A Fusion Ticket Nominated.

It required a whole mfternoon's work to bring the silver Democrats, the Silver party (mostly Republicans), and the Populists together on common ground in convention at Grand Rapids, and even then the middle-of-the-road Populists kicked over the traces and nominated a ticket of their own. The ticket named by the tripartite fusionists is as follows:

For supreme court justice-George L. Yaple (Democrat), of Mendon.

For regent of the University-Stanley E. Parkhill (Silver Republican), of Owosso.

For regent of the University-Thorne Ruppert (Populist), of Webberville.

The break in the Populist ranks was caused by a strong opposition to fusion which finally resulted in about half the delegates organizing a bolting convention which elected a state central committee, with Sullivan Cook, of Hartford, as chairman, and nominated for justice of the supreme court John O. John Buck, a farmer living in Bennington, Shiawassee county, shot his divorced wife three times while he was intoxicated. He called to see his former wife and began to abuse her until she ordered him out. Then he pulled a revolver and fired three times at her, every bullet taking effect. Mrs. Buck ran into the yard screaming, and her two youngest children.ran a distance of 40 rods through the snow without shoes or stockings. both having their feet badly frozen. An older son succeeded in getting the revolver away from his father. Buck was arrested later while in bed and placed in jail at Corunna. The neighborhood is thoroughly aroused over the matter, and the timely arrival of : the officers was all that saved Buck from being lynched. Mrs. Buck may possibly recover.

ADISON JANEway was always pointed out as a 'self-made man' and was well satisfied with his own handiwork, for content radiated from his full face and from his figure, which had lost its youthful muscle under creeping waves of fieth. Mr. Janeway had satisfied his ambitions as far as it is possible for a man to do it. Fortunately for his content these aspirations were of the kind that are most often realized. He had a handsome wife and three bright children; he was president of the state bank, an institution known to be founded on the rock of sound finance: he had been mayor of Shewanee and was a member of the legislature. So much of earthly glory had fallen to his share.

When he read the obituary of another self-made man he always nodded his head sagely as much as to say: "I know how it goes; I started with nothing myself." In fact Mr. Janeway's election to the legislature came of the admiration the electors had for a man of the people. When his constituents hired a band and went to congraiulate him they found him ready with a speech. He said: "Fellow-citizens, I will not try to hide from you is becoming celebrated among Europeans my deep gratification at the result of who appreciate a pure article. Mr. Janeway looked at her attentively-was it zeal for an artistic ensemble or was there a lurking jealousy of the woman who had come before? "Pack it away if you like," he said, turning away. "It is shabby."

Long after his wife and children were sleeping Mr. Janeway sat smoking and thinking complacently of his success. He, Madison Janeway, had begun with nothing, and at 50 he had won the things he had longed for at 20. The opening and closing of the door attracted his attention. He looked up. A woman walked across the room. A plain woman, with an honest, ugly face and a short, thick figure.

"Who are you?" Mr. Janeway asked, frowning at her intrusion. "Don't you know me, Maddy?" she returned.

He was startled when she called him Maday-it was more than twenty years since he had been called that. "Areyou-are-you-but you can't be Sarah," he stammered. "She has been dead these many years."

"I am Sarah," she answered. "You have changed. Maddy."

"Yes-yes-we are apt to," he replied, uneasily. "But you look just the same." He said this to see if she would account for her presence.

"The living can only see the dead as they were in life," she returned. "You sold the farm, didn't you?"

Mr. Janeway felt as if a reproach lay in the observation. "Yes, I sold the farm," he said. "I needed the money to

"I worked hard on that place," she said, crossing her hands-very rough, worn hands. "I worked very hard there those years-I tried to save all I could, 'Maddy.''

"You were a good wife, Sarah," he replied; "and both of us had our burdens, I guess."

""And it was my money that bought the farm-you had nothing when you came courting me, did you, Maddy? And you said that my being thirty yeans old and you being just of age made no difference."

way felt that he was making a handsome reparation, but he was a man who aimed to do right-if was necessary to his self-exteem.

The child wriggled from his arms and walked away with an awed glance at the picture.

Mr. Janeway stared at it musingly. "Are you satisfied now, Sarah?" he caught himself saying. "Pshaw---tha dream holds to me still," he exclaimed. "but anylow I've done her justice."

And though the architect declared that the photograph quite spoiled the effect of the library and begged that it might be banished to some back room, Mr. Janeway was firm, and the dua, good face of his first wife kept its place between the St. Cecilia and the Arabian Falconer.

> Mr. and Mrs. Janeway had just come from a visit to their new house, which their architect assured them was in the purest style of the gothic renaissance. But they were sure, too, which seemed to them of far more importance, that it was the finest house in town and quite eclipsed Mrs. Morgan's red-brick mansion.

> They were to move into it at once and Mrs. Janeway went about the old house planning what should be left behind, as not coming up to the artistic standard of the new place. "Come here a minute, Madison," she called from an obscure entry back of the diningroom.

Mr. Janeway laid down his paper and went to her, followed by Florry, their youngest child. "What is it, my dear?" be asked.

"Hadn't we better pack this awaythe frame's so shabby that it isn't fit for the new house?" She pointed to a faded photograph, hanging in a dark corner. It was the likeness of a plain woman, with a broad mouth and eyes widely separated; the hair was parted and drawn back from the forehead like two curtains; a watch-chain picked out in gilt encircled her neck and her lips and cheeks were touched with carmine, giving the face a ghastly pretense of life.

Mr. Janeway stared at it meditatively. "I hadn't noticed it for a long time," he said.

sure I always tried to be good to you," he said in answer to that unspoken reproach that seemed to lie behind her spoken words. "I tried to treat, you well."

"The money that came to me just before I died from Uncle John must have been a help-I left it and the farm to you, Maddy." Her dull eyes seemed to force him to acknowledge his debt.

"Yes--yes--Sarah. I know that I owe much to you. Without your help and dropped at one end, the other end bemoney I should have had a much harder time getting on my feet. Yet I think I should have succeeded in any case." Mr. Janeway could not forbear offering this tribute to his self-esteem. "However, I gratefully acknowledge your aid. Sarah."

"You have another wife now, Maddy, and children." she said. "But I was first. I believed in you, and I worked device having the inside next to the for you, oh. so willingly. I knew that you were different from me-I knew that you had hopes that stupid Sarah could never understand. I knew that I was your companion in your work, but not in your hopes. I knew that we were growing further apart every year that we lived together. I knew that while I was getting to be worked out and middle-aged, that you were only coming to your prime. I knew that it was best that I died when I did-before I came to be a drag on you. Yet, Maddy, before her and your children. I think you ought not to shame me, for I was your faithful wife—the wife of your youth, and I gave you all I had to give-my money, my love, my toil."

Before Mr. Janeway could answer she was gone and he sat alone.

The next day, however, he took the old photograph downtown and ordered for it a gorgeous frame. When it was returned he hung it in his new library, where it looked strangely alien between a St. Cecilia and the Arabian Falcgner, bought at the instigation of the architect.

Florry, with a child's quickness, noticed the fine new gilt frame that surrounded the ugly, good face. "What have you done to the lady?" she asked. 'Aren't you going to pack her away, like mamma said?'

"No, the picture is to stay here. Do you remember who I said it was?"

Mr. Janeway took her on his knee Florry," he began soberly, "when I was a little boy I was very poor—as poor as the Galts"-a family celebrated in the town for ill-luck and poverty. How Little Things Do Harm. Oftentimes it is little faults, little carelessness in conduct, little blemishes in character, the "no harms" that make fairly good people almost useless, so far as their influence goes. There was a great light house out at sea. One night the men lighted the lamps, as usual. Some time afterward they saw that there appeared no light upon the water where ordinarily there was a bright lane of beams. They examined their lamps-they were burning brightly. But they looked outside and there were millions of little insects on the glass, so thickly piled there that the light could not get through. In the morning they learned that a ship had been wrecked close by because the light had been obscured by the insects. Here is the lesson, says Dr. Miller: The lamp may be burning brightly in your soul or in mine; but little faults-pride, ugly temper, selfishness, half-heartedness, bad habits of tongue, carelessness about paying debts or keeping promises, a hundred other things-may so cloud our lives as to obscure the image of God in our souls. Perhaps some soul has been lost because your lamp does not shine out with a clear light. We counsel ou young people to be good, heartiful

EUROPE AFLAME. GREECE AND TURKEY ABOUT

TO GO TO WAR. Trying to Prevent a The Powers are Clash-Greece Sends Warships and Troops to Help the Insurgents in

Croto-

The conflict between Greece und Turkey seems to be rapidly approaching. The Christian insurgents in Island of Crete are throwing off the yoke of the Mohammedan rule of the barbarous Turks and Greece is evidently determined to help them gain their freedom if possible. The Grecian torpedo flotilla, commanded by Prince George started for Crete amidst great enthusiasm on the part of the people. Prince George admitted that his orders were to prevent by every means possible the landing of any Turkish troops on the Island of Crete. The British sailors cheered the Greek troops, just at they were starting for Crete. A fresh flotilla of four torpedo boats is held in readiness at Athens to sail for Crete and reinforcements of troops are frontier. The departure of the first flotilla has aroused the greatest enthusias in the provinces. Patriotic demonstrations are taking place in all parts of Greece. A dispatch from Athens says that the central Cretan committee in Greece is preparing to support the Cretans with arms, ammunition and supplies on a great scale. The first installment has already sailed with 600 armed Cretans. The same dispatch says that the departure of the Greek torpedo flotilla for the Island of Crete was due to the announcement that Turkish torpedo boats had left the Dardanelles and that Turkish troops had embacked at Salonika for Crete. Nobody seems to doubt a clash at arms will occur between Greece and Turkey, unless the powers intervene; but it is believed here that Greece will be given a free hand Crete and that if she succeeds

DAILY DOINGS OF CONGRESS.

SENATE-46th day-A resolution presented by Mr. Hill, of New York, was passed, requesting the secretary of state to use his good offices in behalf of Correspondent Scovel, imprisoned by the Spanish in Cuba, to secure his removal to Havana and "to insist that he shall have all the rights and privileges secured to American citizens by treaty between Spain and the United States." Mr. Morgan, of Alabama, introduced a joint resolution to the effect that the Clayton-Bulwer treaty between Great Britain and the United States be abrogated. The discussion of the arbitration treaty in executive session occupied the rest of the day. HOUSE-The postoffice appropriation bill was passed, carrying $95,435,714.

SENATE. - 47th day. - The arbitration treaty was before the Senate all day to the exclusion of other matters. House.-The sundry civil appropriation bill was under consideration and afforded Messrs, Savers, of Texas; Dockery, of Missouri, and other Domoeratic members an apportunity to arraign this congress for the enormous appropriations which have been made and which, they predict, will aggregate.$1,050,000,000. Speaker Reed was exonerated from all responsibility in the matter and a political debate was occasioned which took up nearly the entire day. Rep. Cummings, of New York, introduced a resolution requesting the secretary of state to give any information he may have regarding the stripping of three lady passengers on board the U.S. mail steamship Olivetta in the harbor of Havana by Spanish soldiers and detectives. Mr. Cummings said: "If an English woman on an English vessel had been stripped by Spanish officials as it has been alleged that an American woman was stripped, within 48 hours Moro castle would come down or some apology would be made for it.'

SENATE-48th day-Mr. Morgan, of Alabama, called up his resolution to abrogate the Clayton-Bulwer treaty. Mr. Sherman tried to prevent it, and Vice-President Stevenson maintained Mr. Sherman's points of order. Then Mr. Morgan declared he was being "victimized" by the chair and a lively tilt ensued, but Mr. Morgan carried his point. The Senate went into executive session for three hours after which the bankruptey bill was under consideration for a time. The conference report on the legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bill was agreed to. A-further conference on the agricultural appropriation bill was directed. HOUSE-The sundry civil appropriation bill-carrying $50,644,743-was passed under suspension of the rules. Several other bills were passed in the same way, notably, appropriating $250,000 to close the crevasse in the Pass l'Outre at the mouth of the Mississippi river which threatened to destroy navigation at that point; to equip the National Guard with uniform Springfield rifles, 45 caliber; authorizing the secretary of the navy to transport from the Pacific coast contributions to the famine sufferers of India. standard of either gold or silver. He took occasion to score some of the 'turncoats" and "bolters" of the last campaign and thereby ran up against doughty opponent. Then followed one of the hottest personal controversies of the present session of congress. The Indian appropriation bill was next taken up and later the bankruptcy bill was briefly considered, but neither measure was passed. HOUSE - After routine business the day was spent on private pension bills. SENATE .- 50th day.-The immigration bill now goes to the President, the last legislative step having been taken in the Senate by an agreement to the conference report on the bill. Strong opposition was made to the report, but the final vote was yeas 34; nays 31. There was little else of general interest in the session. HOUSE.—After two hours of debate the bill was passed opening up to individuals and corporaions 138 reservoir sites reserved by the geological survey in the arid region of the west. The conference report on the legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bill was agreed to, and the remainder of the day was devoted to a contested election case of the Tenth Kentucky district.

European doctors approve the decison of the New York Board of Health in regard to the isolation of consumptives. They say, however, that it is theoretically imperative, yet in practice it is very difficult to carry on.

The Salvation Army in Chicago has a plan similar to that so effectively employed by General Booth for the regeneration of the dwellers in the lowest slums of London, and which has been followed with good results. They contemplate the drafting of the unemployed and penniless from Chicago and putting them at work on small tracts of land and in small factories outside of the city.

Five well-known young bachelors of Shelbyville, Ind., have formed themselves into a club called The Coming Benedicts, and have bound themselves to be married before next Christmas, registering their oaths to that effect before a magistrate. They are to meet for dinner, with their wives, at a hotel, Dec. 25, 1897, and if any one of them has failed to keep his pledge he must come down to the dinner in charge of the sheriff, bound and gagged, and must forfeit $100 to each of the others. Advices from Constantinople say that there is a disposition in official circles to hold the powers responsible for anything that may happen in Crete. The sultan has been prevailed upon by the ambassadors to refrain from sending reinforcements to Crete and he has the assurance that the powers have decided to not permit the landing of Greek troops on the island. But the porte has informed the powers that if they are unsuccessful in preventing Greek intervention in Crete the Turkish government will be compelled to begin military operations on the Thessalia frontier: or in other words. Turkey will declare war against Greece and promptly invade that county.

The situation on the Island of Crete is serious, indeed. The insurgents have gained control of the whole is land with the exception of the larger towns and have formed a provisional government. It is said that the Greek warships have landed a quantity of arms, ammunition and provisions and at least one body of troops in spite of the warships present to prevent it. Conflicts are reported f.om many parts of the island. The captain of the Greek warship off Heraklion threatened to bombard the town if the Mohammedans commit any outrages in that vicinity.

The Powers Take a Hand. Later dispatches from Canea and from Athens show that history is being made very rapidly in the Island of Crete. The insurgents are getting the upper hand of their Turkish rulers. They occupied the heights above Canea and began to bombard the town. This move caused the Turkish military governor Prince Georgi Berovitch to resign his position and board a Turkish man-of-war. The consuls of the powers prealed to the vessels of their respective governments and troops were landed from the men-of-war. The Russian, French, English and Italians each furnished 100 men. the Austrians 50. With the consent of the Turkish authorities the whole detachment landed, under command of an Italian officer, a similar detachment commanded by a French officer, is held in readiness to land. Russian, French.

English, and Austrian flags were then hoisted on the ramparis of the town. The commander of the Greek squadron was notified of their landing and the bombarding ceased.

CHAPTER II.- (Continues) "A hundred, if you'll pay for them. They're as thick as sprats here and there in places."

He gave me a sour look, and turned it off to a laugh almost as sour.

"You sailor fellows like to have your joke. Look here, now. I lend money, and am fond of a bargain. You're a bold, strong man. Get some of them pearls and feathers, or anything foreign and curious, and bring them home to me, and I'll pay you handsomely for them."

"I tell you I've enough else to do. They don't come in my way." And 1 turned and opened the gate, for there was something in the man made mer dislike him--something that seemed to say, "I'd buy your blood if I could make money out of it."

"Think it over," said he, detaining me.

"'All right; I'll think 't over, And that's all I will do," said I to myself.

"There's money in it, I tell youmoney. You're not rich enough to turn your nose up at that. We'll talk about it again. I see you're in a hurry now. Good evening, Mr. Beecroft." He held out his hand.

"Good evening, Mr. ----"

"Druce," said he; "that's my name." His hand lay in mine like a parcel of bones. I dropped it quickly, and epit into my palm and rubbed it on my trousers. He looked at me angrily, and I saw in his face, which had grown white and livid at my action, the likeness to that white and livid face which formed part of my childish remembrance. The face of the other man, too, the man who had been wronged, with the blood trickling down it, came fondle and pat her shoulder to soothe and calm the good old soul.

When I was a man full grown, having passed through thirty changes of the seasons, I came home-from India this time-and, peeping through the window of our cottage. I saw that my mother was not alone. A little girl was with her, seven or eight years old maybe, and my mother was talking to her, pointing with her finger, and nodding her head gently, after the fashion of elderly women when they are interested in what they are saying. The child sat, open-eyed and still, listening to the old woman's gossip. I doubted not that it was of me she was speaking, for when I gave out my lusty, "Yo, heave, ho!" she started to her feet, crying, "And here he is!" and before we knew where we were, we were kissing and crying over each other. When she recovered herself a little, she turned to the child, and said, as she wiped her eyes:

"This is my son--my Amos!" The little maid nodded, and stared at me solemnly. I drew her to me, and she stood at my side with her hand in mine; a pretty little fairy she was, with her blue eyes and fair face and light auburn hair which hung in wavy curls to her shoulders. Her name was Mabel. She was the child of a neighbor, and between her and my mother quite a fond friendship had been struck up. The old mother lived all alone, and I was glad to think that she had obtained such a pretty little companion to spend an hour with now and again.

"I shall call you mother's fairy," said I, smoothing her hair. Her eyes sparkled. "Have you seen

"I saw you coming down the street," she said, "and threw on my hat and ran after you to shake hands with you."

"That was good of you, Mabel," said I.

"Good!" she exclaimed. "See what a time you have been away-so longso long! I have been looking every day for your return."

"And if I had never come back, Mabel?" -

The first answer she gave me was a reproachful look. Then she said: "There are some things we should not speak lightly of. Death is one." "A sailor looks it in the face very often, Mabel, and grows to think more lightly than landfolk. You have really missed me, then?"

"Indeed I have."

"And thought of me?" "Indeed I have. And spoken to you, and seen you."

"Why, Mabel!" I cried, in surprise, not understanding her.

Her hand was lying lightly on my arm, for these words interchanged between us as I walked with her to the end of our street.

"You forget," she said, "that the shells you gave me have voices, and that when you put them to your ears and close your eyes, you can see and hear things."

"Ah, that's like my little Mabel, like my little maid that I have always loved. Look at me, Mabel, am I changed?"

"Not a bit. I should have known you anyhere. Am I?"

She put the question laughingly, and with the prettiest little toss of her beautiful head. I gazed at her in fullest admiration.

"It's well I met you here instead of in foreign lands; for then I should have wondered, 'Can this be the little Mabel I left behind me?' 'I should have doubted until you spoke to me. For your voice is not altered." "Nor my heart," she said, softly.

I am aware that it was most unreasonable in me to speak to him in this way. If his father had done a wrong, what kind of justice was it to make the son accountable for it? But the name and all that belonged to it were destestable to me, and what was in me was bound to come out.

quite sufficient for ner wants. She eked it out by earning some small sum herself-never mind in what way; sufficient that it was in an honest way.

Jack ashore, in the person of Amos Beecroft, was a home-bird, believe me. It was one of my great pleasures when I returned home from a voyage to walk from the docks to the little house of shells in Brixton, and to peep through the window at my mother, bustling about, making preparation for me, or, all the preparation being made, and there being nothing else for to do, to see her sitting in her chair, pretending to work, while all the while her heart was in her ears, as she listened for my step. I never told her the exact day I was coming, and indeed I never knew, for the elements baffle man's judgment, but what I mean is, if I had known, I should not have told her. It pleased me to give her a surprise. Therefore, If, as I turned the corner of the street, I saw her standing at the little cottage door, or by the little garden gate, with her hand to her eyes looking out for me, I would dodge about, and wait till she was inside. When all was safe, I would look up above the little low window to | and held them in mine, and we stood cause she was inclined to place a higher value upon me than such a common fellow as I deserved. It was not her fault; she looked at me through my mother's spectacles, which the old woman had placed on her eyes. It did reither of us any great harm. She, child-like, was very curious about the shells, regarding them as the most precious possessions; and I told her a great deal about them, and about the coasts on which they were gathered, never suspecting until now that I had would pause sometimes, doubtful

But a child's heart is not hard to win.

> So the years went by, and I reached the age of forty. I had been on my longest voyage, and had gone through some dangers unnecessary to relate, and it was with more than ordinary satisfaction that I walked with a light step to the cottage of Beecroft, Mariner. My heart glowed as I drew near to the old familiar spot, noting little signs by the way which, insignificant though they might be, were to me endearing landmarks. Nothing was changed! not even my old mother, who pressed me once more to her faithful heart, with tears and words of Joy.

"And Mabel?" I asked. "My little maid!"

My mother looked with a smile across my shoulder, and I turned and saw her. But it seemed to me that I was gazing on a fairy vision in a cloud, and for a moment or two I was spell-bound. Was this fair and beautiful creature the Mabel I had left behind? Was this lovely vision my little maid? Yes, it was she, and no vision that would vanish at a good rub of the eyes. She came toward me with smiles walk gently to the house, and would and outstretched hands. I took them

A sweet and sudden joy stirred within me at these simple words. In the endeavor to set down my feelings here, I am not sure that I shall succeed in making myself understood, especially when I remember that Mabel was a girl of seventeen, and I a man of forty. I had never given much thought to women; I had been satisfied with my old mother's love, and for the last ten years with the love of-a child. They were enough for my thoughts to turn to during my voyages, and they formed, as it might be, a star which shone brightly for me during the darkest night and through the fiercest storm. But now that I came home, and, without forewarning or thought of it, found in the place of the child a woman, with all a woman's soul shining out of her eyes, and proclaiming itself-at least to my fancyin every graceful action of her beautiful form-now it was different, and it opened new channels for my thoughts to wander in. Why, when I caressed the child Mabel, and played with her fingers, I had no other idea but that we two were good friends, and would forever remain so, she always a child, and I always a rough man. Now the pressure of her soft fingers remained upon my hand for hours, the light of her beautiful eyes was ever before me, the sound of her sweet voice lingered in my ears like the faint music of a harp which needs but the whisper of a summer's breeze to awaken its sweetest melody. How often during my next two voyages these new impressioné came upon me I cannot say.

Out-door life and Scott's Emulsion of Cod-liver Oil with Hypophosphites have cured thousands of cases of consumption in the early stages. They cure old, advanced cases too; but not so many, nor so promptly. When a case is so far advanced that a cure cannot be made, even then SCOTT'S EMULSION thecks the rapid ity of the disease, relieves the pains in the chest, reduces the night sweats, and makes the
