but never heard anything from them. I am feeling O. K. but have a cold. It has been quite cold here for a week or two but is getting warmer now. I suppose you wonder when we will be back. That is what we would like to know, but haven't heard anything to make us think we are to get back for some time. I guess with a lot of patience we will get there. We can't expect to get back until peace is signed anyway. I see in the paper where they have a bill in to send volunteers to relieve the drafted men in the army of occupation. Hope they don't have to keep an army over here long enough for that.

Does Francis still work in the same place? Am sending one of our division cards. The four ivy leaves stand for the fourth division and the A. O. for Army of Occupation. We don't have it very hard here, just enough drill to keep our minds off from going back for a while. Got to go on guard every eight days.

Well, as it time for supper I will close, hoping you have got some of my letters by this time, also that you get this one O. K. Best regards to all.

Presents Pitiful Spectacle.

The return to France of the women, children and old men who were sent out of that part of France which was occupied by Germans for more than four years presented pitiful spectacles. Many of these refugees were little tots whose fathers and mothers had been taken away by the cruel Boche to work in Germany or behind the fighting lines. Others were orphans.

Soldier Letter

Sehl, Germany, Feb. 15, 1919.

Dear Father:
 I received your welcome letter today which you mailed January 12. Am wondering how it is you haven't got any of my letters. I have written to you about every week since we came here. We have been here since December 19. It seems as if a letter ought to get there in less time than it does. Some of the boys have got letters from the States in less than three weeks. I also wrote to Francis three times,

This Is Orange Blossom Time in Florida

And it's a good time to leave the Frozen North for a short Winter vacation.

Come on down to Lake Alfred and see one of the most beautiful sights imaginable—thousands of acres of Orange and Grapefruit Trees in full bloom, scenting the air for miles around.

We have a few planted small groves, but none not yet taken, but you cannot buy an acre until you have first seen the property. You had better hurry for these are choice and will be sold soon.

After carefully investigating what others have done in our vicinity, under exactly similar conditions, and you have satisfied yourself that our claim that a Six or Seven-Year-Old Grove, on a conservative estimate, will produce from $200 to $250 per acre Net, you can buy with perfect safety.

If you buy, your trip costs you nothing, as we refund traveling expense to purchasers.

Our groves at Lake Alfred are right on the Main Line of the Atlantic Coast Railroad, in the heart of the Highland-Lake Section, the highest, safest citrus section of Florida, with Ninety Lakes within a Five-Mile radius. Good asphalt and brick roads, schools, etc.

Prices fair, values big, reasonable terms. Send for our illustrated booklet, read it carefully, and then visit Lake Alfred personally.

Woman Could Not Allow Desire to Be in Style to Interfere With Her Curiosity. Much Wisdom in Little One's Idea of the Way in Which Success May Be Won.

When Mrs. Emson met Mrs. Amsley in front of a downtown department store the other day the former laughed.

"I told the clerk I would be back later with my husband to look at the one I finally picked out."

"And did you really take your husband back to see the hats?"

"Only to one store."

"Did you tell the clerks who you were?"

"No."

"I'll bet your husband is glad of that."

"He said he is."

"Did you finally get a hat to suit you?"

"No, but I took the one I liked next best."

"Why did you do that?"

"The one I really preferred came down over my left eye."

"That's stylish."

"I know, but my left eye is my best eye, and I want to be able to see what the other women are wearing."—Youngstown Telegram.

DRUGGISTS! VICK'S VAPORUB SHORTAGE OVERCOME AT LAST

The Deal Scheduled for Last November, Which Was Postponed on Account of the Influenza Epidemic, Is Now Reinstated—Good During the Month of March.

OVER ONE MILLION JARS OF VAPORUB PRODUCED EACH WEEK

It is with pride that we announce to the drug trade that the shortage of Vick's VapoRub, which has lasted since last October, is now overcome. Since January 1st, we have been running our laboratory twenty-three and a half hours out of every twenty-four. Last week our production was 1,000,000 jars and no longer requested to order in advance.

NOVEMBER DEAL REINSTATED. This deal, which we had expected to put on last November and which had to be postponed on account of the shortage of VapoRub, is reinstated for the month of March. This allows a discount of 10% on shipments from jobbers' stock of quantities of from 1 to 4 gross, 5% of this discount is allowed by the jobber and 5% by us.

We advise the retail druggists to place their orders immediately, so that the jobbers will be able to get prompt shipments to them.

THANKS OF THE PUBLIC DUE THE DRUG TRADE DURING THE INFLUENZA EPIDEMIC.

The thanks of the American public are certainly due the entire drug trade—retail, wholesale and manufacturing—for what they accomplished during the recent influenza epidemic. The war caused a shortage of physicians—nurses were almost impossible to obtain—the demand on the drug trade was unexpected and overwhelming, and to this demand they responded nobly. Retail druggists kept open day and night and slept where they dropped behind the prescription counter. Wholesale druggists called their salesmen off the road to help fill orders—hundreds wired us to ship Vick's VapoRub by the quickest route, regardless of expense.

A TREMENDOUS JOB TO INCREASE OUR PRODUCTION

In this emergency we tried to do our part. We scoured the country for raw materials—our Traffic Manager spent his days riding freight cars in—we shipped raw materials in carload lots by express and pleaded with manufacturers to increase their deliveries to us. But it was a slow process. Some of our raw materials are produced only in Japan—supplies in this country were low and shipments required three months to come from the Far East. Then we had to recruit and train skilled labor. We brought our salesmen into the factory and trained them as foremen. We invented new machinery, and managed to install it on Christmas Day, so as not to interfere with the holiday.

143 JARS OF VAPORUB EVERY MINUTE DAY AND NIGHT

We had a plant ready to put on one night shift and since then our laboratory has been running day and night. To feed our automatic machines, which drop out one hundred and forty-three jars of VapoRub a minute or one million and eighty thousand weekly, has required a force of 500 people. Our Cafe Department, created for the benefit of these workers, served 7,000 meals during the month of January alone.

13 MILLION JARS OF VAPORUB DISTRIBUTED SINCE OCTOBER.

An idea of the work we have accomplished this fall may be given by our production figures—13,028,978 jars of VapoRub manufactured and distributed since last October—one jar for every two families in the entire United States.

During the influenza epidemic Vick's VapoRub was used as an external application in connection with the physician's treatment, and thousands of people, unable to obtain a doctor, relied on Vick's almost exclusively.

Literally millions of families all over the country, from California to Maine, and from the Great Lakes to the Gulf, have found Vick's VapoRub the ideal home remedy for croup and cold troubles.

A NERVOUS BREAKDOWN

Miss Kelly Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Restored Her Health.

Newark, N. J.—“For about three years I suffered from nervous breakdown and got so weak I could hardly stand, and had headaches every day. I tried everything I could think of and was under a physician's care for two years. A girl friend had used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and she told me about it. From the first day I took it I began to feel better and now I am well and able to do most any kind of work. I have been recommending the Compound ever since and give you my permission to publish this letter.”—Miss FLO KELLY, 476 So. 14th St., Newark, N. J.

The reason this famous root and herb remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, was so successful in Miss Kelly's case was because it went to the root of her trouble, restored her to a normal healthy condition and as a result her nervousness disappeared.

THE STONE LIONS.

“Well Comrade, how do things strike you these days? And how have you been feeling of late?”

“Why do you call me comrade?”

“You can't answer a question by asking another,” said the first speaker. “But I will tell you. I call you Comrade just as I would call you Companion or Chum or Pal. You are always here with me. We are always together. So we are friends.”

“Well,” said the second speaker, “we can't very well help that. We're great stone lions and we were put in front of this big building to add to the beauty and dignity and stateliness and grandeur of this building.”

“Fine words you are getting off,” said the first stone lion. “But what do they all mean?”

“They all mean,” answered the second lion, “that we add in beauty and in splendor to the building. They mean we're great stone lions and we're worthy of being put in front of such a building. For, do you know what the building is?”

“What is it?” asked the first lion.

“I think I know, but I would like to have you tell me.”

“It's a library. Many people, old and young, come to read books. They

GRANDMA USED SAGE TEA TO DARKEN HAIR

She mixed Sulphur with it to Restore Color, Gloss, Youthfulness.

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea with sulphur added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant. Just a few applications will prove a revelation if your hair is fading, streaked or gray. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get a bottle of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound at any drug store all ready for use. This is the old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients.

While wispy, gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, no one can tell, because it does so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant.—Adv.

Japanese Women in the Home.

Japan as a nation is still backward in giving freedom to its women, though I believe there are 175 practicing women physicians in Japan. For the most part the ideal is still distinctly “the woman in the house.”

And in the home man is the superior. Men and women eat the same food, but the man gets all the tidbits. But perhaps the men in Japan are as fond of their woman folk as they are anywhere.

Tried to Look Wise and Important.

come to take away books to read at home on snowy nights like this when it is so cozy indoors. They bring books back which they have read and they also bring books and magazines which they own themselves so the library can send them off to others who haven't all the books and magazines they should have.

“It has always made me feel as though I should act in a very wise manner. I have tried to make my face look solemn and as though I would tell no secrets, but that deep within me I know so much.”

“Yes, I have been right in what I have thought,” said the second lion. “And I too have tried to look wise and important, for though folks read books which give them pleasure and though they read funny books and laugh, still the great idea of reading to my stone mind is to make one wise. And it looks so interesting to be wise.”

“We may never say anything which is bright, we may never say anything at all. But oh, to look wise, that is the great thing.”

“That's not very smart, is it? You look together and because we both look wise that I call you comrade and comrade lion and comrade stone lion, I almost always call you twin brother.”

“I'm sure you might,” said the second lion, “if you are going to honor me with all other titles. In fact I think I have a twinty feeling for you. I look and I feel and I act the same way and now the snow is falling down on my nose and my eyes and my paws in just the same way.”

“Then Twin,” said the first lion, “tell me how you have been feeling of late. Just the same as I have been feeling? Well, and strong, and interested in everything about even though we must still wear our wise expressions?”

“Just the same,” said the second lion.

“And how have things struck you?” asked the first lion.

“I've seen people working for great and mighty causes. I've seen children doing the same. I've heard them make speeches and ask people to give to things that were well worth giving to, Lion Twin. And I've thought it was tunfulcent.

“It has been splendid to sit in front of this big building and to see the people of the great city march by all day long in endless numbers. They have looked so gay and so happy and yet these same people can be serious. They can work and give and sacrifice. They can read and study and they can work and play and make others happy.

“Oh, it's fine to sit here and see what splendid creatures men and women, boys and girls are!” ended the lion.

GREEN MANURE CROPS The New Jersey experiment station calculates that two crops of green manure contain as much phosphoric acid and potash and nearly as much nitrogen as 20 tons of stable manure. Rye, soy beans and clovers are crops most often used. In the gardening section of the state rye is planted as a cover crop as soon as potatoes and early vegetables are out of the way. This is plowed under and takes the place of some of the barnyard manure that was formerly hauled.

Prohibition
Edited by M. E. S.
Bishop Chas. D. Williams, head of the Detroit diocese of the Episcopal Church of Michigan gives utterance to the following in a letter to the Detroit News:
"To the Editor: May I call your attention to an exceedingly subtle camouflage in the proposed wine and beer (so called) amendment to be submitted at the spring election on April 7, 1919? If any have made up their minds to vote for the amendment it is because they have not read it. The "vote catching" name is an exceedingly subtle and skillful camouflage which hides as dishonest and vicious a piece of legislation as was ever palmed off on a gullible crowd of voters."
1. It does not specify any limit or even specify the percentage of alcohol allowance in any of the beverages it makes lawful. "Cider, wines, beer, ale and porter" are listed. We all know that hard cider may contain large per cent of alcohol and one can get as gloriously or devilishly drunk on it as on rot-gut whiskey. And furthermore, if whiskey can be disguised as "cold tea" an easier disguise could be found in any of these listed and legalized beverages.
2. (And this is most important.) Every safeguard or restriction heretofore thrown about the saloon and the liquor trade is abolished by this amendment.
It makes "forever lawful in this state to import, transport, manufacture, use, buy, sell, keep for sale, give away, barter or furnish" the aforesaid beverages.
It repeals all previously enacted restrictions on such traffic.
It gives the Legislature only the power by general laws to "license reasonably the manufacture of and reasonably license and regulate the sale of vinous, malt, brewed or fermented liquors."
This at one stroke abolishes every safeguard and restraint hitherto put about the saloon.
The saloon may be located next door to any church or saloon.

LAXATIVE for Aged People

THE BANE of old age is constipation. The bowels become weak and unable to perform their functions without aid. For this purpose only the mildest and gentlest laxative should be used. The use of harsh cathartics aggravates the trouble and makes the constipation worse. Chamberlain's Tablets are a favorite with people of middle age and older on account of their gentle action.

CHAPTER XI—Continued.

I count this one of the great events of my youth. But there was a greater one, although it seemed not so at the time of it. A traveler on the road to Ballybeen had dropped his pocketbook containing a large amount of money—$2,700 was the sum, if I remember rightly. He was a man who, being justly suspicious of the banks, had withdrawn his money. Posters announced the loss and the offer of a large reward. The village was profoundly stirred by them. Searching parties went up the road stirring its dust and groping in its grass and briars for the great prize which was supposed to be lying there. It was said, however, that the quest had been unsuccessful. So the lost pocketbook became a treasured mystery of the village and of all the hills and valleys toward Ballybeen—a topic of old wives and gabbling husbands at the fireside for unnumbered years.

Deel drew her chair near me and touched my hair very gently and looked into my face without speaking. "Ayes! I know," she said presently, in a kind of caressing tone, with a touch of sadness in it. "They ain't used to coarse homespun stuff down there in the village. They made fun of ye—didn't they, Bart?"

"I don't care about that," I assured them. "The mind's the measure of the man," I quoted, remembering the lines the Senator had repeated to me.

"That's sound!" Uncle Peabody exclaimed with enthusiasm.

Aunt Deel took my hand in hers and surveyed it thoughtfully for a moment without speaking.

"You ain't goin' to have to suffer that way no more," she said in a low tone. "We're goin' to be more comfortable—ayes. Yer uncle thought we better go west, but I couldn't bear to go off so fur an' leave mother an' father an' sister Susan an' all the folks we loved layin' here in the ground alone—I want to lay down with 'em by an' by an' wait for the sound o' the trumpet—ayes!—mebbe it'll be for thousands o' years—ayes!"

To our astonishment the clock struck twelve.

"Hurrah! It's merry Christmas!" said Uncle Peabody as he jumped to his feet and began to sing of the little Lord Jesus.

We joined him while he stood beating time with his right hand after the fashion of a singing master.

caught my eye was a big silver watch hanging by a long golden chain to one of the boughs. Uncle Peabody took it down and held it aloft by the chain, so that none should miss the sight, saying:

"From Santa Claus for Bart!"

A murmur of admiration ran through the company which gathered around me as I held the treasure in my trembling hands.

"This is for Bart, too," Uncle Peabody shouted as he took down a bolt of soft blue cloth and laid it in my arms. "Now there's somethin' that's jest about as slick as a kitten's ear. Feel of it. It's for a suit o' clothes. Come all the way from Burlington. Now get-up there. You've got your load."

I moved out of the way in a hurry, case of merriment. It was his one great day of pride and vanity. He did not try to conceal them.

The other presents floated for a moment in this irresistible tide of laughing good will and found their owners. I have never forgotten how Uncle Jabez chased Aunt Minerva around the house with a wooden snake cunningly carved and colored. I observed there were many things on the tree which had not been taken down when we younger ones gathered up our wealth and repaired to Aunt Deel's room to feast our eyes upon it and compare our good fortune.

The women and the big girls rolled up their sleeves and went to work with Aunt Deel preparing the dinner. The great turkey and the chicken pie were made ready and put in the oven and the potatoes and the onions and the winter squash were soon boiling in their pots on the stovetop. Meanwhile the children were playing in my aunt's bedroom and Uncle Hiram and Uncle Jabez were pulling sticks in a corner while the other men sat tipped against the wall watching and making playful comments—all save my Uncle Peabody, who was trying to touch his head to the floor and then straighten up with the aid of the broomstick.

In the midst of it Aunt Deel opened the front door and old Kate, the Silent Woman, entered. To my surprise, she wore a decent-looking dress of gray homespun cloth and a white cloud looped over her head and ears and tied around her neck and a good pair of boots.

"Merry Christmas!" we all shouted.

through the open door to the other room.

"I'll tell ye what I'd do," she whispered. "I'd give 'em to ol' Kate—ayes! She's goin' to stay with us till tomorrow."

"Good idee!" said Uncle Peabody.

So I took the money out of their hands and went in and gave it to the Silent Woman.

"That's your present from me," I said.

How can I forget how she held my arm against her with that loving, familiar, rocking motion of a woman who is soothing a baby at her breast and kissed my coat sleeve? She released my arm and, turning to the window, leaned her head upon its sill and shook with sobs. The dusk had thickened. As I returned to my seat by the stove I could dimly see her form against the light of the window. We sat in silence for a little while.

Then Uncle Peabody rose and got a candle and lit it at the hearth.

I held the lantern while Uncle Peabody fed the sheep and the two cows and milked—a slight chore these winter days.

"You and I are to go off to bed purty early," he said as we were going back to the house. "Yer Aunt Deel wants to see Kate alone and git her to talk if she can."

"I dunno but she'll swing back into this world ag'in," said Uncle Peabody when we had gone up to our little room. "I guess all she needs is to be treated like a human bein'." Yer Aunt Deel an' I couldn't git over thinkin' what she done for you that night in the ol' barn. So I took some o' yer aunt's good clothes to her an' a pair o' boots an' asked her to come to Chris'mas. She lives in a little room over the blacksmith shop down to Butterfield's mill. I told her I'd come after her with the cutter but she shook her head. I knew she'd rather walk."

He was yawning as he spoke and soon we were both asleep under the shingles.

CHAPTER XII.

The Thing and Other Things.

I returned to Mr. Hackett's house late in the afternoon of New Year's day. The schoolmaster was lying on a big lounge in a corner of their front room with the children about him. The dusk was falling.

"We're goin' to move," said my uncle presently. "We've agreed to get out by the middle o' May."

"How does that happen?" I asked.

"I settled with Grimshaw and agreed to go. If it hadn't 'a' been for Wright and Baldwin we wouldn't 'a' got a cent. They threatened to bid against him at the sale. So he settled. We're goin' to have a new home. We've bought a hundred an' fifty acres from Abe Leonard. Goin' to build a new house in the spring. It will be nearer the village."

He playfully nudged my ribs with his elbow.

"We've had a little good luck, Bart," he went on. "I'll tell ye what it is if you won't say anything about it."

I promised.

"I dunno as it would matter much," he continued, "but I don't want to do any braggin'. It ain't anybody's business, anyway. An old uncle over in Vermont died three weeks ago and left us thirty-eight hundred dollars. It was old Uncle Ezra Baynes o' Hinesburg. Died without a chick or child. Your aunt and me slipped down to Potsdam an' took the stage an' went over an' got the money. It was more money than I ever see before."

"We don't have to set up and watch like the shepherds."

We drew our boots on the chair round with hands clasped over the knee—how familiar is the process, and yet I haven't seen it in more than half a century! I lighted a candle and scampered upstairs in my stocking feet. Uncle Peabody following close and slapping my thigh as if my pace were not fast enough for him. In the midst of our skylarking the candle tumbled to the floor and I had to go back to the stove and relight it.

How good it seemed to be back in the old room under the shingles! The heat of the stovepipe had warmed its hospitality.

"It's been kind o' lonesome here," said Aunt Peabody as he opened the window. "I always let the wind come in to keep me company—it gits so warm."

"Ye can't look at yer stockin' yet," said Aunt Deel when I came downstairs about eight o'clock, having slept through chore time. I remember it was the delicious aroma of frying ham and buckwheat cakes which awoke me; and who wouldn't rise and shake off the cloak of slumber on a bright, cold winter morning with such provocation?

side. Aunt Deel took the cloud off her head while Kate drew her mittens—newly knitted of the best yarn. Then my aunt brought some stockings and a shawl from the tree and laid them on the lap of old Kate. What a silence fell upon us as we saw tears coursing down the cheeks of this lonely old woman of the countryside—tears of joy, doubtless, for God knows how long it had been since the poor, abandoned soul had seen a merry Christmas and shared its kindness. I did not fail to observe how clean her face and hands looked! She was greatly changed.

She took my hand as I went to her side and tenderly caressed it. A gentler smile came to her face than ever I had seen upon it. The old stern look returned for a moment as she held one finger aloft in a gesture which only I and my Aunt Deel understood. We knew it signified a peril and a mystery. That I should have to meet it, somewhere up the hidden pathway, I had no doubt whatever.

"Dinner's ready!" exclaimed the cheerful voice of Aunt Deel.

Then what a stirring of chairs and feet as we sat down at the table. Old Kate sat by the side of my aunt and we were all surprised at her good man-in time for the last o' them. Sit down, lad, and God give ye patience! It'll soon be over."

After supper he got out his boxing gloves and gave me a lesson in the art of self-defense, in which, I was soon to learn, he was highly accomplished, for we had a few rounds together every day after that. He keenly enjoyed this form of exercise and I soon began to. My capacity for taking punishment without flinching grew apace and before long I got the knack of countering and that pleased him more even than my work in school, I have sometimes thought.

"God bless ye, boy!" he exclaimed one day after I had landed heavily on his cheek, "ye've a nice way o' sneakin' in with yer right. I've a notion ye may find it useful some day."

I wondered a little why he should say that, and while I was wondering he felled me with a stinging blow on my nose.

"Ah, my lad—there's the best thing I have seen ye do—get up an' come back with no mad in ye," he said as he gave me his hand.

One day the schoolmaster called the older boys to the front seats in his room and I among them.

It was a cold, clear night, and when we reached home the new stove was snapping with the heat in its firebox and the pudding puffing in the pot and old Shep dreaming in the chimney corner. Aunt Deel gave me a hug at the door. Shep barked and leaped to my shoulders.

"Why, Bart! You're growin' like a weed—ain't ye?—ayes ye be," my aunt said as she stood and looked at me. "Set right down here an' warm ye—ayes!—I've done all the chores—ayes!"

How warm and comfortable was the dear old room with those beloved faces in it. I wonder if paradise itself can seem more pleasant to me. I have had the best food this world can provide, in my time, but never anything that I ate with a keener relish than the pudding and milk and bread and butter and cheese and pumpkin pie which Aunt Deel gave us that night.

Supper over, I wiped the dishes for my aunt while Uncle Peabody went out to feed and water the horses. Then we sat down in the genial warmth while I told the story of my life in "the busy town," as they called it. What pride and attention they gave me then!

My fine clothes and the story of how I had come by them taxed my ingenuity somewhat, although not improperly. I had to be careful not to let them know that I had been ashamed of the homemade suit. They somehow felt the truth about it and a little silence followed the story. Then Aunt

I tell you! Aunt Deel went on. "Santa Claus won't git here short o' noon I wouldn't wonder—ayes!"

About eleven o'clock Uncle Hiram and Aunt Eliza and their five children arrived with loud and merry greetings. Then came other aunts and uncles and cousins. With what noisy good cheer the men entered the house after they had put up their horses! I remember how they laid their hard, heavy hands on my head and shook it a little as they spoke of my "stretchin' up" or gave me a playful slap on the shoulder—an ancient token of good will—the first form of the accolade, I fancy. What joyful good humor there was in those simple men and women—enough to temper the woes of a city if it could have been applied to their relief. They stood thick around the stove warming themselves and taking off its griddles and opening its doors and surveying it inside and out with much curiosity.

"Now for the Christmas tree," said Uncle Peabody as he led the way into our best room, where a fire was burning in the old Franklin grate. "Come on, boys an' girls."

What a wonderful sight was the Christmas tree—the first we had had in our house—a fine spreading balsam loaded with presents! Uncle Hiram jumped into the air and clapped his feet together and shouted: "Hold me, somebody, or I'll grab the bull tree an' run away with it."

Uncle Jabez held one foot in both hands before him and joyfully hopped around the tree.

These relatives had brought their family gifts, some days before, to be hung on its branches. The thing that my uncle said to me was, "You've got to be a little more careful about that suit. It's a fine suit, but it's a little bit shabby in places. You'd better have it made up by a tailor. It'll be worth the money."

My uncle was right. The suit was indeed shabby in places. I had to have it made up by a tailor. It was worth the money.

The day had turned dark. The temperature had risen and the air was dank and chilly. The men began to hitch up their horses.

So, one by one, the sleighloads left us with cheery good-bys and a grinding of runners and a jingling of bells. When the last had gone Uncle Peabody and I went into the house. Aunt Deel sat by the stove, old Kate by the window looking out at the falling dusk. How still the house seemed!

"There's one thing I forgot," I said as I proudly took out of my wallet the six one-dollar bills which I had earned by working Saturdays and handed three of them to my aunt and three to my uncle, saying:

"That is my Christmas present to you. I earned it myself."

I remember so well their astonishment and the trembling of their hands and the look of their faces.

"It's grand—ayes!" Aunt Deel said in a low tone.

She rose in a moment and beckoned to me and my uncle. We followed her to the open door to the other room.

"I'll tell ye what I'd do," she whispered. "I'd give 'em to ol' Kate—ayes! She's goin' to stay with us till tomorrow."

"Good idee!" said Uncle Peabody.

So I took the money out of their hands and went in and gave it to the Silent Woman.

"That's your present from me," I said.

How can I forget how she held my arm against her with that loving, familiar, rocking motion of a woman who is soothing a baby at her breast and kissed my coat sleeve? She released my arm and, turning to the window, leaned her head upon its sill and shook with sobs. The dusk had thickened. As I returned to my seat by the stove I could dimly see her form against the light of the window. We sat in silence for a little while.

Then Uncle Peabody rose and got a candle and lit it at the hearth.

I held the lantern while Uncle Peabody fed the sheep and the two cows and milked—a slight chore these winter days.

"You and I are to go off to bed purty early," he said as we were going back to the house. "Yer Aunt Deel wants to see Kate alone and git her to talk if she can."

"I dunno but she'll swing back into this world ag'in," said Uncle Peabody when we had gone up to our little room. "I guess all she needs is to be treated like a human bein'." Yer Aunt Deel an' I couldn't git over thinkin' what she done for you that night in the ol' barn. So I took some o' yer aunt's good clothes to her an' a pair o' boots an' asked her to come to Chris'mas. She lives in a little room over the blacksmith shop down to Butterfield's mill. I told her I'd come after her with the cutter but she shook her head. I knew she'd rather walk."

He was yawning as he spoke and soon we were both asleep under the shingles.

Proof of it.

"Your sensible friend may have no superstition, but she is an old hen."
"Maybe she is, but she laid a ghost."

Only what we have wrought into character during life can we take away with us.—Spurgeon.

HIGHWAY BONDS NOT AN ISSUE THIS ELECTION

VOTE ON APRIL 7 MERELY AUTHORIZES PEOPLE TO USE CREDIT OF STATE.

$50,000,000 ONLY A LIMIT

Must Have Fund Available to Meet Uncle Sam's Dollar-For-Dollar Offer.

(By P. T. Colgrove, President Mich. State Good Roads Assn.)

Everywhere I go I am asked about "this road bond issue".

There is no bond issue!

The question to be submitted to the people at the election April 7th, involves merely an amendment to the constitution to give the citizens of the state the authority through their representatives in the Legislature to issue bonds from time to time to complete a system of main market highways throughout Michigan and to assure us our share of the money Uncle Sam is going to turn over for road work in progressive states.

When Rompage faded, he got her name and address in a Red Cross package and that was all he knew about her. So he did the thing that a lovesick soldier usually does—wrote her a sweet little letter telling how he longed to correspond with some one. How did he know but that a real romance might start? This was her answer: "I think this war is horrid. I am doing my share. I buy War Savings stamps and eat corn bread, which I don't like. Also I am learning to knit." But the cruel part is that she added: "I am ten years old."

Prohibition, Continued

It will sell to minors, little children, women, habitual drunkards, insane, feeble-minded, and in fact anybody "without let or hindrance". If established the saloon will be an impregnable citadel beyond the reach of the law or the legislature and so fortified it could practice any abuse it chose. The amendment, if enacted, would make the saloon and the liquor trade generally more potent and pernicious as a concealed power in politics than they ever were in the "good old days" before the state went dry. Are the people of Michigan going to be fooled by this camouflage? Char. D. Williams.

How Fast Shot Travels. When standing within a few yards of a gun's muzzle at the time of discharge, a person would be amazingly astonished were he only able to see the shot go whizzing by. Experiments in instantaneous photography prove that the shot not only spread out, cometlike, as they fly, but they string out, one behind another at a much greater distance than they spread. Thus, with a cylinder gun, when the shot of a charge reaches a target that is 40 yards away, the last shot is lagging full ten yards behind. Even a chokebore gun shot will lag behind eight yards in 40. This accounts for the wide swath that is mowed in a flock of ducks on which a charge of shot falls just right. About 5 per cent only of the shot, according to the most reliable deductions from experiments, arrive simultaneously at the target aimed at, the others lagging in the ratio named above.
