THAT OPEN MEETING.

A Good Crowd. A Fine Time.

Although the weather was the worst we have seen this season on Thursday evening last, nearly 75 braved the storm and poor roads, to come to Pinckney and attend the open meeting of the Loyal Guards and partake of the banquet.

Edwin O. Wood, of Flint, Supreme Recorder General, was present and spoke for a short time on the benefits of the order and in explaining some of the whys and wherefores of the new laws. While Mr. Wood does not pretend to be a public speaker, he has a way with him that inspires confidence and he made many friends while here. He is well impressed with the workings of the order at this place and inspired the members with new zeal and they have gone out to gather in new recruits.

After his short talk the order voted to nominate and elect officers at the next regular meeting and the division were then invited to partake of the good things prepared by the members and it is useless to say that all did instice to the chicken pie. meats, biscuit, coffee, cake. ice-cream, etc.—they were there for a good time and had it with a venegeance.

The Emerson Quartette were present and have the thanks of everyone for the excellent music rendered by them. They responded again and again with songs both sentimental and comic. They are loaded to the brim with music and are not afraid to "sing it out."

It is desired to add to the membership during the next six weeks many new names and the members are all at work. If you are not carrying any insurance, see some member and make application right away. Any member on give you the rate.

When attending school at the Seminary at Bucksport, Maine, the author worked as a clerk in a country store, in a neighboring village, and thereby earned money to defray his expenses at school. The characters in "Around the Stove" are to a certain extent reproductions of the "loafers" who came into this store on winter evenings to talk and exchange "yarns" around the stove. Each person tells a story and line. the aim of the author is to portray the character of each man telling his story, make each "yarn" fit the capacity of the one who tells it.

It requires from an hour and a half to two hours to render the scene around the stove, and it is a time that will never be forgotten by those who attend and certainly should not be missed by anyone. At opera house, Pinckney, Nov. 29. Season tickets, $1.00; single admission 35c.

Father and Son Sentenced to Life Imprisonment and Another Man Gets Two Years for a Murder at Gladwin -Jonia Man Seat Up for Life.

Three to Expinte a Destardly Murder. The murderers of Curtis Wright, who was shot down at his own home near Gladwin, have finally been brought to justice. Roy Nunn, aged 17, and his father, Benjamin Nuun, were sentenced to life imprisonment at dackson. George Martell, accessory after the fact, received two years. When sontenced was pronounced, Benjamin Nunn broke down and wept, but Roy maintained his usual indifference.

The murder was committed on the night of July 10. But feeling had existed between the Nunn and Wright families for some time, and Roy, who made two different confessions, charged that his father concocted the crime but he fired the latal shot. Afterward he alleged that his father did the firing. The old man strenuously denied his guilt and there are many who think he has received a severe dose Martell confessed that he tried to shield the boy after the crime, but denied being directly concerned in it.

Did He Commit Suicide?

It is believed that John P. McKinnon, formerly a wealthy lumberman, for a number of years a resident of Detroit, committed saids by jumping from the steamer City of Alpena somewhere between Chaboygan and Detroit Mr. McKinnon boarded the steamer at Cheboygan and was given a boat check, to be taken up upon leaving the boat at Detroit as is customary, and was assigned to stateroom 40. When the boat arrived the check was not taken up and Mr. McKinnon's overcoat and grip were found in the stateroom, and in one pocket of the coat was found a note ascribing his family troubles to a certain person. His wife, who had separated from him, says his mind was weakened by an illness a few years | scarcity of cars. ago and since then he had been so insanely jealous that she had to leave him. McKinnon was about 50 years of age, his wife is under 30.

Murder in the First Degree.

The trial of Wesley Bennett for the murder of Moses Walker, near Ionia, resulted in a verdict of murder in the first degree. There was a murmur over the court room, but neither Bennett nor his two sisters flinched in the least. The convicted murderer was then ordered into the custody of the sheriff. He coolly kissed his sisters and was led to jail to await sentence,

The row which resulted in Walker's death was caused by Lydia Vivian, Walker's niece, who was engaged to marry Bennett. A sort of feud existed between Walker and Bennett and on the day of the tragedy Bennett drove up to Walker's to see the Lydiz Vivian, but the uncle came out and hurled a stone at Bennett, who pulled a revolver and fired two bullets into him. Bennett had boasted many times that he had just as soon "butcher Walker as a hog.

Later-Bennett has been sentenced to life imprisonment.

Deer Hunters in Pienty.

There are sewer deer hunters than usual in Marquette county. License fees have been increased, and it is said deputies away from the county seat have been charging exorbitant fees for making affidavit. In other northern counties there are more hunters than ever. Secretary of State Gardner has received orders from five northern counties asking for additional license blanks. The Dickinson county clerk has already sold 25 non-resident licenses at $25 each and wired for 25 more blanks. This year the state will receive a part of the license fees instead of it all being pocketed by the county clerks.

Kalamazoo County Negro iu Great Luck Abraham Johnson, a colored man of Charleston, Kalamazoo county, who coughed up a valuable pear-shaped pearl as large as a bean recently, has received word that he is heir to property on the east coast of Maryland, composed entirely of oyster beds worth $60,000. Before Johnson came to Michigan, 20 years ago, he was employed by a man named Harris, who owned these oyster beds. Johnson was a great favorite with Harris, who had no blood relatives living. At the lord mayor's annual banquet at London the marquis of Salisbury, the British premier, after referring to other matters, introduced the trouble between England and France in West Africa, and said: "It might not achieve the general conciliatory process desired if I entered frankly into all the negotiations between the powers respecting Africa. CHAPTER XXXII. - (CONTINUED.) They passed through London and at last reached Paris.

On arriving at the station, Sutherland called up a fly, and ordered it to drive with the greatest possible speed to the Hotel Suisse, a quiet establishment close to the boulevards. Once there, he ordered a private room, conducted Miss Hetherington to it, and proposed that she should wait there while he went in search of Marjorie.

At first she rebelled, but she yielded at last.

"Yes, I will wait," she said. "I am feeble, as you say, Johnnie Sutherland, and not fit to face the fog and snow; but you'll bring the bairn to me, for I cannot wait long!"

Eagerly giving his promise, Sutherland started off, and the old lady, unable to master her excitement, walked feebly about the room, preparing for the appearance of her child.

She had the fire piled up; she had the table ladened with food and wine; then she took her stand by the window, and eagerly scanned the face of every passer-by. At length, and after what seemed to her to be hours of agony, Sutherland returned.

He was alone. "The bairn; the bairn!" she cried, tottering toward him.

He made one quick step toward her, and caught her in his arms as he replied: "Dear Miss Hetherington, she has "Gone! where is she gone?"

"I do not know; several weeks ago she left this place with her child, and she has not been seen since."

The old woman's agony was pitiful to see; she moaned, and with her trembling fingers clutched her thin hair.

"Gone!" she moaned. "Ah, my God, she is in the streets, she is starving!" Suddenly a new resolution came to her-with an effort she pulled herself together. She wrapped her heavy fur cloak around her and moved toward the door.

"Where are you going?" demanded Sutherland.

She turned round upon him with livid and death-like face.

"Going!" she repeated, in a terrible voice. "I am going to him!—to the villain who first learned my secret and stole my bairn awa'!"

Miss Hetherington spoke firmly, showing as much by her manner as by her speech that her determination was fixed. Sutherland therefore made no attempt to oppose her; but he called up a fly, and the two drove to the lodgings which had been formerly occupied by Marjorie and Caussidiere. To Sutherland's dismay, the rooms were empty, Caussidiere having disappeared and left no trace behind him. For a moment he was at a loss what to

Suddenly he remembered Adele, and resolved to seek assistance from her. Yet here again he was at a loss. It would be all very well for him to seek out Adele at the cafe, but to take Miss Hetherington there was another matter. He therefore asked her to return to the hotel and wait quietly there while he continued the search. This she positively refused to do. "Come awa', Johnnie Sutherland,' she said, "and take me with you. If I'm a woman I'm an old one, and no matter where I gang I mean to find my child." At seven o'clock that night the cafe was brilliantly lit and crowded with a roisterous company. Adele, flushed and triumphant, having sang one of her most popular songs, was astonished to see a man beckoning to her from the audience. Looking again, she maw that the man was none other than the young artist-Sutherland. Descending from her rostrum, she cagerly went forward to join him, and the two passed out of the cafe and stood confronting each other in the street.

"Adele," said Sutherland, cagerly, seizing her hands, "where is that man erington stood grimly looking on. -Caussidiere?"

"Caussidiere?" she repeated, staring at him in seeming amazement. "Yes, Canasidiere! Tell me where he is, for God's sake!"

Again Adele hesitated—something had happened, of that she felt supe, for the man who now stood before her was. certainly not the Sutherland of other days; there was a look in his ayes which had never been there before.

She hesitated for a moment, then drew from her pocket a piece of paper, scribbled something on it in pencil, and pressed it into Sutherland's hand.

"God bless you, monsieur!"

abouts, tell me where he is."

She seized his hand and eagerly pressed it to her lips, then, hastily brushing away a tear, she re-entered the cafe, and was soon delighting her coarse admirers with another song.

Sutherland had been too much carried away by the work he had in hand to notice Adele's emotion. He opened the paper she had given him, and read the address by the aid of the street lamp; then he returned to the fly, which stood waiting for him at the urbstone. He gave his directions to the driver, then entered the vehicle; laking his seat beside Miss Hetheringion, who sat there like a statue.

The vehicle drove off through a series of well-populated streets, then it stopped. Sutherland leaped out, and to his confusion Miss Hetherington rose to follow him. He made no attempt to oppose her, knowing well that any such attempt would be useless.

So the two went together up a darkened court, and paused before a door. In answer to Sutherland's knock a little maid appeared, and he inquired in For a moment she did not seem able as firm a voice as he could command

> Yes, Monsieur Caussidiere was at home, she said, and if the gentleman would give his name she would take it; but this Sutherland could not do. He slipped a napoleon into the girl's hand, and after a momentary hesitation she showed the two into the very room where the Frenchman sat.

He was dressed not in his usual dandified fashion, but in a seedy morning coat; his face looked haggard. He was sected at a table with piles of paper before him. He looked up quietly when the door opened; then seeing Miss Hetherington, who had been the first to enter the room, he started to his

for my child!" "Your child?"

"Ay, my daughter, my Marjorie! Where is she, tell me?"

By this time Caussidiere had recovered from his surprise. He was still rather frightened, but he conquered himself sufficiently to shrug his shoulders, sneer and reply:

"Really, madame, or mademoiselle, your violence is unnecessary. I know nothing of your daughter; she left me of her own free will, and I request you to leave my house."

But the old lady stood firm.

"I will not stir," she exclaimed, "until I have my Marjorie. You took her from her home, and brought her here. What have you done with her? If harm has some to her through you, look to yourself."

The Frenchman's face grew livid; he made one step toward her, then he drew back.

"Leave my house," he said, pointing to the door; "the person of whom you speak is nothing to me."

"It is false; she is your wife." "She is not my wife! she was my mistress, nothing more!"

Scarcely had the words passed his lips when the Frenchman felt himself seized by the throat, and violently hurled upon the ground. He leaped to his feet again, and once more felt Sutherland's hard hands gripping his throat. "Coward as well as liar." cried the young Scotchman; "retract what you have said, or, by God! I'll strangle you!"

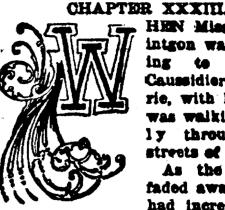

The Frenchman said nothing, but he struggled hard to free himself from the other's flerce clutch, while Miss Heth-

Presently Caussidiere shook himself free, and sank exhausted into a chair. "You villain!" he hissed: "you shallsuffer for this. I will seek police protection. I will have you cast into prison. Yes, you shall utterly rue the day when you dared to lay a finger unon me."

But Sutherland paid no heed. Finding that in reality Caussidiere knew as. little of Marjorie's whereabouts as he knew himself, he at last persuaded Miss Hetherington to leave the place. They drove to the prefect of police to set some inquiries on foot; then ther went back to the case to make further inquiries of Adele. On one thing they were determined, not to rest night or . sy u itil they had found Marjoriealive or dead.

HEN Miss Hetherintgon was hastening to confront Caussidiere, Marjorie, with her child, was walking wearily through the streets of Paris. As the daylight faded away the cold had increased; the snow was falling soaking her through and heavily, through.

Suddenly she remembered what the milk-woman had told her; she would go to the English ambassador—perhaps he would give her relief and enable her to get home,

She paused once or twice to ask her way, but she could get no answer. She was nothing more than a street waif. and was accordingly thrust aside as such. At last a little gamin gave her the information she asked. The place she sought was three miles off.

Three miles! She was feotsore and faint; she had not a sou in her pocket: and her child was fainting with cold and hunger. It seemed to her that her last hope had gone.

Then she suddenly remembered that a certain Miss Dove, a wealthy English woman, had founded a home in Paris for her destitute countrywomen. She knew the address, it was nearer than the British Embassy. She dragged herself and child to it. She had just sufficient strength left to ring the bell, when she sank fainting on the threshold of the door. When Marjorie again opened her eyes she was lying in a strange bed. and a lady with a pale, grave face was still bending above her.

"Where am I?" she cried, starting up; and then she looked around for her

A cold hand was laid upon her feverishly burning forehead, and she was gently laid back upon her pillow.

"The child is quite safe," said a low, sweet voice. "We have put him in a cot, and he is sleeping; try to sleep, too, and when you waken you will be stronger, and you shall have the little boy."

Marjorie closed her eyes and moaned, and soon fell into a heavy, feverish

Having seized her system, the fever kept its burning hold, and for many days the mistress of the house thought that Marjorie would die; but fortunately her constitution was strong; shepassed through the ordeal, and one day she opened her eyes on what seemed to her a new world. For a time she lay quietly looking about her, without a movement and without a word. The room in which she lay was small, but prettily fitted up. There were crucifixes on the wall, and dimity curtains to the bed and the windows; through the diamond panes the sun was faintly shining; a cozy firefilled the grate; on the hearth sat a woman, evidently a nurse; while on the hearth-rug was little Leon, quiet as a mouse, and with his lap full of

It was so dreamy and so peaceful that she could just hear the murmur of life outside, and the faint crackling of the fire on the hearth—that was all.

She lay for a time watching the two figures as in a vision; then the memory of all that had passed came back upon her, and she sobbed. In a moment the woman rose and came over to her, while little Leon ran to the bedside, and took her thin, white hand. 'Mamma,' he said, "don't cry!"

For in spite of herself Marjorie felt the tears coursing down her cheeks. The nurse said nothing. She smoothed back the hair from her forehead, and quietly waited until the invalid's grief had passed away. Then she said gently:

"Do not grieve, madam. The wonst of your illness is over. You will soon be

"Have I been very ill?" asked Meriorie, faintly.

"Yes, very ill. We thought that you would die."

"And you have nursed me-you have saved me? Oh! you are very good! Who—who are you—where am I?"

"You are amongst friends. This house is the home of every one who needs a home. It belongs to Miss Rsther Dove. It was she who found you fainting on our door-step, and took you in. When you fell into a fever she gave you into my charge. I am oneof the nurses." She added, quietly:

"There, do not ask me more questions, for you are weak, and must be very careful. Take this, and then, if you will promise to soothe yourself, the little boy shall stay beside you while you sleep."

For the benefit of our readers who may not find out the result of the milkmen at Howell last week any other way, we clip and re-write from the Democrat and Republican a portion of the report.

About fifty or sixty of the patrons of the milk factory met at the court house Tresday afternoon. Nov. 9, to listen to the report of the semmitte appointed at the last meeting to meet with the company and try and cetab- Fingree. lish prices for the year. 1898. Owing to the bad weather, the attendance was not at large as at the last meet-

H. E. Reed spoke first for the committee. He described the meetings and work of the committee in their attempts to learn something as to the conditions and profits of condensites milk. After a conference with Mr Gregory the committee decided to send two members. Norten and Reed to lay the matter before Mr. Smith, president of the company at Detroit.

Hi W. Norton reported the results of the conference in Detroit with Mesars Smith and Gregory. A stenographer took down the remarks of each one present, covering over twenty pages of type written copy. After a full and free conference. Mr. Smith said he would make the January milk $1.20 and if they could possibly do so con inue the price through February, Last January the price was $1.15. Mr. Smith and Mr. Gregory also promised to do all they could for the milk producers. Strong competition has cut down the price of condensed milk.

There are signs that the price may ad-

The question of sending back milk was discussed. Mr. Smith said if the producers would call Mr. Gregory's attention to the care of the cans, it would be looked after. The committee had prices of one factory in New York paying $1.20 and another about five cents less. The committee also showed that the factory when short of milt paid prices outside that brought the milk up to $1.27. Mr. Gilks read an extract from the Evening News which showed the product of the Howell factory was the second best on the market and was on sale in toreign countries as well as here.

F. W. Manson presented the foilowing resolution; which was passed Resolved that we, the Lavingston Dairy Association, accept in good faith the assurances of the Michigan Condensed Milk Company. to return to the original prices of milk and we ageos to sustain them while they deal fairly with us.

A committe to draft a constitution and by-laws was appointed: C. D Austin, T. W. Munson, Dr. Hunting ion. The society then adjourned to meet at the call of the president.

Annie Besant discovers that the women of this country are too restless, and that it is a natural result of their growing superiority to the American Apparently restlessness, in her view, in an uffliction; but the cure of it, through some process looking to inferiority, is not to be thought of for a moment. The man must do his share. He must make it the chief object of his life to grow up to her superiority, and it is melancholy to reflect that on the whole he can't do it.

Up to the time of this writing, the yellow fever outbreak in cities near the Gulf of Mexico has been less disastrous than on any other occasion of the coming of that plague. The deathrate has been low, and in the larger cities there has been no panic. It would be interesting to know how far this mitigation of horrors is the result of the sensible course pursued by the authorities and the newspapers. Apparently the precise facts have been given out each day, with such comments as the situation warranted, and the people have calmly and heroically faced the danger whereof they knew. Secrecy might have caused universal panic; and the panic is one of the most neurishing conditions of the plague.

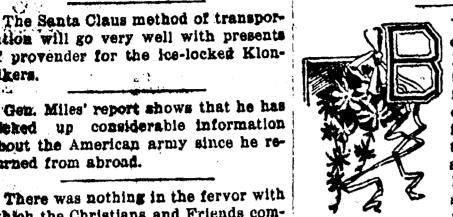

Since 1868, or during the last twenty. nine years. Cuba has been in open revolt nearly thirteen years. The ten years' war was very costly in blood and treasure, both to the mother coun. try and to the island, and there had not been great recovery from its ravages when the present insurrection broke out in February, 1895. Since the last uprising the Spanish government has sent to Havana more than 250,000 men, the flower of the youth and chivalry of the nation. Of these it is admitted more than 45,000 have been killed in battle or disease, and it is probable that the number is nearly double that. Nearly half as many more have been sent back to Spain crimpled by wounds or broken by dis. ease, to be burdens upon the communities in which they live.

The Chicago Record has prepared a postal savings bank bill, which will undoubtedly be introduced in congress next month. The idea is a good one, and in a general way will meet with the approval of adherents of every po-Mical party. The bill as drafted has some faults, however, which will undoubtedly be remedied in congress. As it now reads it fixes a limit on indilimit on withdrawals. These defects will undoubtedly be remedied by amendments allowing the depositor a Simities account, together with the privilege of checking out whenever he pleases. Asiether defective provision allows the postoline department to reloss to national hanks and on state and municipal improvement bonds. This section will probably be amended with the enswision that as money shall be loaned on bonds bearing date previous to passage of said bill, and that all honds shall he for improvements made after such bill becomes law. With these emeddings all all would tedir sine sympaci setimection.

TALMAGE'S SERMON.

DYNAMITE IS NOW UNDER OUR GREAT CITIES.

From the Text: "The Boar Out of the Wood Doth Waste It, and the Wild Beast of the Field Doth Devour It"-Pealms 80:18.

Y this homely but expressive figure, David sets forth the bad influences which in olden time broke in upon God's heritage, as with swine's foot trampling, and as with swine's snout uprooting the vine-of prosperity. What was then is true now. There true have been enough trees of righteousness planted to overshadow the whole earth, had it not been for the axe-men who hewed them down. The temple of truth would long ago have been completed, had it not been to be made Russell is not a stickler, for the iconoclasts who defaced the walls and battered down the pillars. The whole earth would have been all Even the snail will turn. We refer Eachol of ripened clusters, had it not especially to the Philadelphia Ledger, been that "the boar has wasted it and the wild beast of the field devoured it."

I propose to point out to you those hours in the Broadway cable cars, whom I consider to be the destructive waiting for the cable to start up classes of society. First, the public criminals. You ought not to be surprised that these people make up a large proportion of many communities. years ago to play in Berlin because In 1869, of the forty-nine thousand people who were incarcerated in the prisons of the country, thirty-two thousand were of foreign birth. Many of them were the very desperadoes of society, oozing into the slums of our cities, waiting for an opportunity to riot and steal and debauch, joining the large gang of American thugs and cuteach other over again, and keep at it | throats. There are in our cities, people whose entire business in life is to commit crime. That is as much their business as jurisprudence or medicine or merchandise is your business. To it they bring all their energies of body, mind and soul, and they look upon the interregnums which they spend in prison as so much unfortunate loss of time, just as you look upon an attack of influenza or rheumatism which fastens you in the house for a few days. It is their lifetime business to pick pockets, and blow up safes, and shoplift, and ply the panel game, and they have as much pride of skill in their business as you have in yours when you upset the argument of an opposing counsel, or cure a gun-shot fracture which other surgeons have given up, or foresee a turn in the market so you buy goods just before they go up twenty per cent. It is their business to commit crime, and I do not suppose that once in a year the thought of the improrality strikes them. Added to these professional oriminals, American and foreign, there is a large class of men who are more or less industrious In crime. Drunkenness is responsible for much of the theft, since it confuses a man's ideas of property, and he gets his hands on things that do not belong to him. Rum is responsible for much of the assault and battery, inspiring men to sudden bravery, which they must demonstrate, though it be on the face of the next gentle-

They are harder in heart and more infuriate when they come out of jail than when they went in. Many of the people who go to prison go again and again and again. Some years ago, of fifteen hundred prisoners who, during the year had been in Sing Sing, four hundred had been there before. In a house of correction in the country, where during a certain reach of time there had been five thousand people, more than three thousand had been there before. So, in one case the prison, and in the other case the house of correction, left them just as bad as they were before. The secretary of one of the benevolent societies of New York saw a lad fifteen years of age who had spent three years of his life in prison, and he said to the lad, What have they done for you to make you better?" "Well," replied the lad, the first time I was brought up before the judge he said, 'You ought to be ashamed of yourself.' And then I committed a crime again, and I was brought up before the same judge, and he said, 'You rascal!' And after a while I committed some other crime. and I was brought before the name judge, and he said, 'You ought to be vidual denosits, and also fixes a time hanged." That is all they had done for him in the way of reformation and salvation. "Oh," you may, "these people are incorrigible." I suppose there are hundreds of persons this day lying in the prison bunks who would leap up at the prospect of reformation, if society would only allow them's way into decency and respectability, "Oh," you say. "I have no patience with these rogues." I ask you in reply, how much better would you have been under the same circumstances? Suspens wur mother had been a blesshemer and your father a sot, and you had started life with a body staffed with evil and clivities, and you had spent stuck of your time in a cellar amid obscenities and cursing, and if at ten years of and you had been compelled to go out and steal, battered and banged at night if you came in without any spoils; and suppose your early manhood and womanhood had been covered with rage and fith, and decent society had turned its back upon you and left you to consort with varabonds and wharfrats-how much better would you have been? I have no sympathy with that executive clemency which would let crime run loose, or which would sit in the gallery of a court-room weeping because some hard-hearted wretch is brought to justice; but I do may that the safety and life of the community demand more potential influences in behalf of these offenders.

I stepped into one of the prisons of one of our great cities, and the air was like that of the Black Hole of Calcutta. As the air swept through the wicket it almost knocked me down. No sunlight. Young men who had committed their first crime crowded in among old offenders. I saw there one woman, with a child almost blind, who had been arrested for the crime of poverty, who was waiting until the slow law could take her to the aimshouse, where she rightfully belonged; but she was thrust in there with her child, amid the most abandoned wretches of the town. Many of the offenders in that prison sleeping on the floor, with nothing but a vermincovered blanket over them. Those people, crowded, and wan, and wasted, and half-suffocated, and infuriated. I said to the men, "How do you stand it here?" "God knows," said one man; "we have to stand it." Oh, they will pay you when they get out! Where they burned down one house, they will burn three. They will strike deeper the assassin's knife. They are this minute plotting worse burglaries. Many of the jails are the best places I know of to manufacture footpads, vagabonds and cut-throats. Yale College is not so well calculated to make scholars, nor Harvard so well calculated to make scientists, nor Princeton so well calculated to make theologians, as the American jail is calculated to make criminals. All that these men do not know of crime after they have been in that style of dungeon for some time, satanic machination cannot teach them. Every hour these jails stand, they challenge the Lord Almighty to smite the cities. I call upon the people to rise in their wrath and demand a reformation. I call upon the judges of our courts to expose the infamy. I demand, in behalf of those in carcerated prisoners, fresh air and clear sunlight, and, in the name of him who had not where to lay his head, a couch to rest on at night. In the insufferable stench and sickening surroundings of some of the prisons, there is nothing but disease for the body, idiocy for the mind, and death to the soul. Stiffed air and darkness and vermin never turned a thief into an honest man. We want men like John Howard and Sir William Blackstone, and women like Elizabeth Fry, to do for the prisons of the United States what those people did in other days for the prisons of England. I thank God for what Isaac T. Hopper and Doctor Wines and Mr. Harris and scores of others have done in the way of prison reform; but we want something more radical before upon our cities will come the blessing of him who said: "I was in prison and ye came unto me." In this class of uprooting and d vouring population and untrustworth officials, "Woe unto thee, O land, when thy king is a child, and thy princes drink in the morning!' It is a great calamity to a city when bad men get into public authority. Why was it that in New York there was such unparalleled crime between 1866 and 1871? It was because the judges of police in that city, for the most part were as corrupt as the vagabonds that came before them for trial. These were the days of high carnival for election frauds, assassination and forgery We had the "Whisky Ring," and the "Tammany Ring," and the "Erie Ring." There was one man during those years that got one hundred and twenty-eight thousand dollars in one year for serving the public. In a few years it was estimated that there were fifty millions of public treasure squandered. In those times the criminal had only to wink at the judge, or his lawyer would wink for him, and the question was decided for the defendant. Of the eight thousand people arrested in that city in one year, only three thousand were punished. These little matters were "fixed up," while the interests of society were "fixed down." You know as well as I that a criminal who scapes only opens the door of other criminalities. It is no compliment to public authority when we have in all the cities of the country, walking abroad, men and women notorious for eriminality, unwhipped of justice. They are pointed out to you in the street by day. There you find what are called the "fences," the men who stand between the thief and the honest man, sheltering the thief, and at great price handing over the goods to the owner to whom they belong. There you will find those wno are called the "akinners," the men who hover around Wall street and Bitte street and Third street with great "leight of hand in bands and stocks. There you find the neral thieves, the people who mo and sit down and mourn with families and pick their pockets. And there you find the "confidence men," who borrow money of you because they have a dead child in the house, and want to bury it, when they never had a house nor a family, or they want to go to England and get a large property there and they want you to pay their way, and they will send the money back by the very next mail. There are the "harbor thieves," the "shoplifters," the "pickpockets," famous all over the cities. Hundreds of them with their faces in the "Rogues gallery," yet doing nothing for the last five or ten years but defraud society and escape justice. When these people go unarrested and unpunished, it is putting a high premium upon vice, and saying to the young criminals of this country, "What a safe thing it is to be a great criminal." Let the law swoop upon them! Let it be known in this country that crime will have no quarter, that the detectives are after it, that the police club is being brandished, that the iron door of the prison is being opened, that the judge is ready to call the case! Too great leniency to criminals is too great severity to society. • • •

In these American cities, whose cry of want I interpret, there are hundreds and thousands of honest poor who are dependent upon individual, city and state charities. If all their voices could come up at once, it would be a groan that would shake the foundations of the city, and bring all earth and heaven to the rescue. But for the most part it suffers unexpressed. It sits in silence, gnashing its teeth and sucking the blood of its own arteries, waiting for the judgment day. Oh, I should not wonder if on that day it would be found out that some of us had some things that belonged to them; some extra garment which might have made them comfortable on cold days; some bread thrust into the ash barrel that might have appeased their hunger for a little while; some wasted candle or gas jet that might have kindled up their darkness; some fresco on the ceiling that would have given them a roof; some jewel which, brought to that orphan girl in time, might have kept her from being crowded off the precipices of an unclean life; some New Testament that would have told them of him who "came to seek and to save that which was lost!" Oh, this wave of vagrancy and hunger and nakedness that dashes against our front doorstep, I wonder if you hear it and see it as much as I hear and see it! I have been almost frenzied with the perpetual cry for help from all classes and from all nations, knocking, knocking, ringing, ringing. If the roofs of all the houses of destitution could be lifted so we could look down into them just as God looks, whose nerves would be strong enough to stand it? And yet there they are. The sewing women, some of them in hunger and cold, working night after night, until sometimes the blood spurts from nostril and lip. How well their grief was voiced by that despairing woman who stood by her invalid husband and invalid child, and said to the city missionary, "I am downhearted. Everything's against us; and then there are other things." "What other things?" said the city missionry. "Oh," she replied, "my sin." 'What do you mean by that?" "Well." she said. "I never hear or see anything good. It's work from Monday morning to Saturday night, and then when Sunday comes I can't go out, and I walk the floor, and it makes me tremble to think that I have got to meet God. Oh, sir, it's so hard for us. We have to work so, and then we have so

Line West Down in Luke Brie. The steamer Idaho of the Western Transit line, (New York Central) foundered in eight fathoms of water at 4:80 a, m, off Long Point in Lake Erie. This point jute out into the lake from the Canadian shore about 65 miles west of Buffalo and its vicinity has been the scene of many disasters. The Idaho, commanded by Capt. A. Gillies, of Buffalo, and having on board a crew of 21, all told, left Buffalo laden. with package freight for Milganket A strong southwest gale was blowing at the time and the weather office had storm signals up for the lake.

.. Capt. Gillies thought he could weather the gale and headed straight up the lake. Shortly after passing Long Point he discovered his mistake and tried to run for shelter. The sea was rupping very high at the time and in turning the Idaho shipped a big sea, which quickly quenched the fires, and the boat was helpless in the trough of the sea. The captain and crew were lowering the lifeboat when the seamer gave a lurch and went down on her side, stern first, taking the lifeboat with hor.

Two of the crew, Lewis La Force, second mate and Wm. Gill, of Rochester, a deckhand, managed to reach the top of a single spar that stood above the water. There the clung until eight hours later, when they were discovered by the outlook on the steamer Mariposa of the Minnesota line. The effort of those on board the Mariposa to rescue the two men involved the greatest possible danger. The sea was running very high and lifeboats could not be launched. Lines were thrown to the two men, but their arms and legs had stiffened around the spar and they could do nothing to help themselves. The Mariposa ran as close to the spar as possible and efforts were made to grasp the men while passing. This was repeated several times and with success at last.

The Idaho was an old boat, having been built in 1863. She went out of commission several years ago, but was overhauled this year and put to work again. She was 220 feet long and had a gross tonnage of 1,130. The captain of the ill-fated steamer, Alexander Gillies, was one of the most widely known of lake seamen. He was 41 years old and knew the lake waters like a book.

Three Men and Hornes Blown to Atoma. At Pine Fork, Wetzel county, W. Va., William Conn, of Cubs, N. Y., drove to the nitroglycerine magazine with a two-horse wagon to get 12 gallons of nitroglycerine to shoot some oil wells over which he had appervision. While he was inside another two-horse wagon with two men in it, who have not been identified, drove up. Before these strangers alighted, the magazine blew up with a report heard 10 miles away. The only thing found that ever was human was a piece of a man's foot. All else, three human beings, four horses and two wagons, were as if they had never existed. Where the magazine stood was a deep cavera. Windows were broken in every dwelling within a radius of half a mile.

Tribesmen Repulse British in India.

The British forces have again met with disaster at the hands of the insurgent tribes.nen in northern India. Three regiments and two batteries of artillery were sent out on a reconnoissance, found the enemy, but were forced to retire upon the main body. the movement being attended with serious losses. The tribesmen followed the column in strong force, swarming from behind rocks and keeping up a heavy fire at short range. The route of the retreating British was intersected with deep ravines and it was while the soldiers were passing through this ground that the tribesmen rushed upon the troops, fearlessly making their way to close quarters.

It is said the Big Four railway will survey an extension to Grand Rapids, by way of Three Rivers and Kalamazoo.

For a Healthy Existence.—That's Why the Kidneys so often Pail.

Nature has provided a certain amount of work for every organ of the human body; overtax them and disease eventually follows. There is not one portion of our organism that is so overworked as the kidneys; on them is placed the important function of filtering the blood of the impurities which naturally form in the regular action of life and digestion. The kidneys are consequently termed the sewerage of the system; clog up this sewer, and the blood becomes tainted with poisonous uric acid, which brings on disease in many forms. The back is the first to show this stoppage. From there comes the warning note; it should be heeded, and the kidneys receive prompt attention. Doan's Kidney Pills will right the action of the kidneys quickly, relieve the de pains and aches, and cure all troubles of kidneys and bladder. Read the following:

Mr. Wm. Nelson is a well-known business man of Kalamazoo, he resides at 822 Portage Street, and his business is that of a grain buyer. He says:

For five years I have suffered from an inability to urinate, which resulted from what was said to be a stoppage of the bladder. During these years I have taken mineral and electric boths and used other means. in expectancy of getting better, but, they all proved unavailing. Some months ago I began using Doan's Kidney Pills, which I had heard highly recommended, and I can now may that the flattering reports were not greater than they deserved. MINISTER AND WHEEL

(By Eben E. Rezford.)

E came to us about the middle of the week. On the following Sunday he was to preach in the forenoon and in the afternoon at a small place' about eight miles out in the country.

"It'll be a rather long walk for a hot day," he said to me after selling "the lay of the land." "I don't suppose I'd be very likely to catch a ride, would I? I don't feel able to hire a rig from the livery-I'm one of the poor ministers, you know," he added. He had but one eye, and when he wanted to make a remark impressive, or said something he had an idea was humorous, whose effect he wanted to observe, he had a trick of dropping his head in what might be called un insinuating fashion, and bring his one optic to bear on you from such an angle and in such a manner that it made you feel as if X-rays were concentrated on you, and that your inmost thoughts were being laid bare before the intensity of his gaze, which always suggested to me the application of an optical cork-

Just then he happened to catch sight of my wheel.

"Got a bicycle, eh? Now, what's to hinder my going over to the other charge on that? I don't suppose you'd object to lending it?" Thereupon he "drew bead" on me with that penetrating optic of his.

"You're welcome to the use of it," I said. I did not think of asking him if he was used to riding. I supposed he must be or he would not think of starting off on an eight-mile trip as a beginning. But on Saturday morning I saw him looking the wheel over in a manner that made me think he had never had much to do with one. Therefore, after dinner, as we sat on the veranda. I asked him if he had ridden much.

"Never was on one in my life," he answered.

"Then I'd suggest that you practice a little before attempting to make your trip," I said. "You've got to get somewhat used to a wheel before you can manage it."

"It looks easy enough," he said. "I've watched folks ride a good deal, and all they have to do is to keep from tipping over and keep their feet going, so far as I could see. I should think anybody could do that." "Better try it," I said.

"Well, I will if you think it is necessary," he said. He got up, took the wheel and started for the yard. He propelled it by the handle bars, and the first thing he knew the pedals came around and took him in the shins quite forcibly. He paused, brought his

A GLANCE OF AWFUL INTENSITY eye to bear on the wheel for a moment, and then held it off at arm's length until he was "in the arena."

Evidently the idea of failure had never once entered his mind. He seized the handle bars, got behind the wheel, put his left foot on the footrest, gave the thing a push and hopped after it a rod or two before he got into motion. Then he gave a leap, expecting to land in the saddle, but "o'ervaulting ambition had outleaped itself' again, and he went over the saddle and pitched earthward somewhere in the vicinity of the front wheel. He got up after extricating his legs from the machine, with which they seemed considerably mixed up, and leveled has optic at me to see what effect his first attempt had on me. But I was sober as a judge, and he at once set about a second attempt. This time he succeeded in getting into the saddle, but the wheel had no motion. He kicked wildly about for an instant, while that awful wobble which presages coming disaster was going on, in a vain endeavor to get his feet on the pedals, and then-over went wheel and man with a crash that sent his stiff hat flying scross the yard, and made things jingle generally. He got up slowly and rubbed one of his hips, and seemed lost in contemplation at he righted up his refractory steed of steel. Evidently he was pondering over the cause of his failure, for presently his face hrightened, and he went at # again, as if he saw his way clear now. He get in position, got his left foot in place, gave a start, and, after setting well under motion, essayed to mount To get into the saddle all right, and eas so closed him that he forset the potein, and the first thing he with his new stiff hat crushed into hopeless fiatness under him. He lay there so long without stirring that I began to think the breath had been jarred out of him by his fall, but I think now that he was getting "the old Adam" under control before he dared trust himself on his feet. Presently he picked himself up stiffly, and set the wheel on its feet again with a jerk that showed he owed it's grudge. Then he took off his cost with an expression of grim resolution on his face that meant "do or die," and business began again.

More attempts and more failures followed in quick succession. I have always felt that he must have been a strong believer in the theory of the "final perseverance of the saints," for he certainly persevered with a persistency that showed his "staying qualities" admirably. By and by he took off his vest. Presently cuffs and collar were discarded, and had any other portion of his raiment been removable without violating the rules of propriety I am confident that he would have divested himself of it. He had failed, so far, in the accomplishment of his undertaking, but he was determined not to be conquered by a thing without brains, and he was stripping himself for mortal combat.

He seemed to have forgotten my presence. And I-I lay back in the hammock and laughed so much that my sides were sorer than his body was next day, I verily believe.

I think he kept it up for at least three hours. Once in a while he had to pause and take breath. His clothes were wet with sweat. The perspiration ran down his face in little rills. But he was not yet ready to acknowledge defeat. He tried that wheel from all quarters. He straddled the seat and tried to get under headway by walking tiptoe and getting up motion in that way preparatory to getting control of the pedals. Then he got on the horse block, and tried to mount from that position. Just about half the time, as nearly as I could calculate, he was either on his face or his back in the dust, or getting on his feet. Once in a while I saw him rubbing what I presumed to be bruised places on his anatomy, and I noticed that he was evidently getting stiffer rapidly, as the encounter of mind and matter went on.

By and by he sat down on the horse block and seemed in deep thought. He looked that wheel over from all points. He pushed it back and forth far enough to make the pedals go around once and made calculations as to the position they ought to be in at the moment when the foot took them. Then he roused himself for the final encoun-

He decided to make this attack from the rear. He took hold of the handle bars, got the pedals in such a position that when the right one had made one revolution it would be about where his foot would strike it when on the down grade, provided all else went well, and then he was ready for the trial. He started; he made the leap; he came down squarely in the saddle, and, oh, victory! his right foot caught the pedal at the proper time and he went ahead without going over. He seemed to feel that he had conquered at last, for he gave a little whoop of exultation, but just at that instant the front wheel began to kink and wobble in that utterly depraved way peculiar to front wheels at times, and the more he tried to steady it the more uncontrollable it got. It seemed to have the St. Vitus dance. All this time his right foot was clinging to the pedal with deadly desperation, while his left one was flying wildly around in space to find the pedal on that side of the machine, while he was going ahead with sudden and unexpected shifts to all points of the compass. Then, all at once, the entire machine seemed to tie itself up in a knot for a moment, then it bucked like a mule for all the world, and the poor man was pitched head first into a great clump of built thistles. They scratched him terribly, but he ought to have been thankful that they were there, for they broke the free of his fall. He lay there so long that I began to be alarmed, and went to his assistance. But before I reached him he struggled to his feet, corkscrewed me with a glare of awful intensity, but said not a word. He seized the innocent-looking wheel and dragged it to the veranda in a series of vindictive jerks, and deposited it there in silence. Then he glanced at me again, but not a word escaped his lips. I have always thought he dared not trust himself to speak, for fear he would give utterance to some of the thoughts that 'arose in him."

The next day his nose had a great black and blue apot on it, and was swellen to twice its usual size. There was a bruise on one cheek, another on his face. He walked with great dignity or difficulty—and seemed subject to twinges of rheumatic pala whenever he sat down or got up. I took nity as him and hired a man to take him to his afternoon appointment. He never even looked at the poor wheel after that. He where ideared its existence.—How
