OBITUARY.

MRS. H. M. PADLEY.

Christiana Gamble was born in Commerce, Oakland Co., August 12, 1837, and died Oct. 15, 1903. She was married to Henry Padley Jan. 3, 1866 and moved to her home in Marion, where she has since resided. In early life she embraced her Savior and has ever since lived a pure, devoted life. She leaves to mourn their loss, a husband, a son, William, of Washington, a daughter, Mrs. Chas. Teeple of Pinckney, a little grandchild, Norma Teeple. Also her mother, 93 years of age, a sister, Mrs. Wm. Hale, and two brothers, John and James Gamble, all of whom reside near Milford.

The funeral services were held from the residence in Marion, Sunday afternoon at 1 o'clock, conducted by Rev. Chas. Simpson, of Detroit. The large number of friends and neighbors who attended the funeral showed the esteem in which she was held in the community. The family have the sympathy of everyone.

Beautiful toiler, thy work all done,
Beautiful soul into glory gone,
Beautiful life with its crown now won,
God giveth thee rest.

Rest from all sorrow and watching and fears
Rest from all possible sighing and tears,
Rest through God's endless, wonderful years,

At Home with the blest,
Beautiful spirit free from all stain,
Ours the heartache, the sorrow and pain,
Thine is the glory and infinite gain,

Thy slumber is sweet,
Peace on the brow and the eyelids so cold,
Peace in the heart neath the white folded palm,

Peace dropping down like a wonderful balm
From the head to the feet,
"It was so sudden" our white lips said,
How we shall miss her, the beautiful dead,
Who'll take the place of the precious one fled,

But God knoweth best,
We know He watches the sparrows that fall
Hears the sad cry of the grieved ones that call

Friends, husband, loved ones, He loveth them all;
We can trust for the rest.

MARY L. LATHROP.

SUDDENLY CALLED

This village was saddened last week when the news came Wednesday that Mrs. Henry Padley had that day been stricken with paralysis while shopping in a store in Howell. She was taken to the home of her sister-in-law, Mrs. Drury, where everything was done that could be by loving hands and medical skill, but the grim reaper had laid his hand upon her, and she passed away at one o'clock Thursday. She was a woman loved by all and will be missed by the entire community as well as by the family.

Chapter XX—Continued.
On the whole this mail booty was not disappointing. Pope kept the newspapers to read; there was no literature in the little ship, and he believed these West Indian journals would interest Miss Crystal. When the bags had been thoroughly sacked, every letter and parcel opened and flung away. Pope read out the figures he had entered and told the men how much more they were worth in solid money since eight bells had been struck.

"Are you satisfied?" he said.
Yes, they were all satisfied.
"Mark now, my hearts," he exclaimed, "that this is only the beginning; this cruise isn't up until I'm worth ten thousand pounds, and ye'll all be rich men when that's been brought about. You can fill your cans and drink success; this is a good day's work."

Going aft, Capt. Pope met Laura ascending the companion way from her cabin. He stopped at once, with his usual low bow and flourish.

"Have you searched the mails?" she asked.

"Yes," he answered, leaning opposite to her against a bulkhead and laughing, and adoring her.

"What did you find?"

"Certain things proper to enrich us," he replied.

"How can you have the heart to steal, Captain-Pope?"

"Because, besides my hand, I must possess an estate to lay at your feet." This was put in a rather Irish way, and unconsciously there was a touch of the brogue in his delivery. His accent amused her and she smiled, and then looked up at Crystal, a little piece of whom she could just catch a sight of as he sat on the edge of the skylight.

"If you had been the owner of the Thetis, I should not find you an advocate for piracy," said Miss Laura who seemed disposed to linger, as

"Come you with me," called out Crystal to Laura, and the girl, with a single glance of entreaty and fear at Captain Pope, at once arose and went up the steps after her cousin.

Pope stood for some moments lost in thought leaning with his hand upon the table. "I who murdered," ran his thought, "I who, at the risk of my life, plundered the old woman, not less in his interests than in my own. But—" he continued to muse, then, pondering deeply, he stepped into his cabin.

"I hope you have not asked me to come on deck to quarrel with me," says Laura, fastening her eyes, full of spirit and temper, upon Crystal's rugged, storm-turrowed face.

"I know my duty as your relation," he answered, "and I know what Pope's duty is as a gentleman. I'll do mine, so help me the gods; and he'll have to do his," he answered, stepping so as to oblige her to walk with him.

"But he is doing his duty as a gentleman!" exclaimed the girl, with a mounting color. "He's kind to me, and courteous. It is you who are brutal." He looked sternly at her. "If father and mother were both on board this ship, they would find nothing in the behavior of Captain Pope to object to, however much they might abominate his and your trade."

In a moment Pope returned to the deck. He was smoking a cigar. He went to the wheel and looked at the brig's course. Then with his seawardly blue eyes he narrowly circled the horizon. Crystal leaned against the bulwark rail, and Laura a little at a loss took up the papers upon the skylight, and seemed to read their addresses. Pope called down the companion hatch, and the man who was preparing the table for that last early meal, which at sea is called supper, brought up a chair which the captain placed against the skylight in the shadow of the trysail.

Miss Laura seated herself. Captain though she enjoyed a conversation with the heroic Irishman, while her cousin sucked his old pipe above.

"I dare not argue with you," said Pope. "Your eyes drive the logic out of my head. Miss Crystal—Miss Laura—Laura," he cried, with a sudden passion which anybody might see he could not control, "you will be my wife?"

The piece of Crystal that was showing in the skylight disappeared; his newspaper fluttered and vanished like a butterfly.

"It is ridiculous!" she answered, with nothing but a faint tremble of voice to mark loss of self-control. "We are strangers—we are scarcely known to each other."

"You could not be better known to me," he exclaimed, approaching her and seizing her hand, which she allowed him to retain, "had we sailed round the world together."

Just as he said this Captain Crystal came down the companion steps.

"Are you coming on deck, Laura?" says he, pausing.

"Why do you object to this young lady being in my company?" said Pope, and he looked at Crystal with dangerous eyes.

"My wish is that my cousin should be left alone by you while she's aboard this brig," replied Crystal, in a harsh and savage voice.

Pope, without unfolding his arms, with the same dangerous expression burning in his blue eyes, eyed him critically for a moment or two, as though hesitating to decide whether he was drunk or mad. He then said, pointing with a rapid, menacing gesture to the companion hatch:

"Go on deck, sir, and look after the ship!"

Pope pulled out a penknife, and cut open three or four newspapers, one of which he handed to the young lady, himself retaining another.

"Crystal," sings out Pope on a sudden, "what d'ye say to this?"

The square man came leisurely forward with his newspaper in one hand and his pipe in the other.

"Here surely seems something in the shape of booty," said Pope, with a little excitement. "What's the date of this sheet?" He looked at it and read it aloud. "So! By George, Jonathan, we ought to fall in with her!" and he read out of the body of the paper full particulars of a large West Indian of seven hundred tons, which was to sail from Kingston on a date that made it four or five days after that of the issue of the paper he held. She was a far richer ship than the Thetis. She was to carry twelve thousand pounds in specie; several valuable consignments were mentioned.

He put down his paper, went below and returned in a few minutes with a large chart of the Atlantic. He put this chart down upon the deck close beside Laura and knelt upon it, and Crystal likewise knelt.

"A week's ambling should bring us abreast," said Pope rising, and Crystal also rose, and the wiry chart collected itself up like a thing of life. "If we can take her, she should suffice."

"There will be another fight," said Laura, folding and unfolding her paper. "How dreadful! Both of you may lose your lives, and all for a little money which will not do either of you good, because it will not be honestly come by."

"When I get my fortune ashore," says Pope, scolding at her, "I will have it blessed, and then the money will be as sweet and chaste as though earned by that sort of sweat which is as holy as prayer."

CHAPTER XXI.

The Slaver.

The dusk glowed out of the east and overwhelmed the west; it was loaded with stars and some clouds hovered over the edge of the sea.

"Crystal," said Pope, speaking as though the unpleasant passage between them that afternoon had clean gone out of his mind, "what d'ye say to heaving the brig to every nightfall for the night? She's not to give us the go-by in the dark, John."

"I wouldn't heave to yet if I was you," answered Crystal, "we han't closed her by leagues."

"We must fall in with her at all costs," says Pope; "for I want to see an end to this jaunt. Miss Crystal, will you permit me to conduct you to the plain supper table of a pirate?"

With some ceremony he clasped her hand. Crystal walked away to the wheel and took out the binnacle lamp to light his pipe, and replaced it, but contrived in so doing to throw the sheen of the flame over the helmsman's face.

"You're one of the Thetis's men, ain't you?" said he.

"Yes, sir," was the answer.

"How d'ye like this life?" said Crystal.

"Why, I ain't seen enough of it yet to make up my mind," replied the man. "There's a bit of the swag below a-coming to my share, and if the skipper was to knock off now it isn't me as would be the first to sing out." Crystal sucked a moment or two at his pipe in silence.

"I'm beginning to think," he said, with an affected yawn, "that this life's out and away to risky for a man who values his neck and reputation. And though my friend Captain Pope makes light of the difficulty, cuss me if I can understand how we're going to dispose of the booty, and not get nabbed, every mother's son of us, and strung up."

"I suppose," said the fellow at the helm, "if any of us men want to go clear of this job the cap'n would be willin' to tranship us."

"Ay, by sending ye adrift."

"That 'ud be bleeding hard," said the helmsman. "No cap'n's got a right to force a man into being a pirate without his consent."

"Sound some of the men forward, your own shipmates particularly," says Crystal, with a note of carelessness in his voice. "You needn't mention this conversation of ours. Report to me privately. If more than half the ship's company are willing to abandon the cruise, then I may induce the captain to give it up, and make for safety while our necks are our own."

Saying this he moved away, and stood beside the skylight, and, unperceived, looked down.

He witnessed a love scene, and involuntarily clenched his hands. Pope had murdered a blockader, he had barbarously plundered an aunt. He had killed, robbed and scuttled, and Crystal quite understood that the handsome dog, unless he cheated the law by his own hand, or was collared by disease and walked off, must be hanged. He was enraged and mortified also by Laura's indifference to his views and wishes. She was allowing Pope to make love to her, and Jonathan ground his teeth.

Laura, who clearly listened with interest, often with a light of pleasure in her beautiful face, and sometimes she would flash a look at her worshiper.

Doubtless she knew that her cousin was on deck, but the infrequent glance she would shoot through the skylight sank into the dusk past the face glimmering to the skylight.

Crystal took off his hat and wiped his brow. The meteoric dust was very plentiful over the mastheads, and the horizon opened northeast against a gentle play of violet lightning. The square man was thirsty, he was also hungry, and Grindal being too drunk to relieve him his irritability increased because he observed that the couple in the cabin made no signs of coming on deck.

Quitting the skylight he walked slowly forward. The gloom was deep betwixt the rails, and all about the neighborhood of the caboose, owing to the inky dye cast into it by the shadowing of the sails, and the dusk was spangled with the glowing bowls of smokers, who, finding the temperature of the 'tween-decks oppressive, had cast themselves upon the deck and lay in groups.

What They Do.

"Do you think the so-called manly art, as exemplified by prize fighting, is of any real benefit?"

"Certainly. Prize fights serve to stimulate."

"What?"

"Betting."

Strictly Nautical.

"What will the cup seekers be that follow Shamrock III?"

"They'll be IV.-and-afters, of course."

LIVE STOCK

When the Lamb Comes.

As the time for the coming of the youngsters approaches, the shepherd will be making preparations, says A. D. Gamley. If the lambs are coming in May, very little is necessary to be done, but if in March, and the sheep pen is not warm enough for new-born lambs, then warmer quarters must be provided. My plan is to have a shed built of poles, covered with straw and well banked with manure, into which turn the cattle, making the vacated stalls into temporary pens by nailing a few boards across the ends. Now for the lambs. As the ewes bring them into the warm stable, where the pens have already been prepared, examine the udder, draw some milk, so that the lamb will get it more freely, clean all the wool and filth away from around it, so that the lamb will have no trouble in getting hold of the teat. If the lamb is strong, don't be in too great a hurry to get him to suck, he will soon find the teat, and the less they are handled the better. If the lamb is weak, assist it to the teat, holding it up for a few times, or until he finds his legs. If too weak to suck, draw some milk from the ewe into a warm tea cup, feeding two or three spoonfuls at a time, until strong enough to help itself. If a lamb is chilled and apparently lifeless, pour a teaspoonful of gin in a little warm water down its throat, and submerge it once, all but the head, in warm water, or put in a warm oven. The latter, the hot air cure, I think is much the surest plan. I have brought round lambs in that way that have been picked up for dead. Never give up a lamb that has been chilled and never sucked, without trying one of the aforesaid methods for its recovery; the chances for that lamb living are a good deal better than for an ailing lamb a few days or a week old.

As the lambing progresses, the shepherd will have observed that some ewes are much heavier milkers than others, and that the poor milkers very often have twins; put one of the twins on an ewe with a single lamb and a good milker. The best and easiest plan is to pick out a ewe giving indications of being a good mother, and watch for her lambing. As soon as she has lambed, and before she gets up, place the twin lamb beside the newborn lamb, and roll and rub them together, which will give the same appearance and smell to both, and when the ewe turns round to survey her progeny she will never suspect the fraud, but will commence licking both lambs. I have never seen this plan fail. If a ewe loses her lamb, make her foster a twin (aim to make every ewe raise a lamb). This requires a little patience. My plan is to skin the dead lamb and sew the pelt on to the twin lamb, putting the dam and foster lamb in a dark pen for a few days, always keeping a sharp look-out to see if the lamb is doing all right. It is as well in their case to tie up the ewe for the first day or so. Take off the pelt in 24 or 30 hours.

Effects of Feed on Teeth and Skull.

Schwartzkopf, of the Minnesota Station, treating of the influence of feed upon the dentition of pigs, writes:

1. The order of succession of teeth in our precocious pigs runs the same as in the primitive hog.

2. The times when the teeth appear are variable, according to race, feeding and health. The same breeds raised under the same conditions will show the same appearance.

3. The form of the skull depends upon nutrition, health and more or less employment of certain muscles of the head and neck. Skulls of poorly nourished pigs are long and more slender than those well nourished. Pigs that are prevented from rooting will acquire a short, high and rounded head, while those that are forced to root to secure a portion of their food will develop a long and slender form of head.

Coops for Judging Fowls.

At the Wisconsin State fair last week we noticed what was to most people a new feature in coops to be used in judging. These were made open on both sides. This gives the light a full passage around the birds and the judges have no trouble in seeing the specimens they are to pass upon, without removing them from the coops. The judges do their work on the opposite side from the crowd, which is another advantage of this arrangement. Of course the birds are taken out of the coops and handled when necessary, in any event. With the old style of coops, those open on one side, there was always a semi-twilight when the judge, clerk and runners of the birds got around them. Then, too, it was always a nuisance to have people crowding in between the judge and the clerk making records for him. Now these two officials have a whole row of coops between themselves and other interested persons.

REVIVAL OF THE STONE AGE.

Much of That Material Now Used in London Building.

The "stone age" is fast reviving in London, though in a more welcome form than that of old. There is a growing tendency to spend money more freely on business premises, and consequently architects, generally speaking, are enjoying more scope in designing structures with imposing elevations. To obtain the most handsome effect white stone has become the favorite and wherever monetary considerations will permit this is almost universally stipulated for in specifications.

"If this liberality continues," said a prominent contractor, "London will within a comparatively short period become the finest city in the world, architecturally speaking. At the present time two-thirds of the contracts in our hands specify for the use of stone frontages."

A Hot Day.

J. H. Hale employed on his farm in Georgia a negro boy named Joe. "We're having hot weather, Joe," remarked Mr. Hale one blistering day in July. "Yes, sir, boss," said Joe, reflectively, "ef I wuz cwinn a man a hot day, an' he wouldn't tek dis one, 'fore de Lawd I wouldn't know where to lool for one to pay him wid!"—New York Times.

SPOILED CHILDREN

Usually Make Sickly Men and Women

The "spoiled child" usually makes a weak, sickly man or woman because such a youngster has its own way about diet and eats and drinks things that are unfitted for any stomach and sickness results.

"I was always a delicate, spoiled child and my parents used to let me drink coffee because I would cry for it," says a Georgia young woman. "When I entered school my nervousness increased and my parents thought it was due to my going to school, so they took me out again. But I did not get any better and my headaches got worse and weakened me so that I was unfit for any duty. Sometimes I would go a whole day without any other nourishment than a cup of coffee."

"Last spring I had a bad attack of the Grippe and when I recovered I found that coffee nauseated me so I could not drink it and even a few swallows would cause a terrible burning in my stomach. It was at this time that a friend who had been much benefited by the use of Postum suggested that I try this food drink. I found it simply delicious and have used it ever since and the results speak for themselves. I have gained 12 pounds and my nerves are as steady as any one's."

"I consider myself well and strong and I make it a point now to take a cup of Postum with a cracker or two as soon as I come home from school in the afternoon. Postum with crackers or a biscuit makes my luncheon. It certainly saved my life for I know coffee would have killed me in time had I continued drinking it."

"I have a young girl friend, a stenographer, who declares nothing strengthens and refreshes her like Postum and she has a little oil stove in her office and makes a cup of Postum at noontime. I have recommended this wonderful beverage to many of my friends who know what it has done for me." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

A MOMENT OR SO.

I would like to go back for a moment
or so.
Back to the fancy-hung Long Ago—
To the old-fashioned house in the dusty lane.
And be for a moment a boy again.

I would like to go back where the fields
are green,
And wander across to the old creek's
flow—
I would like to stand in the joy serene
Of the shadowy peace of the Long Ago.

I would like just one glance at the even-tide,
Of the misty mornings with dew
aglow.
At the spot where the sparrows were wont to hide,
And the fields where the wild flowers
used to grow.

I would like just one drink from the old-fashioned well—
I would feel if I could the mystic spell
That ever clings 'round what we call
LONG AGO—
I would like to go back for a moment
or so.
—Harry T. Fee, in Overland Monthly.

THE VALUE OF A THOROUGHbred

By HARRIET MAE WEEKS

Copyrighted, 1908, by The Authors Publishing Company

The morning air rang with the shrill cries of the newsboys. Men bought a paper, glanced at the headlines, and understood the half incoherent words,
"Bank's doors closed! All 'bout Davis de embez—ler!"

In the library of an uptown residence, two men were standing by the fire, talking in hurried tones. The younger of the two had just come in and stood, hat in hand, ready to depart. The other shook his head as he said: "It's no use, Malcolm. We might have tracked the scoundrel if the papers had kept out of it. Now our every action will be public property."

"Well," the young man replied, "the outlook is rather discouraging, I admit, but we are not yet at the end of our resources. I have wired Ross and expect him on the 10:40. If you approve, I will go down and get a list of the missing bonds before he comes."

The father acquiesced, reassured for the moment by the enthusiasm of the younger man, Malcolm went out, turning to say as he ran down the steps, "I would not leave the house to-day, father. If we can stave it off a day or two, we may avert a panic altogether."

Anson Allen went back into the library. The events of the past twenty-four hours had almost unnerved him. He saw but one way to retrieve his fortune, and that a way hardly acknowledged to himself. If he could only be sure about Malcolm and Mollie Payton. But then, there was Eleanor. Since the day he took the girl of fifteen from her dead father's bedside, Eleanor Howard had been as his own daughter, and her little fortune grew under his able supervision.
Now that was gone, and he groaned in misery.

He was not aware of her presence in the library until she touched his shoulder; then, he looked up, resolved to keep the truth from her a day or two at least. But not so. Eleanor's hand still rested on his shoulder, but her eyes were taking in every word of the starting headlines which had made that morning's issue of the Standard
a memorable one. In that swift reading, everything stood revealed except her share in the disaster, and even after her guardian told her that her loss was even greater than his own,
she seemed unable to realize its effect upon anyone but Malcolm.

Mr. Allen carefully explained the situation—from the investing of all

when the crash comes, he will command a price which ought to insure you a comfortable income."

Eleanor listened attentively, and made a quick move as if to refuse the proffered gift; then, as though by inspiration, a bold plan unfolded. It took a mighty effort to keep the light from her eyes as she thanked her guardian for her thoughtfulness and went quietly out.

The next half hour was a busy one.
She had an interview with James, with the result that by the time she came

"Search that man."

down, Wildfire was pacing up and down Park avenue, four blocks away.
By the hall table she figured to leave a note, and then went out, ostensibly to spend a day and night with Mollie Payton.

Eleanor never forgot that ride to New York. Wildfire kept up a pace which would have delighted the bookmakers. The girl wondered in a dazed way how long she could hold out, but she kept a tight rein and spoke encouragingly to the mettlesome animal, and after awhile the horse seemed to understand and settled down to a steady time-making gait.

Then Eleanor had time to think. In her hurried scrutiny of the Standard, she had seen a notice to the effect that the steamer Combroa would leave for South American ports at one o'clock
Wednesday morning. Almost instantly had arisen the idea that Robert Davis would take passage on that boat.

The day wore on. Eleanor had dinner at an obscure country inn, and by seven was within twelve miles of New York. But it was a weary girl that drew rein at a pleasant farmhouse on the main road. A motherly woman came to the door, and no welcome was ever more cordial than hers as she drew the exhausted girl inside. There is nothing like rural hospitality. By eight o'clock Eleanor was asleep, and Wildfire had been rubbed down and was enjoying his supper.

A quarter of eleven! Eleanor awoke with a start, dressed quickly and stole out to the kitchen. There, with her head on the table, the farmer's wife slept peacefully, while a boy dozed by the fire. Eleanor turned the knob, and as she did so, the boy opened his eyes and looked at the clock. In a few minutes Wildfire was at the door, and the girl was in the saddle. A hurried goodbye and she was gone, and something bright shone in the boy's hand as he stood in the moonlight.

Just an hour and forty minutes later, the officer patrolling the docks of the steamship company was startled by the touch of a woman's hand on his arm, and still more surprised when she requested him to accompany her on board the Combroa in search of a thief. He led the way on board the steamer. They searched through the staterooms until, as she was almost ready to give up in despair, the officer opened the door of the last room.

Eleanor looked in, recognized her man
in spite of his changed appearance,
and turning to the officer said:
"Search that man. He has five hundred thousand dollars in United States
bonds belonging to the National Bank of Glenwood."

Robert Davis sprang forward, taken off his guard by the voice of Anson Allen's ward. Then, as he saw her companion, he stopped, realizing the futility of resistance. Turning to his suit case he took out a tin box and handed it to the girl who had braved so much for its recovery. Then he stood awaiting his sentence. Time was flying. Eleanor looked searchingly at the self-convicted man and then said,
as if satisfied with her scrutiny: "Mr.
Davis, I cannot send you back to your wife and children, an outlaw. Your passage is undoubtedly paid in advance. Go—and when you reach your destination, let me know and I will telegraph sufficient funds to enable you to start anew, if you will." Then, before Davis had time to speak, she slipped away and stood on the dock
as the officer hurried down the gangplank. It was one o'clock and before they were half way across the dock,
the steamer had started on the journey southward.

Ordinary language is inadequate to express Malcolm Allen's surprise next morning, when he received a telegram from Eleanor, requesting him to come at once, for he supposed her safe with Mollie Payton.

That same evening he listened to her recital of the experiences of the previous day and night. Before she had finished, he had his arms around her, and when she handed him the box of securities, he said, "You are a wonder, sweetheart, but you must never run such risk again. It is plain you need some one to look after you. Now, I will not stir until you consent to an immediate marriage. Get your hat, and we will have the knot tied before you run away again."

"What about Mollie Payton and your father's wishes, Malcolm?" Eleanor asked, as she came back into the parlor. "And how am I ever going to be married in a riding habit?"

"Nothing to hinder in the evening,
dear," he replied, "and Mollie Payton is not in this deal. If we hurry a little we can catch the express and be in Glenwood before breakfast. As we go out, I will telephone to the stables and have Wildfire sent down to the station."

IRISH CHANGE OF HEART.

English Newspapers Tell of Good Effect of King's Visit.

A pretty story illustrative of the change of feeling which has come over the Irish peasant toward the king since the recent royal visit appears in the English press. Two London journalists on their way from Dublin to Cork accosted a shaggy, farmer-looking native at a Queen's County station with the words: "Well,
Pat, what do you think of the king of England now?" "King of England is it," replied the Irishman, and there stole over his face an inimitable expression of drollery as he went on in a stage whisper: "Sure, avic, ye'll want a viceroys over there, I'm thinkin'. Himself an' herself are not goin' back to yez at all!" Another quaint anecdote of the same epoch-making trip comes from Galway. An old dame in that "city of the Tribes" who had spoken with the king was questioned
as to what she thought of his majesty. She delivered herself of a long and enthusiastic eulogy to the effect that "Edward I of Ireland" was a "grand man entirely," closing with the remark that she had "only wan thrifling fault to find with him." And what was this fault? "Och, sure, they kept the poor man so long in the Phaynix Park beyant that they have him talkin' with a strong Dublin accent!"—New York Tribune.

Suburbs of Jersey.

The Jesuit fathers, until recently located at the Frederick (Md.) novitiate,
and now on the Hudson, near Poughkeepsie, had considerable trouble organizing for the big removal, and impressed into service one of the hotel janitors, who happened to be at the depot, to carry luggage. A passenger on a train going through noticed the bustle of moving and asked where the fathers were going.

"Up on the Hudson," said the janitor, picking up a grip.

The passenger noticed the initials
"S. J." on the grip.

"What does that stand for?" he asked.

The janitor replied promptly:
"That's their destination—Suburbs of Jersey!"—Lippincott's.

STARLINGS TO FIGHT TICKS.

Insects from South America Have Become a Nuisance in Jamaica.

An interesting experiment in naturalization is now under trial in the country districts of Jamaica, where the plant-ticks first introduced about 20 years ago with cattle from South America have multiplied till they have become an almost intolerable pest.

A number of ordinary English starlings have been introduced into the island, in the hope that they may so far retain their native tastes as to take kindly to the task of destroying these omnipresent and repulsive creatures, which in a comparatively few years have made the forests and pastures of the island almost impassable.

It will be curious to see how the starlings fall in with their introducers' expectations, and how far they succeed in making an impression on the nuisance they are intended to combat.

It is never possible to predict with any certainty how any foreign species, whether animal or vegetable, will get on when suddenly transplanted into wholly new surroundings. — Country

For a Bad Back.

Sabra, Montana, Oct. 19th.—A great many men in this neighborhood used to complain of pains in the back, but now scarcely one can be found who has any such trouble.

Mr. Gottlieb Mu is largely responsible for the improvement for it was he, who first of all found the remedy for this Backache. He has recommended it to all his friends and neighbors, and in every case it has had wonderful success.

Mr. Mu says:—
"For many years I had been troubled with my Kidneys and pains in the small of my back. I tried many medicines but did not derive any benefit until last fall, when I bought a dozen boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills.
After using them a few days I began to improve, my back quit aching and I felt better and stronger all around.
I will keep them in the house right along for in my opinion they are the best medicine in the market to-day,
and if my back should bother me
again, I will use nothing else."

Cause of Lockjaw.

Lockjaw, or tetanus, is caused by a bacillus or germ which exists plentifully in street dirt. It is inactive so long as exposed to the air, but when carried beneath the skin as in the wounds caused by percussion caps or by rusty nails, and when the air is excluded the germ is roused to activity and produces the most virulent poison known. These germs may be destroyed and all danger of lockjaw avoided by applying Chamberlain's Pain Balm freely as soon as the injury is received. Pain Balm is an antiseptic and causes cuts, bruises and like injuries to heal without maturation and in one third the time required by the usual treatment. It is For sale by F. A. Sigler.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy.

No one who is acquainted with its good qualities can be surprised at the great popularity of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It not only cures cold and grip effectually and permanently, but prevents these diseases from resulting in pneumonia. It is also a certain cure for croup. Whooping cough is not dangerous when this remedy is given. It contains no opium or other harmful substance and may be given as confidently to a baby as to an adult. It is also pleasant to take. When all of these facts are taken into consideration it is not surprising that people in foreign lands, as well as at home, esteem this remedy very highly and very few are willing to take any other after having once used it.

The Way to Float.

This is the advice of an old swimmer to those who cannot swim: "Any human being who will have the presence of mind to turn the hands behind his back and flip the feet toward the zenith may float at ease and in perfect safety in tolerably still water. When you first find yourself in deep water you have only to consider yourself an unguessed upon. Let your mouth and nose protrude the top of your heavy head above the highest part of you and you are safe. But thrust up one of your hands and down you go—up to the handle tips over the edge. There are reason and logic here."

Arab Lying. The following characterization of the Arab penchant for not telling the truth is from a paper by Dr. G. Saint-Paul on the Tunisians: "Arab lying is exasperating. It is absurd and victorious. It triumphs easily over the optical sense and the habit of scientific reasoning. It is sometimes childish. Your native servants will never be taken unawares. You forbid one of them to smoke in your dining room and you surprise him there with a cigarette in his mouth. 'You were smoking.' 'No.' 'I saw you.' 'Impossible.' 'You had a cigarette in your mouth; you are hiding it in your hand; there it is!' 'Then God put it in my hand.' The native denies always. Taken red handed he denies. Beneath blows he denies. Pain is sometimes powerless to make him confess, even at the point of death. This obstinacy is due in part to the high idea he has of his dignity. His pride forbids him a confession, because the avowal of his lying is infinitely humiliating in his eyes. The fear of losing 'face' is all powerful in him. To recognize a fault is more shameful than to have committed it. Hence the peculiar obstinacy of the native in denying, even when it would be to his interest to confess, an obstinacy not manifested in other ways."—Journal of American Folk Lore.

Canine Intelligence.

A native of Peru has vouched for the following: A native pointed out one day a huge white dog that lay before his wretched house. He declared that his dog had intelligence of an almost human order. He said that once, when it had broken a bone in its foot, he had taken it to a surgeon and the surgeon had set the fracture and relieved it of its pain. Some months afterward, in the middle of the night, the surgeon was awakened by a great scratching at his door and by a thumping as of some heavy body. He slipped on a dressing gown and went down, to find the white dog in his garden with a brown dog beside it that held one leg off the ground. The surgeon's deduction was that the white dog had brought its companion there for treatment. Accordingly he dressed the leg of the injured animal, and thereupon the two dogs licked his hands with an air of gratitude and departed slowly into the night side by side.

A Weak Stomach

Indigestion is often caused by over-eating. An eminent authority says the harm done thus exceeds that from the excessive use of alcohol. Eat all the good food you want but don't overload the stomach. A weak stomach may refuse to digest what you eat. Then you need a good digestant like Kodol, which digests your food without the stomach's aid. This rest and the wholesome tonics Kodol contains soon restore health. Dieting unnecessary. Kodol quickly relieves the feeling of fullness and bloating from which some people suffer after meals. Absolutely cures indigestion. Kodol Nature's Tonic. Prepared only by E. C. DeWitt & Co., Chicago. Each bottle contains 2 1/2 times the food and For sale by all druggists.

THE GRANGE

Conducted by J. V. DARROW,
Free Correspondent New York State Grange

THE FARM LABOR QUESTION

How Can the Grange Help in Solving the Farm Labor Problem?

The scarcity of farm help both indoors and outdoors the past harvest season has forced farm people to think seriously as to what will be the outcome. Wages of farm laborers have increased nearly one-third in the last decade, while the supply of farm help has diminished in about the same ratio. The farmer has been trying to tide over this pressure by working a little harder himself. The good wife and children have "helped out" in many an emergency, but the long continued strain proves to us that we cannot endure this high pressure very much longer. A suggestion of a solution to this problem is given by Hon. F. W. Bedford, which is worthy of consideration. He says:

"The scarcity of really good men, men who understand farm operations, is coming to be severely felt. Farmers are anxiously inquiring, 'What are we going to do for help on the farm?' Some one says, 'Use more machinery.' Yes, but that is only a partial solution of the work, question, for men must be had to work the machinery. The problem of getting them still confronts us. A solution must be had, however. It must come through a change in cropping, a curtailment of production or a resort to the importation of labor from countries having an excess. The present demand for marketable products precludes very much change in cropping, at least of such a character as would allow with doing away with hired help on the ordinary farm. Curtailment of production cannot be thought of, because that would bring distress. The people must be fed. The remedy would seem then to be in importation of farm laborers. The question then is, How can this be brought about? Simply enough. A general appeal might be made by our agriculturists to the chief of the department of agriculture at Washington, asking that the United States consuls abroad be instructed to make inquiry as to the location of farm laborers who would be willing to migrate to the United States and report their findings to Washington.

"An information bureau could be established and arrangements made with the authorities in Washington as to the number of laborers desired and in what localities needed. All that would be needed could no doubt be induced to come. A dearth of laborers for the mine or workshop is readily filled by importation of miners and mechanics from the overthronged districts of Europe. Why not try the experiment on our farms and thereby solve the question of farm labor?"

The question now comes, Is this a matter where the national grange could urge upon congress to take some action that will allow farmers more latitude in regard to the employment of foreign laborers?—Michigan Quarterly Bulletin.

GRANGE NEWS.

Local Papers Recognize the Demand For It.

We note with encouragement the way in which the press of New York state, and even other states, is throwing open its columns to grange news. More grange departments have been started by newspapers within the past six months than ever before. Papers which ten years ago had no space for grange news are now giving from one to four columns a week to it. They have simply recognized a demand for this kind of reading on the part of the public. An ideal grange department in a local paper should contain all the real news pertaining to the order. But it should be more than a purely news department. It should furnish food for thought along lines of grange work. It should contain such reading matter as could be used with profit by the lecturer in the meetings, and it should at all times aim to furnish such articles as will broaden and educate. It should also be the aim of the editor of a grange department to keep abreast of the best sentiment and thought of the day in this chosen field.—Overseer George A. Fuller.

The Subordinate Grange.

If a grange fails to be interesting or attractive no sense of duty will long prompt members to attend. The membership of the grange is composed of a class of persons whose lives are given to labor and who usually are surfeited with brain wearing cares and business at home and who value the grange for the recreation and pleasant times it affords them as much as for the pecuniary benefits and intellectual development it brings. It has been the mistake of many well meaning officers to stuff their members with intellectual nutrition without sweetening, flavoring or setting and then blame the subjects because their appetite palls.—B. H. Strode.

An Illustration of Co-operation.

What may be done in co-operation is best shown by what is being done. The members of Volney grange, No. 165, Oswego county, N. Y., during the year ending June 1, 1908, bought eighteen cars of feed weighing 345 tons, four cars of coal and 10,000 pounds of sugar, besides large quantities of other groceries.

The secretary of the Oklahoma territorial board of agriculture is taking steps to introduce the grange into the territory with a view to benefiting agricultural interests there.

CAUTION.

This is not a gentle word—but when you think how liable you are not to purchase for 75c the only remedy universally known and a remedy that has had the largest sale of any medicine in the world since 1868 for the cure and treatment of Consumption and Throat and Lung troubles without losing its great popularity all these years, you will be thankful we called your attention to Boschee's German Syrup. There are so many ordinary cough remedies made by druggists and others that are cheap and good for light colds perhaps, but for severe Coughs, Bronchitis, Croup—and especially for Consumption, where is difficult expectoration and coughing during the nights and mornings, there is nothing like German Syrup. Sold by all druggists in the civilized world.

THE NEWS OF MICHIGAN.

Gushing Letters Read.

For the first time since the commencement of the famous Adams-Baker breach of promise case on trial in Grand Rapids several letters written by the pretty plaintiff were read in court Saturday. The first dated October 6, 1901, and was mailed to the defendant while the latter was working in the northern part of Minnesota. It read in part:

My Dear Stuart: You would not have kissed me tonight for Ned Hurd was standing on the sidewalk. You would have to take me on the side of the house in the shadows. I am very loathsome tonight. O, Stuart, darling, I cannot stand it much longer. I hope the lumber camp will break up soon, so that you can return to me. I am proud of my love for you I wish you were near me. I would give anything to hold you close. There is nothing so good as to care for one like I do you. I love you so. You must feel it way off where you are. Here is a close kiss for you. Yours lovingly, HENRIETTA.

Miss Adams on the stand stated that there was nothing indelicate in her request, "Stuart, hold me close." In explanation to what she meant by certain parts of her letter that are omitted, she gave a reason that need not be elaborated upon.

The letters of the defendant read were of such a character that they cannot be printed. During the reading of them Miss Adams wept. Her brother who sat beside her looked angrily at the defendant and it seemed that he was exercising the greatest control over himself to prevent himself from doing something rash.

He Punished the Friend Severely.

Friday night Mrs. E. P. Fulmer, the wife of a farmer living some three miles north of Mancelona, had her suspicions aroused by the actions of her eleven-year-old daughter and, upon careful inquiry from the child, the latter alleged she had been assaulted by Herman Frickey, the hired man, on the evening of May 30, during the absence of the family, and that the little girl, also a son about 10 years, who was present and witnessed the act, had been kept quiet during all these months by Frickey's threats to kill them if they revealed his crime. Mrs. Fulmer's suspicions were aroused by the fact of the child taking medicine which it seems, Frickey had procured for her. Frickey was absent at the time of the revelation by the little girl, but returned to the Fulmer home where he was still working, some two hours later. The father of the girl met him at the door and immediately felled him with a blow between the eyes. He proceeded to tie him and during the night would every fifteen or twenty minutes repeat the pummeling, and Saturday morning after tying Frickey in the barn the father came to Mancelona and procured a warrant for Frickey, who is about 25 years old. Physicians state that the child's story is true, and no sympathy is expressed for the fiend, though his appearance is such as to make even the physicians who treated his wounds received from the repeated pummeling which the child's father gave him during the night, sick and faint.

Railway Taxation Suits.

The railroad attorneys in the railway taxation case, on trial at Lansing, placed T. J. G. Bolt, another field man for the state tax commission, on the stand to testify as to the assessment of general property. One of his statements concerning inequality of assessments was that many assessing officers had engaged in the practice of placing a higher valuation on the property of non-residents than that of residents.

A. F. Patriarche, general traffic manager of the Pere Marquette system, testified for the railways in their suit against the state over the assessment of their properties, that the electric railways and the sleeping car companies were doing the same kind of business as the steam railway companies, yet were not taxed in the same way. The purpose of this testimony was to show that the tax law was invalid because it discriminated.

Olds Wants the Flats.

S. S. Olds, of Lansing, has made a demand upon State Land Commissioner Willey for a deed to the property of the Lake St. Clair Fishing and Shooting club and other flats lands to which he was recently decreed to be entitled by the supreme court. Olds holds certain swamp land scrip, upon which he claims the lands. Commissioner Willey declined to issue the deeds until he could confer with the attorney-general. The lands claimed by Olds do not constitute all the valuable properties at the Flats, but a large proportion of them. The title to other lands is now being tried out in the supreme court.

The Blockade at the Flats.

The steamer John N. Glidden, sunk in St. Clair Flats canal by the bargemagna, of the steel trust fleet, will be a total loss and may be blown up by the government as an obstruction to navigation. The work started by the Magna Friday morning when she crashed through the bow of the boat and carried away everything back almost to the pilot house and nine feet down from the main deck was completed by six other boats which struck the wreck in passing and practically broke her to pieces.

Bank Is Closed.

Being unable to rediscount the paper on which he loaned money to the Eau Claire Canning Co., Arthur C. Probert, owner of the defunct private bank of Eau Claire, has returned the notes, and the canning company is paying off the bank's depositors. When all are paid, Probert will have about $100 coming to him of the $3,500 he advanced to the canning company. The bank is closed for keeps.

Trouble Feared.

The guards of the power house, head gates and canal of the Michigan Lake Superior Power Co., have been strengthened noticeably as the result of the attitude of the 120 unpaid workmen on the American side. Numbers of the men are seen hanging around the works every night, and some are said to have told the watchmen that they would do irretrievable damage to the company unless they were paid.

Wants to Be Let Out.

Frank C. Andrews, the Detroit financier, in an interview the other day said: "My friends have helped me to hold on to considerable property, and if I were out I could pay 85 cents on every dollar in a short time, and in a little while could pay up every cent I owe. I have many friends. They come to see me and are trying to help me. I will do the best I can. If I am let out I can testify in a dozen cases now pending and can do much to help matters. Even in the prison here I have been able, through the aid of friends, to hold on to much good property. What I could have done had I been left to work out the matter can be seen plainly. THE NEWS OF THE WORLD

Dowie in New York.

"Elijah" Dowie's entrance to New York at the head of his 4,000 crusaders of the "Restoration Host" was not as pleasant as he might have wished. In the first place he arrived at the Grand Central station, thus raising the crowds who were awaiting him at the West Shore railroad ferry, and where his private carriage with his blooded horses, was awaiting him. So the Zion leader, with his son and two lieutenants took a public hack to the Plaza hotel, where "Elijah" and his chief officers have splendid apartments. Arriving at the hotel, Mrs. Dowie discovered that during the confusion at the Grand Central station in disembarking from their private palace car she had been robbed of a $1,500 diamond and pearl brooch. The great expense of the crusade follows:

Railroad fare	$ 75,000
Meals for 4,000 persons, 20 days (actual cost 12 1/2 cents a meal)	30,000
Lodging for 4,000 persons, 20 days (average cost 75 cents per day)	60,000
Rent of Madison Square Garden, 14 days, at $1,000 per day	14,000
Rent of Carnegie hall, 6 days, at $500	3,000
Printed matter, uniforms for Zion Guard and choir, transportation of Dowie's horses and miscellaneous supplies, about	10,000
Total	$192,000

Senator Platt's Wedding.

Senator Thos. Collier Platt stole a march on his friends and others interested in the plans for his marriage to Mrs. Lillian T. Janeway, which was announced to occur Thursday morning at the Marble Collegiate church. The wedding party did not appear and there was no explanation until nearly noon, when it was announced from Senator Platt's office that they had been married last Sunday at the Holland House, where Rev. Dr. Burrill performed the ceremony in the presence of the immediate members of Mr. Platt's and Mrs. Janeway's families.

It Miss Mae C. Wood, the Washington clerk, had an intention of bringing a $25,000 suit for breach of promise against Senator Platt, she changed her mind, though it is intimated that Miss Wood's presence in New York was one of the chief reasons for the wedding previous to the time announced.

Miss Wood is reported to be about $15,000 better off than she was earlier in the week.

Was Acquittal Just?

Lieut. Gov. James B. Tillman, who has been on trial for shooting and killing Editor Gonzales at Columbia, S. C., some time ago, was Thursday morning found not guilty. Tillman, who is a nephew of the notorious Senator Tillman, last January murdered Editor Gonzales, of the newspaper called the State. He met Gonzales on the street and shot him down in cold blood. Gonzales was not armed, Gonzales, through his paper, had opposed Tillman's political aspirations with vigor, declaring him to be an unfit man for public office. The feeling between them became intensely bitter and Gonzales, hearing that Tillman had threatened to kill him, once told one of his fellow workers that if Tillman attacked him he (Gonzales) would "shoot him so full of holes that he would look like a sieve." This fact was brought out by the defense during the trial, but nothing was adduced to show that Gonzales had ever threatened to shoot Tillman except in self-defense.

The Sault Plants.

The Canadian Soo is in a fever of excitement and the American Soo is to a certain extent, affected by the news from Toronto that some of the plants, at least of the Consolidated Lake Superior Co., are soon to be opened. These reports in full could not be confirmed at the offices of the company, but Mr. Coyne did say that men were to be sent into the woods soon to take out what lumber had already been cut and if affairs were settled before this work was done these men and others would be kept in the woods. The provincial government is to guarantee the wages of these men.

Great Strike of Coal Miners.

A great strike in the coal fields of the western states will be called, according to President Mitchell, of the United Mine Workers. Twenty-three thousand men will be called out in Colorado, Utah, Wyoming, Idaho and New Mexico. President Mitchell will personally direct the struggle for the men. The reason for the strike order is that the owners have refused to treat with the district officers of the union, who have asked for a new scale.

Option on the Soo Properties.

The Vickers Maxim Co. and the Armstrongs, of England, have been given an option on the assets of the Lake Superior Consolidated Co. The purchase terms call for a cash payment immediately of $8,000,000 and subsequent payments until the sum of about $30,000,000 is reached, which is the purchase price. The option covers the entire properties of the Lake Superior Consolidated Co.

Gompers' Warning.

A warning to capital against cutting wages, if financial depression comes, by President Gompers of the American Federation of Labor, and a plea for harmony between employers and toilers by Senator Hanna, were made at the closing session of the national civic federation conference in Chicago. He said: "If the time comes to suggest the advisability of the employer to cutting or making any attempt to cut wages it will be disputed by us. We will not let that go easily. We will make a stand against it, not alone because it is uneconomic and unwise, but because it simply accentuates the industrial crisis and gives it greater strength."

Senator Hanna, as did a number of the other speakers, including those for capital and labor, advised conservatism in all disputes between both sides, and praised the element of labor organizations. Future success in maintaining industrial peace, said Mr. Hanna, was a greater matter than the question of who is the next president. Captains of industry, he said, and the other side were only too willing to learn from teachers who have had experience. Distrust preached by labor leaders, he declared to be an unfair proposition. There was not, he said, any real difference that could not be settled, but fair dealing was necessary.

The New Jersey Floods.

Over $2,000,000 loss has been caused by the floods in Paterson, N. J., which are now receding. At least 500 families are homeless and thousands of mill employees will be idle for some time as a result of flooding of the factories. A score of buildings have tumbled into the water and many more will be untenable.

Passaic is a greater sufferer from the flood than even Paterson. Twenty mills in Passaic alone are under water, and 8,000 workers are out of employment, while 10,000 persons have left their homes. Eight hundred houses are flooded to the eaves and 1,000 acres are covered with water from a depth of a few inches to 20 feet. Several million feet of lumber have been carried down to Newark bay. The Erie tracks are suspended in the air, the 20-foot embankment having been washed away. Twenty three-story frame houses have gone floating down the Passaic river, and as far as can be estimated the loss of city property, real estate and buildings, is $2,000,000.

The town of Wallington is still under water, and several hundred persons are taking refuge in the public schools. At Duttonville 50 or more houses were washed from their foundations and many overturned and wrecked.

The town of Trenton has suffered severely. Scores of bridges have been washed away throughout this territory. The town of Ramapo is reported to be almost in ruins and many people are homeless.

The Alaskan Boundary.

The Alaskan boundary commission has an agreement whereby all the American contentions are sustained, with the exception of those in relation to the Portland canal, which Canada wins. All that now remains to be done is for the commissioners to affix their signatures to the decision and complete the map which will accompany it. On the map will be marked the boundary line definitely fixing the division of American and British territory, on such a basis that no American citizen will lose a foot of land he already believed he held, while the United States will get all the waterways to the rich Alaskan territory, with the exception of the Portland canal, which gives Canada the one outlet she so much needed.

To Cut Appropriations.

Although Secretary Moody has asked for over $100,000,000 for the navy next year, it is believed that congress will not authorize the construction of a single new vessel and limit the appropriations to the maintenance of the existing establishment. This, it is said, is due to the determination of Speaker Cannon and other Republican leaders to cut all appropriations as much as possible.

CONDENSED NEWS.

George Byke, of Harrison, escaped a sentence for burglary only by being sent to an insane asylum instead.

The Frankfurter Zeitung's Shanghai correspondent wires that news was received there from Chee Foo that the Japanese have occupied Ma-San-Pho, Korea. The correspondent adds that an official declaration of war between Japan and Russia is expected shortly.

Artists and sculptors all over the country are preparing to make an organized fight against the control which they assert organized labor is trying to obtain over the realm of art where it enters into interior decoration of houses.

Henry Brown, a retired hotel-keeper, was shot in the head at Trenton, N. J., by Peter Kots, into whose house he had broken in a fit of insanity. Kots's wife held the lamp for her husband to aim by, and the two bullets penetrated Brown's skull, injuring him fatally.

Annie Brown, a dance hall woman of Nome, has preferred charges of blackmail against Noble Wallingford, chief of police; E. E. Hill, city councilman, and Patrolman Hackett, all of Nome. The woman alleges that the three officials forced her to give them $700.

HOUSEHOLD MATTERS

A French Way.

The French cook peas by blending one tablespoonful of butter with a teaspoonful of flour; add to this a pint of young peas, a small bunch of parsley, one cup of water, six very small onions. Cook forty minutes, take out the parsley, then add salt, pepper and a teaspoonful of sugar, the yolk of one egg, a small piece of butter. Mix thoroughly and serve hot on toast.

The Uses of Charcoal.

All sorts of glass vessels and other utensils can be purified by rinsing them well with charcoal powder. Rubbing the teeth and washing out the mouth with fine charcoal powder will beautify the former and purify the breath.

Putrid water can be immediately deprived of its bad smell by charcoal; a few pieces of charcoal placed on meat, fish, etc., that are beginning to spoil will preserve them and absorb all the strong odors.

A tablet of willow charcoal taken twice daily will purify the stomach and aid digestion.—American Queen.

Our Furniture.

Furniture coverings were never better made. The materials are usually cool and attractive looking.

Some forest green bedroom furniture in a style suggesting the mission delightful.

In addition to beating stuffed furniture it is well to allow it to stand out in the sunshine a little while now and then.

For bedrooms, floral cretonnes matching the language make pretty chair coverings.

Lined oil, turpentine and vinegar in equal parts, make an admirable furniture polish. Mix thoroughly and apply with hard friction.

If a house is to be shut up moths may be kept out of the chairs and hangings by spraying them with turpentine.

Heavy pieces are rather to be avoided in the average house, as it is important that they may be moved and the dust dispatched frequently.

Leather-covered pieces may be refreshed by a rubbing with a mixture composed of two parts of crude oil and one of benzine.

Bread and Cake Boxes.

There is some difference of opinion as to the proper place to store bread and cake. A great many housekeepers, following time honored precedent, still keep their bread and cake in large stoneware crocks, fitted with covers. The objection to these is that they are very heavy to lift, and in summer are apt to invite mould, unless they are kept in a dry, cool place.

bread crocks should be scalded out every time they are filled, or as often as twice a week. Cake crocks need not be scalded out so often. They should both be cold and dry when they are filled again and shut up.

Bread crocks are so heavy and cause so much unnecessary labor that large boxes of tin enamelled on the outside have been substituted for them. There are, however, more objections to tin than to stone ware. Tin is apt to give a "tinny" taste to any bread or cake kept in it. To avoid this some bread boxes are furnished with ventilators. This dries the bread. Sometimes drawers for cake and bread are fitted in storerooms. These are lined with tin, and are better than anything else, if furnished with linen cloths, in which the bread or cake is wrapped securely, from contact with the tin, though they are not impervious, as nothing but an airtight, covered box would be, to attacks of kitchen insects, which in the city may sometimes invade the neatest and best protected kitchens. Housekeepers in the country do not always appreciate their blessings, one of which is immunity from insect pests when proper precautions are exercised.—New York Tribune.

The Nebular Hypothesis.
The nebular hypothesis has a name, but with connotations indistinctly diversified. Regarding the origin and of cosmic change there is a consensus of opinion. That there was in the beginning a solar nebula is agreed, but whether it was gas or pulverent, whether it shone with interrupted or continuous light, how it became ordered and organized, how it collected into spheres, leaving wide interspaces clear, the wisest are perplexed to decide.

Insects Eked For Medicine.
The medicinal insect is in some cases recognized as a medicine and at one time had a reputation for wonderful virtues. Honey and wax, often used in pharmacy, are insect products, while galls, used in medicine for the astringent properties and the gallic and tannic acid they furnish, are also the work of insects.—London Tit-Bits.

Rufus Choate and Justice Shaw.
Rufus Choate was sitting next to Judge Hoar in the bar when Chief Justice Shaw was presiding and the Suffolk docket was being called. The chief justice said something which led Mr. Choate to make a half humorous and half displeased remark about Shaw's roughness of look and manner, to which Judge Hoar replied, "After all, I feel a reverence for the old chief justice." "A reverence for him, my dear fellow?" said Choate. "So do I. I bow down to him as the wild Indian does before his wooden idol. I know he's ugly, but I bow to a superior intelligence."—George F. Hoar in Scribner's Magazine.

Jackson, Mich., Oct. 9, 1903.

F. M. PETERS,
PINCKNEY, MICH.

DEAR SIR:—

Please send us another shipment of flour. As you are aware, we have now sold your flour for a long time and it is selling in competition with the best grades made in the city and will say it is giving excellent satisfaction.

Yours,

SCOTT & HELMER.

It has been insinuated that we make two grades of flour, that we ship the best out and give the inferior grade to home consumers. This is false as we make only one grade and are willing to prove it to anyone sufficiently interested. But the grade we do make is equal to any made in this part of the state and superior to that turned out by a number of supposedly modern mills.

F. M. PETERS, Pinckney Flouring Mills.
