WILLIAM A. NIXON

Stricken With Paralysis Last Thursday and Passed Away Monday Morning

William A. Nixon was born in Woodstock, Ont., Nov. 4, 1848 and died at Pinckney, Mich., Oct. 3, 1910, being 66 years, 10 months and 29 days of age.

At the age of fifteen years he went to Plymouth, Mich., where he learned the trade of tinmith, a business which he followed more or less through life.

He was married to Miss Frances Johnson of Plymouth in 1869 who died in 1871. To this union was born one daughter Frances, now Mrs. C. T. Moreland of St. Johns, Mich.

He married Mrs. Lura J. Jenne at Maple Rapids, Mich., July 23, 1876 where he lived for seven years, during which time he was engaged in the hardware business. Then he moved to St. Johns, Mich., where for six years more he continued his hardware enterprise. From St. Johns he went to Findlay, Ohio, where for twelve years he was Superintendent of the Hydraulic Press Brick Company. In 1900 he came to Portage Lake where he engaged in farming. In 1902 he moved into his late home where he lived until the day of his death.

The 24th of December, 1908, he received severe injuries from a fall off the Grand Trunk Freight House platform, since which time he has been in declining health, the result of which terminated in paralysis which caused his death.

Deacon Nixon had a fine deep bass voice which from his younger days he had taken much pride in keeping in a high state of cultivation, and with which he for six years led the choir at St. Johns and eight years at Pinckney, to the pleasure and admiration of the Congregational people whom he faithfully and untrigly served. Few have been the hours of worship during these many years that have not heard his voice and felt his uplifting inspiration. It has been well said that music and song furnish one half of the church worship. This half he endeavored through sunshine and storm to fill, for which hundreds of brothers and sisters join in one unanimous praise and thankfulness. This voice now hushed forever on earth will continue to sing midst the trues and tried ones in the Great Beyond. His voice in the musical part of the church will be greatly missed so long as the present generation shall last.

The death of this devoted man is mourned by the whole community both young and old regardless of faith or denomination.

To be good and to do good are the two great objects set before the Christian; to develop a perfect character by rendering perfect service. True Christian culture leads to and expresses itself in service, while faithful and loving service is the best means of Christian culture.

Relatives and friends from abroad who attended the funeral were as follows: J. W. Brooker, Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Brooker, Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Leach, and Mr. and Mrs. H. K. Brooker of Detroit, Mich.; Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Travis and Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Moreland of St. Johns; and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Rogers of Dexter.

The funeral was held from Mr. Nixon's late residence Tuesday, October 4, at 2 p. m., Rev. Gates officiating. The remains were laid to rest in the cemetery at St. Johns Wednesday afternoon under the auspices of the F & A M fraternity of that place.

A NARROW ESCAPE

R. Clinton Had Arm Broken and Head Badly Cut

Last Sunday evening white R. Clinton, who is assisting at the Electric Light plant, was starting the large gas engine which in some way or other started unexpectedly, catching his arm in the wheel and throwing him to the cement floor. In the mix up his arm was broken and his head badly cut. Dr. Sigler was called as soon as possible and he was taken home where he is getting along as nicely as can be expected.

But for the timely assistance of Mr. Gardner who was there at the time and pulled him out from under the engine, Mr. Clinton might have been more seriously hurt or probably killed. Amos Clinton will take his father's place at the plant until his father is again able to be on the job. The friends of Mr. Clinton hope for an immediate recovery.

NO MISTAKE AFTER ALL

By GERALD PRINE

Copyright, 1924, by Associated Literary Press

Three months after she had promised to marry Dick Hathaway, Molly Abernathy was convinced that she had made a mistake. In a little less than that time it was made clear to Dick Hathaway that it would be criminal on his part to marry Molly Abernathy.

And that was not all, because Molly had become less attractive or Dick less than the perfect upright fellow he always had been. After an almost uninterrupted companionship of considerably longer than the period of their engagement, each was as willing as ever to bear testimony to the superlatively good qualities of the other and would have been highly indignant over any suggestion to the contrary. Molly still regarded Dick as "the dearest fellow in the world," and Dick had no desire to recall his estimate of Molly as "the sweetest girl on the footstool." Nothing whatever had occurred to convict either of these thoroughly conscientious young persons of inconstancy, but—

The "but" in the case of Molly Abernathy was a young man of singularly unattractive personal equipment and a name that offered no recompense for his lack of good looks. As a life burden H. Earlington Hopper was serious enough, but it would have been crushed with the initial H expanded to its full, Hooker. Clearly there was no fault to be found with the victim of such a baptismal combination because he had contracted into decent euphoniousness.

In point of fact, there was no fault to be found with H. Earlington Hopper on any account. He was as right-minded a young man as ever hung out at all; then the fairy said: "Pie on thee! The pledge of mortals may be doubted, but in heavenly beings there is no falsehood."

As I said, the "No" is the creation of the age when by the virtue of sutra, or Buddha's holy name, any straying ghosts or spirits in Hades were believed to enter Nirvana. There is no wonder that most of the plays have to deal with those ghosts and Buddhism. Here we have one play, called "Morning Glory"; the flower cannot enter Nirvana on account of her short life of only one morning and of her jealousies that burn on seeing the other flowers who enjoy a longer life. However, her ghost will disappear with satisfaction when the monk gives her a sermon that eternity is nothing but a moment, and to live in a moment is to live in the ages. The "No's" ghostliness and poetical imagination reach the climax in the play of "Yamauba," or the Mountain-woman, whose author is said to be Ikkyu, the famous priest. What does it represent? It is the play of a dancer called Yamauba, who strayed into a mountain, and actually saw the mountain-woman's mountain wandering. Our life is a part of mountain where we wander; the mountain-woman is a symbol of transmigration of soul and endlessness. And the dancer, Yamauba, is the incarnation of the ghost of the mountain-woman, who dances and wanders with her own real soul in the mountain. Such a symbolic play, I think, could be very well adapted to the western stage. Who wrote those "No" plays, you ask? The names of the authors are forgotten ages ago, because they were written in the time when we never asked who wrote them if the plays themselves were good.

strument, but she knew that if some one would come to her assistance—sit beside her on the bench at rehearsals, put steps under her—she would be her very own. Every man in the choir volunteered in the same breath. It was Molly Abernathy who disturbed her by how little it disturbed her to have Dick stand at the organ.

For more than two years Dick had walked home with Molly after choir practice, but the time came when neither of them felt aggrieved over the willingness of the other to abandon the habit. The interruption came about so naturally. Miss Ware was responsible for the seed. One evening after an unusual tug at a refractory anthem, which persisted in going wrong after every effort, had been made to induce it to do otherwise, the organist requested the tempo to remain for a few minutes after rehearsal in order to perfect himself in his part.

Instead of waiting until Dick should prove himself either the victor or vanquished, Molly was possessed of a sudden whim to start off alone, only to be intercepted at the door of the parish house by the choir-master who had returned in search of a paper he had mislaid.

"If you will give me one minute, Miss Abernathy," he said, "I will walk home with you—provided, of course, you will permit me."

Without pausing to receive her consent, he disappeared into the building, reappearing in rather less than the specified time with the recovered paper.

"I notified Hathaway of my intention," he laughed as they moved off.

"It wasn't at all necessary," she declared emphatically.

"He didn't hear me, I couldn't attract his attention."

"Was he singing?" She knew he wasn't, but she wanted to hear the answer.

"He hadn't begun. He was seated on the bench, his back toward me, and Miss Ware was talking earnestly—giving instruction, probably."

"Probably," she said, with an air of indifference that seemed genuine to him, lawyer though he was.

After Dick had swung over the baffling two measures or so at least a dozen times and had at last attained perfection Miss Ware dismissed him with a parting injunction not to forget that he was a tenor.

"And I hope I haven't offended Miss Abernathy by depriving her of your company—or you, either," she added, without looking at him.

"No need to worry on my account," Dick assured her. "As for Miss Abernathy—"

"I suppose Mr. Hopper availed himself of the opportunity to see her home safely. He seems to be greatly taken with—with her voice," she said.

"Wouldn't it be jolly if those two—"

Dick began and then hesitated.

"No—it wouldn't!" she returned so promptly and so decidedly that he wondered at it. Before he could ask her why not she had bidden him a hasty good-night and passed within.

Next evening when Dick put in his customary appearance at the Abernathy house he was told by the maid who admitted him that Molly had gone over to the rectory. He was both ashamed and relieved—humiliated by his treachery toward the girl who had promised him what he asked and relieved to find that the dreaded confession might still be postponed.

It so happened that Dick was spared the pain of that confession. An affair that came to a culmination on the very next night—an episode that stirred the social fabric of Eureka to its foundation—brought Dick and Molly together again, this time secure in the belief that their only mistake had been to doubt, even for a single moment, the gentleness of their attachment.

This final state of affairs was made possible by the elopement and marriage of H. Earlington Hopper and Helen Ware. They had been lovers long before coming to Eureka, but the young woman's friends had not taken kindly to the man of her choice. She, however, knew her own mind and was convinced that she was making no mistake.

"I will walk home with you—" his shingle as a lawyer, and he had scarcely captured his first client before practically all of the very nice girls in town were interested in him. The speed with which he became a social favorite in Eureka was phenomenal. He was so genial, so alive to the expectations of others, so unflinching in his efforts to establish a frank understanding with everybody, that he won recognition immediately as an A No. 1 fellow among the men and—the women.

Ignoring his plainness of face and awkwardness of figure and movement, the Eureka young women of all ages had become greatly interested in the sayings and, even more especially, in the doings of H. Earlington Hopper. And that, of course, included Molly Abernathy, who for some reason unrevealed to her was led by this interest to doubt the co-operation of heaven in her choice of Dick as a life companion.

By a most amazing coincidence there was also a "but" in the case of Dick Hathaway. A certain young woman named Helen Ware had come to town to visit her uncle, the rector of St. Jarlath's. Before she had been at the rectory a fortnight all the young men in the parish, and a host of those who were outside of it, woke up to the fact that she was an unusually attractive young person, and Dick was one of the young men of the parish. He did not precisely understand how it was, but whenever he stood in the presence of Helen Ware he found himself wishing—well—he found himself wishing.

Both Dick and Molly were members of the mixed choir at St. Jarlath's. Dick sang tenor when he did not forget and relapse into baritone, and Molly was possessed of an excellent contralto voice, but she was an indifferent reader. That was why it was necessary for H. Earlington Hopper, who had been made choir-master on account of his musical ability, to coach Molly privately whenever an alto solo was to be sung. Hopper believed that he had discovered great possibilities in Molly's voice, and after awhile alto solos were frequent at St. Jarlath's.

About that time the organist succumbed to the infirmities of old age, and Miss Ware consented to substitute temporarily. She did not profess to be mistress of the noble instrument, but she knew that if some one would come to her assistance—sit beside her on the bench at rehearsals, put steps under her—she would be her very own. Every man in the choir volunteered in the same breath. It was Molly Abernathy who disturbed her by how little it disturbed her to have Dick stand at the organ.

Why the Tiger Has Stripes.

It is not a mere matter of chance that the tiger's coat is marked with its beautiful stripes of black and yellow and that the lion is of a uniform sandy hue.

The former lives in the grassy jungles of Asia, where the giant blades of grass, as many feet long as they are inches in this country, and the light and shade of the forest are admirably matched by the skin of the animal in question. Hence it is able to approach its prey unperceived.

Lions, the big cats of Africa, on the other hand, are for the most part dwellers in the wilderness and roam the outskirts of the desert in search of food. Their color in these surroundings is equally protective.

These are countless examples of this protective coloration among animals. Sometimes, as in the case just cited, the object is to enable them to more easily obtain their food. But it also acts in another way by affording concealment to weak and timid creatures from their carnivorous enemies.—American Boy.

Ethel—Was she glad when he told her the old, old story?

Marjorie—You bet she was. Why, that girl never heard it before.

His First Lesson in Economy.

"When I was a very small boy and a dime looked pretty big to me, I met John H. Farley—who had always been my good friend—on the street one June day," says Frank Harris.

"Frank," he said, "the Fourth of July is coming soon. You'll want some change then. Let me be your banker until then and you'll have some money for firecrackers, torpedoes, lemonade and peanuts."

"I emptied my pockets into his hand and every day thereafter until the Fourth I turned over to him my small earnings. When the day of days came around I had a fund that enabled me to celebrate in proper style, while many of my playmates were flat broke. It was my first lesson in thrift, and it was a good one. Hundreds of Cleveland people would be glad today to testify to the fact that when John H. Farley was a friend of a man or a boy he was a friend indeed."—Cleveland Leader.

New Version.

"Now, Harry," said the Sunday school teacher to the brightest boy in the class, "can you tell me how Elijah died?"

"He didn't die at all," replied the youngster. "He was translated from the original Hebrew."

A FOOD DRINK, Which Brings Daily Enjoyment.

A lady doctor writes: "Though busy hourly with my own affairs, I will not deny myself the pleasure of taking a few minutes to tell of my enjoyment daily obtained from my morning cup of Postum. It is a food beverage, not a poison like coffee."

"I began to use Postum eight years ago, not because I wanted to, but because coffee, which I dearly loved, made my nights long weary periods to be dreaded and unfitting me for business during the day."

"On the advice of a friend, I first tried Postum, making it carefully as directed on the package. As I had always used cream and no sugar, I mixed my Postum so. It looked good, was clear and fragrant, and it was a pleasure to see the cream color it as my Kentucky friend always wanted her coffee to look—like a new saddle."

"Then I tasted it critically, for I had tried many 'substitutes' for coffee. I was pleased, yes, satisfied, with my Postum in taste and effect, and, as yet, being a constant user, I am these years."

"I continually assure my friends and acquaintances that they will find the place of coffee, and receive benefit from its use. I have gained weight, am sleep sound and am not nervous."

"There's a Reason."

A SCENE FROM "ATAKA" ONE OF THE "NO" PLAYS

the pine trees. The passage says: "True it is that these pine trees shed not all their leaves, their verdure remains fresh for ages long; even among evergreen trees—the emblems of unchangeableness—exalted is their fame to the end of time—the fame of the two pine trees that have grown old together." What are these two pine trees? Who are the old man and woman? The ghosts of the trees are nothing but the old man and woman slogging the age of golden and happy life. Oh, pine trees of the color of eternity and life, you are the symbol of peace and joy. Among some 300 repertoires now in existence there is no other like "The Robe of Feathers" that will gracefully carry the delicate statures beauty of composition and sentiment. It is the play of a fairy whose feather robe was stolen by a fisherman on Mio's pine-clad shore, while she was bathing, and upon her promise to dance was given back finally. Not to go to extreme even in sadness is taught in Japan to be the height of cultured manners; here we have every Oriental beauty and lamentation in this fairy who could not fly back to the sky, and sang:

Vainly my glance doth seek the heavenly plain,
Where rising vapours all the air enshroud,
And veil the well-known paths from cloud to cloud.

And she promised that she would dance the dance that makes the Palace of the moon turn round and would leave her dance behind us a token to mortal men, if her robe should be restored her. However, the fisherman doubted that she might hurry home to heaven without dancing at all; then the fairy said: "Pie on thee! The pledge of mortals may be doubted, but in heavenly beings there is no falsehood."

PHILIPPINE WITCHCRAFT

Belief in witchcraft is widespread in Pampanga province, a part of a communication to Manila from an investigator that they were beset with various bodily ills. The afflicted are called Magcalums, and the inhabitants scoff at the belief to be widespread as well as in the province. Extracts from a communication follows: "The belief in witchcraft is not confined to Pampanga, but exists to a degree in all, though I am only having a greater knowledge of people Lubao, Macabebe and the other provinces."

Abe—Peaches, by gosh.

"It doesn't always save nine," objected the man with a hole in his pocket. "I lost only $8.50."

"Oh, no," replied the great actor. "This is merely a farewell tour."

Those State Fair Tickets

We can't help but wonder if, when the management of the Michigan State Fair stood by with their hands in their pockets, and saw the crowds throwing into the grounds last week, if they didn't feel a little be ashamed, way down in their hearts, of those little yellow "Not Transferable" tickets which informed the men who had made these crowds possible and their ladies that they couldn't sit in the grand stand or on the quarter street without digging down in their jeans. In other words the state editors who had donated hundreds of inches of space to booming the fair, were informed that if they'd be real quiet and not raise a disturbance they could come inside the fence and look over the prize squash, etc. Michigan editors are easy marks anyway—that is they were this once, though it is doubtful whether they will be quite so much so another year.—Chelsea Tribune. The DISPATCH has the same opinion.

A LARGER PAPER

Changed From a Five to a Six Column This Week

Owing to our heavy advertising and in order to keep the paper up to its past and present new standard, we have been obliged to change it from a five to a six column. The price of the DISPATCH will remain the same—$1.00 per year.

We wish to thank our correspondents, whom we consider part of the staff in their efforts to get us news and hope they will continue as we will require a great amount of news in the change.

We wish also to notify our readers that by sending in news either by phone or mail, it would help us very much to make a good new paper as there is always a large number of items that we do not get if we do not know of them.

Remember that this office gets out as good job printing as can be secured in the county and at prices that are always reasonable. Also remember that work is always finished when promised.

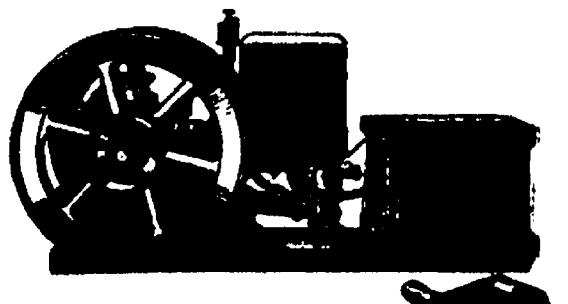

Believing that the change will be appreciated by our patrons, we remain

A Sad Accident

Geo. Rolfe, aged about 15 years the only support of a widowed mother last Sunday in the township of Iosco had just started to go hunting with a Wainwright boy, when his gun was accidentally discharged and he was perhaps fatally injured. Young Rolfe was sitting on a fence with his arm resting over the muzzle of the gun and in some unaccountable way it was discharged. The load passed through his right wrist and tore the whole side of his face off. Dr. J. E. Cunningham was called and after making an examination at once sent Mrs. McGarrah and Glenn. It was necessary to amputate the lad's arm just below the elbow.—Fowlerville Standard.

Last Monday young Rolfe was brought to the Sanatorium here for treatment and is doing as well as can be expected.

WILLIAM E. ROBB

William E. Robb, candidate for the Democrat ticket for Prosecuting Attorney, was born in the township of Deerfield thirty-five years ago. His early life was spent on the farm and in attending the district school. At the age of eighteen years he began to teach and continued for six years, teaching the last year as principal of the schools at Lake City, Mich. He graduated from the Fenton Normal School and obtained a teacher's first grade certificate from the State Board of Education. In 1900 he entered the law department of the U. of M. and worked his own way through Ann Arbor, graduating in 1903, locating in Howell to practice law in the fall. The Republican nominee for county clerk is Orville Phillips of Fowlerville. When Mr. Lyons who has served the county in a very acceptable manner for some years, declined for another term, other efforts were made to find a suitable man for clerk and the lot fell on Mr. Phillips. He has had the education and training and is in every way competent to fill the office of county clerk. He is also a young man just starting in life and the office will be of advantage to him. Give the young man a chance.

Orville Phillips is a son of George H. Phillips of Conway, and was born in Conway and was born in Conway Oct. 16, 1880. He was educated in the district school and public school of Fowlerville. He was elected township clerk in Haady, a strong democrat township, in the spring of 1908 and has experience in dealing with the public the greater part of his life and well qualified to serve in the capacity as clerk of Livingston county.

He understands the struggle and hardships of life and therefore knows how to understand and sympathize with others. He was married in 1905 and has a family of three children. In 1908 he was elected prosecuting attorney and during the past two years has made a good record as a trial lawyer, winning his cases against the ablest members of the bar. He is also a man of good business judgment and by making a careful investigation of the complaints, he has saved the county the unnecessary expenses and has put down the criminal expenses of the county during his term. The prosecuting attorney should be a strong, healthy man, as he is obliged to listen to the troubles of the community. It requires a great deal of patience and courage to perform his duties. It requires courage to prosecute on the one hand and courage not to prosecute where there is no evidence of merit. Cases should not be started unless some good will be accomplished for the community. In these respects Mr. Robb is well qualified. It has been customary in this county for a young man to practice law a few years and obtain experience before he was elected prosecuting attorney. Mr. Robb has been in practice for seven years, two years as prosecuting attorney, and has made a special study of the criminal law. He is now running for his second term, and it is customary for the people to elect a good officer for the second term because the people have the advantage of the experience without paying for educating a new man.

In Praise of the Eskimos.

Commander Peary in the narrative describing his discovery of the north pole devotes a very long chapter to the Eskimos, with whom he has had intimate dealings for eighteen years. He tells us that though they are savages they are not savage; that though they are without government they are not lawless; that though they are uneducated they exhibit a remarkable degree of intelligence. He assures us that they have no religion, yet he describes them as destitute of vice and ready to share their last meal with the hungry. He thinks it would be impossible to Christianize them, but they already possess the cardinal graces of faith, hope and charity, for "without them they could never survive the six months' night and the other rigors of their home."

Its positively guaranteed for coughs, colds, lagrippe, asthma, croup—all throat and lung troubles. 50c and $1. Trial bottle free at F. A. Sigler's.

CANT ENFORCE DEMURRAGE RULES

Hold Railroad Commission Exceeds Its Authority

LOSER IN SUPREME COURT

A Decision is Handed Down in Which It is Held That Rules Affect Interstate Commerce.

Lansing.—The Michigan railroad commission and the shippers of the state interested in the demurrage rules which the commission promulgated have been defeated in their attempt to enforce those rules. The Supreme court handed down a decision in which it is held that the rules affect interstate commerce and that the commission has no authority to supervise railroad operations except as regards state commerce.

The railroads of the lower peninsula promulgated a set of car demurrage rules through the Michigan car demurrage bureau on January 1, 1909. Later in the year the National Association of Railroad Commissioners composed a set of rules, which were later endorsed by the Interstate Commerce commission, and these rules the Michigan railroads adopted. Early in 1910 the state railroad commission, not being in sympathy with the national rules, promulgated a set more advantageous to Michigan shippers, which apply to the loading and unloading of cars coming and going from other states.

The Michigan Manufacturers' association took up the fight for the state rules and on March 1, 1910, the Ann Arbor railroad commenced proceedings to restrain the commission from enforcing the state rules on the grounds that they interfered with interstate commerce, over which the state commission has no authority.

The railroad commission filed a demurrer in which it was claimed that the rules simply apply to state commerce and do not directly affect interstate commerce, and that they are reasonable and within the power of the commission to establish. The Supreme court says the act creating the commission expressly limits the power of the commission to railroad business between points in this state. Says the court:

Roads' Plurality is Nearly 4,000.

The state board of canvassers has finished the work of canvassing the primary vote, showing that the total Republican vote on the governorship was 191,328, Osborn leading his closest rival, Patrick H. Kelley, by 35,933 votes.

The official canvass is in part as follows: United States Senator—Republican, Charles E. Townsend, 112,950; J. C. Burrows, 72,362; Democratic, J. T. Winslip, 2,511; scattering for 276 others, 1,144; Prohibition, W. A. Taylor, 1,677.

Governor—Republican, Chase S. Osborn, 88,270; P. H. Kelley, 52,337; A. S. Musselman, 50,721; Democratic, Lawton E. Hemans, 22,304; Prohibition, Fred W. Corbett, 1,733; Socialist, Joseph Warner, 792.

Lieutenant-Governor—Republican, J. Q. Ross, 62,657; L. D. Dickinson, 58,741; N. C. Rice, 44,298; Democratic, S. D. Williams, 272; J. W. Bailey, 241; Prohibition, Gerrit Hasenick, 43; Socialist, B. V. Lawrence, 1.

In the contested congressional districts: Second, Republican, W. W. Wedemeyer, 7,139; H. C. Smith, 5,383; Third, Republican, W. Gardner, 5,055; J. M. C. Smith, 7,738; Seventh, Republican, H. McMorran, 7,936; L. C. Cramton, 7,450; Tenth, Republican, George Loud, 8,626; Frank Reel, 7,936.

Confusion in the Primaries. Utter confusion in state politics promises to prevail in Michigan as a result of the primary election unless candidates ascertain at once whether they are on one or more tickets and make a choice of one ticket. The state board of canvassers is in session here and their early investigation of the returns show some extraordinary results in the primary election and some mighty amusing features.

Stephen D. Williams of Detroit is undoubtedly the nominee of the Democrats for lieutenant governor, but there are 412 other contestants for that honor, according to the list compiled by Secretary of State Martindale from the returns. Among the extraordinary things which the direct system of nominations has brought about is the fact that not only is Hon. Charles E. Townsend nominated for United States senator by the Republicans, but he is also nominated for state senator by the Prohibitionists of the Twenty-sixth district.

Score Badly Hurt in Addition to Fatalities—Attempt Made on Manufacturers' Secretary

The building and plant of the Los Angeles Times, one of the best known newspapers of the southwest, Gen. Harrison Gray Otis, publisher of the Los Angeles Times, was made following the explosion which caused great loss of life and destroyed the buildings and plant of the Times, and a suspected effort to blow up the auxiliary plant of that paper.

A powerful infernal machine was also found in the residence of Secretary Zeeland, of the Merchants & Manufacturers' association.

Between 20 and 30 sailors from the U. S. battleship New Hampshire were drowned in the North river, at New York, when their launch went under.

A party of some 400 of the New Hampshire's crew were due aboard boat. Knowing that some of the men would be early at the landing a steam launch and a sailing launch were at the landing to meet them.

Port Huron.—Edward Bennett, aged eighteen, is dying in the city hospital and Earl Simpson, aged twenty, is detained by the police as the result of a shooting affray which followed a friendly card game.

Owosso.—Because the farmers of this county are overwhelmed with bumper crops, County Trust Officer W. E. Cornford is investigating scores of complaints filed by principals and teachers of country schools to the effect that the pupils are being kept out of school to assist their sires.

Saginaw.—Horace H. Jackson of Saginaw was caught under a fall of rocks at the Riverside mine. His back was broken by the cave-in and he lived only a few moments after being rescued.

Carsonville.—Petitions are being circulated through Sanilac county to have the local option question submitted to the voters and, judging from all reports, the question will be voted on at the election next spring.

Grand Rapids.—W. I. Hallock, foreman of a gang of carpenters, fell twenty feet from a scaffold on a building in the course of erection here, and is lying in Butterworth hospital with a fractured skull.

Grand Rapids.—Three persons are in a critical condition in Butterworth hospital, the result of mistaking toothpicks for mushrooms and eating them. They are Mr. and Mrs. Charles Pilton and Urie Pratt.

East Lansing.—The various class meetings are being held at M. A. C. and Clarence McGee, formerly a member of the Detroit Central high school and well-known athlete, was elected president of the freshman class.

Grand Rapids.—Physicians say that fumes from a kerosene heater in a bathroom caused the death of James E. Ames, sixty-six years old. He went into the bathroom and when, half an hour later, he failed to come out, his daughter started to hunt for him. She found him dead in the bathtub.

Lansing.—Mrs. Verne Edison was painfully burned by an explosion of a gasoline stove which she was attempting to light. After the explosion the woman bravely carried the stove from the house, thereby saving the home from burning. The damage to the house was slight.

The Greatest Historian.
By common consent the greatest of all historians in Thucydides, the Greek contemporary of Pericles and author of the history of the Peloponnesian war. One of the greatest tributes that can be paid to him is that, according to the estimate of a very able critic, we have a more exact account of a long and eventful period by Thucydides than we have of any period in modern history, equally long and eventful, and yet all this is compressed into a single volume. For concise, vigorous and yet intense presentation Thucydides has never been equaled. He is easily the king of historians.—New York American.

It Did.
"Do you know anything, doctor," said Mrs. Finnikin, "that will put a little color into my cheeks? I am so dreadfully pale."
"Well, madam," replied Dr. Blunt, "perhaps if I tell you that you have a hole in your stocking about the size of a quarter it may have the desired effect."
Customs and Habits.
Our customs and habits are like the ruts in roads. The wheels of life settle into them, and we jog along through the mire because it is too much trouble to get out of them.
Why She Didn't.

NEW LIGHTING PLANT
To be installed at Stockbridge by Finchney Men

Glenn Gardner and J. A. Odwell of this place have been negotiating with the Common Council of the village of Stockbridge for the past two months for the purpose of establishing an electric lighting plant in that village and last Monday evening the proposal was accepted.
Work will be started at once, the contract calling for the plant to be in operation in three months. The street lighting as well as the plant, will be an exact duplicate of the one here.
Mr. Gardner does not intend to give up the plant here and experiments have been carried out to the extent that he has found it practicable for an all night service which is expected to be started within the next few days. The idea is to bring the plant here up to such a standard as to be used as a model for other plans throughout the state which Mr. Gardner intends to install.
Arrangements have been made with R. Clinton to operate the plant here while Mr. Gardner will look after the plant at Stockbridge until everything is in running order.
Stockbridge is to be congratulated on securing a lighting system for that village.

CHAS. F. JUDSON
Republican Nominee For County Treasurer
The people of this part of the county are of the unanimous opinion that the republicans made no mistake in nominating Charles F. Judson for the responsible position of county treasurer. He is a native of Livingston county and has spent his entire life in the township of Brighton. He has always been a farmer, though for a few years he was in the drug and grocery business in this village.
He served the township of Brighton for six years as treasurer and nine years as supervisor and has always enjoyed the sincere confidence of the public whether in business or public office. Indeed Mr. Judson has won over some of the best men in the county with the largest majorities ever given any candidate for a township office here. All of these things prove that he is an honest, conscientious, painstaking official and one whom the people of Livingston county will have no hesitancy in placing in charge of the county's funds.

He was a candidate for the office of county treasurer two years ago but did not push his claims owing to the fact that the present incumbent had held the office with credit to himself for one term.
Mission at St. Mary's Church October 16-23rd
The Paulist Mission to be given at St. Mary's church will open with High Mass on Sunday, October 16th and close with High Mass on Sunday October 23rd. All are invited to attend and hear the doctrines of the Catholic church explained. Anyone may ask questions and all the questions will receive the careful consideration of the speaker. A question box will be placed in the Post-office on Monday, October 10th that everyone who desires may ask any question pertaining to Religion. The answers will be given every evening at 7:30.
The Paulist Order was founded for the purpose of giving Missions to Non-Catholics. Many of the truths of the Catholic church are not understood and seem different and hard even to those who have read the Sacred Scriptures. The Paulist Father explains the doctrines of the church in a clear, simple style. They give to all questions the same attention, that all may clearly see that the doctrines of the church and the teaching of Christ are one and the same. All are invited and will be made welcome. No visiting is permitted and silence is requested from all while within the House of the Lord.
