Auto Turns Turtle With Party of Young People

Last Saturday while taking an early morning drive, a party of young people from this place, consisting of Floyd Althouse, the Misses Marjorie and Belores Richardson and Madeleine Bowman, were very rudely and unceremoniously spilt by the road side, when their Ford turned turtle with them.

It seems that Mr. Althouse, who was driving the car attempted to turn out for a gravel wagon while going at quite a high rate of speed, and the frosty grass together with a slight embankment of two or three feet did the rest. The car turned completely over once and up on its side. The girls were thrown from the car and were very much bruised and shaken up, Miss Bowman receiving a cut on the head and a broken collar bone. She was taken to Dr. Sigler's office by a passing rig, where the fracture was reduced.

Mr. Althouse was beneath the car when the dust blew away, but was uninjured. The wind shield and one radius rod is all that was broken on the car. The accident occurred just outside of town on the Pinckney and Howell road. The party in general are quite thankful that they are alive to tell the tale.

ELECTING A PRESIDENT

JACKSON.

Jackson Defeats Adams In 1828 Election.

THE Democrats nominated Andrew Jackson of Tennessee in 1828, and John Quincy Adams again opposed him. The election occurred on Nov. 1, and the vote, counted on Feb. 11, 1829, was: Jackson, 178; Adams, 81. Calhoun was elected vice president. The popular vote that year was: Jackson, 647,231; Adams, 509,057.

Jackson was again elected in 1832. The first national convention was held that year, and the platform was adopted setting forth the policies of the Democratic party.

Jackson was renominated and was opposed by Henry Clay of Kentucky. The vote was: Jackson, 219; Clay, 49. Popular vote: Jackson, 687,502; Clay, 530,189; Van Buren was elected vice president.

Billy Sunday Says

"I tell you that the curse of God Almighty is on the saloon. Legislatures are legislating against it. Decent society is barring it out. The fraternal brotherhoods are knocking it out. The Masons and the Odd Fellows and the Knights of Pythias, and the A. O. U. W., are closing their doors to the whiskey seller. They don't want you wiggling your carcass in their lodges. Yes sir, I tell you, the curse of God is on it. It is on the down grade. It is headed for hell, and by the grade of God, I am going to give it a push, with a whoop for all I know how. Listen to me! I am going to show you how we burn up our money. It costs 20 cents to make a gallon of whiskey; sold over the counter at 10 cents a glass it will bring $4.00.

"But," said the saloon keeper, "Bill, you must figure on the strychnine and the cochineal, and other stuff they put in it, and it will bring nearer $8."

"Yes, it increases the heart beat 80 times more in a minute, when you consider the licorice and potash, and logwood and other poisons that are put in. I believe one cause for the unprecedented increase in crime is due to the poison put in the stuff nowadays to make it go as far they can.

MORE SCHOOLS ARE TO TEACH FARMING

Courses Offered in Twelve Additional Towns This Year.

M. A. C. MEN ARE IN CHARGE

Number of Pupils Taking Course Will Exceed Total of 2,574 Which Was Reported for Last Year.

Lansing.—Pupils in 12 additional Michigan high schools will be afforded the opportunity this year of acquiring the fundamentals of farming through new courses which have been established in a dozen towns and cities throughout the state. The total number of schools now offering agriculture as part of the high school curriculum is 60. In the 48 schools which existed prior to this fall 2,574 pupils were enrolled, according to Prof. W. H. French of M. A. C., who has direction of the agricultural departments in the state at large.

Those schools into which agriculture was introduced this fall are: Colon, Durand, Elk Rapids, Frankfort, Howell, Lawton, Ludington, Owosso, St. Joseph, Scottville, Three Rivers, Traverse City and Vicksburg. M. A. C. graduates have been placed in charge of the new departments in all of them.

To Avoid "Price-Fixing."

Henceforth James N. McBride, director of markets for the Michigan Agriculture college, will confine his activities to bringing producers and consumers together. In the future no suggestions will be offered by him to farmers as to what prices they ought to ask for their produce. Attempts at "price-fixing" or recommending schedules, will be outside his province. Such is the essence of a new order which has been laid down by the state board of agriculture for the direction of the college department of marketing, and it is believed to be the result of charges, currently circulated, that the department was going into a phase of the marketing problem outside its jurisdiction.

In its new instructions to the market commissioner the board said:

"The field agent in marketing shall investigate the production and marketing of farm products. He shall assist in the organization of co-operative and other associations and afford them such advice and assistance as he may; shall assist in establishing grades and standards for market purposes, and shall give information to Michigan producers on the market conditions in the various states of the Union and foreign states. He shall gather such facts as may be available regarding the relative crop production and the relative demand, both at home and abroad, and shall gather and present to the agricultural producers and the public all such facts and information as may be attainable regarding such production and market condition.

"We do not deem it advisable, however, that he enter into the question or practice of fixing or attempting to fix or establish prices on any agricultural products. We deem it the business of the field agent in marketing to supply the agricultural producers the above information speedily and in plain and concise form, so that the individual may judge when to sell and what prices to ask."

State Crop Report Issued.

According to the Michigan crop report, issued by Secretary of State Vaughan, the estimated yield of wheat in the state is 15.76 bushels an acre.

The percentage of acreage sown this fall as compared with last year is 88. The total number of bushels of wheat marketed in Michigan last month was 218,728.

The average estimated yield in bushels per acre of the principal crops follows: Barley, 23.12; oats, 28.96; corn, 19.02; potatoes, 40.64; buckwheat, 11.58, and beans, 7.48. The estimated yield of sugar beets is 6.96 tons per acre.

"Because of the unfavorable season much of the acreage of corn, potatoes and beans was a total failure and crop correspondents quite generally say that fully 25 per cent of the estimated acreage planted has not been harvested," said Secretary Vaughan.

Few M. A. C. Students From Country.

The matriculation slips filled out by freshmen entering the Michigan Agricultural college this year show that the fathers of only 161 of the 523 freshmen are farmers or men engaged in agricultural pursuits. The parents of the other two-thirds of the class represented practically every profession and calling.

The fact that not more than 161 of the new students came from the farm this fall has been attributed to the off season which the farmers have suffered in the past two years and the consequent heavy damage to crops.

The average age of the entering class was a little over nineteen years. The oldest freshman was forty-four years of age. The youngest was sixteen.

The students who came from the greatest distance were two young men, one a missionary's son from Durban, in Natal, South Africa, and the other a Filipino from Maliano, in Capiz, Philippine Islands.

Further inquiry disclosed that about 30 per cent of the freshmen take baths twice a week, 30 per cent three times a week, and the rest at periods of greater or less frequency. Only a few, less than 10 per cent, admitted that they thought once a week was often enough.

Few Insects in State Nurseries.

"The nurseries of Michigan are in good condition," says Prof. L. R. Taft, state inspector of orchards and nurseries, following a tour of inspection about the state.

"A few scattering insects are being found, but are destroyed and the nurseries reinspected." The insects and diseases causing the greatest troubles at the present time are "woolly aphis," San Jose scale and crown gull.

Troops Get Hard Test.

El Paso, Tex.—The two Michigan regiments of infantry are now on the long heralded 15-day hike. The Thirty-first regiment just came in from its 15-day border detail in time to join with the other regiments of the division in the march into New Mexico.

Owing to the difficulties which would have been encountered by the troops in a march to the Mesquero Indian reservation, the route of the "hike" originally planned, was changed. The troops will march from El Paso to Fort Selden, a distance of 68 miles.

The route to the Mesquero reservation would have necessitated the packing of water for the 15 regiments in the march, as after leaving El Paso city limits, there would have been no water supply for a distance of 80 miles. On the route to Fort Selden, however, the men traverse fertile valleys a major portion of the way, and will be able to secure plentiful supplies of water.

Fifteen regiments are participating—the two Michigan regiments, five Ohio, three Kentucky, three Massachusetts and two South Carolina. Besides the soldiers, the procession includes 6,700 animals and 200 motor trucks, 20,000 men are in the line, which is 15 miles long. After leaving Las Cruces communication with the outside world will be practically cut off until that point is reached on the return trip.

Men Paid Too Much.

Camp Ferris.—A conflict in the national defense act of June 3 and the former law relative to the pay of a mess sergeant has caused those holding this position in the Michigan organization here to be paid $6 a month too much. It was discovered by a lieutenant. The old law provided that a regular sergeant who did the mess sergeant work in addition to his own was entitled to $6 more than the usual $30. The new law created the grade of mess sergeant and established the pay at $30 a month. The mess sergeant under the new law has no other duties, and hence is not considered entitled to more pay. Practically $500 too much has been paid out to mess sergeants here and will be collected from their pay this month.

Expect Long Service on Border.

The departure of Gen. John P. Kirk and his staff with Batteries A and B, First field artillery, for the border is believed to be the beginning of a long term of service for the Michigan guardsmen at the border. Increasing number of raids on the part of bandits in Mexico are looked upon here as due in a large measure to the transporting of troops from the border, and since many organizations already are ordered back to camps, for muster-out, officers here believe that the Michigan guardsmen will get more than their share of service.

The Thirty-third regiment band serenaded General Kirk and his staff just before the signal for starting was given. Nearly every guardsman in camp witnessed the departure, which was made in two sections of 14 cars each.

Since Maj. F. L. Wells has recommended that Fort Wayne, Detroit, be designated as a recruit depot instead of Camp Ferris, owing to the cold weather, it is probable that Camp Ferris will be entirely deserted before the end of the month. Capt. Clarence Deem, U. S. A., who was here instructing the artillery, has also recommended to the war department the advisability of moving the recruit station to Detroit. Water in basins and faucets has been frozen two mornings and camp life is anything but pleasant. It is expected that the organizations will be mustered out also at Detroit, as it would be dangerous to health to expose the troops coming from the warm southern climate to the rigors of a northern Michigan winter.

U-BOAT ARRIVES AT NEWPORT HARBOR

WITH STAY OF THREE HOURS IT AGAIN PUTS OUT TO SEA—SURPRISES EVERYONE.

SEVENTEEN DAYS AT SEA

Had Provisions and Fuel on Board for Three Months and Needed No Repairs.

Newport, R. I.—Seventeen days from Wilhelmshaven, the imperial German submarine U-53 dropped anchor in Newport harbor.

Almost before the officers of the American fleet of warships, through which the stranger had nosed her way, had recovered from their astonishment, the undersea fighter had delivered a message for the German ambassador and, weighing anchor, turned Brenton's Reef lightship and disappeared beneath the waves, just inside the three-mile limit.

As she came and went, she flew the black and white colors of the German navy, a gun was mounted on the forward deck and another aft, while eight torpedoes, plainly visible under the forward deck, gave mute assurance that the warship was ready for a fight at the drop of the hat.

Lieutenant-Captain Hans Rose, who hung up a new world's record in bringing an armed submarine in battle array across the Atlantic, said that he had called at Newport simply to mail a letter to Count von Bernstorff. He required neither provisions nor fuel and would be on his way, he said, long before the 24 hours, during which a belligerent ship may remain within a neutral harbor, had expired.

The submarine was in American waters a little more than three hours, assuming that she continued to sea after submerging.

To the naval men generally the most interesting fact disclosed by Captain Rose was that he had been at sea 17 days and still had provisions for three months, abundant fuel, and needed no repairs. Not so much as a bottle of water was taken aboard, and the ship was spick and span.

The U-53 was first sighted from land as she was entering the inner harbor escorted by the United States submarine D-2. The American had been outside for maneuvers since morning and was returning when she came up with the German. The D-2, drawing near the stranger and making out her type, sent a wireless message to the shore headquarters of Admiral Knight, who relayed word of the appearance of the U-13 to the navy department at Washington. The American submarine preceded the visitor into the harbor.

The U-53 is a monster submarine. Her length is 65 meters, or more than 200 feet, with corresponding beam. She appeared larger in every way than any of the submarines of the L type that now are operating in Narragansett bay. Her conning tower and her periscope rose much higher than those of the American vessels.

No warships were sighted from the time he left Wilhelmshaven until he met the D-2. The records showed, Colonel Voigt said, that the vessel had submerged to a depth of 200 feet. The commander told him that his ship could make 18 knots on the surface and 12 knots submerged.

U. S. NAVY BOAT WRECKED

The Mechanics Were Thrown Thirty Feet By Crash—The Machine Sank.

Newport News, Va.—The Curtiss twin-motor land and water machine, being tested here for the United States navy, was wrecked when Pilot Victor Vernon sent her crashing nose-first into the water, while attempting a landing. Vernon and Percy Kirkham, mechanics, were thrown 30 feet, but escaped without injury. They were rescued by another flying boat. The machine sank.

The machine recently was successfully tested here before the naval aero board, but later was slightly remodeled to conform to ideas of board members.

Several Shawassee farmers who left recently for Glasgow, Mont., to bring back 90 carloads of lambs, are now bound. The sheep were loaded and ready to be moved when the snowstorm came up. It was necessary to unload the lambs.

BRITISH CAPTURE VILLAGE

Opening of Somme Offensive in Which the French and British Make Important Gains.

London.—British troops captured the village of Sars, three miles from Bapaume, on the Albert-Bapaume highway, in a resumption of the Somme offensive, it was announced officially by the British war office. German positions east and west of the village were taken also. At the same time the British pushed forward on the Bethune road leading into Bapaume from the southeast, advancing their line between Guedecourt and Les Bouffes from 600 to 1,000 yards.

An attack by the French, in conjunction with the British, north of the Somme carried forward the Entente line about two-thirds of a mile, says the French official statement. The attack resulted in the capture of all objectives.

Reports of the number of prisoners taken have not yet been received. The work of the infantry, as usual, was greatly assisted by our aircraft.

Salonki.—Bulgarian positions north of Pojar, north of Lake Ostrovo, were captured by the Serbians. A large number of prisoners and much booty was also taken.

DISBARRED FOR SIX MONTHS

Attorney F. H. Dusenberry Convicted On All Three Counts.

Mt. Pleasant.—The disbarment case against Attorney F. H. Dusenberry has ended in Dusenberry's being convicted on three counts, the Johnson matter, the Hunter case of erasing a record in the county clerk's office. On the latter charges Judge Cross scored Mr. Dusenberry, saying it was a very brazen thing for an attorney to do and that on the other charges his conduct was unethical. The judge imposed a sentence disbarring Dusenberry for six months. Dusenberry has held various political offices, including that of state legislator.

GARDINER, "THE HUMAN FLY"

His Work of Climbing the Majestic Building Was Witnessed By Thousands.

Detroit.—With a multitude of 150,000—the greatest ever assembled in the history of Detroit—looking on, Harry H. Gardiner, whom Grover Cleveland termed "The Human Fly," scaled up the sheer face of the majestic building. Hand-over-hand, his fingers finding crevices and "holds" between the bricks and great blocks of stone, Gardiner made the climb from sidewalk to roof, a distance of 290 feet, in 37 minutes. The only instruments he used while on the sheer wall were his bare hands and a pair of rubber-soled tennis shoes.

ITEMS OF INTEREST

Florence I. Dutcher, aged 52, one of America's most famous invalids, was laid to rest. Although for years, blind, paralyzed and almost deaf, able to take only liquid nourishment through a broken front tooth, as her jaws had set, this woman gave generously to national Y. W. C. A. work, founded about the Florence I. Dutcher library at Toledo, O., and gave this village a beautiful drinking fountain. She also donated large sums to private charity work.

More money for good roads in Michigan is made certain by receipts from the sale of automobile licenses issued by the secretary of state. Since January, 153,877 automobile licenses have been issued with receipts amounting to $1,704,108.91. The total number of registered automobiles in Michigan by 1917 will reach 160,000. The money derived from the sale of license numbers is turned over to the state highway department and the various counties and can be used only in building and maintaining roads.

In the state convention of the prohibition party the following nominations were made to complete the state prohibition ticket: For secretary of state, Andrew Wood, of Dryden, Lapeer county; state treasurer, William J. Faull, of Lake Linden; auditor-general, Frank E. Marshall, of Stockbridge; attorney-general, Thomas A. Mead, of Detroit; justice of supreme court, Harvey B. Hatch, of Marquette. The platform besides declaring for abolition of liquor traffic, favors uniform text-books, salaries for all county officials and direct election of all assessing officers.

Seen and Heard in Michigan

Man Legally Declared Dead.

Houghton.—Herman Harri, formerly manager of the Co-operative association store at Kearsarge, has been declared dead by a jury in the circuit court. Mrs. Herman Harri, wife and beneficiary under a policy in the Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance company, sued for the insurance because her husband disappeared in 1908 and has not since been heard from. The jury awarded her the amount of the policy. Mrs. Harri testified that she had wandered all over the West looking for her husband and supporting herself by working as cook and waitress in hotels for three years before commencing suit. Mrs. Harri has a similar suit against the New York Life, and it is expected this will now be settled out of court.

Prohibition Ticket Named.

Grand Rapids.—In the state convention of the Prohibition party the following nominations were made to complete the state Prohibition ticket: For secretary of state, Andrew Wood of Dryden, Lapeer county; state treasurer, William J. Faull of Lake Linden; auditor general, Frank E. Marshall of Stockbridge; attorney general, Thomas A. Mead of Detroit; justice of supreme court, Harvey B. Hatch of Marquette. The platform, besides declaring for abolition of liquor traffic, favors uniform text-books, salaries for all county officials and direct election of all assessing officers.

Three Hurt in Auto Crash.

Adrian.—Rollin Chickering of Chicago suffered a broken arm and other serious injuries, and Maurice Malarney and William Swezey of Hudson, and Hal Montgomery of Detroit were less seriously injured when the automobile in which they were riding turned over at the west end of the Deerfield stone road. Chickering was brought to Adrian and is at Bixby hospital. The other three were attended by Adrian and Deerfield physicians, called to the scene of the accident.

Farmers Grow Milkweed.

East Lansing.—Growing cotton in Michigan seems like an impossibility, but farmers in the vicinity of Montague are doing what amounts to the same thing. They are growing milkweed for commercial purposes and selling it to the Montague Fiber company, which is turning out an imitation of cotton goods. A bulletin was issued recently by the Michigan Agricultural college telling of the possibilities of raising milkweed for commercial purposes.

Lynx Shot Near Marquette.

Marquette.—A lynx, weighing about 70 pounds, and measuring five feet and eight inches from nose to tail, was shot on the Marquette street car track near the Dead river swamp by E. J. Moffat of this city. Moffat almost ran into the animal, which was crouched for a spring. This is the first lynx that has been seen in the vicinity of Marquette for 20 years.

Democrats Name Ticket.

Mt. Clemens.—The Democratic state convention nominated the following candidates to complete its state ticket: Secretary of state, Frank R. Hamberger of Detroit; state treasurer, Peter L. Utley of Escanaba; auditor general, A. V. Frederick of Traverse City; attorney general, George J. Burke of Ann Arbor; justice of the supreme court, Rollin H. Person of Lansing.

Flint Jail Criticized.

Flint.—The county jail is flayed in the report of the inspectors which condemns the lack of accommodation for sick or insane prisoners, the fact that sections for male and female prisoners are not segregated properly and that more prisoners have to sleep on the floor than in bunks.

Two Held for Death.

Grand Rapids.—Workmen on the James Sharp farm, about ten miles south of Fremont, while digging a ditch, uncovered the body of William Traversa, a former Ashland township farmer and a tenant of the Sharp farm. Bullet holes were found in the head and neck. Emma Traversa, forty-six years old, widow of the farmer, and Clarence Myers, twenty-three years old, formerly employed by Traversa as a farm hand, have been arrested. A few weeks after the disappearance of Traversa, October 21, 1915, they removed to Conkita, where they had been living since.

Williamston Man Chosen.

Lansing.—Oris J. Trask of Williamston has been appointed acting secretary of the Republican state central committee and will take entire charge of the secretary's work until after the election in November. Secretary Dennis Alward was unable to give the time necessary for the work.

THE DESTROYING ANGEL

By LOUIS JOSEPH VANCE

SYNOPSIS

Young Hugh Whitaker's doctors tell him he has but a few months to live, and his sweetheart jilts him. His friend, Peter Stark, finds him disconsolate and proposes a sea voyage.

Can you imagine a more tragic figure than a young girl deserted in a ratty hotel by the man with whom she eloped, and given notice that her people have cast her out of their lives and she must shift for herself? One little maiden in such a plight thought there were but two courses ahead for her. One was dishonorable. So she emptied a little black bottle into a glass of water and—well what happens is told in this installment with dramatic effect.

CHAPTER II

"Mrs. Morten."

It was three in the morning before Peter Stark, having to the best of his endurance and judgment tired Whitaker out with talking, took his hat and his departure from Whitaker's bachelor rooms. Whitaker shut the hall door and turned back wearily into his living-room. It was three in the morning; his body ached with fatigue, yet he made no move toward his bedchamber.

Picking his way across a floor littered with atlases, charts, maps and guide-books, he went to the bathroom and took a bottle of chloral from the medicine closet.

What he took brought him three hours of oblivion. He rose at eight, ordered his breakfast up by telephone, bathed and dressed. When the tray came up, his mail came with it. Among others there was one letter in which he read:

Dear Hugh: I can call you that, now, because you're Peter's dearest friend and therefore mine, and the proof of that is that I'm telling you first of all of our great happiness. Peter and I found out that we loved one another only yesterday, so we're going to be married the first of June and . . .

Whitaker read no more. He could guess the rest, and for the moment he felt too sick a man to go through to the end. Indeed, the words were blurring and running together beneath his gaze.

After a long time he put the letter aside, absent-mindedly swallowed a cup of lukewarm coffee and rose from an otherwise unaltered meal.

"That settles that, of course," he said quietly. "And it means I've got to hustle to get ahead of Peter." Whitaker packed a hand-bag with a few essentials, not forgetting the bottle of chloral. He was not yet quite sure what he meant to do after he had definitely put himself out of Peter Stark's sphere of influence, but he hadn't much doubt that the drug was destined to play a most important part in the ultimate solution, and would as readily have thought of leaving it behind as of going without a toothbrush or railway fare.

Leaving the bag in the parcels-room at the Grand Central Station, he went down-town to his office. Happily his partner, Drummond, was out of town for the day. He worked expeditiously, having no callers until just before he was ready to leave. Then he was obliged to admit one who desired to make a settlement. He took Whitaker's receipt for the payment in cash, leaving behind him fifteen one-hundred-dollar notes. Whitaker drew his personal check for the right amount and left it with a memorandum under the paper-weight on Drummond's desk; put a match to a shredded pile of personal correspondence in the fireplace; and caught a train at the Grand Central at one-thirty.

Not until the cars were in motion did he experience any sense of security from Peter Stark. He had been apprehensive until that moment of some unforeseen move on the part of his friend; Peter was capable of wide but sure casts of intuition on occasion, especially where his affections were touched. But now Whitaker felt free, free to abandon himself to meditative despair. Cold horror crawled in his brain like a delirium—horror of himself, of his morbid flesh, of that moribund body unit to breathe the clean fire of life.

At about four o'clock the train stopped to drop the dining-car. Wholly swayed by blind impulse, Whitaker got up, took his hand-bag and left the car.

On the station platform he found himself pelted by a pouring rain. He impressed himself in the body of an aged and decrepit four-wheelbar, and as they rolled and crawled away, the cold windows wet unceasingly, and unceasingly the rain drummed the long roll on the roof.

In time they stopped before a rambling structure whose weather-boarded facade, white with flaking paint, bore the legend: "Commercial House." Whitaker carried his hand-bag up the steps and across the rain-swept veranda into a dim, cavernous hall. A cubicle fenced off in one corner formed the office proper. Whitaker waited by the desk, a gaunt, weary man, haggard by fear. There was in his mind a desolate picture of the room up-stairs when he—his soul: the imperishable essence of himself—should have finished with it.

At his elbow lay the hotel register, open at a page neatly headed with a date in red ink. Whitaker registered; but two-thirds of his name was all he entered; when it came to "Whitaker," his pen paused and passed on to write "Philadelphia" in the residence column.

The thought came to him that he must be careful to obliterate all laundry marks on his clothing.

In his own good time the clerk appeared. His welcome was an indifferent nod and a glance at the register which seemed unaccountably to moderate his apathy.

"Mr. Morton—uh?" he inquired.

Whitaker nodded without words.

The youth shrugged and scrawled a hieroglyph after the name. "Here, Sammy," he said to the boy—"Forty-three." To Whitaker he addressed the further remark: "Trunks?"

"No."

The youth seemed about to "expostulate, but checked when Whitaker placed one of his hundred-dollar notes on the counter.

"I think that'll cover my liability," he said with a significance misinterpreted by the other.

"I ain't got enough change—"

"That's all right; I'm in no hurry."

Dropped to His Knees Beside the Woman.

The eyes of the lout followed him as he ascended the stairs. On the second floor as Whitaker came into view, the boy thrust open the door, disappeared for an instant, and came out minus the bag. Whitaker gave him a coin in passing—an attention which he acknowledged by pulling the door to with a bang the moment the guest had entered the room. At the same time Whitaker became aware of a contretemps.

The room was of fair size, and it was tenanted by a woman in street dress. She stood by the washstand, with her back to the light, her attitude one of tense expectancy; hardly more than a silhouette of a figure moderately tall and very slight, almost angular in its slenderness. She had been holding a tumbler in one hand, but as Whitaker appeared this slipped from her fingers; there followed a thud and a sound of split liquid at her feet. She moved forward a pace or two, her hands fluttering out toward him, then stopped as though halted by a force implacable and overpowering.

"I thought," she quavered in a stricken voice—"I thought . . . you . . . my husband . . . Mr. Morton . . . the boy said . . ."

Then her knees buckled under her, and she plunged forward and fell with a thump that shook the walls.

"I'm sorry—I beg pardon," Whitaker stammered stupidly to ease that couldn't bear. He swore softly with exasperation, threw his hat to a chair and dropped to his knees beside the woman. It seemed as if the high gods were hardly playing fair, to throw a fainting woman on his hands just then, at a time when he was all preoccupied with his own absorbing tragedy.

Even while this thought was running through his mind, he was gathering the slight young body into his arms; and he found it really astonishingly easy to rise and bear her to the bed. Then turning to his hand-bag, he opened it and produced a small, leather-bound flask of brandy; a little of which would go far toward shattering her syncope, he fancied.

It did, in fact; a few drops between her half-parted lips, and she came to with disconcerting rapidity, opening dazed eyes in the middle of a spasm of coughing. He stepped back, stopping the flask.

"That's better," he said pleasantly. "Now lie still while I fetch you a drink of water."

As he turned to the washstand his foot struck the tumbler she had dropped. He stopped short, frowning down at the great, staring, wet, yellow stain on the dingy and threadbare carpet. Together with this discovery he got a whiff of an acrid-sweet effluvia that spelled "Oxalic Acid—Poison" as unmistakably as did the druggist's label on the empty packet on the washstand.

In another moment he was back at the bedside with a clean glass of water, which he offered to the girl's lips, passing his arm beneath her shoulders and lifting her head so that she might drink.

She emptied the glass thirstily. "Look here," he said almost roughly under the lash of this new fear—"you didn't really drink any of that stuff, did you?"

Her eyes met his with a look of negation clouded by fear and bewilderment. Then she turned her head away. Dragging a pillow beneath it, he let her down again.

"Good," he said in accents meant to be enheartening; "you'll be all right in a moment or two."

Her colorless lips moved in a whisper he had to bend close to distinguish.

"Please . . ."

"Yes?"

"Please don't . . . call anybody . . ."

"I won't. Don't worry."

The lids quivered down over her eyes, and her mouth was wrung with anguish. He stared, perplexed. He wanted to go away quickly, but couldn't gain his own consent to do so. She was in no condition to be left alone, this delicate and fragile child, defenceless and beset. A strange girl, to find in a plight like hers, he thought; not pretty, but quite unusual; delicate, sensitive, high-strung, bred to the finer things of life—this last was self-evident in the fine simplicity of her severely plain attire.

A variety of impressions crowded upon his perceptions in little more than a glance. For suddenly Nature took her in hand; she twisted upon her side, as if to escape his regard, and covered her face, her palms muffling deep tearing sobs while waves of pent-up misery racked her slender little body.

Whitaker moved softly away. . . . Once, pausing by the centre-table, he happened to look down. He saw a little heap of the hotel writing-paper, together with envelopes, a pen, a bottle of ink. Three of the envelopes were sealed and superscribed, and two were stamped. The unstamped letter was addressed to the Proprietor of the Commercial House.

Of the others, one was directed to a Mr. C. W. Morton in care of another person at a number on lower Sixth Avenue, New York; and from this Whitaker began to understand the singular manner of his introduction to the wrong room; there's no great difference between Morton and Morten, especially when written carelessly.

But the third letter caused his eyes to widen considerably. It bore the name of Thurlow Ladislav, Esq., and a Wall Street address.

Whitaker's mouth shaped a still-born whistle. He was recalling with surprising distinctness the fragment of dialogue he had overheard at his club the previous afternoon.

CHAPTER III

Mrs. Whitaker.

He lived through a long, bad quarter hour, his own tensed nerves twanging in sympathy with the girl's sobbing—like telegraph wires singing in a gale—his mind busy with many thoughts, strangely new and compelling, weaving a fresh complexion that indeed altogether the coloring of self-interest.

He mixed a weak draught of brandy and water and returned to the bedside. She made an effort to rise. The effect was quickly apparent in the color that came into her cheeks, faint but warm. After a moment she asked: "Please—who are you?"

"My name is Whitaker," he said—"Hugh Morten Whitaker. I didn't want to be known, so registered as Hugh Morten. They mistook me for your husband."

The girl swung to her feet. "I want to tell you something." She faced him bravely, though he refused the challenge of her tormented eyes. "Won't you listen?"

He crossed to a window, where he stood staring out. "I'd rather not," he said softly, "but if you prefer—"

"I do prefer," said the voice behind him. "I—I'm Mary Ladislav."

"Yes," said Whitaker.

"I . . . I ran away from home last week—five days ago—to get married to our chauffeur, Charles Morton . . ."

She stammered.

"Please don't go on, if it hurts," he begged without looking around.

"I've got to—I've got to get it over with . . . We were at Southampton, at my father's summer home—I mean, that's where I ran away from. He—Charley—drove me over to Greenport and I took the ferry there and came here to wait for him. He went to New York in the car, promising to join me here as soon as possible . . ."

"And he didn't come," Whitaker wound up for her, when she faltered. "How much money of yours did he take with him?"

There was a brief pause of astonishment. "What do you know about that?" she demanded.

"I know a good deal about that type of man," he said grimly.

What will Whitaker do with this frail girl on his hands? What would you do in such circumstances?

MAMMOTH LOAVES OF BREAD

Those Baked by French People Are From Four to Five, or at Times Even Six Feet in Length.

The biggest loaves of bread baked to be eaten are those made in France and Italy. In the case of the pipe bread of the latter country, the loaves are between two and three feet in length, and occasionally even longer; while the French people make their loaves in the shape of very long rolls of bread, ranging from four to five feet, and in a few instances even to six feet in length.

Bread in Paris is distributed almost exclusively by women. These go to the various bakehouses at 5:30 a. m. and spend about an hour brushing the long loaves with special brushes. When their loaf is cleaned of grit and dust the portouse de pain goes round to the customers.

Customers who live in flats have their loaves propped up against the door of their apartment. Shopkeepers, restaurateurs and other customers, who have entrances to their premises in the street, find their portion of the staff of life leaning against the front door when they take down the shutters. The wages of these bread carriers vary from 50 to 60 cents a day, their work being generally over at ten or twelve o'clock in the morning.

Tests of Patriotism.

Two million of boys, averaging but nineteen years of age, went into the Civil war to save the Union. And if you had asked them what the Union was few could have given a better answer than that it was the thing they were fighting for, an idea not to be expressed in words symbolized by a few stripes and stars.

Has there ever been a time when we did not stand the test? The time when the American spirit came nearest to falling was 150 years ago when New York would not join in signing the Declaration of Independence and Rhode Island refused to go long to ratify the Constitution. And when I read New York or Rhode Island papers criticizing some of our western states for lacking spirit because they are not yet convinced that we need military training for our boys, I just turn back to the old school history and ask a few disagreeable questions about the past.—Franklin K. Lane, Secretary of the Interior.

Black Snakes Benificent. In Burlington county, New Jersey, the farmers who, in the erroneous belief that they are a pest, have been killing black snakes, are being urged to conserve them as enemies of the rattlers, which have been unpleasantly numerous this year. The damage done by the non-poisonous reptiles is now recognized to be of slight account in comparison with the good they do. Not only will the black snake fight and best the rattler, but he earns more than his keep by keeping down other pests. It has taken man a long time to identify his friends of the lower orders, and even today many persecuted animals do not receive the credit that is due to them.—New York Sun.

Hiding Her Light. "I notice that your initials are A. B. But why do you always restrict your signature to your initials?" "My name is rather conspicuous," faltered the girl. "And what is your first name?" "Aurora." "That's a pretty name. Nothing to be ashamed of in that. And what is your middle name?" "Borealis."

Open and Shut. "Is there an opening here for a bright, energetic young man?" "Yes; an' close it as you go out."—Judge.

Did you read Roosevelt's Battle Creek speech and his letter in the Free Press.

Did you notice how severely he criticised the President for not having punished Germany and Mexico, and charged him with being a coward?

He says the Republican party is not satisfied with the peaceable manner in which the differences with foreign nations have been settled.

Are You In Favor of War?

Did it ever occur to you, that in all these crises with foreign powers, President Wilson had only two things to use -- his pen and ink or the boys? He made his selection, he saved the boys and used the other.

He has been able to settle every question honorably, justly and peaceably without bloodshed or loss of life.

If You Favor War

vote for Hughes and should he be elected and make Roosevelt his secretary of War, your fondest hopes in this respect may be fully realized.

But if you wish Peace and Prosperity to continue, vote for WOODROW WILSON, who will not plunge this country into war except in the last extremity.

CHARLES F. JUDSON

Seeks the Office of Probate Judge of This County.

The people of this part of the county are of the unanimous opinion that the Republicans have made no mistake in nominating Charles F. Judson for the important office of probate judge. He is a native of Livingston county and has spent his entire life in the township of Brighton with the exception of four years' residence in Howell while he was serving the county as treasurer. In the latter office he made many acquaintances throughout the county and his acquaintances are almost without exception his friends.

Mr. Judson is a farmer and always has been, yet he has had a wide experience in dealing with the public. For a number of years he was in the drug and grocery business in Brighton, for six years he was treasurer of his township and for nine years supervisor. This experience coupled with his work as a county official has equipped him with a knowledge of public affairs that will prove a big asset in his campaign, especially as his work has always proven highly satisfactory. He will appreciate anything his friends can do for him in his campaign.—Adv.

LOSS IN GRAIN STRAW AND CORN STOVER

HAY IN COMPETITION WITH STANDING FORAGE.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The waste in the United States of a vast quantity of feed available for cattle is one of the important factors in causing high meat prices, according to Part IV of a comprehensive survey of the meat situation in this country, recently completed by the department of agriculture. The failure to make use of this wasted material, says the report, has diminished profits from cattle feeding, has unnecessarily increased the cost of meat production, and has discouraged many farmers from properly rounding out their agricultural activities in carrying on cattle raising.

According to the report the loss in grain straw and corn stover amounts to more than $100,000,000 annually. Both of these products are disposed of most economically when fed to cattle in connection with some form of concentrated feed. Straw is especially valuable in carrying the breeding herd through the winter, in wintering stockers, and as a supplementary roughage for fattening cattle. Stover, too, is an excellent feed for wintering cattle, especially mature breeding cows. Nevertheless, in many sections of the country where these products are abundant, little attempt is made to take advantage of their value for these purposes.

Of an annual straw crop of approximately 120,000,000 tons, it is estimated that only two-thirds is put to its best use—live-stock production. Of the remainder a little more than one-half is sold or turned under and the rest—15 per cent of the total crop—is burned. Burning is practically an absolute waste and although plowing under contributes something to soil fertility, the benefit to the land is less than that which would be derived from the use of the straw to produce manure. "Of all systems of obtaining permanent soil fertility," says the report, "none is so practical or as easily available as that of feeding live stock." The average value of all kinds of straw is placed at about $5 a ton. In many sections, of course, no such price can be realized for it, and as a matter of fact only about 8 per cent of the crop actually is sold. The figure mentioned, however, may be taken as representing the value to the farmer of straw if he will use it properly in his farming operations as feed or bedding. In order to illustrate how this may be done the report gives three sample rations for wintering a breeding herd of beef cattle on straw combined with silage, shock corn, and cottonseed or linseed meal. Any one of these rations, it is said, will prove economical. They are as follows:

Rations for Cows.
Ration 1	Pounds.
Straw	10
Silage	20
Cottonseed meal or linseed meal	1 1/2
Ration 2
Straw	20
Cottonseed cake or oil cake	1
Ration 3
Straw	10
Shock corn	10
Cottonseed meal	1

In this connection it is pointed out also that feeding straw in the winter will insure under certain circumstances the full utilization of summer grass. In a number of western states it frequently happens that grass goes to waste because feeders are unwilling to pay the high prices asked for steers in the spring. With an abundance of straw on hand to lessen the cost of wintering, feeders can take advantage of the lower prices for stocker cattle in the fall to secure on reasonable terms at that time enough stock to pasture all the grass the following year.

The production of corn stover is about twice that of grain straw, amounting to approximately 245,000,000 tons a year. A larger percentage—81.5—of this is fed than of the straw but the waste is nevertheless astonishing. For this, poor methods of feeding are largely responsible. By far the most economical method of handling corn is by ensiling, but as a matter of fact only 8.1 per cent of the acreage was put in the silo in 1914; the year in which these investigations were made. About 11 per cent was cut for green feed and 81 per cent allowed to mature for grain. It is in the last portion of the acreage that the greatest waste occurs. Stripping the leaves from the stalks which are subsequently burned, removing the stalk above the top ear only, leaving the stalks to stand in the field until the loss of leaves and leaching have removed much of their fertilizing value, are all unthrifty methods. Furthermore, almost 4 per cent of the stover is burned, as though, instead of being a potential source of revenue, it was merely a nuisance to be got rid of as a preliminary to plowing. In some states the percentage of stover that is thus thrown away is as high as 7 or 8 per cent and the total loss to the country from the practice is estimated at nearly $15,000,000 a year.

To obtain satisfactory results from the feeding of farm roughages such as straw and stover, they must be combined with some form of concentrated feed. At the present time large quantities of such feed, in the form of cottonseed meal and cake, corn, molasses, peanuts and beans are exported for the use of European feeders. If the straw and stover that are now wasted were employed to feed more cattle, these concentrates could be consumed at home. The result would be a tremendous saving not only in the cost of producing beef, but in the cost of enriching the soil as well. In 1914, for example, about 1,000,000 tons of cottonseed meal—half the total production—were applied directly to the soil as fertilizer. If this had been fed to cattle instead, three-quarters of the fertilizing value would have been returned to the soil as manure. The loss of the other fourth would have been far more than counterbalanced by the profit on the meat produced economically by the meal and the necessary roughages. Much the same thing is true of the other oil meals.

Feed Chicks Separately.
Always feed the chicks separate from the fowls if you want to get the best results.

GOOD DEMAND FOR DRAFTERS

Every Farmer Should Have as Many Mares as He Can Keep—Start by Buying Weanlings.

Raising draft horses on the farm is going to be a profitable industry for many years to come. Every farmer should have as many draft mares as he can afford to keep.

A good way to start is by buying weanlings or yearling fillies. There is always a ready market for good drafters at $250 to $300 per head and they cost no more to raise than a horse that would sell for $100.

Time for Cutting Corn.

After the kernels of corn begin to get well glazed, corn may be cut any time. The stalks will have more nourishment in them and the grain itself will harden up all right.

Secure Purebred Sire.

Try to secure a purebred sire for your live stock. Better borrow the purchase price rather than continue to use a scrub or an ordinary grade.

CARING FOR LITTLE CHICKS

Something Wrong With Feed Where Youngsters Are Making Poor Growth—Sand Will Help.

Poor growth and lack of thrift among young chicks usually indicate something wrong with the feeding. A few grains of sand during the first few days after hatching help to prepare the stomach for food later, though the chick is still living on the yolk drawn into its body just before hatching.

Cover for Water Trough.

If a watering trough is worth anything it is worth a cover. If you were a horse or cow would you like to drink out of a trough where every kind of a creature could wash its feet and befoul the water?

Protect the Birds.

Put up a birdhouse. It does not need to be elaborate. It is only a summer home and so is appreciated more if it is rough and rustic. Have it face the east or south if possible.

WHITE PINE IS IN PERIL

Bilster Rust in the East Has Caused Heavy Ravages in Timber.

The present is a gloomy hour for the forestry enthusiasts, especially in the eastern states, where so much reliance is being placed upon the white pine as the tree par excellence for quickly rehabilitating our shabby woodlands. Last year's discoveries in Massachusetts of the dread bilster rust of Europe led other states to investigate within their borders. The active and well organized co-operative effort that is now being made by the federal department of agriculture and the officers of the several states where timber interests are involved indicates the seriousness with which they regard the situation. Since their work for the control of the disease began in the early summer it has become apparent that while Massachusetts is beyond question dangerously infected in certain sections, other states, whose officers regarded their territory as relatively free, are, in fact, no better off than we. All New England is on the fever map, and even Wisconsin and Minnesota investigators have lately turned up infection.

Hope for the successful control of the fungus is not forlorn, considering the plant pathologists who are conducting the campaign. The greatest need of the present hour, however, is a livelier interest on the part of our woodland owners.

Women Once Invalids

Now in Good Health Through Use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Say it is Household Necessity. Doctor Called it a Miracle.

All women ought to know the wonderful effects of taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound even on those who seem hopelessly ill. Here are three actual cases:

Harrisburg, Penn.—"When I was single I suffered a great deal from female weakness because my work compelled me to stand all day. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for that and was made stronger by its use. After I was married I took the Compound again for a female trouble and after three months I passed what the doctor called a growth. He said it was a miracle that it came away as one generally goes under the knife to have them removed. I never want to be without your Compound in the house."—Mrs. FRANK KROHL, 1642 Fulton St., Harrisburg, Penn.

Hardly Able to Move.

Albert Lea, Minn.—"For about a year I had sharp pains across my back and hips and was hardly able to move around the house. My head would ache and I was dizzy and had no appetite. After taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Liver Pills, I am feeling stronger than for years. I have a little boy eight months old and am doing my work all alone. I would not be without your remedies in the house as there are none like them."—Mrs. F. E. YOON, 611 Water St., Albert Lea, Minn.

Three Doctors Gave Her Up.

Pittsburg, Penn.—"Your medicine has helped me wonderfully. When I was a girl, 18 years old I was always sickly and delicate and suffered from irregularities. Three doctors gave me up and said I would go into consumption. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and with the third bottle began to feel better. I soon became regular and I got strong and shortly after I was married. Now I have two nice stout healthy children and am able to work hard every day."—Mrs. OLGA MARTINA DOMANNA, 34 Gardner St., Troy Hill, Pittsburg, Penn.

All women are invited to write to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., for special advice.—It will be confidential.

When Work Is Hard

That kidney troubles are so common is due to the strain put upon the kidneys in so many occupations, such as: Lifting and toiling on railroads, etc. Cramp and strain as in barbering, moulding, heavy lifting, etc. Exposure to changes of temperature in iron furnaces, refrigerators, etc. Dampness as in tanneries, quarries, mines, etc. Inhaling poisonous fumes in painting, printing and chemical shops. Doan's Kidney Pills are fine for strengthening weak kidneys.

A Michigan Case

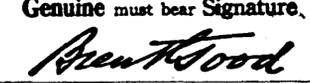

E. K. Chase, 111 S. Prospect St., Ypsilanti, Mich., says: "I suffered terribly from kidney trouble about six years ago. Some of my friends never expected me to get over it. My back was very painful and my limbs and feet were swollen. I was confined to the house for several months and was almost helpless. Doan's Kidney Pills cured me and I feel that they saved my life."

Mr. Voter To Wipe Out The Saloons You Must Vote Twice

Livingston County Voters who want this County to remain DRY and help make old Michigan a Dry State must bear in mind that they have a double duty to perform on election day, they Must Vote YES on the prohibition amendment and NO on the Fake Home Rule amendment submitted by the WETS and which aims at the perpetuation of the liquor traffic.

November 7th

It is just as important to vote against Home Rule or Home Ruin as it is to cast a ballot for prohibition.

If the so called Home Rule amendment passed Michigan would be as WET as it was before Van Buren voted dry in 1907.

So vote YES to Prohibition and NO to HOME RULE, and do your best for Molly and the Baby.

Coughs and Colds Not to Be Neglected

Anyone will realize the seriousness of neglecting a cold if he observes results of such neglect among his acquaintances. How often have you heard, "He caught cold, didn't do anything for it and it turned into"—then some dreaded disease is named.

Ordinary colds yield to prompt treatment at the beginning. That is why every family should be supplied with a reliable cough medicine—one that will heal raw and inflamed surfaces, loosen the phlegm, allay irritation, ease the hoarseness and stop the tickling sensation in the throat that does not permit one to sleep.

Foley's Honey and Tar Compound is invaluable for relief of coughs, colds, croup, whooping cough, tickling in throat, tightness or soreness, grippe or bronchial coughs. It contains no harmful ingredients. It is healing, soothing, efficient and pleasing.

When Umbrellas Were New.

The umbrella was described in early dictionaries as a portable bent house to carry in a person's hand to screen him from violent rain or heat. John Macdonald, a British footman who wrote the story of his life about 1778, said that he had a fine silk umbrella which he brought from Spain, but he could not get with any comfort use it, the people calling out, "Frenchman, why don't you get a coach?" The hackney coachmen were clamorous against their rival, but the footman says he persisted for three months till they took no further notice of this novelty. Foreigners began to use theirs and then the English. But in the east the umbrella was in use long before that time.—New York Sun.
