Working Together This Year

Republicans of Livingston Co and of Entire State are Forgetting Divisions and Putting Aside Personal Opposition.

Those who are greatly interested in our home community and in our county have always urged united action when matters of larger concern were at stake. "Let us forget our differences and act together for the good of the community and the country," they have urged. This advice has been good and we have been best favored when it was most adopted. Just now this appeal most aptly applies to the Republicans of this county. This is the time for them to put aside whatever difference may have existed in the past and to act together for the wellbeing of their party in county and in state. Throughout Michigan there is more unity of purpose, more forgetting of past divisions and more putting aside of opposition to individual candidates than for many years. This is a year when Republican victories will mean better conditions in every way. The candidates of our party are worthy of your support. They were selected by vote of the people and by unanimous action of the Republican State Convention. You will not only be doing a service to your party but to your state and country as well, through assisting in their election this fall.

BRING US YOUR PRESCRIPTION

Too many people "put off" too long sending for the doctor and coming to the drug store. Science has revealed that most diseases arise from infectious germs which multiply with tremendous rapidity unless they are speedily checked in their development.

We would rather sell toilet articles and the thousand and one other things we carry to well folks than medicines to sick folks, yet we feel it our DUTY to warn you against putting off seeing the doctor or coming to the drug store.

We give you what you ASK for

Ghent Once More in Hands of Germans After Desperate Fight

London.—The Chronicle's correspondent, Martin Donohue, under date "In Belgium, Monday night," says: "Ghent is once more under German occupation. On Saturday and Sunday a heroic effort was made to save the city from the consequences of a fresh German visitation. The fight around Melle on Saturday turned to the advantage of the defenders, as did that on Sunday. The combatants were within 100 yards of one another's positions. Hundreds of wounded were lying unaided and uncared for in the immediate front of the two opposing armies. The Germans' rifle fire during the night had been continuous. They fired on every one approaching their lines, and did not discriminate between combatants and noncombatants.

Retreat Decided On. "It was a critical moment. There was not much time for reflection, and after a careful review of the situation a general retreat was decided upon. The Germans appeared to be in great strength, but the defending force was holding on undiminished by the fury of the German infantry assaults, supported by heavy artillery.

"There were no trains from Ghent towards the coast towns, but vehicles of every description, from dogcarts to ramshackle horse wagons, were requisitioned, and the inhabitants of Ghent fled with some show of confusion from the enemy approaching their gates. By midnight the last citizen who could scrape together money to hire a vehicle of any kind, the last soldier, and a large proportion of the wounded had quitted the city, taking the road to Bruges and Ostend.

"The streets of the city were silent and deserted, and the Hotel de Poete, which had been used as a residence by the headquarters staff and the correspondents, was practically empty.

Red Cross Nurses Brave. "There are 12 wounded in the hotel attended by two nurses of the Belgian Red Cross society, who bravely refused to quit their charges, even when the doctors and stretcher bearers abandoned their posts and vanished from Ghent. The wounded were in a feverish state of excitement. Somehow, the news of the evacuation reached their ears, and they implored the nurses to have them transported elsewhere, for not one of them retained the idea of falling wounded into the hands of the Germans.

"It was in vain we sought aid from the city authorities, who were more or less distracted at the prospect of a fresh German incursion. They frankly said they had no aid to give and no doubt they were right.

Fears for Brother. "At 6 a. m. the wounded were still in the hotel, fretting at the long delay. No vehicle, not even a dog cart, was obtainable, and Germans might appear at any moment.

"One of the nurses, Mlle. Baerde-maker, whose brother was severely wounded and was lying in the hotel, had bravely faced the ordeal of the long night vigil, but now she began to show some signs of the emotion that was racking her sisterly heart.

"When things looked the blackest, Mr. Van Hee, the American vice-consul, brought his automobile to the hotel door. He was on his way to Brussels, and had called for a friend who was to accompany him.

"Mr. Van Hee is a big-hearted, sympathetic American, and when he heard of the plight of the wounded, his eyes filled with tears.

"Both Brussels and official missions," he said, "I will never leave these poor boys to be taken prisoners by the Germans."

"He was as good as his word. In a few minutes the wounded had been brought down and the consular car made several trips to the railway station. Every man was taken away from the hotel and placed on board a military train which was in readiness to leave for Ostend.

Saves More Wounded. "Afterwards Mr. Van Hee took his automobile to the military hospital and carried off six wounded soldiers whose wounds precluded them from walking. They had been carried on stretchers.

"Many of the wounded left behind in the military hospital who were able to walk had earlier in the morning made a brave attempt to save themselves.

"Some hobbled forth painfully, supporting tottering limbs with the aid of improvised crutches. Others were helped along by the kindly arm of a lad or a woman who had come forward in answer to the appeal for aid. It was a walk of over half a mile on a paved road from the hospital to the railway station.

"One train filled with wounded did get away from the city before the entry of the Germans, but a second, also loaded with brave fellows who had bled for their country, was left behind and abandoned to the enemy. "There were no doctors, and but few nurses to assuage the pain of the wounded, and, to add to the horror of it all, there was the unsympathetic foe to gloat over their misery and helplessness."

RELATES HORRORS OF SHELLING OF ANTWERP

London.—Henry Diederich, the United States consul at Antwerp, escaped with his family from that city by motor car. This is his account of the bombardment as told to the Daily Chronicle correspondent:

"For days we heard the sound of heavy gunfire and were told of the fall, one after another, of the outer forts. It soon became apparent that nothing could avail against the great German cannon, and in conjunction with other neutrals we endeavored to mediate with the Germans, to spare, at any rate, some of the most valuable buildings of world-wide interest. But the negotiations failed to lead to a successful result.

"I had intended to remain in Antwerp throughout the bombardment, which we saw was now inevitable, but I was told to clear out of the city, as its destruction was inevitable.

"I did not realize until almost too late the horror which was coming. At 11 o'clock at night we were going to bed, when we were roused by frightful noises in the air, reminding us of previous visits of a Zeppelin.

"Soon we realized that the bombardment had begun, and then I had the most horrible experience of my life. "I went with my family to the basement and we crouched there all night. The shells, falling every few minutes, came with a dreadful whistling sound, followed by a thunder clap of explosion and collapse of buildings.

"Opposite the consulate is the Home for Old Folks. Its front was torn out by a shell. Some of the debris was scattered over my house, and then a shell came over us, and fell on a two-story building, crumpling it up entirely and setting it on fire.

After this another shell blew out the facade of a house lower down on our street. As the dawn came we were wearied out and the members of my family collapsed utterly from fright and the strain.

"So we decided to endeavor to leave the city. I succeeded in communicating with my chauffeur and got my car, but I did not know where to go, being left with nothing but what we had on and exposed every moment to exploding shells.

"With my wife and daughter and two servants and a refugee's child I crossed the pontoon bridge over the Scheldt. It took us four hours to do this, the streets being filled with every kind of vehicle and a dense crowd of fugitives. The scene was indescribably dreadful, everybody being moved by the same desire to get away from the awful horror.

"From Antwerp to Ghent the roads are a mass of fleeing humanity. As we left we saw vast volumes of smoke arising from Antwerp from the burning buildings and blazing petroleum tanks. Instead of two hours to Ghent it took us three, owing to the traffic. One of the German big guns situated near Vilvorde and a large number of comparatively smaller guns have joined in the bombardment."

Big Guns Not Used on City. Paris.—The German commander at Antwerp says the famous 16 1/2-inch guns were not used on the town itself. They would have been used, however, had the surrender not occurred when it did. The commandant is sending word to Belgian fugitives in Holland to return as soon as possible. He said the German losses are trifling. He insisted that several thousand English, French and Belgians who have been captured were glad to fall into German hands.

A Dutch reporter escorted by the commandant went through the streets, but saw no sign of Belgian life except a few straying dogs. German soldiers were walking about asking their way. The town is little damaged.

Jews Fight in German Army. Rome.—Heretofore, although there is no law prohibiting Jews from entering, no Israelite officer existed in the German army. Since this war began, according to news received here, more than one hundred and fifty Jewish officers have been joined to the German army.

Costs Britain $35 a Second. London.—"This war is costing the country $11 ($35) a second day and night," said Sidney Webb, well known as a political economist, in a lecture at the School of Economics and Political Science, of which he was the principal founder.

PARIS CLAIMS TO HAVE CAPTURED ARMENTIERES

War Office Reports Progress Of Left Wing in France

RIOTING IN LONDON AND GERMAN SHOPS WRECKED

Both London and Paris Give Out News Claiming That Germans Are Being Forced Back By Allied Armies.

Paris.—The Allies have recaptured Armentieres, driving the Germans northeastward from three to five miles, according to official reports here and the army of Belgium, now the extreme left of the allied line, is standing at Neuport, holding in check a powerful German advance toward Dunkirk.

The Belgians, severely punished, but always in the thick of the fighting, prevented the Germans from crossing the River Yser. The Germans are in great force, 400 guns, 40,000 infantry and some cavalry having been rushed from Ostend to the Yser on Saturday. These troops had been drawn from all quarters, from Lunenburg, Nancy and Brussels, and were weary from incessant marching and fighting.

While King Albert's army, with support from a new British army and from French marines and detachments from General Joffre's line in France, checked the German advance along the seacoast, the left wing of the Allies in northern France made notable progress, delivering a series of blows against von Boehm and von Kluck which forced the Germans to surrender Armentieres and villages to the south. General Joffre, according to official reports, has driven the German right wing about 19 miles to the north-east in the last four days.

Severe Fighting at Belfort.

Fighting has been renewed at Belfort, where the Germans once again are assailing the fortification with mortars and two violent night attacks by the Germans to the north and again to the east of St. Gie were repulsed by the French with severe losses to the enemy.

Not only have the French been able to hold the advantage gained in their advance against the outer works of Metz, but they have now pushed forward their advanced positions to within nine miles of the fortress. Heavy reinforcements are being rushed to their aid to meet the increased strength being thrown behind the German line in this action.

The most gigantic engagement of the war is now being fought just across the border in western Belgium, but it is ignored in the official dispatches because of the lack of progress to report. The fighting is as yet in the preliminary stages, for the numbers actually engaged are too great and the weight of the support both in big guns and the enormous strength in men available is so evenly divided that the greatest deliberation is being exercised by the rival commanders.

Reports From London.

London.—The announcement was made in a official report from the headquarters of Gen. Sir John French that during the 26 days from Sept. 12 to Oct. 3, the British lost 12,541 killed, wounded and missing. Of these 561 were officers, indicating the heroic gallantry with which the English leaders of the line had been fighting. According to these figures, one officer fell or was taken in the fighting to every 22 men.

During the 25 days preceding Sept. 17, Gen. French's troops, operating from Mons to the Seine and from the Seine to the Aisne, fought, without a single day's halt or rest and were ceaselessly engaged with the enemy.

Rioting Sunday marked the climax of the agitation to bar nationals of hostile countries from further participation in the business life of the city. Clashes occurred in several localities. There were particularly violent in High Street, Deptford, in the borough of London. Here a number of German-owned shops were wrecked and one was set afire by the mob. The police had difficulty in coping with the aroused populace.

Sunday's excitement was attributed to the prominence given Saturday's raid on the residence of Prof. Arthur Schuster, near Kewington, in Berkshire, which a wireless apparatus, evidently powerful to intercept messages from Berlin and the Kaiser tower, was equipped.

A NURSE TAKES DOCTOR'S ADVICE

And is Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Euphemia, Ohio.—"Because of total ignorance of how to care for myself when verging into womanhood, and from taking cold when going to school, I suffered from a displacement, and each month I had severe pains and nausea which always meant a lay-off from work for two to four days from the time I was 18 years old.

"I went to Kansas to live with my sister and while there a doctor told me of the Pinkham remedies but I did not use them then as my faith in patent medicines was limited. After my sister died I came home to Ohio to live and that has been my home for the last 18 years.

"The Change of Life came when I was 47 years old and about this time I saw my physical condition plainly described in one of your advertisements. Then I began using Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I cannot tell you or any one the relief it gave me in the first three months. It put me right where I need not lay off every month and during the last 18 years I have not paid out two dollars to a doctor, and have been blessed with excellent health for a woman of my age and I can thank Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for it.

"Since the Change of Life is over I have been a maternity nurse and being wholly self-supporting I cannot over estimate the value of good health. I have now earned a comfortable little home just by sewing and nursing. I have recommended the Compound to many with good results, as it is excellent to take before and after childbirth."—Miss EVELYN ADAMIA STRAWART, Euphemia, Ohio.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

Specified. "Did this speculator plunge in media res?" "No, sir; he plunged in cotton."

HEAD IN WATERY PIMPLES

R. R. No. 1, Kyle, Ohio.—"My baby's head when about a year old began to break out with small watery pimples causing her head to itch. She would scratch her head till the blood came causing the top of her head to be in almost a solid eruption. The pimples at first were nearly as large as a pea and in patches which would inflame and fester and when they would come open would leave a kind of wet scales there for a few days. Then when it dried up it would leave scales on her head that caused her hair to fall out just in great bunches. "One day I happened to see Cuticura Soap and also Cuticura Ointment advertised in a paper and I ordered a sample of each. They seemed to help her head so much that I purchased a cake of Cuticura Soap and a box of Cuticura Ointment and in two weeks' time her head was sound and well. Her hair had stopped falling out and was also free from dandruff." (Signed) Mrs. J. L. West, Feb. 20, '14. Cuticura Soap and Ointment sold throughout the world. Sample of each free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. L, Boston."—Adv.

A Michigan Case

Mrs. G. W. Burpee, 402 Shawanaw Ave., Corunna, Mich. "I suffered almost constantly from pains throughout the small of my back and sometimes across my loins. I was hardly able to get out of a chair and when I stood I could hardly stay upright. I tried many things, but nothing helped me. I had heard of Doan's Kidney Pills and bought a box. The first box was brought to my notice and I tried them. The medicine disappeared together with the other troubles and I am now in good health."

According to the Bureau of Crop Estimates of the United States Department of Agriculture, the yield per colony of bees was 37 pounds. In 1913 the production per hive was 50 pounds. The decrease is said to be due to the shortage of the wild flower crop this season. The latest census figures of the bee and honey industry of this State relate to 1910. That year there were 16,892 farms in Michigan that kept bees and the total number of colonies was 115,274.

Ernest Krause

Democratic Candidate

For Sheriff

Respectfully solicit your support

Ernest Krause, the democratic nominee for the office of sheriff, was born in the township of Marion, 1867, where he spent his early life on the farm and attended district school. About thirty years ago he went to Fowlerville. Twenty-seven years ago he was married and engaged in the stock and meat business, working for W. A. Benjamin. His attention to business is shown by the fact that he lost only one day in eight years. After leaving Mr. Benjamin's employ he conducted the meat business for himself for about twenty years. During the past year he has lived in the village of Howell, where his pleasing personality has won for him a host of friends.

Mr. Krause is a man of good habits, strong and healthy, and if elected will make a competent and efficient sheriff. He can be depended upon to perform his duties, in enforcing the law and giving everyone a fair deal. He will have the judgement and discretion required in finding out the guilty and protecting the innocent. Since Mr. Krause's name has been mentioned for this office his acquaintances have been very enthusiastic about his election, for they say, that his fair and honest dealings and close attention to business, make a record, that he will be prompt in performing the duties of a sheriff and at the same time, careful and economical in the expenses of the office. As his record becomes known throughout the county, his chances for election increase accordingly.

Two years ago he made a sacrifice run against a man who was seeking his second term, that it might put him in line for the coming election, as the present occupant of that office only asked for support for two terms, and is now asking for a third.
Therefore he feels justified in appealing to all parties for their support at the coming election, and if elected will endeavor to perform the duties of the office in such a manner that you will be pleased with the support given him.

Ruth Johnson Lemen
Democratic Candidate For County School Commissioner

Not too much can be said in praise of Ruth Johnson Lemen, Democratic Candidate for County Commissioner of Schools. She has always put herself, soul and body into all her work, never shirking any duty, even though it might have been disagreeable. She will not be entirely new at the commissioner's work, should she succeed in winning the office which she is seeking, for she has already had two years experience in training teachers for rural schools in the County Normal at New London, Wisconsin. Altogether she has had nine years of experience in teaching. Besides the two years at New London, she filled successfully the position as principal of the West Ward School at Howell and at present is teaching in the Howell schools as an instructor in departmental work.
Mrs. Lemen is a graduate of the Howell Public Schools and also possesses a life certificate from the Normal at Ypsilanti. As the daughter of E. K. Johnson, druggist, at Howell she has always been taught to take interest in the advancement of the school system, her father being very much interested in all work pertaining to education. Mrs. Lemen will undoubtedly perform as satisfactorily the duties of the office to which she seeks election, as she has fulfilled all other positions which she has held.

OLD LADY NUMBER 31

By LOUISE FORSSLUND
AUTHOR OF "THE STORY OF SARAH," "THE SHIP OF DREAMS," ETC. COPYRIGHT BY THE CENTURY CO.

SYNOPSIS.

Captain Abraham Rose and Angelina, his wife, have lost their little home through Abe's unlucky purchase of Texas Gold mining stock. Their household goods sold, the $100 auction money, all they have left, will place Abe in the Old Man's home, or Any in the Old Lady's home. Both are self-sacrificing but Abe decides: "My dear, this is the first time I've had a chance to take the wust of it." The old couple bid good-bye to the little house. Terror of what folks will say sends them away by paths to the gate of the Old Ladies' home. Miss Abigail, matron of the Old Ladies' home, hears of the ill fortune of the old couple. She tells the other old ladies, and Blossy, who has paid a double fee for the only double bed chamber, voices the unanimous verdict that Abe must be taken in with his wife. Abe awakens next morning to find that he is "Old Lady No. 31." The old ladies give him such a warm welcome that he is made to feel at home at once. "Brother Abe" expands under the warm reception of the sisters, and a reign of peace begins in the Old Ladies' home. Abe is the center of the community. The semi-annual visit of Blossy's aged lover, Capt. Samuel Darby, is due. Abe advises her to marry him. For the first time the captain fails to appear. Blossy consults Abe so often regarding Darby, his old captain in the life-saving service, that the gossip begins to buzz. Aunt Nancy takes Abe to task for flirting with Blossy. He is much concerned when he learns that Any is jealous. Blossy drives away with Darby to be married, he loses popularity. The change reacts on him and the doctor orders him to bed. Then he is at the mercy of the old ladies. Darby comes to see him.

Abraham flushed. He did not care to recall Samuel's wedding day. He hastened to ask the other what had decided him and Blossy to come today, and was informed that Miss Abigail had written to tell Blossy that if she ever expected to see her "Brother Abe" alive again she must come over to Shoreville at the earliest possible moment.

"Then I says ter Blossy," concluded Captain Darby, "I says, says I, 'Jest lemme see that air old henpecked Abe Rose. I'll kill him or cure him!' I says. Here, yer pipe's out. Light up ag'in!"

Abe struck the match with a trembling hand, unnerved once more by the speculation as to what might have happened had Samuel's treatment worked the other way.

"I left Blossy and Aunt Nancy a-huggin' an' a-kissin' down stairs." Abe sighed: "Aunt Nancy others was more bark than bite."

"Humph! Barkin' cats must be tryin' ter live with. Abe," he tapped the old man's knee again, "dew yew know what yew need? A little rascation, a change of air. Yew want ter get loose from this all-fired old ladies' shebang an' go skyarkin'." Abe hung on Samuel's words, his eyes a-twinkle with anticipation. "Yes,—yes, go skyarkin'! Won't we make things hum?"

"That's hummin' an' hummin'," objected Abe, with a sudden show of caution. "Miss Abigail thinks more o' washday than some folks does o' heaven. Wharabouts dew yew cak'late on a goin'?"

"Tew Bleak Hill!" Abraham's face lost its cautious look, his eyes sparkled once more. Go back to the life-saving station where he had worked in his lusty youth—back to the sound of the surf upon the shore, back to the pines and cedars of the beach, out of the bondage of dry old lavender to the goodly fragrance of balsam and sea salt! Back to active life among men!

"Men, men, nawthin' but men!" Samuel exploded as if he had read the other's thought. "Nawthin' but men for a hull week, that's my prescription fer yew! Haow dew yew feel now, mata?"

For answer Abe made a quick spring out of his chair, and in his bare feet commenced to dance a gentle, rheumatic-toe-considering breakdown, crying, "Hy-guy, Cap'n Sam'l, yew've saved my life!" While Darby clapped his hands together, proud beyond measure at his success as the emancipator of his woman-ridden friend.

Neither he nor the door open nor saw Any standing on the threshold, half paralyzed with fear and amazement, thinking that she was witnessing the mad delirium of a dying man, until she called out her husband's name. At the sound of her frightened voice, Abe stopped short and reached for the blanket with which to cover himself.

"Naow don't git skeered, mother, don't git skeered," he advised her. "I'm all right in my head. Cap'n Sam'l here, he brings me some wondrous medicine. He—"

"Blossy said you did!" interrupted Any, a light of intense gratitude flashing across her face as she turned eagerly to Darby. "Lemme see the bottle."

"I checked it out o' the window," affirmed Samuel without winking, and Abe hastened to draw Any's attention back to himself.

"See, mother, I kin stand so good as anybody; hain't got no fever; I kin walk alone. Yew seen me dancin' jest naow, tew. An' ef I had that pesky leetle banty rooster of a doctor here, I'd kick him all the way deown stairs. Cap'n Sam'l's with twenty-five o' him."

"Yew kept the prescription, didn't yer, cap'n?" demanded Any. "Naow ef he should be took ag'in an'—"

Samuel turned away and coughed. "Mother, mother," cried Abe, "shet the door an' come set deown or all the sisters'll come a-pliin' in. I've had a invite, I have."

Any closed the door and came forward, her wary suspicious eye trailing from the visitor to her husband.

"Hy-guy, ain't it splendid!" Abe burst forth. "Ef an' Cap'n Sam'l here is a goin' over ter Bleak Hill for a week."

"Bleak Hill in December!" Any cried, aghast. "Naow, see here, fa-

"Nawthin' but Men for a Hull Week, That's My Prescription!"

ther," resolutely, "medicine er no medicine—"

"He's got ter git hardened up," firmly interposed Doctor Darby; "it'll be the makin' o' him."

Any turned on Samuel with ruffled feathers.

"He'll freeze to death. Yew shan't—"

Here Abe's stubborn will, so rarely set against Any's gentle persistence, rose up in defiance.

"We're a-gwine on a reg'lar A. No. 1 spree with the boys, an' no women-folks is a goin' ter stop us neither."

"When?" asked Any faintly, feeling Abe's brow, but to her surprise finding it cool and healthy.

"Termorrer!" proclaimed Samuel; whereupon Abe looked a little dubious and lifted up his two feet, wrapped as they were in the blanket, to determine the present strength of his legs.

"Don't yer think yer'd better make it day after termorrer?" he ventured. "Or 'long erbout May er June?" Any hastily amended.

Samuel gave an exasperated grunt. "See here, whose spree is this?" Abe demanded of the little old wife. She sighed, then resolved on strategy:

"Naow, Abe, ef yew be bound an' possessed ter go ter the beach, yew go; but I'm a goin' visitin' tew, an' I couldn't git the pair o' us ready inside a week. I'm a goin' deown ter see Blossy. She ast me jist naow, pendin', she says, Cap'n Sam'l here cures Abe up enough ter git him off. I thought she was crazy then."

Samuel knocked the ashes out of his pipe against the window sill and arose to go.

"Waal," he said grudgingly, "make it a week from today then, rain or shine, snow or blow, or a blizzard. Ef yer ever a goin' ter git hardened, Abe, naow's the time! I'll drive over 'long erbout ten o'clock an' git somebody ter sail us from here; or ef the bay freezes over 'twixt snow an' then, ter take us in a scooter."

"A scooter," it may be explained, is an iceboat peculiar to the Great South Bay—a sort of modified sloop or rigger.

"Yes,—yes, a scooter," repeated Samuel, turning suddenly on Abe with the sharp inquiry: "Air yew a-shiverin'?" Hain't, eh? Waal then, a week from today, so be it!" he ended. "But me an' Blossy is a-comin' ter see yew, out an' on a pooty frequent meanest-while; an', Abe, ef ever I ketch yew

a-layn' abed, I'll leave yer ter yer own destruction."

CHAPTER XII.

"A Passel of Meddlers."

Any's secret hope that Abe would change his mind and abandon the projected trip to the beach remained unfulfilled, in spite of the fact that cold weather suddenly descended on the South side, and the bay became first "scummed" over with ice, and then frozen so solid that all its usual craft disappeared, and the "scoters" took possession of the field.

Abe and Samuel held stubbornly to their reckless intentions; and the sisters, sharing Any's anxiety, grew solicitous almost to the point of active interference. They withheld nothing in the way of counsel, criticism, or admonition which could be offered.

"Naow," said Mrs. Homan in her most commanding tones at the end of a final discussion in the big hall, on the evening before the date set for departure, "ef yew're bound, bent an' determined, Brother Abe, to run in the face of Providence, yew want tew mind one thing, an' yew wear yer best set of flannels termorrer."

"Sho, thar hain't no danger of me ketchin' cold," decried Abe.

"I didn't say yer thickest set of flannels; I said yer best. When a man gets throwed out onto the ice kersump, the thickness of his clo'es ain't goin' to help him much. The fust thing I allus taught my husbands was to have everything clean an' whole on, when thar was any likelihood of a sudden death."

"Yew 'spect me tew go an' prink up fer a sudden death?" thundered Abraham. "I hain't never heard tell on a scooter a-killin' nobody yit; it's them plagued iceboats up state what—"

"That's all very well," persisted Mrs. Homan, not to be diverted from her subject; "but when old Doctor Billings got run over by the train at Mastie Crossin' on Fourth o' July eight year ago, his wife told me with her own lips that she never would git over it, cus he had his hull big toe stickin' out o' the end of his stockin'. I tell yew, these days we've got tew prepare for a violent end."

The patient Any somewhat tartly retorted, that during the last week she had spent even more time upon father's wardrobe than she had upon her own; while Abe inwardly rejoiced to think that for seven days to come—seven whole days—he and Any would be free from the surveillance of the sisters.

Mrs. Homan, in no way nonplussed, boomed on:

"Thar, I most fergot about his necktie. 'Course, they don't dress up much at the station; but jest the same that air tie o' yourn, Brother Abe, is a disgrace. I told yew yew'd spill it a wearin' it tew bed. Naow, I got a red an' green plaid what belonged to my second steppon, Henry O. He never would 'a' died o' pneumonia, either, ef he'd a-took my advice an' made himself a newspaper night cap last time he substituted with the 'savers.' An yew kin have that necktie jest as well as not. Naow, don't say a word; I'm better able to part with it 'n yew be not to take it."

No one ever attempted the fruitless task of stopping Mrs. Homan once fully launched; but when at last she permitted her back to rest against her chair, folding her arms with the man-

FISH HOOK RECOVERS BODY

Passengers From Passing Train Drag River After Boy is Knocked Off Bridge.

Using the boy's own fishing rod in grappling for his body, passengers on a Susquehanna and Western train that had knocked Paul Columbe from a bridge near Babbitt, N. J., into the river, succeeded in hooking his coat and dragging the body to the surface. The lad, who lived at Twenty-third and Palisade avenue, West New York, was fishing on the edge of the railroad bridge with John Eichler, when the train due at Hackensack at 12:55 came along.

The Eichler boy just managed to escape injury, the pilot of the engine grazing his head. The Columbe boy was struck on the side of the head as he tried to swing away from the rail. Engineer Vrooman saw the boy fall into the river, stopped the train, and the passengers hurried to the scene. Several boys who were swimming near by dived time and again, but without success.

Then the passengers took turns with young Columbe's fishing rod, and finally of one who makes a sacrifice in a worthy cause, Abe broke into an explosive protest.

If any one fretted him in his somewhat fretful convalescence, it was this grenadier member of the household, who since Blossy's marriage had endeavored to fill the vacant post of "guardian angel."

"Mis' Holman," he sputtered, rising to his feet, "I wouldn't wear a red an' green plaid tie to a eel's funeral!" Then with a somewhat ungracious "good-night" to the company in general, he trudged across the hall and up the stairs, muttering something to himself about a "passel of meddlers."

Well-meaning Miss Abigail, who had been nodding half asleep, roused herself to call after him, and he paused unwillingly to heed.

"Naow, don't yew lose no sleep termorrer," she admonished, "a-worryin' erbout the change in yer rittles. I told Cap'n Sam'l that hardtack an' sech like wouldn't never do fer yer weak stummick, an' he promised me faithful he'd send somebody tew the mainland every day fer milk."

"Dew yew think I be a baby?" shouted Abraham, turning on his heel. "I know now what makes my teeth so sore lately," mumbling to himself; "it's from this here arser-root an' all these puddin' messes. They need hardenin', tew."

CHAPTER XIII.

The Prodigal's Departure.

Abraham was up betimes in the morning to greet a dry crisp and cold, quiet, yet with sufficient breeze stirring the evergreens in the yard outside to make him predict a speedy voyage.

The old man was nervous and excited, and, in spite of his buoyant anticipations, somewhat oppressed, now that the day had actually come, with a sense of timidity and fear. Still, he put on a bold face while Angelina fastened his refractory collar and tied his cravat.

This was neither Mrs. Homan's offering nor Abe's own old, frayed tie, but a new black one which had mysteriously been thrust through the crack under the door during the night.

So, the last finishing touches having been put upon his toilet, and Any having made ready by lamplight for her own trip, even before the old man was awake, there seemed nothing left to be done until the breakfast bell should ring.

Abe sat down, and looking hard at his open carpetbag wondered audibly if they had "everythin' in." The last time they two had packed Abe's wardrobe for a visit to Bleak Hill had been many years ago, when Samuel Darby, though somewhat Abe's junior, was keeper of the life-saving station, and Abe was to be gone for a whole season's duty. Then all of his possessions had been stowed in a long, boiler-like canvas bag for the short voyage.

Both Any and her husband recalled that time now—the occasion of their first, and almost of their last, real separation.

"A week'll pass in no time," murmured Any very quickly, with a catch in her voice. "Lookin' ahead, though, seven days seems awful long when yer old; but— Oh, law, yes; a week'll pass in no time," she repeated. "Only dew be keersful, Abe, an' don't take cold."

Department Store Manager Found No Difficulty in Placing Nice Looking but Stupid Girl

"I am afraid," said the assistant manager of the mammoth metropolitan department store, "the young woman who has just inquired for a job isn't up to our standard."

"I thought she seemed like a very nice-looking person," said the manager. "You know it pays to have good-looking people back of the counter. Have you ever considered that point?"

"Yes, I have. I agree with you. But she struck me as being extremely stupid. She certainly was not very well educated."

"Could she read and write?" "Barely."

"Did she have any knowledge of literature?" "Apparently none whatever."

The manager's face brightened up. "She's too nice looking a person to let go by. In that case, why don't you employ her as a saleswoman in our book department?"

Quite a Feast

"What's the matter with that fellow? Why the gyration?" "He's trying to flirt with two girls at once and they're going in opposite directions."

Much!

"Does a best seller have to be well written?" asked the Old Fogey. "No," replied the Grouch. "But it has to be well written up."

FOUND OUT.

A Trained Nurse Discovered Its Effect.

No one is in better position to know the value of food and drink than a trained nurse.

Speaking of coffee, a nurse in Pa. writes: "I used to drink strong coffee myself, and suffered greatly from headaches and indigestion."

"While on a visit to my brothers I had a good chance to try Postum, for they drank it altogether in place of coffee. After using Postum two weeks I found I was much benefited and finally my headaches disappeared and also the indigestion."

"Naturally I have since used Postum among my patients, and have noticed a marked benefit where coffee has been left off and Postum used."

"I observe a curious fact about Postum when used by mothers. It greatly helps the flow of milk in cases where coffee is inclined to dry it up, and where tea causes nervousness. "I find trouble in getting persons to make Postum properly. But when it is prepared according to directions on package and served hot with cream, it is certainly a delicious beverage."

Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkg.

Postum comes in two forms: Regular Postum—must be well boiled. 15c and 30c packages. Instant Postum—is a soluble powder. A teaspoonful dissolves quickly in a cup of hot water and, with cream and sugar, made a delicious beverage instantly. 30c and 50c tins.

The cost per cup of both kinds is about the same.

WILL STRIKE 100,000 MICHIGAN HOMES

ARE YOU AWARE, that if the proposed Amendment to the Constitution of the State of Michigan, to be known as Section 10, and to be voted upon on Election Day, November 3, 1914, is adopted, its provisions will strike One Hundred Thousand Michigan homes, and affect the interests of Three Hundred Fifty Thousand Michigan citizens, who are carrying Fraternal protection? The Insurance Department supervises all Insurance Companies, and seeks to keep fraudulent companies out of this State. Let us look to the Department for information in this crisis.

If the Fraternal System is to be preserved, THE AMENDMENT MUST BE DEFEATED. Do your part, Brother, at the Polls, Tuesday, Nov. 3.

If the same should be adopted, it would destroy to a large extent the value of Fraternal Beneficiary Societies." Frank Hasbrouck, Superintendent of Insurance, New York, says: "The adoption of the Amendment into the fundamental laws of Michigan, would, in my judgment, restrict the activities of Michigan Fraternal Orders to that State. It would destroy the feature which gives to a Fraternal Order its cohesive force, namely, the lodge system."
