RECOLLECTIONS OF BY-GONE DAYS

By Jas. T. Eaman

When my father first came to the settlement which is now the village of Pinckney, in October of 1835, he found there three inhabitants, Sanford Marble, his wife, Susan, and little daughter, Mary. They were among the first of those sturdy New Englanders to brave the hardships of the pioneer life in search of the Eldorado which was to be found in native wilds of the Territory of Michigan.

Mr. Marble was born in Pittsfield, Massachusetts in 1795. While a youth he was apprenticed to learn the trade of a scythe maker. Seven of the good young years of his life were spent in acquiring this trade, after which he removed to Litchfield, Conn., to engage in the pursuit of his craft as a skilled mechanic and steel worker. He was thirty-nine years old when he joined with the hundreds of other New Englanders in search of new homes in the then "far west". With his family and a younger brother he reached Ann Arbor in the spring of 1834.

Ann Arbor was then the most important settlement west of Detroit, and, as now, was county seat of Washtenaw County, and Washtenaw County then embraced all of Livingston County and

Soldier Letter

Russia, Feb. 28, 1919.

Dear Brother and All:

No doubt you can imagine how glad I was to hear from you and know are all well and receiving my letters. The Christmas box you sent has not arrived yet—I think it has gone to the bottom of the sea. I hear some of the December mail was sunk a few weeks ago. The flu has taken many of the old friends at home, but it has not been so bad here on account of the weather being so—(censored)

I am glad you received my cablegram in time for Christmas. I presume the weather will soon be fine at home. It will be awful here—water knee deep—I only wish we could get out of here before spring. I see by some of the papers that they are putting up quite a kick in the States. Well here's hoping they will keep on kicking till we get out of here.

We have been busy chasing from one front to another, so that I have not had time to write oftener.

March 1st. We are all still doing "our bit" over here. The weather is clear and the days are getting much longer. It makes me think of the spring time at home. Love and best wishes to all.

L. E. RICHARDS

Government land since was located there and that was where the many prospectors came to study the maps and charts of the territory made by the U. S. Surveyors to help them to decide where they could best locate.

As the result of his study and explorations of the surrounding country Mr. Marble decided on T. 1 N. of R. 4 E. as the place for him, and the following spring (1834) came to the place where my father found him in the fall of that year. He had brought with him charts of the unclaimed lands of the township and was serving other homeseekers as a "land looker" or guide in their search for desirable sites. It was while serving my father in that capacity that they lost their way and had to pass the night in crocheted trees to be safe from the wolves. Next morning, however, they found their way to Section 18 and located their claims on what is now known as the "Marble Plains" or the "Burr Oak Plains" of Putnam. Their claims were side by side—father's being the N. ½ of N. E. ¼ of Section 18, and Mr. Marble's the S. ½ of the same quarter.

That winter Mr. Marble cut logs and began to build a house but before it was completed Prof. Jean Louis Pasquelle, who had been brought to Ann Arbor to accept the Chair of French out in search of a country home to which he could take his family of boys and persuaded Mr. Marble to sell his embryo home to him. Mr. Marble then pre-empted the eighty acres on the opposite side of the highway, which was his home for the remainder of his days.

Here his son James, a conspicuous figure in the subsequent history of Putnam, was born and has since lived, being entitled, I believe, to the distinction of being the only man in Livingston County who has lived for eighty years at the place in which he was born. Mr. Marble built the first frame barn that was built in Putnam, and, as a barn was the only building large enough to accommodate any public gathering, this barn served its turn as ballroom, hall, and house for religious worship. Mr. Marble also built the first brick dwelling in Putnam. He gave to the school district (No. 9) the site on which its schoolhouse now stands.

Although "Uncle Sanford", as we always called him, was twenty years my father's senior and they held different views in both politics and religion, from the time they became "lost in the woods" they were always the closest of friends. In the thirty years in which they were then nearest neighbors, nothing ever occurred to mar their friendship or shake their confidence in each other.

I was but sixteen years old when Mr. Marble died, and these reminiscences for the most part were handed down to me by my parents, yet I remember him as a genial, kindly, warm-hearted old man, full of anecdotes and quick at repartee. To listen to his conversation was a rare treat. In business he was the soul of honor. His word was as good as a bond. Always conservative, never venturesome or speculative, he never sought for what he did not earn. His is a memory that it is a pleasure to recall.

Government of the Great War. It is one of the regular dress or parade helmets so proudly worn by the Prussian troops before our men went over there and "persuaded" the boches that civilian headgear is more useful—if not as ornamental. Only four of these helmets were sent to Livingston county.

BASE BALL

South Lyon and Pinckney played an alleged game last Friday.

The South Lyon team is composed of much smaller boys than are usually played on high school nines, and they were no match for the fast Pinckney boys.

Only six innings were played and the result of the so-called ball game is in some doubt as the runs came in so fast the scorers were unable to keep accurate tab on the results. Somewhere between twenty and thirty to three in Pinckney's favor is near enough, however, to show how the six innings were played.

This makes three victories and one defeat for the local team out of a total of four games played so far this season.

Sheriff Miller Miller chaperoned the Junior Howell ball team to Pinckney in majesty of the law, as represented by Mr. Miller, could save his team from defeat, and he and his proteges returned to Howell carrying the news that Pinckney was victor by a score of 23 to 15.

SHORN OF MILITARY POWER

Enemy Must Pay $5,000,000,000 as Initial Payment for Damages; Return Alsace-Lorraine and Agree to Trial of Ex-Kaiser

Paris, May 8.—Following is the official brief summary of the peace treaty as presented to the German plenipotentiaries at a memorable assembly at Versailles on Wednesday afternoon, attended by the delegates of the twenty-seven nations which are parties to the peace pact:

Restoration of Alsace-Lorraine. Temporary internationalization of Saar coal basin. Permanent internationalization of Danzig. Territorial changes toward Belgium and Denmark. Cedes Silesia to Poland. Removes all territorial and political rights outside Europe, and renounces, all territorial and political rights outside Europe, as to her own or her allies' territories, and especial-mark and in East Prussia, cedes most of upper Silesia to Poland, and renounces all territorial and political rights outside Europe, as to her own or her allies' territories, and especially to Morocco, Egypt, Siam, Liberia and Shantung.

She also recognizes the total independence of German-Austria, Czechoslovakia and Poland.

Her army is reduced to 100,000 men, including officers.

Conscription within her territories is abolished.

All forts 50 kilometers east of the Rhine are to be razed.

All importation, exportation and nearly all production of war material is stopped.

German Navy is Reduced. Allied occupation of parts of Germany will continue till reparation is made, but will be reduced at the end of each of three five-year periods if Germany is fulfilling her obligations.

Any violation by Germany of the conditions as to the zone 50 kilometers east of the Rhine will be regarded as an act of war.

The German navy is reduced to six battleships, six light cruisers and twelve torpedo boats, without submarines, and a personnel of not over 15,000.

Germany is forbidden to build forts controlling the Baltic; must demolish Heligoland, open the Kiel canal to all nations and surrender her fourteen submarine cables.

She may have no military or naval air forces except 100 unarmed seaplanes until October 1 to detect mines.

Responsible for All Damages. Germany may manufacture aviation material for only six months.

Germany accepts full responsibility for all damages caused to allied and associated governments and nationals, agrees specifically to reimburse all civilian damages beginning with an initial payment of 20,000,000,000 marks, subsequent payments to be secured by bonds to be issued at the discretion of the reparation commission.

Germany is to pay shipping damage on a ton-for-ton basis by cession of a large part of her merchant, coasting and river fleets and by new construction, and to devote her economic resources to the rebuilding of devastated regions.

Germany agrees to return to the 1914 most-favored-nation tariffs without discrimination of any sort; to allow allied and associated nationals freedom of transit through her territories, and to accept highly detailed provisions, as pre-war debts, unfair competition, internationalization of roads and rivers, and other economic and financial clauses.

She also agrees to the trial of the ex-kaiser by an international high court for a supreme offense against international morality and of other nationals for violation of the laws and customs of war. Holland to be asked to extradite the former and Germany being responsible for delivering the latter.

The league of nations is accepted by the allied and associated powers as operative, and by Germany in principle, but without membership.

Similarly an international labor body is brought into being with a permanent office and an annual convention.

A great number of international bodies of different kinds and for different purposes are created, some under the league of nations, some to execute the peace treaty. Among the former is the commission to govern the Saar basin till a plebiscite is held 15 years hence.

The high commissioner of Danzig, which is created into a free city under the league, and various commissions for plebiscites in Malmody, Schleswig and East Prussia are provided for.

Among those commissions to carry out the peace treaty are:

Germany accepts full responsibility for all damages caused to allied and associated governments and nationals, agrees specifically to reimburse all civilian damages beginning with an initial payment of 20,000,000,000 marks, subsequent payments to be secured by bonds to be issued at the discretion of the reparation commission.

Italy Promised Fiume. As a basis of resuming participation in the peace negotiations Premier Orlando accepted a proposal that Italy administer Fiume as a mandatory of the league of nations until 1923, after which Fiume will revert to Italian sovereignty.

During the four years of Italian administration a harbor for the Jugoslavs will be built at a port a few miles lower down the Adriatic coast. The harbor will have railroad communication with Agram and other cities. Italy, it is understood, also is preparing to make sacrifices of some of her other claims on the Dalmatian coast.

Italians Back at Peace Table. Paris, May 8.—Vittorio Orlando, the Italian premier, and Baron Sonnino, the foreign minister, arrived in Paris from Rome just in time to be present at the presentation of the peace treaty to the Germans at Versailles.

The Italian premier arrived at the Paris "White House" just as the council of four reassembled and resumed his seat in the council.

"That man Jones is the meanest human being God ever let— Yes, sir, coming, sir!" He started for the open door with surprising alacrity. Barnes surveyed the little chamber. It was just what he had expected. It would be. The walls were covered with a garish paper selected by one who had an eye but not a taste for color—bright pink flowers that looked more or less like chunks of a shattered watermelon split promiscuously over a background of pearl gray. The bedstead, bureau and washstand were offensively modern. Everything was as clean as a pin, however, and the bed looked comfortable. He stepped to the small, many-paned window and looked out into the night. The storm was at its height. In all his life he never had heard such a clatter of rain, nor a wind that shrieked so appallingly. His thoughts went quite naturally to the woman who was out there in the thick of it. He wondered how she was faring and lamented that she was not in his place now and he in hers. What was she doing up in this God-forsaken country? What was the name of the place she was bound for? They descended the stairs and entered the taproom, where a dozen men were seated around the tables, all of them with pewter mugs in front of them. Standing at the top table—that is to say, the one farthest removed from the door and commanding the attention of every creature in the room—was the imposing figure of Lyndon Rutherford. He was reciting, in a sonorous voice and with tremendous fervor, the famous Kipling poem. A genial smile wiped the tragic expression from his face. He advanced upon Barnes and the beaming Mr. Dillingford, his hand extended. "My dear fellow," he exclaimed soundingly, "how are you?" Cordial-way, I dare say I could do with a little snack, as you so aptly put it. Just a bite or two. What have you ready, Miss Tilly?" Miss Tilly was a buxom female of forty or thereabouts, with spectacles. She was one of those sedentary waitresses who had been long in the employ of Mr. Jones. She hated the sight of them. Mr. Rutherford's cheeks were red or two may have been Barnes or he did not battle with Tilly. He had four eggs, a ham, and other things in proportion. He talked a great deal, proving in that way that it was a supper well worth speaking for. Among other things he dilated at great length upon his reasons for not being a member of the Players of the Lambs in New York city. It seems that he had promised his dear, devoted wife that he would never join a club of any description. Dear old girl, he would as soon have cut off his right hand as to break any promise made to her. He brushed something away from his eyes, and his chin, contracting, trembled slightly. "What is it, Mr. Bacon? Any word from New York?" Mr. Bacon hovered near, perhaps hungrily.

mediate, however, he decided to have a look at the weather. His uneasiness concerning the young woman of the crossroads increased as he peered at the wall of blackness looming up beyond the circle of light. She was somewhere outside that sinister black wall and in the smothering grasp of those invisible hills, but was she living or dead? Had he reached her safely and soundly? "He tried to extend a word from the confidence she had pressed in the ability and integrity of the old man who drove with her greater boldness than one would have looked for in a wild and irresponsible youngster. He recalled with a thrill the imperious manner in which she had directed him to the inn, and his surprising servility. It suddenly occurred to him that she was no ordinary person; he was under amazed that he had not thought of it before. Moreover, now that he thought of it, there was, even in the agreeable rejoinders she had made to his offerings, the faint suggestion of an accent that should have struck him at the time but did not for the obvious reason that he was then not at all interested in her. Her English was so perfect that perceptible foreign flavor that now he detected in his reflections. He tried to guess the dialect. Was it French or Italian or Spanish? Certainly it was not German. He took a few turns up and down the long porch, stopping finally at the upper end. The clear, inspiring clang of a hammer on an anvil fell suddenly upon his ears. He looked at his watch. The hour was nine, certainly an unusual time for men to be at work in a forge. He remembered two men in the taproom who were bare-armed and wore the shapeless leather aprons of the smithy.

Hart's tavern is entertainingly serio-comic, when suddenly tragedy takes the stage—battle, murder and sudden death.

never had Barnes seen anything quite so overpowering in the way of a suit. Joseph's coat of many colors was no longer a vision of childhood. It was a reality. The checks were an inch square and each cube had a narrow border of azure blue. The general tone was a dirty gray, due no doubt to age and a constitution that would not allow it to outlive its usefulness. "Meet Mr. Bacon, Mr. Barnes," introduced Mr. Dillingford, going to the needless exertion of indicating Mr. Bacon with a generous sweep of his free hand. "Our heavy leads. Mr. Montague Bacon, also of New York." "Ham and eggs, pork tenderloin, country sausage, rump steak and spring chicken," said Mr. Bacon in a cavernous voice, getting it over with while the list was fresh in his memory. "Fried and boiled potatoes, beans, succotash, onions, stewed tomatoes and—er—just a moment, please. Fried and boiled potatoes, beans—" "Ham and eggs, potatoes and a cup or two of coffee," said Barnes, suppressing a desire to laugh. "And apple pie," concluded the waiter triumphantly. "I knew I'd get it if you gave me time. As you may have observed, my dear sir, I am not what you would call an experienced waiter. As a matter of fact, I— The bell downstairs rang violently. Mr. Bacon departed in great haste. While the traveler performed his abominations Mr. Dillingford, for the moment disengaged, sat upon the edge of the bed and enjoyed himself. He talked had arrived. Welcome—charicton welcome. He neglected to say that Mr. Montague Bacon, in passing a few minutes before, had leaned over and whispered behind his hand: "Fellow upstairs from New York, Mr. Rutherford—fellow named Barnes. Quite a swell, believe me." It was a well-placed tip, for Mr. Rutherford had been telling the natives for days that he knew everybody worth knowing in New York. Barnes was momentarily taken aback. Then he rose to the spirit of the occasion. "Hello, Rutherford," he greeted, as if meeting an old-time and greatly beloved friend. "This is good. 'Pon my soul you are like a thriving date palm in the middle of an endless desert. How are you?" They shook hands warmly. Mr. Dillingford slapped the newcomer on the shoulder affectionately, familiarly, and shouted: "Who would have dreamed we'd run across good old Barney up here? By Jove, it's marvelous!" "Friends, countrymen," boomed Mr. Rutherford, "this is Mr. Barnes of New York. Not the man the book was written about but one of the best fellows God ever put into this little world of ours. I do not recall your names, gentlemen, or I would introduce each of you separately and divisibly." Lyndon Rutherford was a tall, sandy man of fifty. Despite his determined erectness he was inclined to sag from the shoulders down. His head, huge and gray, appeared to be much too ponderous for his yielding body, and yet he carried it manfully, even the

"O scurvy insult," he boomed. "Confound his—" The new guest was amiable. He interrupted the outraged star. "Tell Mr. Jones that I shall settle promptly," he said with a smile. "It has just entered his bean that you may be an actor, Mr. Barnes," said Bacon. Miss Tilly, overhearing, drew a step or two nearer. A sudden interest in Mr. Barnes developed. She had not noticed before that he was an uncommonly good-looking fellow. She always had said that she adored strong, "athletic" faces. Later on she felt inspired to jot down, for use no doubt in some future literary production, a concise, though general, description of the magnificent Mr. Barnes. She utilized the back of the bill of fare and she wrote with the feverish ardor of one who dreads the loss of a first impression. I herewith append her visual estimate of the hero of this story: "He was a tall, shapely specimen of mankind," wrote Miss Tilly. "Broad-shouldered. Smooth-shaved face. Penetrating gray eyes. Short, curly hair about the color of mine. Strong hands of good shape. Face tanned considerably. Heavy dark eyebrows. Good teeth, very white. Square chin. Lovely smile that seemed to light up the room for everybody within hearing. Nose ideal. Mouth same. Voice aristocratic and reverberating with education. Age about thirty or

Burglary at Lakeland

Last Wednesday night while Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Waters were attending a dancing party at Hamburg their store was forcibly entered by a night marauder.

Mr. Norman Twitchell, who was in the store at the time, was disturbed by the noise and when he began investigations Mr. Burglar fled. Jumping into a canoe nearby he hastily paddled out of sight in the darkness, followed by a fusillade of bullets from Mr. Twitchell's gun.

On account of the darkness Mr. Twitchell is not certain whether his bullets hit either the fleeing man or the canoe. But he does know that the thief went away without any plunder.

Each New Day Brings A Better Maxwell

MOST anyone would think that after building 50,000 motor cars on one chassis plan that close on to perfection would be reached.

That is true in a large measure; but it happens to be only the beginning.

They depend in no way on building maximum motor cars, but on an ever new day work by.

The engineer drives his engine better every day. The banker who loans money does so with more and more judgment. The man at the forge—likewise.

This is the principle on which the Maxwell is built. It is not new to the business world. But it is sound.

And today, with 300,000 Maxwells built on this plan, anyone will readily understand.

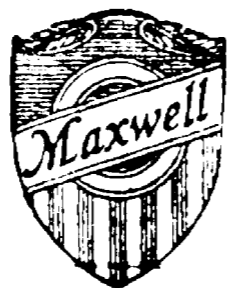

Why a Maxwell runs on and on and never quits with age.

Why a Maxwell seldom turns up at the repair shop.

Why a Maxwell is eagerly sought in the second hand market.

One of the last of more than 1000 improvements made since the first Maxwell was built is its appearance.

Let your eyes tell you this present day Maxwell and you'll think the price $200 more than you ask for it.

We pledge Ford owners the reliable Ford service with real Ford parts and standard Ford prices.

one of the great industrial countries of the world.

The rising cost of labor in Great Britain already has placed England at a disadvantage with the United States in the Italian coal trade and if Sweden could produce coal in quantities warranting export she doubtless would become a competitor of both the United States and England.

Big Game Country.

"I understand you came from a great game country?" said the lady on the committee to welcome the grizzly warriors of the Western plains.

"Indeed, yes, ma'am," was the cowboy's reply. "What is the biggest game you have in Wyoming?" "Poker, ma'am."

Grain Seeds From Western Canada Do Well in Ohio.

Demand for them is bound to add value to the land of our northern neighbor. Now to be had cheap.

A large area of the land in several counties in Ohio prepared for spring seeding will be seeded with Marquis wheat—a spring variety. This wheat is imported from Western Canada. It was about three years ago that the first of this seed was imported into the States, and the result was such a successful year, that Ohio soil and spring seeding was a success. The demand for this seed has now become so great that one of the largest seed houses in the state, the Western Canada Farming Co., has decided to purchase a large block of seed in that country for the purpose of growing the grain themselves. They will devote a considerable portion of their Western Canada holdings to growing oats, barley, and rye. Their action is a strong endorsement of the product. For some time past a considerable quantity of seed oats has also been imported. The prolific yield reported was what probably gave an impetus to the introduction of wheat.

It was found, though, after a couple of years the quality of the oats, as well as the yield, began to deteriorate when grown seed was used, making it necessary for fresh importations every couple of years. It is possible that the same experience may follow the growing of Western Canada wheat. In fact it is quite probable, and the Ohio farmer will find it necessary to import every two years.

With the success that has followed the Ohio farmers' experiments with this imported seed it is possible other states now growing winter wheat will begin growing spring wheat. It may be that the Ohio farmer will find it necessary to import every two years.

any wheat in the world, will shortly be called upon to provide the seed that will be grown on the additional acres in the United States that may be devoted to spring wheat.

It is a well-established fact that the further north any product of the farm can be brought to a state of maturity, the more vigorous it becomes. This has been proven in the grains that have been produced in Western Canada; it has been shown in the development of its horses, its cattle, its sheep and its hogs; also in its people. The neighbor to the north really has a splendid future before him, and many years will not have passed before the lands that are selling today at much less than their producing value will bring prices more commensurate with their true worth than they do today. Think of lands that yield in their operation a profit of from fifteen to twenty-five dollars an acre a year, selling at figures less than $40 an acre. It does not require a mathematician to figure the percentage of profit. It is unfair to these lands to ask them to continue to sell at such low prices. So it is to be regretted that the prediction that in a few years they will place themselves on a par with other lands is not being fulfilled. Advertisement.

"A quantity of beer came along here yesterday in a motorcar and stopped in front of the gate," related Gap Johnson of Pungus Ridge. "He asked if he could get a drink of water, and I said: 'I reckon.' He wanted to know if I could tell him how far it was to Tumberville, and I said I reckon I could. Next he asked how many children I had, and I told him I reckoned there was 14. He inquired if it was going to rain, and I answered that I reckoned it was."

"Then he grinned at me and says: 'This seems to be the day of reckoning,' and I said: 'What say?' just like that. "He grinned again and driv on. Her Bitter Experience

She could not imagine what was the matter with her baking.

Her pans were always perfectly clean. She used a famous brand of flour, good butter, fresh eggs—and yet her baking had a bitter taste.

Finally, her husband asked what kind of baking powder she used. When she told him what she was trying, he said:

"There's the whole trouble. If you read the label you will find it contains alum, and that's what leaves the peculiar taste."

Now she has gone back to ROYAL BAKING POWDER and her bitter experience is forgotten.

Prohibition

Edited by M. E. S.

The notion that the coming in of prohibition will throw millions of dollars of investment upon the junk heap is devoid of slightest foundation.
