First Putnam War Baby

Dell Hall, grandfather, if you please, of Putnam's first war baby, is strutting around so proud of himself and his new descendant that he can hardly contain himself. Well, who can blame him?

Dell says the youngster is bound to be an officer and already orders the wholehouse hold around as if he were General Pershing, and his orders are delivered in such a way as to admit of no argument, but result in prompt obedience.

The father of this wonderful baby is in France and below is a letter from him to Mr. and Mrs. Albert Dinkel.

Tours, France,
July 9, 1918.

Dear Kit and all:

Knowing your usefulness I trust that you will dictate this letter to the family, or rather its important part.

Now, I have been in a hospital for nearly five weeks, but am all O. K. now. I had spinal meningitis. I was in bed a little over two weeks and was walking around in three weeks. I had a very mild case, so the doctors tell me but if that was mild I don't want a severe attack.

I was taken about five o'clock in the afternoon and at nine I was in the hospital and at ten they operated on me. They told me that they got it just in time.

I am in a French hospital and have two French doctors and one American. The French know how to handle this trouble better than the Americans because it is an old thing with them. They have French sisters for nurses. They are about forty years old and they are certainly fine to boys, especially to the Americans.

The French people like the Americans very much. I shall never forget the sister that took care of me. She stayed with me all the time when I was the worst. She was so good to me all the time and couldn't do enough for me. I am going to get her picture and send it to you people.

It me left with only one good ear but he doctor has nearly restored the hearing so you see I am lucky to get out without more trouble. I sure am a lucky guy; having lots of experiences.

I may be here in the hospital for several weeks yet but I am fine now, only weak and it takes a long time to get back to normal again so all I have to do is stay here and take it easy. I can leave the hospital every day now and I take long rides into the country and visit many places of considerable interest. There are many small towns all through the country. I cannot walk much yet but am getting stronger every day.

Those two letters I wrote home on that cheap stationery were written while I was in bed. You can tell for they were not interesting at all and they were short.

I did not get any mail for four weeks while I was sick and a short time before so you can imagine how I felt with people who could not speak English but my French made it lucky for me. There is another American in here now and I have to talk for him. We go out with a French captain and enjoy our selves very much.

I get my mail very regular now so everything is fine.

I do wish that you people could see some of the wonderful sights that I have seen. This old world is some globe when you wander over it as much as I have lately.

Let me tell you about my Fourth. Our sister said to us in the morning: "This is a big day for the American boys and you two poor fellows in a hospital far from home." So she went to work and decorated a room with flowers and French and American flags and had a small table fixed with flowers and flags and gave us a real French feed.

She fixed the daintiest little dishes for us. She sure did enjoy getting it ready and believe me we enjoyed it also. All of the sisters in the hospital came in while we were eating our dinner and had me tell them what the Americans do on the Fourth. I told them about the kids with firecrackers, etc. and how they did laugh! They think the U. S. A. is wonderful.

In the afternoon I went for a ride and went bathing in the Loire river so I enjoyed myself very much. Say, Albert, I had real French wine for my dinner the Fourth. You'd better come to France and bring Uncle Mark with you. The wine is great!

Now answer by return mail. You don't know how good mail seems here from home. Tell every little thing; that is what I enjoy.

I received your letter with the clippings, Aunt Maude, and will send Marjorie some cards soon.

Now don't forget to answer soon.

THEY CAME TO STAY

They stayed---But They Were Dead Huns.

Ray Kennedy's Account of an Attempt to Capture a Yank Trench.

Wednesday, July 3

Dear Mother and Father:—

I received your letter of June 4th last Saturday and was mighty glad to get it.

We have just been out of the trenches a little while and as we have been traveling ever since. This is the first chance I've had to answer it.

Trench life isn't so bad, especially where we were there was very little fighting going on. The artillery on both sides did a little shelling but the infantry just stood guard.

I saw but five Germans all the time I was in. Two of them were more than a mile away. I saw them through a pair of glasses. The other ones were out in our wire; they were dead ones. They were part of a bunch who came over the top to drive out the Yanks. The number of Huns was twice that of the Yanks. They were all equipped to stay and half of them did stay. The Americans killed more men than we had in our line. I guess that's going some. Every time they mix it the Huns catch Hell.

Life in the trenches is not all sunshine. Sometimes we have to hike all night long with pack, rifle and ammunition. At other times we have to stand from dark till daylight on guard without making any noise and have to keep steady watch out over the top. The nights here are cold and when you are relieved you are half frozen.

I am detailed as first aid man and litter bearer now. We take an hour's instruction in first aid work every day. I think I will like it as I always had a liking for it.

I wonder why Sue or Ed don't write. I've written them at least three times since I've been here but have not heard from them at all. I just got a ten page letter from Julia the same day I got yours. Tell Nan and Mae I'd like to hear from them also Charlie and Claude and Willy.

Well dear parents, I'll close now hoping to hear from you again shortly. May God take care of you to keep well and happy.

You loving son,

A FATAL ACCIDENT

Last Saturday Wilbur, a two year old boy, son of Mr. and Mrs. John F. Jones, who reside on the Martin farm north west of Anderson was injured so severely that death soon followed.

The little fellow had been riding with his father on a load of gravel. Mr. Jones lifted him off before unloading and in some way the boy fell underneath a wheel just as the horses started up.

He was terribly crushed and although Dr. C. L. Sigler was quickly on the spot, no help could save the poor lad, who lived only a few hours.

The funeral was held at the Pinckney M. E. church last Tuesday, Rev. Camburn officiating.

Mr. and Mrs. Jones have the sympathy of the whole community.

LOSES GOOD TEAM

Last Saturday Louis Shehan was fixing fence on his back eighty near Portage Lake. Some of his cattle and horses were pasturing there and when he went to dinner they were all right.

Upon his return he noticed one of the horses down in the marsh. Further investigation showed the horse to be mired and quite dead.

When he arrived home he found that the mate to the dead horse had been either kicked or crowded upon a manure spreader and was injured so badly he could not live.

Thus he lost a good work team in one afternoon—a practical demonstration of the old saying that "Misfortune never comes singly".

CARD OF THANKS

WASHINGTON SIDELIGHTS

Washington Residents Fleecing the Patriotic

WASHINGTON.—"Most persons are greedy." The words were spoken by a Washington woman who had been observing with some disgust the way many of her fellow Washingtonians were exploiting the war situation. "Some I know," she said, "have an apartment that they used to rent unfurnished for $45 a month. They have furnished it simply and tastefully and they are now getting $150 a month. I call that performance simple extortion."

It is, obviously, extortion. And it is a typical case. Many of the sufferers from the extortion have come here out of patriotic motives and are working for the government either without pay or for very much less than they are used to getting. A capable man came here and offered his services to one of the most important of all the war boards. He was told that he would be given a position if he would agree to take 40 per cent of his average salary for the last three years. He did agree and he went to work with a will and he wrote to his wife and children that he would send for them just as soon as he could find the right kind of house.

He finally was driven to thinking that it would be best for him to take an apartment that was furnished. But he couldn't find one.

At this point he decided to go home.

The government lost an able worker through not taking care of him properly.

Now it realizes and it has provided an agency to see that the war workers are properly housed.

With Blood in His Eye Dog Cop Seeketh the Sly

THIS is the tale of some cops and a hound; a taxi adventure, and the district dog pound. The cops are now mad; the hound is quite dead, while one taxi chauffeur is some bucks ahead. Murphy, dog cop at the capitol grounds, espied a big bulldog while making his rounds. He picked up the canine with great expectation of fetching to owner with hopes of remuneration. The other policeman with hopes of some fun, with much speed and action to phone booths did run, while Officer Boyd said to Murphy, you see, "you call up and find who the owner might be." When Murphy called up, the wires were "pulled," and Murphy, unknowing, was thoroughly "bulled," for instead of the owner the officer spoke to the other policemen, "in on" the joke.

He asked for reward; the answer was "yes," and Murphy was given a "phony" address. Exultant, the victim the bulldog did grab, and made a wild dash for a near taxicab. The address he shouted and off they did go, whereat quiet reigned for an hour or so.

Later Murphy, the dog and the taxi came back, with Murphy bewailing—alas and alack!—that the address he'd sought he never had found and the confounded mutt he would send to the pound.

Murphy was busted; he hadn't a cent, so the chauffeur to Officer Calkins he sent. Calkins, amazed, heard the taximan blare that he was expected to pay Murphy's fare. At that there were signs of a violent fight, till the capitol cop captain hove into sight. So Calkins, bewildered, dug deep in his jeans and greased the chauffeur's palm with sundry odd beans.

There endeth the yarn of the cops and the mutt, the taxi, the joke, in fact everything—BUT—

The fact that Cop Calkins is waiting to know by whose low-down scheme he was ordered to blow the most of his pay for a darned taxi-toot and then get a call from the captain to boot.

RAISE LEGHORNS FOR FAMILY USE

Meat Possibilities of Fowl Have Been Neglected by Most Poultry Breeders.

AVERAGE BIRD IS TOO SMALL

It Would Be Profitable for Poultry Raisers to Give More Attention to These Egg Producers—Make Splendid Broilers.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

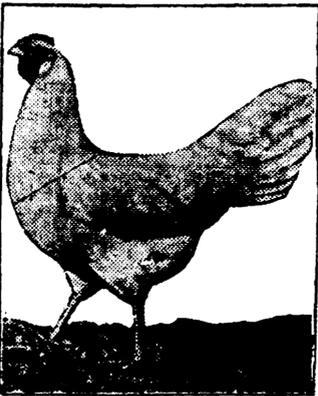

The Leghorn fowl owes its popularity so largely to its egg-producing capacity that the meat possibilities of the breed have been neglected by most Leghorn breeders. Such failure to recognize the potential food value of birds kept to produce a special food product may have been excusable under prewar conditions, but in the present need of utilizing to the full every capacity of every food-producing animal, breeders of Leghorns should give due attention to the development of their table qualities.

Discussion of the meat value of a breed must note and take due account of the fact that the markets—that is, the dealers and consumers—do not recognize breed differences in poultry, except as in a few localities particular breeds may be generally kept and may become known locally, or in special trade lines for excellent table quality. The poultry breeder, therefore, in planning how to make the most of the meat values of his stock considers what market demands can be filled with poultry of the breed which he keeps.

Average Leghorns Too Small.

Average Leghorn hens weigh only about 3 pounds alive. Many of them will dress only 2 to 2½ pounds. This is not a desirable size for a table fowl, being too much under the weights (4 to 5 pounds) which most people prefer when buying a fowl.

Besides being small herself, the average Leghorn produces chicks so small that they do not remain very soft-meated until they have reached the size the market demands in broilers, and so the cockerels cannot be sold for poultry at that stage with the same profit as cockerels from larger stock.

Standard Leghorns Better for Poultry.

The standard weights for mature Leghorns are: Males 5½ pounds, females 4 pounds. By making these the minimum weights for birds used in breeding, and by giving the preference to the largest specimens that show Leghorn type without coarseness, strains of Leghorns may be developed that with no loss of laying capacity have considerable merit as table fowls in a limited range of uses.

Leghorn hens which alive weigh 4

KITCHEN WASTE FOR FOWLS

Certain Amount of Table Scraps in Every Household Will Help Make Eggs and Meat.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Let the table scraps help make eggs and meat. In every household, no matter how economical the housewife, there is a certain amount of table scraps and kitchen waste which has feeding value but which, if not fed, finds its way into the garbage pail. The saving medium: Some hens.

Green Feed for Pigs.

Brood sows and their litters should have green feed of some kind. Green clover is best. Oats and peas are a good substitute. Oats and dwarf Essex rape or any of the cereal grains sown with rape and clover are also satisfactory pasture crops.

First Planting of Peas.

Cover the first planting of peas about one inch deep. Later plantings should be planted deeper.

pounds or more are heavy enough to meet the demand for dressed fowls a little under the weights generally preferred, and there is enough demand for fowls at this weight to take all the supply.

The cockerels bred from hens of 4 pounds weight and over, if properly grown, will make broiler size as quickly as the chicks of most of the larger breeds. They will also be soft-meated up to about 2 to 2½ pounds' weight. After that they are apt to harden quickly and their flesh is not so tender. Leghorn cockerels produced from very large males and females—that is, from males that weigh upward of 6½ pounds and females upward of 5½ pounds—frequently keep quite soft-meated until they reach 4 to 5 pounds weight. Such birds make very satisfactory small roasters for home use, though they will not sell as well on the market as birds of the same weight of a slower growing breed.

Growing Leghorns for Meat.

Even when good-sized Leghorns are used for breeding, the chickens will not make good poultry unless they are well grown. In a measure this is true of any chickens; those that are poorly grown never make the development or have the table quality of those that are well grown.

To secure good growth, Leghorn chicks must not be overcrowded in brooders or coops, and as soon as they are large enough to range over an extended piece of ground should be given as wide range as possible and at the same time fed liberally. Chicks so treated will grow twice as fast as those that are reared under the intensive conditions to which the greater number of Leghorn chicks are subjected.

HIGH-PRODUCING GARDEN

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Are you sure that your garden is producing as much as it is capable of doing? A half-acre garden, if properly cared for, will produce sufficient vegetables for the average family's use. It will produce far greater returns per acre than can be realized from an equal area devoted to general farm crops. But it is necessary to give the garden proper care and attention if you expect maximum crops. Farmers' Bulletin 837, recently published by the United States department of agriculture, which will be sent free to any who apply for it, so long as the supply lasts, gives specific directions for the planting, care and cultivation of the various vegetables. Make sure that you are not wasting time and energy by failing to give your garden the care that insures highest yields.

CARING FOR CONFINED HENS

Provide Good Straw Litter in Which to Scatter Grain—Also Supply Green Feed.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

If the chickens must be confined on account of bad weather, provide a good straw litter in which their grain feed may be scattered. This will give them exercise and keep them interested and healthy. When chickens that have been accustomed to free range are closely confined this frequently checks their development for the time being unless they are made contented in the new quarters. Provide green feed for them also.

Rape in Hog-Corn.

Where corn is to be hogged down, it is a good plan to sprinkle a little rape seed in the field at the time of the last cultivation; it will then make a sufficient growth to be nice and tender at feeding time.

CHICKENS FOR HOME FLOCKS

Pay Little or No Attention to Fowls Which Are Not Successfully Raised in Community.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

In considering the breed of chickens best suited for the home flock, pay little or no attention to those which are not of local importance, that is, not being raised successfully in the community, except on the advice of experts.

Time to Cut Alfalfa.

The time to cut alfalfa for hay is just as new sprouts are starting up from the crown of the plant, about the time the first blossoms appear. If cut later the yield of the following cutting will be lessened.

Potatoes for Family Use.

Potatoes for family use should always be grown on grass or clover sod land. If manure is used it should be spread broadcast and well harrowed into the soil.

INCREASE IN WESTERN CANADA LAND VALUES

But Forty and Fifty Bushels of Wheat to the Acre.

During the past year there has been a greater demand for farm lands in Western Canada than for a number of years past. The demand is for good farm lands improved or unimproved. And at an increase of from ten to fifteen dollars an acre more than the same lands could be had for a couple of years ago.

The rise in the price of every kind of produce grown on these Western lands, in some cases to double and in others to treble the price prevailing before 1914, have attracted and are attracting in ever-increasing proportions the men who are anxious to invest their money, and apply their energies in the production of wheat for which the allied nations are calling with voices which grow louder and more anxious as the months roll on, and the end of the war still seems distant. Beef, and more especially bacon, are required in ever greater quantities, and the price of all these things has soared, until it is not a question of what shall we produce, but how much can we produce. Even should this world calamity be brought to a close in six months from now, it will be years before normal pre-war prices prevail, and meantime self-interest if not patriotism is turning the minds of thousands back to the land. The inevitable consequence has been the rise in values of land, especially wheat land.

The Calgary Herald, commenting on these conditions says:

"From inquiries made from leading dealers in farming and ranching properties, and from the information gathered in other ways, it is known that the value of all land—wheat land, mixed farming properties, and even good grazing land—has risen in the last two years 40 per cent. Wheat lands in some districts have practically doubled in price. One dealer in farm lands recently sold three sections for $70 an acre, one extra good quarter went as high as $90, and another brought $100. These are, of course, large prices, but that they will be equalled or even surpassed in the near future is beyond question. There is a feature about this rush to the land from which the most solid hope can be drawn for the success of the movement. The proper tillage of land, to produce large crops in a climate like ours is now understood and practiced as it never was in the early days of the province. It would seem too that with the increase of land under cultivation, the seasons are changing and the rainfall becoming greater and more regular.

"Crops are being harvested, especially in Southern Alberta, which would have seemed impossible to the old-time farmer, with his old-fashioned ideas of breaking and seeding. And at the price now set by the government for wheat and which possibly may be increased during the coming season, the return to the practical skilled agriculturist must necessarily be very large.

"What matters $10 or even $20 an acre extra on wheat land when a return as high as 50 bushels and even more may be taken from every acre sown? With hogs bringing $20 a hundred pounds; beef on the hoof at $12, and mutton $18, while wool under the new government arranged system of handling and sale brings 65 cents a pound (and these values cannot fall to any great extent for some years) the demand for land will continue and values increase in a corresponding degree.

"There has never been in the history of Canada a time so favorable for the farmer as the present; self-interest, the inspiration of patriotic feeling, the aid freely extended by the government, who are permitting the import of certain agricultural implements free, all these tend to still further raise the price of Alberta land."—Advertisement.

War and Birth Rates.

In his recent presidential address to the Royal Statistical society, Sir Bernard Mallet declared that the United Kingdom has lost by the fall in births during the war more than 500,000 potential lives. During the same period he estimates that Germany has lost 2,600,000 and Hungary 1,500,000. The greatest decline in the birth rate in the central powers is ascribed to the fact that the poorer classes in those countries have suffered greatly in health and vigor on account of the war, while the corresponding classes in Great Britain have actually enjoyed more favorable conditions than in time of peace.—Scientific American.

Never suffer the prejudice of the eye to determine the heart.—Zimmerman.

Many a man skins the truth, stuffs it and sets it up as his ideal.

WASHINGTON, the most talkative place in the United States, if press bureaus of the various departments are to be classed as "word producers," is one of the first large cities of the nation to eliminate talk among its telephone operators. By an order issued by the company operating the capital telephone system unnecessary and frivolous questions will not be answered by "central."

If you forget to wind your watch at night and wake up early in the morning oblivious of the time of day the ever-convenient "hello girl" will not be your savior.

If you are held in your office while the Yankees and the Senators are pummeling each other at the ball park and you pine for the "score," central will be a blank if you ask her.

War has troubled the telephone service in Washington for purely legitimate business, and no longer is there time to be wasted by answering unnecessary questions, any officials of the company, who declared that more than an hour's time each day is saved by the company's decision to prohibit operators from answering unnecessary questions.

Another war move that saves time in Washington is the decision to close all departments to the public. Admission to the White House, except to the executive offices, is now refused to everybody. The time-saving process has even been extended to the street-car systems, which now have installed the skip-stop plan, by which the service is expedited.

OUTFIT FOR BRIDE

Ivory White Satin Remains the Favored Material.

Lace is Again Fashionable and Often Family Heirlooms Are Used—The Going-Away Gown.

Though no one begrudges the bride of this year her traditional bridal panoply of ivory satin, lace and tulle, it is not expected of her to provide an elaborate and expensive trousseau of handsome evening gowns and stunning afternoon costumes, states a fashion writer. The sentiment of the times is against display in dress, and this year's dearth of formal entertainments, of the usual sequence of balls and dinners and house parties precludes the necessity of a large supply of costly clothes for anybody—even for the bride who is supposed to enjoy a special program of gaieties in the first months of her married life.

Honeymoons are being cut short this year—as a rule the bridegroom, after a brief furlough for his wedding and the ensuing trip of a week or ten days, goes back to his regiment or to his ship and the bride settles down quietly with her home people—or near them—and though she goes out formally, has naturally not much heart for formal affairs.

The wedding day costume, however, is another matter. It would be an unnatural bride who did not claim her full privilege of bridal panoply, perhaps claim it the more determinedly because robbed of other privileges of brides in normal times. A woman can be a bride but once, and even in wartime she wants to wear the trailing white satin, the pearls, the orange blossoms and the symbolic veil which may be hers on this one great occasion—and this one only—of all her life. Many a beautiful wedding gown has been worn this year and the summer wedding gowns promise to be no less beautiful than those of midwinter. Ivory white satin, the traditional "bride" satin, is the favored material for the wedding gown and though the spring models keep to the slender silhouette now insisted upon by fashion, there are many lovely ways of breaking the straight, slim lines with soft draperies and panels of airy fabric. Lace is again fashionable on the bridal gown and some are trimmed with rare old point and Venice lace, have come down as family heirlooms. Of the newer laces, shadow lace is the favorite, because of its delicate texture and lovely draping qualities. Embroidered chiffon is used also, and pearl embroidered chiffon is specially distinguished.

Every bride nowadays seems to seek some individual and original veil arrangement and many are the interesting caps and coronets of lace or tulle from which the veil falls at the back to the end of the train. The Russian cap, rising to a peak at the front, has been used, and various sorts of peasant cap, modified or exaggerated in line and carried out in lace, tulle or silver tissue. The veil now covers, or almost covers, the hair as a modern hat does and is no longer poised or perched high on the head, caught by a puff of tulle or a cluster of orange blossoms.

Second only in importance to the bridal gown is the smart costume in which the bride bids farewell to her friends and starts away to begin her married life. The going-away gown, as it is always called, is less often a gown, than a tailored suit of formal and elaborate type; sometimes it is a gown covered by a very smart topcoat—when the bride starts her wedding trip in a motorcar. This practical costume will meet likely, this spring, be a tailored suit of dark blue or black serge made with a straight, plain skirt and dashing little jacket

GAY BAYADERE SASH IS WORN

Wide Ribbon Decoration Comes in Rich Color Combinations; Nice With Eton Suit.

With her new Eton jacket the summer girl is wearing a dashing bayadere Roman sash, which gives color and gaiety to her whole costume. These bayadere sashes are of very wide ribbon of faille weave and substantial weight and the sash is long enough to go twice around the waist and fall in fringed ends just below the hip at one side. These gay sashes come all ready to put on, with fringe sewed to the ends, in the neckwear and accessory departments.

If you are quite slim and willowy you can knot the sash ends over one hip. If you are rather plump and have a substantial sort of waist measure, draw the sash ends through a large buckle and do away with the knot which, of course, takes up extra ribbon.

The Roman stripes in the bayadere sashes come in various rich color combinations and almost all of the com-

CAPE CUT ON NOVEL LINES

Although extreme in outline, this cape of bolivia cloth is one of the most attractive shown this year. It is in maroon shade with a large roll collar that forms a bodice effect and ties in front under the cape. The fringe is another new note. The cape is very charming and there is little doubt that it will be one of the favorites for the summer and fall seasons.

in loose box or Eton style and the bride will certainly possess one or two attractive waistcoats to do the dute justice; one waistcoat perhaps of dotted foulard silk, the other of beige silk poplin, or of pearl gray faille silk.

Lace Trims Chanel Coat.

A coat dress from Chanel is a very good illustration of the lace-and-wool alliance. The material is of rust-brown wool jersey. At the sides are hung half-tunics of heavy flannel, the pattern defined with satin and outlined all about the hem with a bias of the latter. There is a bit of a waistcoat, of the jersey, crossed surplice-wise and caught in the string belt of the material. The lace reappears in a deep marine collar that hangs almost to the waistline, but which is not visible from the front. And, strange to say, the lace on wool jersey does not seem to detract from the wearing qualities of the model, or to make the latter too dressy for semisport occasions.

A Knitting Help.

White bone knitting needles slip through the wool much quicker if they are first filed on a plain kitchen file as you would a lead pencil into a long, smooth point.

Overblouses Tunic.

The newest overblouses are almost as long as the tunic.

binations look well with an Eton suit of blue serge or of shepherd check serge or chevot.

Summer Frocks of Silk.

Wash silk is to be very much worn this summer, both in striped and plain. Smart little frocks are made of heavy white habutai. An unusually good model for a young girl in her early teens is shown, made of white habutai. The material is of a very heavy, lustrous quality. The middie blouse at the round neck and cuffs is ornamented with a line of colored embroidery and large ball buttons embroidered in color hang from the cuffs. The skirt is gathered in panel effect at the back and front. For the simplest of these cotton frocks all the old favorites are used—lawns, dimities, ginghams and volles. Gingham has grown in grace from season to season until both plain and in checks and plaids they are often very lovely. No doubt we shall see worn during the summer many more frocks fashioned of the old new-fashioned ginghams.

HOW THE PIPELESS FURNACE OPERATES

New System of Heating Is Getting Attention.

SAVING IN FUEL IS CLAIMED

Idea Was First Conceived Fifty or Sixty Years Ago but Only Recently Has It Been Successfully Applied.

Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all subjects pertaining to the subject of building, for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as Editor, Author and Manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on all these subjects. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 1827 Prairie avenue, Chicago, Ill., and only enclose three-cent stamp for reply.

By WILLIAM A. RADFORD.

Fifty or sixty years ago some one conceived the idea that a stove with a jacket around it, placed in the basement, with an opening above it, could be made to heat a house. He thought so well of the idea that he made a model, drew plans and specifications and secured a patent.

The heater was built. Because of the jacket an inflow of air was needed. This was provided by an air duct leading into the space between the jacket and the stove from out of doors. Heat poured through the opening above, but for some reason the house wouldn't get warm. After experimenting a while, the inventor gave it up and allowed his patent to lapse.

That man probably never knew how near he came to helping solve a modern heating problem. Either he did not know or overlooked the fact that in heating a house, or a store, or any type of building, the air heated by the fire must displace the cold air in that house, or store building. He had neglected to provide an outlet for the cold air and, in consequence, his invention was a failure.

Recognition of this fact made possible the furnace which came after. A "cold air register," placed in a central posisuggested that the first paragraph, or rather the first two paragraphs of this article be read again. The pipeless furnace was invented in Civil war times. But the modern inventor had the benefit of the scientific facts of the circulation of air and the experience of the furnace men in the application of these facts. All he had to do was to get the cold air out of the building, so it could be replaced with heated air.

Circulation is Provided.

This he did by making a register, one section of which was the counterpart of the cold air register and the other of the hot air into the building and at the same time sucked out the cold air. In other words, it provided circulation.

If you are not an expert on heating devices, you will undoubtedly have a lot of questions in your mind. The writer had, but he had an advantage over you—he asked them of men who are experts, and got the answers. They are now passed on to you.

"How," one man was asked, "can a house, say one and a half stories high, containing six rooms, be heated from one register?"

Then it was explained. No attempt will be made to quote the expert literally, but here is what he said, in substance:

The modern house is open. That is, there are practically no rooms on the first floor, with the exception of the kitchen, that are shut off from the others. This is necessary to make a pipeless furnace efficient.

Warm air rises and as it rises it forces the cooler air towards the floor. When the heated air hits the ceiling it does not stop, but continues to wherever it can find air colder than itself.

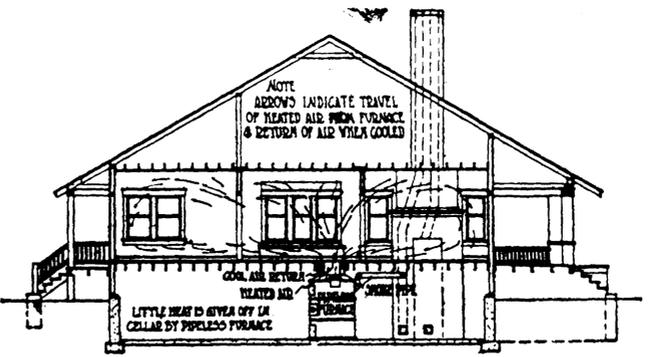

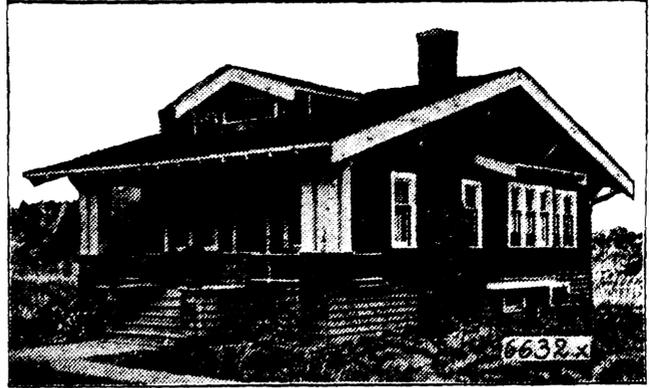

This continuous stream of heated air eventually drives out the colder air and heats the room. That's one room.

"How," the prober continued, seeking defects in the system, "can this furnace heat any part of the house except the room that contains the register?"

Scientific Basis of System.

Now what follows is the scientific basis upon which is founded the success of the pipeless furnace.

The pipes which carry the heated air from the ordinary type of furnace to the rooms above are usually ten inches in diameter. The area of a ten-inch pipe is one-half a square foot. One of these pipes leads to each room tion in the building, "sucked" out the cold air as the heated air was discharged into the rooms. But here, too, the inventor and the manufacturers who produced these furnaces overlooked something.

Section Through Five-Room Bungalow Showing How House is Heated by Pipeless Furnace.

Heat Wasted on Basement.

In the basement a maze of pipes was strung, each pipe leading to a room above. These pipes, as the heated air passed through them, threw off much of the heat. In fact, the basement, where no one habitually sits or stays any longer than is necessary got the first crack at the heat.

Then, only a few years ago, four or five at the most, along came a man with an "original idea." It was original, too, in part.

"Why not," he probably said to himself, "running" his hand through his hair, or holding his chin between thumb and forefinger, or doing some one of the many things men do in stories when they are in deep thought—"why not save that wasted heat?"

So he set about to save it and he did. He invented the pipeless furnace.

For the benefit of those who do not know what a pipeless furnace is, it is that is to be heated. Thus, all the heat that can be introduced into a single room through a pipe of this character must come through this small opening.

In contrast, the area of a doorway in an ordinary home is 17 square feet, and 35 times as much as a pipe opening. A double door is twice as large and if there happens to be colonnades, or no doors, there is just that much more area for the induction of heat. Thus instead of carrying the heat into a room through a small pipe you carry it in through the door openings. Or, rather, you don't carry it in, but it goes in whether you want it to or not.

In the house taken as an example—six rooms, one story and a half—40 per cent of its area is basement, 40 per cent on the first floor and 20 per cent on the second. These proportions, of course, differ in different types of buildings. The percentages in individual cases are easy to figure. But taking the one mentioned, by eliminating pipes in the basement, 40 per cent of the heat produced is saved, with a consequent saving of 40 per cent in fuel to obtain the same degree of heat where heat is needed.

THAT CHANGE IN WOMAN'S LIFE

Mrs. Godden Tells How It May be Passed in Safety and Comfort.

Freemont, O.—"I was passing through the critical period of life, being forty-six years of age and had all the symptoms incident to that change—heat flashes, nervousness, and was in a general run down condition, so it was hard for me to do my work. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was recommended to me as the best remedy for my troubles, which it surely proved to be. I feel better and stronger in every way since taking it, and the annoying symptoms have disappeared."—Mrs. M. GODDEN, 925 Napoleon St., Freemont, Ohio.

Such annoying symptoms as heat flashes, nervousness, headache, irritability and "the blues," may be speedily overcome and the system restored to normal conditions by this famous root and herb remedy Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If any complications present themselves write the Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., for suggestions how to overcome them. The result of forty years experience is at your service and your letter held in strict confidence.

HAD ANOTHER GUESS COMING

Pa's Idea of Himself as Autocrat of the Household Received Rather a Rude Jolt.

"What is an autocrat, father?" Hubmow looked at his inquiring son and tried hard to put an air of unlimited wisdom on his features. "An autocrat?" he said. "Well, in a way, I am the autocrat of this household. I impose my will upon its members, wisely, of course; when I say a thing it goes; when—"

"Henry," broke in Mrs. Hubmow, "when on earth are you going to hang that portrait of Uncle George?"

"I thought I'd wait till tomorrow, my dear; you see—"

"You'll have to think again, Henry," declared his wife, "and you'd better think that this very minute is the best time."

And as Hubmow went out to fetch the stepladder he sighed twice and promised to explain what an autocrat was at a more convenient moment.—Denver Post.

GREGORY

The following letter was received by Mrs. E. Hill from her nephew in France, July 1st, 1918

Dear Aunt:

Received your letter of June 3rd while at the front. I am writing this letter in a dugout. Everybody here lives in dugouts with about six feet of alternating layers of logs and dirt over their heads. My light is a tallow candle. All dugouts are dark, damp, cold places infested with rats and mice. Back of us is telephone exchange 35 feet underground. This is considered to be shell proof. There are dugouts around here capable of holding 250 men. This is a queer war around here in some respects. People live as near to the front line as we will let them and they plant crops and cut hay among the barbed wire entanglements of the reserve positions. We are situated in an extensive wood, so we can move about quite freely in the daytime so long as the enemy does not detect any movement. But if they do, over come the shells. On the top of the hill near our headquarters is a good sized church with only four or five houses around it. But down in the valley there is a village. The steeple of the church was knocked off long ago. From the church to a church inside the enemy lines is only 2000 yards. The village inside the enemy lines is all knocked to pieces. Regular services are held in the church at the top of the hill. One morning the Boches shelled the cross roads near the church. Two shells hit the stone wall around it and one went through the roof. The people at service scattered into the bombproofs and cellars. The church roof has several bomb holes in it and the walls are marked with shrapnel. Outside in the yard is the military cemetery where many French soldiers are buried. Also it contains the grave of the first soldier in the 32nd Div. killed in action. In about 100 acres of woods around there is more barbed wire than there is in Michigan. It is difficult to get through the woods unless you know where the gaps are. A couple of days ago there was a French balloon up behind our lines. A German plane rushed at it and fired a shot through it and it went up in smoke. The observer had to take to his parachute. We have to wear our gasmasks all the time and the women and children carry one slung over their shoulder. I have not taken off my clothes but once since I've been here. On our left the big guns have opened the biggest barrage I have heard yet. It is quite nice here, not too warm I am feeling fine.

As ever,
Faye.

Brighton will celebrate their picnic Tuesday, Aug. 20th. Both parishes have been visited with severe misfortune. Last year fire destroyed the parish house and this year a cyclone demolished the Brighton church. The proceeds of the picnics will be utilized for building purposes. As a public manifestation of patriotism, in spite of their great personal misfortune both churches will donate ten per cent of the entire profits to the Red Cross society. All should extend to them the hand of fellowship by attending these picnics.

Some Fall Fishing

By C. B. LEWIS

(Copyright, 1915, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

The doctor in the city had told Miss Gertie Ashford to stay in the country as long as she could, on account of the state of her throat, and that was why she was yet at her grandmother's when mid-September came.

It hadn't been a very lively summer for the girl. She had taken long walks. She had fussed with the old-fashioned flowers; she had sought in vain to win the confidence of the chipmunks and rabbits which came about, and she had hunted for quail's nests in the wheat fields. There was one sport, however, she had not participated in. There was a creek meandering its way over the country and crossing the highway a few rods below the house, and in that creek were fish at least as long as her finger. She knew it, because she had seen them, and because a neighbor's boy twelve years old had told her:

"Why, of course there are fish—slathers and slathers of 'em, and they are achin' to be catched, jest as a cat aches for cream. Haven't hauled out more'n a hundred this summer."

"But I was taught in Sunday school that it was wicked to catch fish," was protested.

"Humph! Would we have codfish cakes if folks didn't go a-fishin'?"

The boy rigged up a line and pole for her, and Miss Gertie went fishing. He stood on the bank with her for a while to advise:

"Now, lower your hook!"

"Now, stop wobbling the pole!"

"Now, don't you dare breathe!"

"Now, shet you eyes and say your prayers, for there's a fish as long as a rail comin' for your hook!"

When half an hour had passed and the fisher hadn't had a nibble yet, the boy wandered away in disgust. At the end of the second half-hour Miss Gertie said to herself:

"I know why I don't have any luck. It's because the fish can see me. I'll play a trick on them."

Thereupon she stuck the end of the pole into the bank and left the hook to do its own fishing while she retired to the house for a rest. Ferrers Yorke, the author and artist, was planning a new story. The opening chapters would tell of a meadow, a brook, a bridge and a pretty girl, and the girl would be fishing in that brook. The author was great on local color, and he had come out into the country to find the spot that another would have to imagine. He was quite sure that he could find all but the girl with a fishpole in her hands, and there was one chance in a thousand that he would find her. He had discovered two or three brooks, bridges and meadows when his search brought him to the willows opposite to where Gertie stood.

A rash young man would have stalked out of the bushes with a hello and a wave of his hat, and waded the brook and asked how many fish had been caught, and how many had got away. Mr. Yorke was not rash. He did not betray his presence among the willows. Not that he was a spy by nature, but that, having found his heroine, he must study her a bit.

The heroine of a story must have auburn hair which the sunshine turns to gold.

She must have a neck like a swan, though not as long.

She must have a Grecian nose—not the sort you see around the Greek restaurants of New York, but one made to order in Athens and sent on packed in pink cotton.

Her eyes must be like stars. The stars worn by constables are excluded from the contest.

Her form must be divine, which means it must not be molded on the lines of a sack of flour.

She must have twinkling feet.

She should sing as she fishes.

Did the girl across the creek from the artist fill the bill? Yes, and more. She was a sylph—a houri—an angel. With her for a heroine that story would go like buckwheat cakes on a winter's morning. Even when she became discouraged about the fish and turned away with a shrug of her shoulders, he was delighted with the shrug.

An artist and an author has two souls, as we all know. One is a dream soul, and can hear the whispers of the angels with every breeze that blows through a patch of bull-thistles—the other gives him a proper appetite for a boiled dinner.

When Mr. Yorke had looked upon Gertie with one soul, he laid it aside to look with the other. The girl went away, but she would return. She would confidently expect to find something on her hook. If there was not a victim she would be disappointed.

How a farmer's cast-off boot came to be lying on the farther bank in plain sight is a mystery to be explained some other time. In days gone by a bear might have overtaken him at that spot and devoured everything but the boot. For the two-souled artist to leap the brook and seize the boot and make it fast to the fishhook and leap back among the willows was the work of three minutes.

The angels cannot look down and witness such base tricks and punish them, but there is generally a small boy around to see and to give things away. In this case it was the small boy who had left the spot an hour before. He was returning to see what luck Gertie had had. He came stealthily, and he saw all, and he said to himself:

"Gee, but don't I wish I was as big as a house, so that I could give that chap a licking!"

He waited in hiding to see what the girl would do when she returned. She came slowly. She thought she saw the fishpole quiver. She seized it and flung the "fish" on to the grass behind her. She had just discovered what it was, and was looking at it in wonder, when the small boy left his lair to say:

"I saw the guy when he done it!"

"Did some one put this old boot on my hook?" she asked.

"He did, Miss, and he's right over there in the willers!"

Gertie walked down to the bridge and over it and up the bank to the clump of willows, where the two-souled artist crouched. He saw her coming, but there was no escape for him. He straightened up and raised his hat.

The girl looked him up and down with contempt, and he felt obliged to say:

"—I did it as a joke!"

"Are you what is called a comic supplement to a Sunday paper?" was asked.

"I'm sorry I did it."

"Oh, don't apologize. There are men of all sorts of caliber, you know!"

"But—"

But Gertie had turned her back on him and was walking away. When she rejoined the boy, the latter said:

"Say, that guy is stopping over at Farmer Turner's. Do you want me to go over there and lick him? You made his knees wobble, but I can make his hair stand up."

"I guess he got enough," was the reply, and yet the girl did not congratulate herself upon her victory.

Had it been such a great crime after all?

Wouldn't almost anyone else have taken it as a joke?

Couldn't she have taken it as a joke but for the small boy?

The "guy" was good-looking and a gentleman. A gentleman sometimes jokes as well as other sorts of men. He had said he was sorry, and would have gone further if she had consented to listen. He had blushed and been confused, and had gone away as if looking for a hole to hide in.

Miss Gertie had a temper quick to flash and quick to cool off again, and by the next morning she had made reasonable excuses for the joker. So it was with the small boy. His father had said it was a good joke, and his mother had smiled at it, and the lad had come to feel it a duty to go over to Turner's and tell the guy that he was sorry he had given him away. He was on his way to Turner's across the fields, when he caught sight of Gertie on the highway. She was in the old buggy and behind the old horse which her grandmother had owned for nearly twenty years. She was headed for the village and the postoffice.

A quarter of a mile beyond the girl was the "guy." He was running down the hill and waving his hat at her.

"Now, then, is that feller crazy?" asked the small boy of himself, as he mounted a stump to see the better.

From the brow of the hill the artist had seen a pair of horses and a wagon coming on the dead run. He had instantly realized that the driver of the lighter vehicle would not take the alarm until too late. He was within five rods of her when he recognized Gertie, and as he reached the head of the old horse he grasped the bridle and fairly dragged the outfit into the ditch. As it was, a wheel was taken off the old buggy and the girl thrown out. She was somewhat bruised and terribly scared, and, of course, Mr. Yorke had to assist her to the house, while the small boy remained on the spot to pick up the pieces and assure old Dobbin that he had had the escape of his life.

That evening the same small boy called on Gertie to see if she had any toes broken and to add:

"Did you give the guy any more fits?"

"Why, no," was replied.

"Do you think him nice?"

"I—I think so."

"Is he a hero?"

"He must be."

"Then you'll marry him, of course, and I'll be left high and dry! That's what a boy gets for showing a girl how to go a-fishing and catch an old boot!"

A Word of Precaution.

JUST wherein lies the reason for the use of vegetable preparations for infants and children?

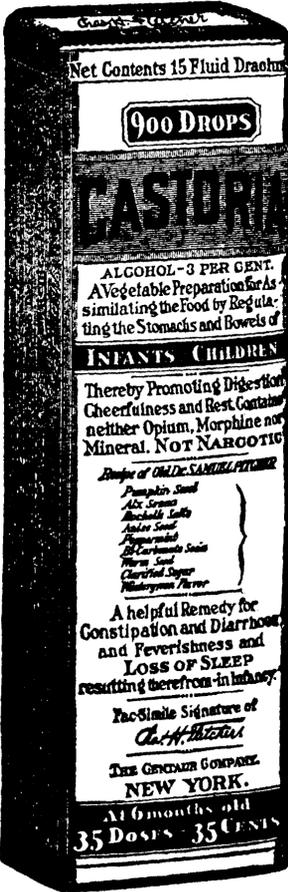

Why are any but vegetable preparations unsafe for infants and children?

Why are Syrups, Cordials and Drops condemned by all Physicians and most laymen?

Why has the Government placed a ban on all preparations containing, among other poisonous drugs, Opium in its variously prepared forms and pleasing tastes, and under its innumerable names?

These are questions that every Mother will do well to inquire about.

Any Physician will recommend the keeping of Fletcher's Castoria in the house for the common ailments of infants and children.

Mansur Drug Co., of St. Paul, Minn., says: "We are not in the habit of recommending proprietary medicines, but we never hesitate to say a good word for Castoria. It is a medical success."

Hegeman & Co., of New York City, N. Y., say: "We can say for your Castoria that it is one of the best selling preparations in our stores. That is conclusive evidence that it is satisfactory to the users."

W. H. Chapman, of Montreal, Que., says: "I have sold Fletcher's Castoria for many years and have yet to hear of one word other than praise of its virtues. I look upon your preparation as one of the few so called patent medicines having merit and unhesitatingly recommend it as a safe household remedy."

Servants Come Into Their Own.

The job of being a domestic servant used to be an hereditary occupation in England. No one was more proud of his profession than a butler. The jokes about the difficulty of getting servants are now appearing in the American fashion. Here is a notice that appeared in the "Servants Wanted" column of an English paper recently:

"General Wanted: good home, high wages on munition scale, and hardly by work; use of piano, bicycle, and drawing room to entertain friends; mistress will teach maid two modern languages, and master will instruct her in conic sections and differential calculus."

BOYS TO WAR

Clifford Van Horn, Roy Hicks and Raymond Harris of this vicinity expect to leave Thursday for Valparaiso Ind. From there they will go to an army mechanical school for instruction in motor trucks and also military training. This school will be similar to the Ann Arbor Army School where Claude Kennedy and Paul Kuhn have just finished their training and who left last Tuesday for an encampment in the south for practical experience in their branch of the army. Their exact destination is unknown to them.

There is a similar training school at the M. A. C., Lansing, where 600 young men are studying auto trucks and military tactics.

They gave exhibition drills and played their army games for the Michigan Rural editors who met at Lansing for three days this month and the spectators were loud in their praise of the young soldiers who are selected for mechanical training.

The five boys above mentioned will find themselves among companions they need not be ashamed of and Livingston county may indeed be proud of these boys who represent the county in this important branch of the service.

CITED FOR BRAVERY

Word was received from somewhere in France that Jerome Markey of Ann Arbor, son of Alderman J. W. Markey (a former Pinckney boy) has been cited for bravery and nominated to receive a war cross.

Markey is a member of Co. E, 126th Inf. and left Ann Arbor last August. He was given an important message to be carried about a mile. He made his way safely through a German barrage and returned with all the necessary information.

Mr. Markey is a cousin of Mrs. Fred Wylie.

FAREWELL PARTY

Last Friday evening a large number of friends and relations gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Bert Hicks in honor of their son Roy who leaves this week for the army. Roy leaves behind a host of friends and carries with him their best wishes.
