Commencement Week

Class of Ten Graduated from the Pinckney School Last Week

The opera house was literally packed to the doors, Wednesday evening, June 14 when the class day exercises of the graduating class of 1914 of the Pinckney high school, comprising 10 students, were held.

As people entered the hall and their eyes rested upon the stage each and every person, none excepted, exclaimed as to the artistic manner in which the platform had been decorated under the supervision of Mrs. Will Crofoot. A distant triangular shaped vista, at the back and sides of which were many beautiful ferns, had been formed by festoons of draped purple and gold bunting, the class colors. A huge bouquet of white carnations, the class flowers, was placed in the near foreground at the center. The graduates were seated on both sides of the triangle in mission rockers, an innovation from the stiff uncomfortable chairs which usually fall to their lot. The class motto, "To-night we launch, where shall we anchor," was emblazoned across the front of the stage in bold white letters.

The program of the evening opened with a well rendered instrumental duet by the Misses Laura Burgess and Madeleine Moran. Mary M. Kennedy delivered the salutatory, welcoming the assembled guests in a very pleasing manner. At the close of this address, George E. Root gave an oration "Mexico as a Nation" which showed a seriousness of thought seldom accorded so young a student. The class prophecy by Helen C. Monks was excellently rendered and kept the audience in an uproar of laughter. Bernard McCluskey was awarded his share of applause after orating on "The Rule of Gold" in a very able manner. The class poem was next beautifully rendered by Mary Conner and was followed by a vocal solo by Miss Lila Chubb. Under the storm of applause she was compelled to respond to an encore. Ona L. Campbell delivered a fine address as the president of the class. "The Progress of Science, was the subject of well-written oration by Paul Clark. Alta Mae Bullis revealed various characteristics of the class in the giftatory, a remarkably thought-out literary effort. Each member was presented with a gift to remember the old school days in years to come. The class will be ably read by Florence Cook, beginning all possessions of the class of 1914 to the Junior class who will graduate in 1915. This was followed by the valedictory by Walter Reason who in a stirring address bade farewell to his class-mates, and set forth a few of the things that are awaiting them in the world outside of the school life. The program closed with a trio by the Misses Cordelia Dinkel, Florence Byers and Leora McCluskey, and was one of the best in recent years, showing the earnest combined efforts of both pupils and teachers to make the culmination of twelve years of school life a success.

Commencement, Thursday evening, June eighteen at the opera house, closed the high school career of the class of 1914. The program opened with an instrumental solo, rendered in pleasing style by Miss Sadie Harris. Following the invocation by Rev. Fr. Coyle, Prof. D. H. Roberts of Ypsilanti, the speaker of the evening, was introduced. Mr. Roberts is an interesting lecturer and able speaker. His address was very much enjoyed by all present. At the close of the lecture, Miss Blanche Martin rendered an instrumental solo with unusual merit and was credited with a large round of applause. Presentation of diplomas followed, by Prof. J. P. Doyle. Thus closed the commencement exercises of the class of 1914.

The graduating class has been showered with honors, now the other departments of the Pinckney school should not be overlooked. Thursday afternoon an excellent program was rendered at the high school building, which reflected great credit on both pupils and teachers, showing that the Seniors are not the "big guns" after all.

It's No Such Thing

One of the current and groundless reports is that the Ford Company will give one of their machines to the person who secures four dimes, on each of which was to be found a mint initial which would make the word "Ford." John Bussey wrote the company for information and received reply as follows:

"There is absolutely no foundation to the rumor that the Ford Motor Company will award a prize to anyone securing a collection of coins, the mint initials of which make up a particular combination. The report is simply one of many ridiculous rumors from which this company has suffered, and we are glad of the opportunity to refute it."—Milford Times.

If after looking over all of your dimes you found there is no such mint marks as R, wouldn't you feel a great deal like 30 cents?

Getting Ready

The various committees and the officers of the "Old Boys and Girls Home Association" met Monday evening at the home of Dr. H. F. Sigler. The committees are sparing no pains to make this the best meeting ever held by the association. Of course it costs considerable to get up these meetings and the committee asks that all members and all others who care to join, to be prompt in remitting their dues (50 cents) to the secretary so they may know what to depend upon. Badges will be given to everyone who pays his or her dues. Send in at once and have one reserved for you.

Emma Brown and Laura Sigler were added to the Decoration committee, with Emma Brown as chairman. The Executive committee, are to act also as Finance committee, with Carl Meyer as chairman. S. E. Swarthout was added to the Reception committee. Another meeting of all the committees and officers is to be held Monday evening, June 29 at the home of Dr. H. F. Sigler at 7:30 o'clock. Everyone try to be present.

N. P. Mortenson has purchased the M. B. Mortenson farm south of town.

CARE OF THE DAIRY PRODUCTS IN SUMMER

THE WATCHWORD OF THE CAREFUL DAIRYMAN SHOULD BE

"CLEANLINESS AND COOLNESS"

[By C. E. Newlander, Instructor in Dairying, Michigan Agricultural College.]

The dairy interests of the state suffer immense losses every year from spoiling and deterioration of products during the summer season. These losses occur all the way from the way from the dairy farm to the large dealers in dairy products and are the result of improper methods of handling milk on the farm, on the road and in the shipping stations. From the point of view of greater profit, as well as that of public health, every person who produces or handles milk should give thoughtful attention to the means by which milk may be kept cold and free from contaminations. The result will be greater satisfaction to the consumer and greater profits to the producer.

Importance of Cleanliness.

Milk is one of the most perishable of foods. It will not remain in good condition more than a few hours, when produced and handled carelessly. It quickly ferments or sours and may undergo other changes. The changes in milk are due to bacteria, commonly called germs, some of which may cause disease. The chief source of bacteria in milk is the foreign matter which finds its way into milk, such as small particles of soil or manure, hairs, dust, old milk, impure water, etc., all of which are carriers of bacteria.

The watchwords of the careful dairyman should always be cleanliness and low temperatures, but more especially so during the warm season. Since it is impossible to exclude all bacteria from milk, the producer should aim to exclude as many as possible and then to check the growth of those which have got into the milk. The first may be done by practicing cleanliness. The cows should be kept clean by brushing and by wiping off the flanks and udders. This does not require much time and is necessary where the cows have access to marshes and dirty barnyards. The milking should take place in a clean, well lighted stable as free from dust as possible. The milker should wear a clean suit used only when milking, rather than his dusty working clothes. Above all he should milk with clean, dry hands. But with all the care that can be exercised some dirt and bacteria will be constantly falling where milking is in progress. The amount falling into the milk pail can be greatly reduced by the use of a pail with a small top.

Necessity for Cooling Milk.

The second point, that of checking the growth of bacteria, can be accomplished by cooling the milk to a low temperature, 50° degrees F. or below, because bacteria do not readily grow at this temperature. The cooling can be done by pouring the milk over a cooler or by stirring it in cans set in cold water. Use a thermometer to note the temperature. It is not sufficient to simply cool the milk, it must be kept cold until delivered to the station or factory. Milk hauled to the station or factory in hot weather must be covered to protect it from heat. This can readily be done by covering the cans with blankets which have been thoroughly soaked in cold water. In case of long trips on exceptionally hot days it may be necessary to wet the blankets more than once.

In addition to the above it should be stated that milk should not be handled or stored in the stable. It is much better to have a separate milk room or milk house used for this purpose only, which can more readily be kept free from dust and odors. Also the proper cleaning and sterilization of utensils is a matter of great importance. The pails, cans, strainers, etc., should first be rinsed in lukewarm water, then thoroughly scrubbed with a brush in warm water to which some alkali like sal soda has been added, and then rinsed carefully in clean warm water. If possible the utensils should then be sterilized by the use of live steam, but good results may be obtained by dipping in boiling water for a minute or two. This will warm them sufficiently so they will dry of their own heat making wiping unnecessary.

GROUPING FLOWERS ACCORDING TO COLOR

Unity of Color Gives an Effect Which is Most Charming—A Bed of Chinese Peonies.

By BESSIE L. PUTNAM.

A pretty fancy which is more than of the hour consists in grouping flowers according to color. We have found that the best effect is obtained by massing flowers of a certain kind.

Likewise the unity of color gives an effect which is most pleasing, and with care and selection one may have a constant succession of any desired color from early spring until late in fall.

The scheme appeals with special force to the suburban home, where the flower garden is never cramped—or at least should not be. Try and arrange the flowers so that the screen that divides the front yard from the back be on one side pink and the other white.

If the garden is bordered with flowers a massing of blue or yellow in one corner and red in another will completely change the appearance of things. While white is excellent to break the colors, a more pleasing effect is secured by shading rather than ending any one abruptly.

For several reasons it is well to have the white predominate. They will show off by night as well as by day. They are suitable for all occasions. Many of them are delightfully fragrant. They occur in great variety.

Among white flowers the lilies, peonies and rose head the list. Then there may be added the spirea, carnation, aquilegia, hollyhock, phlox, Christmas rose, lily of the valley, achillea, hydrangea, honeysuckle, yucca, beside a multitude of dahlias and chrysanthemums.

Most of the plants are hardy and easily grown. Add to them the rich assortment of annuals like candytuft, sweet alyssum, snap-dragon, aster, verbena, petunia, lobelia and larkspur and you have a most worthy collection and one which has beauty all season.

Suppose that it shades to the most delicate tinted sweetpeas, dahlias and asters, thence to merge into rich pink?

There is almost an endless variety of the pink border, many of the varieties mentioned above being equally eligible in this corner. To these may be added spires, begonias and gladiolus.

If a red border is desired, more caution must be exercised, being careful that crimson and scarlet, both excellent in themselves, do not combine. In fact, it might be as well to assign two different spots for these clashing colors.

Among the scarlet blossoms nothing is more beautiful than the salvia, though there are geraniums, phlox and gladiolus to keep it company, after the procession of the tulipa, while a wealth of petunias, hollyhocks and coleus may safely smile across at the cannas and poppies from the other side of the garden.

Among the blue flowers there is a rich treat from the time of the first scilla and hyacinth until the last aster has faded; for lavender and purple are so closely akin to true blue that it seems necessary to include them.

The platycodons, Canterbury bells, some of the violets, houstonia, lupine, iris, aconite, hardy larkspur, aquilegia, forget-me-nots and veronica are among the perennials suggested, while in annuals there are ageratium, Swan river daisy, bachelor's button, pansy, linum and nemophila.

Note the effect of the different species used and gradually weed out the undesirable forms, and improve upon those found satisfactory. As a feature of landscape gardening the plan has rich possibilities.

Misreading.

A detective said to a reporter apropos of a celebrated case:

"Here our friends misread the evidence. It is easy to misread evidence, you know. For instance:

"A farmer the other day met a tramp carrying a pitchfork.

"Holy smoke, Weary," the farmer said, "I congratulate you! You're carrying a pitchfork. That's sure evidence that you're going to work at last."

"Me work? Not on your life," the tramp replied, with a good-natured laugh. "I borried it to brile a slice o' ham on."

Must First Have Gratification.

The average man has to become powerful enough to feel sure he has the whiphand in order to be able to forgive his enemies successfully.

Post Toasties

For That Bedtime Snack

The kiddies need something that is dainty and appetizing, don't they? And you want to be sure that they have a food that is easily digested—one that will not disturb their sleep.

Post Toasties are surprisingly good at any time.

They are made of the hearts of the finest Indian corn, perfectly cooked, delicately sweetened and salted, rolled into thin, ribbonary flakes and toasted to a crisp, golden brown.

They have that indescribable flavour—sweet and delicious, that so delights the taste.

Just pour from the package and add cream and sugar, or sprinkle over fresh berries or fruit.

Easy to serve and mighty good.

FABLES IN SLANG

GEORGE ADE

THE NEW FABLE OF THE ROISTERING-BLADES WHO ABSORBED THE MAGNETIC CURRENT DIRECT FROM THE CENTRAL STORAGE PLANT.

Out in the Celery Belt of the Hinterland there is a stunted Flag-Station. Number Six, carrying one Day Coach and a Combination Baggage and Stock Car, would pause long enough to unload a Bucket of Oysters and take on a Crate of Eggs.

Two highly respected Money-Getters of pure American Stock held forth in this lonesome Kraal and did a General Merchandizing.

One was called Milt, in honor of the Blind Post, and the other claimed the following brief Moniker, to wit: Henry.

Neither of them had to pay the Woman who did the Housework.

Henry and Milt got what they could during the Daytime and always stood ready to trim up the Dark Lanterns and operate at Night.

These two Pillars of Society had marched at the head of the Women and School Children during the Dry Movement which banished King Alcohol from their Fair City.

As a result of their Efforts Liquor was not to be obtained in this Town except at the Drug Stores and Restaurants or, in the Cellar underlying any well-conducted Home.

For Eleven Months and Three Weeks out of every Calendar year these two played Right and Left Tackle in the Stubborn Battle to Uplift the Community and better the Moral Tone.

They walked the Straight and Narrow, wearing Blinders, Check-Reins, Hobbies and Interference Pads.

But—every Autumn, about the time the Frost is on the Stock Market and Wall Street is in the Shock, Milt and Henry would do a Skylark Ascension from the Home Nest and Wing away toward the Rising Sun.

They called it Fall Buying, because both of them Bought and both of them Fall.

At Home neither of them would Kick in for any Pastime more worldly than a 10-cent M. P. Show depicting a large number of Insane People falling over Precipices.

The Blow-Off came on the Trip to the City. That was the Big Show.

Every Nickel that could be held out went into the Little Tin Bank, for they knew that when they got together 100 of these Washers, a man up in New York would let them have some Tiffany Water of Rare Vintage, with a Napkin wrapped around it as an Evidence of Good Faith.

On Winter Evenings, Milt would don the Velvet Slippers and grill his Lower Extremities on the ornate Porch such as surrounds every high-price Base-Burner.

While thus crisping himself he loved to read News Notes from Gotham, signed Carolyn Stuyvesant, who seemed to have the Entree into the Best Houses.

He did not know that Carolyn had tangled Whiskers and jotted down his Bojidor Secrets in a Weinstube, using a borrowed Pencil.

So he believed what it said in the Paper about a well-known Heiress having the Teeth of her favorite Pomeranian filled with Radium, at a cost of $150,000.

Whenever he got this kind of a Private Peek into the Gay Life of the Modern Babylon, he began to breathe through his Nose and tug at the Leash.

When the Day of Days arrived, Milt and Henry would be seen at the Depot with congested Suit-Cases and their Necks all newly shaven and powdered for the approaching Jubilee.

Each had pinned into his college-made Suit enough currency to lift the Debt on the Paragon.

Greedy they were smoking Foreign Cigars and these were a mere Hint of what the Future had in Store.

While waiting for Number Six they wired for Two Rooms and Two Baths and to have Relays waiting in the Mainour Parlor.

Up at the Junction, where they caught the Limited, they moved into the Pullman and began to peel from the Rail.

The Steak ordered in the Dining Car hung over the edge of the Table and they wanted to see what one would pay the Check.

As for the Boy in the Buffet, every time he heard a Sound like $5 cents he came out of the Dark Room and began to form some Original Fresh.

When they approached the Metropolitan, via the Tunnel, they thought they were riding in on a Curtiss Bi-Plane.

The Clerk let on to remember them and quoted a Bargain Rate of Six Dollars, meaning by the Day and not by the Month.

They wanted to know if that was the Best he had and he said it was, as the Sons of Ohio were having a Dinner in the Main Banquet Hall.

So they ordered a lot of Supplies sent up to each Room and wanted to know if there was a Good Show in Town—something that had been denounced by the Press.

The Clerk told of one in which Asbestos Scenery was used and Firemen had to stand in the Wings, so they tore over to the News Stand and bought two on the Aisle for $8 from a pale Goddess who kept looking at the Ceiling all during the Negotiations, for she seemed out of Sympathy with her Sordid Surroundings.

Then to the Rooms with their glittering Bedsteads and insulting grandiosity of Towels.

After calling up the Office to complain of the Service, they shook the Moth Balls out of their Henry Millers and began to sort the Studs.

When fully attired in Evening Clothes, including the Sheet-Iron Shoes, they knew they looked like New York Club Men and the Flag Station seemed far away, as in another World.

Instead of the usual 6:30 Repast of Chipped Beef in Cream, Body Biscuits and a Stoup of Gunpowder Tea, they ordered up Cape Cods, Potato Let-it-go-at-that, Sweetbreads So-and-so, on and on past the partially heated Duck and Salad with Fringe along the Edges and Cheese that had waited too long and a Check for $17.40 and the Waiter peevish at being slipped a paltry $1.50.

Heigh-ho! It is a Frolicking Life! They remembered afterward being in a gilded Play-House with the Activities equally divided between a Trap-Drammer and 700 restless Young Women.

Then, being assailed by the Pangs of Hunger, they went out and purchased Crab Flakes at 20 cents a Flake, after which they paid to get their Hats and next Morning they were back in their rooms, entirely surrounded by Towels.

On the third Afternoon, Milt suspended Fall Buying long enough to send his Family a Book of Views showing the Statue of Peter Cooper, the Aviary in Bronx Park and Brooklyn Bridge by Moonlight.

Then, with a Clear Conscience, he went back and put his Foot on the Rail.

The morning on which their Bodies were taken the Pennsylvania Station broke bright and cheery.

Milt said somebody had fed him a Steam Radiator and put Mittens on him and unscrewed his Knees-Caps.

Otherwise, he was O. K.

Henry kept waving the English Sparrow out of the Way, and asking why so many Balls were ringing.

Two weeks later, at the Union Revival Services, when Rev. Oldenstatter gave out that jouncing old Stand-by which begins "Yield, Not to Temptation," Milt and Henry arose from the Cushioned Seats and sang their foot Stools off.

Jackson.—The state board of education has approved of the graduates for the denominational colleges and the Michigan Agricultural college. Two hundred certificates were granted to the four state normal schools. C. K. Lyon of Worcester, Mass., was named head of the education department of the Ypsilanti State normal.

Lansing.—The fund for the building of a Michigan building at the Panama exposition received its first big boost when State Treasurer Haarer received $1,000 in four contributions of $250 each, from the Reo Motor company of this city; the Paige-Detroit Motor company, the Fisher Body company and the Metal Products company of Detroit.

Grand Rapids.—Alleging that the recent decision of the state railroad commission ordering the Michigan State Telephone company at Traverse City to connect with the Citizens Telephone company for long distance business, is illegal and in restraint of trade, the order will be appealed to the supreme court, according to lawyers of the Michigan State.

Grand Rapids.—"I will swim across that river and back or drown," declared John Ladroot, sixty years old, to two companions with whom he was fishing in Grand river. In spite of the protest of his friends, Ladroot plunged into the water. He attempted to swim back, when he was drowned.

Lansing.—On the recommendation of the supreme court, Governor Ferris has appointed Charles M. Wilson of Grand Rapids as a member of the state board of law examiners. Wilson will succeed Wesley W. Hyde of Grand Rapids, who tendered his resignation a few weeks ago. Nicholas Hajjar of Munising has been named by Governor Ferris as county agent for Alger county.

Cadillac.—Bert Maxwell, chauffeur for Mrs. D. F. Diggins of this city, was seriously injured and Mrs. Diggins' automobile was partially wrecked. Maxwell was about to pass along the side of a street, partially dug up, when a woman and child ran out from a house, and not seeing the car, ran directly in its path. Maxwell turned suddenly to avoid hitting them and his car crashed over the sewer embankment, throwing him into the hole and demolishing the machine.

Kalamazoo.—Whether Henry Clark and Ray Drew, negroes, can be tried here for highway robbery or whether they will have to be freed, although they have confessed, is a problem of officers are trying to solve. The negroes admit beating and robbing Bolentaw Popianek while the three were stealing a ride on a Michigan Central freight. Popianek was rendered unconscious by the blow and cannot tell just what county the assault took place in, although it was this side of Jackson.

Port Huron.—James McMillan, the young man arrested when the steamer Greyhound touched at this port, was taken back to Goderich, Ont., by Provincial Detective Moore of that place. McMillan was a happy youth, despite the fact that he was under arrest. Until the arrival of the officer young McMillan believed that he was wanted on a murder charge as the result of a fight, which took place at Goderich on June 10. Detective Moore informed McMillan that the victim of the alleged assault was not dead but would in all probability recover. He held a warrant charging McMillan with assault with intent to do great bodily harm.

WITH OLD TRUTH IN MERCY

Author's Opinion of Why Women Use "Tact" Instead of Being Too Plainly Outspoken.

"I call a woman sincere," Marlow began after giving me a cigar and lighting one himself. "I call a woman sincere when she volunteers a statement resembling remotely in form what she really thinks ought to be said if it were not for the necessity to spare the stupid sensitiveness of men. The woman's rougher, simpler, more upright judgment embraces the whole truth, which their tact, their mistrust of masculine idealism, ever prevents them from speaking in its entirety. And their tact is unerring. We could not stand women speaking the truth. We could not bear it. It would cause infinite misery and bring about most awful disturbances in this rather mediocre but still idealistic fool's paradise in which each of us lives his own little life—the unit in the great sum of existence. And they know it. They are merciful."—From "Chance," by Joseph Conrad.

Cheap Deodorant

The virtues of bicarbonate of soda as a deodorant are known and appreciated by very few—most of them nurses and physicians. What woman will not be glad to learn, for instance, that it is a perfect neutralizer of perspiration odors? There are many expensive powders put up for this purpose and some of them are effective, but plain sodium carbonate at five cents a whole lot is quite as good as the best of them. It may be rubbed on the shields or through the armholes of a white shirtwaist and be relied upon to neutralize any odor. The armpits may also be bathed with a solution of it before dressing. The most fastidious of women, who have found constant bathing ineffective for this affliction, will find this simple precaution a great boon.

Help to Mothers.

Whenever riding upon the cars for any distance with children, they are sure to want a little luncheon, either of cookies or sticky candy. Whenever they get their hands and face terribly soiled, all you have to clean them with is a clean handkerchief, which very seldom takes off all the dirt.

When starting out you should take a two compartment rubber lined envelope case, just large enough for your coat pocket or handbag; on one side have a dampened face cloth (not too wet) and on the other a dry face cloth. Then when little faces and hands are soiled you will have your damp cloth to wash them with and a dry one to dry them.

It will prove to be very useful whenever with small children.

MRS. WINN'S ADVICE TO WOMEN

Take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and be Restored to Health.

Kansas City, Mo.—"The doctors told me I would never be a mother. Every month the pains were so bad that I could not bear my weight on one foot. I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and had not finished the first bottle when I felt greatly relieved and I took it until it made me sound and well, and I now have two fine baby girls. I cannot praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound too highly for what it has done for me. I always speak a word in favor of your medicine to other women who suffer when I have an opportunity."—Mrs. H. T. WINN, 1225 Freemont Ave., Kansas City, Mo.

Read What Another Woman says:

Cumming, Ga.—"I tell some suffering woman every day of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and what it has done for me. I could not eat or sleep, had a bad stomach and was in misery all the time. I could not do my housework or walk any distance without suffering great pain. I tried doctors' medicines and different patent medicines but failed to get relief. My husband brought home your Vegetable Compound and in two weeks I could eat anything, could sleep like a healthy baby, and walk a long distance without feeling tired. I can highly recommend your Vegetable Compound to women who suffer as I did, and you are at liberty to use this letter."—Mrs. CHARLIE BAGLEY, R. 8, Cumming, Ga.

Don't Poison Baby.

FORTY YEARS AGO almost every mother thought her child must have PAREGORIC or laudanum to make it sleep. These drugs will produce sleep, and a FEW DROPS TOO MANY will produce the SLEEP FROM WHICH THERE IS NO WAKING. Many are the children who have been killed or whose health has been ruined for life by paregoric, laudanum and morphine, each of which is a narcotic product of opium. Druggists are prohibited from selling either of the narcotics named to children at all, or to anybody without labelling them "poison." The definition of "narcotic" is: "A medicine which relieves pain and produces sleep, but which in poisonous doses produces stupor, coma, convulsions and death." The taste and smell of medicines containing opium are disguised, and sold under the names of "Drops," "Cordials," "Soothing Syrups," etc. You should not permit any medicine to be given to your children without you or your physician know of what it is composed. CASTORIA DOES NOT CONTAIN NARCOTICS, if it bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher. Genuine Castoria always bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.

The children's day exercises at the M. E. and Cong'l. churches, Sunday, were very fine. At the M. E. church E. M. Bard, Supt. of the Sunday school of the Marion Lawrence church at Toledo, Ohio gave a short but very interesting talk on his work in that church whose Sunday school membership reaches 1600.

When a man habitually complains that his home town is dead, it may be taken for granted that he has done his worst to make it dead, and that he is even deader than his town. A preacher once said at a funeral service: "The late respective corpse was a member of this church for forty years." There are lots of towns like that unfortunate church in that they have "respected corpses" in the population. It needs live men and not dead men to build up a town.

People of the State of Michigan are to be given still wider opportunities of educating themselves at the State's rapidly advancing Agricultural College at East Lansing. The authorities have planned a summer course which will begin on June 23rd and continue six weeks. A large number of the courses offered in the regular terms of the college will be taught during the summer session. These are chosen with the hope of meeting the needs of teachers and others who would benefit by this training. Although this is the first attempt to hold such a school at the college, letters are already being received by E. H. Ryder, the member of the faculty in charge, indicating that a large number of students will avail themselves of this opportunity of spending a useful and pleasant summer on the beautiful campus in East Lansing.

"Clean Up the Bowels and Keep Them Clean"

There are many remedies to be had for constipation, but the difficulty is to procure one that acts without violence. A remedy that does not perform by force what should be accomplished by persuasion is Dr. Miles' Laxative Tablets.

"Almost all my life I have been troubled with constipation, and have tried many remedies, all of which seemed to cause pain without giving much relief. I finally tried Dr. Miles' Laxative Tablets and found them excellent. Their action is pleasant and mild, and their chocolate taste makes them easy to take. I am more than glad to recommend them."

"Clean up the bowels and keep them clean" is the advice of all physicians, because they realize the danger resulting from habitual constipation. Do not delay too long, but begin proper curative measures.

Dr. Miles' Laxative Tablets are a new remedy for this old complaint, and a great improvement over the cathartics you have used in the past. They taste like candy and work like a charm. A trial will convince you.

Dr. Miles' Laxative Tablets are sold by all druggists at 25 cents a box containing 10 tablets. If not found satisfactory after trial, return the box to your druggist, and he will return your money. MILES MEDICAL CO., Elkhart, Ind.

TRIPLE MURDER MYSTERY CLEARED

CRIME THAT HAS LONG BAFFLED
GRAND RAPIDS CONFESSED
BY LAWRENCE.

REPORTER GETS STATEMENT

Man Arrested in Covington, Ky., Last
April Tells All About Diamond
Robbery When Three Men Were Killed.

Grand Rapids, Mich.—The mystery of the robbery of the Thomson jewelry store, in this city, and the slaying of J. N. Thomson and two of his clerks last fall was cleared up Friday night by the confession of Walter ("Vopper") Lawrence, who names Lawrence Robinson as the man who did the shooting.

Lawrence's confession was made when he was informed that Robinson had been shot in a fight with police officers in Boston and fatally wounded, and that he had told the police there the story of the crime here. Lawrence then told the prosecutor and Judge Stuart, who had been summoned, the whole story of the robbery and killing here. He was led up to the confession by E. A. Nowack, a newspaper man.

Last Sept. 18, shortly before 6 p. m., while hundreds of persons were passing by, two men entered the jewelry store of J. N. Thomson on Monroe street, in the heart of the business district, and help up Thomson and his two clerks, Edward Smith and Paul Townsend. One of them showed fight and all three were shot down, the first two being instantly killed and Townsend dying a few days later. The two men escaped, taking with them $2,200 worth of diamonds.

Within a week after the affair Roy Blackburn was arrested in Chicago and brought back here for trial, but proved an alibi and was discharged. Detective John Halloran kept on the trail and finally, after a chase through 34 states, arrested Lawrence in Covington, Ky., April 13. Lawrence returned here without extradition and pleaded not guilty, and his police court examination is not yet completed.

Lawrence, in his confession declared that he and Robinson came to Grand Rapids to do some "dip" work and planned the robbery of the Thomson store.

"We went in that night and stuck up the three clerks," he confessed. "I had them in a back room with a gun and black jack while Robinson rifed some jewel cases. Then the big fellow (Smith) jumped on me and knocked me down. In the scuffle my gun was discharged. Robinson jumped in about that time and commenced firing. I think he shot five times. All three of the clerks dropped in a heap on the floor. One wiggled a little and when I thought Robinson was going to shoot him again, I grabbed him and we ran from the store.

"We walked through the main streets and tried to get a train out, but had to go back and catch an interurban for Muskegon. There we took a boat for Chicago. At Toledo, we sold our diamonds for $700. We got 33 stones in all. After that I laid low until my arrest."

Lawrence's arrest was the result of a tip to Detective Halloran by a Toledo man who will receive $5,000 of the $7,000 reward offered for the capture of the slayers.

TWO DROWN IN SAGINAW BAY

Canoe Upsets and Young Man and Young Lady Meet Death.

Bay City, Mich.—Agnes O'Brien was rescued Thursday while clinging to an overturned canoe in Saginaw bay, but her two companions, Lloyd Ebers, aged 20, and Gertrude Eke-meyer, 19, were drowned. The accident occurred in view of several hundred persons at Wenona Beach, and within a few yards of water so shallow that could have waded to shore. When the canoe in which they were riding upset, several people put out from shore in boats. While David Wright was pulling Miss O'Brien into his boat, Ebers lost his hold on the canoe and sank. The young people had gone to the beach to prepare for a picnic party of young people. Both bodies were recovered.

VILLAGE IS FIRE SWEEP

Dollarville Suffers Loss of Majority of Houses When Motion Picture Machine Explodes.

Newberry, Mich.—Fire that wiped out a large portion of Dollarville, two miles from here, Friday, made practically 200 homeless.

When a motion-picture machine exploded, the building occupied by a theatre was set on fire. The flames spread to Krempel's grocery store, the hotel and 20 dwellings, all of which were consumed within a few hours. Assistance was rushed from here in motor cars, and many of the household goods were saved. A heavy downpour of rain prevented the entire town being wiped out.

Nearly all the food supply was burned, and the homeless were fed by neighbors until supplies were shipped from here.

The victims were packed into the already crowded homes and work commenced at once on temporary shanties.

A sawmill, practically the town's only means of livelihood, was unharmed, and the village will lose none of its inhabitants.

VETS ELECT RILEY L. JONES

End State Encampment at Jackson and Chose Kalamazoo For Next Year.

Jackson, Mich.—The last of the civil war veterans, who have been here in attendance at the annual state encampment, returned to their homes Friday night. The old home town of War Governor Austin Blair probably never again will have the privilege of entertaining such a gathering as this has been.

Riley L. Jones, of Saginaw, was elected department commander of the G. A. R., receiving 250 out of 388 votes on the first ballot. The new senior vice-commander is Frank Manning, Jackson, and the junior vice-commander, M. C. Barney, Flint.

The committee on resolutions at Friday forenoon's session of the G. A. R. adopted a resolution protesting emphatically against a movement on the part of the Daughters of the Confederacy and others to put on the field of the American flag the confederate cross, and the adjutant-general was directed to send a copy of this resolution to President Wilson and to the United States senators from Michigan.

Kalamazoo was chosen for the place of next year's encampment of the Michigan G. A. R., and the Spanish War Veterans will meet at the same place.

MANAGER OF SHOW TORN TO PIECES

FIVE LIONS ATTACK MAN WHO ENTERS CAR TO WATER ANIMALS.

VICTIM CORNELL GRADUATE

Formaldehyde Used to Drive Beasts
From Body After They Have Killed
Emerson D. Dietrich, Fiancee
Their Trainer.

Chicago, Ill.—Set upon by five angry, half-famished lions, unarmed and with an aged lioness as his only protector, Emerson D. Dietrich, of Brooklyn, N. Y., a Cornell graduate and manager of a trained animal act, fought a thrilling but futile battle for his life in a box car in the yards of the Santa Fe railroad at Clark and Sixteenth streets Sunday afternoon.

Before aid could reach him Dietrich had practically been torn to bits by the infuriated lions which crouched over the body, refusing to permit it to be dragged from the cage until they had been forced away by the fumes of formaldehyde. Nearly every bone in Dietrich's body had been broken and it had been gored beyond recognition by the beasts.

While the lions were attacking Dietrich, Adgie Castillo, his fiancee, the real animal trainer in charge of the beasts, was telling Cy De Vry, head animal keeper at Lincoln park, that her lions were the tamest in captivity and were not dangerous. A telephone message informing her of the tragedy interrupted her remarks to De Vry.

Dietrich was the manager of the animal act and was engaged to the lion tamer. He had entered the car to water the animals. They were to be married at Atlantic City, where they were to open for performances next week.

Sales of Red Cross Christmas Seals
Netted $440,000 for Fight Against Tuberculosis.

More than 44,000,000 Red Cross Christmas seals were sold last December, according to a report issued by the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis, and the American Red Cross. In this way $440,000 is netted for anti-tuberculosis work in various parts of the United States.

The sale in 1913 is a gain of 4,000,000 seals over 1912, or ten per cent. It is hoped that this year the 50,000,000 mark will be reached. The seal design for 1914 has been selected and orders for the printing of 100,000,000 seals have been placed. Plans for the organization of a larger sale this year than ever before have been perfected.

New York state led the country last year with a sale of over 10,500,000 seals, or one for each man, woman and child in the state. Of this number, more than 6,825,000 were sold outside of New York city. Ohio came next with a sale of 2,800,000, Wisconsin third with 2,700,000, and Illinois fourth with 2,500,000. Hawaii sold the most seals per capita, the total sale being somewhat over two for each inhabitant. Rhode Island came second with a sale of two per person.

Beginning with a sale of 13,500 in 1908, in six seasons the revenue which these little holiday seals have brought to the anti-tuberculosis campaign has more than tripled, an aggregate for the period of over $1,800,000 or 180,000,000 seals.

ERUPTION DISFIGURED FACE

Lock Box 35, Maurice, Ia.—"In the spring of 1911 our little daughter, age five years, had a breaking out on her lip and part of her cheek that we took for ringworm. It resembled a large ringworm, only it differed in that it was covered with watery blisters that itched and burned terribly, made worse by her scratching it. Then the blisters would break through and let out a watery substance. She was very cross and fretful while she had it and had very little rest at night. When the eruption was at its worst the teacher of the school sent her home and would not allow her to attend until the disfigurement of her face was gone.

"I wrote and received a sample of Cuticura Soap and Ointment, which we used according to directions, and they gave instant relief, so we bought some more. It gradually grew better. We kept on using Cuticura Soap and Ointment and in three or four months the child was entirely cured." (Signed) Mr. Henry Prins, Oct. 23, 1912.

Irascible Senator Simply Changed Tactics
When Shown the Error.
Was His.

One of our western senators, who possesses a rather irascible temper, has a habit on days when everything seems to go wrong of scolding the clerks employed by his committee.

Not long ago, during a session of the senate, the western solon had expressed a desire that one of the clerks prepare a tabulated statement of certain trade statistics of the United States. The statement was accordingly prepared and laid before the testy senator, who glanced at it with an air that boded trouble. In a moment he looked up and exclaimed:

"See here, Morton, this won't do. Why didn't you prepare this statement on the typewriter? These figures are disgraceful. Any twelve-year-old school boy could do better than that. See that three? It looks for all the world like a five! No one would take it for anything else. Just look at it!"

"I beg your pardon, senator," replied the clerk apologetically. "The fact is, it is a five."

"A five!" roared the senator. "You idiot! It looks like a three!"

Not Dependent on Hired Help.

James Thompson, manager of the largest hotel in Cleveland, Ohio, was born in a little village in that state. Not long ago Thompson's father, who still lives in the village where James was born, was approached by an old woman, a lifelong friend of the family. In the course of the conversation she asked:

"By the way, what's become of little Jimmie, your son?"

"Oh," replied the father, "he's in Cleveland, getting along nicely. He's manager of the biggest hotel in that city."

The old lady shook her head dubiously.

"Well," she said, "I hope Jimmie's strong enough to stand the work; but I'm afraid hotel work is too hard for him—lifting so many trunks around. Is Jimmie married yet?"

"Yes," replied the father, "he's been married for some time."

The old woman sighed happily.

"Well," she commented, "he isn't dependent on hired help to do the cooking then."

A dead letter may be one she gave her husband to mail.

SYNOPSIS.

Daniel Slade suddenly advances from a penniless miser to a millionaire. He is ambitious to become governor of the state. His simple, home-loving wife fails to rise to the new conditions. Slade meets Katherine, daughter of Senator Strickland, and sees in her all that Mary is not. Slade decides to separate from his wife and takes rooms at his club. His desertion of his wife and his constant attendance on Katherine Strickland causes public comment. Editor Merritt is won over to the support of Slade because he cannot otherwise supply the money for a European trip demanded by Mrs. Merritt.

"There are strangers there who learned of your—er—domestic difficulties for the first time tonight," Strickland continued. "Merritt has thrown the bombshell."

"Why, I thought—" Slade began to protest.

"He's all right," came the senator's reassuring tones. "It had to come out. He's got his coat off in there for you now. He maintains that the opposition papers are bound to take it up at any moment. Now, what do you advise?"

"The truth," thundered Slade. "My wife is preparing to desert me. It will happen"—Hayes jumped up and flung himself out of the room—"tomorrow—the next day—any hour."

"I see," and the senator looked grave. "Is this irrevocable, Slade?" "Irrevocable," declared Slade, positively. "As I have told you several times, senator, it is irrevocable. I'll stand by that."

Convinced that Slade knew his own mind in this matter as well as he had the reputation for knowing it in all other matters, Strickland returned to the waiting politicians.

Slade had been alone but a few minutes when Katherine returned. "Well, Mr. Slade," the girl exclaimed, "things seem to be coming our way."

Slade was in no mood for mere conversation. He was annoyed at Hayes' attitude, and incensed because his private affairs were being publicly discussed in the next room. Mentally he consigned Hayes to the devil, his a fleeting memory of the slight, badly dressed little woman, whose diffidence in strange surroundings had always fretted him. She a governor's wife? Impossible! He rose and stood beside the woman whom he proposed to use as another living stepping stone.

"Miss Strickland," his mind fully made up, "you've done a lot for me in the last few weeks while you've been making that way. I think I understand you in a way. The more I see of you the more I think I—d'like to make a—well, a bargain with you. That doesn't seem to be quite the word," he hesitated as the girl averted her eyes. "Yet I think that's what we call it."

"A bargain?" echoed Katherine. "Yes, a bargain," he repeated. "I never knew but one woman well—that was Mrs. Slade. She's a good woman—a mighty good woman, but we can't—I never had a home—not a home like Strickland's. When I have another house—that'll be what I'll want, I'll want my friends, my acquaintances, to come there. I want—well—head-quarters. And I want a woman at the head of my house that I can be proud of—like Strickland."

Katherine was not surprised. She had anticipated some such move as this on his part, but now that she was face to face with the unvarnished suggestion, she found herself more shocked than she would have believed.

"In a couple of months I'll stand free," he went on. "Perhaps sooner. I don't expect any woman's going to love me—she isn't. Got to do that when you're young. But I'd do all I could for the woman. She'd have everything—money and—the power that goes with it. I want to say right here that I wouldn't speak if I thought young Hayes had a chance. I saw he didn't."

At the mention of Hayes' name Katherine had an instant's vision of Bob's tender face—his eyes burning with love looking into hers—of his youth—his strength—his fine honor, and her heart cried out desperately, pitifully, for the shelter of his arms. In another moment the old recurrent vision of life in the old town, dull, cheap, uninteresting, and the lure of what Slade was offering, the money, the clothes, the servants, the power to reign supreme, swept her off her feet. The thought of divorce did not terrify her. Mrs. Slade, whom she had never seen, was only a name. As Slade watched her standing straight and white, he feared he had been too brutally blunt.

"You needn't think it over now," he hastened to add. "Perhaps you will later, and perhaps you won't. That's for you to decide. I guess I've said all I can say."

But Katherine was not a woman to shrink from a situation because of its unpleasant features. She knew that she couldn't have all the things she wanted without some suffering, some pain. Her father's world had taught her that love was a thing of small consideration where marriage was concerned, unless it went with the advancement of one's ambitions. Love was not of the world. Place, power, wealth—these were of the world and this man offered them to her.

"This isn't a matter of sentiment," she agreed with him calmly. "I'll be perfectly frank with you. I don't say I won't think it over. I know just what you want of a woman. When you can go to my father free there won't be any barrier in the way."

She offered her hand as if to bind the bargain. He held it for a brief instant and with a hurried "thank you" left the room.

CHAPTER VII.

Left alone, Katherine drew a long breath. Her face was set and her eyes were harder than it is good for a woman's eyes to be. She pictured to herself the future for which she had just bargained. There would be wealth—no more pinching struggle with masked poverty, her father at ease, his political debts all paid. There would be no more pretense that her art was for love of it and not for money—she would be free to follow her desires in this as in all else. There would be honor and power as wife of the state's chief executive—and that was but a step to further honors that she would achieve at Slade's side—with Slade—always with Slade—ah!

"I Think I'd Like to Make a Bargain With You."

wife to the far East of the country, and registered a vow with himself that he would have that divorce and the woman he wanted in spite of everybody and everything.

He resolved to find Katherine out then and there. He turned over in his mind the most cold-blooded proposition that a man ever made to a woman. He was planning to ask her to marry him, when he should be free, to decorate his home, preside at his table, share his wealth and the honors of the chief executive of the state. There would be no wealth in his time, no love in his heart, no hunger of his lips for her, no yearning of his arms for her yielding figure, there would be none of the soft of youth, nothing of the love of little children, nothing of the spirit that makes of marriage a sacrament rather than a thing of convenience.

As Katherine walked across the room, moving toward him with the quiet grace and dignity of the well-bred, well-brought-up woman, he felt self as Slade's wife. She did not hear Bob enter, and did not know he was in the room until he touched her shoulder with tender alarm, exclaiming, "Why, Katherine, what's the matter?"

He did not think he ever remembered Katherine, strong, firm-willed Katherine, looking so pathetic and helpless. She dropped her hands from her face and he was surprised to see the misery in her eyes and the drawn lines about her mouth.

"I'm cold—I'm cold! I've had an awful chill," she tried to say, her teeth chattering with the sudden cold that seemed to freeze her lips. "Don't touch me, Bob?" she choked. "I've done it. I've done it. I always knew I'd do something terrible—I've done it." Her voice was hollow and her eyes were blank and expressionless.

"Katherine, tell me what's the matter? Can't you tell me?" There was a world of love and tender solicitude in Bob's voice. His manner seemed to rouse her, and she began to pace the floor excitedly.

"You Are Going to Rob a Poor Little Woman!"

"My mind's made up. It's all over between us now. I'm going to marry Slade," the words were uttered quickly, breathlessly.

"You're going to marry Slade," Bob could scarcely believe his ears. "You must be crazy!"

"No." Her voice was firmer now. "But I'm twenty-seven years old, twenty-seven years old." She bit the words off with a vengeance. "Soon I'll be thirty—thirty—do you hear? And you're the only man I've ever cared a rap for. I've tried to marry other men, rich men, men with important positions. Once I nearly did it in Europe. Then I thought of you, and I waited, I waited. And it's too late now. I can't wait any longer. I've worried and wondered ever since I got home what I could do. What I could do! Slade's the answer, Bob, Slade's the answer."

"My God, Katherine!" Hayes was completely bewildered at this unexpected outburst. "Slade's married."

"I don't care," she retorted, defiantly, gaining courage as she talked. "A woman more or less is nothing to that man. He'll move a mountain. He'll soon sweep her out of his path."

The hot blood surged up into Hayes' face. He was aghast at this peep into the soul of the woman he had thought was tender and dear and sweet. Her complete disregard of Mrs. Slade enraged him.

"So this is what Slade has done!" His fists were clinched. "This is what he's after. This is what you want. I'm not surprised," he went on, bitterly. "It was always in you."

"Yes," she met this accusation, an angry light in her eyes. "It was always in me. I always had to have everything, be everything. I can't stay here and be a nobody. We're getting horribly poor. If we look prosperous, it's because nothing is paid for. When I was a child I always had to lead all the little games." She was talking rapidly, earnestly. "Then when I grew up there was only one leader here—Katherine Strickland, and after there was never, but one woman left this place and did the things I've done and made the successes I've made, and now—to come back here—and settle down! When I'm Mrs. Slade I'll have the life I'm after—money and power and Europe—the world."

"Don't forget Slade," came sarcastically from Hayes. "Don't forget Slade," and he came toward her. "You'll have Slade, too. You'll have to live with him, a man who has lived all his life with another woman—who—"

"Don't!" she commanded. "He is only marrying me for a sort of housekeeper."

"You'll be his wife just the same." Every word was a sting.

"You—your—have your revenge."

Katherine answered quietly, more to herself than to him. Her voice dropped wearily. "Every time he kisses me—every time he comes into the room. But I'll get used to him, I suppose. Women get used to that sort of thing."

"Yes, and then go to the devil! I'll tell you what I think of you," he stormed. "You're a bad woman. You're as rotten as they make them. There's no type so low. You're bad to the marrow. London and Washington and Paris have done for you. You've butterflied all over the world till you're a heartless jade, junketing about from one embassy to another with all your pretty little cheating tricks and not a decent thought in your head."

"I won't listen," she gasped, amazed at his denunciation of her.

"You will listen!"

"Don't, oh, don't say such things, Bob," she pleaded.

"Why not?" he demanded. "You who plan to do such a devilish thing in the eyes of God and of men, can you be afraid to hear what it really is you plan? You will listen!"

He took a step nearer. He caught her roughly by the shoulders. He buried his lips into the soft tendril of hair around her ear as he almost shouted: "You are going to rob a poor little woman—step into her house and snatch away her husband—and the only excuse you can offer is that you want his money. Why don't you rob somebody outright and get away with it? It's more honest."

Katherine shrank from him with a cry of protest.

"And all the while you love me," he went on, passionately, "you love me—"

"I don't," she sobbed.

"You lie!" he accused, hotly.

"Well, supposing I do—what can you give me?" she asked coolly.

"What can I give you?" he repeated. Then with a look of utter loathing in his eyes: "You contemptible little—" and he flung her from him.

"You're going to sell what's mine to the highest bidder," he panted.

"But Slade's not divorced yet, and before you get out of this dirty mire you'll regret it. You'll find yourself so deep in scandal—"

"I won't," Katherine protested, vehemently. "I won't have a scandal."

"They'll say he's your lover," his rage turning into fury.

Katherine looked at him as if she had been turned to stone. Then the real significance of what he had said fanned to a flame the rage that was burning in her heart—rage at him—at conditions—at everything! She gripped her fingers around one of the lovely roses at her belt and crushed it to a pulp. Then she ripped them from her gown—his roses—and threw them among the blazing logs in the fireplace.

ROLL-TOP DESK IS BARRED

In the Interest of Efficiency Eastern Railroad Equips Its Offices With Modern Furnishings.

This is an age of efficiency, and in the successful stores, offices, and corporations one sees many things that make for more efficient work on the part of every one from the big boss down to the janitor.

Nowhere perhaps is efficiency more rigidly demanded than on most of the railroads. An order just issued by an Eastern railroad is illustrative of the point. This order forbids the use of roll-top desks by any of the employees—all offices from the president's down and all those along the system have been equipped with flat-top desks.

This is so the men will not cram pigeonholes full of papers and pile work and papers on their desks, close them up and go home. The man with a flat-top desk will clear it off before leaving, in fact it's mandatory in this case, and he steps up to his desk the next morning, not having to fuss and fume over a pile of unsorted papers, but ready to dig right in on the day's job. There's nothing left undone from yesterday.

Old Cal's Explanation.

"The late Shelby Cullom," said a Springfield veteran, "was a bad man to argue with."

"I argued with him once on war. He accused me of being weak-kneed in my principles." He said I reminded him of old Cal Clay.

"He saw Cal rolling along home one evening, he explained, full of apple-jack, and so he said to him: 'Why, Cal, you told me once that you were a teetotaler.' 'So Ah is, Mars Shelby,' said old Cal, 'so Ah is; only, sah, Ah hain't bigoted.'"

Leaders Laid the Foundation.

In manual toil, in commerce, in education and in public service, at home, at the council board, in the church, there is not a bit of routine you can put your hand to, but the saints and heroes were at the beginning of it. "Princes dug this well, yea, the nobles of the people hollowed it out with their scepters and with their staves,"—George Adam Smith.

Big Ones for Little Ones.

Years ago, in north Missouri, there lived a certain backwoods farmer who had a singular faculty for overlooking the most obvious things. Once he swam his horse across a river and stopped at a house near by to borrow a bucket.

"I want to water my horse down here at the river," he explained.

On another occasion he approached a neighbor and surprised him with the offer of a trade.

"I'd like to swap my three big pigs," he said, "for three little pigs."

"What's that?" demanded the astonished neighbor.

"Well, you see," answered the other, "my pigs have got too big for their pen."—Youth's Companion.

Taking a Run in the Country

It is plain to be seen that many of the farmers hereabouts could use some Lumber to good advantage. Some need a new barn—others a corn crib or granary—while many other buildings can stand some needed repairs.

How is it with you, Mr. Reader—anything lacking about your place? If so, better let us fit you out with what Lumber you need—AT ONCE. We have lots of good common lumber that is just the thing for building sheds, barns or granaries, and if you can use some, here's your chance to get it at right prices.

Of course we have the better grades of Lumber too, if you want any, as well as everything else in the Building Material.
