ORDINATION SERVICES.

CABL S. JONES ORDAINED TUES-DAY, SEPT. 21, 1897, AND IS NOW A REVEREND,

The Service at the Congregational Church, Plackney, an Impressive one.

Ordination, in the life of a young pastor, is the milestone, so to speak, that he has been striving to reach. It is for this that he has burned the midnight oil; it is for it that he has and for it he has given all the energy that he possessed, that, after having passed successfully, he may write Rev. before his name and be known as one of "Christ's laborers."

The Council which assembled at the Pinckney Cong'l church, Tuesday afternoon and evening to ordain its popular and growing young pastor. had representatives from eight Congregational churches of the state. Rev. J. W. Bradshaw of Ann Arbor, was chosen moderator, and Rev. John W. Staley scribe. The following delegates answered to roll call: Rev. John W. Staley and Mrs. Staley, Dexter; Rev. J. S. Edmonds and Dr. Thos. Holmes, Chelsea; Rev. B. F. Aldrich and O. B. Bradley. Ypsilanti; Rev. J. W. Bradshaw and Rev. W. E. Colwell, Ann Arbor; Rev. W. C. Allen, Pontiac; Rev. N. W. Pierce and G. L. Hull, Hamburg; Rev. E. B. Allen, Mrs. N. B. Jones and Arthur D. Baker, Lansing; Rev. J. M. Barnes, Union City.

After prayer by the Moderator and the reading of the call by the scribe. Mr. Jones gave a clear statement of his religious experience, belief and call to the ministry. His paper was very interesting indeed, and the testimony in regard to the influence of praying parents and the memory of the learning "Now I lay me" were very touching and brought tears to many eyes. His experience was given from infancy to childhood, to school, to college and to the ministery and was very clear and definite.

So thoroughly had he covered the ground and so satisfactory were his statements that the council were not long in secret session before they declared themselves satisfied and unamiously in favor of proceeding with the ordination and the alternoon session took a recess until 7:30.

EVENING SESSION. A large audience was present at the evening service and the program was a very solemn and impressive onethe songs sung, the prayer, sermon and charges to the pastor and people were each calculated to make a lasting impression, not only upon the young pastor but upon the people. After a brief opening service, Rev. J. W. Bradshaw of Ann Arbor preached a very excellent sermon, full of thoughts and suggestions taking as his text:

"Let a man so account of us, as of the minis-ters of Christ, and stewards of the mysteries of and 1st Thess., 2, 4.

1st Cor., 4; 1.

"But as we were allowed of God to be put in trust with the gospel, even so we speak; not as pleasing men, but God, which trieth our hearss."

Paul was given as a model preacher but all could not be like Paul, though all preachers must have the same motive power, namely, God's power. Ministers must be experimentally qualified—they MUST KNOW whereof they speak-must know the power of the gospel in his own soul-must give up self to God, to be moulded as be would mould him-must neurish himself on the Word before be can feed

Perhaps the most impressive past of the evening's ceremony was the ordaining prayer by Rev. J. W. Bradshaw, as the officers of the council gathered about the bowed form of the candidate and each laid a hand upon not pay any debts contracted by her. Continueden page &.

Brutal Murder of an Ionia County Veteran for His Money-Newly Married Michigan Couple Attempts Sujcide at Milwaukee-The Husband Dead.

An Old Veteran Murdered for Meney. An old soldier, named Ludwig Herman, who lived alone 7 miles north of Ionia, in Orleans township, went to Ionia and drew his pension money, $24, or three months' pay. He spent it freely, and exhibited bills at several of the Ionia saloons. He was last seen at 11:30 p. m. in an intoxicated condition trying to get into the American hotel. He was not admitted, however, and it is supposed that he started down the D., G. R. & W. tracks for his home. At 7 e'clock the next morning Isasc Waite, a neighbor, ecalled at Herman's home and finding the back door open walked in, but was suddenly stopped by a horrible sight. Herman lay on the floor beside the bed cold in death, dressed only in his undershirt and drawers. He had hung up his clothes and was apparently about to get into bed. His skull was crushed the width of three fingers in the back of the head and just above the neck back of the right ear was a gunshot wound, the hole being the size of the muzzle of the gun. The weapon which inflicted the first wound was an iron bar 18 inches long which Herman used in his workshop in making cane chairs. Herman kept his gun standing at the head of his bed. This the murderer had evidently grabbed and fired one cartridge at so close range that the flesh was burned. The shot went clear through Herman's head and lodged under the skin over his eyes. Whether Herman had more than the pension money is not known. All his papers were searched and strewn about the house. His watch and 13 cents in money were found in his room. Herman was 69 years of age and had three daughters and one son, live at Zeeland.

Sad Attempt at Double Suicide.

George J. Bunday, aged 28, until recently of Albion, was secretly married at Chicago to Miss Blanche Warren, of Bay City, whom he had courted for several years, but to whom his parents were opposed, claiming that being a working girl she was not his equal in society. After their marriage the couple went to Milwaukee and took rooms at the fashionable Plankinton hotel, and Bunday telegraphed the news to his father in Chicago and asked his forgiveness. The latter replied that he would not receive them in his home or have anything to do with them. When Bunday told his bride this they had a sad time trying to mmfort each other and at last decided would be better for them to die. each then took a dose of morphine and went to bed, and when they were discovered the next morning Bunday was dying, but his wife was saved by prompt attendance.

AFFAIRS IN GENERAL

BRIEF MENTION OF EVENTS OF INTEREST.

Indiana Farmers Lynch Five Members of a Desperate Gang of Robbers-The Great Strike of Bitaminous Coal Minore Bettled.

Five Robbers Lynched in Indiana. Five men-Lyle Levi, Bert Andrews. Clifford Gordon, William Jenkins and Miner Shuler-who have long been a terror to the citizens of Ripley county, Ind., met their death at the hands of an enraged populace, and at an early morning hour the citizens of Versailles, discovered the bodies of the men dangling from the limbs of an elm tree in the center of the public square. Stout ropes, not over six feet in length, had served to send each to his eternity, and their feet were but a few inches from the ground, while their hands and feet had been securely pinioned with strong ropes.

These five men were captured by the sheriff and deputies while burglarizing the store of Woolley Bros., at Correct, Ind., and were lodged in jail. For four or five years, and even longer, the farmers of the county have been the victims of a lawless gang, who, apparently lacking in fear, have plied their vocation to the terror of the people. Men have been knocked senseless on the highway and robbed, aged couples have been horribly tortured in order to make them reveal the hiding place of their money and minor depredations have been of frequent occurrence, but the perpetrators were seldom captured. So when these men, who had no visible means of support, were caught red-handed the farmers of the country quietly organized and 400 strong marched upon the jail at Versailles and with little resistance meted out a punishment greater than the law provides. They say they want four or five more to take the same dose. None of the citizens of the town seem to deplore the action of the mob.

Gov. Mount has sent the following to the sheriff of Ripley county: "Wire me at once the particulars of lynching that has occurred in your county. I further direct that you proceed immediately with all the power you can command to bring to justice all parties guilty of participation in the murder of the five men lynched. Such lawlessness is intolerable and all the power of the state, if necessary, will be vigorously employed for the arrest and punishment of all parties impli-

MINERS' STRIKE SETTLED.

Interstate Convention Accepts 65-Cent

Rate. Proposed by Operators. A four days' session of the interstate convention of soft coal miners, held at Columbus, O., agreed to accept the proposition of the operators of the Pittsburg district. Thus the great miners' strike which was declared on July 4 was practically brought to an end, so far, at least, as western Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana and West Virginia are concerned. The delegates from Illinois, who had 250 votes, were unanimously against a settlement. Indiana and West Virginia voted solidly to accept the operators' proposition. The resolution adopted is as follows: Resolved, That we, the miners of Pennsylvania. West Virginia, Ohio. Indiana and Illinois in convention assembled, do hereby agree to accept the proposition recommended by our national executive committee, viz., 65 cents in Pittsburg district, all places in above named states where a relative price can be obtained to resume work and contribute liberally to the miners who do not receive the advance, where the fight must be continued to the bitter finish." The Illinois miners denounce the action of the convention, claiming that their interests were not given due consideration. They will, therefore, hold a state convention at Springfield, Sept. 19, to determine what shall be done in their state.

Yellow Fever Epidemic Grows.

The official dispatches to the U.S.

surgeon-general show the yellow fever situation in the south to be more serious. Dr. Guiteras, the government expert, reported a case of yellow fever at the city hospital at Mobile, Ala., also four other cases, and added that he apprehended a serious outbreak. Surgeon Carter telegraphed from Ocean Springs that four cases of yellow fever existed at Berkley, that there had been eight cases known to be yellow Lansing officers secured the arrest at fever at Ocean Springs and that two exposed physicians were at Vancleave and Scranton, practically under guard. The ninth case has been reported at New Orleans, but the prompt action of the authorities to prevent an epidemic by thorough sanitary measures taken without regard to expense relieves the public mind a great deal. But the principal cities of the south are not so essily satisfied and rigid quarantine is being maintained against New Orleans. Jackson, Miss. As all excitement over the presence of 30 cases of dengue fever at Edwards, 25 miles away, and people are fleeing from the district in all directions.

20 STRIKERS SHOT DEAD. Deputy sheets at Latiner, Par boot

Miners Down Like Dogo The strike situation reached a ferrible crisis on the outskirts of Latimer, Pa, whom a band of deputy shoriffs fired into an infuriated, mob of minera The men fell like so many sheep and the excitement since has been so intense that no accurate figures of the dead and wounded can be obtained. Reports run from 15 to 20 odd killed and 40 or more wounded.

The strikers left Hazelton at 3:30 p.

m. shnounding their intention to go to Latimer to call out the miners there. As soon as this became known, 70 deputies were loaded on a trolley car and went whirling across the mountain to the scene, where they formed into three companies across the read by which the miners were marching to Latimer. Sheriff Martin was in entire command and atood in the front of the line until the strikers approached. They were seen coming across the ridge and Martin west to meet them. The men drew up sullenly and listened in slience until he had read the riot act. This finished, a low muttering arose among the foreigners and there was a slight movement forward. Perceiving this, the sheriff stepped toward them, and in a determined tone forbade their advancing farther. Someone struck the sheriff and the next moment he gave a command to the deputies to fire. The guns of the deputies instantly belched forth a terrible volley. The report seemed to shake the very mountains. The strikers were taken entirely by surprise, and as the men toppled and fell over each other, those who remained unhurt stampeded. The men went down before the storm of bullets like tenpins and the groans of the dying and wounded filled the the air. The excitement that followed was simply indescribable. The deputies seemed to be terror-stricken at the deadly execution of their guns. The people of Latimer rushed pell-mell to the scene and as soon as possible cared for the wounded who had not been carried off by their friends.

Later. - A careful count shown that 11 strikers were instantly killed by the deputies, 10 died within a short time from their wounds and five more lingered at the point of death with no hope for recovery. There are nearly 50 others wounded who will recover, but some will be maimed for life. There were 150 strikers in the marching column, mot one of whom was armed with more than a penknife, and these peaceable, defenseless men 102 deputies, armed to the teeth, shot down like dogs at a very slight provocation. In fact examination of the dead and wounded strikers reveals the fact that many of them were were shot in the back, which shows that the deputies must have poured volley after voiley into the ranks of the men when they were fleeing down the road. Yet even in their death the poor fellows accomplished the purpose for which they marched from Hazleton to Latimer, for the 1,500 miners at Latimer have laid down their tools and sworn to do no more work until all the demands of the men at all the mines in the district have been conceded.

Martial Law at Hasieton. Immediately after the awful tragedy Sheriff Martin called upon Gov. Hastings for troops and before 24 hours had elapsed 2,500 soldiers of the Pennsylvania National Guard were at the scene under command of Gen. Gobin. The general at once issued orders prohibiting marching or assembling of large of bodies of men along the roads and practically placed Hazleton and vicinity under martial law, Sheriff Martin had, in the meantime, fled to Wilkesbarre for safety, but returned after the troops had taken charge of affairs and he and his deputies sought refuge within the military lines to avoid arrest upon charges of murder, assault and battery, and threatening to kill, which were preferred by friends of the dead strikers. The strikers decided to preserve absolute quiet until after the burish of their friends and they kept their word. A serious conflict is feared now, however. It is expected that 7,000 miners will now join the strikers and feeling against Sheriff Martin and his deputies grows every hour.

Ohio Gold Democrata.

About 60 delegates attended the state couvention of the National (gold) Democrats of Ohio at Columbus. Hon. Jos. H. Outhwaite was indorsed for U. S. senator and the following state ticket was nominated: For governor, Julius Dexter, of Cincinnati; lieutenant-governor, Judge A. E. Merrill, of Sandusky; judge of the supreme court, Indee John H. Clarke, of Youngstown: attorney-general, Daniel Wilson, of Cincinnati: state treasurer. Samuel Stevens, of Columbus; state commissioner of schools, Prof. W. H. Johnson, of Granville: member of state board of public works, Henry D. Coffinberry, of Cleveland.

A great crowd gathered to witness a blast at Panuelas quarry, on the Vera Cruz road, near City of Mexico. After the blast went off the people rushed forward to see the effects when the gases ignited, causing a terrible explosion, which killed 24 people and badly wounded many others.

The Blue and the Gray.

Both men and women are apt to feel a little blue, when the gray hairs begin to show. It's a very natural feeling. In the normal condition of things gray hairs belong to advanced age. They have no business whitening the head of man or woman, who has not begun to go down the slope of life. As a matter of fact. the hair turns gray regardless of age, or of life's seasons; sometimes it is whitened by sickness, but more often from lack of care. When the hair fades or turns gray there's no need to resort to hair dyes. The normal color of the hair is restored and retained by the use of

A Quescion Answered. The State Board of Nebraska recently sent out circulars to the farmers of the state, asking the question: "Does farming pay?" The following letter reproduced from the September number of "The Corn Belt" would seem to answer the question pretty effectively: Seward, Neb., Aug. 25, 1897. To the Editor of the Corn Belt:

I landed in Seward County Nov. 22, 1868, from Pennsylvania, overland with a team and wagon and about $800 in money. I now have 400 acres of well improved land within sight of the county seat, unencumbered, worth $20,-000. I also have 30 head of horses, 35 head of thoroughbred Hereford cattle and 100 head of thoroughbred Poland-China hogs, some 8 or 10 of them costing me $110 each. I also have city property to the amount of over $3,000, and some $3,000 or more of personal property, besides several thousand bushels of corn and grain. I have made it a point to feed all I raise. I do not believe I have sold over a thousand bushels of corn since I have lived in the state. While we have had a few short crops, we have never had a total failure. I am well pleased with farming in Nebraska and would advise all my friends to cast their lot with us.

Yours very truly, Levi Hofer.

FOR LOVE RACE

HAVE had some queer experiences in my day, but the queerest of the lot was connected with the maiden voyage of the Mount Vernon steamship from Liverpool to Melbourne, when she made a record on the care route which took a lot of beating. Of course, the Vernon was a fine ship, like all the rest of that line, but the was never meant to be a fiyer, so that the owners and the builders and some other folks were a good deal surprised at the run she made. As a matter of fact, the Vernon ran a race that time, any the prize was a woman. There is a song. or something of the sort, which says: "What fools these mortals be." That is a petrified fact.

Jim Fairbairn was the skipper of the Mount Vernon and I was chief englneer. We were chums — had been chums for years—but our chumminess wasn't a patch on the friendship between Jim and Tom Orchardson. I often wondered how two such opposite characters could get along together. Orchardson had immense confidence in himself, and was a bit of a bounder, in my opinion; he prided himself on being a practical man. Fairbairn was a good deal of a dreamer, and he wrote poetry sometimes. Somehow, they nearly always managed to sail in the same ship, but about two years before the race I am coming to Orchardson had got a chance of a skipper's berth in the Earl line, and he jumped at the chance. He got on well, and was appointed to the command of a brand new steamer, the Earl Lennox, just at the same time Fairbairn got the Mount Vernon. Both vessels were loaded at Liverpool for Melbourne, but the Earls all go by the mean—usually go by the cape. Jim Fairbairn worked off his grievance a half days. on me, and a powerful funk he was in. It seems that he and Orchardson had fallen head over ears in love with the same girl, a Miss Mary Henderson. who lived in Govan, a great place for ship-building, as most folks know. Now, our two jolly skippers had skipped off to Scotland and interviewed the girl, and she, being unable to make up her mind as to which she preferred, had thrown out the hint that they should settle the matter by a race to Melbourne. Just picture to yourself the audacity of the proposal! A chit of a girl calmly suggests that two big steamships, 4,000-tonners, should be driven like Old Harry to the Antipodes for her sweet sake! Shows you what women are, and it shows you what men in love are when I tell you that both skippers took up the challenge as readily as a healthy, boy takes to mischief. I smelled a rat when Fairbairn reeled off this yarn. I pointed out to him that on the outward run you might gain as many as four days by taking the canal route, so the result of the race was a however, that the girl had not thought of that, and in any case there would be no time allowance. If we were at Melbourne even two days after the "Earl Lennox" we should be held to have won, I argued with the man. I pointed out to him—what he knew already—that the Mount Vernon was never meant to be an ocean greyhound, and that it would just be courting a bad break down to rush her engines on the first trip. It was no good. He begged and prayed me to stand by him, and I was on the point of giving him a grudging half-promise to do o when Orchardson himself made me just wild to be at him. Orchardson came aboard to bid Fairbairn "au revoir," and he was so dead sure of his own victory that he invited me to the wedding. As I have said, I didn't like him much, and made up my mind to put a spoke in his wheel if at all possible. Next day both steamers started with the same tide.

Nothing particular happened for over three weeks. The Vernon had settled down into a beautiful swing, the weather was good, and I was confident we this time I saw comparatively little of family affairs."

taken up with my engines. I noticed however, that he was a deal moodier than usual. About the twenty-fifth day out the fine spell of weather anded, and, of course, the strain on the engines became something worth shivering at. I didn't like it, but it seemed to me that we would just have to be content with a draw-if even that could be got. My mates, I know. thought the skipper and I a pair of blessed madmen on account of the pace. I went and put the case to Fairbairn;

> By this time Fairbairn was quite off his chump with some sort of brain fever, and he had a three weeks' spell in hospital. He pulled around all right, however, and was aboard bossing things long before we were ready to start home. All this time he kept quiet about Miss Henderson, and I hated to mention the race at all; but the afternoon before we quitted Melbourne I got enlightened. I was dining along with the two captains and Orchardson had just drunk my health and said a great many nice things about how I had worked my engines up to the knocker, when Jim proposed another toast-to the "memory of Mary" it was;

"She is not dead," he said, winking to me quite cheerfully; "she is not dead, but she has gone before. As old Solomon has remarked, the battle is not to the strong, neither is the race always to the swift-at least, the prize is not. Three days after we left port our late beloved was quietly married to a little draper chap who could drink the lot of us blind. Here's to him!"

I said I was a tee-tee-totally somethinged. It was all I could say.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Cholera Infantum.

No one supposed that cholera infanfum is wilfully caused by mothers or persons who have infants in charge: yet in some places a large proportion of all children born die of that disease. That it results from causes which are preventable are shown by several facts:

(1) Among the higher classes of people the mortality is very much less than among the less intelligent and less provident.

(2) Infants who are nourished only by mother's milk are almost wholly exempt from cholera infantum.

(3) The disease is undoubtedly caused by changes in the infant's food or drink, due to bacteria, fungi, or some sort of micro-organisms.

Diarrhoea.—What is true of cholera infantum is, in great part, true of diarrhoea. The great cause of infant mortality is largely due to ignorance and carelessness on the part of those who have the care of children.

It ought to be known to every person who has the care of a child during the hottest day of July and August that a good light, clean, dry, warm fiannel over the entire abdomen is a very important article for every child who is in danger of any bowel trouble. The rapid evaporation of perspiration, and the consequent serious coldness of the abdomen, can be prevented by the

THROUGH CANADA AWHEEL

An Interesting Letter by One who has made the Trip Through The Dominion.

Good Boads, Good Crops, Good Prices, rock. and Good People.

From our own correspondent.

Winslow, P. O., Ontario, Sept. 16, '97. FRIEND ANDREWS:

In compliance with your request to write you in regard to what I might notice during my trip through Ontario, 1 have noted a little about the land and products that may be of use to you. The route we followed was southeast from Windsor, along the shore of Lake (and what was far harder to part Erie, then northeast, through Ridgetown, London and Brantford to Hamilton, on the shore of ing the people just leaving the Lake Ontario.

The crops along the road, according to the statements of the farmers, were better than usual. Commencing at Windsor and going southeast, the soil is rather heavy, and corn, judging from a Michigan standard, was poor, but there was not much of it to see, for the most common crops seemed to be cloverseed and beans. This may seem a strange combination, as many have claimed it impossible to raise clover on ground that has been used for beans.

Further to the northeast, the acreage of corn diminished still more and peas seemed to take its place, being used, I was told, for Grand Opening of the Grand Trunk hog feed instead of corn.

The ploughing is all done in narrow "lands" from 12 to 20 feet across, leaving the dead furrow The Grand Trunk Railway Arbor for Judge Newkirk's childopen to drain off surplus water. The petty frauds perpetrated upon the government by well-to-do persons bringing from Europe valuables upon which they paid no duty were classed as "genteel smuggling." The threshing that China received from Japan seems to have given the people some new ideas. They begin to see that civilization is power, and that China can not be strong unless developed on modern lines. The North China Herald prints a proclamation by the governor of Hunan, dwelling upon the advantages to be derived from the construction of telegraph lines in the province, and exhorting the people not to be wrongfully influenced and destroy the telegraph lines and poles now being erected connecting Changsha, the capital, with Wuchang, the capital of the sister province of Hupeh. According to a letter from Changsha, it is reported that, apparently acknowledging the value of the telegraphs and that they will not be allowed to interfere with the people's graves and the private property of the gentry and literati. the construction of the line has been going on rapidly, without the city blocks. You ought to see them alightest hindrance on the part of the inhabitants of the province. Whereas in 1891, when an attempt was made by the imperial Chinese telegraph commission, at the request of the governor. to erect telegraph poles within the borders of the frontier town of Lichou, the inhabitants of the place rose en masse and so hadly injured the working party and military escort that they had to fly for their lives, abandoning valuable material to the mob. Several lives were lost in the affair and a local literati in favor of the innovation was also killed by the mob.

TALMAGES SERMON

"A MOMENTOUS QUESTION," LAST SUNDAY'S SUBJECT.

From the Following Text, James IV.14: What Is Your Life?-Yes, Life Is Worth Living if People Will Only Live for Ged.

F we leave to the evolutionists guess where came from and to the theologians to prophesy where we are going to, we still have left for consideration the important fact that we are here. There may be some doubt about where the river rises, and some doubt about where the river empties, but there can be no doubt about the fact that we are sailing on it. So I am not surprised that everybedy asks the question, "Is life worth living?"

Solomon in his unhappy moments, says it is not. "Vanity," "vexation of spirit," "no good," are his estimate. The fact is that Solomon was at one time a polygamist, and that soured his disposition. One wife makes a man happy; more than one makes him wretched. But Solomen was converted from polygamy to monogamy, and the last words he ever wrote, as far as we can read them, were the words "mountains of spices." But Jeremiah says life is worth living. In a book supposed to be doleful, and lugubrious, and sepulchral, and entitled "Lamentations," he plainly intimates that the blessing of merely living is so great and grand a blessing that though a man have piled on him all misfortunes and disasters he has no right to complain. The ancient prophet cries out in startling intonation to all lands and to all centuries. "Wherefore doth a living man complain?"

A diversity of opinion in our time as well as in olden time. Here is a ary, and happily afflanced, and on the way to become a partner in a commercial firm of which he is an important clerk. Ask him whether life is worth living. He will laugh in your face and say, "Yes, yes, yes!" Here is a man who has come to the forties. He is at the tip-top of the hill of life. Every step has been a stumble and a bruise. The people he trusted have turned out deserters, and money he has honestly made he has been cheated out of. His nerves are out of tunes . He has poor appetite, and the food he does eat does not assimilate. Forty miles climbing up the hill of life have been to him like climbing the Matterhern, and there are forty miles yet to go down, and descent is always more dangerous than ascent. Ask him whether life is worth living, and he will drawl out in shivering and lugubrious and appalling negative, "No, no,

How are we to decide the matter righteously and intelligently? You will find the same man vacillating, oscillating in his opinion from dejection to exuberance, and if he be very mercurial in his temperament it will depend very much on which way the wind blows. (If the wind blows from the northwest and you ask him, he will say, "Yes," and if it blow from the northeast and you ask him he will say, "No." How are we then to get the question righteously answered? Suppose we call all nations together in a great convention on eastern or western hemisphere, and let all those who are in the affirmative say "Aye," and all those who are in the negative say "No." While there would be hundreds of thousands who would answer in the affirmative, there would be more millions who would answer in the negative, and because of the greater number who have sorrow, and misfortune, and trouble, the "Noes" would have it. The answer I shall give will be different from either, and yet it will commend itself to all who hear me this day as the right answer. If you ask me. "Is life worth living?" I answer. It all depends upon the kind of life you live. In the first place, I remark that a life of mere money getting is always a failure, because you will never get as much as you want. The poorest people in this country are the millionaires. There is not a scissors grinder on the streets of New York or Brooklyn who is so anxious to make money as these men who have piled up fortunes year after year in storehouses, in government securities, in tenement houses, in whole lump when they hear the fire bell ring. You ought to see them in their excitement when a bank explodes. You ought to see their agitation when there is proposed a reformation in the tariff. Their nerves tremble like harp strings. but no music in the vibration. They read the reports from Wall street in the morning with a concernment that threatens paralysis or apoplexy, or, more probably, they have a telegraph or a telephone in their own house, so they catch every breath of change in the money market. The disease of accumulation has eaten into them—eaten into their heart, into their lungs, into their aplean, into their liver, into their

Chemists have sometimes analyzed the human body, and they say it is so much magnesis, so much lime, so much chlorate of potassium. If some Chaistian chemist would analyze one of these financial behemoths he would find he was made up of copper, and gold, and silver, and sing, and lead, and coal, and iron. That is not a life worth living. There are too many earthquakes in it, too many agonies in it, too many perditions in it. They build their castles, and they open their picture galleries, and they summon prima donnas, and they offer every inducement for happiness to come and live there, but happiness will not come. They send footmanned and postillioned equipage to bring her; she will not ride to their door. They send princely escort; she will not take their arm. They make their gateways triumphal arches; she will not ride under them. They set a golden throne before a golden plate: she turns away from the banquet. They call to her from upholstered balcony; she will not listen. Mark you, this is the failure of those who have had large accumulation.

And then you must take into consideration that the vast majority of those who make the dominant idea of life money getting, fall far short of affiuence. It is estimated that only about two out of a hundred business men have anything worthy the name of success. A man who spends his life with the one dominant idea of financial accumulation spends a life not worth liv-

So the idea of wordly approval. If that be dominant in a man's life he is miserable. Every four years the two most unfortunate men in this country are the two men nominated for the presidency. The reservoirs of abuse, and distribe, and malediction gradually fill up, gallon above gallon, hogshead above hogshead, and about midsummer these two reservoirs will be brimming full, and a hose will be attached to each one, and it will play away on these nominees, and they will have to stand it, and take the abuse and the falsehood, and the caricature, and the anathema, and the caterwauling, and the filth, and they will be rolled in it and rolled over and over in it until they are choked and submerged. and strangulated, and at every sign of returning consciousness they will be barked at by the hounds of political parties from ocean to ocean. And yet there are a hundred men today struggling for that privilege, and there are thousands of men who are helping them in the struggle. Now, that is not a life worth living. You can get slandered and abused cheaper than that! Take it on a smaller scale. Do not be so ambitious to have a whole reservoir rolled over on you.

But what you see in the matter of high political preferment you see in every community in the struggle for what is called social position. Tens of thousands of people trying to get into that realm, and they are under terrific tension. What is social position? It is a difficult thing to define, but we all know what it is. Good morals and intelligence are not necessary, but wealth, or a show of wealth, is absolutely indispensable. There are men today as notorious for their libertinism as the night is famous for its darkness who move in what is called high social position. There are hundreds of outand-out rakes in American society, whose names are mentioned among the distinguished guests at the great levees. They have annexed all the known vices and are longing for other worlds of diabolism to conquer. Good morals are not necessary in many of the exalted circles of society.

Neither is intelligence necessary You find in that realm men who would not know an adverb from an adjective if they met it a hundred times in a day, and who could not write a letter of acceptance or regrets without the aid of a secretary. They buy their libraries by the square yard, only anxious to have the binding Russian. Their ignorance is positively sublime, making English grammar almost disreputable. And yet the finest parlors open before them. Good morals and intelligence are not necessary, but wealth or a show of wealth, is positively indispensable. It does not make any difference how you got your wealth, if you only got it. The best way for you to get into social position is for you to buy a large amount on credit, then but your property in your wife's name. have a few preferred creditors, and then make an assignment. Then disappear from the community until the breeze is over, and come back and start in the same business. Do you not see Nhow beautifully that will put out all the people who are in competition with you and trying to make an honest living? How quickly it will get you into high social position? What is the use of toiling with faty or fifty years of hard work when you can by two or three bright strokes make a great fortune? Ah! my friends, when you really lose your money how quickly they will the harder you will drop. * * Amid the hills of New Hampshire, in olden times, there sits a mother. There are six children in the household—four boys and two girls. Small farm Very rough, hard work to coax a living out of it. Mighty tug to make two ends of the year meet. The boys go ta school in winter and work the farm in summer. Mother is the chief presiding spirit. With her hands she knits, al the stockings for the little feet, and she is the mantuamaker for the boys and she is the milliner for the girls. There is only one enusical instrument in the house-the spinning-wheel. The food is very plain, but it is always well provided. The winters are very cold, but are kept out by the blankets she quilted. On Sunday, when she appears in the village church, her children around her, the minister looks down, and is reminded of the Bible description of a good housewife-"Her children arise up, and call her blessed; her husband also, and he praiseth her."

Some years go by, and the two oldest boys want a collegiate education, and the household economies are severer, and the calculations are closer, and until those two boys get their education there is a hard battle for bread. One of these boys enters the university, stands in a pulpit widely influential and preaches righteousness, judgment, and temperance, and thousands during his ministry are blessed. The other lad who got the collegiate education goes into the law, and thence into legislative halls, and after a while he commands listening Senates as he makes a plea for the downtrodden and the outcast. One of the younger boys becomes a merchant, starting at the foot of the ladder but climbing on up until his success and his philanthropies are recognized all over the land. The other son stays at home because he prefers farming life, and then he thinks he will be able to take care of father and mother when they get old.

Of the two daughters: when the war broke out one went through the hospitals of Pittsburg Landing and Fortress Monroe, cheering up the dying and the homesick, and taking the last message to kindred far away, so that every time Christ thought of her, he said, as of old, "The same is my sister and mother." The other daughter has a bright home of her own, and in the afternoon—the forenoon having been devoted to her household—she goes forth to hunt up the sick and to encourage the discouraged, leaving smiles and benediction all along the way.

But one day there start five telegrams from the village for these five absent ones, saying: "Come, mother is dangerously ill." But before they can be ready to start, they receive another telegram, saying: "Come, mother is dead." The old neighbors gather in the old farmhouse to do the last offices of respect. But as that farming son, and the clergyman, and the senator, and the merchant, and the two daughters stand by the casket of the dead mother taking the last look, or lifting their little children to see once more the face of dear old grandma, I want to ask that group around the casket one question: "Do you really think her life was worth living?" A life for God, a life for others, a life of unselfishness, a useful life, a Christian life is always worth living.

I would not find it hard to persuade you that the poor lad, Peter Cooper, making glue for a living, and then amassing a great fortune until he could build a philanthropy which has had its echo in ten thousand philanthropies all over the country-I would not find it hard to persuade you that his life was worth living. Neither would I find it hard to persuade you that the life of Susannah Wesley was worth living. She sent out one son to organize Methodism and the other son to ring his anthems all through the ages. I would not find it hard work to persuade you that the life of Frances Leere was worth living, as she established in England a school for the scientific nursing of the sick, and then when the war broke out between France and Germany went to the front, and with her own hands scraped the mud off the bodies of the soldiers dying in the trenches, and with her weak armstanding one night in the hospitalpushing back a German soldier to his couch, as, all frenzied with his wounds, he rushed to the door, and said: "Let me go, let me go to my libe mutter,"major-generals standing back to let pass this angel of mercy.

But I know the thought in the minds of hundreds of you today. You say, "While I know all these lived lives worth living, I don't think my life amounts to much." Ah! my friends, whether you live a life conspicuous or inconspicuous, it is worth living, if you live aright. And I want my next sentence to go down into the depths of all your souls. You are to be rewarded, not according to the greatness of your work, but according to the holy industries with which you employed the talents you really possessed. The majority of the crowns of heaven will not be given to people with ten talents, for most of them were tempted only to serve themselves. The vast majority of the crowns of heaven will be given to people who had one talent, but gave let you drop, and the higher you get it all to God. And remember that our life here is introductory to another. It is the vestibule to a palace; but who despises the door of a Madeleine because there are grander glories within?

REVIEW OF TRADE.

There is no halting in the advance. Business grows better in all ways, a steady increase in production, in working torce and in the power of people to purchase is the feature which overshadows all others. The farmers are helped by higher prices for wheat, and while western receipts do not show that they have marketed a tenth of their crops, assurance of a handsome profit to come prepares them to buy liberally hereafter. Because of this and the increase of hands at work, dealers throughout the country have started to replenish stocks, which is the great force at present operating in manufactures and trade, though distribution by retail trade has greatly increased. Wheat rose almost of the past week, not in a flurry, but in answer to the daily increasing foreign demand. Atlantic exports double those of the same weeking. CHAPTER XX.

.HROUGH the darkness of the might they flow onward to Dumfries. As they reached the suburbs of the little town. WAS sounded from ose of the church towers. The carriage left the highway, and rumbled on the causeway of the streets. About a quarter-of an hour later it drew up in front of the railway station:

All was very quiet and gloomy. The only human being visible was a solftary reliway porter.

Caussidiere leaped out,

"At what hour passes the express for the south?" he demanded.

"At half-past twelve, sir. You've ten or twelve minutes."

Marjorie drew the hood of her cloak closely round her face, and, taking her lover's hands, descended from the carriage and stood shivering and trembling on the pavement.

Caussidiere paid the fly-driver, and, ordering the porter to follow with the luggage, drew Marjorie's hand upon his arm and strolled into the station.

On reaching the platform, Marjorie cast a frightened look around, dreading to behold some familiar face; but, beyond a couple of half-tipsy commercial travelers and a cattle-driver on route for the south, no one was visible.

A little later the two were seated alone in a first-class carriage and rap-laiy whiring southward. The train ran right through to Carlisle, where they alighted. Hailing a fly, they were driven to an inn, already familiar to Caussidiere, in an obscure part of the town. They were evidently expected, and the hostess had prepared separate reoms.

After a light supper, of which Marjorie scarcely particle, but which the Frenchman made feetive with a bottle of very bad champagne, they parted for the night.

"Good-night, my darling," said Caussidiere, feadly. "To-morrow, early, I shall be the happiest man in all the world."

Mething could be kinder or more respectful then his manner; yet poor Marjerie retired with a heavy heart, and it was not for some hours afterward that she cried herself to sleep.

The day following Marjorie's departure there was commotion at the manse. At early morning her absence had been discovered, and to make assurance doubly sure, the following note and been tound lying open on her dressing-table: "Dear Mr. Menteith-When you receive this, I shall be far away. I have gone with one who loves me very much, and in a few hours we shall be married. Prey pray do not think me wiehed or ungrateful; but I was afraid to tell you how much I loved him, for fear you should be angry at my choice. He has promised to bring me back in a little time to ask forgiveness of all my friends. Tell Bolomon, with my fond leve, how weary I shall be till I see him again; he was always good to me, and I shall never forget him. Tell Miss Hetherington, too: I never had a kinder friend; but she must not blame me for following the wish of my heart. God bless you all! Your loving

That was the letter, and Mr. Menteith read it aloud in utter amazement. It would be false to say that he exhibited any more violent emotion, for he had merely a friendly interest in the kiri, and felt for her no overmastering affection. But Solomon Mucklebackit, after listening thunderstruck, uttered a wild cry, and struck his forehead with his clinched hand.

"MARJORIE ANNAN."

"I kenned it, I foresaw it! It's the Frenchman, dawm him!"

"Hush," said the minister. "No profanity, my man."

"Dewm him, dawm him!" repeated the sexton, trembling with passion. "He has stelen oor Marjorie away. I saw the dell's mark on his face when he first came creeping ben our house and fell sleeping in oor kirk. Down him. I say-noo and for evermair!"

Then Mr. Menteith, not without difficulty, elicited from Solomon, who was almost distraught, the whole story of Councidiere's acquaintance with Marjorie, and subsequent visits to the EDGE DOG.

"After all," said Mr. Menteith, re-Sectively. "he is a gentleman, and as they are going to be married---"

"Married!" eleculated Solomon "Many on awthelst—marry the dell! But he'll ne'er marry her. Me'll betray her and heart-break her, and cast her awa'."

In the limits of a small Scotch village news of any kind soon spreads, and before mid-day Marjorie's elopement was being discussed everywhere. Presently John Sutherland appeared at the manse, looking pale as death. On questioning Mr. Menteith, he soon learned the whole state of affairs.

Mr. Menteith handed him Marjorie's letter. He read it, and his eyes filled with tears.

"May God deal with him as he deals with her!" he grouned. "Does Miss Hetherington know what has happened?"

"Not yet," replied Mr. Menteith.

"I will go to her at once," cried Sutherland. "It is right that she should know. Perhaps she can advise us what 40."

Breathless and wild, he arrived at the Castle door. Directly he had summoned the serving-woman, he discovered that the news had arrived before

"She's like a wild creature," said the servant. "I'm in dread to face her, and she's ordered oot the carriage, and will drive awa' at once. If ye must see her, gang in yersel'; I daurna announce your coming!"

Sutherland stepped into the hall. "Wheesht!" whispered the woman. "I hear her coming doon the stair."

Scarcely had she spoken, when Miss Hetherington, cloaked and bonneted, appeared at the other end of the hall. She approached feebly leaning on her staff; and as Sutherland hastened to meet her he saw that her face was like that of a corpse, her hair disheveled and wild, her whole frame trembling with unusual excitement.

"Is it true?" she cried, gripping Sutherland's arm.

"Yes, Miss Hetherington." "Marjorie Annan has left the monse ?"

"Yes, last night."

"And in that scoundred's company?" "I believe so; but in her letter she mentions no name."

"Her letter? What letter?" furtherland thereupon told her of the lines Marjorie had left for Mr. Menteith. She listened trembling; then seising the young man's arm again, she drew him into the drawing-room and elesed the door. "Let me think, let me think!" she cried, sinking into a chair, and covering her face with her hand.

When she looked up, her eyes were full of tears.

"She's a lost lassie! And I might have saved her had I known! Oh, Marjorie, Marjorie! My brother's curse has come home to us both at last!"

Sutherland looked at her in utter astonishment. He had expected to find her angry and indignant, but her manner as well as her words were beyond messure extraordinary. Before he could speak again, she rose to her feet, and said, between her firmly set lips: "Johnnie Sutherland, listen to me! Mave you the heart of a man?"

"What do you mean?" "While you stand glowering there she's rushing awa' to her ruin! Will you gang after her, and in that villain's very teeth bring her back?"

"I don't even know where she has gene," replied Sutherland; "and, besides, she has fled of her own will, and I have no right---"

Miss Hetherington interrupted him impatiently, almost fiercely.

"You have the right, that you loved her yoursel'. Ay, I ken all that! Find her, save her from that man, and I swear before God you shall marry her. Johnnie Sutherland!"

But the young man shook his head, looking the picture of despair.

"It is too late," he said; "and, after all, he is her choice."

"What right has she to choose?" cried Miss Hetherington. "She cannot. she dare not, against my wish and will. I tell you he has beguiled her, and spirited her awa'. If you were half a man, you'd be after them ere this-you'd hunt them down."

"But what could I do?" exclaimed Sutherland, in utter consternation.

"Do!" cried the lady of the Castle. almost screaming. "Kill the secundrel -kill him! Oh, if I had my fingers at his throat, I'd strangle him old as I Overpowered with her emotion, she cenk into a chair. Full of amazement and sympathy, Sutherland bent over and endeavored to calm her. As he did so, she began mosning and sobbing as if heartbroken.

Then suddenly, with eyes streaming and has quivering, she looked pathetically up in his face.

"The blame is all mine!" she abbed.

"God has punished me, Johnnie Butherland. I should have defied the seemdal o' the world, and taken her to my heart lang syne. I'm a sinful woman, and-Marjorie Annan is my child?"

CHAPTER XXI.

HE next day Caussidiere and Marjorle walked together through the fields until they came to a quaint old church standing alone on a lonely suburban When they entered it was guite empty, and Caussidiere, grown very serious now, looked at his watch and walked restlessly about. Marjorie entered one of the pews, and, falling on her knees, prayed silently.

How long she remained there she did not know; a hand laid gently upon her shoulder recalled her to herself, and looking up she saw her lover.

"Come, Marjorie," he said; "come, my love."

She rose from her knees; he put his arms about her and led her away.

What followed seemed like a dream She was only dimly conscious of walking up the broad aisle and taking her place before the altar rails. She saw as in a mist the clergyman in his white robe, and a man and a woman who were complete strangers. She was conseious of the service being read, of giving her responses, of her hands being clasped, and of a ring being put upon her finger. Then she was led away again; she was in a strange, room, she signed her name, and as she laid down the pen. Caussidiere clasped her in his arms and kissed her.

"My wife!" he said.

Yes, it was all over; the past was done with, the future begun. Marjorie Annan had been by that simple ceremony transformed into "Marjorie Osussidiere."

The ceremony over, the wife and husband returned to the inn, where they had a private luncheon.

Then she entered the carriage which was awaiting her, and drove away by her husband's side to the railway sta-

Let all the world ken that the line of the Hetheringtons ends as it began, in a black bar sinister and a nameless shame."

"Do not say that!" eried Sutherland. 'What you have said is sacred between you and me, I assure you! But Marjorie-Did she know what you told

Miss Hetherington shook her head. "She had neither knowledge nor suspicion. Even Mr. Lorraine knew nothing, though whiles I fancied that he made a guess. Only one living man besides yoursel' ever found out the truth, and maybe ere this Marjorie has learned it fra him. God help me! she'll learn to hate and despise me when he tells her all."

"You mean the Frenchman?" said Sutherland. "How is it that he---"

"Curse him for a black-hearted devil!" said Miss Hetherington, with an access of her old fury. "He came here like a spy when I was awa', and he searched amang my papers, and he found in my deak a writing I should have burnt lang syne. Then he threatened, and fool-like I gave him money to quit the place. He has quitted it. but with her in his company, was's me!"

We're All Torn Up

on our front sidewalk and will be perhaps for another week, but we're all right and in good order on the inside and ready to show you about things going up in price; and so do we. It's not all wind, either, for every mail brings us notices from one and another manufacturer that the price on their products is advanced or will advance; but we can just laugh in our sleeves a little, for we had all our fall purchases made before the advances set in, and are now ready with about a hundred and fifty thousand dollars worth of goods bought at the old price, marked on the same basis and we shall not advance prices on our goods until the present supply is out of sight. So on Fall Dress Goods, Silks, Linens, Sheetings, Calicos, Cotton Flannels, Carpeting, Blankets, you will find us still selling at the low hard time prices although hard times have flown and wheat is a dollar a bushel.

Just as long as you have patience to look at it.

Yours Respectfully,

OKSON, MOIH
