A Golden Wedding

Fifty years ago Alice A. LaRue and Stephen G. Teeple were united in marriage and in commemoration of that event, they celebrated their golden wedding on the evening of April 10th at their home on Main street, Pinckney, Michigan. About fifty guests were present, including old friends and neighbors and several from out of town; among the latter were Mr. Teeple's sister, Mrs. Sarah Doty of Niagara Falls and Mr. and Mrs. Neynaber of Detroit. Yellow and white was the color scheme for the entire decorations; tulips, jonquils, smilax and white roses being used in profusion throughout the house. A delectable two-course luncheon was served after which a program of music, speeches and songs was delightfully rendered under the able supervision of G. W. Teeple as toastmaster.

Many beautiful gifts were left, proving the love and esteem in which the couple are held, and at a late hour the guests departed wishing Mr. and Mrs. Teeple many more happy anniversaries.

Play Well Staged

The Senior Class of the Pinckney High School produced their play "A Black Heifer" last Friday evening with great credit to themselves, after having overcome almost unsurmountable difficulties in the re-arrangement of the caste after unforeseen events had made that re-arrangement necessary.

Three characters were substituted in the caste and these persons, Duane Lavey, Herman Vedder and Gregory Devereaux learned their respective parts in less than two days time. The extra effort made necessary on the part of these young men was much appreciated by the class. The characters they impersonated were certainly well taken. The roles assumed by the rest of the caste were exceedingly good causing roar after roar of laughter from the comedy and real cringes from the tragedy parts of the drama.

Father Coyle staged the play. To him great praise is due as the real success of a play rests not alone with the actors but a great deal with the ability of the person who trains the caste.

Lillian Given's six-piece orchestra of Detroit rendered several fine musical selections between the acts of the play and also furnished the music for the dance following. Attendants at both the play and dance enjoyed an evening's entertainment which will not soon be forgotten.

A Saloonkeeper's Testimony

A former Red Wing (Minn.) saloonkeeper, Mr. Lohman, now engaged in the clothing business in McHenry, North Dakota, recently visited his old friends in Red Wing. While insisting that he still saw nothing wrong in having a glass of beer at home and disclaiming any pretensions to being a total abstainer, he gave some excellent testimony to the value of prohibition.

"One reason why we are not anxious to have a saloon in our town is that it would draw the kind of people from other places that we do not want; we like a good, clean town."

"It is said so often that prohibition does not prohibit, Mr. Lohman," remarked a reporter. "If a man goes to McHenry and wants a drink, can he get it?" "No, not for love nor money," replied Mr. Lohman with emphasis. "There is no liquor to be had in our town except for medical purposes." "Then a crowd of young men cannot start out and have a gloriously good time in McHenry?" "I should say they cannot," replied Mr. Lohman, "because there is no place where they can get the liquor. There has been no bootlegging during the last few years. The law is being enforced rigidly and there is no evidence anywhere of drunkenness." M. E. S.

NATIONAL GUARD PROUD OF REPORT

REPORT OF UNITED STATES ARMY OFFICERS IS ENCOURAGING.

PORT HURON COMPANY LEADS

Experts Declare That Personnel of Organization is Good and Equipment is Splendid.

Lansing—In spite of the rather unfavorable conditions that have prevailed for the recruiting of the National Guard, the report of the United States army shows that the guard of the Wolverine state has shown a most satisfactory increase numerically and marked improvement in efficiency. The report of the regular army on the Michigan National Guard is giving the officers of the organization much satisfaction.

In 1914 the total strength reported was 2,445. This year the total reached 2,835. There also is shown an increase in the attendance for inspection, the total for this year being 2,705 as against 2,399 for the year previous. Company C, 3rd Infantry, of Port Huron, was the banner company with sixty-nine men, all present for inspection. Co. F, 3rd Infantry, Saginaw, was next with sixty-six all of whom were present. Co. I, 3rd Infantry, Manistee was third with 67 men, one of whom was absent.

Among the other companies mentioned were B, 3rd Infantry, Bay City; D, 2nd Infantry, Big Rapids; I, 2nd Muskegon; and D, 1st Infantry of Detroit.

The 3rd regiment gets the banner mention for attendance. The 2nd Infantry was second among the regiments and the 1st was third.

These figures show the regiments of the Michigan National Guard are below the standard fixed by the war department, but it is believed, in view of the splendid increase shown that more time will be given to bring the organizations up to their full quota. General Kirk has pointed out, however, that the communities where companies are located must give attention to the support of the organizations if they desire to keep the organizations.

The report of the regular army inspecting officers shows the personnel of the organizations is good and the equipment in splendid condition. The campaign to interest employers has resulted in 350 pledging themselves to the support of the guard by encouraging men to join and freely giving leave of absence for guard service.

P. M. GETS MAJ. VANDERCOOK

Popular National Guard Officer to Be Personal Agent of Receiver.

Lansing—Major Roy C. Vandercook, commander of the national guard artillery battalion and well known as a newspaper man, resigned as adjutant-general of the state to enter the service of the Pere Marquette railroad, effective April 12.

Mr. Vandercook will serve as a sort of better service agent with the aim of creating a closer and more advantageous relation between the carrier and the public. He will act as Receiver Paul H. King's personal agent in investigating complaints and discussing service and proposed changes.

Major Vandercook has served the state as adjutant-general nearly four years. For several years he was a newspaper writer in Lansing. He is known as a keen student of governmental affairs and is a veteran of the Spanish-American war.

TWO BOYS ARE DROWNED

Boat Rocking at Carsonville Results in Double Fatality.

Port Huron—Earl Corsant, 17 years old, and Robert Owens, 14 years old, were drowned when their boat filled with water and sank in 30 feet of water near the Peck dam, two and one-half miles south of Carsonville, Thursday afternoon. Robert Dean, a third member of the party, managed to swim to shore. Two other boys, Geo. Schrapnell and Sam Bettis, refused to accompany their companions.

Dean, the only one who escaped, says that Corsant began rocking the boat to frighten the others while they were out in mid-stream.

Corsant's parents were visiting in Detroit at the time of the accident.

ITEMS OF STATE INTEREST

Mrs. Joanna Schutte, 73 years old, a pioneer of Westford county, was burned to death at her home in Colfax township. Her dead body was discovered by her husband near an open window.

NATIVE ATTEMPTS LIFE OF EGYPTIAN SULTAN

HUSSEIN KEMAL.

GERMANS TO PAY FOR FRYE

American Vessel Sung by Cruiser on High Seas Is Case for Prize Court.

Washington—Germany's intention to compensate the owners of the American ship William P. Frye, sunk on the high seas with her cargo of wheat by the commerce raider Prinz Eitel Friedrich, has been formally communicated to the United States government.

Ambassador Gerard cabled a note handed him by the Berlin foreign office in reply to the recent American communication submitting a claim for an indemnity of $228,059.54 on behalf of the Frye's owners. The foreign office upholds without qualification the legality under international law of the raider's action in sinking the Frye, and bases the liability of the German government to pay indemnity solely upon the old Prussian-American treaties of 1799 and 1828, which provide that contraband belonging to the subjects or citizens of either party cannot be confiscated by the other and may be detained or used only in consideration of payment of the full value.

In view of this stipulation, the note says, of course, the American owners must be compensated for their loss. It is pointed out, however, that the case of necessity must go into a prize court, that questions of ownership, cargo, destination, etc., may be formally established.

Interurban Jitneys Are Started.

Charlotte—The "jitney" business is spreading in this section. This city has two jitneys in operation and others in prospect. A two-trip-a-day service between Hastings and Battle Creek, touching the towns along the southwestern part of Eaton county, is already in operation and this week A. D. Jones, a Pottersville garage man, started making regular trips between Pottersville and Charlotte on three days a week. This trip will connect with the morning and evening trains and really affords Pottersville people unusual service.

Member of Health Board Dead.

Lansing—Thomas A. Koon of Grand Rapids, member of state board of health, died Saturday at the home of a brother in Minneapolis, according to a telegram received here. Mr. Koon had been ill the past year and recently went to Minneapolis to visit his brother.

He was appointed member of the state board in 1911 by Gov. Osborn. His term expires January 31, 1917.

Mr. Koon's death will necessitate an appointment by Governor Ferris to fill the vacancy.

Two were let off with fines of $50 each, and one released on probation.

ANOTHER RAIDER AT NEWPORT NEWS

KRONPRINZ WILHELM FOLLOWS IN WAKE OF EITEL FRIEDRICH.

HAS SUNK FOURTEEN SHIPS

German Converted Cruiser After Thrilling Experiences Slips Past Hostile Fleet into American Port Sunday.

Newport News, Va.—The German converted cruiser Kronprinz Wilhelm follows the elusive raider of commerce in the South Atlantic, slipped into this port Sunday and asked for fuel and provisions.

Many times reported destroyed, the former North German Lloyd liner had evaded hostile warships for eight months, while she sent 14 merchantmen to the bottom. Her officers said she was forced to steal her way past four allied cruisers off the Virginia Capes to reach this refuge.

"We got in without being seen by the enemy and we can get out the same way," declared her commander, Lieutenant Captain Paul Thierfelder, formerly navigating officer of the German cruiser Karlsruhe, in a statement Sunday.

When she dropped anchor, the Kronprinz Wilhelm had less than 25 tons of coal and scanty provisions for the crew of 500 men and 61 prisoners from British merchant ships sunk in the south Atlantic.

Of the 14 ships that the 15,000 ton cruiser sank, nine were British, four French and one Norwegian. The value of these ships and their cargoes, officers of the Wilhelm estimated at $7,000,000.

When the Wilhelm arrived off Thimble shoals, after passing in the Virginia capes early Sunday, two United States submarines, the G-1 and D-2 met her. The appearance of the submarines created considerable surprise among the crew, but there was no demonstration as the little vessels convoyed the German raider to quarantine, where Dr. Maccafferty, United States quarantine officer, boarded her. Commander Thierfelder reported 66 of the crew and prisoners were ill with beri-beri and requested that they be taken to a hospital.

The Wilhelm followed in the wake of the interned Prinz Eitel Friedrich, which arrived here a month ago, after thrilling and effective operations for the German arms.

RELIEF SHIP SUNK

Steamer Harpalycce Bearing New York Offering Lost in North Sea.

Rotterdam—The British steamer Harpalycce, the first relief boat of New York state and under charter to the commission for relief in Belgium, has either been torpedoed or sunk by a mine in the North sea.

The Dutch steamer Constance Catherine, picked up five men and took them to Nieuwe Waterweg. The steamer carried a crew of 53 men, 26 of whom, it is feared, have been drowned.

RAIL ROUTE IS SELECTED

Government Road in Alaska Will Follow the Seward-Fairbanks Route.

Washington—The Seward-Fairbanks route has been selected for the government railway in Alaska, Secretary Lane announced late Saturday. The property of the Alaska Northern Railway company from Seward over the first stage of the journey has been purchased for $1,150,000.

The government system, the statement adds, will include a 38-mile branch to tap the Matanuska coal fields. W. C. Edes is designated as chairman of the Alaskan engineering commission which will build the road by the president's order. The estimated cost of the entire system is given at $26,800,000. Congress provided not to exceed $35,000,000.

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRE

Washington—Count von Bernstorff, German ambassador, has thanked the American government for the "square deal" shown to the converted cruiser Prinz Eitel Friedrich, now interned at the Norfolk Navy yard, and for the courtesy extended to Captain Thierfelder and the crew of the vessel.

He was pointing again, but in a very different direction now. As her anxious eye sought the place he indicated, her face flushed crimson with evanescent joy. Just where the open ground of the gully melted again into the forest, the figure of a man could be seen moving very quickly. In another moment it had disappeared amid the foliage.

"Straight for the station," announced Mr. Sloan; and, taking out his watch, added quickly; "the train is not due for 15 minutes. He'll catch it."

"The train south?"
"Yes, and the train north. They pass here."

Mr. Black turned a startled eye upon the guide. But Reuther's face was still alight. She felt very happy. Their journey had not been for naught. He would have six hours' start of his pursuers; he would be that much sooner in Shelby; he would hear the accusation against him and refute it before she saw him again.

But Mr. Black's thoughts were less pleasing than hers. He had never had more than a passing hope of Oliver's innocence, and now he had none at all. The young man had fled, not in response to his father's telegram, but under the impulse of his own fears. They would not find him in Shelby when they returned. They might never find him anywhere again. A pretty story to carry back to the judge.

As he dwelt upon this thought his reflections grew more and more gloomy, and he had little to say till he reached the turn where the two men still awaited them.

In the encounter which followed no attempt was made by either party to disguise the nature of the business which thus had brought them together. The man whom Mr. Black took to be a Shelby detective nodded as they met and remarked, with a quick glance at Reuther:

"So you've come without him! I'm sorry for that. I was in hopes that I might be spared the long ride up the mountain."

Mr. Black limited his answer to one of his sour smiles.

"Whose horse is this?" came in peremptory demand from the other man, with a nod toward the animal which could now be seen idly grazing by the wayside. "And how came it on the road alone?"

"We can only give you these facts," rejoined the lawyer. "It came from Tempest lodge. It started out ahead of us with the gentleman we had gone to visit on its back. We did not pass the gentleman on the road, and if he has not passed you he must have left the road somewhere on foot. He did not go back to the lodge."

"Mr. Black—"
"I am telling you the absolute truth. Make what you will of it. His father desires him home, and sent a message. This message this young lady undertook to deliver, and she did deliver it, with the consequences I have mentioned. If you doubt me take your ride. It is not an easy one, and the only man remaining at the lodge is deaf as a post."

"Mr. Black has told the whole story," averred the guide.

"I have nothing to add," said she. "I have been terrified lest the gentleman you wish to see was thrown from the horse's back over the precipice. But perhaps he found some way of getting down on foot. He is a very strong and daring man."

"The tree!" ejaculated the detective's companion. He was from a neighboring locality and remembered this one natural ladder up the side of the gully.

"Yes, the tree," acknowledged Mr. Sloan. "That, or a fall. Let us hope it was not a fall."

As he ceased a long screech from an approaching locomotive woke up the echoes of the forest. It was answered by another from the opposite direction. Both trains were on time. The relief felt by Reuther could not be concealed. The detective noticed it.

"I'm waiting time here," said he. "Excuse me, Mr. Black, if I push on ahead of you. If we don't meet at the station, we shall meet in Shelby."

Mr. Black's mouth twisted grimly. He had no doubt of the latter fact.

Next minute they were all centering in the one direction, the detective very much in the advance.

"Let me go with you to the station," suggested Reuther, as Mr. Black said up his arms to lift her from her horse at the door of the hotel.

But his refusal was peremptory. "I'll be back in just five minutes," said he. And without waiting for a second pleading look, he lifted her gently off and carried her in.

When he returned, as he did in the time specified, he had but one word for her.

"Gone," said he.

"Thank God!" she murmured with a smile.

Not having a smile to add to hers, the lawyer withdrew.

Oliver was gone—but gone north.

CHAPTER XVII.

The Curtain Lifted.

It was dark when Mr. Black came into Shelby, and darker still when he rang the bell of Judge Ostrander's house. But it was not late, and his agitation had but few minutes in which to grow, before the gate swung wide and he felt her hand in his.

She was expecting him. There was no necessity for preliminaries, and he could ask at once for the judge and whether he was strong enough to bear disappointment.

Deborah's answer was disconcerting. "I've not seen him. He admits nobody. When I enter the library, he retreats to his bedroom. I have not even been allowed to hand him his letters. I put them on his tray when I carry in his meals."

"I am afraid he never will hear from Oliver. The boy gave us the slip in the most remarkable manner. I will tell you when we get inside."

When she had heard him through, she looked about the room they were in, with a lingering, abstracted gaze

He Was Pointing Again but in a Different Direction Now.

he hardly understood till he saw it fall with an indescribable aspect of sorrow upon a picture which had lately been found and rehung upon the wall. It was a portrait of Oliver's mother.

"I am disappointed," she murmured in bitter reflection to herself. "I did not expect Oliver to clear himself, but I did expect him to face his accusers if only for his father's sake. What am I to say now to the judge?"

"Nothing tonight. In the morning we will talk the whole subject over. I must first explain myself to Andrews, and, if possible, learn his intentions; then I shall know better what to advise."

"Did the officer you met on your return from Tempest lodge follow you to Shelby?"

"I have not seen him."

"That is bad. He followed Oliver."

"It was to be expected."

"Oliver is in Canada?"

"Undoubtedly."

"Which means—"

"Delay, then extradition. It's that fellow Finnegan who has brought this upon us. The wretch knows something which terrifies us to hope."

"Alas, yes." And a silence followed, during which each entire selfishness rested upon the issue that a similar thought runs in both minds. Could it be that under this same roof, and only separated from them by a partition, there brooded another human being helplessly awaiting a message which would never come, and listening, but how vainly, for the step and voice for which he hungered, though they were the prelude to further shame and the signal for coming punishment.

So strong was this thought in both their minds, that the shadow deepened upon both faces, as though a presence had passed between them; and when Mr. Black rose, as he very soon did, it was with an evident dread of leaving her alone with this thought.

They were lingering yet in the hall, the good night faltering on their lips, when suddenly their eyes flashed together in mutual question, and Deborah bent her ear toward the street.

An automobile was slowing up—stopping—stopping before the gate! Deborah turned and looked at Mr. Black. Then the bell rang. Never had it sounded so shrill and penetrating. Never had it rung quite such a summons through this desolate house. Recalling, she made a motion of entreaty.

"Go," she whispered. "Open! I cannot."

Quickly he obeyed. She heard him pass out and down the walk, and through the first gate. Then there came a silence, followed by the opening of the second gate. Then, a sound like smothered greetings, followed by quickly advancing steps and a voice she knew:

"How is my father? Is he well? I cannot enter till I know."

It was Oliver!—come from some distant station, or from some other line which he had believed unwatched. Tumultuous as her thoughts were, she dared not indulge in them for a moment, or give way to gratitude or any other emotion. There were words to be said—words which must be uttered on the instant and with as much imperiousness as his own.

Throwing the door wide, she called down the steps:

"Yes, he is well. Come in, Mr. Ostrander, and you, too, Mr. Black. Instructions have been given me by the judge, which I must deliver at once. He expects you, Oliver," she went on, as the two men stepped in.

"He bade me say to you immediately upon your entrance that much as he would like to be on hand to greet you, he cannot see you tonight. For tonight at least, and up to a certain hour tomorrow, you are to keep your own counsel. When certain persons whose names he has given me can be gotten together in this house, he will join you, giving you your first meeting in the presence of others. Afterwards he will see you alone. If these plans distress you—if you find the delay hard, I am to say that it is even harder for him that it can be for you. But circumstances compel him to act thus, and he expects you to understand and be patient."

Young Ostrander bowed. "I have no doubt of the facts," he assured her, with an unsuccessful effort to keep his trouble out of his voice. "But as my father allows me some explanation, I shall be very glad to hear what has happened here to occasion my imperative recall."

Mr. Black glanced at Deborah, who was slipping away. When they found themselves alone together, Oliver's manner altered.

"One moment," said he, before Mr. Black could speak. "I should like to ask you first of all, if Miss Scoville is better. When I left you both so suddenly at Tempest Lodge, she was not well. I—"

"She is quite recovered, Mr. Ostrander."

Involuntarily their glances met in a question which perhaps neither desired to have answered. Then Oliver remarked quite simply:

"My haste seemed warranted by my father's message. Five minutes—one minute even is of great importance when you have but fifteen in which to catch a train."

"And by such a route!"

"You know my route." A short laugh escaped him. "I feared delay—possibly the interference—but why discuss these unimportant matters? But your reason for these hasty summons—that is what I am ready now to hear." And he sat down, but in such a way as to throw his face very much into the shadow.

This was a welcome circumstance to the lawyer. His task promised to be hard enough at the best. Black night had not offered too dark a screen between him and the man thus suddenly called upon to face suspicious the very shadow of which is enough to destroy a life. The hardy lawyer shrunk from uttering the words which would make the gulf imaginatively opening between them a real, if not impassable one. Something about the young man appealed to him—something apart from his relationship to the judge—something inherent in himself. Perhaps it was the misery he betrayed. Perhaps it was the memory of Reuther's faith in him and how that faith must suffer when she saw him next. Instantaneous reflections, but speech making in a mind like his. Alas, Black had never hesitated before in the face of any duty, and it robbed him of confidence. But he gave no proof of this in voice or manner, as pacing the floor in alternate approach and retreat, he finally addressed the motionless figure he could no longer ignore.

"You want to know what has happened here? If you mean lately, I shall have to explain that anything which has lately occurred to distress your father or make your presence here desirable has its birth in events which date back to days when this was your home and the bond between yourself and father the usual and natural one."

Silence in that shadowy corner! But this the speaker had expected, and must have exacted even if Oliver had shown the least intention of speaking.

"A man was killed here in the old days—pardon me if I am too abrupt—and another man was executed for this crime. You were a boy—but you must remember."

He paused. One must breathe between the blows he inflicts, even if one is a lawyer.

"That was twelve years ago. Not so long a time as has elapsed since you met a walf of the streets and chastised him for some petty annoyance. But both events, the great and the little, have been well remembered here in Shelby; and when Mrs. Scoville came amongst us a month or so ago, with her late but substantial proofs of her husband's innocence in the matter of Etheridge's death, there came to her aid a man, who not only remembered the beating he had received as a child, but certain facts which led him to denounce by name, the party destined to bear at this late day the onus of the crime heretofore ascribed to Scoville. That name he wrote on bridges and walls; and one day, when your father left the court-house a mob followed him, shouting loud words which I will not repeat, but which you must understand were such as must be met and answered when the man so assailed is Judge Ostrander. Have I said enough? If so, raise your hand and I will desist for tonight."

But no movement took place in the shadow cast by Oliver's figure on the wall before which Mr. Black had paused, and presently a voice was heard from where he sat, saying:

"You are too merciful. I do not want generalities but the naked truth. What did the men shout?"

"You have asked for a fact, and that I feel free to give you. They shouted, 'Where is Oliver, your guilty son, Oliver? You saved him at a poor man's expense, but we'll have him yet.' You asked me for the words, Mr. Ostrander."

"Yes." The pause was long, but the "Yes" came at last. Then another silence, and then this peremptory demand: "But we cannot stop here, Mr. Black. If I am to meet my father's wishes tomorrow, I must know the ground upon which I stand. What evidence lies back of these shouts? If you are my friend—and you have shown yourself to be such—you will tell me the whole story. I shall say nothing more."

Mr. Black was not walking now; he was standing stock-still and in the shadow also. And with this space and the double shadow between them, Alanson Black told Oliver Ostrander why the people had shouted: "We will have him yet."

When he had quite finished, he came into the light.

When he had quite finished he came into the light. He did not look in the direction he had avoided from the first, but his voice had a different note as he remarked:

"I am your father's friend, and I have promised to be yours. You may expect me here in the morning, as I am one of the few persons your father has asked to be present at your first interview. If after this interview you wish anything more from me you have only to signify it. I am blunt, but not unfeeling, Mr. Ostrander."

A slight lift of the hand, visible now in the shadow, and with a silent bow he left the room.

In the passage-way he met Deborah. "Leave him to himself," said he. "Later, perhaps, you can do something for him."

But she found this quite impossible. Oliver would neither eat nor sleep. When the early morning light came, he was sitting there still.

Ten o'clock! and one of the five listed to be present had arrived—the rector of the church which the Ostranders had formerly attended.

He was ushered into the parlor by Deborah, where he found himself received not by the judge in whose name he had been invited, but by Mr. Black, the lawyer, who tendered him a simple good morning and pointed out a chair.

There was another person in the room—a young man who stood in one of the windows, gazing abstractedly out at the line of gloomy fence rising between him and the street. He had not turned at the rector's approach, and the latter had failed to recognize him.

WOMAN WOULD NOT GIVE UP

Though Sick and Suffering; At Last Found Help in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Richmond, Pa. — "When I started taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I was in a dreadfully rundown state of health, had internal troubles, and was so extremely nervous and prostrated that if I had given in to my feelings I would have been in bed. As it was I had hardly strength at times to be on my feet and what I did do was by a great effort. I could not sleep at night and of course felt very bad in the morning, and had a steady headache."

"After taking the second bottle I noticed that the headache was not so bad, I rested better, and my nerves were stronger. I continued its use until it made a new woman of me, and now I can hardly realize that I am able to do so much as I do. Whenever I know any woman in need of a good medicine I highly praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound." — Mrs. FRANK CLARK, 3146 N. Tulip St., Richmond, Pa.

Women Have Been Telling Women for forty years how Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has restored their health when suffering with female ills. This accounts for the enormous demand for it from coast to coast. If you are troubled with any ailment peculiar to women why don't you try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound? It will pay you to do so. Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass.

Two school house fires, one at Nashville and one at Brown City, recently, again demonstrate that the state law, requiring fire drills in all public schools, serves as a means of preventing possible loss of life. The children in both schools marched safely out when the fire gongs were struck. Fire Marshal Winship has recently called the attention of the school authorities throughout the state to the bad practice of allowing the teachers to use the fire gongs for any purpose but that of the fire drill. When fire gongs are used to call classes the value of the fire alarm system is endangered.

"Then take something out of the box," whispered the collector. "The money is for the heathen."

Why is it that one town grows and prospers year after year while but a few miles away another town, just as well located and with just as great natural advantages, simply stagnates year in and year out? It is because in the first town there is civic pride, its people work together in harmony, have ambition and seek the best interest of all. "My daughter was afflicted with epileptic fits for three years, the attacks coming every few weeks. We employed several doctors but they did her no good. About a year ago we heard of Dr. Miles' Nervine, and it certainly has proved a blessing to our little girl. She is now apparently cured and is enjoying the best of health. It is over a year since she has had a fit. We cannot speak too highly of Dr. Miles' Nervine."

DESERT WARFARE

THE DESERT
TRUE DESERT WARRIORS

It is a recognized maxim in strategic problems that a desert frontier is the one most easy to defend and most formidable to assault. Mountains, rivers and seas have their difficulties, and are serious obstacles for an invader to tackle, but for impracticability they do not compare with even a narrow zone of barren land, where food and water are non-existent and where bad ground makes transport either laborious or altogether impossible. Battlefields, like the sites of capitals, are not made by man, but are the outcome of geographical position. The chief lines of communication of the world, and consequently the warpaths of nations, are, in like manner, determined by the lie of the land and its physical features. So long, for instance, as Egypt and Palestine are not under one rule, and so long as there is a likelihood of a recurrence of hostility between the powers that control these two countries, the desert barrier that separates them will be the scene of conflict. Being a narrow neck of land joining two continents, and being the only link between two of the most fertile regions of the earth, it has always been, and will always be, an important line of communication. For the same reason it must retain its significance from a military standpoint. It chances that the link between Egypt and Asia is cursed by the blight of aridity. But the same providence that caused this area to be useless to man provided the more favored region of the Nile valley with an impenetrable protection from envious foes. A hundred miles of waste is a better guard against invasion than any other natural feature; it is far less costly than modern fortifications and probably more effective. Yet, in spite of nature's bulwarks, this area has probably been the scene of more hostility than any other desert in the world. Inexorably, as it were, the silent wilderness has been disturbed by successive waves of migratory hordes and by the continual passing of military expeditions. There is no rest for this land; it seems to attract tragedy.

The desert, Egypt's ancient barrier against intruding foes, has proved to be a formidable breakwater on to which many an enemy has hurled himself. Their efforts have been met with varying success. Although it has proved of no avail against determined and systematic attacks, it has caused a hostile advance on Egypt to be looked upon as a big undertaking. It would be foolish to treat such an obstacle lightly, but with sufficient initiative its difficulties can be successfully surmounted. It is noteworthy that desert frontiers to fertile lands also probably entail the responsibility of wild tribes to be kept at bay. The wilderness that fringed ancient China was a barrier against distant foes, but the nomads actually inhabiting that desert were the source of so much danger that they might be considered the direct cause for the building of the Great Wall. In the same way the early inhabitants of the Nile valley did not consider nature's battlements sufficient to repel the wild nomadic tribes that constantly swept in from arid Arabia to raid them. So they fortified this barrier by lines of fortifications, which ran from the Mediterranean to the Gulf of Suez. Nowadays a still more effective barrier has supplanted the crude, though outward labors of the ancients, the hostile desert being backed by the canal, which has rightly been described as "the most formidable military obstacle ever constructed by man." Invading foes must accomplish the toil of the desert march, they must arrive in some sort of "fitness," attack carefully prepared positions, succeed in breaking the defensive and cross the canal before they can rely on getting food and water.

There is probably no newer method of dealing with the problems of supply on such a campaign than those employed by Alexander, Napoleon or Ibrahim Pasha. The more adaptable and the better acclimatized to the peculiar conditions are the forces in use the more simple does the problem become. To move bands of Bedouin to and fro across such country would be only asking them to live their everyday lives. No doubt many of the troops being employed by the Turks on the present venture are quite at home in such surroundings, can live hard and travel hard, but there cannot be a very great number of them. Numbers, it should be noted, have an abnormal influence in the East, where bluff plays such a large part in life. The Arab, in his own intertribal wars, depends largely upon giving an exaggerated idea of his numbers and strength. The issue of a desert engagement is often decided without a blow being struck, those in the minority giving in without resistance to those in the majority.

It seems doubtful that the true desert warriors—the Bedouin—are being employed in any large extent. Had the big tribes of Arabia been in perfect sympathy with the Turks they might have constituted a formidable array. But the children of Ishmael have not changed; they are still as "unstable as water." Even of those who have been commandeered, with their camels, large numbers have deserted and disappeared into the heart of the wilderness. So the great reserve of desert soldiery remains unused. The successful issue of a desert campaign depends upon a phenomenal ability to tackle the problems of supply and of transport. The organization of these must be perfect in detail and absolutely reliable in action. In the old days, although military operations took much longer to come to a head than they do now, when the antagonists actually joined battle, the result was quickly decided. The decisive battles of the world have generally been decided between dawn and dusk. This is especially the case in Arab tactics. Sudden attack and swift retreat is the secret of desert warfare, for there is no time to waste. It may be recalled that in all former conflicts on the Egypto-Turkish frontier the issue has not long hung in the balance. Alexander entered Egypt a week after he left Gaza, a distance of 120 miles. Napoleon only spent six and a half days on the road between his base at Katieh and his arrival before Gaza. The advance guard of the Turks, in 1800, under Taber Pasha, left El Arish on April 2 and actually took Salahieh, on the farther side of the present canal, before the 12th of the month. But in that case, it is true, there was no serious opposition to their advance. Swift and decisive action is evidently the maxim of that particular military undertaking; by the mercy of Allah the prevalent creed of the present-day invaders is that "back is of the devil." It is certain that the retreat which followed on the recent attack on the canal is without precedent in the history of all former wars for the mastery of the eastern gates of Egypt. As regards the problem of transport, we have an object lesson in Napoleon's Syrian expedition of 1799. He concentrated about 14,000 picked men—13,000 infantry and 1,000 cavalry—he inured his troops to the hardships they were about to undergo, and he fanned a special camel corps for scouting. He did not even attempt to move his artillery by land, but essayed to send it by sea. His plan for the transport of this comparatively small force entailed the services of 2,000 camels to carry water for the three days' journey between Katieh and El Arish, where the supply was to be replenished. Another 1,000 camels bore provisions for the 14,000 men and 3,000 horses for 15 days. Besides this, 3,000 mules were set apart solely for the conveyance of baggage. This was no light undertaking, even for such a genius as Napoleon, and, as we know, it ended in a retreat which may be considered the turning point of his career.

Consider for a moment what an army of animals must be necessary for the transport of the 65,000 or more men who are said to be concentrated on the confines of Palestine. Camels will doubtless be employed in enormous numbers, both on account of their adaptability to foodless and waterless countries, and also because there is an unlimited supply on the eastern borderlands of Syria and Palestine. They are invaluable for patrol work, and unequaled as beasts of burden. But they need careful attention and are by no means as hardy as one might suppose. So long as they are in condition, well watered and sufficiently fed, they will undergo considerable strain, but if asked to do too much they literally go to pieces. The great herds of camels that have, no doubt, been driven in from the Arabian borderlands will never have been ridden or even saddled. Thirteen thousand camel saddles cannot be produced in a hurry, and this is about the number that will be required, estimated by Napoleon's allowance per man. Camels will carry heavy loads on even ground, they are easy to feed compared with horses, or even mules, and they do not need water every day. But it must be mentioned that when they do drink they are in the habit of putting away a phenomenal amount of water. It is the maximum amount of water required that is the point in this case, and is likely to prove unprocurable. The bountiful wells of El Arish, for instance, have been estimated to be capable of supplying the needs of 15,000 to 20,000 men. I do not know the comparative drinking capacity of man and camel, but out of 13,000 camels, not to mention horses, mules and men, there would be many to go thirsty. A still more significant point in the commissariat arrangements is the fact that the desert will very soon be bereft of even its poor camel scrub. For a region which will easily support passing caravans fails under the tax of continuous grazing by innumerable herds.

Looking at the problem of campaigning in the wilderness, it seems that the peculiar physical features of the theater of action—the poverty of the land—are playing an even bigger part in this venture of the twentieth century than ever they did in days gone by.
