What Pinckney Needs

One of the crying needs of Pinckney is a suitable building for a postoffice. The place where it has been located for the past few years is soon to be occupied by its owner and the postoffice will have to seek other quarters and there is no place for it to locate without going into some building already crowded.

Someone with money to let could realize good money on the same by putting up a small but attractive building that could be rented at a reasonable amount for the office. This would give Pinckney a good building as well as a permanent post-office.

AGRICULTURE

Grass Headlands.

Last season we visited a fine farm in one of the great grain-raising states and were particularly pleased with the appearance of the fields. Plowing had been carefully done for years, so that the land was level and smooth and around each field ran a headland seeded to grass and just wide enough for a team of horses to turn handily without injuring the standing crop of corn. The fences on this farm were well made and properly kept up, so that the plow could be run close up to each of them if necessary, but this had been done long since, and grass now took the place too often occupied by weeds.

Questioned, the farmer gave it as his opinion that the grass or hay cut on the headlands paid quite as well as the crop that would be otherwise injured by teams and implements, but his chief reason for adopting grass headlands was to keep down weeds and give the farm a fine and neat appearance. Every reader of the paper must confess that much corn is trampled under the horses' feet when cultivating and turning at the ends of the fields and that the corn produced on the edges is often thin and weedy. Would it not be better to devote such land to the growing of grass and so render working of the crop easier and at the same time keeping down the weeds and giving the place a tidy appearance?

Personally we are strongly in favor of grass headlands. They save time in entering a grain field with the harvester, enable a man to drive or walk around his field on the Sabbath day, tour of inspection, make hedge trimming or fence repairing easier, give a slightly appearance to the fields and a luxuriant look to the growing crops, besides making it an easy matter to run the mower near the fences and so destroy weeds that would otherwise go to seed. We would like to hear from our readers upon this subject and are ready to be converted over again if we have come to a wrong conclusion relative to the advantages of having grass headlands around the fields.—A. S. Alexander in Farmers' Review.

Plowing in the Fall.

I do not believe that plowing in the fall can be recommended for all soils and localities, but I do believe it should be more generally practiced by all farmers than it is. I always do all of the fall plowing that I possibly can, especially where I intend to put in corn the coming spring. If soil is turned under in the fall the amount of plant food will be greatly increased for the crop the next summer. I have also noticed that there are not as many cutworms, grubworms and cornroot worms the next spring as there were the spring before if the ground is plowed in the fall. Every pest that the farmer can get rid of he knows it to be for his own good to do so. The surface of fall plowed ground is drier in the spring at planting time than ground not so treated and some farmers might think that it does not contain as much moisture, but I find that it does. The rainfall is enabled to better penetrate the sub-soil which allows the surface of fall plowed ground to dry more rapidly. If you have not experienced fall plowing, try it, and you will find that fall plowed ground has a drier surface and contains more moisture at planting time in the spring than ground which has not been plowed in the fall. I believe in localities where there is much rain during the winter, it is better not to harrow the fall plowed ground in the autumn, especially where there are fine, clay soils that run together and pack down. If we have a dry summer we will find that fall plowed ground will yield better crops than spring plowed ground.—J. S. Underwood, Johnson Co., Ill., in Farmers' Review.

Canada's Export of Poultry Products.

Canada has been for a number of years making special efforts to secure a large share of England's trade in poultry products. The Canadian government has spent a good deal of money in teaching the farmers how to fatten poultry and dress it in the most approved fashion. Yet the Canadians have not been able to export much in excess of a million dollars worth a year. But the reason has not been that the English did not like Canadian poultry products. It is that the Canadian people are willing to pay more for the products than the English are willing to pay. Thus the products are kept at home. In the Northwest territories of Canada there is a rapidly increasing population and that population is consuming more and more of poultry products and is even importing from the United States. It is a good sign when the Canadians can find such a ready market at home.

LIGHTING LORE.

ACETYLENE EXCELS AS AN ILLUMINANT.

See the Lighting Formerly Confined to Cities and Large Towns, now in General Use in the Country.

The satisfactory lighting of suburban and country homes requires that the means used shall be convenient, safe, economical and furnish a brilliant, penetrating, effulgent light. Everybody admits that these are not the characteristics of the candle or kerosene lamp, which, formerly, were the only feasible means of producing light for domestic use in the rural districts.

For generations there was a crying need, a yearning for something better, which was not satisfied. A few years ago deliverance came in the shape of the chemical compound, Calcium Carbide, from which, by the simple application of water, the gas Acetylene is derived. Acetylene meets all the requirements fully and admirably and is being generally used.

Common lime and carbon in the form of coke or coal are the raw materials which, fused in an intensely heated furnace, make Calcium Carbide, and there is no difficulty in obtaining it in any part of the country. The machine into which the Calcium Carbide is fed and from which the Acetylene is distributed through the building to be lighted, is but little larger than a thirty-gallon milk can, and of the same general form. It is easily and cheaply installed, either in the cellar or in an out-building.

The light from burning Acetylene is exquisite, and lighting experts agree that it surpasses all other known illuminants. It does not taint the air nor strain the eyes and is not objectionable in any respect. Every up-to-date rural residence should be equipped with Acetylene light.

ROMANCE IN LIFE OF HUXLEY

Great Biologist Possessed of Unknown Wealth of Tenderness.

Huxley, after steadfast waiting and earnest upward striving toward his life's purpose, for eight years, came at last to the time when he felt he could provide a home for Miss Heathorn. With the thousands of leagues between them, she in Sydney and he in England, each had proved the other's fidelity and devotion. When Miss Heathorn arrived in England, Huxley was to learn from a famous physician that she had only six months to live. But he married her, and took her to Tenby, the beautiful watering place in Carmarthen bay. "Six months or not," Huxley had said, "she is going to be my wife." The devotion of the great biologist brought her back to health, and when, after long years of happiness, the Hand beckoned and the Voice called for him, he directed her to inscribe on his tombstone the touching verse:

"Be not afraid, ye waiting hearts that weep,
For still He giveth His beloved sleep,
And if an endless sleep He wills, so best."

GET POWER.

The Supply Comes From Food.

If we get power from food, why not strive to get all the power we can. That is only possible by use of skillfully selected food that exactly fits the requirements of the body.

Poor fuel makes a poor fire and a poor fire is not a good steam producer.

"From not knowing how to select the right food to fit my needs, I suffered grievously for a long time from stomach troubles," writes a lady from a little town in Missouri.

"It seemed as if I would never be able to find out the sort of food that was best for me. Hardly anything that I could eat would stay on my stomach. Every attempt gave me heart-burn and filled my stomach with gas. I got thinner and thinner until I literally became a living skeleton and in time was compelled to keep to my bed.

"A few months ago I was persuaded to try Grape-Nuts food, and it had such good effect from the very beginning that I have kept up its use ever since. I was surprised at the ease with which I digested it. It proved to be just what I needed. All my unpleasant symptoms, the heart-burn, the inflated feeling which gave me so much pain disappeared. My weight gradually increased from 98 to 116 lbs., my figure rounded out, my strength came back, and I am now able to do my housework and enjoy it. The Grape-Nuts food did it." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

A ten days' trial will show anyone some facts about food.
"There's a reason."

Court Etiquette in Addressing Royalty

Queen Alexandra's Intimate Address Her as Ma'am—Finger Glasses for Royalty Only—Fresh Money for Bridge.

The dignity that both hedge a king expresses itself in some curious ways, and to people who are not accustomed to associating with these exalted personages royal etiquette is in many points very puzzling. To those who meet Queen Alexandra constantly it probably does not seem strange to address her as "ma'am," but to unaccustomed ears this monosyllable does not sound quite respectful. Yet, according to the Ladies' Field, the queen is addressed as "ma'am" by all the members of the upper classes, the term "your majesty" being rarely used except on formal occasions, while the Prince of Wales and all the princes of the royal blood of England are addressed as "sir." Yet foreign princes and princesses bearing the title of serene highness must not be addressed as sir or ma'am, but as prince and princess. A letter to the sovereign must begin thus: "His majesty the king," and below the single word, "sir." The conclusion of the letter would be worded as follows: "I have the honor to submit myself, your majesty's most humble and devoted servant," etc.

Another curious bit of royal etiquette provides that when members of the royal family are present at a dinner finger glasses must be supplied for their use at dessert, but not for the other guests. When the king and queen play bridge or any other round game money fresh from the mint must be provided. Invitations from the sovereign are commands, and must be treated as such. Only the death of a near relative, serious illness or compulsory absence from England can be given, as reasons for non-acceptance. A previous engagement can never be pleaded as an excuse. Answers to royal invitations should be written in the third person. Communications with royalty are usually made through the controller of the household; it is entirely incorrect to write to the royal personage himself—that is to say, in ordinary circumstances, for the rights of friendship and affection override even the observances of a court. Introductions to royal personages are made only at their request. When the presentation is made, the lady presented should make a low but quick curtsy—a sort of "bob"—and a man gives a deep, respectful bow. The royal personages usually shake hands and begin a conversation at once; the person presented must on no account speak first, nor offer to shake hands. The initiative is always taken by royalty. The actual introduction is made thus: "Lady Blank, your majesty;" "Mrs. West, sir;" "Miss John West, ma'am."

Bereaved Husband Needed the Tiger

His Wife Had Recently Died and He Was Seeking Congenial Society—English Newspaper Responsible for Story.

At a sale of animals from a hippo-trome a tiger was being offered. The highest bid was made by a man who was a stranger, and to him it was knocked down. The owner of the animal, who had been eyeing the stranger uneasily during the bidding, then went up to him and said:

"Pardon me for asking the question, but will you tell me where you are from?"

"From the country," responded the man.

"Are you connected with any show?"

"No."

"And are you buying this animal for yourself?"

"Yes."

The showman shifted about for a few moments, looking alternately at the man and the tiger, evidently trying his best to reconcile the two.

"Now, young man," he finally said, "you need not take this animal unless you want to, for there are those here who will take it off your hands."

"I don't want to sell," was the quiet reply.

"What on earth are you going to do with such an ugly beast if you have no show of your own and are not buying for someone who is a showman?"

"Well, I'll tell you," said the purchaser. "My wife died about three weeks ago. We had lived together for ten years, and—and I miss her."

He paused to wipe his eyes, and steadily his voice, and then added:

"So I've bought the tiger."

"I understand you," said the great showman in a husky voice, as he turned to hide his emotion.—London Tit-Bits.

An Essay on Newspapers

[Higginville (Mo.) Leader]

In a little country school not far from Princeton, literary exercises are regularly indulged in every Friday afternoon during the term. A twelve-year-old boy read an original essay on "The Newspaper." The latter-day youthful Solomon treated his subject thus:

"Newspapers are sheets of paper on which stuff to read is printed. The men look over the paper to see if their names is in it, and the women use it to put on shelves and sigh. don't know how newspapers came into the world. I don't think God does. The Bible says nothing about editors, and I never heard of one being in heaven. I guess the editors is the missing link them tellers talk about. The first editor I ever heard of was the teller who wrote up the flood. He has been here ever since. Some editors belong to church and some of them try to raise whiskers. All of them raised hell in their neighborhood and all are liars, at least all I know, and I only know one. Editors never die. At least I never saw a dead one. Sometimes the paper dies, and the people feel glad, but some one starts it up again. Editors never went to school because editors never got licked. Our paper is a mighty poor one, but we take it so that ma can use it on her pantry shelves. Our editor don't amount to much, but pa says he had a poor chance when he was a boy. He goes without underclose in the winter, wears no socks, and has a wife to support him. Pa hasn't payed his subscription in five years, and don't intend to."

Are You Engaged?

Engaged people should remember, that, after marriage, many quarrels can be avoided, by keeping their digestions in good condition with Electric Bitters. S. A. Brown, of Bennettsville, S. Then she tried Electric Bitters, which helped her at once, and finally made her entirely well. She is now strong and healthy. F. A. Sigler, druggist, sells and guarantees them, at 50c a bottle.

Keep Your Brain Busy.

Dr. Duke, the leading English brain specialist, says the trouble with most brains is that they are not kept busy enough. There is a great desire on the part of all young men to be fit. A young man cannot possibly be fit if he takes to alcohol. By no possibility can he want it. That any one young or healthy should want alcohol is simply perposterous. They might just as well want strychnine. Thus the argument for the young man is; You want to be a man, and you want to be fit. You cannot get fit on alcohol.—Sir Freckerick Treves, physician to King Edward VII.

Knives For Brides.

The custom of giving knives to brides was formerly a common practice, when it was fashionable for women to wear knives sheathed and suspended from their girdles. A wedding offered an opportunity of presenting something novel or ornamental in the girdery line, and frequent reference to such presents occurs in the plays of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries. In the "Witch of Edmonton," 1648, for instance, the bride is described as wearing "the new pair of Sheffield knives, fitted to one sheath." A list of trinkets, usually worn by ladies about 1650 includes girdles, knives, purses and pin cases. In Dekker's "Match Me In London," 1631, the bride says to her jealous husband: "See, at my girdle hang my wedding knives; With these dispatch me."

Your Heart

is a wonderful pump that works incessantly. The power that keeps this wonderful pump in motion is nerve-force, the energy furnished by the nerves. Disease, over-exertion, fright, anxiety, alcohol, tobacco, and other stimulants weaken these nerves.

Then comes shortness of breath, heart palpitation, dizziness, etc., because the nerves are too weak to furnish power. Take the only safe remedy,

Dr. Miles' Heart Cure

It feeds, strengthens and builds up the nerves and muscles of the heart so they can supply the necessary energy. "I suffered terribly with heart trouble, shortness of breath, smothering spells. After taking Dr. Miles' Heart Cure a short time I feel like a different person. That depressed, smothering feeling left me, and I have not since had the slightest symptom of the old trouble." MRS. A. D. LAMME, Dayton, O. The first bottle will benefit if not, the druggist will return your money.

If you want all the news, subscribe for the DISPATCH.

Are you looking for some kind of power that you can use in your barn today, down in the woods tomorrow, over in your neighbors' woods next day? Something that costs nothing until started and all expense stops the instant the power stops? An engine that always goes no matter what the weather conditions may be? If so, let us tell you more about Ideal engines, which are guaranteed for one year, and sent out, to responsible farmers on a 10 days' trial. We make a specialty of a 5 H. P. engine that is adapted to farm use. It costs but little more for gasoline to pump water with this engine than it does with a smaller one, which is of no practical use except for pumping. This engine will grind feed, buzz wood and do any work requiring power on the farm. Ideal engines will be on exhibition at the Fairs this fall.

NEWS OF THE WORLD

COVERT THREATS ARE MADE AGAINST KOMURA AND TAKAHIRA.

THE FAMINE DISTRICTS IN RUSSIA ARE TO BE RELIEVED.

Ruinaten Forced.
The authorities in St. Petersburg have received official reports from the Siberian coast to the effect that the Japanese are pursuing measures which promise to result in the ruination of the inhabitants throughout the island of Sakhalin, north and south. They are forcing the people to sell their property at all kinds of absurdly low and arbitrary prices and sign receipts for it at good prices under the threat of death. As an example of the extremity of the Japanese methods, Gen. Senemovsky, commanding the district, reports that 180 Russian colonists were led into marshes by the Japanese and were there decapitated. The inhabitants of the southern portion of the island are being forced to emigrate, and those of the northern half are being plundered of their houses, cattle and crops, and must emigrate as they have nothing on which to live.

Ill Feeling in Japan.
Considerable ill feeling has been stirred up against the Japanese government by reason of the large number of arrests made in connection with the recent rioting. The expressions against the government are not so openly made as before, but there can be no doubt that the sentiment is rapidly spreading. The antagonism to Baron Komura and M. Takahira shows no signs of abatement and many covert threats have recently been made against both envoys, particularly since the discovery of the clause in the treaty forbidding Japan to fortify the Soya straits and the reported ominous declaration of M. Witte in Paris that the new treaty would result in no modification of Russia's present policy, which is open to the interpretation that another war against Japan is contemplated.

The Famine Work.
Special commissions from the department of agriculture and the ministry of the interior will take charge of the relief work in the famine districts of Russia. The cost of this work is estimated by the government at $20,000,000. No acute distress has as yet been reported and the government hopes for a prompt distribution of food, seed, grain and fodder and the employment of the famine-stricken populace on public works to tide over the people until the new harvest. An observer of the situation who returned from a tour of southern Russia states that bags of grain were piled up in perfect mountains at many stations, some of which were left over from the 1904 harvest, waiting for cars to move them.

Czar to Call Peace Conference.
The issuance of the call for the second Hague peace conference by the czar will be made with the full knowledge and consent of all the great powers. The matter has been under advisement and has been the subject of correspondence between the foreign office at St. Petersburg and the foreign offices of the powers and of the United States ever since Russia consented to send envoys to meet those of Japan, and it became practically certain that peace would be restored. It is said here that it was a suggestion of President Roosevelt that the call should come from Russia. The American chief executive announced his willingness to father the next conference which it is hoped will practically make a great war impossible in the future, but he expressed the opinion that it would be better that the czar who had called the first conference should take the initiative at this time. While no formal action has as yet been taken, I am assured that all the powers, including Japan, have signified their willingness to send delegates and that in most cases they will be invested with more complete power than has ever been granted before. The time for the sending of the formal invitation has not yet been determined, but it will not long be delayed and probably be shortly after the exchange of ratifications of the peace treaty between Russia and Japan. It is not believed the conference will be held before next spring when the repatriation of the armies in Manchuria will have been practically concluded.

Senator Tom Platt III.
Word reaches Washington that Senator T. C. Platt, of New York, is ill at the Palace hotel in San Francisco and denying himself to all callers. When he arrived at the hotel Saturday his enfeebled condition was remarked by all who saw him.

Rain-in-the-Face Dead.
"Rain-in-the-Face," who was one of the leading chiefs in the Custer massacre, and is said to have personally killed Gen. Custer, died at the Standing Rock reservation, South Dakota, Sept. 12. Rain-in-the-Face was 62 years old.
