere Marquette river is nearly at a standstill, the men having struck for $2 a day. Two schools have been closed at Muskegon owing to the number of diphtheria cases in the vicinity. Jackson Lowe, of Madison, discovered 72 snakes of the spotted adder species on his farm one day recently. Sam Jones, a Bay City laborer, fell 40 feet Monday morning from the roof of the Presbyterian church. He may die. A. H. Bigelow, who conducts a grocery at Okemos, has been arrested, charged with selling liquor without a license. Newton Rogers, living near Eaton Rapids, was found in a stable Monday in an unconscious condition, having been kicked by a colt. Henry Abbott has pleaded guilty to the charge of murdering George Bryant, of Dowagiac, and was sentenced to Jackson for 18 years. Jackson's German citizens celebrated the 100th anniversary of the birth of Theodore Koerner, the German poet, Wednesday evening. Rev. J. T. Oxtoby, of East Saginaw, will receive $1,800 per year if he accepts the unanimous call tendered him by Ionia Presbyterians. Car Accountant J. H. Woolcott, of the Flint & Pere Marquette railroad, has been asked to tender his resignation, to take effect October 1. A. D. Chichester, of Battle Creek, was killed by the explosion of a threshing engine in Dakota, his remains being brought back to Michigan for burial.

Mrs. Van der Meulen, widow of the late Rev. C. Van der Meulen, pastor of the Second Reformed church, Grand Rapids, died Wednesday evening, aged 72 years. The New York creditors of the bankrupt Lustig cigar company, at Grand Rapids, have organized, and will prosecute Jacob Lustig, on the ground of fraudulent disposal of property. Nellie Frerink, of Kalamazoo, aged 17, while in a fever delirium stole out of the house and wandered away. A searching party found her near Twin Lakes, completely exhausted. Father Marach, the Austrian priest who for more than 35 years has had charge of the Indian missions at Pohnabtown, near Northport, has entered the home for aged priests at Marquette. Walter Wemple, night burglar at the Chicago & Grand Trunk depot at Lansing, missed his footing when jumping onto the plot of an engine Tuesday morning, and his left leg was crushed at the ankle. Dr. C. R. Randall, of N. L. S., 90 years of age, after a mysterious disappearance from his home of nearly 48 hours, returned with a serious wound on his head, and is unable to give any explanation as to how he received it. The auditor-general has apportioned the state tax to the counties based on the equalization by the state board. The total state tax is $1,443,849.60, and rate of taxation is 12-10 mills and .07 mills on each dollar valuation. While Peter Follishe, John Gilbert and Eric Jarvela were taking down two pillars of one at the Republic mine, Monday, the ground gave way, throwing them down the shaft. It will be weeks before the bodies will be recovered. Harry Martin, a prominent young man of Cassopolis, confined in the asylum at Kalamazoo since June, escaped by breaking out the bars of his room. Word was received Monday that he had committed suicide by poisoning. The house of Wm. Brainard, colored, located near Pontiac limits, burned Wednesday night the result of an explosion caused by Mrs. Brainard filling a lighted lamp. Besides the building and contents about $100 in cash was burned. Rev. G. Mott Williams, formerly of Detroit, has had a call to St. Paul's church, at Marquette. This practically assures Mr. Williams' elevation to the archdiocese when the upper peninsula becomes a missionary jurisdiction next year. A bear and two cubs created great havoc around Cedar Springs the other evening. One of the cubs got locked in a slaughter house and, after failing in an attempt to release it, the old bear went to a hog pen and carried away one of the hogs instead. A gang of toughs went into a Chinese restaurant at Hancock recently and had supper, but refused to pay for it. The Chinaman then stabbed one of them, and was taken to jail. The victim, however, refused to prosecute, and John was released. Max Lendieux, of Muskegon, aged 12 years, fell from a window ledge of the Merchants' national bank Wednesday and was dead when picked up. The coroner's jury cannot decide upon the cause of his death, but think it was paralysis of the heart. Rev. E. B. Patterson is entering upon his fifth year as pastor of the Benton Harbor M. E. church. As five years is the Methodist limit, Benton Harbor people are talking of a new Methodist organization, that they may hold Mr. Patterson a few years longer. June Coverdale, 12 years of age, attempted suicide at Buchanan Wednesday night by taking a dose of Paris green. Her condition was discovered by members of the family; antidotes were administered and she may recover. No cause for her rashness is known. Gov. Winans has appointed Willis Baldwin, of Monroe, circuit court commissioner for Monroe county, Vice J. G. Lamson, resigned; and John Peterson, of Grayling, prosecuting attorney of Crawford county, to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of O. J. Bent. The truce village of Gaston, Harrietta station and Springdale postoffice is liable to have another railroad before the citizens have decided upon a union nomenclature. The G. R. & I. will probably tap the tripod village by way of Luther and possibly will take in Hoxeville. The Muskegon board of supervisors have awarded the contract for the erection of the Muskegon county court house for $85,000. Marquette stone for the basement and Portage stone above was the material selected. The building is to be completed December 31, 1892. The roof of Pettinelli's hotel at Iron River, was crushed in by falling trees during a storm Monday and some of the occupants severely cut and bruised by falling timbers. A large number of other houses had windows blown in and roofs blown off but no one has been reported as seriously hurt. Michigan Masonic home committees recently met in Grand Rapids and decided to ask the grand lodge to set aside $3,500 annually for the maintenance of the institution. Each lodge in the state will also be asked to contribute annually a sum equal in amount to an assessment of 25 cents per member. This will give the home about $7,500 a year. Carl Johnson, of Escanaba, and Abraham Twelbert, of Bessemer, boys, arrived at the reform school, Lansing, Wednesday. The last legislature passed a law fixing the age of admission to the reform school at 12 years. The age of these boys were one month less than the required age, and they were refused admission by the superintendent. This is the first case of the kind arising under the new law. The Maccabees of Linton tent, at Eastlake, assisted by some twenty tents from Manistee, Ludington, Benzonia, Onkama, Thompsonville and other villages, tendered a reception to the grand officers in Manistee Tuesday evening. Fully 500 uniformed knights were in the procession, which marched through the principal streets with several bands of music, discharging rockets, witnessed by several thousand people.

A VERY COY MAIDEN.

A CHICAGO MAIDEN VERY FREE WITH HER AFFECTIONS.

Falls in Love, is Clandestinely Married, Takes a Trip to Europe and Gets a Divorce; All in Three Months.

She Loves Sensations.

A short time ago a sensation was created in Chicago social circles by the announcement that F. Lee Rust, son of millionaire lumberman, W. A. Rust, of Eau Claire, Wis., had been clandestinely wedded to Miss Gertrude W. Potter, daughter of O. W. Potter, president of the Illinois steel company of Chicago, at Lake Geneva, Wis., June 6. Another sensation was created last week when it was announced that on petition of young Rust's father, and with the consent of the bride—and presumably with the concurrence of the parents of both of the young people—Judge Horton, sitting privately, had entered a decree declaring the marriage null and void. The grounds on which the decree was granted were that the groom was a minor and had contracted the alliance without knowledge or consent of his parents. The young couple recently returned from a trip to Europe in company with the bride's mother, though it is claimed that the fact of their marriage was not known to the parents of either. Miss Potter is the heroine of several romances. Two or three years ago she had a love affair with a newsboy named Dumnivant. The boy was afterwards sent to the state penitentiary on a conviction for theft. He claimed that he was innocent and that his conviction was the result of a conspiracy to break off his affair with Miss Potter. Later dispatches give the particulars of the marriage of Miss Potter to Julius Clarke Daniels, son of General Passenger Agent Daniels, of the New York Central railroad. It transpires that Mrs. Potter Dumnyvant-Rust-Daniels, etc., was secretly married to Daniels last January, while she was still the wife of young Rust. The ceremony last week was to make the marriage legal after her divorce from Rust.

A STRANGE STORY.

A New York Couple go Bathing at Coney Island, and Land in Florida.

Samuel W. Thornton and his sister-in-law, Eva Jewell went bathing at Coney Island, New York, Aug. 27, and were not seen after entering the surf. Their clothing was undamaged and the disposition was indulged that they were washed out to sea and drowned. Monday came a story from Jacksonville, Fla., stating that the couple had been carried out to sea. The man could swim but the woman could not. By the aid of a log they floated until rescued in an almost exhausted condition by the crew of a Spanish vessel and landed after 13 days' sail near the mouth of the St. John's river, Florida. They made their way to Jacksonville, and have since kept the wires hot with appeals to the man's brother in New York for money to aid them to return. The brother has his doubts, however, and is investigating the identity of the parties. A later New York dispatch says: S. W. Thornton has wired from Jacksonville, Fla., the correct combination of his safe and his brother and other relatives are satisfied of his identity.

Nine Killed in a Collision.

By a rear end collision near McKim's station, Pa., on the Pittsburg & Western railway, nine men were killed outright and 15 seriously injured. A work-train was running from North Sewickley, 43 miles from Pittsburg, to McKim's to do grading. About 250 laborers, Finns and Italians, were on board. An unusually dense fog obscured all view of the tracks. Regular No. 26, Engineer Willard, following the work-train, overtook and ran into the rear of the work-train with terrible force. The work-train was swept from the track, and the laborers and train men were crushed in the wreck. John Houghton, engineer of the work-train, is among the dead. The laborers killed were known only by numbers. The others are unconscious and in a critical condition.

Should Have Pounded Her Hubby.

Fred N. Burritt, cashier in the firm of Burritt & Henderson, has been paying more attention to Miss Emma Silsby, of Seneca Falls, N. Y., a visitor there for some time past, than was agreeable to his wife. Matters came to a climax Saturday, when Mrs. Burritt entered the room of Miss Silsby at her hotel, and at the muzzle of a revolver demanded the letters her husband had written her. After getting them it is said she beat the girl over the head with the weapon until the clerk, attracted by her screams, interfered. As soon as she was able Miss Silsby left for Seneca Falls again. When Burritt heard what had happened he also left the place—for New York, he said.

Burned to Death in a Forest Fire.

Dan Sullivan and Tom Johnson, of Eau Claire, were burned to death in a forest fire at Hinckley, Minn., Wednesday. A party of six men started from one of the Brennan lumber camps to go to another about two miles away. Dan Sullivan, his brother and Tom Johnson were of the party. After going a short way they got in front of the fire, and Dan Sullivan, missing his brother, went back with Johnson to look for him. That was the last seen of them till their remains were found by John Brodie and their camp mates. Sullivan was burned a crisp, but Johnson's body was only badly scorched.

Helped Organize the G. A. R.

Capt. John Lightfoot died at Bloomington, Ill., Wednesday night. He was one of the five men who organized the grand army of the republic at Decatur, Ill., in 1865. He was aged 77, and a native of Kentucky. He was captain of Company A, One Hundred and First Illinois, during the war.

Cobb's & Mitchell's logging railroad, in Cham township, Missaukee county, has been taken up.

THE PROMISED LAND.

Reservation Lands Opened to Settlement as Uncle Sam Agrees.

Over 15,000 people gathered on the borders of the reservation lands in Indian territory opened to settlement on Tuesday. When the hour of noon arrived the mad rush began. Horses, mules, ponies and even steers were used to reach the promised land. The government supervision of the opening was very deficient. Only about 300 men to patrol the borders of the territory, about 200 miles in extent, and at many places they were bunched in parties of 10 to 15 men, leaving spaces five to ten miles unguarded; thus many settlers were enabled to get through before the big rush. The territory opened consisted of about 1,000,000 acres and was to be taken up in quarter sections, or 160 acres. The first man on a section had the legal claim to it. Many parties were organized to settle in a bunch or to open a town site. A party of 1,500 Negroes moved into the Cimarron valley in a bunch. One of the most picturesque crowds was a party of young ladies from Guthrie, O. T. They had formed a colonization company to proceed to the new lands and settle on adjoining claims. They were mounted on Texas ponies and were attired as near as might be in cowboy costume, armed with revolvers and equipped for camping out. They made the race in a body. A fight between the colony of Negroes and a party of cowboys is reported to have taken place and two of the former killed. The United States marshals did good service at land offices and but little disturbance was made.

MEN AND THINGS.

Healsburg, Cal., enjoyed a heavy earthquake shock on the 23d. James Morris, of Gainesville, Tex., will be hanged for murder on October 30. Everybody is invited to the unveiling of the Grant monument at Chicago on October 7. Mrs. Zerelda Wallace, mother of "Ben Hur" Wallace, is dangerously ill at Freeport, Ill. Gen. Franklin F. Flint, who died in Chicago last week served 40 years in the regular army. Ex-Congressman W. C. Whitthorne, of the seventh Tennessee district, died at Columbus, Tenn., Monday. Capt. John Lightfoot, one of the five men who organized the G. A. R., died at Bloomington, Ill., on the 23d. The president has pardoned Robert Sigel, son of Gen. Franz Sigel, who was doing a six years' sentence for forgery. Thomas J. Steele, an inmate of the Kansas City, Mo., workhouse, deliberately cut his throat while shaving Sunday. Two elevators and the electric light works at Hastings, Minn., burned last Thursday, causing a loss of $100,000. The funeral of Dr. George B. Loring, ex-United States minister to Portugal, took place at Salem, Mass., last Thursday. The payments by the treasury department on account of pensions so far during the month of September aggregate $6,557,000. Tascott, the supposed murderer of Millionaire Snell, of Chicago, is said to be living with the Turtle Mountain band of Indians in Manitoba. Edward Albertson, the defaulting secretary of the Fidelity trust company, of Tacoma, Wash., and Fred Chandler, his accomplice, have been captured. R. M. King, the Seventh Day Adventist, of Memphis, Tenn., convicted of Sabbath breaking, has appealed his case to the United States supreme court. The first flag of a foreign nation yet raised on the world's fair grounds at Chicago is the Turkish flag, which was floated Sunday over the ground assigned to Turkey. The motion for a new trial for Col. H. Clay King, who murdered David H. Posten at Memphis, Tenn., last March, has been denied and he will be hanged November 6. The fair grounds stables at Dallas, Tex., burned Monday. Two large barns belonging to H. B. Sanburn were also destroyed, with twelve fine horses. Sanburn's loss is $30,000. Balmaceda's $750,000, sent to England just before the collapse, is in the bank of England and will remain there, at least, until the rightful owners prove the property and take it away. A second libel has been filed against the Chilean steamer Itata at San Diego, Cal., by United States Marshal Gard for $200,000, for damages sustained in bringing the vessel back from Chile. Kentucky democrats want the president to appoint Gen. Charles W. Buck to the vacancy on the interstate commerce commission. Buck was minister to Peru during the Cleveland administration. Commander A. G. Kellogg, U. S. N., and lately on duty at League Island navy yard, has developed brain trouble which a board of physicians says unfit him for active duty. He has been removed to Washington to be cared for at St. Elizabeth asylum. Word has been received from the city of Campeche, Mexico, that a plague of small-pox is raging there. The report says that there have been over 1,000 cases and more than 200 deaths. Moreover, the disease seems to be spreading. The people are panic-stricken. The British steamship Saxon Prince, from Huelva, Spain, has been in collision with the steamer Myra, outward bound from Liverpool. The Myra returned to the Mersey and the Saxon Prince afterward collided with and sank the steamer Luzar. There was no loss of life. Announcement of the assignment and suspension of S. V. White & Co., of New York and Chicago, was made on Monday morning. Mr. White says the failure is due to long speculation in corn, but not in stocks. The liabilities of the firm are very large, but only a few hundred shares of stock are outstanding on contract.

TOOK HIS OWN LIFE.

COWARDLY BALMACEIDA SENDS A BULLET INTO HIS BRAINS.

He Was in Hiding at the Argentine Legation and Fear of Discovery and Mobbing Prompted the Deed.

Shot Himself Through the Temple.

When Balmaceda saw the congressmen were going to win the day in Chile he placed everything in the hands of his subordinates and prepared for flight. His intention was to board the Condell, which was lying in San Antonio bay. Upon his arrival there, however, he found that she had sailed. He therefore returned to Santiago, Sept. 2, and sought and found refuge with the Argentine legation, in charge of Senor Urrubia. Constant fear of an attack by the people if they discovered his hiding place caused Senor Urrubia to suggest that the ex-president give himself up to the Junta. On the night of the 15th, after returning from the opera, the two had a long talk on the subject. The next morning Senor Urrubia heard a pistol shot in the room assigned to Balmaceda. Investigation showed that he had sent a bullet through his right temple. When the news became known in Valparaiso and Santiago there was great excitement. Great crowds gathered around the legation, and they cheered and they booed and went into a frenzy over the death of their chief enemy. Above all the discordant shouts were heard cries congratulating the unfortunate Balmaceda, that in taking his own life he had escaped a worse fate.

A Romantic Romance.

Richard Hornig, a poor German, settled near Anstell, Ga., some time ago. He was an honest, hard-working farm laborer, and won the respect and confidence of all who knew him. He received but little attention from the women in the settlement. But one poor girl, Miss O'Shields, was always kind to the stranger and their friendship soon ripened into love. As both were poor, matrimony was not thought of. A few months ago a letter with a foreign stamp arrived at the Anstell postoffice, directed to Richard Hornig. It announced to him the death of his father in Germany and that he was sole heir to $600,000. Mr. Hornig visited Germany and had no trouble in getting his fortune, and returned to Anstell last week. There was a marked change in the reception accorded him, but his heart was still true to the little woman who had been his friend when he was a poor stranger, and he made her his wife on Monday.

Contract Labor Returned to Europe.

Four immigrants who arrived at New York on the steamer Normanna were found to be under contract to work in the Thomas coal mines in West Virginia. They will be sent back. An Italian immigrant who arrived on the steamer La Champagne, when questioned, said he had lived here five years and showed naturalization papers. When cross questioned, however, he admitted that he had never been here before and that he had bought the naturalization papers in Havre. He admitted that he was under contract to work for the Chapin iron mining company, Iron Mountain, Mich. A few minutes later there was found another case precisely similar, the second being also under contract to the iron company. Both will be sent back.

Lynched a Murderer.

At noon Monday an infuriated mob took from the county jail at Darling, Wis., Anton S. Siebold, who brutally murdered James Meighan, a neighbor, last week and hanged him to a tree in the court house yard. Siebold was a desperate character and his parents manifested little concern when informed of the lynching. The elder Siebold is reported to have said the action of the mob was probably just and right. The city was in a wild state of excitement and the principal streets were crowded with people from the surrounding country. The murder was committed with a wagon bolt in a field near Willow Springs, where Meighan resided. Siebold was a farm hand on Meighan's place.

To Establish Our Mexican Boundary.

The president has appointed the following commission to establish the true boundary between the United States and Mexico: Lieut. Col. John W. Barlow, U. S. A.; Capt. Thomas W. Symons, United States engineers, and Prof. O. T. Mosmar, United States coast and geodetic survey. This commission was authorized by the act of July 29, 1882, providing for an international boundary survey to re-locate the existing frontier line between the two countries west of the Rio Grande. A convention between Mexico and the United States was held in 1889. Congress has appropriated $175,000 for this survey.

Parisian Press Aroused.

A Paris correspondent says: The whole press of this city condemns Emperor William's recent speech at Erfurt, in which he alluded to Napoleon I. as the "Corsican parvenu." L'Paris says: "This violent attack on a man of genius and greatness like Napoleon will have no diplomatic results. It simply reveals the character of a monarch who seizes every occasion to revile France and hastens the revanche." La France says: "This time it is not we who can be accused of talking of revenge. It is the German emperor, who reminds us that armies are things of a day. His remarks are an impudent outrage on the patriotism of a great people."

An Interesting Event Expected.

A New York letter says: Ex-President Cleveland and his charming wife have returned to their city residence, having come from Buzzard's Bay on the steam yacht Ononda. This sudden return to the city is said to be on the advice of the family physician of the Cleveland's, who was called to Buzzard's Bay last week in anticipation of the interesting event, which is expected to occur soon. Society is much agitated, and although only the nearest of Mrs. Cleveland's friends are admitted to her presence, curds and other reminiscences from her friends pour in steadily.

[THE TWO LOVES.

SONG.

Love is often deaf to those
Who love her deeply;
Deaf and blind as death may be
To grief or gladness.
Ah, that love should hold a heart
At best but cheaply!
Such a heart as none can lure
To cruel madness.

Love, alas! is born of earth,
And drifts supinely.
Now she finds a bitter joy
In vulgar measure;
Now she sings with open throat,
And sings divinely,
Pain-sweet in all her dream,
In all her pleasure.

Oh! when Love meets Love in guise
Supremely tender.
Just as crystal song meets song
In perfect blending,
Then she soars among the stars
To her surrender.
There is neither pain for her
Nor ending.

A CABIN BOY'S BRAVERY.

Old time New England whalers will readily recall the events of this story, and the reading of it will bring back to their minds one of the most cold-blooded affairs ever enacted upon the deck of a whale ship.

One day, away back in the forties, the ship "T" was searching for whales in the Pacific ocean, on what is known as the off-shore grounds. There was a good wholesome breeze blowing. The wheel was hard down and took good care of itself. The vessel was in charge of the ship-keeper, a Portuguese, from one of the Azores and six seamen, the cook and cabin boy. The ship's boats, four in number, were in chase of a sperm whale, about one and a half miles to the windward. The ship-keeper usually ranks as fourth mate, and has charge of the vessel while the boats are whaling. Four of the six seamen left on board were Kanakas, natives of the Sandwich Islands. The other two were white men.

On this particular day the ship-keeper was aloft watching the boats. Suddenly he called out: "There, he gives it to him. He's fast to him!" and as soon as he was sure that the boat was secured to the whale he rapidly descended to the deck, gave a quick glance around and made a signal to the four Kanakas and Lascars, who thereupon seized the chain hooks and drew their knives. The Portuguese ship-keeper darted into the steerage and returned with a boat hatchet. Then, without a moment's warning, the steward, a mulatto, was struck to the deck with a horrible gash on the head, while at the same time the Kanakas knocked down and stabbed the two unsuspecting white men, who were watching the boats. The cabin boy all this time was aloft, trying to get a good view of the antics of the stricken whale. He witnessed, however, all that was passing below, and quickly made up his mind what to do. Slipping to the deck, unperceived by the mutineers, he obtained a sheath knife, and darted up again into the main rigging just as the Portuguese and his allies, now joined by the black cook, sprang to the braces to fill away. But before they could do this the boy had cut the topsail halyards, and freed the sail so that it fell to the cap, parting the top-gallant sheets in its descent. Looking aloft for the cause of this, the Portuguese saw the lad ascending the top-mast shrouds. Quickly drawing his sheath knife, the ship-keeper darted aloft in hot pursuit of the boy. The latter reaching the collar of the main topmast stay, threw his legs around it and slid hand over hand down to the foretop, where he had just time to cut the fore topsail halyards close to the runner block as a Kanaka reached the futtock shrouds under the foretop. To jump to the topmast shrouds and scamper up the ratlines was but a moment's work, and before the Kanaka's head was above the top the boy was up in the top-mast cross-trees, where he instantly cut the jib halyards, and then rushed up into the topgallant cross-trees, and made for the flying jib stay. As soon as the jib halyards were cut the ship, which had been paying off before the wind (the wheel having been manned and put hard up), suddenly came up into the wind, all sails shaking. The boy at this point seized the whale signal, which is a ball made of barrel hoops, covered with canvas and painted black, by its long handle and frantically waved it up and down, to notify those in the boats that there was trouble on board. Having done this several times, he threw the signal away and then slid down the flying jib-stay until his feet rested on the hanks of the sail, where he hung almost exhausted from his exertions.

The Kanaka gave one glance windward at the boats, and then suddenly descended to the deck, where all was confusion. The cabin boy, from his shaky perch, looked upon a sickening sight, for there, on the bloody deck, the pigs that usually roam about a whaler's deck were gnawing the hands and faces of the dead men. The ship was in irons, with the rising wind singing through the rigging and thrashing the main topgallant sail clews at a terrible rate, that threatened to carry away the mast.

It soon became evident that the signal had been seen, for the boats were at once cut from the whale, and came bounding over the rising seas until they reached the ship. When the Portuguese devil saw that his scheme to seize the vessel had failed he fled to the cabin and fastened himself in, leaving his mates in crime to face the music.

When the boats' crew came tumbling over the side of the ship they were dumfounded by the sight that met their gaze, and knew not what to do until the cabin boy descended and told his story. Then, with a howl of rage, the crew rushed upon the mutineers and would have killed them at once had not the captain and mates restrained them by sheer force. The cook and Kanakas were ironed and put under hatches. With these wretches out of the way, the halyards were at once repaired, the sails were set and a man was put at the wheel so that the ship was soon under control again.

The captain went aft and called to the Portuguese through the open skylight, but receiving no reply, three men and the mate were sent into the sailroom by the way of the booby hatch. Here they broke in the bulk head that separated the sailroom from the cabin, and entered and unfastened the cabin gangway doors to let the captain in, then began a search for the Portuguese, which resulted in finding him locked in the captain's stateroom. The fool was beside himself, and so frightened at the failure of his horrible plot that he was incapable of action. Had he kept his nerve he could have made it hot for his pursuers, for in a rack over his head were a carbine and four loaded muskets, while in the cabin hung a dozen more muskets, and there was plenty of ammunition in the captain's room. The cowardly brute was caged. He had locked himself in, and refused to open the door. But the captain immediately pried off the blind panel from the upper part of the state room door and the two were confronted with the delinquent Portuguese crouching in a corner and holding an ugly knife. A chance came over him when the mate suddenly thrust the muzzle of a loaded musket into his face. He at once dropped his knife and begged for mercy. Unfastening the door, he was dragged forth and ironed. It was the intention of the mutineers to run the ship ashore on the coast of Australia and take all they could carry of value in two of the ship's boats, coast it down to Melbourne and Sydney, and claim themselves shipwrecked sailors. But their rascally plans were foiled by the wide-awake and active cabin boy. Had the mutineers succeeded in getting the ship before the wind the boats could never have caught her, as a westerly breeze was blowing, and increased as the sun went down.

After the skipper had delivered a sermon as long as the main-top bowline on "Mutiny at Sea," and the decks had been thoroughly cleaned and the dead men sewed up in canvas and quietly dropped into the sea all sail was made for the Sandwich Islands, where the mutineers were duly handed over to the authorities. They were immediately tried, found guilty and executed. There was not the least delay. Quick-handed justice was meted out to the black-hearted wretches, and no government official there sought for them a pardon.

The cabin boy was not forgotten. Upon his return to the States he was handsomely rewarded for his intrepidity in saving the ship.—Cincinnati Times.

A Queer Business.

A great English editor, Mr. Henry Labouchere, tells of an advertisement that appeared recently in one of the London papers which read as follows: BIRCH RODS—Small and handy. 1s. by post, well packed. Ida Weston, care of Mrs. Taylor, 8 Hawthorn terrace, Canterbury.

This was such a strange advertisement that Mr. Labouchere thought he would inquire into it, and so he sent to Miss Weston a note requesting her to send him a birch rod as advertised, and inclosing the necessary shilling. Shortly the rod arrived, and with it a note from Miss Weston to this effect: "Miss Weston incloses one rod herewith. It must be steeped in water to restore its suppleness, and the handle may be wrapped in ribbon. Miss Weston advertises at a loss, but with a view to restore the rod and reform the present untamed race of English boys and girls."

Just think of it! Making a regular business of selling birch rods to make boys better! How would the boys of this country like that, and would they agree with my informant that this lady is engaged in a great and glorious work?

I am afraid not; and I am further not afraid to say that the modern boys who stand in need of the rod are like angels' visits, few and far between.—Harper's Young People.

A HUNTED HEIRESS.

A TALE OF FACTORY LIFE IN NEW ENGLAND.

By Major MacNamara.

John, whose duties called him away, took his leave and left the two men together.

Without any circumlocution Mr. Osborn went into the merits of the case, stating substantially all that the reader has learned from Sanborn regarding the matter of finding the missing child of his dead sister.

The young lawyer paid the deepest attention to the story that Mr. Osborn related, making a note now and then of some point with which he seemed more particularly impressed.

When he had concluded, Sam asked a few questions which led to very important results.

"Can you tell me about what time your sister removed from New Hampshire down here?"

"I can, easily," the old gentleman replied, taking a package of letters from his pocket and looking them carefully over. He soon separated one from the rest; this he opened and carefully perused for a few moments, and when he had concluded said: "She left New Hampshire on the 9th day of May, 1860.

"Can you tell me how soon after she was married upon her arrival here?"

"Some where in 1861—about a year after her arrival as I have been informed—I can't get any clearer to the date than that."

"That is close enough. Now did the man who married her work in the mill prior to his marriage, or did he go to work there after his marriage?"

"He went into the mills after the marriage, for he too was comparatively a stranger here when he got acquainted with my sister."

"His name you say is Bendon?"

"That I cannot say with certainty. I have been told it is that, or very similar to it."

"What was his business?"

"He was a carpenter."

"You are sure they had a daughter are you?"

"Sure they had a daughter," exclaimed the old man jumping to his feet as if ready to knock down any one who disputed the fact—sure she had a daughter, of course I am—here's a dozen letters from her mother to prove it," and Mr. Osborn pulled forth the package again and flung them on the desk.

Sam asked if he had any objection to his looking at them.

"Not the slightest."

One by one the lawyer turned them over and carefully scanned their contents. At last he came to one more carefully folded than the rest and tied together with a bit of blue ribbon wound around it.

"Ah!" cried the old man as if inspired with a sudden thought of more than ordinary importance—"that will tell the story, it contains a portrait of the child, and I am assured by those who saw her at that time that it is a very excellent one."

While he was talking Sam was busy unwinding the blue ribbon from the package. This having been done he opened the letter and took from within a photograph—the portrait of a very beautiful young girl and as fresh as on the day when it was first taken.

The moment Sam looked at it, he started to his feet but instantly went to the window and looked forth, doing it so naturally that Mr. Osborn failed to notice his agitation. He gazed intently at the picture in his hand and then carefully read the letter. Having done this, he returned to his desk, and sitting down he turned over the photograph and found the following address printed on the back: "W. H. Chadwick & Co., Photographers, Manchester N. H."

Sam took a copy of this address, then turning to the old gentleman asked:

"What was your sister's name—her first name, I mean?"

"Annabel S. Osborn is the only name I know her by. She was married twice as I have already told you; but I never knew for certain the name of either one of her husbands."

"Well, Mr. Osborn, I have very little doubt but that I can be of the greatest assistance to you; I think I have a clue to who your niece is, but am afraid we may have some difficulty in finding her; but that she will be found eventually, I have not the slightest doubt. I will write to the photographer in Manchester, and I will get the right name of your sister, for generally these artists keep the address of their patrons."

"I will examine the book containing the name of the mill hands, also; and in a very short time I can furnish you very important information. In the meantime I would like to keep this portrait as it will be of service."

The old gentleman was greatly pleased with the result of this interview; and, leaving a generous retainer in the hands of his counsel he took his departure.

When the door closed behind him, Sam again turned to the portrait and striking it with his open palm exclaimed:

"That's the girl we married—Barbara Glendon!"

CHAPTER XXII.

IN WHICH MRS. VICKORY LOOKS ON WHILE MR. THOMAS ARKRIGHT MAKES LOVE TO OUR HEROINE.

For a little time after her arrival at Bellville Park, the condition of Gertrude Weldon seemed to improve, so much so that she was allowed down to the dining-room where she spent many delicious hours with Tom Arkright, the subject of their conversation being, of course, the one nearest their hearts, the sweet young love they bore each other.

"Of course dearest, your return to your boarding-house and the mill-work is out of the question; and how you, with your many rare accomplishments—your fine genius indeed, ever descended to such labor is beyond my comprehension."

"Ah, Tom, do you not know that a willing heart and honest purpose can dignify the humblest labor? Do you not know that among those factory girls may be found some of the noblest and most unselfish of hearts? I know some among them who support quite a family—old fathers, mothers, and helpless children. I know many among them fitted to adorn the highest sphere of society, who labor patiently with their hands to help others. No sphere of honest labor is ignoble, Tom, though," she continued archly, "it may be quite unsuited to the wonderful accomplishments and rare genius of some!"

"My dear Gertrude you do not understand me—I do not underrate the labor of the hands, for I know as well as you that honest labor may give dignity to any character—or, that man or woman may dignify the work in which they engage.—What I meant was, why did you not pursue some calling for which your accomplishments better fitted you?"

"I had a very good reason for the course I pursued, and one did you know it, you would fully appreciate. In a mill I would be a little one among several hundred, while in another sphere of society, especially the one to which I was adopted both by taste and education, I might become the solitary cynosure for unwelcome eyes."

"I do not understand you Gerty, my darling, but I am sure you are right whatever your meaning may be, and that your words have a hidden meaning I feel sure."

"You will understand full soon enough Tom. It is enough for the present that your sister Maxton understands—let our love for each other be sufficient for the present."

Tom bent over and kissed the pale face of the beautiful girl, and stroking the tumbled golden locks caressingly he said softly:

"Your love, darling, is all-sufficient for me. You have blessed me beyond my deserving; but you will never regret dearest, having entrusted the keeping of your precious heart to me—it is all my own, dearest."

And he gazed into her beautiful eyes, his own aglow with passionate love.

"All your own," she murmured, "Oh, Tom, you know not how deep, how earnest is the love that fills my soul—to love you would be to love the light and joy of life; and to doubt your love for an instant of time would fill my heart with unspeakable anguish."

"You need never doubt my love, dearest—the world has no other love for me, but you must hurry and get well my darling, for I am getting impatient for the happy day—you are improving Gertrude, are you not?"

While he was speaking a sinister looking face with green spectacles over the eyes was staring in at them through the glass of the conservatory window which led directly into the rear drawing-room, the folding doors of which were open.

It was the face of Mrs. Vickory, who could both see and hear all that was going on.

It was a malignant face overshadowed with scheming thoughts, and looking, among the green leaves which surrounded the white face, very pale and aged.

The face grew sager and was pushed further forward, so anxious did it seem to hear the answer to Mr. Arkright's question.

Sometimes I think I am improving, dear Tom, and then suddenly comes a change, I grow languid, I hardly care to move and feel—forgive me darling—but I feel as if death would be welcome! I am quite well to day, but I know it will not last—I am certain that to-morrow will bring the usual change—I cannot account for it Tom, for I am naturally of a strong constitution."

"I think we had better change your physician. It strikes me that that leading-house doctor is a chameleon. I am going to Boston to-morrow, and I will bring Dr. Warren down with me. We have had no diagnosis of your case yet, and do not know what is the matter with you."

The livid pallor of the cruel face between the leaves, was now something fearful to behold. The brows grew corrugated, and a startled anxious expression came into her face. Mrs. Vickory at the mention of Dr. Warren's name seemed terribly uneasy.

"I have no objection to that Tom, if you should go to Boston, for I have no wish to die now, the world is too bright—oh, darling, I am too happy to die—the world is heaven and happiness to me, I must live, oh Tom I will live!"

The poor girl was weeping as she uttered the words we have set down—for she was very weak, but Tom put his arms about her neck and kissed her and comforted her with tender words.

When she was more composed, he rang the bell and Mrs. Bascombe came in—

"Why, Gerty, what is the matter? Oh, Tom, you wicked fellow you have been plaguing her with your nonsense!"

"Ah, no he has not, but I am very weak and foolish—"

"Yes, you are foolish—for sitting up so long. Come, we will go up to your room. My heavens, Tom, what are you about?"

She might well ask, for Tom had quietly gathered the invalid in his arms and was walking away with her up to her chamber. A tender expression on his handsome face, and a sweet smile on Gertrude's as she looked fondly up at him.

They encountered Mrs. Vickory outside the door as they went forth, and she remarked as she saw them coming towards her—

"Ah, I knew the dear child would do herself harm by coming down—poor deary, poor deary," and the tender-hearted old woman followed Mrs. Bascombe and the others up to the chamber of our heroine.

Her lover placed his happy burden upon the bed, and ignoring the presence of his sister and Mrs. Vickory, he pressed a kiss on the feverish lips of his darling, and made his way from the room.

Mrs. Bascombe then made a glass of cool lemonade with her own hands, and administered it to Gertrude, who declared that she was greatly refreshed by the delicious draught.

Marion then sat herself down by the bedside, and finding that Gertrude felt no desire to sleep, took up a volume of Jean Ingelow at hand and began reading to her.

Mrs. Vickory tacitly understanding that she was not wanted left the chamber, and entered her own room, where for a moment we will follow her.

She softly closed the door of the room behind her, and then stood silently in the middle of the apartment, her hands clasped ed and the white head bowed on her bosom.

She stood thus for several minutes without a movement or a word. At last she raised her head, while a determined expression took possession of her face and muttered:

"A new doctor, eh? Dr. Warren—then indeed I must hurry, or we are lost! All is lost!—should he come now or within a day or two—the labor of weeks is wasted and my crime will bear but bitter fruit.—I have gone too far to hesitate now—I will strike the final blow—and leave this place forever. But I must see him—I must see him; let me see where did he appoint to meet me, and the old woman with the soft voice took a letter from her bosom and opening it, read it carefully to herself.

"Yes, near the sumac trees—I know the clump well; I'll be there! I'll be there!" and she put the letter back in her bosom and went to a table, a drawer of which she unlocked and took therefrom three or four tiny boxes, from these boxes she took with an ivory pick, an atom of powder—an atom from each box and mixed them together in a few drops of water. Having seen them thoroughly dissolve she covered the tumbler with a look over which she threw a handkerchief, and then hastily left the room, and moved towards that of Gertrude—the door was ajar, and upon looking in she found our heroine asleep and the apartment empty. She quickly and quietly darted back to her own room, seized the tumbler, and re-entering that of Gertrude, turned the contents into the lemonade at the bedside to disappear.

CHAPTER XXIII.

THE MISERIES OF BARBARA—THE TERRIBLE ANNOUNCEMENT OF PHILLIP BLAKE.

The story of Barbara Glendon's life became more and more painful as the weeks passed on, and the days had not many times multiplied ere she realized the reckless and unprincipled character of the man to whom she had allied herself with such thoughtless precipitation.

Every day brought to light some new phase of badness, and every day the virgin warmth of her great love lessened, and it only wanted the final blow, which he soon struck, to make it vanish, root and branch forever!

And here is how it occurred. He came home one night in his usual state of intoxication, and from his humor Barbara judged that he had not been successful at the gaming table.

He threw himself upon a lounge, swearing a great oath that the whole world was in league against him, and that Barbara was at the head of the conspiracy—that she was the sole cause of his continued ill-luck, and until he was rid of her he would meet with nothing but misfortune.

He continued these ravings for some time, Barbara sitting quietly in her chair, and looking stolidly at him. Her heart was full of loathing as she gazed upon him. The sight of a drunken man was unfamiliar to her until she had joined her fortunes with those of Phillip Blake—but she made no reply to his cruel talk, but watched the man and the clock and waited for an excuse to retire—knowing that if she did so at that moment it would only irritate her husband more.

At last she could bear it no longer. So she arose and prepared to leave the room.

As she placed her hand upon the knob of the door, Blake cried out with an oath: "Where in— are you going? Come back here and sit down! I've got something to say to you that I intended to have said a week ago. Sit down I tell you!"

And the brute rose up and approached her as if he were about to strike her.

She turned haughtily from the door and fixed her flashing black eyes full upon the blood-shot orbs of her husband saying, as she pointed to his uplifted arm:

"If you strike me Phillip Blake, I will kill you! I have borne for weeks with your brutal conduct, and will have no more of it. Now what have you to say to me. It is late and I wish to retire."

Blake without a word of reply dropped into his seat.

"You'll kill me, eh, you blood-thirsty creature!" he muttered in a maudlin tone, and then suddenly changing his humor he turned to her fiercely exclaiming:—"Woman, you must learn your place, you must use different language toward me—I am sick of your piling nonsense. Bates tells me that you do nothing but sit here and mope all day, twirling your thumbs and crying; and she swears that if I didn't tell you who and what you are, to-day, she would tell you herself in the morning."

"Who and what I am, Phillip. What can you mean? As for Mrs. Bates, she is a spying watchful thing; she insults me at every opportunity, and to-day even laughed in my face when I informed her that I would call upon my husband to protect me—and that if he did not do it I would leave the house!"

"Call on your husband, eh! Why Barbara, who the devil is he?" cheered the man, with a rude boisterous laugh.

"Who is he?" exclaimed Barbara Blake, her face livid with sudden horror. "Who is he—how dare you ask me such a question?"

"I ask for information simply—for I don't know him, you may be all you're worth young lady that it isn't me at any rate!"

Barbara had risen to her feet while Blake was speaking, her lips livid, and her face ghastly pale; and approaching him she said in a husky voice:—"Repeat what you have said Phillip. I don't think I understand you."

Our Army.

The army of the United States consists of 2167 commissioned officers and a little over 20,000 real private soldiers, exclusive of those performing civilian duties. In other terms one-tenth of the military force consists of its officers.

Saturated with Nicotine.

The body of a Russian who died in McKeesport, Pa., a few days ago from cigarette smoking, was found to be as yellow as a sunflower because of the nicotine with which it was saturated.

Artificial musk is a recent chemical achievement.

THURSDAY, OCT. 1, 1891.

The tax raised in Michigan in 1889 was $1,821,521.10. That to be raised in 1891 is $1,443,849.60. The tax in Livingston county for 1889 was 28,899.27. For 1891 20,443.89.

The Attorney General's statistics for the year ending June 30 show that there have been fifty-three murders committed in the state during the year, and only fifteen convictions. This is a horrible report for "Christian" Michigan.

One of the train dispatchers in the service of the Georgia Southern Railroad is a woman, Mrs. Coley. It is a remarkable innovation in railroading, and it shows that woman is gradually proving herself capable and willing in winning her bread in almost any employment that calls for service.

The dynograph car is one of the most wonderful inventions in railway work. It has only to be rolled over a track to indicate every imperfection in the rails, whether it be spread rails, open joints, or defective iron. Suitable markings are left on the track, according to the fault to be denoted, so that the trackman who follows in the wake of the car has a large proportion of his labor saved, and can see at a glance where his repairs or alterations must begin.

Mr. Borroughs, manager of Redmond's theater, Grand Rapids, was brought to grief on Sunday evening. He attempted to defy the police who had forbidden him to run his theater on Sunday evening, but in the midst of the 2nd act, a squad of police appeared on the scene and arrested Borroughs and the whole company, bringing the performance to a sudden termination.—South Lyon Picket. We are glad that in some places the officers enforce the Sunday law.

We are glad to note that some of our citizens are interesting themselves in regard to our cemetery, and we hope that they will meet with a hearty support from all who have friends laid away there and also those who have not. For the past summer the cemetery has been a curse to the village being grown up to weeds and brush. We hope to see the place beautified and put in good shape and then it will cost but little to keep it so, if someone has charge of it. Let us all turn out and give a hearty support towards this object.

Supt. Kimball, of the Life-Saving Service, says the keepers only get $700, and their duties are yearly growing more arduous. "For some time," he says, "we have endeavored to procure from Congress an increase of pay, but without avail. As a consequence our best men are leaving the service and going into other pursuits wherein the labor is less arduous and dangerous and the returns more lucrative. As a consequence it will be only a short time until the service is composed of second-rate men. This is to be regretted but Congress is solely to blame."—Free Press.

The country has been so blessed this year everywhere with a phenomenal crop of fruits to be consumed in the summer that it might perhaps have reconciled itself with something of equanimity to a shortage of those fruits which ripen only late in the fall and remain for winter consumption. But this year blessings—as is sometimes said of misfortunes—are not to come singly. So word comes that the orange crop of Florida is of the very best quality, that it will amount to between 3,000,000 and 4,000,000 baskets, and that the price will be extremely low. The latter fact may not carry with it so much of gratification to the Florida growers as it will of the Northern consumers.

The returns from threshings indicate that wheat in this state is yielding far better than estimated earlier in the season. On the fifth of this month, from the returns then in, the approximate yield in the state was placed at near twenty-seven million bushels. More complete returns show that the total yield will exceed this amount. It now seems certain that it will reach, and it may exceed, twenty-eight million bushels. The present uncertainty respecting the output is due to the fact that the acreage is not yet definitely determined, and also to the fact that very many farmers have not as yet threshed only a part of their crop, hence they themselves do not know, accurately, the average yield on their own farms.

HUMBUGGING THE FARMER.

In many places, Peddlers with fancy teams are going from house to house trying to sell the farmers a "four-hole Wrought Steel range" for $65 or $63, according to terms. Many persons are being taken in by these flittitious prices. If parties desiring to purchase a FIRST CLASS STEEL RANGE will inquire of the stove dealer nearest them about the Superb Wrought Steel range, manufactured and sold by home dealers, they will be surprised to discover that they can buy a much larger one with SIX holes on top for MUCH LESS MONEY. These stoves are first-class in every respect. The Sheet Steel is extra heavy. The ends are tripple thickness, two of heavy Steel and one of Asbestos between the two steel plates. The oven doors are balanced and one style has the celebrated "automatic door opener and closer," by the use of which it is unnecessary to use the hand in opening and closing the door, as it is opened by a simple movement of the foot. Don't pay extravagant prices for goods when you can get a better article for less money.

Don't let any visiting peddler mannaage so as to break the stove you already have. Don't be deceived by any breakage test, but try them with ordinary fire use for thirty days before signing any note. Where will your note be placed by a peddler after you have signed it? Where will the peddler be when you want your range repaired? Is not our guarantee better than one made by a peddler that you may not be able to find when wanted? We sell the Steel ranges, and you can always find us. Truly Yours, Teeple & Cadwell.

The testimonials of these FACTS are NUMEROUS and STRONG, similar to the following: From the Hon. Harvey D. Colvin, Ex-Mayor of Chicago: CHICAGO, July 24, 1890. S. H. KLINCK—DEAR SIR: I am pleased to say that I consider your remedy the best medicine in existence for the human afflictions you claim to cure. I suffered from catarrh with bronchitis for many years. During that time I employed physicians and faithfully tried many so-called remedies advertised to cure this disease, without any material benefit, when a friend induced me to try your remedy, claiming others had been cured by it. The first bottle gave me the most pleasing results. I have continued its use and I can not say too much for it. It found me too near the grave for comfort and restored me to health again. It adorns my toilet stand and by using it occasionally I am kept well. I would not be without it if it cost $5 per bottle. I earnestly recommend it to all my afflicted friends. EVERY day, in all our cities, thousands of girls are leading lives that are unbroken careers of heroism. They are doing it, too, as a matter of course, with no thought of its moral bearing, and they would be the first to resent the idea that they were entitled to any special credit for so doing.

The whole glorious group of modern poets came with this nineteenth century and the succession has not failed till the century is near its end and the world waits for it knows not what new movement, certain only that time will not stand still and that every age must in some way find its fit poetical expression. We may have to wait for them, but the poets will surely come.

ASTRONOMICAL photography has accomplished many wonderful results, but nothing perhaps more surprising than its discoveries about the moon. The moon is so near by, and has been so carefully studied with the most powerful telescopes for hundreds of years, that the astronomers had come to think that they knew pretty much all about it, or at least about that face of the moon which is turned toward the earth.

THERE is no reason why in a school-room and among those engaged therein a standard of polite deportment shall not be maintained such as prevails or ought to prevail in refined homes. This standard has never been introduced into the schools. School officers, teachers and pupils are all lax and too often rude and uncouth. Supervisory officers stealthily enter school-rooms as if it were necessary to surprise teachers and pupils as a cat does mice or a burglar a sleeping household. The scowling face, the petulant word, the taciturn aspect, the shuffling step, the awkward gait, the uneasy conduct of officials and principals in schools have an inevitable effect on teachers and pupils.

POPULARIZATION of electricity has been progressing at accelerated rate. It will probably surprise many people to know that there are now in the United States in actual operation 307 electric street railways. They are distributed over forty states and territories. It is curious to note that while slow-moving Canada has only one, the young state of Washington has thirteen. It is observable, also, that they are most numerous in northern states, like New York, Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Illinois, which has twenty-two, and least numerous in southern states. Alabama and Arkansas have one each, Delaware, one, Kentucky and Louisiana one each. In the far west the new force is invading mines.

ONE night named John, whose other name means a little roll of rusk, relates how he was born in a humble house in Brunswick Square and was taken by his father to see Warwick Castle, and being a lad of uncommon thought, he reflected that it was better to have been born in a humble house John goes on to say, as their majesties may not be aware, that it would not have done the humble house in Brunswick Square any good to have had Warwick Castle pulled down. We admit that our forbears were slightly of different mind so far as this land was concerned. But they were minded also that it is none of our affairs to tear down castles that are in other lands, the same being entrusted by heaven in its good time to the peoples thereof.

THE English people did not take kindly to expositions. They could not see in advance direct returns. Manufacturers feared disastrous effect of comparison between their products and those of other firms and other countries. Shopkeepers feared that buying people would run after novelties in the exhibitions. This fear was accentuated by apparent direct losses in management of great show undertakings. Although the exhibition of 1851 gave a net profit of more than a million dollars, preceding and subsequent ones showed deficits in the formal balance sheets. All French expositions have not been direct financial successes. The losses incurred by the British representation at the Paris exposition of 1855 discouraged the British government from generous appropriations for subsequent ones.

TALMAGE TALKS MUSIC.

THE TABERNACLE RINGS WITH SWEET MELODIES.

Leading Enchantment to Last Sunday's Sermon—The Worth of Music as Viewed by the Great Divine—"The Voice of Many Waters."

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Sept. 20, 1891.—The magnificent organ of the New Brooklyn tabernacle was dedicated to-day. The services were veritable musical festivals. While the regular musical programme at the tabernacle is always attractive, that of to-day was exceptionally beautiful, the congregational singing, offertories, and interludes being rendered with marvellous volume and expression. Dr. Talmage's sermon, which was appropriate to the occasion, was on the text, Genesis 4: 21: "His brother's name was Jubal; he was the father of all such as handle the harp and organ."

There has been much discussion as to where music was born. I think that at the beginning, when the morning stars sang together, and all the sons of God shouted for joy, that the earth heard the echo. The cloud on which the angels stood to celebrate the creation, was the birthplace of song. Inanimate nature is full of God's stringed and wind instruments. Silence itself—perfect silence—is only a musical rest in God's great anthem of worship. Wind among the leaves, insects humming in the summer air, the rush of billow upon the beach, the ocean far out sounding its everlasting psalm, the bobolink on the edge of the forest, the quail whistling up from the grass, are music. On Blackwell's Island I heard, coming from a window of the lunatic asylum, a very sweet song. It was sung by one who had lost her reason, and I have come to believe that even the deranged and disordered elements of nature would make music to our ear, if we only had acuteness enough to listen. I suppose that even the sounds in nature that are discordant and repulsive make harmony in God's ear. You know that you may come so near to an orchestra that the sounds are painful instead of pleasurable; and I think we stand so near devastating storm and frightful whirlwind, that we cannot hear that which makes to God's ear and the ear of the spirits above us, a music as complete as it is tremendous.

The joy of judgment, which will be a day of uproar and tumult I suppose will be no dissonance to the ears of those who calmly listen; although it be a music some great performer is executing a boisterous piece of music, he sometimes breaks down the instrument on which he plays, so it may be on that last day that the grand march of God, played by the fingers of thunder, and earthquake and conflagration, may break down the world upon which the music is executed. Not only is inanimate nature full of music, but God has wonderfully organized the human voice, so that in the plainest throat and lungs there are fourteen direct muscles which can make over sixteen thousand different sounds, and there are thirty indirect muscles which can make it, has been estimated, more than one hundred and seventy-three millions of sounds. Now, I say, when God has so constructed the human voice, and when he has filled the whole earth with harmony, and when he recognized it in the ancient temple, I have a right to come to the conclusion that God loved music.

I propose, this morning in setting apart this organ for sacred use, to speak about sacred music: first showing you its importance, and then stating some of the obstacles to its advancement.

I draw the first argument from the importance of sacred music from the fact that God commanded it. Through Paul he tells us to admonish one another in psalms, and hymns, and spiritual songs; and through David he cries out: "Sing ye to God, all ye kingdoms of the earth." And there are hundreds of other passages I might name, proving that it is his duty to sing as it is his duty to pray. Indeed, I think there are more commands in the Bible to sing than there are to pray. God not only asks for the human voice but for instruments of music. He asks for the cymbal, and the harp, and the trumpet as well as the organ. And I suppose that in the last days of the church, the harp, the lute, the trumpet, and all the instruments of music whether they have been in the service of righteousness, or sin will be brought by their masters and laid down at the feet of Christ, and then sounded in the church's triumph, on her way from suffering into glory. "Praise ye the Lord." Praise him with your voices. Praise him with stringed instruments and with organs.

Many of you are illustrations of what sacred song can do. Through it you were brought into the Kingdom of Jesus Christ. You stood out against the argument and the warning of the pulpit; but when, in the sweet words of Isaac Watts, or Charles Wesley, or John Newton, or Toplady, the love of Jesus was sung to your soul, then you surrendered, as armed castle, that could not be taken by a host, hits its window to listen to a harp's trill. There was a Scotch soldier dying in New Orleans, and a Scotch minister came in to give him the consolations of the Gospel. The man turned over on his pillow, and said: "Don't talk to me about religion." Then the Scotch minister began to sing a familiar hymn of Scotland, that was composed by David Dickenson, beginning with the words:

Oh, mother, dear Jerusalem,
When shall I come to thee?
He sang it to the tune of "Dundee," and everybody in Scotland knows back's added.

that; and as he began to sing the dying soldier turned over on his pillow, and said to the minister: "Where did you learn that?" "Why," replied the minister, "my mother taught me that." "So did mine," said the dying Scotch soldier; and the very foundation of his heart was upturned, and then and there he yielded himself to Christ. Oh, it has an irresistible power. Luther's sermons have been forgotten, but his "Judgment Hymn" sings on through the ages, and will keep on singing until the blast of the archangel's trumpet shall bring about that very day which the hymn celebrates. I would to God that those who hear me, to-day, would take these songs of salvation as messages from heaven; for, just as certainly as the birds brought food to Elijah, by the brook Cherith, so these winged harmonies, God-sent, are flying to your soul with the bread of life. Open your mouths and take it, O hungry Eli! ah!

In addition to the inspiring music of our own day we have a glorious inheritance of church psalmody which has come down fragrant with the devotions of other generations—tunes no more worn out than they were when our great-grandfathers climbed up on them from the church pew to glory. Dear old souls, how they used to sing! When they were cheerful, our grandfathers and grandmothers used to sing "Colchester." When they were very meditative, then the board meeting-house rang with "South street" and "St. Edmund's."

My Christian friends, have we a right to delegate to others the discharge of this duty which God demands of us? Suppose that four wood-thrushes should propose to do all the singing some bright day when the woods are ringing with bird voices. It is decided that four wood-thrushes shall do all the singing of the forest. Let all other voices keep silent. How beautifully the four warble. It is really fine music. But how long will you keep the forest still? Why, Christ would come into that forest and look up as he looked through the olives, and he would wave his hand and say: "Let everything that hath breath praise the Lord;" and, keeping time with the stroke of innumerable wings, there would be five thousand bird voices leaping into the harmony. Suppose this delegation of musical performers were made in heaven; suppose that four choice spirits should try to do the singing of the upper temple. Hush now, thrones and dominions and principalities. David! be still, though you were "the sweet singer of Israel." Paul! keep quiet, though you have come to that crown of rejoicing. Richard Baxter! keep still, though this is the "Saint's everlasting Rest." Four spirits now do all the singing. How long would heaven be quiet? How long? "Hallelujah!" would cry some glorified Methodist from under the altar. "Praise the Lord" would sing the martyrs from among the thrones. "Thanks be unto God who giveth us the victory!" a great multitude of redeemed spirits would cry. Myriads of voices coming into the harmony, and the one hundred and forty and four thousand breaking forth into one acclamation. Stop that loud singing! Stop! Oh no, they cannot hear me. You might as well try to drown the thunder of the sky, or beat back the roar of the sea, for every soul in heaven has resolved to do its own singing. Alas! that we should have tried on earth that which they cannot do in heaven, and, instead of joining all our voices in the praise of the Most High God delegating perhaps to unconsecrated men and women this most solemn and most delightful service.

I want to rouse you to a unanimity in Christian song that has never yet been exhibited. Come, now! cleave your throats and get ready for the duty, or you will never hear the end of this. I never shall forget hearing a Frenchman sing the "Marseillaise" on the Champs Elysees, Paris, just before the battle of Sedan, in 1870. I never saw such enthusiasm before or since. As he sang that national air, oh! how the Frenchmen shouted! Have you ever in an English assembly heard a band play "God Save the Queen"? If you have, you know something about the enthusiasm of a National air. Now, I tell you that these songs we sing Sabbath by Sabbath are the national airs of Jesus Christ and of the kingdom of heaven; and if you do not learn to sing them here, how do you ever expect to sing the song of Moses and the Lamb? I should not be surprised at all if some of the best anthems of heaven were made up of some of the best songs of earth. May God increase our reverence for Christian psalmody, and keep us from disgracing it by our indifference and frivolity. When Cromwell's army went into battle, he stood at the head of them one day, and gave out the long-metre doxology to the tune of the "Old Hundredth," and that great host, company by company, regiment by regiment, battalion by battalion, joined in the doxology:

Praise God from whom all blessings flow,
Praise him all creatures here below;
Praise him above, ye heavy nigh host,
Praise Father, Son, and Holy Ghost.

And while they sang, they marched, and while they marched, they fought, and while they fought they got the victory. O men and women of Jesus Christ, let us go into all our conflicts singing the praises of God, and then, instead of falling back, as we often do, from defeat to defeat, we will be marching on from victory to victory. Glory to the Father and to the Son and to the Holy Ghost, as it was in the beginning, is now and ever shall be, world without end. Amen.

"German Syrup"

We have selected two or three lines from letters freshly received from parents who have given German Syrup to their children in the emergencies of Croup. You will credit these, because they come from good, substantial people, happy in finding what so many families lack—a medicine containing no evil drug, which mother can administer with confidence to the little ones in their most critical hours, safe and sure that it will carry them through.

ED. L. WILKINS, of Mrs. JAS. W. KIRK, Alma, Neb. I give it to my children when troubled with Croup and never saw any preparation act like it. It is simply miraculous.

Fully one-half of our customers are mothers who use Boschee's German Syrup among their children. A medicine to be successful with the little folks must be a treatment for the sudden and terrible foes of childhood, whooping cough, croup, diphtheria and the dangerous inflammations of delicate throats and lungs.

Be on guard against imitations of Pearl-ine. When they are not dangerous, they are worthless. They are usually both. Pearl-ine does what nothing else can. It saves labor in washing, and insures safety to what is washed. It is cheap, thorough, and reliable. Nothing else will "do as well;" it is just as well to have nothing else.

DINAH MULOCK CRAIK.

The Romance of the Life of the Author of "John Halifax."

I was walking along Regent street this morning when there was pointed out to me a young woman. There was nothing about her manner, dress or appearance to attract one's attention, and yet her life holds one of the prettiest little stories on record.

Many years ago there were united in marriage a far-famed authoress and the man she loved. The man was a cripple, but the couple lived an idyllic life not far from London town. One day the literary woman heard, quite incidentally, that a baby had been found on a stone at the cross roads; that it had been taken to the town hall, and that all the gentry about were going to look at it because it was such a sweet little child. So, following the example of her neighbors, she went, too. Looking up into the sweet, sympathetic face of the famed authoress the little lady smiled and put out its wee hands. The woman could not resist this, so she determined to take the child for her very own. Quickly it was wrapped up and then it became her baby. Devoted to it, she was yet determined, as it grew older it should never have its heart hurt by being told the story of its birth and adoption. So, as soon as the little girl was able to understand it, it was lovingly whispered to her that she had been found on the large stone which stood in the center of the hall and which always was decorated with flowers, and that God had put her there that her mother might find her. As soon as she grew old enough, it became her daily duty to cut the flowers and arrange them to make beautiful this great rock that had been dug up from the cross roads and brought there. To her it represented the place where the hands of the angels had rested when they laid her down. Curiously enough, this child became very proud of the way in which she had reached the dear mother, who cared for her as lovingly and as tenderly as if she was of her own flesh and blood. Her birthday was the day on which she was found, and when the tenth one came around, and a child's party was given her, she was heard asking one little girl, "How old are you?" The other one answered, "I was born nine years ago." "O," answered the baby, "you were born like other children, but I am better than that; I was found just where God had placed me." The childish pride was as amusing as it was pathetic. The years have gone by, the eyes of the good mother are closed forever to the sights of the world; but the child she cared for lives in the great town of London, and remembers. The child was the young woman I saw on Regent street this morning. The authoress? She was Dinah Mulock Craik, author of "John Halifax, Gentleman."—London Letter.

As yet the "way up" artists do not sign the work they do for advertisers, but I apprehend that it will not be long ere we shall see in the advertising columns such names as George Wharton Edwards, E. These qualities, when used in connection with advertisements, command scarcely less interest than when used in the ordinary literary way.—Printer's Ink, August 19 1891.

Contagious Diseases.

We clip the following from the leaflets issued by the State Board of Health. It should be read by all. If you wish a copy of the whole of the leaflets send to the Sec. State Board of Health at Lansing:

In Michigan, diphtheria and scarlet fever are the most dangerous contagious diseases, as that term is usually understood; the most dangerous communicable diseases, named in the order of their importance as causes of deaths, are consumption, diphtheria, pneumonia, typhoid fever, scarlet fever, whooping-cough, measles and small-pox.

Typhoid fever. Unlike typhus fever, typhoid fever is not often contracted directly from the sick person, but from the discharges from the bowels of the sick person; these should always be disinfected. The chief source of danger is believed to be drinking water contaminated by leaching from privies etc. All suspected water should be boiled.

Measles is a dangerous, contagious disease, hence it is a "disease dangerous to the public health," under the laws in Michigan, and the observance of the following precautions is of importance.

Every person known to be sick with measles should be promptly and thoroughly isolated from the public; no more persons than are actually necessary should have charge of or visit the patient, and they should be restricted in their intercourse with other persons.

Plain and distinct notices should be placed upon the premises or house in which there is a person sick with measles.

Householders and physicians must immediately give notice of the first case and of every case of measles to the health officer or to the president or clerk of the local board of health. This is required by law.

The law requires householders and physicians to notify the health officer, president, or clerk of the local board of health, of the first case and of every case of these diseases. The penalty for violation of this law may be as much as one hundred dollars.

Unless the local board of health orders otherwise, whoever violates the orders of the health officer is liable to a fine, and to imprisonment if the fine is not paid.

When the death of a person who has died from scarlet fever, diphtheria, or small-pox is announced in print, the notice should state the cause as "from scarlet fever," diphtheria, or small-pox, as the case may be, to prevent attendance at the funeral or visits to the house by persons liable to take the disease.
