Warren Curtis Lewis

Warren Curtis Lewis was born in New York May 15, 1831 and died in Putnam April 5, 1913, aged 81 years and 11 months.

At the age of 4 years he came to Michigan with his parents where his childhood days were spent and he grew to manhood. On March 31, 1861 he was united in marriage to Wilmina Wooden of Iosco. To this union were born three children, Leon and Guy at home and Mrs. John Chambers of Putnam. After his marriage he resided in Iosco for a few years, moving from there to Emmett county where he lived for twelve years. He then moved to Lenawee county from which place he removed to the farm in Putnam where he died. For a number of years he has been a patient sufferer but always trusted in his Savior for help. Besides his wife and children he leaves three grandchildren, two sisters, Mrs. M. Stout of Putnam and Mrs. C. Gould of Conway and one brother, Theodore, of Fenton, and a host of other relatives and friends. Funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon at Pinckney Cong'l church. Rev. Ripon officiated. **

Teachers Examination

The Teachers examination will be held at Howell April 24th & 25th, in the central building. The Examination will begin promptly at 8 o'clock standard time. Every teacher and principal of this county were notified by personal letter early last fall that it would be impossible for anyone to pass either the April or August examinations without having done the Reading Circle work, as one half the grammar questions are based on, Wiche's "Great Stories and How to tell them" and one half of the Geography questions will be based on Sutherland's "Teaching of Geography." Those expecting to take the April examination must have their Reading Circle work handed in in time to be looked over before the examination.

The Department of Agriculture has just issued a report showing the average farm wages to be $20.81 including board for farm labor by the month and $1.14 for day labor, except during the harvest. According to this report some parts of the country must have had a very low wage to bring it to so low an average. No farmer in Michigan is able to secure help at such prices.

There's a smudge in the garden, a smoke in the air; a smell combined of burnt leather and hair. There's a girl on the lawn with a rake in hand; there's woe and dis-all over the land. There's carpets to beat and rugs to shake; enough of such work to make a man quake. There's stoves to be moved and carpets to put down, no wonder a man wants to leave town.

School Notes

Ella Fitch returned to school after two weeks illness.

Ruth Clark was absent last week on account of sickness.

LaVern Fisk visited school Monday afternoon.

Edna Webb visited school Monday afternoon.

About forty couple attended the Junior dance last Friday evening.

SYNOPSIS.

Robert Cameron, capitalist, consults Philip Clyde, newspaper publisher, regarding anonymous threatening letters he has received. The first promises a sample of the writer's power on a certain day. On that day the head is mysteriously cut from a portrait of Cameron while the latter is in the room. While visiting Cameron in his dressing room a Nell Gwynne mirror is mysteriously shattered. Cameron becomes seriously ill as a result of the shock. The third letter appears mysteriously on Cameron's sick bed. It makes direct threats against the life of Cameron. Clyde tells Cameron the envelope was empty. He tells Evelyn everything and plans to take Cameron on a yacht trip. The yacht picks up a fisherman found drifting helplessly in a boat. He gives the name of Johnson. Cameron disappears from yacht while Clyde's back is turned. A fruitless search is made for a motor boat seen by the captain just before Cameron disappeared. Johnson is allowed to go after being tenderly questioned. Evelyn takes the letters to an expert in Chinese literature, who pronounces them of Chinese origin. Clyde seeks assistance from a Chinese fellow college student, who recommends him to the most prominent Chinaman in New York. Clyde goes to meet Yip Sing, sees Johnson, attempts to follow him, falls into a basement, sprains his ankle and becomes unconscious. Clyde is discovered by Miss Clement. She is a missionary among the Chinese. He is sick several days as a result of inhaling charcoal fumes. Evelyn tells Clyde of a peculiarly acting anesthetist which renders a person temporarily unconscious. Murphy is discovered to have mysterious relations with the Chinese. Miss Clement promises to get information about Cameron. Slump in Crystal Consolidated, of which Cameron is president, is caused by a rumor of Cameron's illness. Clyde finds Cameron on Fifth avenue in a dazed and emaciated condition and takes him home. Cameron awakes from a long sleep and speaks in a strange tongue. Evelyn declares the man is not her uncle. Evelyn and Clyde call on Miss Clement for promised information and find that the Chinaman who was to give him had just been murdered. Miss Clement gives Clyde a note, asking him to read it after he leaves the mission and then destroy it. It tells of the abduction of a white man by Chinese who shipped him back to China. The man is accused of the crime of "Sable Lorcha" in which 100 Chinamen were killed. The appearance in New York of the man they supposed they had shipped to China throws consternation into the Chinese. The break-up in which Clyde and Evelyn are riding in held up by an armed man. Clyde is seized by Murphy and a fight ensues. Evelyn and Clyde are rescued by the police and return home. Miss Clement gives Clyde and the Chinese consul awaiting them. Yip tells Clyde the story of the crime of the "Sable Lorcha" in which 97 Chinamen were deliberately sent to their death by one Donald M'Nish, whom they decide to kill. They declare that M'Nish can be identified by a tattoo mark on his arm. Clyde declares that Cameron has no such mark. The nurse is called in and describes a tattoo mark on her patient's arm. Clyde goes to investigate and finds the patient attempting to hide a letter. It is addressed to Donald M'Nish. The letter is from the man's mother in Scotland and identifies the patient as M'Nish. Confronted by the sole survivor of the "Sable Lorcha"—who, it develops, is Boy, a half-breed Chinaman, recognized by Clyde as Johnson, the fisherman—M'Nish shoots him and kills himself. Miss Clement gets the whole story from Boy before he dies. Murphy, whose right name is Moran, had been a partner of M'Nish in the Chinese trade and later became his most relentless pursuer. He was the author of the threatening letters. Boy was responsible for the mysterious happenings at Cameron's home by the aid of the other crew members. Cameron was drugged and shipped as a member of the crew of a tramp steamer bound for Hongkong.

CHAPTER XXVII.—Continued.

So far as I could judge, the Glamorganshire would call at Algiers in a few days; and for a while I considered the advisability of communicating with the United States Consul at that port, through the State Department at Washington. But a knowledge of the tortuous involutions of official red tape deterred me. After all, I believed that if Cameron was to be rescued from the grueling slavery of servitude on this British freighter, the work must not be entrusted to the personally disinterested.

Thereupon I consulted calendars, steamer schedules, and Continental time-tables. By the fast transatlantic liner sailing on the morrow, I could make Paris in six days. Forty-eight hours later I could be in Brindisi. If good fortune followed, less than four days more would land me at Port Said. It was now Monday, November 23. Twelve days hence would be December 5th, and the Glamorganshire, her agents had told me, could not possibly reach there before December 6th. The margin was not wide, but it seemed to me sufficient, and the thought of further inaction, now that the trail lay bare, was nothing less than unendurable torment.

Wisdom, I suppose, would have dictated the advisability of securing some badge of authority from my own government before setting forth on a mission involving so delicate a point of international maritime law as that which was here embraced; but the saving of time was with me, just then, the paramount consideration. The loss of a day meant the possible missing not only of connections, but of the main object of my journey; and so, armed with nothing more potent than good health, strong determination, and a well-filled purse I boarded the Kronprinz Wilhelm and started on my diagonal race to head off a quarry which already had twenty-five days' start of me.

Speed being all-important, my wish was to travel alone and unencumbered, but at the last moment I was persuaded to consent to the company of both Evelyn Grayson and Dr. Addison. Realizing the brave, unfaltering assistance which the young woman had afforded me from the first, I could hardly refuse to gratify her wish to be present at what we both hoped would be the victorious end. Moreover, the thought of absence from her for a month at least, and probably much longer, was far from the most pleasant contemplation; my yielding, therefore, was not altogether unselfish.

Dr. Addison's case was different. At the last moment he decided to go abroad by the same ship; and, on the way over, touched by his contrition and his almost pathetic desire to make amends to his quondam friend at the earliest possible minute, I myself invited him to go with us the rest of the way.

Evelyn had proposed that Mrs. Lancaster should also be included in the party, but this I would not hear of. If, for propriety's sake, another presence was necessary, her maid, and, ultimately, Dr. Addison, afforded all the security the conventions could demand.

The fever of haste was upon all of us from the start. The time on ship-board, in spite of our common subject of converse dragged eternally.

Should we reach Cherbourg in time to connect with the P. & O. Express at Paris? That was the one constantly recurring question, to be speculated upon with varying degrees of hope and despair.

As good fortune would have it, we made the train with fifteen minutes to spare, and the run to Brindisi was accomplished without accident or unseemly delay.

Here, however, we were compelled to wait six hours. The steamer was late, owing to some seismic disturbance off the coast of Malta, and fear of encountering new and necessarily uncharted volcanic islands, had demanded slow and cautious sailing.

However sinister had been the game Fate played with us in the earlier stages of our quest, the favor of its present mood could not be gainsaid. That we were now reasonably sure of reaching Port Said in advance of the Glamorganshire was in itself a welcome relief from trying anxiety; but that was only a small part of the banquet of good things provided for us.

I was still exercised in a measure over the steps which must be taken to secure Cameron's release. Without proper introduction to the authorities, it was becoming more and more a question in my mind whether, after all, I should be able to accomplish my end in the brief time to which I was restricted.

With this fell possibility of failure dinging in my reflections, I was striding the white deck of the P. and O. steamer, in the early morning following the night of our departure from Brindisi, when a hand, dropped heavily on my shoulder, spun me round to face a laughing, sun-browned, young Englishman in white flannels.

For just a moment I was literally, as well as figuratively, taken aback, for the tone of the ringing voice which greeted me carried me five years at least into the past, when Lionel Hartley and I had ridden to hounds together at Melton Mowbray, while fellow-guests at a house-party in the neighborhood.

"You bally Yankee!" he was shouting. "Fancy running into you in this fashion! I'm jolly glad to see you, old chap!"

Though my delight at seeing him was at that moment tempered by absorbing interest in my mission, it rose a few minutes later to unadulterated ecstasy, when I discovered that he was stationed at Port Said, and occupied what seemed to me just then one of the most important posts in the British Foreign Service—secretary to the Governor General for the Suez Canal.

"You're going to Cairo, I suppose?" he hazarded.

"No," I replied. "I'm going with you, and I shall not let you out of my sight, my friend, until you have proved you're something more than a figure-head stuck up in the Egyptian sands."

"If there's any little thing I can do," he began; but I interrupted him.

"There's a very big thing you can do," I corrected. And then I told him, "What a lark!" he cried, refusing to recognize the serious side of it. "Fancy one of your American multimillionaires passing opal on a British freighter."

"Passing opal!" I exclaimed. "What not! Surely they wouldn't—"

"Oh, wouldn't they?" he broke in. "That's just what they would do. He isn't an able-bodied seaman, is he? You can safely wager he's an experienced stoker, or at least a trimmer by this time."

"Don't, Hartley, don't," I protested. "It's too cruel to think of—"

"Never mind, old chap," was his rejoinder. "There's a good time coming. We'll have him out and washed and dressed and sitting at table with us an hour after the old tub lets her anchor drop. And I'll wager you a tenner that there won't be a miss in any part of the programme."

When, at breakfast, I told Evelyn the good news—omitting, of course, all reference to the coal-handling suggestion—she demanded that I hunt up Hartley, at once, and present him. Discretion, however, seemed to me in this instance, the better part of obedience. I did hunt Hartley up and I did present him, but not until I had allowed time for the first flush of Evelyn's fervor to cool.

He was a very good-looking young chap; Evelyn was both grateful and impulsive, and I—was in love.

Our landing at Port Said was made on the morning of Saturday, the fifth of December, and all that day and the next, we waited in more or less constant expectancy and a boiling temperature for tidings of the tardy Glamorganshire.

Hartley, meanwhile, was a model of hospitality, but Port Said is primarily a coaling station on the sea-edge of the desert, and aside from the concrete docks, the ships, the light house, and the nearly naked Nubians that swarmed everywhere, it proved utterly lacking in objects of interest.

Sunday night brought some small relief from the intolerable heat, and grateful for the respite, all four of our little party were early to bed. Gradually we had come to believe that our waiting was likely to be prolonged. The earthquake at Malta having delayed one vessel would in all probability delay others as well, including that which we had come so far to intercept. So, utterly worn out by nervous tension and the fatigue of the tropical climate, we found rest grateful, and slept soundly. Just how soundly was demonstrated when, at an hour after midnight, three resounding knocks on my hotel chamber door only roused me, dully, and left Evelyn and her maid and Dr. Addison, who occupied adjacent rooms, in deep slumber, totally undisturbed.

With what seemed almost superhuman effort, I spurred myself to consciousness and struggled up on elbow. "Who's there?" I called.

"Hartley," came the answer. "Open the door. I thought you'd died of Port Said ennui!" And when I had sleepily risen and admitted him he went on hurriedly. "Make haste, now, old chap! The bally freighter has just come in, and I don't propose to lose that tenner through dilatory methods on your part."

But I needed no urging. Wide awake at his first sentence, I was already dinging on my clothes. He still chattered on in his chaffing way, but I scarcely heard him. Conscious only of the murmur of his pleasant, cheery English voice, my thoughts were out in the night, across the waters of the harbor, down in the inferno of a rusty ocean tramp, where a sweating stoker was giving battle to despair—a sweating stoker who, in far-away America, owned a pleasure craft almost as big as the ship whose fires he had been feeding for forty days across two seas.

"How about the doctor?" Hartley asked, as I slipped my arms into my coat sleeves and snatched a cap from a closet peg.

"It's too late now," was my answer. "You should have reminded me. I forgot all about him." And it was true. I had forgotten everything, except the imminence of the rescue and the urgency of haste. To one in Cameron's plight every fretting minute must count a drop of torture.

The heavens were splendid with tropic stars, and a faint breeze from the sea gently ruffled the spangled black harbor waters, as Hartley's launch, guided by a pilot of experience, headed for the twinkling lights of the recently anchored freighter.

Silently I sat, with gaze straining, watching the indicated sparks grow larger and brighter, moment by moment, until at length their gleams reflected in the waves, and their background emerged in a great dark shadow, which silhouetted itself against the less opaque sky.

"There she is!" Hartley cried in enthusiasm, as her funnel and masts somberly defined themselves above the black of her hull. "We'll be able to hail her in another minute."

Then I heard the voice of our helmsman ring out. And presently there was an answering shout from above, and an exchange of greetings, succeeded by directions; and the next moment, I was following Hartley up a swaying rope-ladder to where an outboard lantern glowed overhead.

"Yes, Secretary to the Governor General," I heard my friend saying, as I put foot on the iron deck. "You're Captain Murchison, I suppose."

The captain's affirmative was more than deferential; it was obsequious. He was not a tall man, but broad, rugged and bearded, with long, powerful, gorilla-like arms out of all proportion to his stature. I could readily fancy him an ugly antagonist. Unfused by Hartley, I concluded, I should have had small chance indeed of success. But the low-born Briton's respect for official authority was evidently strong in him, and I felt that if Cameron was aboard we should be able to effect his rescue with a minimum of effort.

"I should like to see you in your cabin, Captain," Hartley proposed, and when we were closeted there, he continued: "There is a report that you have among your crew a United States subject who was brought aboard, drugged, and forced to remain aboard against his will. His government has interested itself in his behalf, and unless he is restored at once to his friends serious complications will undoubtedly ensue."

The captain, despite his respect for authority, frowned.

"There's nothing to that report, sir," he said, boldly. "I'm not shanghaiing men in these days, sir. Every mother's son I've got on this boat shipped for Hong Kong, sir, of his own free will and accord."

"I dare say you fully believe that, Captain Murchison," was Hartley's diplomatic rejoinder, "but this time you happen to be mistaken. I don't suppose you have any objection to our inspecting your crew, have you? Suppose you have both the watches piped forward, and we'll settle this little business for ourselves. Mr. Clyde, here, knows the man."

Captain Murchison's glance at me was undisguisedly venomous. Reluctantly he rang for his steward.

"Send the bo'sun here," he directed, doggedly.

"We'll begin at the bottom, Captain," Hartley suggested, when the boatswain, cap in hand, stood in the doorway. "First, I want to see every man Jack you have working in the stoke hold."

Although the master gave the necessary directions I mistrusted him. Between the boatswain and himself I felt that there was an understanding which required neither voicing nor signal. And as, a little later, we stood on the forward deck, under the bridge, and by the light of a lantern viewed one after another of those swarthy, grimy laborers who had crowded up from below, I was convinced of the correctness of my intuition. For Cameron was not among them.

And then a chill fear gripped me. Could a man of his habits and training, suddenly called upon to assume such labor, survive its rigors? He was naturally robust, but he had been weakened by an illness. Might he not therefore have succumbed to the strain, died, and been buried at sea?

But one consideration sustained me. In their cunning cruelty, the Chinese who had arranged for his transportation must have stipulated that he be delivered in China alive. Otherwise their vengeance would not be complete. It was not likely that anything had been left to mere chance. The probabilities were that Murchison knew definitely what was required of him and was to be well paid for his services.

Upon his seamed face, now, there was something of a sneer as our examination concluded, he said:

"What next, Mr. Hartley?"

But for a moment Hartley, who was standing thoughtfully with brow contracted, his lower lip gripped between finger and thumb, made no response. Before he spoke his attitude changed. Quickly he had assumed a pose of listening intentness. Behind us, somewhere, a clamor had arisen. Voices, excited, hoarse, frenzied, yet muffled by distance, echoed dully.

"That man, next, Captain," he said, coolly. "The man they're trying to keep below."

It may have been that his hearing was more acute than mine, or it may only have been a guess. I don't know. But, whichever it was, it hit the mark. It scored a bull's eye at long range. Captain Murchison's indifference gave way instantly to palpable uneasiness. His hands, which had been deep in his coat pockets, came out as though jerked by springs. One of them canted his cap from his brow to his crown and the other clutched agitatedly at his beard. And in that moment the riot advanced, the voices waxed louder and more distinct; scurrying feet resounded on the metal deck.

I saw the captain start hurriedly toward the starboard rail, intent evidently on meeting the rabble which was approaching on that side, and I saw Hartley boldly block his way. And then, almost at the same instant, I saw a tall figure with naked torso as black and shining as polished ebony—black with grime and shining with sweat—come running backward around the corner of the deck house. Saw it with an iron bar held menacingly aloft against its pressing pursuers; and even in the uncertain light of the deck lanterns, recognized it at once, by its outline and the characteristic set of its head upon its shoulders, nude to the waist, and collared as it was, as the figure of the man I sought.

"Cameron!" I cried, chokingly, my fast-beating heart crowding my utterance. And all unmindful of the dirt which covered him I flung my arms about his waist from behind. "Cameron! Cameron! Thank God! Thank God!"

I heard the iron bar drop resoundingly to the deck. I heard Hartley's voice raised in anger, strident, ecstatic; and I heard the screeching shuffle of feet as those who had pursued were backed away. There followed then a moment of silence, while the body I had held twisted out of my arms, and having released itself, turned and faced me—a moment of silence, only for against the sudden stillness there now rang out a weird, piteous cry, born of surcharged emotion, as Cameron, casting himself forward into my arms, buried his face in the angle of my neck and shoulder.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

A Final Problem.

It is doubtful whether in all Egypt there was ever such another period of joyous thanksgiving as that which followed the bringing of Cameron to the little hotel in Port Said. I am inclined to question, too, whether in the space of a single waking day four persons ever talked more, or with more mutual interest, than did the four of us there gathered. The heat, the flies, the poor food, and the miserable accommodations, generally, were not merely gladly tolerated, but absolutely disregarded. In the exuberance of our rejoicing, annoyances which had loomed large on the preceding day dwindled to the imperceptible; and from early morning until late night experiences were exchanged, adventures told and speculations indulged in.

Washed, scrubbed, shaved, shorn and clad in raiment put at his disposal by the indefatigable Hartley, Cameron appeared wonderfully well-looking. Indeed I was amazed by his appearance and by his condition. I had feared to find him a mental and physical ruin. I had feared even for his life. And he had come to us, if we might judge by outward seeming, stronger, more robust, less nervously relaxed than when he disappeared.

"At first," he told us, as we sat at breakfast in a little upper room of the hotel, Evelyn close on his right, Dr. Addison at his left, and I opposite him, "I suppose I did suffer, whenever I was conscious, which, fortunately, I think, was comparatively seldom. They dosed me almost continuously with what I believe to have been some attribute of opium, so that even in my waking moments I was not wholly normal. In this way, of course, I lost all count of time. And so, too, I am unable to give events in sequence. My first conscious moment after being on the deck of the Sibylla found me strapped in a narrow berth on a rapid, but rather rough-riding craft of apparently much smaller dimension than the yacht, and with a Chinese boy sitting beside me. You can fancy my startled amazement at the sudden transition. In vain I asked questions. In vain I struggled to rise. Then I shouted, and the Chinese boy lighted what appeared to be an ordinary joss-stick on a stand at the head of my berth, and withdrew from the tiny cabin. Insensibility followed quickly. After that I have a vague, dreamy recollection of eating something with a strange, spicy flavor, which seemed only to add to my stupor. Once I dreamed—at least I think it must have been a dream—that I was in a dark box, so cramped that my bones ached, and that far away above me were little holes through which the light came in luminous fan-like rays that glowed against the black."

"I'm inclined to think it was no dream," I put in, recalling the newspaper story I had read in my broker's office, in Wall street. "The probabilities are that you were shipped in that box from Fall River to New York, and a certain influential Chinaman, called Yip Sing, knew all about it."

"It's quite possible," Cameron went on. "I know that it was very difficult to distinguish, in those days, between dreams and realities. Eventually, however, I awoke to find myself on the Glamorganshire, quartered with the men in the forecabin, a beard well grown and my clothes the coarsest sort of mariner's outfit. For a while I was far too ill for labor. The reaction from the drugs which had been administered caused me the keenest suffering. But, gradually, I came about, and was set to work with paint pot and brush. The humanity shown me at this time was surprising. I couldn't comprehend it. But I realized eventually that my strength was being fostered for future torment."

Great Painter's Studio.

Cecilia Beaux, whom most people credit with being the best known woman portrait painter in the world, has built herself a remarkable house at Gloucester, Mass. It's such a wonderful house that people write it up and print pictures of it and of the equally interesting garden which runs down to the sea. And yet no one ever seems to think of writing up an equally important place, Miss Beaux's city studio. She paints all winter long in a high place overlooking Gramercy park. Having the top apartment, her view is unobstructed. There is no ocean to be sure, but it is a splendid studio.—New York Press.

The Lost Is Found.

When you lose a thing it is usually gone for good—especially if it is worth much. A man who lives in a town in Pennsylvania lost a plain gold ring 15 years ago. His name was engraved inside it, but no one ever brought it back to him. So he gave it up and forgot it. But last month it was returned to him. A neighbor found it in his pigeon loft. It is supposed that a pigeon found the shining bit and carried it to the loft, where it lay unnoticed until a month ago.

A HIDDEN DANGER

It is a duty of the kidneys to rid the blood of uric acid, an irritating poison that is constantly forming inside.

When the kidneys fail, uric acid causes rheumatic attacks, headaches, dizziness, gravel, urinary troubles, weak eyes, dropsy or heart disease.

Doan's Kidney Pills help the kidneys fight off uric acid—bringing new strength to weak kidneys and relief from backache and urinary ills.

An Indiana Case
Mrs. George Harrington, Crawfordsville, Ind., says: "My limbs would twinge several times, and my body was so bloated I could hardly breathe. I had awful pains in my back and terrible headaches. I spent weeks in a hospital, but came out worse than ever. I had given up hope when I began using Doan's Kidney Pills. They cured me completely, and I have had no trouble since."

Shorthand Typewriter.

A new machine, called the stenotype, has been invented, which enables the shorthand writer to get from 400 to 600 words a minute upon paper in an absolutely correct and accurate form. The basis of operating a machine is phonetic spelling. It is but a shorthand typewriter. While the work done is virtually the same as done by shorthand it has the advantage of being recorded in plain English characters.

ALLIES REFUSE TO BE COERCED

BALKAN STATES SUBMIT TERMS OF PEACE TO EUROPEAN POWERS.

VICTORS ADOPT AN INDEPENDENT POLICY.

Seem to Wish War Prolonged Until Scutari is Captured by Montenegrans in a Dilemma.

The progress of Balkan affairs is giving European diplomacy some uneasy moments.

The allies have taken a stiff-necked independent attitude and refuse to accept orders from the powers. The question is, if it becomes necessary to coerce them, how can that be done.

The allies recognize this dilemma and realize that the concert of Europe is not as harmonious as a month ago. The present policy of the Balkan states is to debate the peace terms and continue the war at least until Montenegro has captured Scutari.

The smallest kingdom in Europe continues to defy the six great powers. King Nicholas talks freely to interviewers, declaring that he will take and keep the town, which he considers necessary to the prosperity of his kingdom.

The allies have submitted to the powers their formal reply to the suggested basis for peace negotiations with Turkey.

The reply purports to be an acceptance of the mediation conditions, but the acceptance is subject to reservations which practically repudiate the proposed terms.

To Debate New Constitution

Arrangements were completed at Columbus, Ohio, for a series of joint debates to be delivered from coast to coast next fall between Rev. Herbert S. Bigelow of Cincinnati, president of Ohio's recent constitutional convention, and former Governor Frank Hanly of Indiana, on the question: "Resolved, that the federal constitution is outgrown and obsolete and should be amended or altered in its fundamentals, or a new one substituted." Rev. Mr. Bigelow will take the affirmative and former Governor Hanly the negative side of the question.

Labor Leaders are Liberated

William D. Haywood, leader of the International Workers of the World, and Adolph Lessor, strike leader, walked out of the supreme court house at Patterson, N. J., free men. He and his comrade had been liberated from the charge of unlawful assembly, for which more than 200 strikers are now awaiting trial. At the sight of their leaders a vast throng of strikers set up a mighty shout. The judge held that in this country people have a right to gather to discuss their grievances with certain restrictions, whether these grievances have any basis or not.

Two Killed in B. and O. Wreck

Two men were killed, four scalded, two of them severely, and five others injured when eastbound passenger train No. 6, on the Baltimore & Ohio railroad, ran through an open switch at North Baltimore, Ohio, and the engine torn loose from the rest of the train, crashed through the depot at Hoytville, four miles west.

Fireman Jackson was killed instantly. Grant Mason the other dead man, was in the depot waiting room. His entire body was scalded by escaping steam.

150,000,000 Parcels Handled.

More than 150,000,000 parcels post packages were mailed during the first three months the system was in operation, according to computations announced by postal experts, and based on reports from the 50 largest post-offices. Approximately 55 per cent more business was handled in March than in January. Chicago leads all other cities, 6,895,744 parcels being handled in two months; New York handled 5,973,973, and Boston 1,637,036.

World Drive Out Lean Sharks

Sixty heads of big Chicago industrial enterprises, employing an aggregate of 100,000 persons, have subscribed funds whereby they expect to drive local loan "sharks" out of business.

The scheme is the simple one of establishing a loan agency of their own and for this purpose $50,000 has been paid in.

CHARGE ON THE COMMUNITY

Care of Those Afflicted With Tuberculosis Plainly a Drag on the General Welfare.

Dr. H. L. Barnes, superintendent of the Rhode Island state sanitarium, has recently demonstrated by some interesting studies of patients discharged as "apparently cured" from that institution, that a sanitarium is a sound investment for any state or city. The gross earnings of 170 ex-patients obtained in 1911 amounted to $102,752, and those of 211 cases in 1912, to $112,021. By applying the same average earnings to all ex-patients of the sanitarium living in 1911 and 1912, Dr. Barnes concludes that their income in these two years was $551,000. This sum is more than three times the cost of maintenance of the sanitarium, including interest at four per cent on the original investment and depreciation charges. Dr. Barnes concludes, however, "While institutions for the cure of tuberculosis are good investments, there is good reason for thinking that institutions for the isolation of far advanced cases would be still better investments."

BREAKING OUT ON LEG

Hilltop, Kan.—"About two years ago I began to notice a breaking out on my leg. At first it was very small but soon it began to spread until it formed large blotches. The itching was terrible and almost constant. Many nights I could not sleep at all. After scratching it to relieve the itching it would burn so dreadfully that I thought I could not stand it. For nearly a year I tried all kinds of salves and ointment, but found no relief. Some salves seemed to make it worse until there were ugly sores, which would break open and run.

"One day I saw an advertisement of Cuticura Remedies. I got a sample of the Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment and began by washing the sores with the Cuticura Soap, then applying the Cuticura Ointment twice a day. I noticed a change and got more Cuticura Soap and Ointment and in a few weeks I was cured. It has healed so nicely that no scar remains." (Signed) Mrs. Anna A. Lew, Dec. 17, 1911.

Cuticura Soap and Ointment sold throughout the world. Sample of each free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. L, Boston," Adv.

FOLEY KIDNEY PILLS

CONSTIPATION

Munyon's Paw-Paw Pills are unlike all other laxatives or cathartics. They coax the liver into activity by gentle methods, they do not scour; they do not gripe; they do not weaken; but they do start all the secretions of the liver and stomach in a way that soon puts these organs in a healthy condition and corrects constipation. Munyon's Paw-Paw Pills are a tonic to the stomach, liver and nerves. They invigorate instead of weaken; they enrich the blood instead of impoverishing it; they enable the stomach to get all the nourishment from food that is put into it. Price 25 cents. All Druggists.

DOWN LOW

THE LITCHFIELD DOWN-LOW Spreader gives a Low Top Rail—about waist high, which makes it extremely easy to load. A man in handling the ordinary pitchfork, raises the load on the fork waist high in order that he may throw it from him. This means that it would be useless to make a lower top rail than what we build, as there would be no advantage in loading.

OUR MACHINE LOADS easily from any direction—the seat turns over out of the way in front and is just as easy to load onto this machine as it is to throw it in another pile on the ground.

DON'T FORGET. The Self-Cleaning apron, No-Choke box, Bull Dog cylinder and Oil Packed main bearings are exclusive Litchfield Features. You will look for them in vain on any other spreader.

High Under Clearance

A PECULIAR FACT. The Litchfield Down-Low has substantially the same Under Clearance that our High Standard machines have. We use the same size wheels—the axles are the same distance from the ground. This gives us from sixteen to eighteen inches of general clearance under the machine, and same clearance under the front axle that we have always had in the high machines. Just compare this with the eight or ten inches clearance found under other low down spreaders.

DON'T MAKE THE MISTAKE of buying a Sled when you pay your money for a manure spreader. Any machine soon becomes a sled in muddy and rough ground if it does not have sufficient under clearance. Like everything else, the tendency toward low down manure spreaders has gone in most cases a little to far and this is a serious objection—Too Close To The Ground.

Short Wheel Base

WE MOUNT OUR SPREADERS on the rear wheels so that these traction wheels take a sufficient proportion of the load and have sufficient traction to properly operate the unloading machinery. We get away from the heavy draft that is a part of all long coupled wagons and spreaders. We turn in a shorter circle and in a smaller place and our machine has much more activity and is much stronger and more substantial than a machine that is hung between the front and the rear wheels instead of being mounted on the rear axle. This means light draft, strength, durability and convenience.

We have samples of the Litchfield and New Idea Manure Spreaders for inspection and will take pleasure in showing and will make better terms than you can get elsewhere.

CANADA WINS AGAIN

THE COLORADO SILVER TROPHY FOR OATS WON A SECOND TIME BY CANADA.

The most recent achievement of Canada's West is winning for the second time the magnificent $1,500 silver trophy awarded by the State of Colorado for the best peck of oats. At Columbus, Ohio, in 1911, J. C. Hill & Sons of Lloydminster, Saskatchewan, placed a peck of oats grown on their farm in competition, with oats from every part of the world. The judges had no difficulty in deciding, and the award was given to the Saskatchewan grown oats. In 1912, the Corn Exposition had no exhibition, and our Canadian friends, although ready for a second contest had no opportunity. In 1913, the exhibition of the Society was held at Columbus, S. C., and it is said of it that it was one of the best yet held. At this exhibition, which comprised corn and all the smaller grains, Hill & Sons of Lloydminster had on exhibition for the contest another peck of oats grown on their Saskatchewan farm, in 1912. There was no trouble for the judges, no time necessarily lost in reaching a decision, Hill & Sons won, and for the second time their name will appear on the crest of the cup. The third space will doubtless be occupied by their name, and then this splendid trophy will be theirs.

During the past few years Western Canada grains—wheat, oats, barley and flax—have been in competition with grains from all other countries, and in every case their superiority has been shown. It is not only in oats, but it is in wheat, in barley and in flax, that Canada more than holds its own, when placed side by side with grains from other parts.

Mixed farming is taking a strong hold not only in those parts of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, which up to the present have been devoted solely to grain growing, but also in the districts contiguous, where the conditions of climate, shelter, water, grass and hay make farming of this kind, easy to prosecute and large in profits. It was in the Province of Manitoba that the steer was raised that carried off the Championship of the steer class, at Chicago last December. This beast had been fattened on the grass and hay of the Province and the only finishing grain it had was barley; not an ounce of corn.

Western Canada presents innumerable opportunities for the big farmer who wants to cultivate his thousands of acres, the medium man satisfied with a few hundred acres, the man who is content to farm his free homestead of one hundred and sixty acres; it has opportunities for the investor, the capitalist, the business man, the manufacturer and the laborer.

Agents of the Canadian Government located at different points in the United States will be pleased on application, to give any desired information, free of cost.—Advertisement.

PIRATE TREASURE NOT FOUND

Well-Furnished Expedition Returns Without the Riches It Had Been in Search Of.

The treasure-hunting party from Plymouth, England, which has been searching Cocos island in the Pacific for treasure supposed to have been buried there by pirates many years ago, has arrived at Panama on board the steamer Melmore without the hoped for pirate spoils. The Melmore sailed from Barry in September last, carrying in addition to the officers and crew, two London ladies and three gentlemen financially interested in a venture which was fondly hoped to return 100 per cent. profit.

Two other unsuccessful attempts to locate the buried gold and jewels of the buccaners made by Earl Fitzwilliam and Mr. Harold Gray did not diminish the faith of the members of the Melmore expedition, who declared they had specific information of the exact position of the accumulated hoard.

One treasure was actually brought from Lima in 1820, consisting of gold bullion and articles to the value of about $25,000,000, and the other treasure, which is placed at an even higher figure, was taken to Cocos island by the famous pirate Bonito. Despite the care with which the Melmore was fitted out—the expedition was estimated to cost $500,000—the search appears to have been fruitless.

Bear's Grease and Baldness.

In a recent volume of reminiscences the writer states that baldness is much more common now than in his early days, and ascribes the modern man's loss of hair to the decrease in the use of "bear's grease." This pomade was made principally of lard colored and scented, but "hairdressers, many of whom called themselves 'professors,' used to advertise the slaughter of another fine bear, exhibiting a canvas screen depicting in glaring colors a brown animal of elephantine proportions expiring in a sea of gore."

LEADERS AGREE ON REVENUES

PRESIDENT AGREES TO SMALL DUTY ON SUGAR EVENTUALLY TO BE FREE

TARIFF TO BE REMOVED FROM WOOL AND STEEL RAILS

The Estimated Loss of Eighty Millions in Revenue is to be Made Up by Graduated Tax on Incomes

With President Wilson and congressional leaders practically agreed upon free wool and a low duty on sugar, eventually to become free, the ways and means committee began drawing its report on the new tariff bill, estimating the loss of revenue from the new rates at $80,000,000 a year. The revenue from the income tax will be estimated at a like amount, to be derived in this way: Incomes of $4,000 up to but not including $20,000, to be taxed at 1 per cent; $20,000 up to $50,000 2 per cent; $50,000 to $100,000, 3 per cent; all over $100,000, 4 per cent. Flat tax on corporations, 2 per cent. The exemption will be on all incomes under $4,000. The income tax provision now stands this way and is not expected to be changed. Among the numerous additions to the free list will be steel rails. Cuts will be made all along the line on the metal schedule.

Two Men Swept Over Dam.

Two men were drowned at Chesaning when the boat from which they were fishing was swept over the dam here. They are Bert Ormes and Guy Miller.

Miller disappeared, but Ormes clung to the overturned craft. Rescuers put out for him in a boat and succeeded in hauling him aboard. Fearing that the boat would sink on account of the overweight one of the men jumped out. The boat jumped when relieved of his weight and Ormes fell overboard and could not be found.

Former Governor Lost in Desert.

Letters which have been received from former Governor Chase S. Osborn, now in Egypt, by friends tell of a dangerous experience which Mr. and Mrs. Osborn met while crossing the Sahara desert. On March 5, while crossing the desert with their caravan, a fierce sandstorm arose and Mr. Osborn and his wife became separated from their party. For a whole day their camels circled the desert, finally making camp at an oasis. That night the remainder of the caravan overtook them there.

Turkey Accepts Peace Plan Gladly.

The Turkish government declared that it unreservedly accepted the terms of peace proposed by the European powers. The foreign office handed the Ottoman acceptance to the dean of the diplomatic corps, accompanied by an expression of thanks to the powers for their mediation.

Connecticut Votes Down Suffrage.

Woman suffrage in Connecticut will not be a possibility for two years more, as the bill providing equal suffrage in this state was defeated in the lower branch of the legislature by a vote of 100 to 74. Suffrage leaders throughout the state are bitterly disappointed as they have waged a long campaign to win votes for women.

Socialist Editor in Trouble.

Alexis E. Georgian, editor of a weekly socialist newspaper, was called into court at Minneapolis to stand trial on a charge of printing criminally libelous articles involving P. V. Collins, progressive candidate for governor of Minnesota, in the campaign last fall. Three weeks ago Georgian was convicted and fined for criminally libeling Mayor Nice of Minneapolis.

Apache Indians Set Free.

The Apache Indians, who have been maintained on the Fort Sill military reservation for nine years as prisoners of war, left for the Mescalero Apache reservation in New Mexico, where they will be turned over to the care of the interior department, free men. Maj. George W. Goods accompanied them.

The Michigan Home missionary convention, in annual session at Grand Rapids, chose Pentecost for the next meeting place.

MRS. PANKHURST GUILTY

Noted English Militant Suffragette Sentenced to Prison for Three Years.

Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, the leader of the English militant suffragettes, was found guilty and sentenced to three years' penal servitude at the Old Bailey sessions in London on the charge of inciting persons to commit damage.

The trial had lasted two days. The jury added to its verdict of guilty a strong recommendation for mercy, and when the judge pronounced the heavy sentence of three years the crowd of women in the court room rose in angry protest.

As Mrs. Pankhurst stood up in the prisoner's inclosure her sympathizers cheered wildly, and then filed out of court singing "March On, March On" to the tune of the "Marseillaise." Mrs. Pankhurst's closing address to the jury lasted 50 minutes. She informed the court that she did not wish to call any witnesses. In her address she frequently wandered so far from the matter before the court that the judge censured her.

In impassioned tones she declared: "Whatever may be my sentence, I will not submit. From the very moment I leave the court I will refuse to eat. I will come out of prison dead or alive at the earliest possible moment."

Justice Lush, in summing up, told the jury that Mrs. Pankhurst's speeches were an admission that she had incited to the perpetration of illegal acts.

Mrs. Pankhurst almost broke down when the jury pronounced its verdict.

Wilson to Address Reporters.

Convinced that public business would be expedited by the practice, President Wilson has decided to set aside two hours each week for "heart to heart" talks with the newspaper correspondents.

One hour will be devoted to the writers each Tuesday morning and another hour will be given over to the same purpose Thursday afternoons.

The president will discuss administration policies and sketch his official programs, much of the matter discussed necessarily being in confidence and solely for the guidance of the writers.

Militant Suffragettes on Rampage

The campaign of revenge for the long sentence imposed upon Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst which the suffragettes threatened, is proceeding actively and seems likely to spread. Many outrages have been committed. These included the complete destruction of the grandstand of the Ayr Race Course in Scotland, where the principal Scottish meetings are held, the damage being estimated at $15,000, and an attempt to burn the new grandstand of the Kelso race course, also in Scotland.

Strike Breakers Refuse to Work

The 44 Gloucester fishermen who were brought by train from Massachusetts to man halibut vessels plying out of Seattle and refused to work when they found they were to be used as strike-breakers, were taken immediately into the halibut fisherman's union. The strike was won and all the newcomers got work, as well as the strikers.

Airship as Means of Suicide.

Lieut. Perlovski, of the Russian army, committed suicide at Warsaw by deliberately shutting off the motor of an aeroplane in which he was flying and dropping from a height of 800 feet to the ground, according to a dispatch.

In a letter Lieut. Perlovski expressed his intention of committing suicide in mid-air, and gave as a reason that he had been the victim of many intrigues.

Canada Ends Prosperous Year.

Canada closed a year of unprecedented prosperity in all branches of administration. The trade of the Dominion for the first time in its history has reached the billion mark, showing an increase of $150,000,000 over last year. The revenue of $170,000,000 exceeds that of last year by $35,000,000.

Mount Royal Once Active Volcano.

In the work on the Canadian Northern railway tunnel the engineers have found that Mount Royal, under which the line will pass, was at one time either an active volcano or was made by lava being forced through the ground.

An interesting proof of the fact that at one time a great glacier flowed from the Laurentian mountains to the St. Lawrence river was found in the small heading on Ste. Monique street. This was a piece of Laurentian gneiss, a rock peculiar to the Laurentian mountains, and it is believed that in the past this rock was carried down by a glacier, which probably emptied into the St. Lawrence river not far from the present harbor.

GIRL SUFFERED TERRIBLY

At Regular Intervals—Says Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound completely cured her.

Adrian, Texas.—"I take pleasure in adding my testimonial to the great list and hope that it will be of interest to suffering women. For four years I suffered untold agonies at regular intervals. Such pains and cramps, severe chills and sickness at stomach, then finally hemorrhages until I would be nearly blind. I had five doctors and none of them could do more than relieve me for a time.

"I saw your advertisement in a paper and decided to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I took seven boxes of it and used two bottles of the Sanative Wash, and I am completely cured of my trouble. When I began taking the Compound I only weighed ninety-six pounds and now I weigh one hundred and twenty-six pounds. If anyone wishes to address me in person I will cheerfully answer all letters, as I cannot speak too highly of the Pinkham remedies."—Miss JESSIE MARSH, Adrian, Texas.

Hundreds of such letters expressing gratitude for the good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has accomplished are constantly being received, proving the reliability of this grand old remedy.

RESINOL RELIEVED ITCHING INSTANTLY

And Completely Cured Skin Humor.

If you have eczema or any other itching, burning skin trouble, the best evidence of what Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment can do for you is the word of one who was cured by them after weeks of suffering. Adolph Schoen, 742 Shepherd Ave., Brooklyn, writes:

Nov. 1, 1913.—"At first little red spots were seen on my arms and body, which I noticed were getting larger every day. They itched me so much that I scratched myself until I bled. There were times when I stood up all night and scratched. I was troubled about three weeks, during which time I used — which seemed to do me no good whatever. Then, finally, I thought of trying Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment. As soon as I applied Resinol Ointment I felt much relief. After using it a few times, I noticed the sore spots slowly fading away, and in about a month I was cured completely."

The soothing, healing balsams in Resinol Ointment and Resinol Soap, penetrate every tiny pore of the skin, clearing it of all impurities, driving away eczema, rashes, ringworm, psoriasis, and other eruptions, and making pimples and blackheads impossible. Prescribed by physicians for eighteen years. For free samples write to Dept. S-K, Resinol, Baltimore, Md. Every druggist sells Resinol Ointment (50c) and Resinol Soap (25c), or sent by parcel post on receipt of price.

FIRST MESSAGE IN

WILSON WASTES FEW WORDS IN TELLING CONGRESS WHAT IT SHOULD DO.

TARIFF REVISION HIS TOPIC

President Says the Schedules Must Be Radically Changed to Square With Present Conditions, but Work Requires Careful Consideration.

Washington, April 8.—President Wilson's first message to the Sixty-third congress, assembled in extraordinary session, was read in the senate and house today. It was surprisingly short, being in full as follows: To the Senate and House of Representatives:

I have called the congress together in extraordinary session because a duty was laid upon the party now in power at the recent elections which it ought to perform promptly, in order that the burden carried by the people under existing law may be lightened as soon as possible and in order, also, that the business interests of the country may not be kept too long in suspense as to what the fiscal changes are to be to which they will be required to adjust themselves. It is clear to the whole country that the tariff duties must be altered. They must be changed to meet the radical alteration in the conditions of our economic life which the country has witnessed within the last generation.

While the whole face and method of our industrial and commercial life were being changed beyond recognition the tariff schedules have remained what they were before the change began, or have moved in the direction they were given when no large circumstance of our industrial development was what it is today. Our task is to square them with the actual facts. The sooner that is done the sooner we shall escape from suffering from the facts and the sooner our men of business will be free to thrive by the law of nature (the nature of free business) instead of by the law of legislation and artificial arrangement.

Business Not Normal.

We have seen tariff legislation wander very far afield in our day—very far indeed from the field in which our prosperity might have had a normal growth and stimulation. No one who looks the facts squarely in the face or knows anything that lies beneath the surface of action can fail to perceive the principles upon which recent tariff legislation has been based. We long ago passed beyond the modest notion of "protecting" the industries of the country and moved boldly forward to the idea that they were entitled to the direct patronage of the government. For a long time—a time so long that the men now active in public policy hardly remember the conditions that preceded it—we have sought in our tariff schedules to give each group of manufacturers or producers what they themselves thought that they needed in order to maintain a practically exclusive market as against the rest of the world. Consciously or unconsciously, we have built up a set of privileges and exemptions from competition behind which it was easy by any, even the crudest, forms of combination to organize monopoly; until at last nothing is normal, nothing is obliged to stand the tests of efficiency and economy, in our world of big business, but everything thrives by concerted arrangement. Only new principles of action will save us from a final hard crystallization of monopoly and a complete loss of the influences that quicken enterprise and keep independent energy alive.

It is plain what those principles must be. We must abolish everything that bears even the semblance of privilege or of any kind of artificial advantage, and put our business men and producers under the stimulation of a constant necessity to be efficient, economical, and enterprising, masters of competitive supremacy, better workers and merchants than any in the world. Aside from the duties laid upon articles which we do not, and probably cannot, produce, therefore, and the duties laid upon luxuries and merely for the sake of the revenues they yield, the object of the tariff duties henceforth laid must be effective competition, the whetting of American wits by contest with the wits of the rest of the world.

Development, Not Revolution.

It would be unwise to move toward this end headlong, with reckless haste, or with strokes that cut at the very roots of what has grown up amongst us by long process and at our own invitation. It does not alter a thing to upset it and break it and deprive it of a chance to change. It destroys it. We must make changes in our fiscal laws, in our fiscal system, whose object is development, a more free and wholesome development, not revolution or upset or confusion. We must build up trade, especially foreign trade. We need the outlet and the enlarged field of energy more than we ever did before. We must build up industry as well and must adopt freedom in the place of artificial stimulation only so far as it will build, not pull down. In dealing with the tariff the method by which this may be done will be a matter of judgment, exercised item by item.

To some not accustomed to the excitements and responsibilities of greater freedom our methods may in some respects and at some points seem heroic, but remedies may be heroic and yet be remedies. It is our business to make sure that they are genuine remedies. Our object is clear. If our motive is above just challenge and only an occasional error of judgment is chargeable against us, we shall be fortunate.

We are called upon to render the country a great service in more matters than one. Our responsibility should be met and our methods should be thorough, as thorough as moderate and well considered, based upon the facts as they are, and not worked out as if we were beginners. We are to deal with the facts of our own day, with the facts of no other, and to make laws which square with those facts. It is best, indeed it is necessary, to begin with the tariff. I will urge nothing upon you now at the opening of your session which can obscure that first object or divert our energies from that clearly defined duty. At a later time I may take the liberty of calling your attention to reforms which should press close upon the heels of the tariff changes, if not accompany them, of which the chief is the reform of our banking and currency laws; but just now I refrain. For the present, I put these matters on one side and think only of this one thing—of the changes in our fiscal system which may best serve to open once more the free channels of prosperity to a great people whom we would serve to the utmost and throughout both rank and file.

WOODROW WILSON.
The White House, April 8, 1913.

FAMILY NAMES OF ROYALTY

Royal Personages Descended Mostly From Counts, Existing Long Before Surnames Came Into Use.

The royal families of Europe have not generally a surname because mostly (unlike the English houses of Stuart and Tudor, which were the respective surnames of the first king of each house before he ascended the throne) they are descended in the male line from some territorial counts existing long previous to the period in which the somewhat modern custom of surnames prevailed. King George V derives in the male line from the ancient counts of Wettin (flourishing in the tenth century), afterwards electors of Saxony, dukes of Saxe Coburg, Gotha, etc. His ancestors in the male line were of the house of Este, one of whom, Azo of Este, married early in the tenth century the daughter and heiress of Guelph, duke of Bavaria, from which match sprang in the male line the dukes of Brunswick-Lunenbourg, afterwards electors of Hanover, and kings of Great Britain. The members of the royal family are described by their princely titles in proceedings in the house of lords, and no allusion is made to any surname—for instance, they sign the test roll merely by their personal or Christian name, and we know nothing of any surname which appertained by right or by usage, to her late majesty, Queen Victoria, or to his majesty King George V.

Bermuda Fish.

At the market during a recent week many handsome fish were to be seen, several of them taken by American tourists, and afterward presented to the fisherman who "took them out." Large amber-jacks and bonitoes, splendid game fish and chubs, as plucky and "frighty" a fish as ever took bait, were well represented.

Among the others seen on the market hooks and elsewhere were bluefish, yellowtails, red snappers, gray snappers, butterfish, gags, hamlets, "hines," salmon and black rockfish, porgies and red rockfish. "Nigger fish," the long ago despised finny midget, has been metamorphosed to the now much sought after "choicest of the choice" of sea delicacies, the "butter fish"—Bermuda Colonists.

"Soft" Job for Constable.

Pension are not the only things commanded and forgotten. An inquisitive member of the British house of commons was struck one day by the presence of a policeman in one of the lobbies. He wondered why this particular lobby should always have a guardian strolling up and down, and made inquiries. The records of the house were searched and it was found that 50 years previously, when the lobby was being decorated, a policeman had been stationed there to keep members from soiling their clothes. The order never having been countermanded, the constable had kept his beat for half a century.

THE EUCLID MALE QUARTET

THE EUCLID MALE QUARTET.

EUCLID MALE QUARTET.

These College-Bred Young Men Will Appear in Lyceum Course.

Nearly every Lyceum course and Chautauqua offers a male quartet every season, for no popular musical attraction is quite so popular as a company of four young men who are good singers and entertainers. For this season the Euclid Male Quartet has been engaged. These four young men are college-bred, were known as the Antioch Glee club when they first began to sing together six years ago, and are graduates of Antioch college, founded and made famous by Horace Mann. They are good singers and their ensemble numbers are very well done, for they have sung together for six years. One member is a good reader, presenting some of Riley's best known poems. A feature is the playing by the quartet on the largest set of aluminum organ-chimes that is used in Lyceum work. They produce tones like a fine pipe organ, and with four good musicians playing, the most beautiful tones and effects are secured. The program of this company is varied and satisfying. Each member is a soloist and the personnel is: Mr. O. W. Beaver, second tenor and reader; Mr. W. C. Shade, basso; Mr. H. E. Haines, first tenor; Mr. C. J. Beaver, baritone and pianist.

The last number on the Pinckney Lecture Course at the Pinckney Opera House, Monday evening April 14.
