showed commendable zeal in making bees to haul gravel for the cement to considerable credit as it was a busy time.

Two quite valuable books came to us the past week from the state. One is the Michigan Manual and the other the Michigan Highway commissioners Report. The first is full of facts and information about the state, the other contains many instructions in regard to road building.

visiting his daughter Mrs. S. Durfee.

Mary VanFleet last Wednesday.

Rev. C. W. Rice gives their location

TESTED BY TIME.

Mrs. Robert Broderick, who resides at 1915 Virginia st., in San Antonio, Tex., tells an experience that will interest every reader. It shows as well that Doan's cures are lasting cures.

She says: "Up to the early part of the year 1902 I had been a sufferer from kidney troubles for many years. The pain in my back became worse and worse until it was a daily burden that interfered with every duty. I was much afflicted with headaches and dizzy spells and was unable to rest well nights. In May, 1902, after using Doan's Kidney Pills I made a statement for publication, declaring that they had entirely relieved me of the pain in my back. I have since then had a year's time in which to study the effects of the medicine, and while I have had slight touches of the trouble since, the use of the pills has always driven away all signs of the disorder and I have become convinced of the fact that the first treatment was practically permanent in its effects, and I know that a box of Doan's Kidney Pills kept on hand are a sufficient guarantee against any suffering from the kidneys or back. I should advise every sufferer to take Doan's Kidney Pills and I know that they will be surprised and pleased with the result."

A LESSON FOR PHYSICIANS.

Spirit of Harshness and Lordliness No Longer Tolerated.

There is one good result of "an overcrowded profession," and of the sharp competition that exists among doctors. In the rivalry for popular favor. This is the disappearance of the old-time spirit of harshness and lordliness, which sometimes degenerated into positive brutality. These characteristics were the natural products of an original boorishness, increased by success and a comparative monopoly of practice. It takes a gentlemanly mind not to be spoiled by the attitude of subservience on the part of patients, and the habit of ordering by the physician in charge.

In every large community there are still left specimens of medical Dr. Johnsons, who from a ruder age have carried down a cross and commanding acerbity of manner that is now out of place and time. In one of our large American cities there is an example known far and wide. His loss of patients does not teach him any lesson, and seems rather to increase his churlishness. He seems to take a special delight in hurting the feelings of his patients by a perverse irascibility.

A patient who was shocked by this manner in the very beginning of the examination suddenly stopped, and in a quiet manner asked the amount of the customary fee, paid it, and without a word walked away. There are better reasons, of course, against unkindness and coarse egotism, but it certainly no longer "pays" for physicians to be ungentlemanly.—American Medicine.

Give Warning of Approach of More Serious Trouble.

Do you experience fits of depression with restlessness, alternating with extreme irritability, bordering upon hysteria? Are your spirits easily affected so that one minute you laugh, and the next fall into convulsive weeping?

Do you feel something like a ball rising in your throat and threatening to choke you; all the senses perverted, morbidly sensitive to light and sound; pain in the ovaries, and especially between the shoulders; sometimes loss of voice; nervous dyspepsia, and almost continually cross and snappy, with a tendency to cry at the least provocation?

If so, your nerves are in a shattered condition, and you are threatened with nervous prostration.

Undoubtedly you do not know it, but in nine cases out of ten this is caused by some uterine disorder, and the nerves centering in and about the organs which make you a woman influence your entire nervous system. Something must be done at once to restore their natural condition or you will be prostrated for weeks and months perhaps, and suffer untold misery.

Proof is monumental that nothing in the world is better for this purpose than Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound; thousands and thousands of women have written us so.

How Mrs. Holland, of Philadelphia, suffered among the finest physicians in the country, none of whom could help her—finally cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—For over two years I was a constant sufferer from extreme nervousness, indigestion, and dizziness. Menstruation was irregular, had backache and a feeling of great lassitude and weakness. I was so bad that I was not able to do my own work or go far in the street. I could not sleep nights.

"I tried several splendid doctors, but they gave me no relief. After taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I soon began to feel better, and was able to go out and not feel as if I would fall at every step. I continued to take the medicine until cured.

"I cannot say enough in behalf of Lydia E. Pinkham's medicine, and heartily recommend all suffering women to try it and find the relief I did."—MRS. FLORENCE HOLLAND, 622 S. Clifton St., Philadelphia, Pa. (Jan. 6, 1902.)

Another case of severe female trouble cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, after the doctors had failed.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I was in poor health for several years. I had female trouble and was not able to do my housework alone. I felt tired, very nervous, and could not sleep. I doctored with several doctors. They doctored me for my stomach, but did not relieve me. I read in your book about your medicine, and thought I would try it. I did so, and am now cured and able to do my work alone, and feel good. I was always very poor, but now weigh one hundred and fifty pounds.

"I thank you for the relief I have obtained, and I hope that every woman troubled with female weakness will give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. I have recommended it to many of my friends."—MRS. MARIA BOWERS, Millersville, Ohio. (Aug. 15, 1901.)

Will not the volumes of letters from women made strong by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound convince all of the virtues of this medicine?

How shall the fact that it will help them be made plain?

Surely you cannot wish to remain weak, and sick, and discouraged, exhausted with each day's work. You have some derangement of the feminine organism, and Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you just as surely as it has others.

Sick Headache

is the result of arrested physiology of the stomach, liver or bowels, and is one of the first symptoms of constipation. Those who suffer with sick headache frequently resort to the use of headache powders, irritating cathartics, which it is true do relieve headache by dulling the sensations of the sympathetic nerves, but such medicines never remove the cause, and to be candid, are really dangerous, death having been known to occur directly from their use.

Christening a Railway.

Engineers are, as a rule, sternly utilitarian, but there are occasions on which they indulge in sentimental practices. One of these occurred the other day on the completion of the first transcontinental railway to Africa. When the plate-laying gangs from Bulawayo and Salisbury, respectively, came within twenty chains of each other a telegram was sent to the contractors and engineers, who at once arrived on the scene. The rails were joined and two engines proceeded slowly toward each other from each side. Attached to the drawhead of the engine from Salisbury was a bottle of champagne and as the two engines met it was broken and the new railway was named in the orthodox manner.

One Occasion When Dr. Hall's Memory Was at Fault.

Dr. John Hall, the late pastor of the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian church, was very proud of his memory for 30 years and faces. Strangers wondered at his readiness in calling by name the numerous members of the Sunday School connected with the church. But one of the elders of his church tells of one occasion when the doctor showed no evidence of his remarkable gift.

"While Dr. Hall was taking his customary walk down Fifth Avenue one morning," he said, "a young man stopped him, saying:

"'Good morning, Dr. Hall, I'm very glad to see you. Don't you remember me?'"

"The doctor, after scrutinizing him for some seconds, replied: 'I must confess that I have no recollection of ever having seen you. Are you sure that you know me?'"

"'Positive,' answered the youth, 'and it's strange you don't recall me, for you officiated at an occasion of great importance to me. Why, you baptized me in Dublin twenty-one years ago.'"—New York Times.

The Dog Around Town.

Have you feasted to-day, old fellow? Had a sniff of some meat or a bone? Were you gen'rously fed upon gravy and bread?

By some one who called you their own? Your ribs, sir! How plainly they're showing!

Your legs seem uncertain and weak! Have you searched every street for a morsel to eat?

Are you just a town dog, sir? Come, speak!

Were you housed from the snowstorm last night, sir? Did you sleep within some warm bed? Did you hear the wind roar past the closed stable door?

While dreams of green fields filled your head? Or did you crawl into some alley To curl up and shiver and know The voice of slow death in the wind's icy breath?

'Neath your soft, creeping blanket of snow?

Has any one patted your head, sir? Or noted your great, sunken eye? Have your unkempt ears heard any kind, gentle word?

From some human friend passing by? Or have folks just kicked you aside, sir? Why, you're trembling now, where you stand!

Have they struck you so much that you quake at my touch?

'And cower at the sight of my hand?

It's the way of the world, poor old fellow!

Just a struggle for bread, or a bone; And some of us know how you feel when you go.

'To your pup in the alley, alone! Were you sleek and well cared for and handsome?

Friends would feed you and love you on sight!

But it's different, sir, with a poor, luckless cur.

Just a dog around town! There, good-night!

—Colorado Springs Gazette.

The Midnight Hour.

The world is sleeping, but I waking lie And watch the moonbeams creep across the floor:

I hear the clock proclaim, "No more—no more"

Will time return when once it passes by? Yet I impatient wait the lagging day, And plan to fill each hour with busy care:

Too slow the moments pass, too slow the fair

Faint light of dawn is moving on its way.

Yet in some coming sight, how far, how near,

I cannot tell—it surely waits for me— Those lingering moments I should find more dear

Than rain to mariners adrift at sea; For I shall watch and wait the breaking day, Knowing that I, with sight, shall pass away.

Ownership of Stage "Business." One of the peculiar things about a copyrighted play is that any little piece of business or any new lines which may be inserted in the manuscript while a stock company is playing the drama belong thereafter to the man who owns the copyright.

Every time a stock company rents a play for production from the owner of the copyright it is cut, interlined and added to before it is produced. A stage manager, for instance, may interpolate some speeches in order to work up to the introduction of a song or specialty, or he may strengthen the climax by putting in some new and strong lines. Often these interpolated lines prove to be the most striking in the play and make decided hits. If they are left in when the manuscript goes back to its owner, they become his property absolutely and may not be used by the man who wrote them in any other production; therefore shrewd managers, before they return a play to its owner, always take great pains to erase every scrap of correction or interlineation. In this way only may they keep what really belongs to them.—Chicago Tribune.

She got along all right until the clerk asked: "Mother's maiden name, please." "I don't quite understand, I'm afraid," she said hesitatingly. "I mean your mother's name when she was a girl," explained the clerk. "How should I know? I don't like impertinence, sir! How should I know? I didn't know her when she was a girl. The idea! G. W. BLACK.

Editor Andrews

As my letter to the DISPATCH was to be continued I will try and give you in as short a space as possible what came under my observation. Since I wrote you last we spent a pleasant week in Kansas; out of 7 days we stayed there it rained five, was not troubled with dust; the river came up in one night about twenty feet and kept on rising until it reached the twenty-five foot mark and it went down as fast as it came up.

We left Ottawa Wednesday night May 27, for the last end of our journey. We took a sleeper and retired immediately but I thought it "waker" for I was unable to sleep much. Daylight gave me a chance to see western Kansas. Wheat was looking good; in the middle of the state it is pretty much drowned out. The farther west we get the poorer country, until we strike the great sand plains where nothing but sage brush and prairie dogs exist. There are hundreds of cattle to be seen but they were so thin you could not see them very far and skeletons of hundreds more showed it was not a healthy country for cattle. This continued clear to the mountains of Colorado.

Once in a while the train would stop at a half-starved looking village, mostly maintained for railroad purposes. After we commenced to go up among the foot hills we began to see more signs of habitation where the streams of the mountains could be controlled for irrigation, the ground was fairly productive and the farther we go up the more marked this seemed. Here the mountain scenery began to be more interesting. We got into Pueblo about 1:30 two hours late. From there the news agent would point out the different points of interest.

The first was the Pikes Peak which could be seen from the car quite plain being about forty miles distant towering way above the other points its snow clad summit easily distinguishable. The next point of interest was Carson City. To the right we see the state penitentiary with the convicts at work in the quarries, then in a few minutes we are at Royal Gorge, one of the most wonderful marks of nature. Imagine a narrow chasm only 60ft wide, the Arkansas river rushing madly along the railroad tracks and the crags towering aloft 2,500 feet above you and you have but a faint idea of what the real thing is. This sight alone was worth every dollar it cost. After several hours spent in passing through the most delightful scenery we arrived at Leadville, famous for its mines also for being the highest city in the world, being 10,418 feet above sea level. Here we turn in again in the Pullman humped-back sleeper and pass another of those dark brown sleepers missing the scenery through Tennessee pass, Grand Canyon and others. When daylight breaks puts an end to a horrible night, we are passing through the foot hills on the west side of the Rockies, the same river only flowing west is alongside, but is called the Colorado. This country is a grayish looking clay and very hilly not worth a dollar except where they can irrigate. We travel all day through this country varied only by patches of irrigated soil, and arrive at Ogden, Utah about four.

The Trajectory of a Thing.

The trajectory of a thing is the path of a bullet or anything else passing through the air from the gun to the place where it strikes. Generally the word is applied only to bullets and cannon balls. In shooting at an object near at hand you aim point blank, because the bullet practically reaches the target before it falls at all, but when you fire at a distant object you must aim above it, so that the bullet may have room to fall and yet hit the object. The desire of every marksman is to get a trajectory as flat as possible, so that the bullet shall have no need of falling very far. A flat trajectory is obtained by increasing the speed of the bullets, by diminishing their size and increasing the powder charge.

Superstitions About Bread.

In Brittany when a housewife begins to knead dough she makes a cross with her right hand, the left being placed in the trough. If a cat enters the room, it is believed the bread will not rise. It is supposed that certain women can cause the dough to multiply itself. On the coast of the channel the dough is adjured to imitate the heaven, the miller and the baker and to rise.

The oven is a sacred object and connected with crowds of superstitions. The oven is dedicated, with ceremonies. In certain places in Brittany the wood is watered with blessed water. Bread must not be cooked on certain days, as on Holy Friday or during the night of All Saints, when the ghosts would eat it.

I have been troubled for some time indigestion and with sour stomach says Mrs. Sarah W. Curtis, of Lee, Mass., and have been taking Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets which have helped me very much so that I can eat many things that before I could not. If you have any trouble with your stomach why not take these Tablets and get well?

The Monkey's Reasoning Powers.

The monkey's intelligence has never been able to arrive at a point which enables that animal to achieve the untying of a knot. You may tie a monkey with a cord fastened with the simplest form of common knot, and unless the beast can break the string or gnaw it in two he will never get loose. To untie the knot requires observation and reasoning power, and, though a monkey may possess both, he has neither in a sufficient degree to enable him to overcome the difficulty.

A Weak Stomach

Indigestion is often caused by over-eating. An eminent authority says the harm done thus exceeds that from the excessive use of alcohol. Eat all the good food you want but don't over-load the stomach. A weak stomach may refuse to digest what you eat, then you need a good digestant like Kodol, which digests your food without the stomach's aid. This rest and be wholesome tonic Kodol contains cod liver oil. Dieting unnecessary. Kodol quickly relieves the feelings of fullness and bloating from which some people suffer after meals. Absolutely cures indigestion.

Elizabethan Excess Laws.
 In striking contrast to the present laws to prevent habitual drunkenness were those passed in the reign of Queen Elizabeth. The Lansdowne manuscripts in the British museum record that in 1594 orders were set down by the lords and others of her majesty's privy council for the reformation of the great disorders committed by the excessive number of alehouses, which the justices were ordered to reduce. The publicans were compelled to give to the constable of the parish the name and business of every one who frequented their houses and were forbidden to have any games played therein. On Sundays no persons dwelling within a mile of the public house were allowed to enter except substantial householders traveling to church, and then only for a reasonable time to refresh themselves. Curiously, the chief complaint against publicans was the "brewing stronger ale and beer than is wholesome for man's body."—London Chronicle.

THE FLIGHT OF AN EMPRESS

[Original.]
 The second empire had fallen, and the Empress Eugenie, like her predecessor, Marie Antoinette, awaited the coming of a mob. The shouts of the malcontents already rang in the garden of the Tuilleries. Then the crowd broke into the reserved garden before the palace and tore down the imperial eagles. Now comes the cry of "Vive la republique!"

"Let me entreat your majesty," said Prince Metternich, the Austrian ambassador, "to leave the palace."
 "I add my entreaties," said Chevalier Nigra, the Italian ambassador, "to those of his excellency."

It was a critical moment. The empress was in the rose colored room among her attendants of the service of honor, who were trembling to be relieved from duty and to save themselves. The empress declined to leave.

"Madame," said her secretary, Pietri, "your refusal to depart will cause a general massacre of those whose duty it is to remain with you."
 "General Millinet," said the empress, "can you defend the palace without bloodshed?"

"I fear not, madame."
 "Then all is over."

When those in attendance perceived that her majesty had yielded, there was a quick sigh of relief, though renewed yells at the front of the palace brought a terror lest the flight had been delayed too long. All remembered the breaking into the palace at Versailles of the mob from which Marie Antoinette had fled and the massacre of the Swiss guard that defended her. Breathlessly the service of honor waited Eugenie's departure. First she must bid farewell to them. When this had been finished, she left the room with Pietri, Mme. Lebreton and the two ambassadors and passed through the galleries leading to the Louvre. At the same moment the mob was breaking into the front of the palace. Suddenly Pietri found the way blocked by a locked door. Pale as a ghost, he cried: "The key! The key!"

For a moment it seemed that they were lost, but suddenly one of the attendants ran forward with the key and unlocked the door. Hurrying past pictures that the rulers of France had been centuries in collecting, the party made an exit at the end of the palace farthest from the mob and entered the place on which stood the Church of St. Germain l'Auxerrois. The whole city was in an uproar. A mob was passing down Rue Rivoli; another was coming from an opposite direction. Metternich, who had left his carriage on the Rue Rivoli when he entered the Tuilleries, went to seek it. A street boy, recognizing Eugenie, shouted, "There's the empress!" Fortunately a cab was driven past. Nigra stopped it and, opening the door, put in the empress and Mme. Lebreton, then turned to the boy and endeavored to stop his mouth. The driver of the cab, seeing the terrible wave of revolution pouring down the street, belabored his horse with the stump of a whip and drove—no one knew where. When Metternich returned, the empress had gone. She was deprived of the two ambassadors' protection, but she was safer where she was.

On went the cab with the woman who for years had been the first lady of France, now a fugitive from a crowd of her infuriated subjects. Farther and farther their hideous yells were left behind till at last they had become a confused murmur. Then the cabman drew rein and asked where he should drive the occupants.

Where? The question was the most serious Eugenie had ever been called upon to answer in all her romantic life. Where? To the home of one of the favorites of her late court? Should she seek those of the diplomatic corps? Would it be safe to rely upon one prominent in the corps legislatif, the commander of the army? All of these were passed in review and dismissed. Some old friend must temporarily hide her. Deciding upon one, she told the cabman to drive to her home. The friend was not there. The fugitive was driven to the house of another and another. None was at home. They were either mingling in the exciting events or were hiding from those who had known them for court favorites.

Then a happy thought struck the empress. In trying to remember one she could trust who did not live far from where she was at the time it occurred to her that the house of an American dentist, Dr. Evans, was but a short distance away. She gave the coachman an order to drive there.

Arriving at the house, she sent in word that a lady wished to see the doctor.

"Tell the lady that I am about to sit down to dinner."
 "The lady says she must see you," said the messenger.
 Evans answered the summons, a summons from the ex-empress of France.

With all the respect he had ever paid her when at the height of her power Dr. Evans took her in and with his wife befriended her in every possible way. This was fraught with danger. Had it become known that the empress was in his house he and his family would have had to suffer with her, for his flag would not have protected them against an irresponsible mob.

Then came the flight to the coast, Evans protecting his imperial guest by the way, the crossing of the English channel, safety in England. There the deposed empress lives on her estate. If she found an asylum among Englishmen, it was an American who enabled her to escape her bloodthirsty subjects and reach their shores in safety.

MICHIGAN LEGISLATURE.

Primary reform was shunted to the side track by the senate Thursday, and the so-called machine men won out. The question was whether the senate would accede to the request of the house that the Baird bill be returned to the house, the intention being to amend it by putting in members of the legislature and county officers.

Blunder twine will not be made in the Jackson prison as the bill to establish the plant was killed by the house on Thursday, so an appropriation of $400,000 will not come into the tax levy at present. The bill evoked a warm debate. It was noticeable that nearly all the farmers were in favor of the bill, and Representative Shea declared, in a strong speech, that organized labor also favored it.

The Paddock bill to tax sleeping cars is laid to rest and a careful examination of it shows that it would really have accomplished little if anything had it been passed. The tax commissioners have estimated that if the sleeping car companies would pay taxes on their cars according to car mileage in Michigan, the amount of their annual tax would be about $40,000.

The senate Tuesday afternoon passed the Moriarty bill establishing a binder twine plant at Jackson prison by a vote of 26 to 8. Senators Glasgow, Scripps and Vaughan, voted nay, while Barnes, Fuller and Lockerby did not vote. The bill makes an appropriation of $400,000 for the establishing of the plant, of which sum $125,000 is to be used for the plant and machinery and $275,000 for a "revolving fund" for the purchase of raw material.

Representative Dunn's bill providing that liquor dealers on the St. Clair Flats might escape with a $250 license fee and be permitted to do business six months in the year, failed to pass in the house. Members figure that if any deviation from the regular $500 rule is made, it will create a precedent that may result in special legislation for liquor men all over the state who want to do business only part of the year.

Early in the session there was a contest of the seat of Representative Werline, of the Menominee Democrat. It is customary in such cases for the legislators to order the expenses of the contestants paid. Werline did not put in his bill until recently, when he presented an account of $300. Representative Colby's committee on elections cut this down to $150, and at that amount it was allowed by the house.

Among the bills passed was the one providing for four additional oil inspectors, for which Inspector Judson has been lobbying, though it was introduced by Senator Glazier, and which was defeated a few days ago. Rodgers, of Muskegon, opposed it, saying, "It is an outrage that any state employe or head of department should lobby here for such a measure, and we ought not to permit it."

The bill to reduce the number of members of the pardon board and increase their pay has been passed by both houses, the houses having put it through on third reading this morning. Representative Morrice tried to have it amended so that the rate of pay for members would be $5 per day as at present, instead of $7 as provided in the bill, but the motion was defeated.

Some legal defects were found in the act relative to manufacturing and mercantile corporations passed and signed some time ago. These defects were remedied in the house committee on private corporations and the bill as amended was re-enacted on motion of Representative Denby. It is expected that the same action will be taken by the senate early next week.

The Battle Creek Fire.

Startling in the extreme was the testimony of J. L. Stevens before the coroner's inquest in the Battle Creek sanitarium barn fire. Inquest. Under cross-examination Stevens said he was a man called from above. He had an inkling from the Almighty that there was to be a split in the Adventist faith. He had read Mrs. White's prophecies and believed them; he thought they should be fulfilled.

Prosecutor Hooper then asked openly: "As a firm believer in Mrs. White's prophecies of the destruction of Adventist buildings by fire, would you do your best to see that they were fulfilled?"

Stevens jumped to his feet to preach at once, but finally, when forced to either a negative or affirmative answer, he said he would do anything to help, except to use force. In regard to the Review and Herald fire he said: "The Review and Herald did a work antagonistic to God, to Adventism and Christianity."

He also admitted considering the sanitarium fire a judgment of God. Stevens when asked many questions about the most recent fire could not remember.

Stevens states that he is not an Adventist; he is a religion by himself, but he believes thoroughly in Mrs. White and her prophecies, and that she will triumph when the church splits.

A Boy Confesses.

Isaac T. Womer, who was arrested Wednesday night on the charge that he had set fire to the Battle Creek Sanitarium barn and caused the death of J. B. Paul, was arraigned before Justice Merritt and pleaded not guilty. He could not give the $2,000 bail required. The confession, which led to Womer's arrest, was made to Prosecutor Hooper by Arthur Brinkinger, 16 years of age, who has been employed by the Sanitarium Association as a call boy.

Womer went into the barn, and I followed him. Womer lighted a cigar, then threw the lighted match into a heap of straw that lay near a horse stall on the west side of the barn. The straw caught fire and Womer said: "Hurry up and go up with me to see Mr. Foster, the barn man. I ain't feeling well." I believe that he was partially intoxicated. The boy claims he had kept silent as Womer threatened his life. Womer was not told of the lad's confession. He strenuously denies having had anything to do with the fire. He used to be a structural iron worker in Chicago, but has been employed at the sanitarium as a teamster. He drinks and, it is said, uses drugs as well.

Mrs. McKnight Is Cool.

The only development in the case of Mrs. Mary McKnight, confined in the Kalamazoo county jail pending the investigation into the death of John Murphy and family, was the exhumation of the bodies of Murphy, his wife and 3-months-old baby at Fife Lake Wednesday. No warrant has yet been issued against Mrs. McKnight. Her attorney, an able man, seems content to await action upon the part of the prosecution instead of moving heaven and earth to secure her immediate release. The prisoner's demeanor excites remark. "I never saw such nerve in a woman before," said Sheriff Creighton.

Children of Dust.

One cried: "Of the dust were you made;
God fashioned you out of the dust;
Of earth were you taken and ever
Your lust shall be after her lust.

"Your soul is a perishing breath—
A flutter of passionate wind
That hovers from shadow to shadow
Unpiloted, impotent, blind."

Yea, children of wind and of dust,
Clod-cumbered, encompassed with barn—
But the breath is the breath of God's rapture.
The dust is the dust of the stars!

Scrap of Carbon Paper

If one were looking for a cure for bashfulness, carbon paper would seem an unlikely thing to select. But it was a piece of this paper which, if it did not exactly cure John Kendall, at least overcame the effects of his shyness.

John's bashfulness was most pernicious, and while it had not retarded his career as a successful manufacturer, in the flourishing town of Schuylerville, it proved a very embarrassing possession when he was smitten with the tender passion.

In the first place, Margaret Little was "an authoress," and that alone was an awe-inspiring circumstance. To be able to write stories which met with occasional acceptance; to have the postman sometimes bring her thin letters containing checks, and not to be the grinning bearer of bulky packages of rejected manuscripts, placed her on a plane above other women—in John's eyes. Not that she needed such placing, for it would be futile to chronicle the angelic qualities with which he endowed her.

The trouble with this endowment process was that it was not disclosed to Margaret. John could write, and did write, letters teeming with sentiment. Of course, it was unfortunate that these letters were never sent. It was more unfortunate that he found himself unable to express in her presence the feelings which agitated his six feet of manhood.

He had made three attempts at a proposal, each of which had ended in stammering confusion and dire failure, and it is probable that the number would have been extended indefinitely, had not a rival appeared on the field.

Anyone who showed Margaret the slightest attention was a rival in John's view, and it seemed impossible that the editor of a New York magazine would come fifty miles to Schuylerville for the sole purpose of consulting Margaret about a series of stories for his periodical. If this innocent purpose brought the editor, something emotionally attractive in Margaret's pretty face must have induced his reappearance within a month, and it was during this second visit that John spurred himself to action.

On a June afternoon he deserted his desk and determinedly strode toward the Little homestead. His courage usually lasted until he passed the front gate, but on this occasion he was surprised to find it upholding him even after he had reached the veranda. It evaporated when he rang the bell. A maid told him that Miss Little had and he sat at Margaret's little desk and dashed off a few glowing periods on a sheet of her manuscript paper. When the effusion was finished it proved satisfactory, being, in fact, a condensation of the others which he had left unsent. He folded it neatly, and was reaching into a pigeonhole in Glanced shyly down at Margaret, the desk for an envelope, when he happened to glance out of the window.

Across the orchard came Margaret and the editor. The latter—a small, blonde, handsome man—was walking close beside his contributor, and looking smilingly into her beautiful eyes. After viewing the scene John was seized with panic at the thought of Margaret's reading his note immediately. The next instant he was striding away from the house, scattering bits of white paper to the June breezes.

He did not see Margaret for a week, and during that time deep despair held him for its own. Then an urgent business affair led him to call on her father, who was suffering from a slight illness, and was unable to leave the house.

When the interview with Mr. Little was at an end, and John reached the front door he found Margaret sitting on the veranda. He thought to pass her with a formal greeting, but his intentions usually went astray where she was concerned, and he was soon seated near her in a wide-armed veranda chair.

"I am sorry I missed you when you called last week," said Margaret after her father's illness had been discussed. "I'm sorry, too," John replied, mentally condemning the memory of the maid, whom he hoped had forgotten the incident.

"The girl said something about you leaving a note," continued Margaret. "Yes—er—an invitation to a picnic." John said weakly, "but the affair was postponed."

"Before you could write the note?" "No; I thought it would be postponed, so I changed my mind."

Margaret was looking demurely at a rose bush. "It has been postponed before," she murmured softly, but her companion did not hear the remark. "John," she said, in a louder tone, "I suppose it is only an invitation to a picnic that you would address me as your dearest Margaret."

John Kendall turned slowly, and regarded the object of his affections with bewilderment. He wondered if any of the torn bits of paper had been picked up and pieced together by Margaret, but he had scattered them so widely that that seemed impossible.

Miss Little, who had transferred her gaze from the rose bush to her lover's face, seemed to enjoy its expression. Then John rocked violently in the veranda chair in the hope that the action would induce mental stimulation, but it did not.

"Will you come with me for a moment?" Margaret asked, rising and entering the house.

John followed her to her study. There, on the little desk, was the pile of manuscript paper. Margaret took a note from the bosom of her dress, unfolded it slowly, and handed it to John.

"There was a piece of carbon paper among the top sheets," she said, "and this was under it," and John read an exact copy of the effusion he had addressed to Margaret the week before.

For a moment he looked helplessly at the note, then he glanced shyly down at Margaret, and the expression he saw in her eyes was entirely unlike that with which she had regarded the editor.

It seemed to say, "Speak for yourself, John," and had the stolid typewriter which stood on the desk risen to the occasion it would have added another love scene to its long list.

In the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Kendall, in Schuylerville, is a den, and on one of its walls hangs a bit of black paper in a gilt frame. When the curious question John about this paper he tells them its story, if they are worthy, and if they are unworthy he merely says that it is an impressionistic picture of the darkest hour before dawn.—Bennett Musson in Los Angeles Times.

YOUTHS WERE WELL TAUGHT

Destined to Govern, They Knew Need of Self-government.

A number of years ago Commodore Perry, speaking to the students of Anloch college, Ohio, told the following anecdote, illustrating the perfect discipline maintained among the naval cadets of his time:

"Some twenty-five years ago I was carelessly walking on the levee of a city of the Adriatic. A short distance from the shore lay a man-of-war at anchor. I called an oarsman, and told him to return for me in an hour.

"I wandered over the beautiful ship, admiring its guns, its keeping, its admirable appointments and its excellent management, shown by its condition. At the end of my hour I began to look for my oarsman. Just then I discovered a door on my right. I opened it, and in that room sat thirty-two boys. I had been there an hour and had not heard a stir enough to show that so much as a bird was alive on that boat.

"The youngest cadet came to the door and welcomed me with his cordial military salute. 'Boy, where is your teacher?' 'Gone ashore, sir.' 'Do you keep absolute order while he is gone?' 'Certainly, sir.'

"Then passing to the front, I said to one of the older boys: 'Young man, why do you act so differently from other boys? Are you afraid of being punished?'

"The cadet rose to his feet. 'Sir,' said he, 'you see before you thirty-two cadets. We all expect to govern others in our future work. The first element of a good governor is self-government; sir, we are practicing that.'

The commodore added: "That was twenty-five years ago. In the providence of God none of these young men have been called to eternity. I will now read you their names." And the audience recognized in each man a name famous in the navy of Great Britain, Germany, France or America.—From "Washington: Its Sights and Insights."

Owl Saved Him.

King Robert the Bruce, according to the well-known story, once owed his safety to a spider. Among the Tartars of Central Asia there is a belief that one of their khans or chiefs was preserved, long years ago, by the great horned owl. He had hidden in a thicket to avoid capture by some enemies. By and by his pursuers came to this spot. The first thing they saw was an owl sitting on a bush. What did this mean? It signified, in their eyes, that this bird would not rest quietly there if any man were lying concealed close by. Therefore they argued that the khan could not be there, and so they hurried on to search for him elsewhere. At nightfall the khan made his way to the camp of his men and told them how he had been saved from certain death. His story caused them ever afterward to look upon the owl with reverence and love. They wore its feathers in their caps as a pledge of victory.

Judge Siebecker's Unique Decision.

Judge Siebecker of Wisconsin has displayed Solomon-like wisdom in some of his decisions. Two men appeared before him. One was a butcher, who claimed that the defendant owed him $10 for a meat bill. The defendant, a strikingly thin and gaunt figure, denied the bill. Statements and counter-statements followed each other with great rapidity. The lie was passed, but the constable intervened. "When was this meat purchased which you sold the defendant?" asked the judge.

"During the past four weeks, your honor," declared the butcher.

"Then I decide this case in favor of the defendant," remarked the judge, deliberately, as he scrutinized the emaciated figure before him. "His appearance indicates that he has not eaten $10 worth of meat in his lifetime."—Boston Post.

Brief Chronicle of Matters of Importance

Roosevelt Will Clean House.

President Roosevelt fully approves the action of the postoffice officials in pressing the investigation of the department's affairs. It is his intention that the investigation shall be sweeping and thorough, and that every charge properly vouched for shall be probed to the bottom. Machen's statement that George E. Lorenz, of Toledo, O., was his partner in unifying enterprises, is confirmed by articles of incorporation in the possession of the postal authorities of the National Capital Copper Mining Co., a corporation organized at Alexandria, Va. Copies of the incorporation papers are in the possession of the postal authorities. The directors are named as follows in the incorporation papers: August W. Machen, Ohio, president; H. H. Rand, Wisconsin, vice-president; J. D. King, Wisconsin, secretary; H. M. Baker, New Hampshire, treasurer; George E. Lorenz, Ohio; T. E. Lee, District of Columbia; David H. Fenton, Indiana; Francis M. Criswell, District of Columbia, and Samuel W. Scott, Texas, directors. Mr. Rand is confidential clerk to the postmaster-general; Mr. King is chief of division in the rural free delivery and was an applicant to succeed George W. Beavers as chief of the salary and allowance division; Mr. Baker is a former representative from New Hampshire; Mr. Lorenz, formerly postmaster at Toledo, and once an official of the postoffice department; Mr. Fenton is the law clerk of the office of the auditor for the postoffice department. It has been alleged that the stock of this company was sold to employes of the postoffice department.

The South Carolina Floods.

The loss of life in the terrible cloudburst reported from Spartanburg, S. C., on Saturday is probably from 40 to 50. The total property loss in the entire section laid waste by the storm is likely to aggregate $2,000,000. The loss at Pacolet is placed at $1,000,000, summarized as follows: Mills Nos. 1 and 2, demolished; 28,000 spindles a wreck; 35,000 bales of cotton, $200,000 worth of cloth goods in company's store damaged; grist mill, cotton gin, postoffice, shoe shop, blacksmith shop, dental office, livery stable and Presbyterian church, all washed away. At Clifton the Converse mill with 51,000 spindles is entirely gone. The Clifton mill, with 27,000 spindles, is half washed away. The Dexter mill, with 30,000 spindles, is probably half ruined. All these mills belong to the Clifton Manufacturing Co. More than 500 people are homeless and 4,000 out of employment. The bodies of 33 persons were caught floating in the river at Clifton, 10 miles from Spartanburg.

Horrible Turkish Outrages.

Horrible details are arriving of the slaughter of the inhabitants of the village of Smerdash, European Turkey, south of Lake Presba, May 21, by Bashi-Bazouks. It appears that on the arrival of the Bashi-Bazouks, Chakalaroff's band of insurgents withdrew to the mountains without sustaining any loss. The Turks bombarded the village, but as their fire was ineffective they set fire to the village on all sides and commenced a general massacre, slaughtering women, children and the aged. About 300 houses were burned and upward of 200 persons, mostly women and children, were killed. The women and girls were murdered while resisting outrage. Whole households were slain. One family of seven were slain and their bodies were heaped on the hearth. Not a living soul was left in the village. Some of those who attempted to flee were captured and had their ears and noses cut off before they were butchered.

St. Louis Washed Out.

Two hundred people in the village of Black Walnut, on the north bank of the Missouri, 25 miles northwest of St. Louis, on Saturday were surrounded by rapidly rising water and all means of escape cut off. The Congole levee, just south of East St. Louis, broke at midnight, and the 200 colored families who inhabit that district were driven from their homes. There was no loss of life. It is estimated that within a radius of 20 miles from St. Louis the food has rendered 25,000 people homeless and submerged 200,000 acres of fertile farming lands. Martial law has been proclaimed in East St. Louis. Men with guns are patrolling the levees and have orders to shoot down thieves and levee breakers.

Machen Is Indicted.

The postoffice inspectors have returned to Washington with new information tending to establish a connection between A. W. Machen and postal supply concerns at Toledo and Adrian. One inspector claims to have reason for the suspicion that certain postoffice officials have netted large profits from investments in these supply concerns. He reports that during a term of years postal officials made a profit of about $50,000 from these investments. Machen was indicted by the federal grand jury Friday.

President Roosevelt returned to Washington Friday night from his memorable trip of over two months throughout the west. He was given a hearty reception by the people of the capital.

The Ohio Convention.

Col. Myron T. Herrick, of Cleveland, was nominated for governor of Ohio by acclamation by the Republican convention Thursday. He received an ovation when conducted to the hall and accepted the nomination in a speech. The platform commends President Roosevelt's fidelity to duty, his adherence to President McKinley's policies, and "his own proved ability in his high office, showing him in every way worthy of election by the people to be their chief magistrate," and favors his nomination for president in 1904.

In lauding Senators Foraker and Hanna the platform declares: "The reelection of Senator Hanna is a distinct national demand upon our state, and we hereby cordially promise him the undivided support of the entire Republican party of Ohio."

Gov. Nash's administration is commended and the extension of labor laws, state and national, recommended, so as to secure for labor just recognition in the settlement of differences. Better roads are demanded, extension of rural free delivery favored, and isthmian canal and pension legislation viewed with admiration.

Gov. Taft's rule in the Philippines is praised and the foreign policy of the United States commended, as guarding weaker nations from aggression and giving the Monroe doctrine a vital force greater than ever before. The development of the navy to the highest efficiency is indorsed.

His Last Hope Realized

From the Sentinel, Gebo, Mont. In the first opening of Oklahoma to settlers in 1889, the editor of this paper was among the many seekers after fortune who made the big race one fine day in April. During his traveling and afterwards his camping upon his claim, he encountered much bad water, which, together with the severe heat, gave him a very severe diarrhoea which it seemed almost impossible check, and along in June the case became so bad that he expected to die One day one of his neighbors thought him one small bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy as a last hope. A big dose was given him while he was rolling about on the ground in great agony and in a few minutes the dose was repeated. The good effect of the medicine was soon noticed and within an hour the patient was taken his first sound sleep for a fortnight. That one little bottle worked a complete cure, and he cannot help but feel grateful. The season for bowel disasters being at hand suggests this item. For sale by F. A. Sigler,

"Why Should Calamity Be Full of Words?"

The mere saying of words is easy, and some men devote their whole lives to it. They talk rather than act. The calamity howlers in any community are of this kind. While the unsuccessful business man is talking the successful man is acting. When he speaks he uses words, but he tells facts. He seldom, however, depends upon his own voice. He brings to his aid the trumpet tongued voice of the press. He purchases space in the advertising columns of his local paper, and he uses it to good advantage. This is your local paper. There is space in these columns for use. Are you adding its strength to your voice? Properly used it will aid you.
