NEIGHBORHOOD NEWS

Items of Interest from Neighboring Towns

John Howlett, of Lyndon, was found dead in a field last Friday morning. Thursday afternoon he took his gun and went out for a hunt, and when he did not return in the evening the family thought that he had gone to the home of a relative, but next morning after telephoning, a search was made and he was found dead in a field, where it is thought he died from heart trouble.—Stockbridge Brief Sun.

Rev. D. C. Littlejohn went to Durand this morning to preach the funeral sermon of Mrs. Emil G. Lambertson who died at Pontiac, Sunday, Nov. 21, 1915 and the remains were taken to Durand for burial. Mr. Lambertson formerly lived at Howell and worked for H. L. Williams. Mrs. Lambertson was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Hendee of Durand. Besides her husband Mrs. Lambertson leaves three small children.—Livingston Republican.

Tuesday morning about 7 o'clock, Aaron Finkle, Will Barber and Victor Moeckel, of Waterloo, went to the Koeltz farm in Lyndon township about a mile south of Waterloo village to husk corn, and not finding anyone about went into the house and discovered the dead body of Carl Koeltz, aged 31 year. He was lying on the bed and had shot himself, using a 22 calibre rifle. The bullet had entered the left temple and came out through the back of his neck. Death must have been instantaneous.—Chelsea Standard.

An automobile bus, built to resemble a street car passed through here Thursday afternoon on the way to Flint. The car is patterned after the Detroit city cars, with side entrance pay as you enter arrangement, and will carry about 10 people. It will be in the jitney business at the latter city.—Farmington Enterprise.

Fred Lillywhite of Plainfield was joined in marriage on last Saturday night, November 20th, to Miss Julia Wood of Gregory, Rev. D. C. Littlejohn pastor of the M. E. church performing the ceremony at the parsonage. The reverend gentlemen lays no claims to being a magician or necromancer, but it required only a few short words to turn a hand of Wood into a Lillywhite hand.—Tidings.

A Fine Entertainment

The second number on the lecture course, the All Bros. Quartet, directed by a crowded house Sunday night. The entertainment proved to be first class in every respect and was much enjoyed by everyone present. The gentlemen were possessed with rare musical talent, not only vocally but on various instruments as well, one of the novelties being the Organ Chimes, which reached the length of the stage and took a fine company to play it.

The dance following the entertainment was well attended, 44 couples being present. A fine time was enjoyed by all. About $2.00 was taken in by the flower class.

Gets Arm Broken

The Pinckney H. S. foot ball team played at Dexter Thanksgiving, although a number of their best men were unable to go but by dint of considerable hustling a full line up was picked up. They found that Dexter had also been doing some hustling and loaded up with 200-weights from Ann Arbor. Although two men were laid out, Roche Shehan the youngest on the team, having the misfortune to get his arm broke, and Harold Swarhout getting his leg twisted severely, the boys held the heavy Ann Arborites to 0 and 0. The boys were playing without their professor, who Stockbridge claims, won the game from them a week ago last Thursday. The following item was taken from the Stockbridge Brief Sun:—

The Pinckney team owes it brilliant (?) victory to the two touchdowns made by their Supt. of schools who played quarterback against a 15-year-old, ninth grader on the home team—unfair competition.

We might also add that it is a poor editor who cannot find some excuse for his home team. The Pinckney boys are thinking of getting a game with Michigan if they will promise not to load up with Dexterites.

BLACKS OPTICIANS

ACCEPTABLE PRESENTS FOR CHILDREN BY JULIA BOTTOMLEY

Doll's House of Cardboard

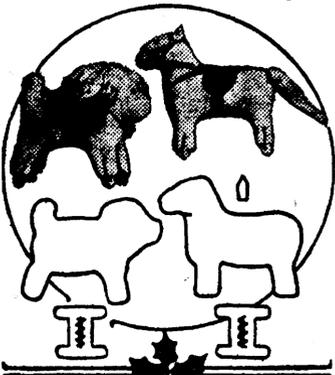

A hat box of strong cardboard and some red, white and green water-color paints are required to make this doll's house. A view of it is given in the picture above, also a picture of the roof and of the front and one side. The roof and chimneys are to be made separately.

Two large, square openings are cut out at the front and above them an oblong is cut on three sides. Bent outward this forms an awning that is painted in red and white stripes. A door is cut in the side and panels and doorknobs painted on it. Openings are cut in the roof to hold the chimneys and it is painted in green squares to simulate shingles.

The house and chimneys are painted red lined with white to simulate bricks. White paper pasted over the windows will look like a shade. After the parts are made they are fastened together with paper fasteners.

Easily Made Animal Toys

Animals, that please the little ones, are made of cotton flannel or plush, and stuffed with sawdust. Pins with black heads, beads, or regulation artificial eyes are used, and bits of lamb's wool or fur provide the required hair. A dog and pony are pictured here, made of white cotton flannel, also outlines of patterns for cutting them. Each animal is made of three pieces; the two sides and a piece to be sewed underneath. This last has a slit in it for turning the figure right side out after the pieces are machine stitched together. After it is stuffed this opening is sewed up. Almost any animal may be made in this way.

Bungalow Made of Cardboard

and one side of the bungalow before they are put together, also the finished house.

The windows are cut out and plain white writing paper pasted over the openings on the inside. The window panes and sashes are painted on this. Doors are cut on three sides and panels and knobs painted on them. Doorsteps, window boxes and flowers, shingles, etc., are all painted on the flat surface.

The chimney is made separately, painted red, and lined with white.

A Group of Baby Belongings

The baby inspires the greatest number of dainty gifts at Christmas time, nearly all of them the handwork of those who welcome him.

A book in which the important affairs of the new arrival are to be put on record, a hanger for safety pins of several sizes, a pair of armlets, and some brightly colored toys suspended by gay ribbons, are pictured above in the group of baby belongings.

The record book is made by covering cardboard with white moire silk. A stork is painted on the front cover, and plain heavy white paper provides the leaves. Satin ribbon in light blue or pink is sewed to each cover to fasten them together.

Pink satin ribbon and white celluloid rings, in three sizes, are used for the safety-pin hangers. One long and three short ends hang from a pretty bow, each terminating in a ring. The pins are fastened over the rings.

Narrow satin ribbon shirred over flat elastic cord forms the armlets. Each is finished with a full rosette.

Bootees and a Coat Hanger

The warm looking and dainty booties shown in the picture will be easy to make by those who understand crocheting. They are crocheted of white zephyr and shaped to fit over the knee. A heading is worked in near the top and narrow pink satin ribbon run through it makes it possible to tie the boots so that they will not slip down.

A novel and very pretty touch is given these booties by the tiny pink rose buds that are embroidered on them with silk floss.

Little wooden hangers are covered with cotton for a padding and over this light satin ribbon is shirred. The hook is wound with the ribbon and the hanger finished with a pretty bow.

A Christmas Prayer.
May he be with us in spirit, as he once deigned to come among us in the flesh! May he make us each Christmas hear something new of his innumerable depths of love, and give us more of the wish to be like him! May he give us a more earnest purpose to live a holy life, and to prepare ourselves to meet his presence, and share his joy, when he shall appear among us again.—Sam Church.

SUDDEN DEATH

Caused by Disease of the Kidneys

The close connection which exists between the heart and the kidneys is well known nowadays. As soon as kidneys are diseased, arterial tension is increased and the heart functions are attacked. When the kidneys no longer pour forth waste, uræmic poisoning occurs, and the person dies and the cause is often given as heart disease, or disease of brain or lungs.

It is a good insurance against such a risk to send 10 cents for a large trial package of "Anuric"—the latest discovery of Dr. Pierce. Also send a sample of your water. This will be examined without charge by expert chemists at Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y. When you suffer from backache, frequent or scanty urine, rheumatic pains here or there, or that constant tired, worn-out feeling, it's time to write Dr. Pierce, describe your symptoms and get his medical opinion, without charge—absolutely free. This "Anuric" of Dr. Pierce's is 37 times more active than lithia, for it dissolves uric acid in the system, as hot water does sugar.

Simply ask for Dr. Pierce's Anuric Tablets. There can be no imitation. Every package of "Anuric" is sure to be Dr. Pierce's. You will find the signature on the package just as you do on Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, the ever-famous friend to ailing women.

Worry is a frequent cause and sometimes a symptom of kidney disease. Thousands have testified to immediate relief from these symptoms after using Dr. Pierce's Anuric Tablets for the kidneys and backache.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription makes weak women strong, sick women well. No alcohol. Sold in tablets or liquid.

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root stands the highest for the reason that it has proven to be just the remedy needed in thousands upon thousands of even the most distressing cases. Start treatment at once. Sold at all drug stores in bottles of two sizes—fifty cents and one dollar.

Awarded Medal of Honor and Gold Medal, Panama-Pacific Exposition

Don't Shiver in Chilly Rooms

The discomfort of spending the early days of fall in chilly, unheated rooms is nothing to the danger to health.

It lowers the vitality and invites colds and pneumonia; if there are young children or old people in the family the risk of illness is doubled. It also is unnecessary when the NEW PERFECTION Heater instantly banishes frosty chill and makes the living room a place of genial comfort.

Carry it with you from room to room and have heat to dress by in the morning and in the bathroom. After the winter fires are lighted, use the NEW PERFECTION in rooms that are hard to heat in the night, if anyone is sick, whenever and wherever you want a warm, cozy, quickly and cheaply making a warm.

PERFECTION HEATER
SEASONLESS OIL HEATERS
Standard Oil Company

The NEW PERFECTION is easy care for. Burns 10 hours on one gallon of oil. Can't smoke. No trouble to re-wick, because wick and carrier are combined—the fresh wick all ready to put in, clean, smooth and ready to light.

For best results use Perfection Oil. At the Panama-Pacific Exposition the many prizes of superiority of NEW PERFECTION Heater were awarded. Model of 1905.

While a Gold Medal was awarded the NEW PERFECTION Heater—a stupendous victory. Your dealer has the NEW PERFECTION Oil Heater on exhibition. Look for the trademark for wick and carrier and the name NEW PERFECTION on the wick and carrier. It will be good to show you the Standard Oil Company.

PEACE SHIP WILL SAIL DECEMBER 4

HENRY FORD WILL ATTEMPT TO END FIGHTING BY CHRISTMAS TIME.

WOMEN CALL ON PRESIDENT

Steamship Oscar II Will Carry Party to Europe to Make Appeal for Ending of Hostilities.

Detroit—Henry Ford returned home Sunday after a trip to eastern points in the interest of the effort he intends making to end the war in Europe.

Mr. Ford's plan is to go to Europe on a specially chartered boat, taking with him a number of prominent peace advocates from this country.

Definite announcement that Mr. Ford had obtained accommodations—the entire first and second cabins—for his "peace party" aboard the steamship Oscar II, was made at New York Saturday night by the Scandinavian-American line. The third cabin will be given over to regular travelers. It is expected that the ship will sail on December 4.

Louis P. Lochner, of New York, representing Mr. Ford, said the manufacturer was much encouraged by his visit to Washington. He saw President Wilson, Cardinal Gibbons and Justice Hughes. Everywhere, Mr. Lochner stated, Mr. Ford received encouragement.

The only statement regarding the attitude of the government on Mr. Ford's plan was that the state department is "assisting in every way the issuance of passports."

Mrs. Philip Snowden, wife of a member of the British parliament, who with Madame Rosika Schwimmer of Hungary, interviewed President Wilson Friday night to gain his support of the proposed conference of neutrals to initiate peace, quoted the president as having said:

"You need not plead with me. I am anxious, most anxious, to do all that I can for peace. I shall earnestly endeavor to unite official and unofficial opinion to that end."

In her written statement on Saturday she says: "Both Mme. Schwimmer and I believe that was all that could possibly be expected of the head of a great government."

Five Thousand For Stockholders.

Lansing.—The receiver of the E. Jossan State bank at Clarkston, which failed three years ago, Friday turned over to the state treasurer the sum of $5,000 which it had collected and which goes into a fund for the stockholders.

Under the law when a state bank fails the proceeds of all collections go to the state treasurer. When a sufficient amount is received to pay a dividend such is paid upon the order of the state banking commissioner.

Game Warden Makes Catch.

Saginaw.—Deputy Game Warden C. H. Waters lost his Thanksgiving dinner, but recovered 400 undressed perch of illegal weight.

For some time the deputy has been aware that perch of illegal weight were being smuggled into Saginaw and sold. Thursday he went to the corner of Court and Bay streets at 7 in the morning and waited there until 4, when he stopped a motor truck, found the fish and arrested the driver.

TERRIBLE CONDITIONS IN SERBIA ARE DESCRIBED

MME. SLAVO GROUITCH.

Monastir, Serbia.—Mme. Grouitch, wife of Serbia's under-secretary of foreign affairs, arrived here after a terrible twenty-day trip from Nish. In describing her trip she said:

"Even the horses we rode were starving. 'Some fell exhausted by the roadside and died before our eyes. We were members of a government party, but the most we could get to eat each day was a scanty half loaf of bread."

"Only one narrow horse trail through Albania now leads into Serbia since the railroad was cut by the Bulgars. The same road supplies Montenegro and Albania. The people of those countries are facing starvation, too. But what is happening in Serbia is the blackest page in human history!"

Lansing Will Investigate Claim.

Washington.—Secretary Lansing promised Representative Chandler, of New York, Friday he would investigate the case of Michael J. O'Connor, an American of New York, who declares in an affidavit filed with the state department that when he tried to get to his property in Ireland last month he was kept prisoner on the American liner St. Louis at Liverpool from October 24 until November 3 under guard of British soldiers. He also charges he was kept in the ship's brig several hours. He was denied admission and returned to New York.

CANADA SEIZES WHEAT SUPPLY

ABOUT TWENTY MILLION BUSHELS TAKEN FOR USE OF ALLIES.

GRAIN TAKEN ON SATURDAY

Government Will Pay Fair Price According to Official Announcement of Ottawa Officials.

Ottawa, Ont.—The Canadian government has commandeered all high grade wheat in elevators from Fort William on Lake Superior to the Atlantic coast.

The action was taken under the special war act, by the Canadian grain commission. The wheat seized was of grades No. 1 hard and Nos. 1, 2 and 3 northern. It was the property of grain shippers and millers.

That taken is all which on Saturday night was in public elevators at Fort William, Port Arthur, Midland, Timm, Port McNichol, Collingwood, Goderich, Kingston, Port Colborne, Prescott, Quebec, St. John, Montreal and Halifax.

A revised estimate places the amount at about 20,000,000 bushels. A considerable amount is the property of American grain dealers.

The grain was taken Saturday night so that grain exchanges should be affected as little as possible. It is officially stated that the price will be fairly adjusted and the grain owners promptly paid by the Canadian government. It is estimated that there is still in Canada, in the hands of farmers and dealers west of Fort William, 150,000,000 bushels surplus of wheat available for export. It is expected that most of this will be taken in the future for the use of Great Britain, France and Italy.

The domestic supply of Russia is more than sufficient to meet the needs of that country. Had the Dardanelles been forced, the surplus of Russian wheat would have made the present action unnecessary. While the wheat just taken was commandeered to fill an order from the British government for a large quantity of wheat, it is understood that most of it will be shipped to Italy.

Although injured several years ago, Harbaugh did not suffer serious effects until a year ago.

SYNOPSIS.

Confederate Sergeant Wyatt is sent as a spy to his native county on the Green Briar. He meets a mountaineer named Lem Taylor. At a house beyond Hot Springs they meet Major Harwood. Taylor murders Harwood and escapes. Wyatt changes to U. S. uniform, escapes to the Green Briar country and goes to Harwood's home, where he finds Noreen Harwood. He introduces himself as Lieutenant Raymond. Noreen's father comes to the house and Wyatt forces him to confess that he has been sent in advance of Anse Cowan, who proposes to marry Noreen at once, and so quiet title to the land in dispute between the Cowans and Noreen's dead father. Anse Cowan and his gang arrive. Wyatt tells Noreen who he is. They force the preacher to silence. Unable to escape while the gang is on the first floor and around the house, Wyatt proposes to marry Noreen and protect her from Cowan. She accepts and Wyatt forces the preacher to marry them. Cowan's gang is driven off by Federal troops, one of whose officers is the real Lieutenant Raymond. Wyatt is trapped, though Noreen attempts to defend him. Wyatt is taken to Lewisburg for trial as a spy. The camp commandant and Captain Fox visit Wyatt in his cell in the courthouse basement. He refuses clemency in return for information, and uses his boyhood knowledge of the building to escape to the attic and thence to the sheriff's office by means of a disused, old-fashioned chimney. He washes off the soot and changes clothes in the deserted washroom, and reconnoiters. He surprises Raymond and the camp commandant.

CHAPTER XVIII.

I Make Two Prisoners.

I saw him stare, open-mouthed, as though at a ghost. There was a startled look in his face, but no recognition. The same swift glimpse had revealed to me a discarded belt on the end of the desk, in which glittered the pearl handle of a revolver. With one step forward I had the weapon in my possession, and sprang between both men and the door.

"Not a single move, gentlemen!" I commanded crisply, yet not venturing to speak aloud, for fear of a guard outside. "Lieutenant, place your gun on the desk!"

He had it half drawn, but my weapon was aimed straight at his head.

"What the hell!" he sputtered.

"Never mind! Do as I say first, and then ask questions—take it by the barrel; now slide it across to me."

My eyes glanced aside at the face of the other, who was looking up, scarcely comprehending even yet what had occurred, and recognized Colonel Pickney. So I had blindly strayed into headquarters! Raymond gasped like a fish out of water, and the florid features of the colonel expressed a margin too deep for words. I thought he would explode, he sputtered so before he could give vocal utterance to discovery.

"By G—, it's that d—n spy!"

"What!" and the lieutenant took a step forward, only to shrink back as my revolver came to a level.

"Any noise either of you make will be the last sound you'll utter in this world. Lieutenant Raymond, I will trouble you to step around back of the desk—no, the other way; I advise you not to be tricky. Colonel Pickney, sit up in your chair, and put your hands behind you in through the openings in the chair back. Oh, yes you will! Don't be a fool, man! What is this—a hair trigger?"

I never saw anyone more thoroughly angry; he would have killed me with the utmost pleasure, and, indeed, for an instant, I expected him to actually make the attempt. But my eyes glared into his, and the man was not insane. Slowly, reluctantly, as though actually forced into the action, his arms were thrust backward into a posture of helplessness. His lips spat, but he could not even swear.

"Now, Raymond, take that belt and hand him." I commanded sternly. "Go to it, and be quick. Remember I have a gun in each hand. That's it—now catch the buckle."

Pickney choked with rage to which I gave not a vent, and the hands of the lieutenant shook as though from pain. His face was so white I began to think the fellow had a streak of cowardice in him, but his very fear might give him recklessness. I showed the muzzle of a revolver against his ear.

"Now this other around his legs; strap him tight to the desk. Very good, indeed; you are learning your trade."

I tugged the best leather with the hand.

"That will hold you, colonel, all but your mouth, and I hope you have enough sense left to guard that yourself. Raymond," and my glance swept the walls of the room broadly. "I do not trust you as much. If I find you about to betray—now would you think my little revolver hanging on the back would hurt? There you now turn that chair, so the back will be this way, and—sit down."

He knew what I meant, and there was an ugly look in his eyes, but I gave him no time for action. I gripped him by the collar, twisting my knuckles into his throat, and thrust him down into the chair seat with a violence which caused the fellow to gasp for breath.

"You move when I speak!" I said threateningly. "This is no boy's play. Now put your hands back—oh, farther than that; cross them over each other. Come, do you feel the steel! I do not like you any too well, Raymond; I know your treachery."

"I did nothing against you," he protested, wriggling about to gain glimpse of my face. "I had no authority here—"

"No, but you had influence, and used it against me. I got the story straight enough, and can guess the reason. Sit back straighter; there, I reckon that will hold."

I stood off and looked at the two of them, surprised at the ease with which I had accomplished the result, but entirely at sea as to my next movement. No plan, no hopeful possibility, occurred to me; I could but stare vacantly at my two prisoners, and about at the walls of the room. Raymond was jammed back into one corner farthest from the door, his face white, every bit of nerve gone, and a red welt showing where my grip had contracted the flesh. The fellow actually looked pitiful he was so completely cowed. But Pickney was of a different kidney. He sat glaring angrily at me across the table, with face red as the rising sun, straining at the tough leather, his lips muttering incoherent threats of vengeance.

"I'll get you yet, you d—d rascal," I heard him growl, and stretch your neck without any trial."

"And I'll gag that mouth of yours," I answered "and keep it still for awhile. Oh, yes, you'll open up, my man! I know a trick that will make you bite the tighter I pull the cord. How about you, lieutenant? Would you like a dose of the same medicine?"

I stepped across to him, a strip of cloth in my hand, but just at that instant the latch of the door rattled as though a hand without gripped it. I had barely time in which to leap back against the wall, hidden from view, when the door opened inward. All I saw was the glimpse of a man's hand and sleeve. The fellow must have perceived nothing to alarm him, for he merely held the door ajar.

"A lady to see the colonel," he announced briefly. "Just step in, miss."

I saw her advance two steps, and then stop motionless, with half-suppressed cry of surprise. The sentry could not have heard the slight exclamation, for he closed the door, the latch clicking sharply. Her eyes opened wide, staring first at the colonel, then at Raymond, so startled at the discovery of their predicament as to be dumb. I took a step forward, and the swift light of recognition leaped into her eyes, as she hurried forward to gaze on me more closely in the dim light of the single lamp. I could not tell, I could not be sure, yet I thought the expression on her face was one of relief, of rejoicing.

"You!" She exclaimed. "You here, and free!"

not yet half convinced of the truth. "You here—and free! What—what have you done to these men?"

I laughed lightly, so relieved by her reception as to feel a new man.

"Merely turned the tables; this time luck was on my side, and neither gentleman seemed eager to prove a hero. As you perceive, they are like lambs."

They hardly looked it, for if ever murder glared unconcealed in the eyes of men, it did then; but they were helpless to move or express themselves—at least the colonel was, although he struggled fiercely. The younger officer made no attempt, his thin lips drawn back in a cruel snarl. I was certain there was a swift gleam of amusement in the girl's eyes, but it passed quickly as her glance again met mine.

"But you! Tell me; I must understand in order to know what to do. How did you come here?"

"From the big chimney. I had no suspicion this room was occupied, until I came face to face with these men. But they were more surprised even than I. I got the guns first, and that ended it; but I cannot hold you up that way."

"There is no necessity."

"No!" I could not keep the joyous note out of my voice. "You mean—"

"Merely that I came here seeking your release, or rather to urge that you be given a trial at Charleston. It is scarcely likely under all conditions that I will prevent your escape, or attempt to do so. You saved me from a fate worse than death, and were captured while endeavoring to serve me. Surely you did not suppose I had forgotten? You received my message?"

"Yes, and was most thankful for it. I confess I had doubted before."

"I read your thoughts in your face; that was one reason why I wished to reassure you. I could not be ungrateful." She glanced across the room, and began again as though anxious to get upon another topic. "I requested Lieutenant Raymond to intercede in your behalf, and he pledged me his word to do so. Less than an hour ago I learned he was exerting his influence with Colonel Pickney against my wishes. I determined to come here in person and learn the truth. Have you any explanation, Lieutenant Raymond?"

"The fellow is a self-confessed spy," he asserted hoarsely. "There was nothing I could say to save him."

"Lieutenant, I made no request that you would interpose to save this man from his just fate under military law. My father was a soldier, and I know a soldier's duty. All I asked was that he be sent to Charleston, to the headquarters of this department, where he could have an impartial trial. If you had so advised Colonel Pickney, that would have been done. He would have gladly shifted the responsibility elsewhere. Now the full burden of decision falls on me. I must choose between two duties—my loyalty to the Union or to my husband."

Raymond certainly was no more startled than I at this avowal, perhaps less so, for although the words choked in his throat, he managed to give them utterance.

"Your husband! Good God! Do you mean to say you are married to this fellow?"

"I not only mean it," she said calmly, "but I have the proof with me. I tell you the fact merely to justify my action, for I intend to save him if I can. I wish Colonel Pickney to know why I do this—what conditions justify me in so rebellious a course. This man does not deserve death; he was captured while defending me from insult, and he is my husband. I should be unworthy the name of woman if I did not aid his escape."

She turned to me, her eyes eager. "Tom, you must do just as I say."

CHAPTER XIX.

The Lady Chooses.

She came across toward me, her back to the others, and spoke swiftly, yet in a low voice which did not carry to their ears.

"There is only one way possible for you to pass out of this building and through the camp safely. There are guards everywhere, and the orders are very strict; but I think we can go together. I know the countersign—Captain Fox is officer of the day, and trusted me with it. If—if you only had a uniform! Where is the one you wore?"

"My trip through the chimney left that in rags," I answered, impressed by her earnestness, and getting my wits together.

She glanced about the walls of the room, a frown between her eyes.

"Then we must forage from the enemy," with a little nervous laugh. "You would never pass the sentry in the corridor wearing that suit. You will have to take the lieutenant's coat and cap. Be quick about it—and you need not be particularly gentle on my account."

"Not on my own, either—Fox instructed me of what he told you."

no chances, binding him with greater care than before, and fitting a gag into his mouth to silence any possible cry for help. Noreen stood close to the door, apparently listening for some noise without, yet occasionally directing her glance toward us anxiously.

"Are you ready?" she asked in a low whisper.

"Yes; but tell me your plan. I need to know what character I am to enact—Raymond?"

"Not at first; not in the hall. That would be useless, as there is a light burning. Listen," and she grasped my sleeve in both hands in her eagerness to explain. "There is a sentry stationed outside this door—the colonel's orderly, I presume, but fully armed, and two others at the front entrance. These are twenty or thirty feet away, and out of sight from this door. I am not particularly afraid of passing them."

"It's the fellow stationed here?"

"Yes; he will be suspicious of a stranger coming out with me, for he has seen everyone who came in."

"There is only one course to pursue, then. We must trust to force, and a quick assault which will give the fellow no time to raise an alarm."

She Stepped Back as I Gripped Him.

You go out alone, leaving the door slightly ajar, and engage him in conversation. Did he appear to be genial when you met him before?"

"Yes, rather eager to talk—a young man."

"Good; then you can gain his attention for a moment. Stand so that his back will be to the door."

"You are not going to kill him?"

"There will be no necessity; once I get my grip the affair will be over—you understand?"

Her lips were firmly set, her eyes gravely earnest, the light fell full on her face. I could not refrain from touching her hand.

"You will let me thank you!"

"Please do not speak of that—every moment now means so much. Yes, I understand perfectly; shall I go now?"

I nodded. Drawing slightly back behind the door, I thrust both revolvers into the belt I had retained; this was to be an affair of bare hands—swift, merciless, noiseless.

She grasped the latch, lifted her eyes to mine for a bare instant, then stepped out into the hall, her lips smiling, as she paused a moment to glance backward into the room.

"Very well, colonel; I shall certainly take her your message," she said gayly, "and I thank you so much."

Her fingers released the latch, leaving the door standing ajar.

"Oh, sentry," she said pleasantly, but with guarded voice, "I know it is perfectly ridiculous, but a strand of hair has become entangled in this clasp. Would you kindly see if you can free it?"

"Certainly, miss."

I heard him set down his musket against the wall, and step forward.

"On the other side," she suggested.

"If you turn this way you will get the benefit of the light; it is caught in those crossed sabers, I think."

She stepped back as I gripped him, steadying the musket to keep it from being jarred to the floor. A gasp, and one convulsive effort to break loose; but with the first jerk—ward I had him off his feet, helpless, my arm circling his throat, holding him in a vise. I dragged him forward through the door, and flung him to the floor face downward.

"Not a cry, son," I commanded sternly. "I'll not shoot unless I have to. Hand me the rope cord in that upper desk drawer, Noreen; yes, that's it. Now, Jack, put your hands behind you! Rather a surprise party, wasn't it?"

The fellow stared up at me, and gasped.

"You sure did put it over me that time," he admitted, a touch of genuine admiration in his voice. "Who are you, anyway I ask?"

Making it Swim.

There is a story told that some years ago the keeper of the lighthouse on Tory Island (an Englishman) got married to a London girl, and his wife had, among other effects, a piano sent after her to her new home. By and by the news reached the island that the instrument was on the mainland, and two islanders were dispatched in a lugger to fetch it across. The lighthouse keeper and his wife were waiting the arrival of the piano which was to brighten the long winter evenings; but to their disappointment they saw the boat returning without the instrument.

"Where is the piano?" shouted the lighthouse keeper when the lugger had got within hailing distance.

"It's all right," replied one of the boatmen; "sure we're towing it behind us."

Scientific Farming

CULTIVATION BY ELECTRICITY.

A Form of Energy Which Can Supplant Manual and Animal Labor. By FRANK KOESTER, Author of "Electricity For the Farm and Home."

The use of electricity on our farms is sure to be greatly increased with the progress of that intensive cultivation which is becoming a national need.

As a class the farmer is a large user of power, but the sources from which he draws it are at present inefficient and uneconomical compared with industrial standards in other lines. Of the 33,000,000 persons engaged in gainful occupations in the United States not less than 10,000,000 devote their energies to agriculture. About 90 per cent of the horses and mules in this country are also at work on the farms. The substitution of electric power for even a small proportion of the work of farm animals means a great development for electrical machinery.

Outside of being a large consumer of electricity for lighting and for the operation of small motors and heating appliances in the house, the farmer uses a wide variety of mechanical appliances. Most of these call for motor units of small capacity, and it is here that the electric motor has an advantage over any other form of power apparatus. The portability of this apparatus is also in its favor, and its flexibility makes the application of the utility motor practically universal.

In the farming communities the introduction of electrical utilities of every description will be rapid as soon as the energy supply is reliably established. One of the biggest opportunities for the introduction of current consuming devices of every description undoubtedly lies in the rural communities and will follow immediately after the building of transmission lines and distributing circuits supplying such communities.

The introduction of electrical machinery on the American farm has been retarded by several causes, among them being the lack of information available and the consequent failure of the farmer to realize the benefits to be derived; the neglect by manufacturing companies to push the introduction of electrical farm machinery, due to the more pressing demand of manufacturing concerns and industrial purchasers, and the fact that farmers have been prejudiced against electrical machinery.

The more progressive farmers, however, long ago realized the great benefits to be derived from electrical machinery on the farm and today there is a general recognition on their part that electricity is one of the most profitable, practical and useful agencies at their command.

There is no form of energy which can supplant manual and animal labor on the farm or country estate as conveniently and cheaply as electricity, and it is far superior to steam or any internal combustion engine. In fact, there is no other agent which can supply all three necessities—light, heat and power—from the same source. Due to this fact, working hours on the farm and rural industries can be regulated as are those in manufacturing and commercial industries, and life in rural communities can be made as attractive, if not more so, as that of the cities, where the struggle for existence is incessant and the living accommodations, or what corresponds to home life, fall far short of the pleasant and healthful surroundings of the country residence.

The giant industries of the country are of recent origin and started in a humble way, but they now surpass any branch of agrarian pursuits. This is a condition readily accounted for since the services of the trained engineer were used to advantage in building up the great manufacturing indus-

SANTA DRAWN INTO WAR.

Children to Protest Because They Can't Get Toys From Germany.

Secretary Lansing need not be surprised if one of these mornings when he reaches his office he finds waiting for him a little plump old gentleman with a long white, wearing, like some of the women these days, summer furs and bearing in his hand a formidable petition, signed by all the boys and girls of America, protesting against the British orders in council.

There is reason to suspect that this gentleman, Mr. S. Claus, is really a German-American and that his original name was Kriss Kringle. The cause that is expected to bring him down from the north pole to brave August weather in Washington is the interference of the British blockade with his importations of Christmas toys from Germany.

It is estimated by several persons in Santa's confidence, notably by Arthur G. Hayes, an American attorney for several American toy importing firms, that $15,000,000 worth of German toys for America will be held up.

Italy's Flag.

The Italian national flag is a tricolor composed of green, white and red stripes, with a crown and shield worked into the white portion. It closely resembles the tricolor of France and was intentionally designed with that end in view. Napoleon, when he controlled the destinies of Italy, originated the green, white and red banner so that it should indicate by its close resemblance to the national flag of France the source to which it owed its existence.

Unique Tablecloth.

When a southeast wind is blowing the visitor to Cape Town is treated to a peculiar and interesting natural phenomenon. For under such conditions Table mountain, in the language of the natives, "puts on a tablecloth."

In other words, the thin line of fleecy cloud forming above it descends until it rests flat upon the mountain top, with its edges drooping gracefully over its sides. It is really not unlike the article of household use which gives it its name.

tries, while farming, though the oldest of industries, has been neglected even to the point of being abandoned in many places.

Up to the present time, especially in America, the aid of the technical man is seldom sought in solving the problems which arise in rural industries.

In Europe, particularly in German speaking countries, due to the harmonious co-operation of farmer and engineer, great progress has been made in the use of electricity as a servant on the farm, about the country road and in rural industries in general.

The Corriedale is a New Zealand breed of sheep. The name originates from the section of New Zealand in which these sheep were first developed. New Zealanders consider the Corriedale the ideal dual purpose sheep adapted to ranging. It is a product of crossing Leicester, Lincoln and Romney Marsh rams on Merino ewes. So far as known none of these sheep have been brought to America. The Corriedale is a good range sheep, lambs maturing early and making splendid mutton and the wool being of desirable market grade. The sheep shown is a Corriedale.
