Obituary.

JOHN W. HARRIS.

'It is with deep and genuine sorrow that we announce in this issue of the DISPATCH the death of one of the most energetic and estimable citizens of the Village of Pinckney, in the person of John W. Harris, who died at his home at 10 o'clock Saturday evening after a lingering illness of nearly eight months.

family, who watched his peaceful transititon to the life beyond, fortified by the last holy rites with which the Catholic church prepares the departing soul for its journey, a faithful and steadfast adherent of that faith, a truly virtuous type of his sex and of fatherhood closed an example of Godly life and passed quietly, painlessly

The parents of the deceased was natives of Ireland. In 1835 they left their old home in Erin's Isle and crossed the Atlantic to seek their for-Fred Milne, our veterinary surgeon | tune in the new world. Here like other pioneers, they cut down the forests and built for themselves a beautiful home.

The deceased after his tathers death got control of the old homestead by purchasing the claims of the other heirs, which consisted of four girls, and four boys, two of which are living viz; Mrs. James Morgan of Ypsilanti ranging from 25c to $1.50 per yd and Mrs. M. O'Connol of Jackson.

Mr. Harris was born on the old homestead July 25 1839. In 1867 was united in marriage to Agnes Morgan of Unadilla. Mr. and Mrs. Harris began keeping house immediately on the old homestead which consists of as good a 200 acres of land as there is in

One year ago he quit farming and moved his family to the village. Besides the widow the following child ren are left to mourn and pray for the happy repose of the soul of their beloved father: H.C. of Cripple Creek, Colorado and James M. who occupys the old homestead.

The funeral was held from St. Mary's church at 10:30 Wednesday morning.

TO MY HUSBAND.

'I miss thee, my husband, thine image is

The deepest impressed on my heart, And the tableau so faithful in death must

Ere one line of that image depart. Thou wert torn from my side when I treasured thee most,

When my reason could measure thy worth;

When I knew but too well that the idol I

Could be never replaced upon earth." 'I miss thee, my husband, in circles of joy, When I mingle as gay as the rest; Oh, fain would the wine-cup of pleasure

The picture enshrined in my breast! Other words may caress, gentle footsteps

For the kind and the true are still mine; eve a blessing for each, I am greatful to

But, my husband, no love is like thine."

Another One for the Men.

Rev. H. W. Hicks will continue his sermons on "Why men do not attend church" at the M. E. church next Sunday evening services to commence at 7:30.

TALMAGE'S SERMON

CHRISTIAN DEATH AS THE EN-TRANCE TO FULLER LIFE.

Slequent Easter Discourse Presched from Corinthians, "Death Is Swallowed Up in Victory"-Why Should We Doubt That God Can Raise Us from Death?

(Copyright, 1902, Louis Klopsch, N. Y.) Washington, March 30.—The Christian view of death as the entrance to a fuller life is presented in this Easter discourse by Dr. Talmage from the text I Cor. xv, 54, "Death is swallowed up in victory."

About 1.870 Easter mornings have wakened the earth. The royal court of the Sabbaths is made up of fiftytwo. Fifty-one are princes in the royal household, but Easter is queen. She wears richer diadem, she sways a more jeweled scepter, and in her smile nations are irradiated. How welcome she is when, after a harsh winter and late spring, she seems to step out of the snow bank rather than the conservatory, to come out of the north instead of the south, out of the arctic rather than the tropics, dismounting from the icy equinox, but wetcome this queenly day, holding high in her right hand the wrenched off bolt of Christ's sepulcher and holding high in her left hand the key to all the cemeteries in Christendom. My text is an ejaculation. It is spun out of halleluiahs. Paul wrote on in his argument about the resurrection and observed all the laws of logic, but when he came to write the words of the text his fingers and his pen and the parchment on which he wrote took fire, and he cried out, "Death is swallowed up in victory!" It is an exciting thing to see an army routed and flying. You have read of the French falling back from Sedan, of Napoleon's track of 90,000 corpses in the snowbanks of Russia, of the retreat of our armies from Manassas or of the five kings tumbling over the rocks of Beth horan with their armies while the hailstorms of heaven and the swords of Joshua's host struck them with their

In my text is a worse discomfiture. It seems that a black giant proposed to conquer the earth. He gathered for his hosts all the aches and pains and malarias and cancers and distempers and epidemics of the ages. He marchand them down, drilling them in the northwest wind and amid the slush of tempests. He threw up barricades of grave mound. He pitched tent of charnal house. Some of the troops marched with slow tread commanded by consumptions, some in double quick command of pneumonias. Some he took by long besiegement of evil habit and some by one stroke of the battleax of casualty. With bony hand he pounded at the door of hospitals and sickrooms, and won ail the victories in all the great battlefields of all of the five continents. Forward, march! sordered the conqueror of conquerors, and all the generals and commanders in chief and all the presidents and kings and cultans and czars dropped under the feet of his war charger. But one Christmas night his antagonist was born. As most of the plagues and sicknesses and despotisms come out of the east, it was appropriate that the new conqueror should come out of the sme quarter. Power is given him to awaken all the fallen of all the centuries and of all lands and marshal them against the black giant. Fields have aiready been won, but the last day of the world's existence will see the decisive battle. When Christ shall lead forth his two brigades, the brigade of the risen dead and the brigade of the celestial host, the black giant will fall back, and the brigade from the riven sepulchers will take him from beneath, and the brigade of descending immortals will take him from above, and death shall be swallowed up in victory.

The old antagonist is driven back into mythology with all the lore about Stygian ferry and Charon with oar and boat. Melrose abbey and Kenilworth castie are no more in ruins than is the sepulcher. We shall have no more to do with death than we have with the cloakroom at a governor's or a president's levee. We stop at such cloakroom and leave in charge of a servant our overcoat, our overshoes, our outward apparel, that we may not be impeded in the brilliant round of the drawing room. Well, my friends, when we go out of this world we are going to a King's banquet and to a reception of monarchs, and at the door of the tomb we leave the cloak of flesh and the wrappings with which we meet the storms of this world. At the close of an earthly reception, under the brush and broom of the porter, the coat or hat may be handed to us better than when we resigned it, and the cloak of humanity will finally be returned to us improved and brightened and purified and glorified.

You and I do not want our bodies returned as they are now. We want to get_rid of all their weaknesses and all their susceptibilities to fatigue and all their slowness of locomotion.

want them put through a chemistry of soil and heat and cold and changing seasons, out of which God will reconstruct them as thuch better than they are now as the body of the rosiest and healthiest child that bounds over the lawn in Central Park is better than the sickest patient in Bellevue hospital. But as to our soul, we will cross right over, not waiting for obsequies, independent of obituary, into a state in every way better, with wider room and velocities beyond computation, the dullest of us into companionship with the very best spirits in their very best mood, in the very parlor of the universe, the four walls burnished and paneled and pictured and glorified with all the splendors that the infinite God in all the ages has been able to invent. Victory!

This view, of course, makes it of but little importance whether we are cremated or sepultured. If the latter is dust to dust, the former is ashes to ashes. If any prefer incineration, let them have it without cavil or protest. The world may become so crowded that cremation may be universally adopted by law as well as by general consent. Many of the mightiest and best spirits have gone through this process. Thousands and tens of thousands of God's children have been cremated—P. P. Bliss and wife, the evangelistic singers, cremated by accident at Ashtabula bridge; John Rodgers, cremated by persecution; Latimer and Ridley, cremated at Oxford; Pothinus and Blandina, a slave, and Alexander, a physician, and their comrades cremated at the order of Marcus Aurelius; at least a hundred thousand of Christ's disciples cremated, and there can be no doubt about the resurrection of their bodies. Whether out of natural disintegration or cremation we shall get that luminous, buoyant, gladsome, transcendent, magnificent, inexplicable structure called the resurrection body. You will have it; I will have it.

I say to you to-day, as Paul said to Agrippa, "Why should it be thought a thing incredible with you that God should raise the dead?" That far up cloud, higher than the hawk flies, higher than the eagle flies, what is it made of? Drops of water from a river, other drops from a lake, still other drops from a stagnant pool, but now embodied in a cloud and kindled by the sun. If God can make such a lustrous cloud out of water drops, many of them soiled and impure and fetched from miles away, can he not tarnsport the fragments of a human body from the earth. and out of them build a radiant body Cannot God, who owns all the material out of which bones, muscle and flesh are made, set them up again if they have fallen? If a manufacturer of telescopes drops a telescope on the floor and it breaks, can he not mend it again so you can see through it? And if God drops the human eye into the dust, the eye which he originally fashioned, can he not restore it?

Where did all this sik come fromthe silk that adorns your persons and your homes? In the hollow of a staff of Greek missionary brought from China to Europe the progenitors of those worms that now supply the silk markets of many nations. The pageantry of bannered host and the luxurious articles of commercial emporium blazing out from the silkworms. And who shall be surprised if out of this insignificant earthly body, this insignificant | slain thousands in battle. Will they earthly life, our bodies unfold into something worthy of the coming eternities? Put silver into diluted niter, and it dissolves. Is the silver gone forever? No. Put in some pieces of copper, and the silver reappears. If one force dissolves, another force or-

Ever and anon there are instances of men and women entranced. A trance is death followed by resurrection after a few days; total suspension of mental power and voluntary action. Rev. William Tennent, a great evangelist of the last generation, of whom Dr. Archibald Alexander, a man far from being sentimental, wrote in most eulogistic terms-Rev. William Tennent seemed to die. His spirit apparently left the body. People came in day after day and sid, "He is dead, he is dead." But the soul that fled returned, and Will Tennent lived to write what he had seen while his soul was gone.

It may be found some time that what is called suspended animation or comatose state is brief death, giving the soul an excursion into the next world, from which it comes back, a furlough of a few hours granted from the conflict of life to which it must return. Physiologists tell us that while the most of our bodies are built with such wonderful economy that we can spare nothing. and the loss of a finger is a hinderment and the injury of a toe joint makes us lame, still that we have two or three useless physical apparatuses, and no anatomist or physiologist has ever been able to tell us what they are good for. They may be the foundation of the resurrection body, worth nothing to us in this state to be indispensably valuable in the next state. The Jewish rabbis and the scientists of our day have found out that there are two or We three superfluities of body that are something gloriously suggestive of another state. 44 317 11 3 1 3 1 3 P ...

I called at my friend's house one summer day. I found the yard all piled up with the rubbish of carpenter's and mason's work. The door was off. The plumbers had torn up the floor. The roof was being lifted in cupola. All the pictures were gone, and the paper hangers were doing their work. All the modern improvements were being introduced into that dwelling. There was not a room in the house fit to live in at that time, although a month before when I visited that house everything was so beautiful I could not have suggested an improvement. My friend had gone with his family to the Holy Land, expecting to come back at the end of six months, when the building was to be done. And, oh, what was his joy when at the end of six months he returned and found the old house had been enlarged and improved and glorified. That is your body. It looks well now—all the rooms filled with health, and we could hardly make a suggestion. But after awhile your soul will go to the Holy Land, and while you are gone the old house of your tabernacle will be entirely reconstructed from cellar to attic, and every nerve, muscle and bone and tissue and artery must be hauled over, and the old structure will be burnished and adorned and raised and cupolaed and enlarged, and all the improvements of heaven introduced; and you will move into it on resurrection day. "For we know that if our earthly house of this tabernacle were dissolved we have a building of God, a house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens." Oh, what a day when body and soul meet again! They are very fond of each other. Did your body ever have a pain and your soul not pity it, or your body have a joy and your soul not re-echo it, or, changing the question, did your soul ever have any trouble and your body not sympathize with it, growing wan and weak under the depressing influence? Or did your soul ever have a gladness but your body celebrated it with kindled eye and cheek and elastic step? Surely God never intended two such good friends to be long separated.

And so when the world's last Easter morning shall come the soul will descend, crying, "Where is my body?" And the body will ascend, saying, 'Where is my soul?" And the Lord of the resurrection will bring them together, and it will be a perfect soul in a perfect body, introduced by a perfect Christ into a perfect heaven. Victory! Do you wonder that on Easter day we swathe our churches with garlands? Do you wonder we celebrate it with the most consecrated voice of song that we can invite, with the deftest fingers on organ and cornet and with doxologies that beat these arches with the billows of sound as the sea smites the basalt at Giant's Causeway? Only the bad disapprove of the resurrection. A cruel heather warrior heard Mr. Moffatt, the missionary, preach about the resurrection, and he said to the missionary, "Will my father rise in the last day?" "Yes," said the missionary. "Will all the dead in battle rise?" said the cruel chieftain. "Yes," said the missionary. Then said the warrior: "Let me hear no more about the resurrection; there can be no resurrection; there shall be no resurrection. I have rise?" Ah, there will be more to rise on that day than those whose crimes have never been repented of will want to see! But for all others who allowed Christ to be their pardon and their life and their resurrection it will be a day of victory.

The thunders of the last day will be the salvo that greets you into harbor. The lightnings will be only the torches of triumphal procession marching down to escort you home. The burning worlds flashing through immensity will be the rockets celebrating your coronation on thrones where you will reign forever and forever and forever. Where is death? What have we to do with death? As your reunited body and soul swing off from this planet on that last day you will see deep gashes all up and down the hills, deep gashes all through the vaileys, and they will be the emptied graves, they will be the abandoned sepulchers, with rough ground tossed on each side of them, and slabs will lie uneven on the rent hillocks, and there will be fallen monuments and cenowill appreciate the full exhilaration of the text, "Death is swallowed up in victory.'

Hall the Lord of earth and heaven! Praise to thee by both be given. Thee we greet triumphant now: Hail the resurrection thou!

In a recent letter from 5900 Michigan avenue. Chicago, Ill., Mr. Moody says the following:

"For over twenty-five years I suffered from catarrh, and for over ten years I suffered from catarrh of the stomach terribly.

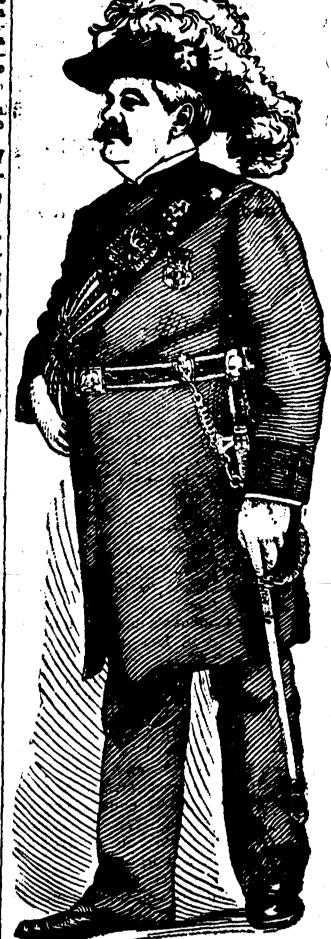

"I have taken all kinds of medicines and have been treated by all kinds of doctors, as thousands of my acquaintances are aware in different parts of the United States, where I have traveled, but my relief was only temporary, until a little over a year ago l started to take Peruna, and at the present time I am better than I have been for twenty years.

"The soreness has left my stomach entirely and I am free from indigestion and dispepsia and will say to all who are troubled with catarrh or stomach trouble of any kind, don't put it off and suffer, but begin to take Peruna right away, and keep it up until you are cured, as you surely will be if you persevere.

"My wife, as many in the southwest can say, was troubled with a bad cough and bronchial trouble, and doctors all over the country gave her up to die, as they could do nothing more for her. She began taking Peruna with the result that she is better now than she has been in years, and her cough has almost left her entirely. The soreness has left ber lungs and she is as well as she ever was in her life, with thanks, as she says, to Peruna. Yours very truly,

Catarrh in its various forms is rapidly becoming a general curse. An undoubted remedy has been discovered by Dr. Hartman. This remedy has been thoroughy tested during the past forty years. Prominent men have come to know of its virtues, and are making public utterances on the subject. To save the country we must save the people. To save the people we must protect them from disease. The disease that is at once the most prevalent and stubborn of cure is catarrh.

If one were to make a list of the different names that have been applied to calculate different locations and organs, the result would be astonishing. We have often published a partial list of these names, and the list drawn up in battle array is rather applied by the first publication of it professional, was amusing. And yet we one, send for our free catarrh book. Adhave never enumerated all of the diseases dress The Peruna Medicino Co., Columbus, which are classed as catarrh. It must be Ohio.

MITTING THE WASHINGTON TO THE half-desen boys were gathered about an old barn under which a detenselous dog had taken refuge from their termenting attentions. Some were lying flat on the ground peering under; some were burling small missiles as fir as they could reach, while two others, more enterprising still, were trying to pull up a board in the foor.

Amid their excited shouts of "There he is: I see him:" "Hold on, there, I'll fix him!" and kindred exclamations, they did not bear carriage wheels in the soft, dusty read or see the occupant, until a quiet voice said:

"What is it; boys?" One or two class away in a shamefaced manner, but two or three others began all together to tell him what their victom was

"He hain't nobody's dog!" said one. "'Nd we think he's got hydrophobia," said another, while a third added: "He's a ne 'count dog anyhow, 'nd if we can git him out we're going to tie a stone to his neck 'nd down him over in Simmond's pond."

"Has he bitten any of you?" the quiet voice inquired again.

"He sort o' snapped at Wallie's hand, 'nd he'd K bit me if I hadn't been too smart for him," said the largest boy, while "Wallie" examined his dirty fingers with a martyr-like air.

"I suppose you boys were quietly playing somewhere and the dog pitched into you?"

There was a profound silence for a few moments, when one bright-eyed little fellow sald manfully: "No, mister, he didn't. He was lyin' down by the brew'ry with a bone-just gnawin' it, ye know-'nd we sort a got to pleggin', 'nd pesterin' him, 'nd 'twas when Wallie snatched the bone that he snapped."

"Have you time to listen to an old man's story?"

Instantly sticks and stones were dropped, though two of the lads tried to put on an indifferent front. Driving his horse into the shade of the building, the stranger began:

"You boys do not realize it any more than I did when I was a boy, but nevertheless it is true that every day of our lives we write out a page in the book of life; and when one is old he has a great deal of time in which he must look back and read over these pages, and when I saw you tormenting that helpless dog it seemed as if some unseen finger swiftly turned the leaves of my life back to a page-a page which I wish to God could be blotted out forever, but it never can. No. boys, we may be sorry for things, may get forgiveness for them, may even forget them for a time; but if we do a wrong, it is somehow bound to rise up before us at times when we least expect it. I hold that in this world we never get entirely away from our wrong doing. But I did not intend to preach a sermon, but to tell you a story.

"As a boy, I was naturally cruel: J delighted to rob birds' nests, torment cats and dogs, and smaller children. As I grew older I helped my father on the farm. I was rebuked for my abuse of the animals, and my mother used to say that if she had her way I would never get a horse to go anywhere. Also, as I grew older, I became fond of aunting, and spent many days with my noble dog Stanley in the woods. I professed to be very good to him; but of a truth 'the tender mercies of the wicked are cruel,' and when I think of the whippings and kicks the noble fellow received from me while, as I called it, I was 'training him,' I am amazed at the affection be gave me in return; but the worst was yet to come.

"He had never been a good retriever. You know what that is, of course—a dog that will go anywhere after you have shot your game, and bring it to you without mussing or tearing it in the least. I had repeatedly beaten Stanley for his failure in this line. though I knew it came from the fact that his former master had whipped him for carrying home dead chickens. or anything like that he found in the neighborhood during his puppy days. true to his retrieving instinct. One day, while shooting ducks, I said to him: 'Now, sir, you'll bring me that bird out there on that island or I'll kill you; do you understand it?" shall always think he did. from the troubled look he gave me, and the pleading way in which he crept to my vide and attempted to carees my hand.

"Roughly I shook him off and bade him so fetch the bird. Obediently he plunged fifto the ice-tole water, syam to the island, and then stood in an irresolute, ratestind undicief. Seride the duck. Angrifys abouted me orders. but he only put his nose on it, then swam back toward me. I sent him hade three times, then he attempted to land. I knew that se was too chilled to make it possible for him to return to the island, but my passion mastered me, and again and again I struck him back into the water with my gun butt; flercely declaring that he would bring me that bird or never land alive. Oh, the look in those brown eyes as he turned them upon me at each new effort to land! Boys, I'll never, no never, forget it, and I expect to meet it when I stand before God's bar of instice."

The stranger paused here for a littie ere he found voice to go on.

"Presently he grew so helpless from cold, struggles and blows that he let himself drift beyond my reach, but frenzied with rage, I dropped my gun and snatching up a long pole. I leaned over the water's edge to strike him. As the pole came down some sod or root under my foot gave way, and I found myself struggling in the coldest water I was ever in; but it was only for a few brief moments, for, with the icy hands of death already tightening about his faithful heart, that noble dog roused himself at sight of my peril, worked toward me as best he could, and with a last desperate effort, born of love and fidelity, he dragged me to the shore, sank down, and with a few short gasps, was dead.

"Chilled and stupefied, yet perfectly conscious of the enormity of my sin-I watched by his side, gazing into the still open eyes, and alternately cursing myself and calling him names of endearment that he had never heard in

"How long it was before another hunter's voice recalled me to myself and condition, I do not know, but I know that during that time the sufferings of my mind made me unconscious of my bodily suffering. I was helped home, but for many weeks lay between life and death, and they said all of my unconscious ravings were of Stanley and that awful transaction by the lakeside. I have been a different person since, but I can never, in life, get away from that page in the book.

"You understand what I mean now, and all I have to say further is, boys. be kind to every living creature, and if you can do any good by repeating an old man's story, tell it again and

There was silence in the little group as once more the carriage wheels rolled noiselessly away; but presently the largest boy took some pennies from his pocket and bade two of the smaller ones "run to the market and get a good meaty bone." On their return it was laid where the stray dog could smell it, and then the boys quietly dispersed, each to tell some one else the old man's atory, and put in practice, we trust, his admonition, "Be kind to every living creature."—Practical Farmer.

A Letter of Restitution to Cleveland

"Sometimes the remorse of those who have cheated the United States is in inverse ratio to the sum of the fraud, says H. E. Armstrong in Ainslee's, President Cleveland once received a letter from a child that must have moved him deeply, for, doubtless, it was laid before him as a curiosity.

"'Dear President,' it ran, 'I am in a dreadful state of mind and I thought I would write and tell you all. About two years ago—as near as I can recollect, it was two years ago—I used two postage stamps that had been used on letters before—perhaps more than two stamps, but I can only remember doing it twice. I did not realize what I had done until lately. My mind is constantly turned on that subject, and I think of it day and night. Now, dear President, will you please forgive me, and I promise you I will never do it again. Enclosed find cost of three stamps and please forgive me, for I was then but thirteen years old and am heartily sorry for what I have done. "The treasury department does not know whether this letter was written by a boy or girl, but the internal evidence of expression assures us it was a girl. Imagine a boy being 'in a dreadful state of mind' about fooling Uncle Sam with a couple of canceled stamps. The urchin might regret he had wronged his country and make amends, but the crime would not oppress his mind and rack his conscience with intolerable torments. Surely the culprit was a girl. How she must have tossed on her bed in the blackness of the long silent nights and gone about her daylight tasks with the feeling of a mortal leper! Big strong men at the same time were acting on the Haytian principle that it is not a crime to rob the government. This the President knew, and that is why he had a lump in his throat when he read the confession of the little girl. It is the most pathetic of all the letters on file in the treasury department that have accompanied contributions to the

MUCH MONEY FOR CANDY.

Mingigen Million Dollars Spont in Patis . In Two Months.

Nineteen million dollars for candy! No, that isn't what the world spends in a decade, but what the French people pay out for sweets in two months, December and January. The average price is 60 cepts a pounds, so you can see your Parisian sister has a sweet tooth of no mean proportions.

France makes about 143,299,000 pounds of confections every year and exports only one-tenth of it. England makes more than this and exports nearly half its product—they don't give little girls candy in England the way they do over here. Germany ranks third in the candy-making business among nations, and threatens to pass its rivals before

The best French chocolates come from Paris, Bordeaux and Lyons, so be sure the young man who comes to see the grown-up sister and brings a box of candy has only the best. The famous marrons glaces come from Ardeche, Gard, Rhone, Cantal, and Clermont-Ferrand. Don't forget that, and make sure the name is on the wrapper.

French manufacturers of sweetmeats are complaining now about the high tax on sugar and cocoa. On the latter a duty of $20.07 is imposed on each 220 pounds, while the impost on sugar amounts to $11.68 for the same amount. Even at that French confectionery would be cheap if the makers didn't have to pay nearly 10 cents a pound tax of the manufactured goods.

Does License Pay.

Maine is thoroughly committed to anti-license. Ohio and Illinois are examples of license states, filled with distilleries, breweries and myrids of saloons. Maine challenges comparison of the prosperity of its common people with that of the common people of Ohio and Illinois.

In population, indeed, the latter states far outstrip her.

Population of Maine, 661,086.

Population of Ohio, 3,672,316.

Population of Illinois, 3,826,351.

That is, Ohio has 51 times and Illinois 5 4-5 times the inhabitants of Maine. Nevertheless, Maine has far more savings bank deposits than either.

Savings Banks deposits of Maine, $53, 397,590.

Savings Banks deposts of Ohio, $34,606,-

Savings Banks deposits of Illinois, $23,-

Thus, though less than onefifth in number, the people of Maine have more than half again as much laid up in the savings banks as the people in Ohio. And though little more than one-sixth in number, they have far exceeded twice the deposits of the people of Illinois.

The outlawing of the saloon is demanded because it is the embodiment of anarchy. The hay market riot which resulted in a direct attack upon the represenatives of law was hatched in the saloons of Chicago. The assassin of McKinley made his headquarters in a saloon of Buffalo and he was an ex-saloon keeper. The saloonkeepers, with a very few exceptions, are the most godless and anarchristic of any class of men on American soil. A noted judge lately said to the writter: "There is not one saloon in a thousand that obeys the law, or that intends to. The saloonkeeper does nothing to respect law that he is not compelled to." The Anti-Saloon League is not a frantic movement but it challenges your judgement and, on the basis of facts, demands that you wake up and take an interest in the preservation of your own social life and government.

MOLOY OR WORMY CORN.

A Cause of Disease In Morses In Manage and Adjoining States. Serious losses in this and adjoining states are occurring at the present time as a result of feeding wermy. moldy corn, either when it is fed as a grain ration or when obtained by pasturing in the stalkfields or when fed apon the cut corn fodder. The disease is an inflammation of the brain or spinal cord and its coverings (meninges), associated with a breaking down of the nerve tissue of the brain. It is popularly called "staggers" or "mad staggers," because of the prominent symptoms shown. The symptoms are those of a brain disease. The animal appears blind and only partially conscious. There is often a tendency to turn in a circle to the right or left and a staggering or a straddling gait. There is usually a trembling of the muscles. As the disease progresses the animal becomes delirious and easily excitable. In many cases the animal will stand with the head or breast against a wall or manrer and push. Animals will often eat when badly affected apparently from force of habit, not because they are hungry. In some cases animals will die in a few hours after they are first noticed ailing. Most of them die within a few days. A few live a week, rarely longer. In a few cases the spinal cord is diseased, while the brain remains nearly normal. In these cases there is inability to control the muscles or the animal may be unusually sensitive, the least irritation of the skin, even by touching the animal, often causing it to kick violently. Where the spinal cord only is affected the animal frequently recovers. Laxative food should be given, and iodide of potash in one dram doses dissolved in water can be given once daily for three or four days. Mules are rarely affected by this disease.

Practically all cases where the brain is the seat of the disease die, and all methods of treatment so far have proved of no value. The animal should be placed where it will be comfortable and cannot injure itself or other animals and supplied with soft laxative food, such as thin bran mashes. The only frontisent for the disense is preventice by according the wormy, moldy earn. Care should be exercised in handling a horse to avoid injury, as the animal is irresponsible and often in a delirious frenzy.

In some cases horses do not begin to die f r a month after being turned into the stalkfields, and they may contract the disease a week and in some cases ten days after the moldy corn has been withheld.

Moldy or wormy corn does not seem to be injurious to other animals and can be fed to cattle and hogs without danger.—U. S. Mayo, Kansas Station.

Frogs' legs are sold in Paris daintily threaded on little willow wands. People buy them for the home table instead of, as is the practice in this country, eating them exclusively in restaurants. They make a most palatable broth for invalids and convalescents, but ordinarily the legs are prepared by removing the skin, rolling them in flour, adding salt, pepper and butter, with a pinch of parsley, and cooking them gently in a frying pan or on the griddle. By Parisians it is considered that the frog is best in the fall of the year, when it is fattest and most delicate. However, large numbers of the batrachians are caught in the spring, when they are said to be more easily captured.—Saturday Evening Post.

[Copyright, 1991, by C. B. Lewis.] Guya Jansi was the owner of Raipoor, the largest elephant at work on the public improvements at Rewah; India.

Guya Janei was a man forty years old, and he was generally spoken of by his fellow workmen as "The Silent One." He was not given to song or chatter. He would give a fair day's work, but his answers to his boss were brief and surly and he answered his Jungle. companions not at all for days and days. His elephant was like him. He was strong and willing and intelligent, but he avoided his kind as far as possible and permitted no man but his master to be familiar with him. The Jungle to mete out retribution." English boss under whom Guya labored at Rewah said to himself that the native was a bad tempered man and that the elephant had the devil in X. his eye, but so long as the work was well done he had no fault to find. The fifty other laborers in the gang with Guya were offended by his silence and his refusal to chatter and argue, and they whispered to each other:

"This man and his beast may cast a spell over us. Why not get rid of

Three days later a man complained of being robbed of a sum of money, and when suspicion had been directed toward Guya his tent was searched and the empty purse discovered. At first he contented himself with sullenly denying his guilt, but when he had icine has been sold for many years in been locked up as the thief and the gang were shouting his name in contempt he stood erect, with tears in his

"How dare they say such things of me! I am Guya Jansi. You can trace my family back for 200 years and you will not find a thief in it. I am silent because men have wronged me and mine, and I brood over it, but does it follow that because I am silent I am also a rogue? Look for the thief among the men who chatter more than they work."

Three days later the English district judge reached Rewah on his circuit, and Guya was arraigned as a thief. There was a conspiracy to ruin him, and the false testimony offered satisfied the judge of his guilt. The affair ing papers by Rafford Pike, the was treated in an offhand way, and when the accused asked for time to bring witnesses who could vouch for his character his request was refused. He was convicted of theft and sentenced to jail for three months. He wept and cried out over his disgrace, but he was only laughed at. The judge went his way without giving the case a second thought. He had hundreds of such cases per year, and there was no particular reason why he should give this case special attention. Before being sent to prison Guya asked permission to bid his elephant goodby. This was granted. Raipoor seemed to under- this number, which is unusually stand that misfortune had come, and those who stood close by saw tears in his eyes as he lovingly caressed his

"They have done me a great wrong," said Guya as if talking to a fellow man. "I am innocent, as God knows, but they have declared me to be a thief, and I must go to jail. We have been poor, my beloved, but we have been honest, and never until today have we been ashamed to look men in wireless telegraphy recently inthe face. If the sahib judge had been fair minded, this disgrace would not have come, but he took the word of liars and refused to hear me. He is not a just judge."

They would have put the elephant at work under another mahout, but he escaped from the camp that night and took to the jungle. Guya was thrown into jail among a lot of malefactors, and within two weeks there was a quarrel in which he was stabbed to death. That was the end of him so far as any one at Rewah was concerned.

The district judge had a long circuit and many cases, and it was two months before he approached Rewah again. Night overtook him while he was yet twelve miles away, and with his servants he made camp by the roadside. When he had eaten his supper, he drew a little way from the camp and sat down on a stone to smoke his pipe. It was a bright moonlight night, without breeze enough to move a leaf, and the patter of a hyena's feet on the bard baked earth could have been heard a quarter of a mile away. So strong was the moonlight that a prowling jackal could be made out along the edge of the jungle forty rods away. There was no fear of tiger or panther, and the judge was peacefully content as he smoked and cast a careless eye about him. He had not been seated ten minutes when an elephant moved out of the fringe of the jungle and advanced upon him. The great beast moved almost without sound. His feet made no more noise than those of a fox. One acting as sentinel for the camp would have seen him at once as he moved out, but the eyes of the judge looked vacantly into space as his mind was busy with his

He crept forward like the shadow of death, and by and by he reached out and curled his trunk around the judge's body and lifted him on high and dashed him down on the hard earth. The unfortunate man had eried out, and as the servants leaped to their feet and stood staring the elephant lifted up the body and dashed it down twice more. Then he turned away and sought the Farrington's Friends Disgusted. Any hope that Bert Farrington may have had of securing a pardon has vanished into thin air. Petitions were being circulated in many parts of the state and the outlook for securing the release of the man who killed Jesse Hooker, whom he found occupying a room with his wife, were exceedingly bright. Monday, however, it was discovered that he still loves the woman who betrayed him and caused his financial ruin, and that he was corresponding with her. A letter which he had intrusted to a man who worked for him fell into the hands of Ed Farrington, the prisoner's brother. It was couched in endearing terms, and as soon as he had finished reading it Ed Farrington announced that he would have nothing more to do with the attempt to secure his brother's pardon, and ordered all the petitions called in.

"I think under the circumstances," he sald, "the best thing Bert can do is to serve his sentence. By the time he comes out of prison the love which he still bears for the worthless woman may have worn away-yes, for his own sake I think now that he should serve his full term. I told him what ! I had done and he was very bitter toward me at first, but before I left him he handed me his watch and other valuables, and said, 'Ed, perhaps you're right.' "

Taylor is the Connecticut man who sent $100,000 to Grand Rapids to be used in securing a water contract with the city, and although he claimed that all but $7,500 was afterwards returned to him it is believed that he received but a small portion of it back, if any.

It seemed that the captain owned a house far off in the neighborhood of West Brompton, and into this he had moved the wreck of his fortunes, including his family.

The marquis waited a certain length of time.

Then one afternoon he appeared at the new home of the Livermores.

To himself he declared many times that he intended this visit as a positive means of increasing his hold upon the captain's wife, over whom he scemed to be exerting some peculiarly hypnotic power, with the eventual aim in view of inducing her to leave home and seek some asylum on the continent

For years he had looked forward to this same moment with the keenest anticipation; for years he had in his mind gone over every little detail, had seen her surprise and alarm, with his own great triumph, as he sent his shafts home with the arm of ample revenge: yet, strange to say, he did not approach the subject with the cagerness he had expected, the feverish thrill was only conspicuous by its absence, and he even started guiltily when from some distant part of the rambling old structure a peal of childish laughter was borne to his ears; there was something so condemnatory in the merry sound.

By degrees he brought the subject around to where he wanted it, and the manner in which he accomplished this declared that his strategic powers had not waned a particle.

"Have you had any American friends?" he asked.

"Yes, one," came the rather confused reply, and the listener knew he had caused her mind to revert to that unhappy past about which she even usually avoided thinking.

"Pardon me; but I once knew a poor fellow, an artist, out in Mexico, who said he had been well acquainted with Captain Livermore's wife," he went on deliberately.

"An artist," she echoed, looking pained, and yet showing an eagerness

"Yes; by name Jack. I chanced to do him several favors, and he even confided his history to me. Poor fellow, he had suffered bitterly."

"Confided to you—then you know—" in alarm. "That you and he were once betrothed—yes. That while he labored unceasingly in the hope of gaining fame and fortune, your love for him began to grow cold. He had been the means of reconciling you to your proud old English grandfather. In the whirl of society you met Captain Livarmore, then the lion of the hour. You forgot to write to the man who believed in you as he did in Heaven. He came to London, unable to breather outside your presence. Then you crushed him by declaring that while you still loved him, you loved position still more, and that you had agreed to marry the captain."

Fedora's head had fallen on her wildly heaving bosom, but she neither looked up nor uttered a word as yet, being too stunned as the tremendous revelation was forcing itself upon her mind.

He went on pitilessly!

"Jack sought a quarrel with the man who had robbed him of all he had on earth—perhaps you never know of it, but they met at dawn in the deadly duello, each determined to kill the other. The captain, as they advanced toward each other, fired first and only inflicted a wound. He was then at Jack's complete mercy, since he was allowed the privilege of walking up as close as he pleased and sending a ball through the heart of his adversary."

Fedora groaned, but never moved. "The captain was no coward; believing his hour had come, he deliberately opened his coat and awaited the fatal shot, his eyes looking into those of the man he had wronged without knowing it. Twice Jack took aim, but each time he failed to pull the trigger. Finally he raised his pistol, fired in the air and fled from the scene."

For the first time she raised her head and looked at him, her troubled face marked by conflicting emotions.

"Then came the wedding, which poor Jack saw from the organ loft, enduring the tortures of the damned while the woman whom heaven had given to him was united by law to man she did not love.

"Then he fled from London as from a place accursed and sought fortune's smiles upon a new field, hating women because one had been false to her vows. and always hugging to his heart the resolution to some day return and take full satisfaction for that treachery.

"That was Jack's story -- doubtless other men have suffered in the same more cruelly. And yet it seemed that fortune took a strange delight in compensating him his loss by throwing into his hands the most wonderful treasure ever known, surpassing all tales from the days of Ophir and Solomon down to the present. More than this, he was given power and made the head of the Central American republic whither fate had drifted him.

"Thus, when five years had passed, rich beyond the wildest dreams, made a noble of Spain because of some financial assistance he had given the government at Madrid, Jack came back to London with the full determination to repay the debts he owed, at compound interest, down to the last penny."

She was looking at him now with fear-haunted eyes, looking at him as one might gaze upon some dreadful spectre of the past.

"You—are—Jack!" she said, slowly, as if almost unable to grasp the idea at

"I am that once miserable wretch. Having embarked upon my campaign, I lost no time in making your husband's acquaintance. It was my hand that, in a fair and honorable way, stripped him of all he possessed. That is only a beginning."

"Jack! Jack! Have you no mercy?" she groaned, wringing her hands wildly.

"Did you have any when you so coolly turned me down to stay in the mine, while upon my shoulders you mounted to a position in society and gave yourself to a man you never loved? I know all you would say, and be sure, I have steeled my heart against your turn."

He looked like a man of stone, upon | upon him with exultant cries. whom pleading and tears would be

Had it been so in those days of yore Fedora would never have willingly giv-

"You speak of heaven in the same breath with vengeance—surely you cannot believe, Jack, that God approves of such things. I did wrong you, oh, most grievously; but I have bitterly repented it ever since, and hoped the day might come when I could tell you so. Often I have wept to remember your despair. It has been the one black spot upon my life, and kept me from being truly happy. But, Jack, won't you forgive if you can never forget—see, I plead with you; hold this wretched remembrance no longer against me. Be my friend, my brother. You already respect my husband; why be the means of his ruin?"

"While I cannot forget, I must not forgive. You have not yet begun to know what suffering means. When the world seems dark and your soul prays for death——"

"But, Jack, stop; consider; you cannot have revenge upon me without injuring my children," she said, suddenly remembering his weakness of old, and how a child had never appealed in vain so long as he had a sou left.

This was a harder task than the othcr, and the indomitable marquis was compelled to grit his teeth in the endeavor to stem the signs of retreat that threatened to overwhelm him.

"I regret exceedingly that they must suffer, for I am not that cruel to desire through their hold on your heart to inflict pain on you; but as I, an innocent party, once paid the penalty of your sin, so they, too, must inherit the legacy."

"Is there no way in which you may be satisfied without the burden falling on them?"

"I know of none. They must suffer when you do, all being members of one family. It is fate."

"Jack, have mercy!—see, on my knees I beg you to forgive. It is true I | past? wronged you most fearfully. God knows. I am wretchedly sorry. But out it chanced that the marquis was not 4666; No 3 white, 431464444.c. of that wrong has come your bright fortune, and, perhaps, Jack, some more worthy woman may fill the place in your heart I once occupied. Forget the past and live for the future. Grasp them before they have flown. Rise above this spirit of revenge upon a weak, wretched woman, who in her thoughtlessness did you harm and lived to repent. Already you have as you say brought ruin upon us, and cast us out from society. For that I care little; but for God's sake, leave me the love of my husband, my children."

It was enough to melt a heart of ice. and reason combined with emotion in the argument. Had not the marquis threshed this same straw himself alway from a woman's hand, but none | most daily—had it been thrust suddenly upon him, he must have been fairly overwhelmed.

It was not his design that Fedora should see any sign of weakness in his manner, and he maintained the same passionless exterior he had shown through the whole interview.

"I promise nothing. Only this I say, that your children have doubtless saved you from a fate that might have come upon you. I do not relent, I simply change my tactics, and for their sakes spare you that humiliation, that shame. What further means of punishment I may decide to invoke you will know in good time. As you sowed so must you reap. That is the law of recompense, of stern justice. Therefore, weep over your wretched lot, and bitterly regret that false step in which you were tempted by pride. I do not dare remain here longer in your presence. At least thank heaven that I have decided to abandon the plan upon which I was working as unworthy of an honorable man.

"You are going, Jack?"

"Yes." "Without seeing the children?"

pressing a button while he was not looking. "They remind me too bitterly of what you, their unhappy mother. seemed to me in the long ago-all innocence and trusting love. No, I don't wish to see them now." "Oh, Jack, be reconciled—I shall pray daily that you cease to hate me, for the sake of those little ones. Did you know the boy's name is Jack?"

"What!" he gasped, weakening. "Do you mean to say your husband allowed you to do that—and I the man you loved? Incredible!"

"I told him all, and it was he who first proposed it. You don't know his generous nature. I can see now what it was so disturbed him-you took his fire and freely gave him his forfeited life. Oh! wretched woman that I am to have been loved by two such noble men, and to have brought sorrow to both. Who will deliver me from the bondage of my sin?"

As if in answer to her forlorn cry the patter of little feet sounded someall arguments. What I seek is only where—the marquis, alarmed at his justice—a fair equivalent. I have suf- | own weakness, turned to fly, but made fered, God only knows how much. It is a miscalculation, for in the hall he was waylaid by the enemy, who rushed

He made a swoop for the little girl and swept her up in his arms, until her golden curls nestled against his shoulder when he kissed her pouting lips again and again.

Then came the boy, to whom he had paid so little attention before. Now he held him off at arm's length, where he could look into his resolute face and bold black eyes—yes, he was surely the image of what Livermore must have been as a lad, and yet, and yet, strange to say, the marquis actually believed he could see some traces of his own characteristics in the boy-learned philosophical and psychological scholars and doctors have long argued this point, and agreed that it is not only possible, but actual—the image of her first love still remained strong in Fedora's heart at the time the child was Kissing the youngster, the marquis hastily quitted the house, followed by the anxious gaze of the wretched Fedora, until the children, astonished at the strange actions of their friend, loudly bewailed his flight, and demanded her attention.

Weep no more tears of repentance and fear, wife and mother, since the seed has been sown and the harvest of Jack, together with the captain's generosity, proved the last straw that broke the camel's back.

While only two Republicans, Hanbury aud Vreeland, of New York, voted with the Democrats, enough Republicans remained away or declined to vote to reduce the majority to 10. The conclusion of the debate on the case was rather epirited, Rhea making an eloquent defense of his right to the seat. After the vote the house began consideration of the army appropriation bill. Beven millions in cold Greatest Amount of Bullion Ever ried in a Single Vessel "I notice that the newspapers have recently spoken of the carrying of $7,-006,660 of bullion to a foreign country by one of the ocean liners as the greatest amount ever transported," said a man who has been with the navy for years to a reporter. "It is entirely wrong. In 1885 there was brought from the mint in New Orleans to the treasury in Washington $11,-000,000, and let was brought in a

"The government decided to transport $15,000,000 from New Orleans. It was first thought best to bring it by rail, but this was assuming a great risk. The cabinet discussed the matter carefully and it was finally decided that the safest way would be by water. The members of the cabinet saw that there was a chance for a hold-up if the money was brought by train.

"The United States ship Swatara was first designated to carry the money, but it was found that she would be inadequate to transport the whole amount, so the wooden sailing steamer Yantic was pressed into service to help out. We removed from the Swatara her magazines. The shells from the shellroom were removed, as were also the sails from the sailroom, so that all available space was utilized for packing the coin. The only weapon of defense was a Gatting gun.

"The money was conveyed from the mint to the vessels in wagons. A There will be two great shows at equad of secret service officers watched the work. The two vessels were in tow and the trip from New Orleans to the Washington navyyard occupied a little more than four days. Considerable wind was encountered off Hatteras, but otherwise the trip was without incident. The money was carried from the navy yard to the treas-

Bright's Disease Cured.

Sullivan, Ill., March 31st, Mrs. Kitty F. Seaney was very ill for months and notwithstanding the best possible medical attendance she got no better. The doctors said she had Bright's Disease, and gave her little or no hope of ever being well again.

She suffered great pain in her back. which nothing seemed able to relieve, till at last encouraged by the reputation Dodd's Kidney Pills have attained in the community as a cure for Kidney Diseases, she began to use them.

The result was a surprise both to Mrs. Seaney and the physicians, for soon after the treatment was commenced her kidneys threw off large quantities of dark diseased matter and she improved rapidly. She used in all ten boxes, and has completely recovered good health without pain or symptoms of the Bright's Disease.

"A duelist?" "No; singularly enough, he has not the courage to fight a duel."

"What is his occupation?" My informant, a Frenchman, shrugged his shoulders after the French fashion and walked out of the school without replying to my question. Brisson at once doffed his wire mask and put up his foil. In doing so he turned his back upon his former antagonist and took care to keep it turned till Morrel had left the academy. Evidently the man who had shown his skill was not a favorite with him or, for the matter of that, with any one present. The Frenchmen all departed, leaving the room to our party. Morrel also departed, and as he passed me I noticed the most repulsive face I had ever seen on a man. I did not wonder at the disfavor in which he was held. I should day last. have been afraid to pass him in a lonely road had he cause to prick me in the

Three years later, in company with my friend Walter Douglas, I again visited Europe, sailing from New York to Cherbourg and going from there to Mentone, a winter resort in the south' of France. One evening Douglas went to walk with a little French girl who had captivated him by her smart appearance. He failed to return to the hotel, and toward morning, becoming anxious for his safety, I went to search for him. I found him lying in his blood in the gardens stabbed through the heart. His coat had been cut by the point of a knife or sword so as to make what looked like the letter S. The blade had entered the heart at the point where the tracing ceased.

In agony at the murder of my friend, I called a gendarine, and the body was removed. I made every effort to find the murderer, but without success. The mysterious letter S cut in his coat would not be dropped from my mind. It seemed to partly awaken some memory. At last I remembered Morrel and the figure 8 he had chalked on the waistcont of M. Brisson. Then it occurred to me that the letter S was an incomplete figure S.

Going at once to the police office, 1 requested them to arrest the little French girl whom Douglas had been with on the night of his murder, and
