A Real Investment

If you do not invest you will certainly never get far along the road to money making. One good investment is worth a life time of labor.

Five thousand Americans are worth over a million dollars each because they were game enough to invest their savings in new things. Buy a few lots in the great sulphur fields and share in the profits as the sulphur is mined.

Several well known men in Lapeer have bought these lots and they are men of judgement, too. We gladly recommend the company and its high grade officers. We have investigated it and predict splendid returns from this ideal investment. - Lapeer County Press.

Detroit Free Press Has Change of Heart

In its last Saturday's issue it gives the following in its editorials:

The state ought to have a straight-out clean-cut test of its people's inhabitants on the prohibition issue. It is one of the vital questions of the time, in the whole world and Michigan could pass upon it intelligently, specifically and without leaving room for misunderstanding. The introduction of the Home Rule amendment muddles a situation that ought to be absolutely clear. It should not have been put on the ballot.

Whatever position its readers may individually take on the prohibition subject, The Free Press would advise any who care to know its views that the Home Rule amendment deserves a NO vote. Even those who intend to vote against prohibition should oppose this other amendment, we think, for it seems to us loaded with dangers that can hardly help being very grave if it ever goes into operation.

The HOME BEAUTIFUL

Flowers and Shrubbery

Their Care and Cultivation

A Beautiful Flower Garden.

POINTS IN POTTING PLANTS

By EVA RYMAN-GAILLARD.

Plants grown for beauty of their foliage should be given rather large pots, holding plenty of rich soil, while those grown for blossoms should be in smaller ones.

Root-bound plants seem to produce more and finer blossoms, but this should not be construed to mean keeping them so tightly root-bound that they starve to death.

When the pot is full of roots shift the plant to one an inch or two larger, and fill the space with good soil.

Never fill a pot so full of soil that the water runs off the top instead of settling into the soil. Leave a space vacant in the top of the pot, an inch or more, according to the size of the pot and the amount of water needed by the plant.

For plants having hard, woody stems, the soil may be level on the surface, and no harm is done as the water standing around the stem will not injure it, but for soft, crown-centered plants like the primrose, the soil should be higher in the center than at the edge.

It is well, too, to avoid pouring water into the crown of the plant, as the manner in which the leaves come up makes them drain the water down into the crown of the plant, and produce what is known as "crown-rot," which kills all buds which form.

Much is said of using "thumb pots" in which to root cuttings, but (after rooting hundreds) I prefer three-inch pots to the smaller ones.

Or, you can heap the earth against it, on the side toward which you propose to bend it, and over this the canes can be bent. I prefer this method because it does not disturb the roots. The earth should not be as high where it touches the plant as it is a few inches from it.

The object is to form a support of soil which will enable you to curve the bushes over it, thus avoiding the sharp sudden bends which do so much injury to one's plants.

Lay all the bushes in one direction, placing the stalks close together. By doing this, much covering can be saved.

When the plants are laid down, place pieces of sod on them to hold them in place. If this is not done, they will be sure to spring back to an upright position before you get them covered.

Cover with dry earth to the depth of four inches. If leaves are used, it will be necessary to make a little pen to confine the leaves.

After covering the bushes with soil or leaves provide a second covering of boards, or something that will shed rain. If water is allowed to settle in to the soil above the bushes, and remain there, they will be greatly injured by it. One must plan to keep the covering as dry as possible. This is of the greatest importance. If the ground is not well drained, make little ditches between your plants in the fall, for surplus to run into.

If tiny seedlings are to be potted off, then the thumb pot may be best for the first transplanting, but even here I would use small, shallow boxes for "flats" until the second or third transplanting would bring the plants up to where they are ready for the three-inch pots, or the open ground.

The commercial grower who must economize in space, and gives constant attention to the plants, has use for the smallest pots, but they are a nuisance to the average grower of plants.

COLD FRAMES FOR WINTERING PLANTS

By L. M. BENNINGTON.

Successful gardening depends on early production. Cold frame plants are more certain to live than hotbed plants and give a larger per cent of good stuff than do the more tender hotbed plants.

To construct one use two frames instead of one. The larger frame is four and one-half feet by seven and one-half feet and one foot deep. The inner one is one foot smaller each way and only eight inches deep.

The space all around the inner frame, six inches wide, is filled with dry sawdust well packed down.

The covering for the inner frame is a glass-covered sash made to fit quite close to the frame to exclude the air.

The outer frame is covered with an oiled canvassed frame so as to be waterproof.

A strip of carpet, or other good material, is kept over the inner sash in severe weather.

We prefer shallow frames to keep the plants from growing spindling.

We choose a location free from cold winds and where a good exposure to the sun can be had.

In such a frame there are 3,276 square inches, and allowing three square inches to the plant, one can have over 1,000 plants per frame.

Good rich soil is used and the under soil is made quite loose to give a chance for root growth. It is best to grow the plants in the open and transplant on the approach of severe weather.

Frames of a larger size are not easily handled, nor can the same protection be given them. On mild days we give light to the plants by removing the outer sash, and if safe we raise the inner sash to admit fresh air. These frames are not expensive where one can do his own work and they add a good per cent to the investment.

GARDEN NOTES

Tuberous begonias that have been growing in the garden should be carefully dug and dried. Withhold water from those growing in pots and cover the tubers with dry sand when the tops disappear and set them away in a room free from frost.

Begonias do best in good rich loam, a little sand, a small quantity of cow manure and a little powdered charcoal thoroughly mixed.

Amaryllis bulbs received in the autumn should be placed where they will be always slightly moist and warm; do not pot up the bulbs before the flower buds appear. When they are first potted, give them little water and promote growth by giving moderate bottom heat. As the plants progress increase the supply of water. The proper soil is turfy loam well enriched with rotten manure.

USE OF BLUEGRASS

Methods for Keeping Grazing Areas in Condition.

LOCATION FOR SHADE TREES

No System of Agriculture Maintains Fertility of Soil Better Than Grazing—Prepare Seedbed for Permanent Sod.

The shade trees or brush in a pasture should be left only on the high ground and not, as is the usual custom, along the banks of streams in the lowest part of the grazing tracts. The location of the shade has a direct bearing on the fertility of the pasture land, it has been found by studies by specialists of the United States department of agriculture, reported in a recently published bulletin, "The Grazing Industry of the Bluegrass Region." This is because pastured cattle spend much of their time under shade, and a considerable portion of the manure is dropped at such times. If the shade is on high ground, the fertility is spread by being washed downhill. When the trees are along streams, however, most of the fertility contributed by the manure deposited in the shade is lost.

Where animals are kept continually on the pastures, there is no system of agriculture. Investigations disclosed, that maintains the fertility of the soil better than grazing. Where beef cattle or sheep are grazed, all of the resulting manure is left on the pastures, and the land is further enriched if the animals are given additional feed during winter. This is usually not the case on dairy farms, where the cattle spend much of the time in yards or stables. This return of the manure directly to the soil is particularly important in the grazing regions where the profits are not sufficiently large to justify the liberal use of commercial fertilizers on pasture land. The effect of manure on bluegrass is shown by the fact that feeding hay or corn-fodder on the poorest spots of a pasture is a very effective means of improving the stand of grass. At the same time the increasing use of silage and, in some parts, dry-feeding methods during the winter, may make it necessary for the grazer to take special measures for maintaining his pasture.

Getting a Sod.

While the ordinary practice is to clear additions to the pasture fields and allow the bluegrass to come in itself, this is a slow process. This method takes from three to four years to get a good stand. Where the land is level enough to plow and prepare a seedbed, it is possible to permit much more grazing the first two or three years and to get a permanent sod more quickly by seeding a mixture of grasses, such as orchard grass, red top, red or alsike clover, tall oatgrass or timothy, along with the blue grass. Bluegrass and white clover will eventually crowd out most of the other grasses, although orchard grass will persist for many years, thereby adding to the early spring and late fall grazing.

The Virginia agricultural experiment station has demonstrated that fairly close grazing will keep a bluegrass sod in better condition than light grazing, as the latter practice allows the grass and weeds an opportunity to seed. Cleaning up a field at the close of the grazing period seems to have a similar effect. The trampling of the field by stock, unless the land is so wet that it cuts up badly, is also beneficial. It must be remembered that the soil of an old turf tends to become too loose. In one case in England it was found that rolling the old pasture fields was the most effective method of eradicating moss.

Very little labor is necessary to keep a good pasture in first-class condition.

RUIN POTATOES IN PLANTING

Seed Put in Ground Too Shallow Does Not Give Good Returns—Tubers Are Not Vigorous.

Potatoes, if planted shallow, take longer to mature, and are not as vigorous, and do not give as big returns per hill as if set deep enough in the soil. The foliage is not as dense, or as well colored, and consequently the plant is not able to withstand drought or recover from insect ravages.

DORMANT SPRAYING IS BEST

Fruit and Shade Trees Must Not Be Overlooked in Fall and Winter—Keep Bugs Away.

Spraying is an important consideration in the dormant months. Look well to it that you are not neglecting your fruit and shade trees, and that spring and summer do not come to find trees and shrubbery half destroyed by scale and other pests.

Let your "ounce of prevention" be dissolved into a good liquid and spray dition. All loose stones and rubbish that are removed give that much more space for grass plants to grow. All brush or trees not needed for shade or other purposes should be cut or deadened by girdling.

In addition to the above suggestions, all tall-growing weeds should be mown at least once a year, preferably just before they form seed. It is a common practice in central Kentucky and in some other sections of the bluegrass region to mow the weeds. This is done with a mowing machine if the fields are sufficiently smooth; otherwise, by a man with a scythe. The difference in the appearance of fields in localities where weed mowing is practiced and where it is not is very striking. Mowing will usually hold in check most of the common weeds, such as ragweed, oxeye daisy, thistles, and briars. A few sheep on cattle pastures have been found very efficient in keeping down many troublesome weeds.

Danger of Hawkweed.

There recently has been introduced into southwestern Virginia a weed that gives promise of being more damaging to pastures than anything that has heretofore appeared. It is the field hawkweed (Hieracium pratense), a low-growing plant, somewhat resembling narrow-leaved plantain, but the stems and leaves are hairy. It spreads by underground stems and forms a dense mat, which crowds out most other plants. The flowers are bright yellow, borne on naked, upright stalks 8 to 20 inches high. This weed, along with other closely related species, has already damaged the pastures of New York and New England greatly.

Hawkweed may be destroyed by chopping it out with a hoe or mattock. If this method is used, care should be exercised to get all the rootstocks in the upper inch or two of the soil and destroy them. Another method, which seems to be about the best that can be suggested at the present time, is to spray the plants on a clear day with a solution of ordinary salt. Three pounds of salt to one gallon of water is the proportion that has given the best results. Every patch treated should be inspected occasionally, as it may require two or three sprayings to kill the hawkweed. If the weed is in small patches, which is the way it usually starts, a man equipped with a knapsack sprayer can cover a large area in a day. The spraying may be done at any time, but it is much easier to find the plant when it is in bloom. The showy yellow flowers are very conspicuous and may be seen and recognized for a considerable distance.

Profits From Bluegrass Grazing.

The investigators studied carefully the industry in a number of localities to determine, if possible, the value of blue grass pasture when grazed to cattle. In 22 pastures studied, they found that the yearly returns per acre ranged from $7.30 to $24.03. From these figures, however, had to be deducted the cost of winter feeding, in which was included roughage produced on the farm, figured at a fair price. The net returns for the pasture varied from $2.10 to $14.08 an acre, with an average of $3.60. This return per acre of pasture must pay the taxes, insurance, fencing, and labor of caring for the pastures and stock, and not much is left as interest on the investment. At the prevailing prices of land, the average bluegrass farmer, according to the data obtained from these farmers, does not make over 3 or 4 per cent on his investment. The average rental price per acre for pasture land in this region is $3 an acre for fairly good land to $5 for the best. This is said to be a safe and attractive business to men with considerable capital.

Where sheep are grazed, the returns range from $2.90 to $12.66 per acre in six pastures studied, and the total outlay for wintering seldom exceeds $1 a head, and usually averages 75 cents. It is pointed out, however, that the chief drawbacks of the sheep industry of the bluegrass region are dogs, internal parasites, such as stomach worms, nodular disease, etc.

trees and bushes around your lawn and garden. At the same time do not forget that your neighbor's carelessness in such matters may negate everything you have done, for no fence ever kept off insects, scale or blight. It will pay you to talk over the matter with Mr. Neighbor, for there is little doubt of his co-operation in your efforts to preserve the fruits and the natural adornment of your yards.

SEVERAL RATES OF SEEDING

Ohio Experiment Station Finds Greatest Yield of Grain Secured From Eight Pecks to Acre.

Experiments conducted by the Ohio experiment station during 17 years and including eight different rates of seeding with ten varieties of wheat show that eight pecks to the acre gives the greatest net yield of grain. Figures given in the station's bulletin point in general to a gradual increase in yield from the use of three pecks to nine pecks per acre, but seeding more than eight pecks to the acre has not paid for the extra seed.

HELP FOR WORKING WOMEN

Some Have to Keep on Until They Almost Drop. How Mrs. Conley Got Help.

Here is a letter from a woman who had to work, but was too weak and suffered too much to continue. How she regained health:—

Frankfort, Ky.—"I suffered so much with female weakness that I could not do my own work, had to hire it done. I heard so much about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound that I tried it. I took three bottles and I found it to be all you claim. Now I feel as well as ever I did and am able to do all my own work again. I recommend it to any woman suffering from female weakness. You may publish my letter if you wish."—Mrs. JAMES CONLEY, 516 St. Clair St., Frankfort, Ky.

No woman suffering from any form of female troubles should lose hope until she has given Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a fair trial. This famous remedy, the medicinal ingredients of which are derived from native roots and herbs, has for forty years proved to be a most valuable tonic and invigorator of the female organism. All women are invited to write to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., for special advice,—it will be confidential.

A Massacre.
I saw it hobbling down a flight of steps, slashed and torn to shreds. Barely enough was left to hold the shreds together. It was a pitiful sight. My curiosity was aroused.
"What are you?" I asked, "and how came you in such horrible condition?"

Mrs. Newcomb—Good morning. Is this Miss Wise's private academy?
Mrs. Binks (hotly)—No, it is not!
This is a private house, and these are my own children.

Mrs. Newcomb, (hastily)—Why, I thought it must be a school, because the children looked so educated and scholarly and—refined, you know.

Mrs. Binks (genially)—Oh, yes, of course. Come in and sit down. Lucy,

MR. VOTER

Within a few days you must make your decision as to how you will discharge your duty as an American Citizen in casting your ballot this year. Republican spell-binders and newspapers say, "We need a change."

A CHANGE OF WHAT?

This country is at peace. Its sons are not dying in mortal combat. Its treasury is not being poured out in wasteful expenditure of blood and tears.

Shall We Change Peace for War?

This country is marvellously prosperous. Its supply of gold is unprecedented and has now become the creditor nation of the world.

Shall we change that?

Employment is at the fullest tide in our history. Wages never so high and jobs at every hand. Products of farm and factory at highest prices known and in demand everywhere.

Shall we change that?

We are not engaged in crushing an embarrassed and bankrupt neighbor to the south of us at the cost of treasure and lives. Instead we are gaining the respect and confidence of every Latin-speaking nation of America by keeping our hands off Mexico.

Shall we change that?

This Nation is happy, contented, busy pursuing the paths of peace. We will not change. We will apply the slogan—

Dr. Johnson's Cudgel.
The reign of George II. was a great fighting time. Every man who went abroad knew that he might have to fight to defend himself against footpad or bully. Most men carried a stout stick. When Dr. Johnson heard that a man had threatened to horsewhip him he ordered a thick cudgel and was easy in his mind. There were no police, and therefore a man had to fight.

Thousands of children have worms that sap their vitality and make them listless and irritable. Kickapoo Worm Killer kills and removes the worms and has a tonic effect on the system. Does your child eat spasmodically? Cry out in sleep or grind its teeth. These are symptoms of worms and you should find relief for them at once. Kickapoo Worm Killer is a pleasant remedy. At your Drug-gist, 25c.

DON W. VAN WINKLE

Prosecuting Attorney

THE PROSECUTING ATTORNEY

The office of Prosecuting Attorney is one to which only attorneys are eligible. For years in Livingston County it has been the young man's office. Each has held it two terms and then stepped aside. The custom has been so closely followed that many have gained the idea more than two terms are prohibited by law, the same as the Sheriff's office. Such however is not the case. But isn't the custom a good one? One that might well be followed. Isn't it to the advantage of the county, as well as to the person, to encourage the young man who has fitted himself for the office, by giving him the position.

The Republican candidate has held the office for two terms. All told he has had sixteen years of county office. For his services as such officer, he has been paid about $24,000.00. Surely he has had his share.

Considerable has been said and written about the matter of expense to the county in connection with this office. Comparisons of expenses have been made. But comparisons with past years do not show that Don VanWinkle cannot conduct the office as economically as it has ever been conducted. He does not make light of the matter of expense. It is most important. Don VanWinkle pledges himself to see to it that the office of Prosecuting Attorney is conducted as cheaply as it ever has been. To see that not a dollar of public money is wasted.

When you go to the polls Nov. 7th an X in front of the name of Don VanWinkle will be a vote for a man who wants the office and will devote his best efforts to its duties and continue the custom in Livingston County of giving the office to a man young in the profession.

Chas. F. Judson
For Probate Judge

Should the county be searched a better man for Judge of Probate could not be found. Both by nature and by training he is peculiarly fitted for the position. In dealing with widows and orphans, a man with a big sympathetic heart and of high honor and integrity is necessary. Besides a large business training is affable and pleasant, with a keen sense of right between man and man. For some years prominent druggist and business man of Brighton—County Treasurer four years—Supervisor of his township nine years—Administrator of many estates—Always looked up to and trusted by the people of his village and of the County for his knowledge and judgement—of broad intelligence—has operated a farm in connection with his other business as a rule.

You will never regret a vote for Mr. Judson.

Forget Your Aches

Stiff knees, aching limbs lame back make life a burden. If you suffer from rheumatism, gout, lumbago, neuralgia, get a bottle of Sloan's Liniment, the universal remedy for pain. Easy to apply; it penetrates without rubbing and soothes the tender flesh. Cleaner and more effective than many ointments or poultices. For strains or sprains, sore muscles or wrenched ligaments resulting from strenuous exercise, Sloan's Liniment gives quick relief. Keep it on hand for emergencies. At your Druggist, 25c.

A Clogged System Must Be Cleared
You will find Dr. King's New Life Pills a gentle yet effective laxative for removing impurities from the system. Accumulated waste poisons the blood; dizziness, biliousness and pimply, muddy complexion are the distressing effects. A dose of Dr. King's New Life Pills tonight will assure you a free, full bowel movement in the morning. At your Druggist, 25c.

Put a quarter of a package of gelatin into half a cupful of raspberry juice and let it lie until it has softened. Then dissolve and add the juice of half a lemon, half a cupful of granulated sugar and a cupful of raspberry juice. Put this mixture in a bowl and put the bowl in ice water. While in this condition stir until they begin to set, then fold in a cupful and a half of rich cream that has been beaten until very stiff. Place in a mold and chill. Serve with whipped cream.

Raspberry Blanc Mange.—Soak one-half a box of gelatin in one quart of milk for an hour. Place it on the fire and stir often. Beat the yolk of an egg light with a cupful of sugar, stir into the scalding milk and heat until it begins to thicken, but do not allow it to boil, for this will make it curdle. Remove it from the fire, and when it is nearly cold stir in some stewed red raspberries without the juice; then pour into molds wet in cold water and set away to cool. Serve with cream and sugar and lady fingers.

Raspberry Mousse.—Add one-half cupful of powdered sugar and one and one-half cupful of crushed raspberries to three cupfuls of cream whipped stiff. Mix carefully and pour into a mold. Cover and bind the seam with a strip of muslin or cheesecloth which has been dipped into melted fat or paraffin. Pack in a tub of crushed ice and salt, allowing about a cupful of salt to every three cupfuls of ice and let stand for about three hours. When properly frozen this should be solid on the outside, but creamy in the center.

Raspberry Jelly.—Press a banana through a sieve, add the juice of a lemon, one-half cupful of sugar and the white of one egg well beaten. Mix all together until very light and set in a cool place. Dissolve one package of raspberry gelatin in boiling water and mold in a flat pan. Cut into cubes and serve in individual glasses with the banana mixture as a substitute for whipped cream. This will serve six persons.

“THREE C'S” OF MILK CARE.
Dairy specialists have evolved a simple little formula for the care of milk in the home, and the same formula will apply to keeping milk anywhere. It is the rule of the “Three C's,” the “C's” standing for “Clean” and “Cold” and “Covered.” Excellent rules for the dairyman everywhere, even though they were written with the consumer of the milk in mind. That first rule should be one of the cowkeeper's articles of faith, the second one means a well filled icehouse for the farm, and the third and last means care and forethought.—Farm Progress.

What He Lacked.

“Now,” said the pert salesman sarcastically as he waited to put back the rolls of calico, “can't you think of something else I could show you?”
“Yes,” replied the customer, “but I don't think you've got it.”
“What is it?”
“More courtesy!” was the withering reply.—Exchange.

Richard K. Wigglesworth

Republican Nominee for County Drain Com missioner

Was born in Cohoctah Township where he has lived all his life, and Cohoctah Township has had as much ditch and dredge work, if not more than any township in the County. Mr. Wigglesworth helped to construct the big Cohoctah and Conway Union Drains and also the Shawassee County Drain, which were the largest drains ever constructed in the County. In addition to this experience he has been highway commissioner of his Township for three years during which time, because of the many drains in Cohoctah he has had considerable ditch work. He has held other offices of trust such as school officer for many years, is one of the reliable and substantial farmers and business men of the County and a man of good habits, of excellent judgment and reputation, and well thought of in the community in which he lives. No mistake will be made in voting for him on Nov. 7th.

MICHIGAN CAPITOL CLERKS ASK RAISE

Next Legislature Will Be Requested to Grant Increase.

MAXIMUM PAY NOW $1,000

Standard Established Twenty-Five Years Ago—State Officials Are in Favor of Paying Higher Salaries.

Lansing.—State officials are planning to ask the next legislature to increase the pay of the capitol clerks.

The maximum pay of a capitol clerk is $1,000 a year. This standard was established 25 years ago, and the employees feel that salaries should be advanced to meet the increased cost of living.

Auditor General Fuller believes that the maximum should be $1,000 a year, as he says more efficient help could be obtained by paying more money, but he also thinks the annual vacations should be shortened.

The plan of the capitol employees to get a boost in salary from the next legislature received a boost when Auditor General O. B. Fuller appeared before a mass meeting of the employees and said he would support their proposed bill. The action of Mr. Fuller probably means that every department head will fall in line behind the plan.

May Take Names Off Ticket.

Telegraphic orders sent out by John S. Smith of Detroit, chairman of the National Progressive party, to county clerks to take the names of that party's candidates off the ticket for the coming election have been causing trouble.

From all sections of the state came requests from county clerks for a decision as to what they should do. In some instances, notably that of Wayne county, the state authorities were informed that his request would not be complied with. Judge Durfee of the Wayne county election commission was reported as having flatly refused to touch the ballot as it had been certified to his commission.

Attorney General Fellows, when asked by Secretary of State Vaughan for a ruling, said that the clerks and election boards should pay attention to Mr. Smith's request. He went further and said that in case the taking off of the names as suggested by Mr. Smith cleaned up the ticket there was no use of putting the Progressive party column on the ticket at all.

Already the proofs of the two ballots from Genesee and Menominee counties have reached Lansing, without any column for the Progressives.

The only written ruling which the attorney general's department has ever made has to do with the primaries, Washington Gardner of Albion, a candidate for the Republican gubernatorial nomination in 1914, asked that his name be taken off the ballot. Secretary of State Martindale was advised to take it off.

Get No Guard Appropriation.

Michigan will benefit to the extent of $400 in the distribution of money by the war department for equipment and supplies for the National Guard. It was announced at Washington, D. C., that $1,000,000 was available and was being paid.

Michigan will not even see the $400 which is placed to the credit of the Michigan National Guard in Washington and is drawn against for the printing of the general and special orders which come to each unit of the state guard.

All of the Michigan National Guard is in the United States service and consequently Michigan has no National Guard to supply.

Much New Road to Be Built.

State Highway Commissioner Rogers and his assistants are hard at work now upon plans for next year and say the program will be the greatest the state has ever attempted.

It is believed that by the end of next summer, when most of the outdoor work has to be stopped, there will be hundreds of miles more of good roads in Michigan than there are now.

The department is now carrying more employees than ever before, because of the additional work, which acts of the legislature have imposed upon it. The last legislature placed upon the commissioner and the railroad commission the authority to pass upon every new railroad and trolley road crossing.

Just how much road will be built next year has not been decided, but with the addition of the federal government money, amounting to approximately $2,000,000, and available July 1, 1917, it is expected that many of the roads which now exist in the "legis-tive trunk lines" will be filled up. An unexpended balance of $748,778.77 remained to the credit of the department on October 1, 1916.

Fail to Agree on Warden.

Despite the fact that the board of control of Jackson prison was in session for several hours with Governor Ferris, no agreement has been reached as to the naming of a successor to Warden Nathan F. Simpson.

At the conference no actual vote was taken. There was lack of unanimity in sentiment.

Before the session there were three known candidates, two of whom, it is understood, have made actual application. The three were Dr. James E. Bradley of Eaton Rapids, defeated by former Governor Warner for the Republican gubernatorial nomination in 1908; Sheriff Ralph W. Chapman of Kalamazoo county, and Marl T. Murray, secretary of the state board of charities.

Governor Ferris, although having no voice in the actual deliberation of the board, because he is only an ex-officio member, has the veto power, on the selection. The appointment must be with his consent. The governor openly says that of the men being considered, he favors Murray.

Captions May Be Changed.

Although it is hardly considered "good form," county election boards may place their own captions on the two liquor amendments to the constitution to be voted on November 7.

In other words, there is nothing to stop the county boards from replacing the caption suggested by the secretary of state with another of their own making. There is nothing in the law to stop them and there is information at hand that changes are going to be made in several instances.

Crawford county, for instance, is considering placing above the prohibition amendment, the words, "Prohibition Amendment," and over the other, "Home Rule Amendment" both in large type, so that the voter can make no mistake. The Crawford county authorities put the matter up to Secretary Vaughn and he had to reply that the change was clearly within the province of the local board.

A delegation of dyes headed by Senator Henry Straight of Coldwater, visited Mr. Vaughn and put the proposition to him personally. They have plans to change the heading.

The peculiar part of it lies in the fact that under the law, while the secretary of state is bound to certify to the county boards the wording of the amendments as proposed, he can only suggest captions. The suggestions which Mr. Vaughn made were practically the titles of the amendments, if such were complied. Both captions were two and three lines in length.

Road Bonds Not Saleable.

The Covert road law, passed by the 1915 legislature, and providing for the construction of good roads by small territories, with proportional assessment of cost as is done in cases of drains, promises to come in for discussion in the 1917 legislature.

State Highway Commissioner Rogers found some time ago that some very drastic change would be necessary because the bonds issued under it were not marketable. The average bond-buying house wants county bonds, that is bonds issued by a county as a unit. The Covert-law road bonds, however, are likely to take in much less than an entire county, and in some cases less than a township.

Troops Get Dangerous Detail.

El Paso, Tex.—Sufficient work to utilize the time of Michigan troops for the next month was laid out when an order was received at brigade headquarters that two companies from the Thirty-second regiment should begin guard duty on the island, a tract of land which occupies the center of the old bed of the Rio Grande and near the quarters of the Thirty-first and Thirty-second.

Two companies or necessary parts thereof to guard the outposts will cover the station daily. In this way each regiment will consume from seven to nine days in its work. The guard consists of 60 privates, 2 commissioned officers, 10 noncommissioned officers and 3 supernumeraries. The Thirty-third will follow the Thirty-second and the Thirty-first will come last.

The stretch of territory to be guarded is five miles long and has formerly been guarded by Massachusetts troops. It is considered one of the most dangerous posts in the district and from the Mexican side many shots have been fired in the last three months. Owing to the renewing of ugliness of the Mexicans it is expected the Michigan boys will have their hands full.

While this order indicates there is no intention of returning the Michigan troops soon it was stated at brigade headquarters there is nothing to prevent a changed order. A recent order to clear all paper work to date has been construed by many as forecasting northern movement. But brigade headquarters expressed the opinion this is only a matter of business, the same as in civilian life, and has no significance.

KING OF GREECE SHIFTS TROOPS

TROOP TO BE REMOVED FROM THE REAR OF THE ALLIES IN MACEDONIA.

TRANSFER TO BEGIN SHORTLY

Concession Comes After the King Had Refused to Grant it to the French Military Attache.

Athens.—King Constantine, it is officially announced, has offered to remove what the Allies in Macedonia looked upon as a menace in their rear. He has ordered the transfer of the Third and Fourth army corps from Thessaly, and the Sixteenth from the Epirus to the Peloponnesus, the southern Greek peninsula. The transfer is to begin on November 3. There will be left behind only enough men to maintain order. His concession comes after the king had refused to grant it on the insistence—almost the order—of the French military attache. It followed a recent series of visits by allied ministers to the royal palace. It is significance, it is believed here, is that King Constantine will soon be found co-operating with the Allies.

TWO GET CARNEGIE MEDALS

William T. Best and Mrs. Olive M. Cooper Get Bronze Medals in Michigan.

Pittsburgh.—The Carnegie hero fund commission rewarded 52 acts of heroism by awarding six silver and 46 bronze medals.

Twelve of the heroes lost their lives and the dependents of six of these were awarded pensions totaling $1,120 a year, and the dependents of three others were awarded $2,000 to be applied to various purposes. Two awards went to people in Michigan and one award went to an Indiana man for heroism in Michigan, as follows:

William T. Best, 22 years old, a hostler of 1605 Lynn street, Owosso, Mich., saved Garney P. Lamphere, 3 years old, from burning January 5, 1915.

Mrs. Olive M. J. Cooper of Battle Creek, Mich., was awarded a bronze medal for saving Wilhelmina Esther, Benjamin and Helen Bauer, aged 20, 9, 6 and 16 years respectively, from drowning at Spencerville, Ind., July 4, 1911.

Floyd L. Young, of Laporte, Ind., was awarded a bronze medal. Young, 23 years old, student in the University of Michigan, attempted to save Harold F. Korn, aged 21, student, from drowning, at Ann Arbor, Mich., Jan. 7, 1916.

POLICE LOCATE TWO BODIES

Two Flint Men Die Suddenly; One from Apoplexy and the Other from Pneumonia.

Flint.—The bodies of two Flint men who died suddenly were found by the police. Edward O. Faulk, 55, watchman was found dead on the second floor of the Paterson automobile factory. His death is believed to have been caused by apoplexy.

Prying the door open to a room in the Eagle hotel, the police found the body of Joseph Covey, 45, in bed. He had been ill of pneumonia only a few hours and had locked the door to his room.

CONVICT SCALES JAIL WALL

New Guard Looks on While Prisoner Makes Getaway.

Jackson.—William Bos, 23 years old, sentenced from Grand Rapids for burglary, escaped from Jackson prison by scaling the walls of the west cell block while a newly appointed guard looked on. The guard was armed with a magazine rifle. When he saw the man scaling the wall he sent word to the deputy warden that he "believed a man was escaping."

ITEMS OF STATE INTEREST

Commission men show no hesitancy in admitting the price of produce in Detroit is higher than in any other large city in the United States. Comparative price lists show that many vegetable products have been advanced in price from 10¢ to 60¢ per cent since last year. Local conditions are held mostly responsible, although the war and poor crops are contributing factors.

CARRANZA TO RUN FOR PRESIDENT OF MEXICO

GENERAL CARRANZA.

Mexico City.—Gen. Carranza formally announced his candidacy for the presidency in response to a manifesto of the new Constitutionalist-Liberal party, which offered him its loyalty and support. Gen. Carranza says that if the people make him president he will obey and cause to be obeyed the laws under the constitution. Gens. Gonzales and Obregon took the oath of loyalty to Gen. Carranza.

WEATHER CHIEF IS DEAD

Professor Cleveland Abbe, Father of Weather Bureau, Dies After a Year of Illness.

Washington.—Prof. Cleveland Abbe, known as "the father of the weather bureau," died after an illness of a year. The present-day system of daily weather forecasts, with which every portion of the United States, however remote, is now thoroughly familiar, is the outgrowth of a weather-prediction service which Cleveland Abbe established locally in Cincinnati, O., when he was the director of the observatory there in 1869.

The son of a New York merchant, and born Dec. 3, 1838, Cleveland Abbe became an instructor in mathematics and astronomy at the University of Michigan in 1860 and during the Civil war period, he was an aide at Cambridge, Mass., to Dr. B. A. Gould, then astronomer of the United States coast survey. The years 1865-66 he spent in Russia at the Imperial Observatory as guest of the resident staff of observers there, and on his return to the United States he was chosen director of the Cincinnati observatory.

MICHIGAN GUARD NOTES

An order was issued by Major Smith to all island guards to pick up all persons attempting to cross into Mexico, either with or without passes.

Through Lieutenant Phillips, Major Glichrist, division United States surgeon, has complimented General Kirk on the improved sanitary condition in camp since his arrival.

Majors Dumas and Roehl, of the Thirty-first, spent four hours burning $20,000 worth of used exchange checks. The exchange is now in the best condition of its existence. More than $500 remains in the treasury to be divided among the companies.

Ohio cavalry was also hurried out for border duty near Yalet. The Thirty-third Michigan is expecting orders to go out and it is possible, if the tightening process continues, the other Michigan regiments may get more outside duty.

Every ford, bridge and trail along the international border in this patrol district is being guarded by additional United States troops in compliance with Secretary of War Baker's warning to border commanders to be prepared for another Mexican bandit raid on the border.

Gen. John P. Kirk, commanding the Michigan brigade, and his staff, escaped without injury when the general's automobile was wrecked in a collision. The party was returning from Yaleta where they had observed the military maneuvers. The machine was struck by another motor car at a crossing. The front end of Gen. Kirk's machine was wrecked.

Colonel Charles McKee, of the Pennsylvania troops, has reported to General Kirk on the case of Private Fairburn, of Company A, Michigan Signal corps, who said he lost $60 while confined in the Pennsylvania guardhouse. Fairburn was picked up by Pennsylvania guards in an intoxicated condition, and confined. There was no evidence adduced that Fairburn lost his money while in custody.

Why the Applause.

It was his first play, and he was as nervous as a man sitting in a dentist's chair while the dentist is laying out the instruments he intends to use.

After the curtain had rung down on the second act there was a long silence. Then came a wild outburst of applause.

"Hooray!" cried the playwright, dancing a hilarious jig behind the scenes.

"What are you hooraying about?" asked the leading man.

"My play. It's a success. Don't you hear the applause?"

"Certainly I hear it, but it isn't for your play. They're applauding because the manager just announced that your piece will be taken off tomorrow night to make way for a new musical comedy by the author of 'The Girl From Piffenburg.'"

Bavarian Colony in Greece.

In Greece there is at least one tiny German oasis as a set-off to the Kaiser's 30,000 Greek guests now being fed in Bavaria. A few miles north of Athens is a village with a churchyard upon whose tombstones German names alone appear. The village has been the home for 80 years of a colony of Bavarians brought to Greece by King Otto. The villagers have the fair hair and the blue eyes of Bavaria, and although very few now speak their grandmothers' tongue, service is performed in the old church according to the Roman ritual.

He Saw Napoleon in Russia.

The war correspondent of the Vienna Zeit in one of his recent dispatches records that while passing through Volynia he met a villager of Karpilovka who saw Napoleon on his way to Moscow in 1812. The man had recently celebrated his hundred-and-thirteenth birthday anniversary and himself related that as a boy of nine he had seen the great French emperor. The man is still in good health, and what makes his longevity so remarkable is that he has lived all his life in a marshy district commonly regarded as unhealthy.

Payer and Payee.

George W. Perkins was talking about a multimillionaire.

"He's honest," said Mr. Perkins, dubiously. "Oh, yes; he's as honest as the day is long. Of course, the days are shortening now, aren't they?"

"Anyhow, he said to me one: 'Perkins, I'm one of those old-fashioned codgers who firmly believe that honesty pays.'"

"Then he gave me an enigmatic nod with his elbow and said:

"'And I believe just as firmly, Perkins, that dishonesty gets paid.'"

The Destroying Angel

"THE PAUL OF FLAME," "THE BROCKE BELL," "THE BLACK BAG," "THE BRASS DOME,"

COPYRIGHT BY LOUIS JOSEPH VANCE

EMINENT surgeons tell Hugh Whitaker that six months is his life limit. Peter Stark, intimate friend, finds him stumped by the news and arranges to take Whitaker on a long South sea yacht trip. The sick man sneaks off to a country hotel, intending to kill himself, but surprises a young girl in the act of drinking poison. She is Mary Ladislas, love-starved daughter of a New York plutocrat, deserted by the man with whom she planned clandestine marriage. To save her good name, Whitaker marries the girl (knowing that six months is his limit), gives her money and puts her on a train for home. He runs plump into Stark, hunting him. Months later, the yacht burns at sea. All hands die but Whitaker, who is reported lost. A delicate operation restores his health, and after five prosperous years in Australia, he returns to New York—one back from the dead! We find him—in this installment—talking with his old law partner, Drummond, about the prospects of finding that little girl wife. A beautiful actress enters the story.

CHAPTER IV—Continued.

"Would you know her if you saw her?"

"I don't know," Whitaker frowned with annoyance. "She's six years older."

"Well, but what was she like?" Drummond pursued curiously.

Whitaker shook his head. "It's not easy to remember. Matter of fact, I don't believe I ever got one good square look at her. It was twilight in the hotel, when I found her; we sat talking in absolute darkness, toward the end; even in the minister's study there was only a green-shaded lamp on the table; and on the train—well, we were both too much worked up, I fancy, to pay much attention to details."

"Blonde or brune?"

"I swear I don't know. She wore one of those funny knitted caps, tight down over her hair, all the time." Drummond laughed quietly.

"I don't feel in a joking humor," Whitaker said roughly. "It's a serious matter and wants serious treatment. . . . What else have we got to mull over?"

Drummond shrugged suavely. "There's enough to keep us busy for several hours," he said. "For instance, there's my stewardship."

"Your which?"

"My care of your property. You left a good deal of money and securities lying round loose, you know; naturally I felt obliged to look after 'em. There was no telling when Widow Whitaker might walk in and demand an accounting. I presume we might as well run over the account—though it is getting late."

"Half-past four," Whitaker informed him, consulting his watch. "Take too long for to-day. Some other time."

Drummond's reply was postponed by the office boy, who popped in on the heels of a light knock.

"Mr. Max's outside," he announced. "O the deuce!" The exclamation seemed to escape Drummond's lips involuntarily. He tightened them angrily, as though regretting the lapse of self-control, and glanced hurriedly askance to see if Whitaker had noticed. "I'm busy," he added, a trace sullenly. "Tell him I've gone out."

"But he's got 'appointment,'" the boy retorted. "And besides, I told him you was in."

"You needn't fob him off on my account," Whitaker interposed. "We can finish our confab later—Monday—any time. It's time for me to be getting up-town, anyway."

"It isn't that," Drummond explained doggedly. "Only—the man's a bore, and—"

"It isn't Jules Max?" Whitaker excitedly. "Not little Jules Max, who used to stage manage our amateur shows?"

"That's the man," Drummond admitted with plain reluctance.

"Then have him in, by all means. I want to say howdy to him, if nothing more. And then I'll clear out and leave you to his troubles."

Drummond laughed a trifle sourly. "Max has developed into a heavy-weight entrepreneur, you know."

"Meaning theatrical manager? Then why not say so? But I might've guessed he'd drift into something of the sort."

A moment later Whitaker was vigorously pumping the unresisting—indeed the apparently boneless—head of Jules Max. The hat that had made Hammerstein famous Max had appropriated—straight crown, flat brim and immediate glass—bodily. Beneath it his face was small of feature, and fat.

A pince-nez sheltered his near-sighted eyes. His short, round little body was invariably by day dressed in a dark gray morning-coat, white-edged waistcoat, assertively-striped trousers, and patent-leather shoes with white spats. He had a passion for lemon-colored gloves of thinnest kid and slender malacca walking-sticks. His dignity was an awful thing, as ingrained as his strut.

He reassured the dignity now with a jerk of his maltreated hand, readjusted his glasses, and resumed his stare.

"Either," he observed, "you're Hugh Whitaker come to life or a deuced outrage."

"Both if you like."

"You sound like both," complained the little man. "Anyway, you were drowned in the Philippines or somewhere long ago, and I never waste time on a dead one. . . . Drummond—"

He turned to the lawyer with a vastly business-like air.

"No, you don't!" Whitaker insisted, putting himself between the two men. "I admit that you're a great man; you might at least admit that I'm a live one."

A mollified smile moderated the small man's manner. "That's a bargain," he said, extending a pale yellow paw; "I'm glad to see you again, Hugh. When did you recrudescence?"

"An hour ago," Drummond answered for him; "blew in here as large as life and twice as important. He's been running a gold farm out in New Guinea. What do you know about that?"

"It's very interesting," Max conceded. "You've asked him, of course?"

he demanded of Drummond, nodding toward Whitaker.

Drummond flushed slightly. "No chance," he said. "I was on the point of doing it when you butted in."

"What's this?" inquired Whitaker.

Max delivered himself of a startling bit of information: "He's going to get married."

Whitaker stared. "Drummond? Not really?"

Drummond acknowledged his guilt brazenly: "Next week, in fact."

"But why didn't you say anything about it?"

"You didn't give me an opening. Besides, to welcome a deserter from the great beyond is enough to drive all other thoughts from a man's mind."

"There's to be a supper in honor of the circumstances, at the Beaux Arts tonight," supplemented Max. "You'll come, of course."

"I'll be there—and furthermore, I'll be waiting at the church a week hence—or whenever it's to come off. And now I want to congratulate you." Whitaker held Drummond's hand in one of those long, hard grips that mean much between men. "But mostly I want to congratulate her. Who is she?"

"Sara Law," said Drummond, with pride in his quick color and the lift of his chin.

"The greatest living actress on the English-speaking stage," Max announced, pressing himself importantly. "My own discovery."

"Of course I've heard—but I have been out of touch with such things," Whitaker apologized. "When shall I see her?"

"In honor of her retirement," Max answered, fussing with a gardenia on his lapel. "She retires from the stage finally, and forever—she says—when the curtain falls."

"Then I've got to be in the theater tonight—if that's the case," said Whitaker.

"I'm afraid you won't get in, though," Drummond doubted dourly. "Everything in the house for this final week was sold out a month ago. Even the speculators are cleaned out."

"Tut!" the manager reproved him loftily. "Hugh is going to see Sara Law act for the last time from my personal box—aren't you, Hugh?"

"You bet I am!" Whitaker asserted with conviction.

"Then come along," Max caught him by the arm and started for the door. "So long, Drummond."

CHAPTER V.

Curtain.

Nothing would satisfy Max but that Whitaker should dine with him. He consented to drop him at the Ritz-Carlton, in order that he might dress, only on the condition that Whitaker would meet him at seven, in the white room at the Knickerbocker.

"Just mention my name to the head waiter," he said with magnificence; "or if I'm there first, you can't help seeing me. Everybody knows my table—the little one in the southeast corner. Shoot, James!"

The latter phrase was Max's way of ordering the driver to move on. The car snorted resentfully, then pulled smoothly and swiftly away. Max waved a jaunty farewell with a lemon-colored hand, over the back of the toupé.

Whitaker went up to his room in a reflective mood in which the theatrical man had little place. Since his arrival in New York he had fallen into the habit of seeking the view from his window, when in meditative humor. A view of ten thousand roofs, inexpressibly enchanting. . . . Somewhere—perhaps—in that welter of steel and stone, as eternal and as restless as the sea, was the woman Whitaker had married, working out her lonely destiny. A haphazard biscuit tossed from his window might fall upon the very roof that sheltered her; he might search for a hundred years and never cross her path.

He wondered.

The possibility that she might have married a second time did not disturb his pulse by the least fraction of a beat. He even contemplated the chance that she might be dead with normal equanimity. Fortunately, that he didn't love her. More fortunate still, that he loved no one else.

Incontinently he wrote and dispatched a long, extravagant cablegram to Mrs. Pettit in care of the American embassy, little doubting that she would immediately answer.

When eventually he strode into the white room, Max was already established at the famous little table in the southeast corner. Whitaker was conscious of turning heads and guarded comment as he took his place opposite the little fat man.

"Make you famous in a night," Max assured him importantly. "Don't happen to need any notoriety, do you?"

"No, thanks."

"Dine with me here three nights hand-running and they'll let you into the Syndicate by the back door without even asking your name. P. T. A's one grand little motto, my boy."

"P. T. A.?"

"Pays to advertise. Paste that in your hat. Look me over," he requested abruptly, leaning back. "I guess I'm some giddy young buck, what?"

Whitaker reviewed the striking effect Max had created by encasing his brief neck and double chin in an old-fashioned high collar and black silk stock, beneath which his important chest was protected by an elaborately frilled shirt decorated with black pearl studs. His waist was strapped in by a pique waistcoat edged with black, and there was a distinctly perceptible "invisible" stripe in the material of his evening coat and trousers.

"Dressed like a fool," Max summed up the ensemble before his guest could speak. "Would you believe that despair could gnaw at the vitals of anyone as wonderfully arrayed?"

"I would not," Whitaker asserted. "Yet, I'm down in the mouth, because this is Sara's last appearance." Max motioned the waiter to remove the debris of a course. "I've got it in my knob that she's my mascot. If she leaves me, my luck goes with her. I made her, all right, but she made me, too; and it sprains my sense of good business to break up a paying combination like that."

"Nonsense," Whitaker contended warmly. "If I'm not mistaken, you were telling me this afternoon that you stand next to Belasco as a producing manager. The loss of one star isn't going to rob you of that prestige, is it?"

"He's Going to Get Married."

"You never can tell," the little man contended darkly. "I wouldn't bet thirty cents my next production would turn out a hit. I've had several close calls with Sara—she's threatened to chuck the stage often before this; but every time something happened to make her change her mind. I've got a hunch maybe something will happen this time, too. If it does, I won't want any partners."

How much information do you wager that Max is in a position to give Whitaker if he were of a mind to do so?

AS PHILOSOPHER SAW LIFE

Walter Pater's Idea of Success Was Hardly That Held by the Modern Business Man.

The service of philosophy, of speculative culture, toward the human spirit is to rouse, to startle it to a life of constant and eager observation. Every moment some form grows perfect in hand or face; some tone on the hills or the sea is choicer than the rest; some mood of passion or insight or intellectual excitement is irresistibly real and attractive to us—for that moment only. Not the fruit of experience but experience itself, is the end. A counted number of pulses only is given to us of a variegated, dramatic life. How may we use in them all that is to be seen in them by the finest senses? How shall we pass most swiftly from point to point and be present always at the focus where the greatest number of vital forces unite in their purest energy?

To burn always with this hard gem-like flame, to maintain this ecstasy, is success in life. . . . Great passions may give us this quickened sense of life ecstasy and sorrow of love, the various forms of enthusiastic activity, disinterested or otherwise, which come naturally to many of us. Only be sure it is passion—that it does yield you this fruit of a quickened, multiplied consciousness.—Walter Pater.

Nerves All On Edge?

Just as nerve wear is a cause of kidney weakness, so is kidney trouble a cause of nervousness. Anyone who has backache, nervousness, "blues," headaches, dizzy spells, urinary ills and a tired, worn feeling, would do well to try Doan's Kidney Pills. This safe, reliable remedy is recommended by thousands who have had relief from just such troubles.

A Michigan Case

Mrs. J. A. Moore, 409 E. Franklin Ave., Lansing, Mich., says: "I felt as though I couldn't keep up on account of awful backaches. Whenever I stooped, sharp twinges darted through me. Mornings, my back was as stiff as a board. I doctored a lot, but without success until I took Doan's Kidney Pills. They fixed me up all right and I have had no kidney trouble since."

She Let Him Have It.

"Getting on nicely," said the doctor—"very nicely! I think he might have a little solid food directly, he begins to be convalescent."

"But what are the signs of convalescence?" asked the wife.

"Oh, it's always a good sign when the patient displays irritability and a disposition to argue and a certain peevishness."

On his visit next day the doctor found the little wife very cheerful.

"And how is the patient?" he asked.

"Oh, much better, I think, doctor! I gave him a fried steak and onions yesterday."

"Fried steak and onions?" gasped the medico. "But why on earth—"

"Well, I followed your instructions, doctor. You said that if he was at all peevish or disposed to argue it was a sign that he could stand some solid food. He asked me last night if he could have a fried steak and onions, and I said I didn't think he ought to, so he got up and went into the kitchen, smashed fourteen soup plates, a tea service and two milk jugs. So, in view of what you said, I let him have it!"

"There's a Reason"

Don't Forget to Vote For

The Re-election of

Patrick H. Kelley

for Congress—Republican Ticket

Regardless of party, Congressman Kelley deserves the emphatic endorsement of this county and district.

SAFETY FIRST Mr. Voter

If you will examine the record of Eugene A. Stowe as Judge of Probate, who is a candidate for re-election, you will find three things that stand out prominently:

SERVICE, EFFICIENCY and RELIABILITY

He was formerly a farmer; is a good business man and has an abundant knowledge of real estate and probate law. He is therefore peculiarly fitted for the duties of Probate Judge, the office of which is one of increasing importance and responsibility. Citizens are accumulating larger estates than formerly and the distributing of property is laden with responsibilities that were unheard of a few years ago. It is highly important that the Probate Judge should be an honest and painstaking man, and as Mr. Stowe is that kind of a man, is qualified by experience to acceptably fill the position, and wants to fill it, why take chances with a man of inexperience? SAFETY FIRST.

Mr. Voter

Your opportunity to Reward Fidelity in Public Office Comes

Nov. 7th

and a Good Word and your vote will be Greatly Appreciated by

Judge Stowe

Ernest Krause
Democratic Candidate for Sheriff

Solicits your support and influence at the polls at the coming election. Permit me to convey to you my sincere thanks. And if elected, I will try to be a competent and efficient Sheriff. And you can depend upon me to perform the duties of the Sheriff of this County. I will try and have the judgment and discretion required in finding out the guilty and protecting the innocent.

HENRY T. ROSS

Candidate For State Representative

He was born and has always lived in Brighton township on the farm which he now operates. He received his early education in the rural schools and later graduated from the Michigan Agricultural College. He served on the township board of his township for eight years, four of which he was Supervisor. In 1914 while he was chairman of the Board of Supervisors of this County, the voters saw fit to elect him as their State Representative. He resigned in order to take up his new duties at Lansing. He must have given good satisfaction for he or his friends have not heard one single criticism from any one regarding the manner in which he performed the duties of the office. Always on the job and always willing and anxious to look after the best interests of the residents of this county, he has made an enviable record. He would like to serve a second term and if re-elected, he should, through the experience he has had during the past, be able to look after the interests of the people of this county in the 1917 Legislature better than ever, and the same as two years ago he promises that he will do so to the very best of his ability.

CHARACTER.

A good character is every thing. A good heart, benevolent feelings, and a balanced mind lie at the foundation of character. Other things may be deemed fortuitous; they may come and go; but character is that which lives and abides.—John Todd.

Spraying For Codling Moth.

In answer to a correspondent who asks when it is necessary to spray for the codling moth and whether spraying for the San Jose scale will hurt trees already in bloom, Zoologist H. A. Surface of the Pennsylvania department of agriculture says:

"It is always considered necessary to spray all apple, pear and quince trees for this pest when they are bearing fruit. If there is no fruit on your trees there is no need to spray for codling moth. As you doubtless know, this is the insect that makes wormy apples, pears and quinces. Every good fruit grower sprays for this pest, if for no other. The first spraying is made shortly after the petals or flowers fall, and the second spraying is made about a month from that date. The material that should be used is one gallon and one quart of strong lime sulphur solution, either home-made or commercial, in forty-nine gallons of water, and to this is added either one pound of dry arsenate of lead or two pounds of arsenate of lead paste. For the second spray use the same material as for the first.

"Where you have much San Jose scale present it is a good plan to wash all the bark of trunks or twigs that can be reached with a paint brush dipped in very strong lime sulphur solution or very strong thick soap solution, or spray the infested trees when the young are crawling on the bark with tobacco decoction, kerosene emulsion or soap solution. After the leaves drop this fall spray again with the strong lime sulphur solution."

Novel Stalk Cutter.

In harvesting certain crops like corn, sugar cane and such stalky growths the most trying and exhausting part of the labor is leaning over to cut down the stalk at the ground. A woman of Navasota, Tex., has remedied this in a device to be secured to the farmer's shoe by which the cutting is done with a quick movement of the foot and no leaning over is required. The knife is a broad, flat blade secured to the shoe at the toe and over the instep and braced for the repeated blows it will receive by ending against the heel.

THE STOCKMAN.

Fortunate indeed is the breeder who chooses for his herd a ram full of vim, activity and alertness.

Clipping horses' legs is not a good practice.

One big advantage of the hog raising industry is that the hogs give quick and profitable returns.

Extremes and sudden changes in feeding, watering and salting will cause acute indigestion in sheep that is usually fatal.

Excessive sweating in a horse indicates weakness.

As a general proposition it may be said that the sow that has pigs before she is a year old will disappoint her owner.

Ready With His Tongue.

James T. Brady, a prominent member of the New York bar in the last century, was noted for his ready wit. Quick as Mr. Brady was with the readiness of his race for repartee, he sometimes met his match among his own countrymen. He was once examining an unwilling witness who persistently called him Mr. O'Brady. At length, even his proverbial good nature being a little ruffled, he said to the witness: "You need not call me Mr. O'Brady. I've mended my name since I came here and dropped the O." "Have ye, now?" retorted the witness. "Pon my word, it's a pity ye didn't mend yer manners at the same time!"

Dr. Johnson's Cudgel.

The reign of George II. was a great fighting time. Every man who went abroad knew that he might have to fight to defend himself against footpad or bully. Most men carried a stout stick. When Dr. Johnson heard that a man had threatened to horsewhip him he ordered a thick cudgel and was easy in his mind. There were no police, and therefore a man had to fight.

HUGH G. ALDRICH

County School Commissioner
Candidate for re-election Nov. 7th

When a man makes application to a school board for a position as teacher or superintendent, the first question asked is, what experience have you had? The second question is, what preparation have you made for our position.

The better the preparation and the longer the successful experience, the more favorable the person is considered.

Next Tuesday you will act on the County school board to elect or defeat the present School Commissioner.

Which are you going to do? Remember this is a very important position. Do you think it a good policy for the schools to change commissioner often? We might say that the State law provides that the School Commissioner shall be elected for four years in order that there won't be frequent interruptions of the work. This county however has a special law which provides that the commissioner be elected for but two years in a term.

Mr. Aldrich has had three years of experience as Commissioner of our schools. He is acquainted with the teachers and school officers and knows the needs of the schools. He has lived in the county the largest part of his life, is thoroughly in sympathy with farm life and with the problems of the rural schools as well as those of the village schools.

He has prepared himself well for this position and we leave it to you whether or not his work is satisfactory.

If it has been he will very much appreciate your vote and will endeavor to be worthy of the confidence you thus place in him.
