Looking For Pearls

Believing that hundreds, if not thousands of dollars in pearls are hidden in the clam-beds of the Huron river in the vicinity of Strawberry Lake, two pearl fishermen of Chicago have commenced operations about 18 miles north of the city.

One clam field is located on Strawberry rapids near Gallagher and another just at the entrance of the river into Bass lake. A sounding made of one of the big beds showed that the shells extend down a distance of 16 feet and at both places are covered with only a foot of water.--Times News.

Good Intentions

Good intentions are seldom negotiable for cash. Ask the lazy boy why he doesn't study and advance with his class. He will tell you that he intends to some time, but he never does. Ask any improvident man or woman why they don't lay up something for a rainy day. They will tell you that they intend to sometime but they never do. Ask any slow, unprogressive business man why he don't discard his old antiquated ways of business and adopt new up-to-date progressive methods of sales and advertising. All such will tell you that they intend to next week or next month or next year, but they never do.

Dr. C. L. Sigler and wife, F. G. Jackson and wife left Monday morning for Mackinaw and other northern points.

W. C. T. U. Institute

The W. C. T. U. institute held in the M. E. church Thursday afternoon and evening of last week was indeed very profitable to every one present. The picnic luncheon at noon made the social hour very enjoyable. The program for the afternoon was opened and closed at the appointed time, it being a rule strictly observed by the State Field Worker, Mrs. Jennie Wilcox of Jackson, to open and close all meetings on time, never let a meeting die on your hands is one of her mottoes.

The time was fully taken up with several carefully prepared papers. The first, "Things Worth While" by the county president, Mrs. Minnie Arnold; second, "How Does the Demand for W. C. T. U. Work Today Compare With That of the Crusade Days", by Mrs. Etta Read of Howell and third, "How Can the W. C. T. U. Become a Living Force by Consecrated Membership", by Mrs. Rosa Buhl. Every thought presented in each of these papers was inspiring and helpful. The discussions were followed promptly with true heartfelt enthusiasm. Much of the time was given to Mrs. Wilcox, who proved herself thoroughly fitted for the great work in which she is earnestly engaged, possessing a strong personality and the true type of christian character that can hold the attention of her hearers without even thinking of the clock. One of the very pleasing features of each session was the solos so sweetly rendered by little Doris, only a child eight years old, yet she is helping in a great work.

EVENING SESSION

The devotional service conducted by Rev. Mitchell, followed with an address by Mrs. Wilcox, "Claiming the God Given Heritage," completed the meetings of the day. Those who missed it missed a treat.

Tax Notice

I am now ready to collect all village taxes and anyone wishing to pay them can call at the mill and do so at any time.

A Pleasant Surprise

A farewell reception was given H. D. MacDougall and family last Tuesday evening by about twenty members of the O. E. S. It was a complete surprise. During the evening the visitors left two beautiful cut glass dishes as a slight token of the esteem in which they are held. Light refreshments were served and a pleasant evening was enjoyed by all. Mr. MacDougall has been superintendent of the Pinckney public schools for the past four years and has been very successful and we hope that he may enjoy the same success hereafter. Mr. and Mrs. MacDougall and daughter leave the first of the week for their new home at Brighton where Mr. MacDougall will superintend the public schools there. They have made many friends during their residence here and we are sorry that they must leave. The best wishes of all accompany them.

TEA THAT WAS TEA

And Results It Wrought Were Satisfactory to at Least Two People.

By ANNA E. BLEY.

"Policy ready yet, Miss Birdsall?" "Oh, is that you, Bobbie?" Miss Birdsall turned from the typewriter. "Wait a minute," running through a bundle of folded policies. "Here it is, MacDougall & Son—Insurance Brokers," she read from the printed sticker at the bottom.

"It doesn't take you long to turn 'em out, Miss Birdsall," remarked the boy admiringly as he slipped it into his pocket.

Louise Birdsall's lips parted in a smile.

"What's in the kettle, Bobbie?" she inquired.

"Nothing yet, it's for tea for the old man."

"Does he like tea?"

"Headache, and he's had an awful grouch on all morning."

"Poor old gentleman!" exclaimed Miss Birdsall sympathetically. "Where are you going to get the tea?"

"At the Peerless."

"At the Peerless!" she ejaculated. "Why, it won't be fit to drink."

"Can't help it, nearest place," and he picked up the kettle to go.

Miss Birdsall glanced at the clock; the other clerks would not return for a quarter of an hour.

"Sit down, Bobbie, and I'll make you some tea that is tea."

She pulled out the lower drawer of the typewriter desk and drew forth a small brass canister, from another recess came a teaspoon.

"Just a second, Bob," she laughed, and ran into the tiny dressing room adjoining the large airy office.

In a twinkling, she returned, holding up a little blue and white china teapot. "The kettle was boiling, so it didn't take long to make. By the time you get to the office it will be nicely steeped."

Bobbie looked at the gay little teapot doubtfully. "Could you wrap it up?" he suggested.

"Why, it is much easier to carry this way."

"I know, but if the fellows in Watkins' office see me go by with a fussy little teapot like that, they'll gey the life out o' me."

With quick understanding, Miss Birdsall wrapped the teapot in the morning's newspaper.

"Bobbie, I want this teapot returned with the tea leaves in it, no wiping out with the office towel. Do you get me, Robert?"

"I gotcha," he replied with a grin.

The door slammed and Miss Birdsall settled down to work.

The next day at noon a fashionably dressed young man walked into the office of the International Insurance company. Miss Birdsall rose, her cheeks flushing slightly as she recognized young Mr. MacDougall.

"Miss Birdsall?" he interrogated pleasantly.

"Yes," she said with quiet dignity.

"I am returning the teapot with sincere thanks."

"Pray don't mention it. I hope the tea helped Mr. MacDougall's head."

"I assure you it did." He smiled and added: "In fact, he has been a new man ever since."

Miss Birdsall peeped absent-mindedly inside.

"We didn't wash it out," he apologized, and then they both laughed gaily, and Miss Birdsall remembered her admonition to Bobbie.

With a few desultory remarks, Mr. MacDougall politely left.

"What a delightful person," thought Miss Birdsall, as she carried the teapot into the dressing room. "Delightful in spite of his money."

During the afternoon she recalled him again and again. Since she had been policy writer for the International she had heard continually of young MacDougall, of his money, of his extravagances, and of the beautiful old house occupied solely by his father and himself. It was therefore a surprise and a pleasure to find him quite natural and extremely agreeable.

Two days later, Bobbie came in again at noon.

"Nothing ready, Robert," she called out in a business-like tone.

"I'm not after policies." Then, leaning confidentially over the counter, "Could you let me have some more tea, Miss Birdsall?"

"Why Bobbie—" Miss Birdsall wheeled about in her chair.

"The boss has a terrible headache; been raising Cain all morning."

"Dear me," murmured Miss Birdsall, "of course." Rising quickly, she commenced collecting the tea things. While the kettle was boiling, a sudden thought struck her.

"What does Mr. MacDougall drink the tea from?"

"A glass."

"Well upon my word!" and forthwith she produced a fragile teacup and saucer. From some nook in her desk she took a lemon and deftly cut three or four slices with her penknife. These she slipped into a clean envelope, together with several cubes of sugar—and a teaspoon.

"Now, Bobbie," she warned after the tea was made, "carry these things carefully and tell old Mr. MacDougall that I hope the tea will cure his headache."

"I'll tell him," promised the boy, with a mischievous smile on his freckled face.

The following day he brought back the china.

"Gee, Miss Birdsall," he confided. "The boss says that lemon's a great stunt."

"I am delighted, Robert."

"Yes, he wants to meet you."

"Meet-me—?" she questioned, her eyes wide open in astonishment.

"That wasn't just what he said," explained Bobbie consulting a slip of paper. "Present my compliments to Miss Birdsall and ask her if she will come up to the office this afternoon so that I may thank her in person," he repeated glibly.

Miss Birdsall gasped.

"They're the boss' orders," observed Bobbie, with finality.

"Well, he isn't my boss," expostulated Miss Birdsall indignantly.

"When the boss wants a thing, he always gets it."

Miss Birdsall reflected. Mr. MacDougall was a very irascible and a very old gentleman. If those were his wishes why should she hesitate to gratify an old man's whim?

"I'll ask my boss, Bobbie," she agreed with a faint smile.

"All right," and Bobbie departed promptly.

That afternoon she mentioned the matter to the manager.

"Old MacDougall," he mused. "I didn't know he was back; he's been in Florida all winter. Certainly, go right over, Miss Birdsall."

As Miss Birdsall was ushered into the sumptuous private office of MacDougall & Son, she raged inwardly at finding herself in such a position.

Young MacDougall came cordially forward, indicated a chair and seated himself comfortably near her.

"Your father—" began Miss Birdsall stiffly.

The young man, usually at his ease, grew red and embarrassed.

"Miss Birdsall, I owe you an explanation. I trust you will hear me to the end."

Miss Birdsall moved uneasily.

"You see," he went on, "I couldn't explain the matter to you down there, with an office full of gaping clerks, but each time I've seen you I've thought what awfully good friends we might become if we were acquainted."

"Mr. MacDougall," interrupted Miss Birdsall, rising, "this is simply preposterous."

"Please hear me to the end," he urged.

Miss Birdsall sat down.

"We don't know each other's friends and there seemed to be no way in which I could do the thing in the conventional manner till the Heaven-sent tea episode," he continued more cheerfully. "That young rascal, Bobbie, probably alluded to me as 'the old man,' and you naturally took it to be my father."

Louise Birdsall bit her lips in vexation. Other words of Bobbie's recurred to her. "He always gets what he wants." She would show him that the old Birdsall spirit still survived, even if she had been forced to earn her own living.

"Mr. MacDougall," she said, looking him squarely in the eyes, "I have few friends, but these few I value more than anything on earth. A friendship to me is something sacred, not to be based merely upon a good time. There are some things in this world that money cannot buy."

The young man flushed hotly. "It's no more than I deserve, Miss Birdsall, but I'm not the selfish brute I'm painted. I'm lonely, miserably lonely. I have money, a house—not a home—and a vast following of fawning creatures who are pleased to term themselves my friends; it was you, and the tea, I suppose, that made me realize how little I have," he finished lamely.

They were quiet for a moment; the clickety-click of busy typewriters in the office beyond came faintly through the closed door. Young MacDougall sat, chin in hand, looking off into space. Miss Birdsall watched the hurt look upon the strong, handsome features, she thought of the big house, and then it came to her how lonely her own little home would be were it not for the mother always there to welcome her at night and to encourage her when she left in the morning.

"I am sorry."

"Don't," he begged without turning. "I've been a perfect fool, only I hoped you would understand."

She touched his coat sleeve softly. "I do understand."

GOOD IN COMBINATION

WASHABLE MATERIALS USED WITH ROUGH FABRICS.

Cotton Crepe and Marquisette Especially Effective When So Treated—Trimmings May Be About to Suit Fancy.

For the summer white season no washable materials are so popular as cotton crepe and marquisette, both for blouses and frocks. These are effectively combined with heavier, rough surfaced fabrics, such as ratine, toweling and cotton matelasse. For trimmings, much embroidery, linen laces and enameled and crystal buttons are used.

A most up-to-date and attractive summer frock can be made after the model of our sketch, an all white design combining marquisette, ratine and eyelet embroidered handbag. In this design it will be necessary to have a net foundation, to which the embroidery is stitched around the lower part of the blouse and the middle of the skirt. The embroidery in the blouse is veiled by the blouse itself, which is of the white marquisette and cut with long sleeves set into dropped armholes. The upper corners of the front opening are buttoned back from the neck, displaying the shirred yoke of the net foundation underneath, and there is a square turned down collar extending across the shoulders.

The lower part of the skirt, of white ratine, has a long narrow strip extending up over the front of the dress and trimmed with a row of enameled ball buttons, which form the fastening.

The short tunic skirt of marquisette veils one-half of the embroidery band.

New Tunic Effect.

ing, and is draped up a little at center front and the narrow buttoned down panel of ratine. The lower edge of the wide embroidery banding hangs free like a flounce, but is stitched flat to the net foundation skirt along the upper edge.

A girle of crushed magenta satin is tied in front, and lends a pretty note of contrasting color.—Kansas City Star.

New Trimmings.

As the eye steadies down sufficiently to take in the detail of the season's fashions it is impossible not to be struck by the wealth of new trimmings and revivals. Of the latter is a coarse macrame lace, frequently dyed to tone with the gown it adorns. An afternoon dress of rose crepe chiffon, had a broad line of this lace set in round the skirt, while the lower half of the little bodice was fashioned of it, the front hollowed out in a long oval and filled in with a gump of ivory net that was just eased into a tiny beading at the base of the throat, a row of minute black velvet buttons punctuating the center, and at the base there was poised a spreading bow of black ribbon velvet.

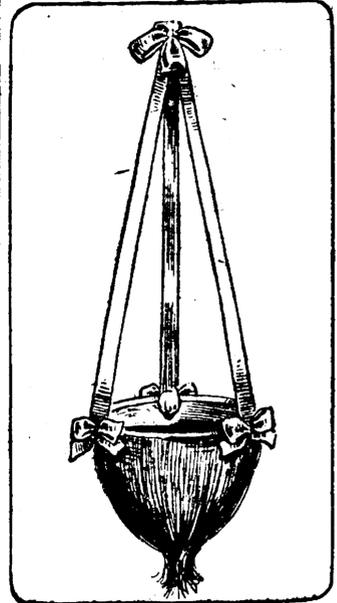

Try a Pine Bath.

Do you go to the mountains? If so, try a pine bath. It is very refreshing and a tonic. It takes a pound of fresh pine needles and pine cones. Break them into bits and boil them for thirty minutes in enough water to keep them covered. Steam the water from them and add to a hot bath.

MAKES PRETTY FERN HOLDER

Half of Coconut Shell, Appropriately Decorated, an Improvement on Ordinary Pot.

Quaint fern-holders with some dainty little ferns in them, always look wonderfully pretty hung up in a window or hall, or some other suitable place, and we give a sketch of a holder made with the aid of half of the shell of a coconut.

A nice "hairy" shell should be selected, and one will be sufficient to make two holders. The edge may be cut even, as shown in the illustration, or it will look very well left jagged, if preferred. All that has to be done then is to bore three little holes in the shell near the edge, and tie ribbons to it, and knot them together above, in the manner illustrated. The fern can be planted in the shell and will thrive as well as in an ordinary pot.

When these holders are made for use out of doors, for hanging, for instance, underneath a balcony, wire should take the place of the ribbon, and a small hole can be made in the bottom of the shell to allow unnecessary moisture to escape.

PROPER CARE OF THE NAILS

Rubbing With Cold Cream or Olive Oil Will Prevent Them Breaking—Soaking in Cornmeal.

If your nails break, it is because they are brittle. To improve them rub cold cream or olive oil into them every night when going to bed. This will soften the nail and do away with its tendency to split. It will also soften the cuticle so that you can push it back with the tip of your little finger or the end of a hoof-shaped orange wood stick, and show the half-moon that is at the base of every well-kept nail.

It is an excellent plan if you want pretty finger tips to give them a cornmeal soak every now and then. Put a tablespoon of white cornmeal in the bottom of a small bowl and pour hot water on it and let it stand until lukewarm. Soak the fingers in it for five minutes or so. This softens the cuticle at the base of the nails, soothes any irritation that may be present, and makes it easier to trim the nails in shape. It also whitens the skin. Don't cut the nails in too pointed a shape. When the finger tips are rounded, it only makes them look broader to cut the nails. To make the fingers appear as taper as possible the nails should be trimmed to correspond with the curve of the tips.

IN THE SMART WHITE SERGE

One of the Most Popular of the Season's Designs Especially Adapted for Young Girls.

In the drawing is pictured a white serge frock for a young girl. Very smart is this little dress with its under blouse of gumpes effect of fine tucked batiste with wide rolling collar of the same. The over-dress consists of a simple peasant blouse and narrow skirt of serge, the neck of the former outlined by a narrow facing of white silk having two narrow platings of the same on the outer edge and slipping of black satin on the inner. The three-quarter sleeves are finished in a similar manner. The skirt is trimmed on the right side with a row of black rimmed buttons. The girle is of the white taffeta.

MICHIGAN HAPPENINGS

Lansing.—The next annual encampment of the Landwehr Michigan regiment will be held in Saginaw. At the closing session held here the following officers were elected: Colonel, Adolph Splottstoser, Jackson; major, Max Richter, Detroit; adjutant, Karl Koss, Detroit; paymaster, John Wolf, Detroit; trustees, Emil Reech, Lansing; Adolph O. Hasse, Grand Rapids; Ferdinand Bergmann, Saginaw. Delegates to the national encampment were Fred Rau and Otto Tiedmann of Detroit.

Port Huron.—Relatives of John Patton, twenty years old, the Pere Marquette brakeman who was killed by an inbound train in Balsey, near Flint, and whose body has been brought to this city for burial, take exception to the report that the youth had fallen asleep on the track after he had been sent back to flag the oncoming train. Railroad men say, however, that Patton was overworked and exhausted, and lay down to slumber, and that this caused his death.

Boyerne City.—The Bolted Basket company's plant here was destroyed by fire with a loss of $15,000, partly insured. A heavy west wind threatened the northern portion of the city where a big wood yard, owned by the Boyerne City Chemical company, is located, but the department was able to keep the fire in check. Several dwellings caught fire from flying fire brands, but were extinguished before much damage was done. The plant will be rebuilt at once.

Lansing.—One hundred survivors of the Ninth Michigan infantry were in Lansing for the forty-fifth annual reunion of that regiment. Henry Ries came all the way from Dayton, Wash., to attend the reunion. Lafayette Davis and C. H. Rhodes of Saginaw were members of Company F, the same company to which Ries belonged and the two Saginaw men met their old Washington comrade for the first time since they were mustered out 61 years ago.

Kalamazoo.—Kalamazoo's celery crop is endangered by the appearance of a new pest. Growers have just discovered there is a small worm working in the plant and unless some immediate remedy can be found for it, the plants will all be killed. The M. A. C. has been asked to assist in finding out what the pest is and to suggest a remedy.

Lansing.—According to the monthly mortality report compiled by Secretary of State Martindale, 3,096 deaths occurred in Michigan during June, while 5,290 births were reported. There were 520 deaths of children under one year of age. Tuberculosis claimed 194, cancer 214, pneumonia 174, while 277 deaths were of a violent nature.

Calumet.—Twenty mines in this and neighboring counties were closed owing to a strike called by the Western Federation of Miners.

Jackson.—The automobile of William Edwards, of Munith, a village a few miles northeast of Jackson, turned turtle when it struck a washout in the roadway. Two sons of Edwards, Henry, thirteen years old, and Robert, nine, were killed. Their father and uncle who were also in the car escaped serious injury.

Holland.—Earl Hendrixson, five years old, was killed when the wheels of a wagon in which he was being taken to a doctor, passed over his body. Earl and his mother occupied a loose seat on the wagon, and when the horse shied both were thrown out. Mrs. Hendrixson was uninjured.

Battle Creek.—Jesse Reincke, twenty years old, was drowned while bathing in Nottowa lake in Tekonsha township, near here. The lad stepped off a ledge in the lake and went down before any one could reach him. His father, William Reincke, and a friend were with him, and saw him go down, powerless to go to his rescue because neither could swim.

Traverse City.—Maggie Jatoga, an Ottawa squaw, who was one hundred years old her last birthday, died at her home in Yuba. She spent her entire life in the Grand Traverse region, being born in an Indian village where Sutton's Bay is now located. A niece, Angelina Skibergosh of Yuba, is her only known relative.

Saginaw.—The barn of George L. Burroughs, in Saginaw county, was struck by lightning and burned to the ground. The barn was filled with hay and was the biggest in the county. The loss is about $15,000, partly covered by insurance.

Horrible Possibility.

Deteriorating Effect.
"I suppose the young men do not regard Miss Barrowcliff as so handsome now that her father has lost his money."
"Well, they don't think she has such a fine figure as she once had."

Where It Made a Stir.
"That speech did not make as much of an impression as you expected."
"No," replied the candid orator. "The only real stir it created was the rattle of the typewriter while it was being dictated."

Virtue of Disingenuousness.
In a school I once attended the most popular girl was the most tactful one. As far as I know only one girl disliked her. That girl was spiteful, cross and therefore not very well liked. Do you know what she used to call our idol? A hypocrite. The word bothered me not a little, but she answered me in her thoughtful little way:

"Well, I guess that maybe Betty is a hypocrite, if being a hypocrite means saying little kind things based on small pretenses and leaving unsaid the unkind things no matter how good a reason there is for saying them; but she's a mighty comfortable person to have around. I wish that the world was full of such hypocrites!"—Christian Herald.

Under a Different Court.
Judge Livingston Howland, who was judge of the Marion common pleas (succeeding Solomon Blair, promoted to the Superior court in 1870), and who succeeded me as judge of the Seventh circuit after the election of 1872, was listening to the argument of George K. Perrin, when he interrupted the attorney, saying: "Mr. Perrin, you have repeated that statement of the law now three times. If you have any other point to discuss I will hear it but no more of that, if you please."

"To which Mr. Perrin replied: "Why, if it pleases the court, I have repeated the Lord's prayer, I suppose, a thousand times, and the Lord has never rebuked me."
"Ah, yes," responded the judge. "God is said to be long suffering and kind and may have suffered your vain repetitions, but I am not God; no, not by a long sight."—Case and Comment.

THE RIGHT SOAP FOR BABY'S SKIN

In the care of baby's skin and hair, Cuticura Soap is the mother's favorite. Not only is it unrivaled in purity and refreshing fragrance, but its gentle emollient properties are usually sufficient to allay minor irritations, remove redness, roughness and chafing, soothe sensitive conditions, and promote skin and hair health generally. Assisted by Cuticura Ointment, it is most valuable in the treatment of eczemas, rashes and itching, burning infantile eruptions. Cuticura Soap wears to a wafer, often outlasting several cakes of ordinary soap and making its use most economical.

Cuticura Soap and Ointment sold throughout the world. Sample of each free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. L, Boston."—Adv.

"Why, I was so much surprised I couldn't say anything!"

"Not at all. They found too many required a microscope to see well."

Don't Poison Baby.

FOURTY YEARS AGO almost every mother thought her child must have PAREGORIC or laudanum to make it sleep. These drugs will produce sleep, and a FEW DROPS TOO MANY will produce the SLEEP FROM WHICH THERE IS NO WAKING. Many are the children who have been killed or whose health has been ruined for life by paregoric, laudanum and morphine, each of which is a narcotic product of opium. Druggists are prohibited from selling either of the narcotics named to children at all, or to anybody without labelling them "poison." The definition of "narcotic" is: "A medicine which relieves pain and produces sleep, but which in poisonous doses produces stupor, coma, convulsions and death." The taste and smell of medicines containing opium are disguised, and sold under the names of "Drops," "Cordials," "Soothing Syrups," etc. You should not permit any medicine to be given to your children without you or your physician knowing what it is composed of. CASTORIA DOES NOT CONTAIN NARCOTICS, if it bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher. Genuine Castoria always bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.

IS THANKFUL FOR ONE EYE

Philosopher Thinks He Has Seen as Much in His Time as One Man Ought.

Recently W. A. Morgan, the father of W. Y. Morgan of Hutchinson, lost the sight of one of his eyes. "While I was at the hospital," says Captain Morgan, "I did a lot of thinking how I could get along supposing I went entirely blind. I wouldn't be able to read, just sit in darkness all the time if I was not asleep. Then I figured that I would be nearly helpless. I would have to get somebody to lead me around wherever I went. But supposing that I couldn't get anybody, what would I do then? I remembered that I had seen blind men who were led around by dogs, and I commenced to speculate on how long it would take me to train up a pup to have sense enough to lead me around.

"And then suppose that it should spy a cat on the other side of the avenue and take a sudden notion to catch it. That would mean that it would lead me out into the street, where I probably would be run over by an automobile or a street car. And just when I had become desperate somehow the situation seemed to get ridiculous and I laughed. Now I am feeling pretty well again and I have one good lamp left. Of course it is unhappy when one comes up on the blind side, but it beats no eyes at all too bad to talk about. So I have a good deal to be thankful for. Anyway, I am not certain that I have not seen as much in my time as one man ought to see."—Kansas City Journal.

WAS "HERO" OF THE SHORE

Thrilling Narrative of a Narrow Escape During a Squall on Firth of Forth.

In the days when the late Sir Edward Moss lived at Edinburgh's seaside suburb of Joppa, it was his custom to invite friends to test the sailing qualities of his yacht on the Firth of Forth. One day a sudden squall arose, and from the shore the yacht could be seen laboring heavily. All on board had a narrow escape, and a local reporter scented good "copy" in the occurrence. In glowing colors the scene was described, and next day Sir Edward came in for much congratulation on his providential escape.

To a select company he recounted how he saw the waters sweeping the decks, pouring into the cabin, and subjecting the craft to imminent peril of being smashed against the pier.

"Dreadful!" exclaimed one of the agitated listeners. "Were you not afraid?"

"Afraid? No! Why should I have been?"

"Did you stay on deck all the time?"

"On deck? No."

"Then not down below, surely?"

"Oh, no!"

"Where were you, then?"

Sir Edward Moss allowed a quiet smile to creep over his face.

"I was sitting on the shore," he said.

Only a Friendless Derelict. He was just a little dog. His life had been spent dodging kicks, and picking up bones from garbage boxes. He wasn't of any particular use in the world. No one loved him, and he, after many vain attempts to gain a human friend, had given up in disgust and become sly and cynical.

In fact he was merely a dirty, unkempt, long-haired derelict of a big city, so when he finally fell a victim to the dog catcher it didn't matter particularly to anyone.

The other night he was called out to atone for his misdeeds by dying a martyr to science. There was no one to protest, so his life blood ebbed slowly away on an operating table, while a group of physicians crowded about, or even stood on chairs, the better to see the little heart palpitating in a living breast, and to watch the rise and fall of the unprotected lungs until they had stopped in one last convulsive quiver.—Chicago Record-Herald.

Four Great Sauces. A Frenchman has declared that "man has created the culinary art; he does not eat like an animal—he breakfasts, dines and sups."

The French are particularly eloquent on the subject of sauces. Among their famous chefs are recognized four great sauces: Spanish, Veloute, Bechamel and German. The Spanish and Veloute were known as far back as the seventeenth century. In the eighteenth they were modified by the masters of cookery, particularly by Careme, who was called "the Raphael of the kitchen."

The Spanish sauce is composed of juices extracted from a mixture of ham, veal, chicken and pheasant. Veloute is similar, but is not colored. Bechamel is Veloute to which cream has been added, and the German sauce is Veloute plus the yolks of eggs.—Harper's Weekly.

AVOID WORRY.

It is asserted that a keen sense of humor will cure any ordinary case of worry. Look at a common house-fly through a microscope and it assumes horrible proportions. Magnify your own troubles and what huge dimensions they assume! There is nearly always something funny in every serious situation. Try to see it. The best way to overcome worry is to attack it indirectly.

PINCKNEY DISPATCH

ROY W. CAVERLY, Publisher.
PINCKNEY, MICHIGAN

HE DIED TOO SOON.

They were a short-sighted race those old masters of painting and other arts. They died too soon. Stradivarius sold violins for $15 or $20 that would have brought him thousands had he waited long enough. Pictures that yielded but small amounts to the old Italians who painted them can now be bought only by millionaires. Even the masters of the early English school, that of Reynolds and Gainsborough and Romney, showed the same lack of economy in not living long enough. In a great London auction room on Friday a portrait by Romney sold for $206,875. In his lifetime Romney charged from $125 for a portrait 25 by 30 inches to $400 for a full-length portrait 57 by 93 inches. Probably Friday's price was a record one for Romney, but in recent years the market value of a good whole-length has ranged from $50,000 to $125,000. But if they didn't get out of their work the prices that we moderns are willing to pay for it, at least they got the glory out of it. They put something into their pictures and violins and other wares that gave them life for centuries. How many productions of the age of Romney have increased 5,000 times in value since they were made?

A young Louisvillian who was married in Indiana to a girl fifteen years old is charged with subordination of perjury and pleads insanity. Why not? Pope declares love "the sole disease thou canst not cure," and, of course, he did not mean to call it a physical ailment. Theocritus asserted that there was no remedy for it, "either salve or plaster," says the Louisville Courier-Journal. Scott spoke of it as a disorder when he said that even ambition was no cure for it. Rosalind told Orlando that a man in love might be readily plucked out in a crowd because his hose would be unbuttoned, his bonnet unbanded, his sleeve unbuttoned, his shoe untied and everything about him awry, and carelessness in the arrangement of clothing is one of the well recognized symptoms of parestia. Literature bristles with expert opinion tending to establish the insanity of lovers. And great literature is great literature because it is luminous with truth.

The lady's maids of Chicago are about to form a union and strike against some grievances, which many sympathizers will regard as very real. They are rebelling against interminable hooking up of gowns, late hours and dog nursing. A domestic service union, with strikes on one side and indignant but helpless mistresses on the other, will add vastly to the gayety of nations, that is to the portion of the national contingents who will not be requisitioned to do the hooking up and wash the dogs.

From the feminine standpoint a Daniel come to judgment and an embodiment of chivalry rolled into one is a Missouri judge who decided that because woman is engaged the fact does not oblige her to refuse the attentions of other men, and that she may lawfully have as many other beaux as she pleases. From his masculine standpoint this marvel of gallantry is simply a foolish person who has never known the pangs of being engaged to a licensed flirt.

From a Washington department store comes the recital that the president's daughters were there looking at gowns recently, and were informed that a charge of two dollars was made for alterations; whereupon one of them responded, "Oh, we can make any necessary alterations at home; we know how to sew." The accomplishment is one that should be possessed by every woman in the land, and the fact that it is taught in the public schools at the present time shows that there is one respect at least in which public school authorities respond to the practical need of the public.

Suppression of opium production seems to be progressing very energetically in China. Soldiers are destroying poppy fields, and one report is that 67 farmers were burned by the soldiers, who set fire to the house in which they were holding a meeting. If this is called to the attention of other opium farmers it seems calculated to induce them to plant some other crop.

Peaceful Settlement of Differences is Assured Through Efforts of Board of Mediation Recently Created.

The threatened strike of 80,000 conductors and trainmen of 45 eastern railroads, for higher wages and improved working conditions, will not be called.

Articles of agreement to arbitrate under the Newlands act the questions at issue were signed by the employees' representatives and the conference committee of railroad managers.

The agreement was not reached until the managers had withdrawn the proposal that their own grievance against the men also should be arbitrated. This claim, the managers announced, they had relinquished to "protect the public," from a tie-up which the employees intended to force if the railroads persisted in pressing their point.

The peaceful outcome of the dispute was the result of efforts made by the board of mediation and conciliation, recently created in the hurriedly passed Newlands act, to meet the situation. The board, consisting of Judge William Lea Chambers, Judge Martin A. Knapp and G. W. W. Hauger, brought about today's agreement after conferences with the disputants which continued more than a week.

Iceland to Have Railway.

Iceland at last is to have a railway. The enterprise is small to begin with, consisting of a six-mile freight belt line around the city and harbor of the capital, Reikiavik; but it is thought that once a beginning is made a railway running across to Thingvall will be built. Two hundred men will be employed and it will cost $500,000. The line will be done in 1916. It is a private enterprise. Iceland lies 155 miles from Norway. It is about the size of Virginia or Kentucky and has more than 80,000 population.

New Discovery to Be Tested.

A new method of giving medical students instruction which, it is said, will largely obviate the necessity of dissection, is to be tried at a Philadelphia medical college. The process originated through the recent discovery by a German student of a fluid by the use of which the human body can be rendered transparent. The fluid is composed of several oils, and it turns the flesh into a sort of transparent jelly, enabling the students to study the veins, muscles and bones even better, it is asserted, than if they resorted to the dissecting knife.

Court Sues An American Magazine.

The Russian Grand Duke Boris purposes following the example of King George and Col. Roosevelt by bringing his detractors into court. Attorneys for the grand duke have given notice of a libel suit against an American magazine which has a wide circulation in England. The article which the magazine published described the grand duke's career in Manchuria during the Russo-Japanese war as a lurid episode, and said that Gen. Kuropatkin sent him back to Russia. The case is to be tried in London, if it comes to trial, and lawyers are trying to gather evidence here now.

Plan Large Suffrage Meeting.

Plans for a widespread campaign for "votes for women," to be carried into all the backward states of the Union, will be laid at a conference of the National Council of Women Voters at Washington, Aug. 13, 14 and 15.

Delegates to the conference will be present from Wyoming, Kansas, Utah, Idaho, Colorado, Washington, California, Oregon and Arizona, the states having full and complete woman suffrage; also Illinois, in which women recently won a modified right to the ballot.

At the special election at Cass City on the proposition of issuing bonds to the amount of $11,000 to improve the electric light and water works plant, 167 voted in favor and 54 opposed. A new power building will be erected.

Caught between two sections of a freight train, which was about to back off the inside track at the Twin Lake Pere Marquette station, 12 miles northeast of Muskegon, to enable passengers to board the north-bound train, Mrs. Charles L. Buzselli, of Twin Lake, was run over by the

TREATY TO BE MODIFIED

More Liberty Granted to Nicaragua in Amended Draft of Bryan Proposal.

Important modifications are to be made in the proposed treaty with Nicaragua, by which the United States would establish a protectorate over the southern republic. It has been discovered that by the terms of the agreement originally outlined by Secretary Bryan, Nicaragua would have been prevented from ever joining with other republics to form a single central American union.

This was not contemplated by the administration when the treaty was proposed; and the suggestion has created suspicion among other central American countries. Secretary Bryan and members of the senate foreign relations committee agreed that the original draft of the treaty should be changed.

The United States will not adopt an aggressive attitude, Secretary Bryan said, in attempting to negotiate any additional treaties.

Rogers to Defend Caminetti.

Earl Rogers, who was chief counsel to Clarence Darrow in the latter's court appearances at Los Angeles, has practically been retained as chief counsel for the defense of Drew Caminetti and Manry Diggs, who it is charged early this year eloped from Sacramento to Reno, Nev., with Miss Lola Norris and Miss Marsha Warrington, high school girls. The retention of Rogers in this case promises a bitter contest of a matter which has become of national interest.

Lockout Comes to End.

The lockout of 1,300 union workmen of the building trades which has continued for seven weeks, ended at Kansas City, when members of the building trades council agreed to take the union men back. The conditions of the agreement are that no strike in the future shall be called except after arbitration and that no wage scale shall be changed on any building in course of construction.

To Build Wireless Station.

The United States navy department authorized the Panama canal commission to begin the construction of a power house, operating building and employees' quarters for the Darien wireless telegraph station. The buildings are to be located at Calmito, in the center of the canal zone. When completed the Darien station will be the most powerful in this part of the world.

A new industrial plant is to be installed at Newberry. It is to be a hardwood flooring factory, to be built and operated by Wm. Horner of Reed City, Mich. The buildings will be of concrete and steel and the machinery will be electrically driven. About 100 men will be employed.

Harry Wilson, of Carson City, was instantly killed when the auto he was driving went into a ditch and turned over, a mile north of Hubbardston. He was buried under the car and his neck broken. In the car with him was a little boy, who was thrown clear of the wreck and escaped unhurt. Wilson was 28 years old and unmar-

U. S. OFFICIAL IS SHOT BY MEXICANS

CHARLES B. DIXON, IMMIGRATION INSPECTOR, ARRESTED AND WOUNDED.

WAS SENT TO JUAREZ TO INTERVIEW NEGRO.

After Arrest Dixon Consented to Go to Headquarters But Ran When Soldiers Take Him Towards Outskirts of Town.

Charles B. Dixon, of San Diego, United States immigration inspector, was given "El Yagua" by Mexican federal soldiers. He was shot in the back and may die.

Dixon was sent by a superior to Juarez to see a Negro in connection with a white slave case being probed. He says he believes the Negro, after he had talked to him in Juarez, bought drinks for the soldiers and induced them to arrest him.

"I told the soldiers I would go with them to the commandant's office," Dixon said, "but instead of taking me in that direction, they started with me in the direction of the outskirts of the town. As I had on a suit of khaki, I thought perhaps they had taken me for a United States soldier acting as a spy, so I ran and they shot me after I got about half a block away from them."

Dr. J. H. Tappan, of the immigration service in El Paso, went to Juarez, and treated the wounded man. He found that Dixon was shot in the small of the back, the ball going completely through his body and coming out through his stomach. It did not strike the spine.

F. W. Berkshire, supervising inspector of the United States immigration service on the Mexican border, at once went to Juarez, accompanied by Clarence Gately, an inspector in the service, to look after Dixon and both were arrested and detained at the military barracks for a short time, but were later released.

Ornamental Officer Dispensed With.

Washington belles are mourning over the news that the genial and handsome Maj. Thomas L. Rhoads had been ordered to Winchester, Va., for duty with the provisional cavalry brigade there.

For some time the air had been thick with rumors that Maj. Rhoads would depart, in line with President Wilson's expressed opinion that military aides were an unnecessary grandeur for a democrat president, but the women hoped.

This is the beginning of the end, for the rest of the White House aides will probably be returned to their regular posts and whenever necessary for an aide arises, he will be detailed from nearby army posts or naval stations.

Davis for Solicitor-General.

John William Davis, of Clarkshurg, W. Va., representative of the first West Virginia congressional district, was nominated by President Wilson to be solicitor-general of the United States. Mr. Davis was the choice of Attorney-General McReynolds from a long list of prominent lawyers to fill the important $10,000 post. He will be second ranking legal officer of the country. Mr. Davis, who is 40 years old, has had a prominent legal career. He is serving his second term in congress.

Lives Saved By Towerman.

Scores of lives were saved when a towerman in Burnham, Ill., threw the Ohio river special on the Pennsylvania road into a derail and averted its collision with a through Wash train from St. Louis. The train took the ditch at a high rate of speed. The locomotive was overturned, but aside from minor injuries suffered by the fireman no one was hurt. It is reported that the block signal calling on the Pennsylvania train to stop was set and that when the special whizzed by the towerman took the only course he could to avert a collision.

Thirty-One Killed at Binghamton.

The official list of the dead in the Binghamton clothing company fire as compiled by Coroner Stillson will show that 31 persons lost their lives in the catastrophe. Of these ten have been identified.

The fire escape on the rear wall of the factory was the feature of the testimony at the coroner's inquest. A young man employee testified that he helped several girls down the escape, and that others might have escaped if their feet had not been wedged in the stair treads which were composed of two iron rungs.

Automobile users will receive next year a license tax of white back-

THE COST of the BATTLE LUST

THE REAL EXPERIENCES OF A REAL INSURRECTO

FRED VINCENT WILLIAMS

© BY RIDGWAY CO.

THE battle was lost. Even the most sanguine of Mosby's dare-devils admitted that. So, after the manner of their kind, they broke the firing-line into a hundred pieces and bunched in twos and threes scattered broadcast over the sun-baked, cactus-clad hills—soldiers of fortune, insurrectos of Mexico no longer; merely men, who had broken the laws of a land and were fleeing for their lives.

It had but one object in view—this fighting machine broken into bits, that had taken up the cause of a country other than its own—and that was to cross the American border and there seek the protection of the stars and stripes, under whose folds every mother's son of its soldiery had been born.

My bunkie and I were on the left flank when the crash came. Something hit that left flank and melted it, twisted and distorted it like so much steel put to the flame. I did not realize what it was at the time, but I do now. It was a battery, a living, breathing incarnation of hell in the shape of machine guns, handled by men who knew how to use them.

Our wing of the army melted in its hot breath. Men who had fought standing, kneeled. Men who kneeled, lay down, tried to bury myself in the bosom of Mother Earth and, Mother Earth being baked adobe in that particular spot, I took to my heels.

It was the beginning of the end. Everybody was running, so what was the use of remaining? They were ten to one against us, this enemy, and artillery to boot. Besides, our old-fashioned single-loading Springfields were being pitted against repeating rifles of the latest pattern. And the ammunition was running low.

Even thus I reasoned as I ran, pell-mell, for the border, four long miles away. In my fancy there loomed before me the fate of our wounded at Tecate and the bloodletting of the Alamo.

Somebody gripped the toe of my boot and I sprawled headlong into cactus and rocks. It was a wounded comrade, an American like myself, only a boy at that, whose ruddy face I had often seen at our troop mess or over some neighboring campfire of Baja California.

His shoulder had been shot away. A leg was crushed below the knee. There was no hope for his life, but he wanted to be taken away.

"For God's sake, don't leave me, pal!" he cried. "They'll burn me, they'll kill me slow," he moaned.

For a moment I was stunned by the fall, but the boy's pathetic appeal brought me to my senses and burned into my brain where it will forever remain.

I looked around me. There were wounded men, most of them boys, clutching at their fleeing comrades, beseeching them not to leave them to the mercy of the Mexican rurales.

Yet these men whom I had seen cheerfully face death many times, men who had enlisted in a foreign cause unafraid to die in battle, but standing ever in mortal terror of the torture chambers on the battle fields of Mexico.

The Death Rain.
For a moment my manhood returned, and the massacre fear left me. I would shoulder this maimed bit of humanity, stagger to the line with my burden, over those cruel, never ending hills which I must scale with my charge before we reached safety.

I staggered to my feet, but the zip-zip of the "dum-dums," those same "dum-dums" that had crippled this boy brought me back to a realization of my peril.

An instant I faltered in hoisting him to my back, but the boy seemed to divine my change of heart. He gripped me again, this time with a dying man's clutch which I could not and would not shake off unless I broke his arm.

So I shouldered the bleeding little figure and labored forward, the while he murmured, "Good boy, good boy," and the bullets of the Federals ever hissed and screeched in my ears.

Something rose up in my path. It barred my progress. It was shattered by shot—a human form—scarce recognizable now for the blood that stained it from head to foot. But a voice hoarse with pain and terror begged me not to leave him.

Fled as From an Enemy.
I fled from this dying man as I fled from the enemy. Dodged him as he reached for me. As I passed him from his reach he tottered back on the ground with a cry of despair that left with me another memory.

My legs were growing numb from the exertion of it all. Ahead of me fled the army, or what was left of it. Behind me echoed the wail of the wounded, the vivas of the victorious Federals, the hiss and scream of their bullets. Ever present was the memory of the Alamo and Tecate, where our wounded and those of our fellows taken prisoners had experienced living hells before death relieved them of their torment.

On and on I stumbled, falling now and then, but always my burden. It had ceased to urge me forward, this maimed bit of boyhood, but its lone arm still encircled my neck with a vise-like grip that at times made it almost impossible to breathe.

Sounds of the battle left me now. I no longer saw men. I dared not stop, however, for fear of not being able to rise again, but at last I stumbled and fell with my burden for the last time. For a long time I remained on the ground, breathing heavily and resting.

How sweet that rest was. I cared not for Federal soldado or rural. Let them come! I would sleep. The weight slipped from my back and I breathed freer. I must have lain there for an hour. When I arose the little figure at my side did not speak. I bent over him. He had cheated the torture chambers. They could not get him now. From his pocket a worn and thumb-marked bit of paper protruded. In the hope of learning his name I read it.

It was a message from a mother to her son. There was no post-mark. No address. Nothing to lead to his identity. Just "Jim, come home. Mother needs you. Your little sister and I pray for you every night. We are very lonely with you away. Come home, dear boy."

That was all. Just a good-by message—the last he was ever to receive from that little mother somewhere in the states. If she could see her boy now!

The Price of the Wanderlust.
"And what did he die for?" I asked myself. What would I have died for? Just the battle-lust, that is all. The something inside of us that makes us soldiers of fortune. The wanderlust! I buried him, in the night, on the side of a hill where the soil was softer and a little grass grew. A nameless grave with not even a mark to show that a body rested there.

Perhaps the mother may read these lines and recognize in the little soldier of fortune her boy. At least she may console herself with the thought that his flesh was not food for coyotes; his bones not bleaching white in the sun like two hundred others of his comrades who in five short months paid the penalty of the battle-lust in Mexico.

As for myself, I stole like a thief in the night across the border and surrendered to the United States authorities. With ninety-three of my fellows I was penned up in Fort Rosecrans at San Diego for five days, while the government in Mexico we had sought to overthrow pleaded for our possession. Uncle Sam refused to give us up, but he kept our general, daring young Jack Mosby, veteran of five wars, beloved of his men, who is now at the naval disciplinary barracks Puget Sound, for taking French leave of the United States navy when the Mexican war cloud broke.

Of the ninety-three who survived that bloody day which cost us so many men, some are now fighting in the Balkans under different flags, and, if the powers of Europe clash over the division of the spoils, I feel that I must join them, even at the penalty of the cost!

Ugliest Man the Most Married.

Lupunga, chief of the Basongi, one of the wealthiest chiefs in the Congo, is a much-married man, for he is the proud possessor of 300 wives, for each of whom he pays a yearly tribute of two francs to the state. This, however, is not his sole claim to distinction, for he has also been dubbed by the officials of the province "the ugliest man on earth." "With some reason," says Vice-Consul Casteus, who describes him as a villainous-looking native possessing but one eye, and a countenance horribly scarred by small-pox.

As a young child, Lupunga was deserted by his father, and afterwards adopted by a sub-chief. In later years, he persuaded the gullible natives that his one eye gave him certain occult powers; he then made friends with a band of Arab traders, and with their assistance made war upon his father whom he conquered and succeeded as chief of the Basongi.

PIECED QUILTS COMING BACK.

Old-fashioned women who know how to make pieced quilts are developing a useful industry, particularly in the south and New England, by making silk and cotton creations to supply the demand of fashionable women who are ready to pay big prices. This picture shows a scene in the home of a southern family.

GOOD USE FOR WASTE

Conservation of All the Products Raised on Farm.

Department of Agriculture Devotes Much Time Toward Solving Problem of Much Importance for Farmer and Fruit Grower.

For several years the United States department of agriculture has been devoting a great deal of time toward solving one of the most important questions before the American farmer and fruit grower today. This is the conservation of all products on the farm, letting nothing go to waste. Special trains with leading government experts in charge have been sent out through the country to demonstrate and lecture on the various ways by which the enormous waste of this country can be turned into profit. While many subjects of great interest were discussed there was, perhaps, nothing of greater importance than the subject of caring for the millions of dollars' worth of fruits and vegetables that go to waste every year, by the canning process.

The advisability of canning the surplus at home or on the farm, where produced, was explained by these experts and steam canning outfits were shown so that the farmers and their wives could see how easily this work can be done. As the heat of boiling water is not sufficient to properly sterilize such foods as vegetables, meats, fish and a few fruits, the steam pressure method of canning is almost unanimously endorsed by experts in this line. With a steam-tight receptacle canned foods may be subjected to a much higher degree of heat, and the ferment germs totally destroyed.

Many parts of the country are organized into canning clubs under the supervision of government agents. They hold meetings at intervals and the children, as well as the older people, are taught how to successfully can all food products. Lectures are given at these meetings by the person in charge, and prizes are awarded for the most perfect goods. This work is rapidly extending into all the states and in a year or so the entire country will be organized into "canning clubs."

The farmer and fruit grower have a great deal to thank the United States government for. Unlimited praise is due our government for the educational work that is being done, in helping the farmer to realize greater profits for his produce.

For Lawn-Making.

The best fall months for lawn-making are August and September. If the soil is well prepared, deep, and rich and mellow, the grass will usually secure a good start, and with a little protection after the ground freezes will continue to make roots during mild intervals, and by spring will be much in advance of a lawn made at that time and which, owing to a late season, may have to be deferred beyond the usual seed time.

Essential for Colts.

Give the colt careful attention, good stabling, good feed, exercise and daily handling from the very first, then you can train him to do good work without so much trouble and danger and you in the end will have a horse you can depend on.

Most Profitable Feed.

With hogs, especially in feeding that produces a steady, speedy growth, is the most profitable. A pig that is stunted in the early days of its life should never have a place in the breeding herd.

Labor Saving.

If taken at a very young age chickens can be taught to come and go at certain times, to feed in a certain way and do other things that will save time and annoyance.

Setting Peach Trees.

A great many people set peach trees too deeply. The ground should be plowed very deep, but the holes for the trees should only be deep enough to cover the roots well.

Keep on Hoeling.

Keep the soil going in the new strawberry bed, and also around all small fruit.

Allow no ground in the garden to lie idle. As soon as one crop has been picked clear up the ground and plant another.

GREATEST ENEMY OF CHICKS

That Which Causes More Loss Than Anything Else is Chilling—Vermis is Next Important.

The greatest enemy of the chick, and that which causes more loss than any other one cause, is chilling; the second enemy in importance because of amount of loss is lice; both lice and chilling are the indirect cause of bowel troubles, because both sap the vitality and life of the chick, making it impossible for the little fellow to resist the organisms of disease which are always ready to attack it.

Dusting the setting hen helps, but some lice are quite sure to escape, and can later be found on the head of the chick. Rub a little dab of lard on top of the chick's head, getting it into the down thoroughly, and you will get these; repeat the dose in a week, and if the hen is furnished a good dusting place, the lice are not likely to give any more trouble; but whenever you see a chick that seems unhappy, eyes closed, droopy, look for lice.

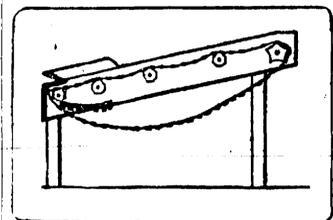

The brood coops should be thoroughly sprayed before using with some coal-tar preparation, sheep dip, white-wash, or a mixture of four parts coal oil and one part crude carbolic acid. It pays to be ahead, and that explains why so few of us are making anything on our poultry; we neglect these little things; because of neglect disease gets the start of us, we become discouraged because of the losses, and give up and blame our luck, when all the bad luck might have been prevented by a little careful preparation.

Give the chicks a clean place, all the heat they can stand, keep them free from vermin, and you can safely count them before they are raised.

HANDY IN SORTING POTATOES

Smaller Tubers Fall Through Holes in Revolving Screen—Work Done With Rapidity.

A New York man has designed a machine for sorting potatoes, and here it is. A frame, with one end higher than the other, has a hopper on one end and angular rollers rotatably supported in it. A belt that passes over these rollers is formed of strips of wire so interwoven as to make a rather large mesh. Across the frame and just beneath the hopper is a chute. To sort the tubers they are poured into the hopper and spread over the revolving belt. All the smaller potatoes pass through the openings in the belt, roll down the incline to the chute and are ejected at the side of the frame. The larger vegetables remain in the belt and are carried to another receptacle. This method is not only more rapid than sorting by hand, but it makes sure that there are no mixed sizes in the different lots.

Lime Prevents Disease.

Scatter the air-slaked lime everywhere in the poultry-house during damp weather, and on the yards, too, and it will do much to prevent roup. Hack of this, however, must be cleanliness and dry quarters.

Forage for Ducks.

Do you know that a patch of ground sown to turnips now will in a few weeks provide forage for the ducks? They are so fond of this that they often eat young turnips right out of the ground.

Disinfecting Whitewash.

An excellent disinfecting whitewash may be made as follows: Slake 25 pounds fresh lime in sufficient water to make a paste, sprinkle in 15 pounds of flowers of sulphur, add 30 gallons of water, and boil for an hour. Then add enough water to make 50 gallons and apply with a spray pump, using a bordeaux nozzle.

Source of Contamination.

Cracked or badly worn utensils are a great source of contamination for milk and cream, as they afford a harbor for various objectionable ferments which ultimately cause considerable trouble.

Spray for Green Aphis.

When the little green aphis attacks garden plants a spray of rather strong tobacco water or a thin emulsion of kerosene and soap will be effective. But the spraying must be repeated.

Quarters for Hogs.

Never compel hogs to sleep in straw stacks, manure piles or any place where they will come out steaming and sneezing in the morning.

I. H. C. ENSILAGE CUTTER

The Advantages of Silage

1. Silage keeps young stock thrifty and growing all winter.
2. It produces fat beef more cheaply than does dry feed.
3. It enables cows to produce milk and butter more economically.
4. Silage is more conveniently handled than dry fodder.
5. The silo prevents waste of corn-stalks, which contain about one third the food value of the entire crop.
6. The silo will make palatable food of stuff that would not otherwise be eaten.
7. It enables a large number of animals to be maintained on a given number of acres.
8. It is the most economical method of supplying food for the stock during the hot, dry periods in summer, when the pasture is short.

The International ensilage cutter is one of the best means of filling a silo that the farmer can use. Made in four sizes. Drop in and let us explain to you why the I. H. C. is the best cutter to buy.

The Pebble Industry.

A peculiar form of mineral wealth is found on Plum Island and Goose Island, two of a row of islands lying between the northern point of Long Island and Watch Hill. It consists in heaps of richly colored quartz pebbles, showing red, yellow, purple and other hues, which are locally called agates. They are used in making stained glass windows, and there is a sufficient demand for them in New York to keep the owners of one or two sloops employed in gathering them from the beaches, where the waves continually roll and polish them, bringing out the beauty of their colors.—Scientific American.

A Professional Paradox.

The study of science is not necessarily all gray. It may have its rosy patches. It is said that a learned professor of Heidelberg forbade his students the repetition of a certain experiment.

"But," they protested, "it has always been successful."

"Nevertheless," he said, "its position among experiments is absolutely untenable from an intellectual point of view."

The boys stared.

"The thing may answer very well in practice," said the professor, "but it is not sound in theory."—Youth's Companion.

Tommy Knew.

"Tommy," said the teacher, "how do they ascertain the measurement of a vessel?"

"I guess they measure it with a navy yard," was the unexpected reply.—Chicago News.

"My wife keeps all my love letters." "Sentiment?" "No; spitefulness."—Boston Transcript.
