MICHIGAN NEWS SUMMARY

Doings of the Week Recorded in a Brief Style.

AND INTERESTING. CONCISE

Our Boys Who Were at Santiago Praised by Gon. Shafter - Bright Report of the State Labor Commissioner-Long Chapter of Crimes, Accidents, Etc.

Shafter Praises Duffield.

Brig.-Gen. Duffield, who commanded the 33d and 34th Michigan and Ninth Massachusetts regiments in the Santiago campaign, has the vindication of his course in the much-talked-of battle of Aguadores in a telegram sent by Gen. Shafter to the secretary of war, in which he speaks highly of Duffield, and practically apologizes for his scanty mention of the Michigan men in his official report. Gen. Shafter's dispatch says: "Gen. Duffield did all that he was expected to do and in a most satisfactory manner. His report received and forwarded today to Washington, with an indorsement that will show my appreciation of his services. In looking my report over, I see that the leferences to his action at Aguadores were not clearly expressed and it escaped my notice. There was no intention that he should do more than make such demonstration as would hold the enemy's troops at that place. To have attacked it with a view to its capture with the force under Gen. Duffield would have been the hight of folly."

A Terrible Crime.

Pretty little 9-year-old Edith Knight was criminally assaulted near Twining by Allen McDonald, of Omer. Mrs. Mosher was caring for the Knight children during the absence of the parents. McDonald broke in the door, blew out the light and then grabbed Mrs. Mosher. She managed to break away from him and with the children ran for a neighbor's house nearby. The 9-year-old girl could not keep up and was caught and carried back of the house, where she was terribly abused by the villain. McDonald's house was surrounded and he made an attempt to escape, but was shot in the leg. The child was roughly used, but

. Threats were made of lynching Mc-Donald at Twining, but the sheriff and his deputies were armed with Winchesters and landed him safely in jail.

Pingree Knocked Out.

The Michigan Central Railroad Co. is not compelled to sell 1,000-mile famtly tickets for $20 in accordance with the law of 1891. In a unanimous opinion of the supreme court, written by Justice Hooker. Gov. Pingree is defeated in his efforts to compel the Michigan Central by mandamus to issue such tickets. Briefly the court holds that to fix its own tolls under its special 1891 applicable to it would be to impair the obligation of the contract made by the state to reimburse the company for any damage which it might sustain. The court also holds that the Michigan Central Co. has not forfeited its charter by effecting consolidations with other systems.

Tried to Kill Her Bubes and Herself. Mrs. L. C. Williams, of Morrice, sent her oldest girl, aged 13, out to play and then gave poison to her two boys, tively. A neighbor coming in found | men. the babes very sick and when she began to question the mother Mrs. Williams went down cellar. The neighbor grew suspicious, and after calling for help, rushed down into the cellar and found Mrs. Williams in a sitting position in one corner with her throat cut. Men were called and she was carried up stairs to her bed. On examination they found that the jugular veins were not cut. Mrs. Williams and the oldest boy may recover.

Fatal Quarrel Over a Girl.

Wm. Roach, of Reading township, Hillsdale county, was shot near Litchfield, by Elmer Youngs, and died from wounds inflicted. Youngs and a friend named George Tuttle, who was his partner in the trouble, are under arrest. Both are young men, but Roach was about 50. The quarrel was over a young girl.

Big Crowds to See Shafter.

The managers of the Kalamazoo street fair had long heads when they secured the presence of Gen. W. H. Shafter. Although the crowds had been large at the opening days of the fair when the Santiago hero arrived fully 50,000 thronged the streets. Gen. Shafter's former home was near Kalamazoo.

A Peculiar Tragedy.

William Schaal of Imlay City says that while lying in bed his wife attempted to cut his throat and then clashed her own. She is dead. He was locked up, pending an investiga-

Beet Sugar Bounty a Big Tux. Land Commissioner French has selected E. L. Ferris, of Bay City, and W. E. Hall and Albert Pratt, of Essexville, for positions in connection with the execution of the beet sugar law at the Bay City factory, which is preparing to manufacture 7,000,000 pounds of sugar next year, which means that the state must pay the company $70,000. Other factories are under construction and this is sure to scare the taxpayers so that the law will probably be repealed at the next session of the legislature. The present law, however, provides that a 1-cent bounty shall be paid for seven years.

the Michigan Central Co. has the right | Shot a Young Girl Because of Jealousy. Miss Young, accompanied by two other waiter girls, had just left the hotel. Ninde followed and overtook them and at close range fired with a 38-caliber revolver. The bullet struck Miss Young just above the heart, and she will probably die. After the shooting Ninde ran straight for the city jail and surrendered himself. The act can be attributed to insane jealousy. Miss Young's home is in Carleton. More Railroads Must Pay Taxes.

In deciding the case of the Manistee & Northeastern Railway Co. vs. the railroad commissioner the supreme court holds that the Merriman law of 1897 repeals the law of 1891, exempting from taxation roads built north of parallel 44 of latitude since 1891. This case affects about a dozen northern Michigan roads built since 1891. Hereafter they will be required to pay taxes under the Merriman law.

Wife Murder at Lapeer.

Clarence Benjamin, of Lupeer, fired four shots at his wife, killing her instantly. One shot entered her mouth and another pierced her heart. He then tried to kill himself, but only succeeded in making a slight flesh wound. Benjamin and his wife had not lived together for over a month. His wife left him because of non-support. Jealousy caused the tragedy.

Beet Sugar Bounty Benefits Farmers.

The beet sugar situation is being ex tensively discussed. Attention is called to the fact that while the bounty will aggregate a large sum. the law is of great benefit to farmers as it makes the payment of the bounty dependent on the payment of a stipulated price for beets, thus insuring to growers handsome returns.

Blg Missionary Conference.

DOMESTIC AND FOREIGN NEWS

Portions of Wisconsin and Colorado are Devastated by Heavy Forest Fires-Another Statesman Passes Away-Filipluos Demand Independence.

Destructive Forest Fires.

forest fires are doing great damage about Rice Lake, Wis. Scores of farm houses have been destroyed and large lumbering interests ruined. There is certainly some loss of life, but as all communication is cut off details cannot be received. Over 100 persons are missing Several dead bodies have been found and they are burned beyond recognition. All the cattle, horses and other stock in a large district have been burned to death. Even the wild animals could not escape the flames.

A Chippewa Falls, Wis., special says: Forest fires are doing enormous damage along the Soo and Wisconsin Central railroads. Nearly every section of the pine woods in northern Wisconsin is ablaze. Barron, a small town on the Soo line, is entirely surrounded by fire. Glenwood, a town of 2,000, between Chippewa Falls and St. Paul, was saved after 12 hours heroic work by the citizens. Mrs. Jacob Correrson was burned to death. A large portion of Cedar Lake, a town of 600 people, is reported destroyed, and Alemena, 300, and Poskin, 200, are said to have been wiped out. Hundreds to homeless, many even losing all their household goods. The loss of farm property in Clark, Barron and Chippewa counties is estimated at $300,000, while the lumber interests will lose over $500,000.

Dreadful Forest Fires in Colorado. Forest fires started by malicious Ute Indians in northwestern Colorado, swept through the counties of Routt, Rio Blanco, Grand, Larimer, Garfield, Eagle, Pitkin and Summit. Vast areas of timber and grazing lands being devastated, the losses in the former case being all the more deplorable because of the fact that these forests retained the snows for months, thus furnishing the water for the streams which irrigate the lands west of the divide. The people fled from the mountain slopes in terror, saving only a few of their belongings. Hundreds of farm animals were burned. The loss cannot be estimated as vet, and only very heavy rains can prevent hundreds of thousands of dollars more damage. Want the Czar to Disarm First. The czar's proposal for a disarmament congress is making headway. All the powers, including France, have now accepted the invitation, but with limitations. Ulterior questions, especially all questions regarding territorial arrangements, will be strictly tabooed. German newspapers suggest that Russia should begin disarming by reducing her army on the western frontier by 50.000 men, adding that Germany and Austria would then make a similar reduction and that by exercising influence at Paris, the czar could obtain the reduction of another 25,000 men on each side of the Franco-German frontier.

Filipinos' Declaration of Independence. A declaration of independence was ratified at Matolos by the Philippine insurgents amid great festivities. In an address Aguinaldo said: "Our friends, the Americans, came for the purpose of demonstrating the grandeur. of their government and to assist in releasing the people from slavery without annexing the islands, thus setting a good example. We now appreciate the famous Monroe doctrine of 'America for Americans,' and justice demands that they add 'the Philippines for the Filipinos.'" The insurgent officials express disappointment at the non-attendance of Americans at the festival.

"Fighting Joe" Defends Shafter.

Gen. Joseph Wheeler appeared before the war investigating commission at Washington and in response to questions strongly backed up the administration's conduct of the war. He says that there was never devised a more effective campaign than that of Gen. Shafter before Santiago. He highly praised the conduct of the officers and men and expressed it as his belief that everything possible was done under the circumstances to furnish food, medicine and supplies for the troops.

BATTLE WITH INDIANS.

Pillager Indians Slaughter U. S. Troops-General Uprising Foured.

The attempt of the authorities to remove the Pillager Indians—a remnant of the old Chippewas—from their homes on the north side of Leech lake, Minnesota, to the White Earth reservation has resulted in serious bloodshed. These Indians have had many grievances against the government and finally refused obey the Indian agents and committed various offenses against the laws. The offenders were shielded when officers went to arrest them. They seized two U. S. officials and when a threat was made to send troops against them the Indians promptly donned war paint and feathers and went on the war path.

Gen. Bacon and 100 soldiers were sent on a special train from Brainerd to Walker and after a 30 mile trip on tugs across the lake in a gale a landing was effected with considerable difficulty, at Bog-Ah-Me-Ge-Shirk's Point, close to Bear island. Several hours beating the brush failed to uncover any Indians, and the soldiers assembled for dinner when a heavy volley poured in upon them from all sides. Three troopers dropped dead. The others sprang for cover to fight the savages in Indian style. A moment later there was another volley from the Indians and that was what the troops had been waiting for. The Krag-Jorgensens opened up with a frightful rattle, just as the Pillagers made a terrific rush. Half a dozen of them dropped and the rest fell back, yelling like flends incarnate. The fire from the Pillagers then became more scattering and the soldiers made a fine charge and drove them back, though the firing continued. The steamers on which the soldiers had come, as well as those used by the newspaper correspondents, were fired on by the Indians and several persons on board were wounded. Several correspondents were in the thick of the fight and it is reported that they were killed.

No report of the outcome of the fight has been received, but there is an unconfirmed report that Gen. Bacon and his entire force were massacred. A dispatch boat sent to the island cruised up and down near the scene of the battle for two hours, but they were unable to see a man and fear that all soldiers and officers have fallen. Reinforcements have been forwarded from St. Paul.

The outlook at this hour is that the agency Indians may go on the war path

Reports from the scene of the battle were meager, but gave the troops' loss in the first fight as follows: Maj. Wilkinson and five other soldiers and one Indian policeman killed, and eight privates and one Indian policeman wounded. The fighting was still going on, Gen. Bacon and his small band of 70 men standing their ground with great heroism.

All of the Leech Lake Indians have arisen in support of the Pillagers, and it is reported that the Mille Lacs, 300 strong, are joining the red warriors. A train with 215 of the Third infantry from Fort Snelling, under command of Lieut.-Col. Harbach, arrived in Walker and at once started for Bear island. Another special train left Brainerd with 200 soldiers. Inspector Tinker expresses the opinion that with 500 soldiers the Indians will be subdued, but thinks there will be bloodshed and may be lots of it.

The inhabitants of Walker, Lothrop, Cass Lake and Hackensack, Minn., are terrified beyond measure and are armed as far as arms and ammunition are procurable. Little sleep is taken by the majority of the citizens.

The Greatest Ship of Our Navy. The battleship Illinois was successfully launched amid the enthusiastic cheers of 30,000 people at Newport News, Va. She was christened by Miss Nannie Leiter of Chicago. The Illinois is regarded as the finest battleship of our navy.

Aguinaldo Declined the Money. The national assembly of the Filipinos at Malolos voted Aguinaldo a civil list of $75,000, but the insurgent leader declined to receive anything until the army should have been paid.

Gen. Merritt Reaches Paris. Maj.-Gen. Merritt, who commanded the American troops at Manila, has ar rived at Paris to advise the American peace commissioners as to the disposition of the Philippine islands.

Millions of Gold from Alaska. The steamer Fastnet has arrived at Vancouver from Skagnay with $500.000 in gold dust and with the news that $1,000,000 more was on the whar! when the Fastnet left.

Cubans Will Disband When Spanish Leave Gen. Maximo Gomez is quoted as saying the insurgent forces will disband and apply themselves to farm labor as soon as the Spanish troops evacuate the island.

The President has appointed David Jayne Hill, of Rochester, N. Y., first assistant secretary of state to succeed John Bassett Moore, resigned. Dr. Hill was president of the Rochester university.

ANN ARBOR SPEAKS.

Contractor Wooley, of Ann Arbor, Makes a Public Statement.

Mr. Edwin Wooley, contractor and carpenter of Ann Arbor, adds his voice to that of the army of Michigan people who endorse the little conqueror. Our representative found him at his place of residence, No. 618 Fountain St. Mr. Woolev appreciates "a good thing" as do most of our readers, and he does not hesitate to tell his experience for the benefit of others. Endorsement of this kind has made Doan's Kidney Pills a household word throughout the state. The good they have done has won them many a title and such worthy names among people as the "little conqueror of kidney ills," "little enemies to back-Bche," "modern wonder-workers," etc. Mr. Wooley says:

"I was subject for years to attacks of backache or pains through the loins and kidneys, generally of a dull, heavy, aching nature, but often when the weather changed or when I moved awkwardly they became sharp twinges of pain. As I was doing work which required stooping it was very painful, exceedingly so, if I caught cold, which as a rule, settled in my loins. I tried various remedies but was never successful in obtaining any permanent benefit until I used Doan's Kidney Pills. At the time my back was troubling me a great deal but shortly after I began the treatment the aching abated and when I had finished it I was cured. This is months ago and up to date there has been no recurrence of the trouble."

"A soldier!" cried Mary. "Oh, Richard, you must try if we can't do something for him. I never hear of an old soldier without thinking of my poor brother, Jack, who, you know, ran away and enlisted while I was quite a little girl, and how miserably he died in Africa. Oh, what a pet I used to be of poor Jack's! If we had heard of any one who had been good to him at last, how we should have blessed him! Do tell me all about this poor fellow, and It us see if we can devise any way of helping him."

"I am afraid he is pretty well past help," said Richard. "I left him unconscious, and I should not be in the least surprised if he should never come to himself again."

"But surely he can't be left to himself in an empty house, Richard! It would be a sin and a shame to leave anybody so. He must be got to the in-

"He won't go. I have tried my best 'o make him, but he is obstinate."

"Then we must bring him here. We have more than one empty room, for the house is far too big for us. Do let me get a bed put up in one of them."

"Why, Mary, you know well enough we can't even keep ourselves! How are we to keep and feed a stranger as well?"

"Oh, we must, Richard!" she cried impulsively, her tender eyes filling with tears. "Think how forsaken and brother—and he is your brother, even if he be what you call a stranger. We mustn't shut our door on him-'I was a stranger, and ye took me not in'how could you bear to hear that?"

She ran lightly out of the room to give her orders and see them carried out, leaving Richard sitting consciencestricken in his chair, all his subtle arguments scattered to the winds by a single word.

"Took him not in!" he echoed with a bitter laugh. "No, Lord, I didn't take him in! I knew a trick worth two of that; so I robbed and murdered him instead, and then swore lies about it at the inquest. And the best of it was that I did it all from the most exalted motives—to promote the greatest happiness of the greatest number, at no expense except of the life of a wretched miser of whom the world would be well rid, who was only a burden to himself and a nuisance to everybody elec! How clear it all was! but I dare not say it to Mary, and should hate her if she could listen to it for a second."

He lay back in his chair for a moment with closed eyes, a thousand oldworld dreams and half-forgotten ideal's and aspirations crowding back upon his memory and circling round the image of his wife as he had first seen and loved her. There were unaccustomed tears in his eyes as he opened them to see her standing before him in hat and cloak.

"Come, Richard," she cried, "you must take me to the place at once. There was some wine left, and I have it in this basket. I have told Alice to make up a bed in the back room and to have some hot soup ready in an hour. Now get your coat on and take me to the house. We shall need a fly to bring him here; but we can order that on the way."

Her bright, quick eagerness carried him along; in another minute they were passing through the streets and had halled a crawling cab. Richard regarded his wife with a kind of dazed surprise. All the wan depression of her face, which had weighed upon his spirits for weeks, was gone, and a bright and almost joyous energy seemed to possess her that reminded him of the Mary of brighter days. He seemed awakened from a nightmare as he looked after her, and sprang lightly down to help her as the fly drew up in the wretched street before the empty house. Already the early evening was closing in, and it looked doubly desolate and forbidding in the twilight. "Why, surely there is no one living here!" she exclaimed; "he must fellow!"

Richard tried the door, but found it locked. He had no recollection of his departure from the house in the morning, but on putting his hand in his pocket he found the key, which he must have slipped into it on leaving. They entered the bare outer room, and he could hardly hear his wife's exclamation of pity and dismay, his own heart was thumping so loudly with ter- off the covering, and was wildly gropror and suspense. recoiled as from a living thing. Nerving himself with an effort, he pushed open the door and went in. The room was precisely as he had left it in the morning; the patient lay in a profound sleep, breathing heavily, and bathed in a profuse perspiration. Richard bent over him and felt his pulse, then shook him sharply by the shoulder and called loudly on him to awake, but without rousing him in the least. Slapping his face with a wet handkerchief, raising him off the ground, produced no better effect. Taking the little bottle of wine from Mary's ready hand, Richard forced a few drops into his mouth. They were swallowed with a convulsive gulp, but made no change in the profound unconsciousness in which the patient lay.

"It's no use," he said at last. "He's too far gone to awake. And yet his pulse is very good, and if I had him at home there are one or two other things that I might try. So just tell the driver to come in and help me carry him to the fly."

He wrapped around him the rug he had sent the evening before, which was the only thing about him not in rags. and with the driver's assistance carried him out and propped him up in the fiy. Before quitting the place Richard turned the bed over with his foot to be sure nothing of value was left behind. A heavy revolver, which proved to be loaded, rattled upon the floor, and as he stooped to pick it up a yellow wretched he is! Suppose it were your | gleam caught his eye among the rags. What! more money!" he exclaimed, but on looking closer he found that it was only the gilt case of an old-fashioned, faded daguerreotype portrait. Nothing else was to be found, and slipping it into his pocket with the revolver, he returned to the cab, locking the door behind him as he left.

A few minutes' driving brought the party back to Richard's house, and with the assistance of the cabman, the still unconscious patient was carried up to one of the empty rooms, where a bed had been prepared to receive him. Mary was ready with hot soup and coffee, and felt a little disappointed when Richard turned her from the door. "No, no, Mary, it's no use trying to give it to him that way. Make a little very strong beef-tea; I will find a way to administer that. Send me up the bottle of Condy's Auid, and a glass and a jug of water,"

Left to himself, he proceeded with a flerce anxiety, very different from his usual professional coolness, to take such measures as his knowledge dictated to awaken his patient from his stupor, and these not proving immediately successful, to sustain life, if possible, until the effect of the drug should pass off. It was late when, after having exhausted nearly every means known to him, he left him still lying unconscious, and went down-stairs. Mary had prepared a little supper for him, and was anxiously awaiting his appearance.

"A good, strong cup of tea for me. Mary.''

"Why, Richard, you know tea at hight always keeps you awake. You would not sleep a wink after it."

"That's what I want. I am going to sit up with my patient tonight, and before Alice goes to bed you had better tell her to light a fire in his room."

"Oh, Richard, mayn't I sit up along with you? I am sure I shall not close my eyes the whole time for thinking of you. I never can sleep when you are away from me at nights."

"All the more reason for you to be resting quietly in bed, then," said Richard, who had his own reasons for wishing to be alone with his patient in the event of his recovering conscious-

When the household had retired. Richard sat down in an easy-chair beside the fire, having first made a care-'ul examination of his patient, who moaned and muttered in his sleep as he turned him over to sound his heart. Reassured of these signs of reviving consciousness, he opened the latest works on "Poisons," on which he had recently expended a guinea which he could very ill spare, turned to the section on "Morphia," and settled himself in his chair to study it attentively.

About four hours later he was awakened from a deep sleep by a loud cry uttered near him. The book had fallen to the floor beside the chair; the fire had gone out, but the lamp was burning brightly. The sick man was sitting up in bed, from which he had thrown

"Lost, lost!" he shricked. "Heln!

Richard was at his side in a roment and caught him by the shoulder.

"Thank God, you are better!" he exclaimed, "But what are you looking for?"

"What, doctor, is it you? Where am I? What has been the matter with me? I feel as if I had slept for a hundred years!"

"You are in my house," said Richard, "and everything you have is safe. Now pull yourself together and let me have a look at you. Pupils normal, heart all right. Why, you are a mira-Just swallow this cup of coffee; it's cold, but your throat must be like a chimney. Down with it!"

"More, more; I could drink up Esil!" he cried, holding out the empty cup to be refilled.

"You must be a magician, doctor, to have brought me round so quickly. I'm accustomed to these attacks, as I told you, and the worst is always over in three days. But there is always sickness and prostration afterwards, and this time I positively feel better than I have done for years. I have had such a sound sleep as I thought I should never enjoy again. How did you do it, doctor?"

"Morphia!" said Richard grimly. "A heroic dose; I saw you were pretty bad and it had to be either kill or cure. Till within five minutes ago I was greatly afraid it was going to be kill. You have slept about twenty hours." "I can never thank you enough for your courage, for it has put new life into me. I must have been as sound as a church if you have removed me without my knowing it. But are you quite sure you left nothing behind, for I missed something just now that must not be lost on any account?" "I know," said Richard quietly, but keenly watching the other's face as he spoke. "You had a belt around you with several thousand pounds' worth of money and jewels in it. You had also a loaded revolver, for the purpose, I presume, of defending your wealth. Don't be uneasy about them; I have them both safely under lock and key.' (To be Continued.)

POINTS ON FOOD

Coffee is to be cheaper. This is to be one of the results of the war. Nearly half of the world's coffee crop comes to the United States. We consume almost twelve pounds per annum for every one of our population, and spend on an average nearly $90,000,000 a year for coffee. Two-thirds of the world's supply of coffee comes from Brazil which places an export duty of 11 per cent upon the fragrant berry. The finest coffee in the world is grown in Porto Rico. Cuba and the Philippines, and under the stimulation of American enterprise these countries will, within a few years, be able to supply the world with coffee. What this means to the coffee consumer he can clearly understand.

After all that has been said about the large quantity of valuable food that is going to waste in the shape of edible mushrooms, recent investigations made by Prof. L. B. Mendel of Yale show that the nutritive value of the mushroom is not so very high after all. Science describes Prof. Mendel's experiment as follows: "Chemical analyses were combined with experiments in artificial digestion and special attention was given to the amount of available (digestible) proteid present. The latter was found to be not over 2 or 3 per cent in fresh mushrooms, which shows that the prevailing idea of the great nutritive value of mushrooms is not yet justified. They may be valuable as dietetic accessories, but they do not deserve the term 'vegetable beefsteak.' Their nitrogen is largely in the form of nonproteid bodies. The amount of fat, cholesterin soluble carbohydrates, crude fiber and inorganic substances contained in them corresponds in general with that found in other vegetable foods, such as peas, corns and potatoes."

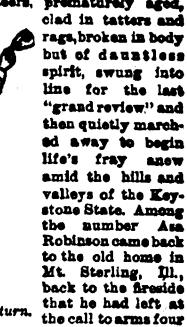

Rice bread is the staple food of the Chinese, Japanese and a large portion of the inhabitants of India. In Persia the bread is made from rice flour and milk; it is called "lawash." The Persian oven is built in the ground about the size of a barrel. The sides are smooth mason work. The fire is built at the bottom and kept burning until the wall or sides of the oven are thoroughly heated. Enough dough to form a sheet about one foot wide and about two feet long is thrown on the bench and rolled until about as thin as sole leather; then it is taken up and tossed and rolled from one arm to the other and flung on a board and slapped on the side of the oven. It takes only a few moments to bake, and when baked it is spread out to cool. This bread is cheap (1 cent a sheet); it is sweet and nourishing.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. TALMAGE'S SERMON

"THE HOUNDED REINDEER" SUNDAY'S SUBJECT

"As the Hart Panteth After the Water Brooks, So Panteth My Soul After Thee, O God!"-Psalms, Chap. XLII, Vorse L

Washington, D. C., Oct. 2.-Dr. Talmage, drawing his illustrations from a deer-hunt, in 'his discourse calls all the pursued and croubled of the earth to come and slake their thirst at the deep river of Divine comfort. Text: Psalms 42: 1: "As the hart panteth after the water brooks, so panteth my soul after thee. O God."

David, who must some time have seen a deer-hunt, points us here to a hunted stag making for the water. The fascinating animal called in my text the hart is the same animal that in sacred and profane literature is called the stag, the roebuck, the hind, the gazelle, the reindeer. In Central Syria, in Bible times, there were whole pasture-fields of them, as Solomon suggests when he says. "I charge you by the hinds of the field." Their antlers jutted from the long grass as they lay down. No hunter who has been long in "John Brown's tract" will wonder that in the Bible they were classed among clean animals, for the dews, the showers, the lakes washed them as clean as the sky. When Isaac, the patriarch, longed for venison, Esau shot and brought home a roebuck. Isaiah compares the sprightliness of the restored cripple of millennial times to the long and quick jump of the stag. saying, "The lame shall leap as the hart." Solomon expressed his disgust at a hunter who having shot a deer is too lazy to cook it, saying, "The slothful man, roasteth not that which he took in hunting."

But one day, David, while far from the home from which he had been driven, and sitting near the mouth of a lonely cave where he had lodged, and on the banks of a pond or river, hears a pack of hounds in swift pursuit. Because of the previous silence of the forest the clangor startles him, and he says to himself: "I wonder what those dogs are after?" Then there is a crackling in the brushwood, and the loud breathing of some rushing wonder of the woods, and the antlers of a deer rend the leaves of the thicket, and by an instinct which all hunters recognize the creature plunges into a pool or lake or river to cool its thirst, and at the same time by its capacity for swifter and longer swimming to get away from the foaming harriers. David says to himself: "Aha, that is myself! Saul after me, Absalom after me, enemies without number after me; I am chased; their bloody muzzles at my heels, barking at my good name, barking after my body, barking after my soul. Oh, the hounds, the hounds! But look there," says David to himself: "that reindeer has splashed into the water. It puts its hot lips and nostrils into the cool wave that washes its lathered flanks, and it swims away from the flery canines, and it is free at last. Oh, that I might find in the deep, wide lake of God's mercy and consolation escape from my pursuers! Oh, for the waters of life and rescue! 'As the hart panteth after the water brooks, so panteth my soul after thee,

O God.'" The Adirondacks are now populous with hunters, and the deer are being slain by the score. Taking one summer with a hunter, I thought I would like to see whether my text was accurate in its allusion, and as I heard the dogs baying a little way off and supposed they were on the track of a deer. I said to one of the hunters in rough corduroy: "Do the deer always make for water when they are pursued?" He said: "Oh, yes, Mister; you see they are a hot and thirsty animal, and they know where the water is, and when they hear danger in the distance they lift their antiers and sniff the breeze and start for the Racquet or Loon or Saranac: and we get into our cedar shell boat or stand by the 'runway' with rifle loaded and ready to blaze

My friends, that is one reason why I like the Bible so much—its allusions are so true to nature. Its partridges are real partridges, its ostriches real ostriches, and its reindeer real reindeer. I do not wonder that this antlered glory of the text makes the hunter's eye sparkle and his cheek glow and his respiration quicken. To say nothing of its usefulness, although it is the most useful of all game, its flesh delicious, its skin turned into human apparel, its sinews fashioned into how-strings, its antiers putting hardles on cutlery, and the shavings of its horn used as a pungent restorative, the name taken from the hart and called hartshorn. But putting aside its usefulness, this enchanting creature seems made out of gracefulness and elasticity. What an eye, with a liquid brightness as if gathered up from a hundred lakes at sunset! The horns. a coronal branching into every possible curve, and after it seems complete ascending into other projections of exquisiteness, a tree of polished bone, awful combat. The hart is velocity embodied. Timidity impersonated. The enchantment of the woods. Its eye lustrous in life and pathetic in death. The aplendid animal a complete rhythm of muscle, and bone, and color, and attitude, and locomotion, whether couched in the grass among the shadows or a living bolt shot through the forest, or turning at bay to attack the hounds, or rearing for its last fall under the buckshot of the trapper. It is a splendid appearance that the painter's pencil fails to sketch, and only a hunter's dream on a pillow of hemlock at the foot of St. Regis is able to picture. When twenty miles from any settlement, it comes down at eventide to the lake's edge to drink among the lily pods and, with its sharp-edged hoof, shatters the crystal of Long Lake, it is very picturesque. But only when, after miles of pursuit, with heaving sides and lolling tongue and eyes swimming in death the stag leaps from the cliff into Upper Saranac, can you realize how much David had suffered from his troubles, and how much he wanted God when he expressed himself in the words of the text: "As the hart panteth after the water brooks, so panteth my soul after thee, O God." Well, now, let all those who have coming after them the lean hounds of poverty, or the black hounds of persecution, or the spotted hounds of vicissitude, or the pale hounds of death, or who are in any wise pursued, run to the wide, deep, glorious lake of divine solace and rescue. The most of the men and women whom I happened to know at different times, if not now, have had trouble after them, sharpmuzzled troubles, swift troubles, alldevouring troubles. Many of you have made the mistake of trying to fight them. Somebody meanly attacked you and you attacked them; or they overreached you in a bargain, and you tried, in Wall street parlance, to get a corner on them, or you have had a bereavement, and, instead of being submissive you are fighting that becharge on the carelessness of the railroad company through which the accident occurred; or you are a chronic inscold, and wonder why you cannot be well like other people, and you angrily blame the neuralgia, or the laryngitis, or the ague, or the sick headache. The fact is, you are a deer at bay. Instead of running to the waters of divine consolation, and slaking your thirst and cooling your body and soul in the good cheer of the Gospel, and swimming away into the mighty deeps of God's love, you are fighting a whole kennel of harriers. I saw in the Adirondacks a dog lying across the road, and he seemed unable to get up, and I said to some hunters near by, "What is the matter with that dog?" They answered, "A deer hurt him." And I saw he had a great swollen paw and a battered head, showing where the antlers struck him. And the probability is that some of you might give a mighty clip to your pursuers, you might damage their business, you might worry them into illhealth, you might hurt them as much as they have hurt you, but, after all, it is not worth while. You only have hurt a hound. Better be off for the Upper Saranae, into which the mountains of God's eternal strength look down and moor their shadows. As for your physical disorders, the worst strychnine you can take is fretfulness, and the best medicine is religion. I know people who were only a little disordered, yet have fretted themselves into complete valetudinarianism, while others put their trust in God and come up from the very shadow of death, and have lived comfortably twenty-five years with only one lung. A man with one lung, but God with him, is better off than a godless man with two lungs.

I saw whole chains of lakes in the Adirondacks, and from one height you can see thirty, and there are said to be over eight hundred in the great wilderness of New York. So near are they to each other that your mountain guide picks up and carries the boat from lake to lake, the small distance between them for that reason called a "carry." And the realm of God's Word is one long chain of bright, refreshing lakes; each promise a lake, a very short carry between them, and though for ages the pursued have been drinking out of them, they are full up him; and, as had been agreed at his to the top of the green banks, and the same David describes them, and they seem so near together that in three different places he speaks of them as a continuous river, saying: "There is a river, the streams whereof shall make glad the city of God;" "Thou shalt make them drink of the rivers of thy pleasures:" "Thou greatly enrichest it with the river of God, which is full of water." But many of you have turned your back on that supply, and confront your trouble, and you are soured with your circumstances, and you are fighting society and you are fighting a pursuing world, and troubles, instead of driving you into the cool lake of heave aly comfort, have made you stop and turn around and lower your bead, and it is uplifted in pride, or swung down for simply antier against tooth. I do not tains of Bether."

blame you. Probably under the same circumstances I would have done worse. But you are all wrong. You need to do as the reindeer does in February and March-it sheds its horns. The Rabbinical writers alluces to this resignation of antiers by the stag when they say of a man who ventures his money in risky enterprises, he has hung it on the stag's horns; and a proverb in the far East tells a man who has foolishly lost his fortune to go and find where the deer sheds her horns. My brother, quit the antagonism of your circumstances, quit misanthrophy, quit complaint, quit pitching into your pursuers, be as wise as, next spring, will be all the deer of the Adirondacks. Shed your horns. Through Jesus Christ make this God your God and you can withstand an thing and everything, and that whi affrights others will inspire you. A.

in time of an earthquake when an old

Christian woman was asked whether she was scared, answered: "No, I am glad that I have a God who can shake the world;" or, as in a financial panic, when a Christian merchant was asked if he did not fear he would break, answered: "Yes, I shall break when the fiftieth Psalm breaks in the day of trouble; I will deliver thee and thou shalt glorify me." Oh, Christian men and women pursued of annoyances and exasperations, remember that this hunt whether a still hunt or a hunt in full cry, will soon be over! If ever a whelp looks ashamed and ready to sink out of sight it is when in the Adirondacks a deer by one tremendous plunge into Big Tupper Lake gets away from him. The disappointed canine swims in a little way, but, defeated, swims out again and cringes with humiliated yawn at the feet of his master. And how abashed and ashamed will all your earthly troubles be when you have dashed into the river from under the throne of God, and the heights and depths of heaven are between you and your pursuers! We are told in Revelation 22:15: "Without are dogs," by which reavement; you charge on the doctors I conclude there is a whole kennel of who failed to effect a cure; or you hounds outside the gate of heaven, or, as when a master goes in through a door, his dog lies on the steps waiting for him to come out, so the troubles valid, and you fret, and worry, and of this life may follow us to the shining door, but they cannot get in. "Without are dogs!" I have seen dogs and owned dogs that I would not be chagrined to see in the heavenly city. Some of the grand old watchdogs who are the constabulary of the homes in solitary places, and for years have been the only protection for wife and child; some of the shepherd dogs that drive back the wolves and bark away the flocks from going too near the precipice; and some of the dogs whose neck and paw Landseer, the painter, has made immortal, would not find me shutting them out from the gate of shining pearl. Some of those old St. Bernard dogs that have lifted perishing travelers out of the Alpine snow; the dog that John Brown, the Scotch essayist, saw ready to spring at the surgeon lest in removing the cancer he too much hurt the poor woman whom the dog felt bound to protect, and dogs that we caressed in our childhood days, or that in later time lay down on the rug in seeming sympathy when our homes were desolated. I say, if some > will be like what a hunter tells of when pushing his canoe far up north in the winter and amid the ice-floes, and a hundred miles, as he thought, from any other human beings! He was startled one day as he heard a stepping on the ice, and he cocked the rifle ready to meet anything that came near. He found a man, barefooted and insane from long exposure, approaching him. Taking him into his canoe and kindling fires to warm him, he restored him and found out where he had lived, and took him to his home, and found all the village in great excitement. A hundred men were searching for this lost man, and his family and friends rushed out to meet first appearance, belis were rung and guns were fired, and banquets spread. Well, when some of you step out of this wilderness, where you have been chilled and torn and sometimes los amid the icebergs, into the warm greetings of all the villages of the glorified, and your friends rush out to give you welcoming kiss, the news that there is another soul forever saved will call the caterers of heaven to spread the banquet, and the belimen to lay hold of the rope in the tower, and while the chalices click at the feast, and the bells clang from the turrets, it will be a scene so uplifting I pray God I may be there to take part in the celestial merriment. Bloody Riots in Paris.

The many predictions that the Dreyfus case agitation would chuse a revoludion in France seem about to come true. Paris was in a turmoil all Sunday. Crowds, scuffles, uproar, and arrests filled the day. About a score of persons are said to have been seriously wounded. In one quarter alone more than 40 arrests were made, many of them being prominent men. The riots have created intense alarm among the foreigners at the hotels, and it is probable that an exodus will occur, the guests fearing grave developments.

Low Price for Cotton.

The phenomentally low price of cot ton, said to be the lowest in many years, lends special interest to a series of tables complied by the treasury bureau of statistics, showing that the United States, the chief cotton producer of the world, has quadrupled her cotton production since 1872.

The Automobile Woman-Magic Vegetable Patch-Lettuce Comes Up Two Days After Planting-Belle of Napoicon-Belonged to a Bourgogne Victim.

The Eagle of the Fails. Empress of the broad Missouri! Towering in thy storm-rocked nest, Gazing on the wild waves' fury-Wondrous is thy place of rest.

Lofty trees thy throne embowering, Gloomy gulf around thine isle, Mists and spray above thee showering, Guard thee from the hunter's wile.

Walls of snow-white foam surround it, Crowned with rainbows pure and bright. While the flinty rocks that bound it Guard thy mansion day and night.

No Alhambra's royal splendor, Palaces of Greece or Rome. E'er could boast of hues so tender Or of walls of snow-white foam.

Ne'er disturbs thine eagle gaze. Nor its mighty voice of thunder-'Tis the music of thy days. Of its voice thou art not weary,

Yet this lofty scene of wonder

Of its waters dost not tire; Ancient as thine own loved eyry, 'Twas the chorus of thy sire. Songs of rapture loudly swelling

Laud the monarch on his throne,

But the music of thy dwelling Chants the praise of God alone. Let sultanas boast their fountains, Gardens decked with costly flowers,

Twas the Hand that built the mountains

Formed for thee thy forest bowers.

Queens may boast their halls of lightness Blazing with the taper's rays-Crystal lamps of colored brightness, Dazzling to their feeble gaze:

He who made the moon so lovely, Called the stars forth every one. Spread thine azure dome above thee, Radiant with its peerless sun!

The Automobile Woman.

The smart and sporty Parisian has now not only to think of her golfing gown, her tailor-made walking gown, her bicycle costume, but she has her astomobile gown—perhaps the most important of all, for a promenade en automobile without being properly iressed for it is a chic sort of misery writes Katharine De Forrest in Harper's Bazar. Privately I am not at all sure that automobiles in any costume are an unmixed joy. We none of us envied Baroness von Zuylen, the only woman in a party of thirty starting out yesterday morning on the race to Amsterdam and back. She wore a very good-looking gown of gray mixed goods, with a dark blue jacket. Like all the other engineers-or chauffeurs, as they are called here; a word that is fast becoming immortalized as slangher eyes were protected by enormous blue-glass goggles. The dust in a race is something frightful I am told.

French tailors are beginning now to make a specialty of gowns for the automobile. They are generally in gray, dark blue or green, and covert-coating seems to be the favorite material. The coats are smart, with many pockets and large and beautiful buttons. Nearly every chauffense is provided with a long supple redinggote, trimmed with a volant en forme. The hat, it goes without saying, is as simple as possible, is generally felt, and is worn with a thick veil.

The cost of an automobile car remains somewhat prohibitive except to the well-to-do, but amongst the moneyed and leisured class its growing popularity is without question. Although not yet quite a "common object" either of the countryside or of the city streets, the motor-car is gradually but steadily emerging from the phenomenal to the familiar stage. Members of a London, England, club devoted to its cult frequently organize excursions, somewhat upon picnic lines, and of the pleasantest description. Mr. Frank Butler, honorary treasurer of the Automobile club of Great Britain, recently entertained the members owning motor-cars, and friends riding with them, on his houseboat, the Dolce Far Niente, stationed at Shiplake. About three hundred invited guests had lunch in the marquee. Several of the members drove in their cars to Oxford next day, returning to Henley in the evening, and arrived in London on Monday.

Relie of Napoleon. From the Boston Transcript: Mile.

Marie Poncy, who lost her life by the sinking of the French steamer La Bourgogne, was a governess in the family of a wealthy dry goods dealer of Manhattan and she was a young woman of exemplary life. While she lived in Brooklyn she attended the little French church at Woodhaven under the ministrations of Pastor Lador. She intended to spend the summer with iriends in Paris and Geneva, and when she sailed on the vessel she was overjoyed at the chance of seeing relatives whom she had not visited since her arrival in this country. Miss Poncy left in the residence of her friend. Mrs. Jacquard, a number of books, sheets of music and ether possessions, which she intended to use on her return to this country. The fact that she expected to come home soon was evidenced last night, when Mr. Jacquard found among her effects one of the most prized treasures, namely, a portion of the cockade worn by Napoleon at the battle of Rivoli on Jan. 14, 1797. Napoleon had been only married to Josephine about a year then and he gave her his plumes worn at the battle as a keepsake. When he went to Egypt the duchess of Saxe-Gotha sent Mr. De la Lande to Josephine for some souvenir of the great general, and Josephine gave the messenger the plume and told its story. A portion of it was given to Miss Poncy's father and he had it framed in a gold medallion. This was the treasure of the poor young woman who sailed on the Bourgogne, and, fearing that it might go astray, she had left it, with her other effects, with her friends, the Jacquards. The memento, which is labelled "Fragment du panache de Bonaparte a la Bataille de Rivoli, le 14 Janvier, 1797," will be expressed with the other effects to Miss Poncy's sister in Geneva. The family regards the keepsake as priceless.

Magic Vegetable Patch.

A hot water geyser in the upper geyser basin of Yellowstone park, has been turned to practical use by building a hothouse over it and thereby enabling several crops to be raised yearly, where otherwise such a thing would be impossible, because of the almost daily frosts in this region. The structure was built by W. P. Howe. It is roughly made, and is 25x50 feet. stream of hot water flows from a fiveinch hole in the southern end of the building, passing out the other end. The temperature of the water lacks only eight degrees of the boiling point, and the house is kept at a tropical heat constantly. The rich soil, the sun's light and the condensation of steam from the hot water make an ideal combination for the growth of vegetation. Lettuce, it is said, comes up from the dry seed in two days, and good-sized heads of lettuce were gathered in from fifteen to eighteen days after planting. In twenty-eight days a head of lettuce measured twenty-two inches across, and the condensation of the steam would even break down the larger leaves with the weight of water upon them. Cucumber vines grow from twentyfive to thirty-five feet in length in less than sixty days, without being watered, except for the moisture in the air. On some of the cucumber vines five full-sized cucumbers were gathered from a single joint. Three pails of water have been sufficient for watering the plants in the greenhouse on even the hottast

Hunting Spanish Gold.

As a matter of fact, Spanish gold, strewn on the floor of the sea, has done much to improve the art of the diver. Before the armada year was out we began to search for the treasure the wrecked ships were supposed to contain, and these efforts were renewed from time to time down to the present century. One of the first to try his luck was the marquis of Argyle. He sent to Glasgow for a diver, and several descents were made to the ships sunk off the island of Mull. The diver's want of success was no doubt due to the rudeness of his apparatus. It is said that air was supplied to him by means of a leather pipe, but it is not likely that he was able to remain under water more than two or three minutes at a time. Some eighty years later another attempt was made at the same ships, this time with a rough kind of diving bell. After a great deal of trouble three guns were brought up, and then the operations were finally abandoned. It may help to thrill some of the tourists who visit these northern seas to know that under their sliding keels lie Spanish ships and unknown quantities of Spanish gold.

A Whitstable driver named Gann is said to have had a pretty piece of luck, late in the present century, with one of the ships of the armada. Business took him to Galway, and one night, over a pipe with the fishermen, he heard the local tradition that a Spanish ship lay off the coast, Gann made terms with a man who said he knew the whereabouts of the wreck, and after several weeks of patient searching with grapnels they came upon traces of a ship. Gann went down in his diving dress and found a large quantity of Spanish dollars. They had been packed originally in barrels, but the wood had rotted away, leaving the gold stacked in the shape of barrels. The diver, with his share of the money, built a row of houses in his native place, and if anybody doubts the truth of the story let him go to Whitstable and ask for Dollar row.

Center of American Population

In 1790 the center of population of the United States was a point twentythree miles east of Baltimore. In 1820 it was about sixteen miles north of Woodstock, Va. In 1840 it had reached a point sixteen miles south of Clarksburg, W. Va. In 1860 it was twenty miles south of Chilicothe. O. In 1870 it had reached the neighborhood of Cincinnati, and today it is not far from Westport, Ind. The center of area of the United States is in northern Kansas. Accordingly the center of population is three-fourths of a degree south and more than seventeen degrees east of the center of area.

ing your private ills to a woman-a woman whose experience in treating woman's diseases is greater than that of any living physician—male or female. You can talk freely to a woman when it is revolting to relate your private troubles to a man-besides, a man does not understand-simply because he is a man. Many women suffer in silence and drift along from bad to worse, know-> immediate assistance, but a natural modesty impels them to shrink from exposing themselves to the questions and probably examinations of even their family physician. It is unnecessary. Without money or price you can consult a woman, whose knowledge from actual experience is greater than any local

MRS. PINKHAM'S STANDING INVITATION.

Women suffering from any form of female weakness are invited to promptly communicate with Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. All letters are received, opened, read and answered by women only. A woman can freely talk of her private illness to a woman; thus has been established the eternal confidence between Mrs. Pinkham and the women of America which has never been broken.

Out of the vast volume of experience which she has to draw from, it is more than possible that she has gained the very knowledge that will help your case. She asks nothing in return except your good-will, and her advice has relieved thousands. Surely any woman, rich or poor, is very foolish if she does not take advantage of this generous offer of assistance. - Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass.

"The present Mrs. Pinkham's experience in treating female ills is unparalleled. for years she worked side by side with Mrs. Lydia E. Pinkham, and for sometime past has had sole charge of the correspondence department of her great business, treating by letter as many as a hundred thousand ailing women a year."

NEW POWER OF FIRST RANK. British Opinion of What Might Happen

in a Bigger Fight. Now, how will the advent of this new power (the United States) affect the Buropean equilibrium? Even it we do not "take at the foot of the letter" that new-born affection which the Americans now profess for us, it seems to be plain enough that the circumstances which have brought about the reconciliation between the two kindred peoles will go on making for a closer and ever closer union between Great Britain and the United States. After all, we have the same blood, the same same democratic government, the same ianguage and the same tastes. We both love trade and commerce, and a working mixture of freedom and equality before the law to which no other people has attained. From the selfish British point of view, then, we hope that the Americans will take both the Canaries and the Philippines, and a port on the coast of China besides, they should have our help in getting

The "weary Titan" that Matthew Arstrained by the weight of empire, challenged on this side and on that by new competitors, menaced now and then by a combination of envious enemies, suddenly finds standing by his side a stalwart son, who, though he has his own place in the world and his own ambitions, yet seems inclined to say that the old Titan shall always have at least a fair field, and, perhaps, if the worst comes to the worst, some little favor. And that is the way we Britons feel about America. This fact that the two nations which stood against each other at the beginning of the nineteenth century now stand as friends, if not as allies, will probably turn out to be the most important fact in the history of the twentieth century.-Saturday Review.

THE DIVER'S WORK.

Is Full of Difficulties and Requires Alertness.

Moving about on a wreck, says a writer in Good Words, the diver has to exercise great care to keep his airtube and signal rope free. If he goes round a mast or under a companion ladder or through a door he must return exactly the same way, or his lines will foul. Sometimes he gets into a tangle which he finds impossible to uncoil. Nothing worse could happen to him. The supply of air continues to come, for the airtube is so made that it never "kinks;" but he is a prisoner, and no amount of pulling will bring him to the surface. His one chance in such a case is to cut the airtube. If he has "a clear road" he will, having thrown off his weights, shoot up at once, and his fate then depends upon the time it takes the attendants to get to him. There is a case on record of a diver coming up in this way and striking against the bottom of the boat; his helmet was not damaged, but the force of the blow drove the edges down into the man's shoulders and killed him. Some years ago an English diver who was at work on a sunken wreck off the Island of Diego Garcia had a visit from the same shark every day for a week. At first for this season, he had no trouble in scaring it away; it was enough if he gave a turn to the escape valve in his helmet and let out a little air. But at the end of the week it had become very troublesome. The diver signaled for a knife and a looped rope, and then boldly held out his bare hand as a bait to the shark. The monster came on with a rush, and was turning on its back when it was stabbed by the diver, who then passed the loop around its body and sent it up to the surface.

The Pay Car Again. The pay cars which have not been seen on many railroads for the past two years will probably again become a familiar sight. The railroads, instead of continuing their present system of paying by check, are to return to the pay car system, and thus avoid paying into the national war fund the two-cent tax on checks.
