RECOLLECTIONS OF BY-GONE DAYS

HARRIET GRIEVE

By Jas. T. Eaman.

In the Spring of 1836 when my father came back from the parental roof in Cayuga County, New York to begin work on his newly purchased tract, he found that James Grieve had pre-empted land adjoining his on the north and had sent out men to clear an opening and build a house to which he could bring his young wife. Mr. Grieve was an educated and refined gentleman of English ancestry, had lived for a time in Geneva New York where he was married to Harriet McPherson, of Scottish antecedents, as the name indicates. In Autumn of 1836—three years after their marriage—they came to occupy their home in the Michigan wilds. Their nearest neighbors to the north being a settler on Norton's Plains, eight miles distant. On November 14 of the same year their eldest daughter Kittie was born—believed to be the first white child born in Putnam, though it is said that a child was born to a family named Weller on the same day.

Mr. Grieve was not a man of the strong physique and rugged constitution suited to endure pioneer life, and after capitalists, where he spent a number of years. Their only son the late H. Dudley Grieve and their second daughter Maggie were born at Flat Rock. In 1841 the Grieve family returned to their farm which had been occupied during their absence by Mr. Affleck who had taken up the land adjoining on the north. Five years later Mr. Grieve, not yet forty, was taken by death leaving his widow with five small children, the eldest not ten years, the youngest, Hattie, now Mrs. S. A. Topping of Plainfield, a babe but three week old, their home a log cabin in a little clearing on a frontier settlement on which there was a considerable debt, for Mr. Grieve had taken a larger tract than the average settler, the entire half of section 7. Here was a condition that would appall the stoutest heart. Mrs. Grieve was not one who having "put her hand to the plough" could look back. With undaunted courage and the determination characteristic of her race she set herself to the task before her. To rear and educate her flock of little ones and provide them with a comfortable home.

She was with which she accompanied figure in the early development of West Putnam. With the aid of such help as she could hire and that of a homeless boy whom she had, in the greatness of her heart, taken in and given a home, the farm was cleared, a house was built that was an ornament to the plains. The children were given all the advantages which the local school could afford. At the age of sixteen her eldest daughter, Kittie, had fitted herself for a teacher in the primary schools, and began that work in her home district. For twenty-eight years and until her untimely death in 1880 she taught the various schools of Unadilla and Putnam. Probably no more efficient or popular teacher ever served in that community nor was mourned by a wider circle of her former pupils than Kittie Grieve.

Mrs. Grieve's home, filled as it was with interesting young people, was peculiarly the social center of the community. She entertained with lavish hospitality, and to miss a party or social gathering at Mrs. Grieve's was a misfortune indeed.

Born as he was on Independence Day, in 1830 when the dislike and distrust of Mother England was still intense, patriotism was always a dominant element in Mrs. Grieve's character. Although suffragists were not in her day, no one took a deeper interest in local or national politics nor could support her opinion with a better argument than Mrs. Grieve.

ALMOST A NONAGENARIAN

Last Sunday, June 1, Mrs. Peter Harris celebrated her eighty-ninth birthday at her home south of town.

Although somewhat somewhat feeble, Mrs. Harris enjoys good health, her mental faculties being exceptionally strong and clear and apparently she is going to enjoy many future birthdays.

A number of relatives and friends gathered at the home where this estimable lady has lived for over seventy years and presented her with a fine easy chair. Those present were W. E. Murphy and family, Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Kennedy, James M. Harris, Mrs. Devereaux, Mr. and Mrs. John M. Harris and daughters Sadie and Joie, Miss Nellie Gardner, and A. J. Snyder and family.

THE '19' PLAY

The Seniors are all set for their play, "Deacon Dubbs", which will be given at the Opera house Friday evening, June 6. The play is an exceptionally good one—has a strong plot and there are many hearty laughs—real funny situations. The actors have worked hard and constantly since rehearsals have started and under the capable direction of Prof. Doyle there is no question but that each one will acquit himself with credit before the footlights. Every member of the cast is

LIVINGSTON COUNTY'S HISTORY OF THE WAR

Work is being pushed on Livingston County's "Honor Roll" or History of the War. This work will contain pictures and records of all the soldiers and sailors of the county who served in the late war, also pictures of all the War Boards, Red Cross officials and committees, Four Minute Men, Home Guards and district school teachers who so loyally aided in the various drives and relief work. Accompanying each will be a brief text describing the activities or part that the various organizations or individuals took.

Arrangements have not yet been completed for a place in Pinckney to bring photographs but hope to have very soon. In the meantime if you are included in the list of people mentioned above, get your photo ready so that it can be handed in as soon as called for. If you haven't one that is good go to Ludwig's Studio, Howell, and one will be made for the book free of charge.

MOORE-Mc GEE

A very quiet and pretty wedding took place at the M. E. parsonage Tuesday evening, June 3 when Miss Virena McGee and Mr. Omar Moore were united in marriage by Rev. E. L. Sutherland. Mr. and Mrs. Walker attended the bride and groom. They will live on their farm in Marion township.

I think the most satisfactory 1th of July doings I ever attended was on her twenty-fifth birthday where by invitation so many of her old friends and neighbors gathered under the maples which shaded the little home in Unadilla, in which she passed her declining years. Seated under the folds of Old Glory at the head of the long picnic table surrounded with half a hundred happy faces, young and old, her face beaming with pride and joy, she made an ideal toast-mistress. First she asked that the Declaration of Independence be read once more in her hearing, then between the brilliant sparkles of her own wit, she called for responses from the few remaining pioneers who carried her back to the days of their early struggle for liberty and for home.

The memory of my boyhood days in Putnam will always be sweeter because "Aunt Grieve" was there.

REVOLTS BLOOM AGAIN IN MEXICO

DISPATCH SAYS HALF OF VILLA'S ARMY WAS LOST IN BATTLE WITH FEDERAL TROOPS.

ANGELES NAMED PRESIDENT

Villa Reported to Have Proclaimed Right-Hand Man As Chief, Himself Secretary of War.

El Paso, Tex.—Colonel J. G. Escobar, in command of the Juarez garrison, on May 30, gave out a telegram from General J. A. Castro, at Chihuahua City, announcing the defeat of a Villa force at Santa Andres, 45 miles to the southeast.

The battle, according to the message, lasted 24 hours, the Villa troops, commanded by Martin Lopez, losing one-half of their forces.

The federals were under command of General Petronito Hernandez. The message gave no details of the number of men engaged.

Villa Names Angeles President.

Washington.—Villa forces have proclaimed General Felipe Angeles provisional president of Mexico and Villa himself, secretary of war.

The move coming at the climax of military operations considered by the Carranza government so serious that it has asked the United States for permission to move troops through Texas, New Mexico and Arizona is regarded here as reflecting a situation more serious in Mexico than any since the triumph of Carranza forces over Villa three years ago.

Viewed in connection with the activities of the Felicista forces in southern Mexico, the situation is regarded as full of possibilities.

It is interesting to hear of the king buying an old portrait of James II, for it suggests that the romantic interest in the house of Stuart which Queen Victoria felt very strongly is hereditary. ## German Counter Proposals Hold Up Peace Few Weeks Longer.

Paris.—June 15 is the earliest possible date on which the German treaty can be signed if no objections are encountered, but June 20 is the more probable date for its signature and the departure of President Wilson for the United States, according to a member of the American peace delegation who discussed the situation with the correspondent.

The German counter proposals have been received with the greatest interest by the members of the peace conference, especially the claims for immediate membership in the league of nations, for a plebiscite to decide the disposition of Silesia and for fixing a definite sum for reparations.

With the exception of France all the major powers would undoubtedly agree to the immediate admission of Germany to the league of nations but France is unalterably opposed and in consequence there is no possibility of this being done.

SWISS BAR TEUTON BLOCKADE

Say Act Would Violate Neutrality.

Geneva.—The Swiss government has decided to reply negatively to the Allied note concerning the blockade of Germany if Germany refuses to sign the peace treaty. It is held that compliance would infringe Swiss neutrality.

Fiume to Be Free City.

Paris.—The Temps says that an agreement virtually has been reached on the Adriatic question and that President Wilson, has given his consent to the arrangement which Premier Orlando of Italy has accepted.

According to the Temps, Fiume forms with the region to the west an independent state under the League of Nations.

Several strategic islands are to be given to Italy.

BRITAIN TAMPERS WITH MAIL

Senator Charges That U. S. Letters Are Still Being "Censored."

Washington.—The charge that Great Britain was still censoring and otherwise tampering with mail passing between American business interests and representatives overseas has been made in the senate by Senator Sherman of Illinois. He introduced a resolution voicing a protest against Great Britain continuing to examine and mutilate American business letters—the letters of our British competitors—since the cessation of warfare.

coming fight, and expressing confidence of victory.

Until President Wilson definitely announces his attitude toward a third term, party chieftans say there will be no serious discussion of candidates.

GERMAN COUNTER-PROPOSALS

Teutons Would Have Their Ships Managed By U. S.

Washington.—Germany's formal reply to the treaty terms, while not as voluminous as recent reports have led the world to expect, appear to take issue with the Allies on nearly all the important phases of the treaty, according to summaries received from Berlin and Paris.

Concerning the Saar region, Germany asks France to give up her territorial pretensions to this region and permit economic control over all the coal output there.

It is proposed that the German fleet be transferred to an international trust, managed by the Americans and controlled by the League of Nations.

As regards the cable lines, Germany demands a plebiscite to decide whether participation in the general traffic of nations.

Concerning territorial questions in the east of Europe, the counter proposals call the attention of the Entente to the state of mind of the German populations in the contested territories of Upper Silesia and East and West Prussia and Danzig. These populations, it says, would be sure to take up arms in their own defense if they were to be annexed to Poland and that this might lead to other wars.

LIBEL SUIT TESTIMONY BEGUN

Ford-Tribune Case May Continue All Summer.

Mt. Clemens.—Five "lies" and six "libels" are contained in the six-inch editorial in the Chicago Tribune of June 23, 1918, calling Henry Ford an anarchist, according to Mr. Ford's attorneys.

If the Ford attorneys carry out their announced program of proving the Tribune to have been animated by sordid financial and pro-German motives at the time it was urging the United States to protect its border by armed intervention in Mexico, and if the Tribune wins the right to introduce its mass of evidence showing the conditions on the border and elsewhere, which it declared constituted a situation under which it was anarchistic for Henry Ford to take his attitude toward military preparedness, it is likely to be a legal summer in Mt. Clemens.

Rewards of more than $1,000 have been offered for apprehension of the incendiaries.

World's New Altitude Record Made.

Paris.—Adjutant Casale, a French aviator, on May 28, in a flight for altitude, ascended 31,000 feet. This constitutes a world's record. Adjutant Casale during the war had numerous fights in the air and was credited with having downed 12 German machines.

Gets Pay For Horse After 55 Years

Bloomfield, Ill.—Dr. James Taylor has received word from Washington that he has been allowed $100 for a horse which was killed during the Civil war. The horse was killed at the battle of Oklona, La., in 1864 and the claim has been pending since that time.

Swedish Women Get Suffrage.

New York.—Swedish women have been granted full suffrage, according to a cable message received by Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, president of the National Women's Suffrage association, from Mrs. Anna Wicksell, vice president of the National Woman's association.

Record Price $125,000 Paid For Bull

Buffalo, N. Y.—Ragapple the Great, a 2-year-old Holstein bull, was sold for $125,000 at the dispersal sale of the stock farm of Oliver Cabana, Jr., here. The price is said to be the highest ever paid for a sire. Robert Pointer of Detroit was the buyer. Another record was made when the cow Fairview Mata was sold to John T. Shanahan, of Buffalo, for $35,000. She is a producer of 47.11 pounds of butter a week.

Pig, Buried in Straw 3 Weeks, Lives

La Crosse, Wis.—A strawstack on Joseph Kunes farm near Melrose tipped over, covering up a number of pigs. Mr. Kunes succeeded in rescuing all but one of the pigs. A runt weighing about 75 pounds was buried so deep in the straw that the owner figured it would be dead by the time he reached it. Three weeks later when the last of the stack was loaded onto a wagon a hired man found the pig, still alive, but weak from lack of nourishment.

Darning Needle Nearly Kills Child.

Malden, Mass.—An alarm clock came near causing serious results to one member of the family of Fred Holt. Mr. Holt was repairing the clock with a darning needle. Nearby was his 19-months-old son asleep on a couch. The spring slipped with such force that it threw the darning needle against the sleeping child's face, imbedding it lengthwise in the cheek. It was necessary for a physician to open the cheek sufficiently to reach the end of the needle.

GREEN FANCY LIARS.

Synopsis.—Thomas K. Barnes, a wealthy young New Yorker, on a walking trip in New England near the Canadian border, is given a lift in an automobile by a mysterious and attractive girl bound for a house called Green Fancy. At Hart's tavern Barnes finds a stranded troupe of "barn-storming" actors, of which Lyndon Rushcroft is the star and "Miss Thackeray" the leading lady. They are doing hotel work for their board. He learns Green Fancy is a house of mystery. That night two mounted men leave the tavern under odd circumstances. One is shot dead near by; the other is brought back dying. The sheriff detains Barnes. Green Fancy guests appear and say the mystery does not concern Green Fancy.

CHAPTER V.—Continued.

The two men looked at him, plainly perplexed.

"When was all this?" inquired De Soto.

"Early last evening. He picked up your latest guest at the corners, and she insisted in his driving me to the tavern before the storm broke. I've been terribly anxious about her. She must have been caught out in all that mean. I shall be delighted to join you.

"Twelve-thirty, did you say?"

"It would give me great pleasure if your daughter would also grace the festal board. I think it is too bad that she has to go about in the gown she wears, Mr. Rushcroft," said Barnes. "She's much too splendid for that. I have a proposition I'd like to make to you later on. I cannot make it, however, without consulting Miss Thackeray's feelings."

"My dear fellow!" beamed Rushcroft, seizing the other's hand. "One frequently reads in books about it coming like this, at first sight, but, damme, I never dreamed that it ever really happened. Count on me! She ought to leave the stage, the dear child. No more fitted to it than an Easter lily. Her place is in the home, the—"

"Good Lord, I am not thinking of—" And Barnes, aghast, stopped before blurting out the words that leaped to his lips. "I mean to say this is a proposition that may also affect your excellent companions, Bacon and Dillingford, as well as yourself."

At twelve-thirty sharp Barnes came down from his room freshly shaved and brushed, to find not only Mr. Rushcroft and Miss Thackeray awaiting him in the office, but the Messrs. Dillingford and Bacon as well.

"I took the liberty, old fellow," said Rushcroft, addressing Barnes, "of asking my excellent co-workers to join us in our repast."

"Delighted to have you with us, gentlemen," said Barnes affably.

The sole topic of conversation for the first half hour was the mysterious

"You may believe it," he assured her.

"It isn't the usual course," she said quietly, and her face brightened. "You are not like most men, Mr. Barnes."

"My dear child," said Rushcroft, "you must leave this matter to our friend and me. I fancy I know an honest man when I see him. My dear fellow, fortune is but temporarily frowning upon me. In a few weeks I shall be on my feet again, zipping along on the crest of the wave. I dare say I can return the money to you in a month or six weeks. If—"

"Oh, father!" cried Miss Thackeray. "We'll make it six months, and I'll pay any rate of interest you desire. Six per cent, eight per cent, ten per—"

"Six per cent, sir, and we will make it a year from date."

"Agreed. Get up and dance for us, Dilly! We shall be in New York tomorrow!"

"You forget the dictatorial sheriff, Mr. Rushcroft," said Barnes.

"The varlet!" barked Mr. Rushcroft. It was arranged that Dillingford and Bacon were to go to Hornville in a hired motor that afternoon, secure the judgment, pay the costs, and attend to the removal of the personal belongings of the stranded quartette from the hotel to Hart's Tavern. The younger actors stoutly refused to accept Barnes' offer to pay their board while at the Tavern. That, they declared, would be charity, and they preferred his friendship and his respect to anything of that sort. Miss Thackeray, however, was to be immediately relieved of her position as chamber-

"No guest arrived at Green Fancy last evening, nor was one expected."

Barnes stared. "Do you mean to say that she didn't get there, after all?"

"She? A woman, was it?" demanded O'Dowd. "Bedad, if she said she was coming to Green Fancy she was spoofing you. Are you sure it was old Peter who gave you that jolly ride?"

"No, I am not sure," said Barnes uneasily. "She was afoot, having walked from the station below. I met her at the corners and she asked me if I knew how far it was to Green Fancy, or something like that. Said she was going there. Then along came the automobile, rattling down this very road—an ancient Panhard driven by an old codger. She seemed to think it was all right to hop in and trust herself to him, although she'd never seen him before."

"The antique Panhard fits in all right," said O'Dowd, "but I'm hanged if the woman fits at all. No such person arrived at Green Fancy last night."

"Did you get a square look at the driver's face?" demanded De Soto.

"It was almost too dark to see, but he was old, hatchet-faced, and spoke with an accent."

"Then it couldn't have been Peter."

right enough, but he was as big as the side of a house, with a face like a full moon, and he is Yankee to his toes. By gad, Barnes, the plot thickens! A woman has been added to the mystery. Now, who the devil is she and what has become of her?"

CHAPTER VI.

Charity Begins Far From Home, and a Stroll in the Wildwood Follows.

Mr. Rushcroft was furious when he arose at eleven o'clock on the morning after the double murder, having slept like a top through all of the commotion. He boomed all over the place, vocal castigations falling right and left on the guilty and the innocent without distinction.

"I don't see how you managed to sleep through it," Barnes broke in. "You must have an unusually clear conscience, Mr. Rushcroft."

"I haven't any conscience at all, sir," roared the star. "I had an unusually full stomach, that's what was the matter with me. I take oath now, sir, never to eat again as long as I live. A man who cannot govern his beastly appetite ought to defy it, if nothing else."

"I gather from that remark that you omitted breakfast this morning."

"Breakfast, sir? In God's name, I implore you not to refer to anything so disgusting as stewed prunes and bacon at a time like this. My mind is—"

"How about luncheon? Will you join me at twelve-thirty?"

"That's quite another matter," said Mr. Rushcroft readily. "Luncheon is an esthetic tribute to the physical intelligence of man, if you know what I mean, and sheriff in imposing upon him and his company the same restrictions that had been applied to Barnes. They were not to leave the county until the authorities gave the word. One would have thought, to hear the star's indignant lamentations, that he and his party were in a position to depart when they pleased. It would have been difficult to imagine that he was not actually rolling in money instead of being absolutely penniless.

Barnes had been immersed in his own thoughts for some time. A slight frown, as of reflection, darkened his eyes. Suddenly—perhaps impolitely—he interrupted Mr. Rushcroft's flow of eloquence.

"Have you any objection, Mr. Rushcroft, to a more or less personal question concerning your own private—er—misfortunes?" he asked, leaning forward.

For a moment one could have heard a pin drop. Mr. Rushcroft evidently held his breath. There could be no mistake about that.

"It's rather delicate, but would you mind telling me just how much you were stuck up for by the—er—was it a writ of attachment?"

"It was," said the star. "A writ of attachment, my dear sir, for the sum of ninety-seven dollars and forty cents. For that pitiful amount he subjected me to—"

"Well, that isn't so bad," said Barnes, vastly relieved. He was covertly watching Miss Thackeray's half-averted face as he ventured upon the proposition he had decided to put before them. "I am prepared and willing to advance this amount, Mr. Rushcroft, and to take your personal note as security."

Rushcroft leaned back in his chair and stuck his thumbs in the armpoles of his vest. He displayed no undue elation. Instead he affected profound calculations. His daughter shot a swift, searching look at the would-be Samaritan. There was a heightened color in her cheeks.

"Moreover, I shall be happy to increase the amount of the loan sufficiently to cover your return at once to New York, if you so desire—by train," Barnes smiled as he added the last two words.

"Extremely kind of you, my dear Barnes," said the actor, running his fingers through his hair. "Your faith in me is most gratifying. I—I really don't know what to say to you, sir."

"May I inquire just how you expect to profit by this transaction, Mr. Barnes?" Miss Thackeray asked steadily.

He started, catching her meaning.

"My dear Miss Thackeray," he exclaimed, "this transaction is solely between your father and me. I shall have no other claim to press."

"I wish I could believe that," she said.

the most noteworthy complacency, he seemed to regard it as his due, or more properly speaking as if he were doing Barnes a great favor in allowing him to lend money to a person of his importance.

"A thought has just come to me, my dear fellow," he remarked as they arose from table. "With the proper kind of backing I could put over one of the most stupendous things the theater has known in fifty years. I don't mind saying to you—although it's rather sub rosa—that I have written a play—a four-act drama that will pack the biggest house on Broadway to the roof for as many months as we'd care to stay. Perhaps you will allow me to talk it over with you a little later on. You will be interested, I'm sure. Egad, sir, I'll read the play to you. I'll—What ho, landlord. Have your best automobile sent around to the door as quickly as possible. A couple of my men are going to Hornville to fetch hither my—"

"Just a minute," interrupted Putnam Jones, wholly unimpressed. "A man just called you up on the phone, Mr. Barnes. I told him you was entertaining royalty at lunch and couldn't be disturbed. So he asked me to have you call him up as soon as possible. His words, not mine."

Here's the number."

The mellow voice of the Irishman soon responded to Barnes' call.

"I called you up to relieve your mind regarding the young woman who came last night," he said. "You observe that I say 'came.' She's quite all right, safe and sound, and no cause for uneasiness. I thought you meant that she was coming here as a guest, and so I made the very natural mistake of saying she hadn't come at all, at all. The young woman in question is Mrs. Van Dyke's maid. But, bless me soul, how was I to know she was even in existence, much less expected by train or motor or Shanks' mare? Well, she's here, so there's the end of our mystery."

Barnes was slow in replying. He was doubting his own ears. It was not conceivable that an ordinary—or even an extraordinary—lady's maid could have possessed the exquisite voice and manner of his chance acquaintance of the day before, or the temerity to order that sour-faced chauffeur about as if—The chauffeur!

"But I thought you said that Mr. Curtis' chauffeur was moon-faced and—"

"He is, bedad," broke in Mr. O'Dowd, chuckling. "That's what deceived me entirely, and no wonder. It wasn't Peter at all, but the rapscallion washer who went after her. He was instructed to tell Peter to meet the four o'clock train, and the blockhead forgot to give the order. Bedad, what does he do but sneak out after her himself, scared out of his boots for fear of what he was to get from Peter. I had the whole story from Mrs. Van Dyke."

"Well, I'm tremendously relieved," said Barnes slowly.

"And so am I," said O'Dowd with conviction. "I have seen the heroine of our busted romance. She's a good-looking girl. I'm not surprised that she kept her veil down. If you were to leave it to me, though, I'd say that it's a sin to carry discretion so far as all that. You see what I mean, don't you?" His rich laugh came over the wire.

"Perfectly. Thank you for letting me know. My mind is at rest. Good-by." As he hung up the receiver he said to himself, "You are a most affable, convincing chap, Mr. O'Dowd, but I don't believe a word you say. That woman is no lady's maid, and you've known all the time that she was there."

At four o'clock he set out alone for a tramp up the mountain road in which the two men had been shot down. His mind was quite clear. Roon and Paul were not ordinary robbers. They were, no doubt, honest men. He would have said that they were thieves bent on burglarizing Green Fancy were it not for the disclosures of Miss Thackeray and the very convincing proof that they were not shot by the same man.

It was not beyond reason—indeed, it was quite probable—that they were trying to cross the border; in that event their real operations would be confined to the Canadian side of the line. He could not free himself of the suspicion that Green Fancy possessed the key to the situation. Roon and his companion could not have had the slightest interest in his movements up to the instant he encountered the young woman at the crossroads. His busy brain suddenly suffered the shock of a distinct conclusion. Was she a fellow conspirator? Was she the inside worker at Green Fancy in a well-laid plan to rifle the place?

Could it be possible that she was the confederate of these painstaking agents who lurked with sinister patience outside the very gates of the place called Green Fancy?

His ramble carried him far beyond the spot where Roon's body was found and where young Conley had come upon the tethered horses. His eager, curious gaze swept the forest to the edge of the clearing.

And after fence and sauntered among the big trees which so far had obscured the house from view. The trees grew very thickly on the slope, and they were unusually large. He progressed deeper into the wood. At the end of what must have been a mile he halted. There was no sign of habitation, no indication that man had ever penetrated so far into the forest.

As he was on the point of retracing his steps toward the road his gaze fell upon a huge moss-covered rock less than a hundred yards away. He stared, and gradually it began to take on angles and planes and recesses of the most astounding symmetry. Under his widening gaze it was transformed into a substantial object of cubes and gables and—yes, windows. He was looking upon the strange home of the even stranger Mr. Curtis—Green Fancy.

Now he understood why it was called Green Fancy. Its surroundings were no greener than itself; it seemed to melt into the foliage, to become a part of the natural landscape. Mountain ivy literally enveloped it. Exposed sections of the house were painted green; the doors were green; the leafy porches and their columns, the all were the color of the unchanging forest. And it was a place of huge dimensions, low and long and rambling.

"Gad," he said to himself, "what manner of crank is he who would bury himself like this? Of all the crazy ideas I ever—"

His reflections ended there. A woman crossed his vision; a woman strolling slowly toward him through the intricate avenues of the wildwood.

Barnes meets "Mrs. Van Dyke's maid," and the mystery deepens.

Never Lose Hope.

Hope is something to be busy with. It is something of which we should accumulate a store. Always have plenty of hopes, and have them so that they will reach out and last away into the years of the future.

There is really something mysterious about a hope. If you will cherish it faithfully and keep it warm in your heart, you will be almost sure to some time realize it. It is said that we are what we believe ourselves to be. But, perhaps, we might better say that we are what our hopes are.

Weak From Pain.

Mrs. Gibbert Was in Misery, But Doan's Brought Her Splendid Health.

"About 15 years ago my kidneys were in bad condition," says Mrs. Lucy Gibbert, 15310 Columbia Ave., Harvey, Ill. "There was a constant, dull, bearing-down pain in the small of my back. I couldn't turn over in bed without such pain I could hardly breathe. Mornings I was stiff, sore and lame all over; my back was like a rusty hinge."

"Inflammation of the bladder nearly drove me wild. The kidney secretions passed every little while, day and night, a little at a time, and burned like fire. Great sacs of water formed under my eyes."

"I was in such misery I would become weak and so nervous I would scream. I had nerve-racking headaches and the back of my neck pained me. I was so dizzy I didn't dare bend over for fear of falling on my face. My sight became blurred. I was sick all over."

"Five boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills cured me of kidney trouble. Since then I have enjoyed splendid health and I owe it all to Doan's."

STRIPPED OF ALL ROMANCE

Causes of the Newlyweds' Mutual Attraction Had a Decidedly Commonplace Aspect.

They had been man and wife for three blissful days. She looked wonderful that afternoon in a morning gown of frilled nougatine, and he finally convinced you that you loved me? Was it my superb playing on the violin, or my rich, 'cellolike' voice, or perhaps it was one of the exquisite poems that I wrote you? Tell me!"

"Hector," she said, low, "it was the perfectly intoxicating stuff the barber puts on your hair. What is it about me that convinced you beyond the shadow of a doubt that we were made for each other? The delicate genius of my touch on the harp? The intangible, indefinable beauty of my eyes? My adorable profile? Tell me!"

"It was the cunning little sound you make when you eat celery," he confessed.

And, both vaguely displeased, they refrained from speaking to each other for at least five minutes.

Much of Damage Is Directly Due to Faulty Methods of Packing Valuable Foodstuff.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)
 The bureau of chemistry, through the food research laboratory, has been assisting in reducing the damage to eggs in transit by giving practical demonstrations at shipping points in the United States. The eggs were packed and dressed poultry. Much of the damage is directly due to faulty methods of packing. The cases were stowing the cases in the car. Four meetings held recently in Iowa were

PHYSICALLY FIT AT ANY AGE

It isn't age, it's careless living that puts men "down and out." Keep your internal organs in good condition and you will always be physically fit. The kidneys are the most over-worked organs in the human body. When they break down under the strain and the deadly uric acid accumulates and crystallizes look out! These sharp crystals tear and scratch the delicate urinary channels causing excruciating pain and set up irritations which may cause premature degeneration and often do turn into deadly Bright's Disease.

One of the first warnings of sluggish kidney action is pain or stiffness in the small of the back, loss of appetite, indigestion or rheumatism. Do not wait until the danger is upon you. At the first indication of trouble go after the cause at once. Get a trial box of GOLD MEDAL Haarlem Oil Capsules, imported direct from the laboratories in Holland. They will give almost immediate relief. If for any cause they should not, your money will be refunded. But be sure to get GOLD MEDAL. None other is genuine. In sealed boxes, three sizes.—Adv.

THIN PEOPLE SHOULD TAKE PHOSPHATE

Nothing Like Plain Bitro-Phosphate to Put on Firm, Healthy Flesh and to Increase Strength, Vigor and Nerve Force.

Judging from the countless preparations and treatments which are continually being advertised for the purpose of making thin people fleshy, developing arms, neck and bust, and replacing ugly hollows and sagging by the soft curved lines of health and beauty, there are evidently thousands of men and women who keenly feel their excessive thinness.

Thinness and weakness are often due to starved nerves. Our bodies need more phosphate than is contained in modern foods. Physicians claim there is nothing that will supply this deficiency so well as the organic phosphate known among druggists as bitro-phosphate, which is inexpensive and is sold by most all druggists under a guarantee of satisfaction or money back. By feeding the nerves directly and by supplying the body cells with the necessary phosphoric food elements, bitro-phosphate should produce a welcome transformation in the appearance; the increase in weight frequently being astonishing.

Increase in weight also carries with it a general improvement in the health. Nervousness, sleeplessness and lack of energy, which nearly always accompany excessive thinness, should disappear, dull eyes become bright, and pale cheeks glow with the bloom of perfect health.

CAUTION:—Although bitro-phosphate is unsurpassed for relieving nervousness, sleeplessness and general weakness, it should not, owing to its tendency to increase weight, be used by anyone who does not desire to put on flesh.

THIS WEAK, NERVOUS MOTHER

Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Restored Her Health.

Philadelphia, Pa.—"I was very weak, always tired, my back ached, and I felt sickly most of the time. I went to a doctor and he said I had nervous indigestion, which added to my weak condition kept me worrying most of the time—and he said if I could not stop that, I could not get well. I heard so much about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound my husband wanted me to try it. I took it for a week and felt a little better. I kept it up for three months, and I feel fine and can eat anything now without distress or nervousness."—Mrs. J. WORTHLINE, 2842 North Taylor St., Philadelphia Pa.

The majority of mothers nowadays overdo, there are so many demands upon their time and strength; the result is invariably a weakened, run-down, nervous condition with headaches, back-ache, irritability and depression—and soon more serious ailments develop. It is at such periods in life that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will restore a normal healthy condition, as it did to Mrs. Worthline.

Western Canada's "Horn of Plenty" Offers You Health & Wealth

Western Canada for years has helped to feed the world—the same responsibility of production still rests upon her. While high prices for Grain, Cattle and Sheep are sure to remain, price of land is much below its value. Land capable of yielding 20 to 45 bushels of wheat to the acre can be had on easy terms at from $15 to $30 per acre—good grazing land at much less.

Many farms paid for from a single year's crop. Raising cattle, sheep and hogs brings equal success. The Government encourages farming and stock raising. Railway and Land Companies offer unusual inducements to Home Seekers. Farms may be stocked by loans at moderate interest. Western Canada offers low taxation, good markets and shipping; free schools, churches and beautiful climate.
