Vol. XXXVI

Pinckney, Livingston County, Michigan, Thursday May 22, 1919

No. 31

Soldier Letter

Kripp, Germany,
April 19, 1919.

Dear Father:

Your welcome letter of March 31 received and found me feeling O. K. except my feet, which were pretty sore from hiking. We moved up here last week to do the Watch on the Rhine for a while. Like the place a'right so far—that is, as well as any place we've been stationed at. It isn't a very large town. I don't know what the population is—perhaps a thousand or fifteen hundred. I will send a few views of the town and the Rhine along with this. Have good quarters here. Most of us have beds. Am living in a hotel.

Had a letter from Will Jeffreys last night. He is still in France but said they expected to leave for the states in June. I haven't heard anything about our division going back. I don't think there will be very many of us that are in the division now that will be here when it is ordered home as they are getting volunteers for this army of occupation. The men with Class A and B allotments will be the first to be relieved. You asked in your letter if I got the Dispatch. There were two or three copies that came through O. K. when I was at Les Aix, France. Haven't got one since. Would like to have it for any news from home looks pretty good to me. As I have to go on guard at one o'clock will close, hoping to hear from you soon. Love to all.

The Girl of Green Fancy.

Synopsis.—Thomas K. Barnes, a wealthy young New Yorker, on a walking trip in New England near the Canadian border, is given a lift in an automobile by a mysterious and attractive girl, who says she is bound for a house called Green Fancy. At Hart's tavern Barnes finds a stranded troupe of "barn-storming" actors, of which Lyndon Ruschroft is the star and "Miss Thackeray" the leading lady. They are doing hotel work for their board. Barnes finds them entertaining, but as the storm rages he worries over the mysterious and attractive girl of the automobile and wonders if she got safely to Green Fancy.

CHAPTER III—Continued.

He had been standing there not more than half a minute peering in the direction from whence came the rhythmic bang of the anvil—at no great distance, he was convinced—when some one spoke suddenly at his elbow. He whirled and found himself facing the gaunt landlord.

"Good Lord! You startled me," he with legs crossed and arms folded, against the porch post directly in front of the entrance to the house, his features almost wholly concealed by the broad-brimmed slouch hat that came far down over his eyes. He, too, it seemed to Barnes, had sprung from nowhere.

"Fierce night," said Putnam Jones, removing the cornob pipe from his lips. Then, as an afterthought, "Where'd you walk from today?"

"I slept in a farmhouse last night, about fifteen miles south of this place, I should say."

"That'd be a little ways out of East Cobb," speculated Mr. Jones.

"Five or six miles."

"Goin' over into Canada?"

"No. I shall turn west, I think, and strike for the Lake Champlain country."

"I suppose you've traveled right smart in Europe?"

"Quite a bit, Mr. Jones."

"Any particular part?"

"No," said Barnes, suddenly divining that he was being "pumped." "One end to the other, you might say."

"What about them countries down around Bulgaria and Roumania? I've been considerable interested in what's going on in some of them if Germany it, either way?"

Barnes spent the next ten minutes expatiating upon the future of the Balkan states. Jones had little to say. He was interested, and drank in all the information that Barnes had to impart. He puffed at his pipe, nodded his head from time to time, and occasionally put a leading question. And quite as abruptly as he introduced the topic he changed it.

"Not many automobiles up here this time of the year," he said. "I was a little surprised when you said a feller had given you a lift. Where from?"

"The crossroads a mile down. He came from the direction of Frogg's Corner and was on his way to meet someone at Spanish Falls. It appears that there was a misunderstanding. The driver didn't meet the train, so the person he was going after walked all the way to the forks. We happened upon each other there, Mr. Jones, and we studied the signpost together. She was bound for a place called Green Fancy."

"Did you say she?"

"Yes. I was proposing to help her out of her predicament when the belated motor came racing down the slope."

"What for sort of looking lady was she?"

"She wore a veil," said Barnes succinctly.

"Young?"

"I had that impression. By the way, Mr. Jones, what and where is Green Fancy?"

"Well," began the landlord, lowering his voice, "it's about two miles and a half from here, up the mountain. It's a house and people live in it, same as any other house. That's about all there is to say about it."

"Why is it called Green Fancy?"

"Because it's a green house," replied Jones succinctly. "Green as a gourd. A man named Curtis built it a couple o' years ago and he had a fool idea about paintin' it green. Might ha' been a little crazy, for all I know. Anyhow, after he got it finished he settled down to live in it, and from that day to this he's never been off'n the place."

"Isn't it possible that he isn't there at all?"

"He's there, all right. Every now and then he has visitors—just like this woman today—and sometimes they come down here for supper. They don't hesitate to speak of him, so he must be there. Miss Tilly has got the idea that he is a recluse, if you know what that is."

Further conversation was interrupted by the irregular clatter of horses' hoofs on the macadam. Off to the left a dull red glow of light spread across the roadway and a man's voice called out, "Whoa, dang ye!"

The door of the smithy had been thrown open and someone was leading forth freshly shod horses.

A moment later the horses—prancing, high-spirited animals—their bridle bits held by a strapping blacksmith, directly in front of the steps the smith led his charges quite a distance beyond and into the darkness.

Putnam Jones abruptly changed his position. He insinuated his long body between Barnes and the doorway, at the same time rather loudly proclaiming that the rain appeared to be over.

"Yes, sir," he repeated, "she seems to have let up altogether. Ought to have a nice day tomorrow, Mr. Barnes—nice, cool day for walkin'."

Voices came up from the darkness. Jones had not been able to cover them with his own. Barnes caught two or three sharp commands, rising above the pawing of horses' hoofs, and then a great clatter as the mounted horsemen rode off in the direction of the crossroads.

Barnes waited until they were muffled by distance and then turned to Jones with the laconic remark:

"They seem to be foreigners, Mr. Jones."

Jones' manner became natural once more. "He leaned against one of the posts and, striking a match on his leg, relighted his pipe.

"Kind o' curious about 'em?" he drawled.

"It never entered my mind until this front of the house—several of them—and men on foot moving like shadows among them.

Turning from the window, he unlocked and opened the door into the hall. Some one was clattering down the narrow staircase. The bolts on the front door shot back with resounding force, and there came the hoarse jumble of excited voices as men crowded through the entrance. Putnam Jones' voice rose above the clamour.

"Keep quiet! Do you want to wake everybody on the place?" he was saying angrily. "What's up? This is a fine time o' night to be—Good Lord! What's the matter with him?"

"Telephone for a doctor, Put—damn! quick! This one's still alive. The other one is dead as a door nail up at Jim Conley's house. Git ole Doc James down from Saint Liz. Bring him in here, boys. Where's your light? Easy now! Eas-ee!"

Barnes waited to hear no more. His blood seemed to be running ice cold as he retreated into the room and began scrambling for his clothes. The thing he feared had come to pass. Disaster had overtaken her in that wild, senseless dash up the mountain road. He was cursing half aloud as he dropped, cursing the fool who drove the men, a tall woodsman. "The feller who did it was a dead shot, you c'n bet on that. He got t' other man square through the heart."

"Lordy, but this will raise a rum-pus," growled the landlord. "We'll have detectives an'—"

"I guess they got what was comin' to 'em," said another of the men.

"What's that? Why, they was ridin' peaceful as could be to Spanish Falls. What do you mean by sayin' that, Jim Conley? But wait a minute! How does it happen that they were up near your dad's house? That certainly ain't on the road to Span—"

"Spanish Falls nothin'! They wasn't goin' to Spanish Falls any more'n I am at this minute. They tied their horses up the road just above our house," said young Conley, lowering his voice out of consideration for the feelings of the helpless man. "It was about eleven o'clock, I reckon. I was comin' home from singin' school up at Number Ten, an' I passed the hosses hitched to the fence. Naturally I stopped, curious like. There wasn't no one around, fer as I could see, so I thought I'd take a look to see whose hosses they were. I thought it was durned funny, them hosses bel'n' there at that time o' night an' no one around."

"I thought it was durned funny, them hosses bel'n' there at that time o' night an' no one around."

"The other one is dead as a door nail," kept running through his head—"the other one."

A dozen men were in the taproom, gathered around two tables that had been drawn together. The men about the table, on which was stretched the figure of the wounded man, were undoubtedly natives: Farmers, woodsmen or employees of the tavern. At a word from Putnam Jones they opened up and allowed Barnes to advance to the side of the man.

"See if you c'n understand him, Mr. Barnes," said the landlord. Perspiration was dripping from his long, rawboned face. "And you, Bacon—you and Dillingford hustle upstairs and get a mattress off'n one of the beds. Stand at the door there, Pike, and don't let any woman in here. Go away, Miss Thackeray! This is no place for you."

Miss Thackeray pushed her way past the man who tried to stop her and joined Barnes.

"It is the place for me," she said sharply. "Haven't you men got sense enough to put something under his head? Where is he hurt? Get that cushion, you. Stick it under here when I lift his head. Oh, you poor thing! We'll be as quick as possible. There!"

The man's eyes were closed, but at the sound of a woman's voice he opened them. The hand with which he clutched at his breast slid off and seemed to be groping for hers. His breathing was terrible. There was blood at the corners of his mouth, and more oozed forth when his lips parted in an effort to speak.

With a courage that surprised even herself, the girl took his hand in hers.

style for chambermaids. Did it paralyze you to find me here?"

"I couldn't believe my eyes."

She abandoned her easy, careless manner. A look of mortification came into her eyes as she straightened up and faced him. Her voice was a trifle husky when she spoke again, after a moment's pause.

"You see, Mr. Barnes, these are the only duds I have with me. It wasn't necessary to put on this hat, of course, but I did it simply to make the character complete. I might just as well make beds and clean washstands in a picture hat as in a low-necked gown, so here I am."

She was a tall, pleasant-faced girl of twenty-three or four, not unlike her father in many respects.

"I am very sorry," he said lamely. "I have heard something of your misfortunes from your father and—the others. It's—it's really hard luck."

"I call it rather good luck to have got away with the only dress in the lot that cost more than tuppence," she said, smiling again. "Lord knows what would have happened to me if they had dropped down on us at the end of the first act. I was the beggar's daughter, you see—absolutely in rags. Glad to have met you. I think you'll find everything nearly all right. Good night, sir."

She closed the door behind her, leaving him standing in the middle of the room, perplexed but amused.

"By George," he said to himself, still staring at the closed door, "they're wonders, all of them. I wish I could do something to help them out of—"

He sat down abruptly on the edge of the bed and pulled his wallet from his pocket. He set about counting the bills, a calculating frown in his eyes. Then he stared at the ceiling, summing up. "I'll do it," he said, after a moment of mental figuring. He told off a half dozen bills and slipped them into his pocket. The wallet sought its usual resting place for the night: Under a pillow.

He was healthy and he was tired. Two minutes after his head touched the pillow he was sound asleep.

He was aroused shortly after midnight by shouts, apparently just outside his window. A man was calling in a loud voice from the road below; an instant later he heard a tremendous bounding on the tavern door.

It was wet and warm. She did not dare look at it.

"Merci, madame," struggled from the man's lips, and he smiled.

Barnes leaned over and spoke to him in French. The dark, pain-stricken eyes closed, and an almost imperceptible shake of the head signified that he did not understand. Evidently he had acquired only a few of the simple French expressions. Barnes had a slight knowledge of Spanish and Italian, and tried again with no better results. German was his last resort, and he knew he would fail once more, for the man obviously was not Teutonic.

The bloody lips parted, however, and the eyes opened with a piteous, appealing expression in their depths. It was apparent that there was something he wanted to say, something he had to say before he died. He gasped a dozen words or more in a tongue utterly unknown to Barnes, who bent closer to catch the feeble effort. It was he who now shook his head; with a groan the sufferer closed his eyes in despair. He choked and coughed violently an instant later.

"Get some water and a towel," cried Miss Thackeray, tremulously. She was very white, but still clung to the man's hand. "Be quick! Behind the bar."

Barnes unbuttoned the coat and revealed the blood-soaked white shirt.

"Better leave this to me," he said in her ear. "There's nothing you can do. He's done for. Please go away."

"Oh, I shan't faint—at least, not yet. Poor fellow! I've seen him upstairs and wondered who he was. Is he really going to die?"

"Looks bad," said Barnes, gently opening the shirt front. Several of the craning men turned away suddenly.

"Who is he, Mr. Jones?"

"He is registered as Andrew Paul, from New York. That's all I know. The other man put his name down as Albert Room. He seemed to be the boss and this man a sort of servant, far as I could make out. They never talked much and seldom came downstairs. They had their meals in their room."

"There is nothing we can do," said Barnes, "except try to stanch the flow of blood. He is bleeding inwardly. I'm

Suffered for Years

Misérable From Kidney Trouble

"I suffered untold agony with my kidneys for years," says John Barnett, 30 Virginia Place, Buffalo, N. Y. "Sometimes I felt that I would burn up with fever, but every now and then would have a severe chill. Often my clothes were wringing wet with perspiration. The kidney secretions were unnatural in color and odor and burned terribly. At night my shoes were so tight on my feet that I could hardly get them off and my hands swelled so I couldn't hold a teacup. Oh, how it ached! I walked with two canes and was all bent over like an aged man. When the terrible pains shot through my kidneys, my knees would give way and many times I had to be lifted to my feet by people on the street. I didn't care whether I lived or died, I was so miserable. I finally used Doan's Kidney Pills and they cured me of all kidney trouble. Doan's made me strong and well. Sworn to before me, A. A. Historical Inexactitudes.

We are celebrating—or rather should be celebrating—the tercentenary of Sir Walter Raleigh. When he was confined in the Tower of London he saw from his window an affray in the courtyard—an affray which ended in the stabbing and killing of a man. Talking of this to the governor, Sir Walter was surprised to find that all his ideas as to what happened, all his deductions from what he had seen, were utterly at variance with the facts. "If I am so inaccurate as to what passes before my eyes how can I hope to be accurate in 'The History of the World' I am writing?" sighed Sir Walter. How, indeed? You, gentle reader, have had daily examples of how "history" is made. The future reader of the story of the great war will require much salt when he is perusing the "stories" of some historians.—Vancouver World.

Mrs. Gotham—I met your friend, Mr. Huggins, today.

Mr. Gotham—(over his paper)—Oh, did you?

"Yes. And he said you never called to see him at his office any more."

"Oh, did he?"

"Yes. You know you used to like to call at his office very often."

"Yes, I know."

"Well, why don't you now?"

"Well, you see, he had some trouble with his girl stenographers and typewriters, and he's got the cheesiest lot of female key punchers now you ever saw!"

A Maxwell Grows Better the More You Drive It

THAT is the test of anything good. The more you use a car, the better it runs. The older your friends grow the better you like them.

And nothing is more pat on a Maxwell than this.

Hardly a day goes by that some Maxwell owner doesn't take his pen in hand and write that he is now passing a mark of 30,000 miles on wheels or more.

To purchase such a Maxwell is to buy a car that is worth trying to buy a heirloom from a rich man.

But these cars today are far better cars than those of yesterday.

For it is the policy of the Maxwell Motor Company to keep on building and building on the original chassis plan set down five years ago.

300,000 Maxwells have been built on this program.

1000 refinements have been made since the first car was built. Each new Maxwell is better than yesterday's.

For doing one thing always results in doing it well.

This Maxwell you see today is so vastly improved in appearance that you may think it a new model.

But it isn't. Just a better looking Maxwell. And a better car.

More miles per gallon.
 More miles on tires.

COUNTRY WAYS IN THE CITY

Would Be Well if More Dwellers in Crowded Places Kept Them in Their Minds.

There is at least one thing about cities that is all wrong and deeply to be deplored. That thing is their heedlessness, which too often amounts to cruelty.

It is to be feared that people who dwell in large towns permit themselves to become unfeeling and unneighborly. They lose their sympathy for the sick and grow callous to even the presence of death itself. How many old friends we all have who have lately been very ill. Well, we never even called to see them. How many old friends have died and we did not even go to their funerals.

The thing for folks who live in cities to do is to keep in their hearts the gentle customs that they learned in the country. There is no real reason why we should permit the town to take from us the things which make life gentle and sweet and beautiful.—Los Angeles Times.

Grow Wheat in Western Canada One Crop Often Pays for the Land

Western Canada offers the greatest advantages to home seekers. Large profits are assured. You can buy on easy payment terms.

Fertile Land at $15 to $30 per Acre— land similar to that which through many years has averaged from 20 to 45 bushels of wheat to the acre. Hundreds of cases are on record where in Western Canada a single crop has paid the cost of land and production. The Governments of the Dominion and Provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta want the farmer to prosper, and extend every possible encouragement and help to Grain Growing and Stock Raising.

Though Western Canada offers land at such low figures, the high prices of grain, cattle, sheep and hogs will remain.

Loans for the purchase of stock may be had at low interest; there are good shipping facilities; best of markets; free schools; churches; splendid climate; low taxation (income tax improvements); For particulars as to location of lands for sale, maps, illustrated literature, reduced railway rates, etc., apply to Supt. of Immigration, Ottawa, Can., or M. maining prisoners.

Kalkaska—Announcement has been made that the partridge season will be opened next fall. The birds can be hunted in the Upper Peninsula during October and in the Lower Peninsula during November.

Vanderbilt—Yull Bros., of Vanderbilt, and Horner Bros., of Eaton Rapids, both owners of large tracts in Otsego County, are organizing the Otsego Cattle Co., and will use 20,000 acres for a cattle ranch.

Charlotte—Vern Carmoney, 10 years old, Pottersville, slipped under a freight train while attempting to ride home after viewing the parade in Lansing. He was taken to the Sparrow Hospital, where it was necessary to amputate a foot.

Port Huron—W. R. Shadwick, deputy collector of customs, has received orders from the Canadian commissioner of customs to bar all publications from the mails for entry into Canada which are printed in German, Bulgarian, Hungarian or Turkish languages.

Flint—Oscar Howe, 23-year-old Flint worker, and Max McArthur, 3-year-old son of Sidney McArthur, Columbiaville, at whose home Howe and his mother were staying, were found in a concrete-covered cave beneath the home of Vaso Moncliovitch, the police found a still in the cave. Moncliovitch and a cot in the place where the still was found and mash was cooking.

Lansing—The Condon Bill, making it illegal for the proprietor of any place of public resort to discriminate against anyone because of race or religion, was signed by the Governor. The bill is designed to give Negroes equal rights with white people in hotels, restaurants and theaters.

Saginaw—The Saginaw County farm bureau has been reorganized with Fred Crossair, of Chesaning, as president. The bureau has been making a campaign throughout the county, organizing community centers in all townships to co-operate with the county bureau for the betterment of crops and improvement of market conditions.

Cadillac—April was the best month for the Michigan timber operators since before the war, according to J. C. Knox, secretary of the Michigan Hardwood Manufacturers' association. The lumber mills of the state are practically all cutting on full pre-war schedules after a period of depression caused by poor markets and transportation facilities.

Detroit—More than 11,000 Detroit school children have been attending half-day sessions during the present school year, and there is likelihood that 23,000 will be forced into such sessions next year. Relief for this condition will not be possible until September, 1920, the earliest date at which the 15 additions and seven new schools in the board's building program for 1919-20 can be completed.

bathing beaches.

Flint—Returning for more gasoline after the auto which he says he borrowed had stalled outside the city, Carl Dehmel was trailed by an officer and arrested for stealing the machine from a local auto factory.

Petoskey—Short circuiting of a switch in a pump house at the plant of the Michigan Limestone & Chemical Co. at Calcite caused a serious blaze. The plant was closed down and Rogers City was left without light or power.

Grand Rapids—Wilhelmina Buquet, 4 years old, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Simon Buquet, who was shot by her 8-year-old brother Simon, died in Buterworth Hospital. The children found a loaded revolver in a bureau drawer.

Saginaw—Production work has started at the General Motors Corporation's new plant here, converted from a Stokes mortar shell factory. When the new plant reaches capacity production, it will employ more than 1,000 men.

Flint—Concealed in a concrete-covered cave beneath the home of Vaso Moncliovitch, the police found a still in the cave. Moncliovitch and a cot in the place where the still was found and mash was cooking.

Lawton—When Charles, the 8-year-old son of Mrs. Roy Delmater, failed to return from the barnyard, his mother investigated and found him lying in a dazed condition with his lower jaw broken and all the teeth on one side knocked out. He had been kicked by the horse he had been told to drive into the barn.

Lansing—A conference of tractor men here decided to hold a big competitive test demonstration at some central Michigan point early in August. Lansing, Flint, Saginaw or Kalamazoo have been suggested. A six-day meet is probable. The Michigan Agricultural college will conduct competitive tests.

Grand Rapids—Motor trucks will be used this summer by the Goodrich Transportation and the Crosby companies to speed fruit shipments. Shipments from points along the Michigan Railway will be transported to the Muskegon line by fast motor trucks and a rapid run will be made to Grand Haven and Muskegon, where connections will be made with boats.

Mason—When Charles Heth stepped from Jackson prison, where he served 31 months for stealing a motorcycle, he was arrested by Sheriff Silsby, of Ingham county, for violation of the probation and sentenced by Judge West for a forgery committed in 1918 from five to 14 years at Jackson. When he pleaded guilty to the Lansing forgery charge three years ago he was placed on five years' probation.

WHY DRUGGISTS RECOMMEND SWAMP-ROOT

For many years druggists have watched with much interest the remarkable record maintained by Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder medicine.

It is a physician's prescription. Swamp-Root is a strengthening medicine. It helps the kidneys, liver and bladder do the work nature intended they should do.

Swamp-Root has stood the test of years. It is sold by all druggists on its merit and it should help you. No other kidney medicine has so many friends.

Be sure to get Swamp-Root and start treatment at once.

However, if you wish first to test this great preparation send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention this paper.—Adv.

Too Busy.

A new suit of clothes was bought for Alfred, age nine, so that he might look as well as all the other boys in his Sunday school class. His other suit was good enough to wear to town and to visit his relatives; but not to go to church. So a very expensive suit was bought. And with the suit he got a ball and bat.

Mother carried the suit home and Alfred carried the ball and bat. He was swinging it from side to side when he suddenly said: "You can take the suit and hat back if you want to, mother. Now since I've gotten this ball and bat I'll probably be too busy Sunday mornings to go to Sunday school any more."

NEVER TOO LATE TO START

Financial Independence Can Usually Be Achieved, Even Though One May Begin Badly.

It may be started in a general but positive way that nothing was ever accomplished without a start. If a false start be had—and many who read this have probably made false starts—it is better than no start, in the same way that some of our ancestors worshiped miscellaneous gods and with feet of clay out of mistaken but good intentions, Victor DeVilliers writes in the Magazine of Wall Street. They made a start and meant well, and those principles bring results. The courageous ones who will face the starting post are sure to finish reasonably close to the goal by will, patience and study.

It should commence at 25 years of age, if possible. If the investor has not made his chance of accumulating early he should begin "as soon as possible." It is never too late to begin, as the handicap of tardiness may be overcome by the sure, swift work of compound interest, which once started on its journey goes on interminably, ever growing larger and stronger as the years go by.

The Division.

"I hear, Mr. Jims, that your talented daughter swept everything before her."

"So she did, but I raised the dust."

Still With Us.

"The town crier of yore," said Oliver Oddways, "who sauntered up and down, ringing his bell and proclaiming information, has gone, never to return. But now we have another town crier—the lugubrious pest who bewails the sad and sinsick condition of our little city, the awful degradation of the youth of today, the passing of the times when gentlemen of the old school rode in stage coaches for penance and pulled each other's noses for pastime, sagely contrasts the abysmal vacuity of the statesmen of today compared with the leonine and oratorical drunkards of the past, bemoans the fact that there has been no real lifting since the glorious days of Charlotte Cushman and Edwin Booth, and eternally howls that there is a conspiracy here to keep all enterprise out and all worthy men down. Yes, the town crier will be."—Kansas City Star.

The Tongue Test

Put a little alum on the end of your tongue and you will have the reason why alum baking powder should not be used in food.

England and France forbid the sale of baking powder containing alum.

You can tell whether baking powder contains alum by reading the label.

And Now Men---For Memorial Day

This year, MEMORIAL DAY takes on a different meaning, for, added to the list of those to whom we consecrate this day, are hundreds more who fought that the world might be safe for democracy. We are none the less grateful to those dear ones remaining since the civil strife—rather, we feel a heartier respect, a more sincere gratitude since our experience has taught us what they suffered for right.

Let us all join together in paying this day fitting tribute to those who are still among us as well as those who, for Liberty, have passed beyond.

So let's dress our best for such an occasion as this—let's put on a late cut suit of

STYLEPLUS CLOTHES

S. A. Lassie Doesn't Know a Thing Really— On Firing Line a Year

"Really I don't know a THING! You see I've just come back from France where I'd been doing canteen work on the firing line for more than a year!"

City, Ind., but a Bay City, Mich. Salvation Army corps lassie.

War Veterans of World Battles Guests of S. A. At Memorial Observance

Veterans of all the wars are to be guests of honor at the special memorial services to be held in all cities throughout Indiana and Michigan by the Salvation Army Corps

The veteran organizations will be to be observed in all Indiana cities. One of the few Salvation Army lassies who had baked doughnuts and pies under German shell fire and has smiled the cheery Salvation Army lassie smile all the while.

Miss Chambliss has been telling her story throughout the Salvation Army province of Michigan-Indiana during the memorial drive for $14,000,000 for the National Home Service Fund. Her story is of particular interest to Michigan and Indiana folks, too, not only because she has served doughnuts and pies and coffee to so many of Michigan and Indiana boys overseas, but because she is a native Indiana girl, having been born in 1911

War, the Spanish American, and the veterans of foreign wars. Prominent in the line up, however, will be the youngest of American veterans, the Michigan and Indiana doughboys who have carried the flag across the Rhine.

The gathering of the veterans of all wars with their "Ally" the Salvation Army has been planned as a fitting wind-up to the National Home Service Fund Campaign for $14,000,000 of which the lower peninsula of Michigan and Indiana had been appropriated a quota of nine to $1,000,000.
