RECOLLECTIONS OF BY-GONE DAYS

By Jas. T. Eaman.

By the choice of Rev. Charles S. Burch as Bishop of New York, the largest Episcopal Diocese of America, Embracing Trinity Church, the wealthiest Ecclesiastical Corporation in the world, that gentleman has doubtless received the highest honor and distinction yet attained by any man who hails old Putnam as his birth place.

Bishop Burch is the eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence D. Burch, his mother a sister of the late Joel R. Dunning another of Putnam's pioneer farmers.

The parents came to Putnam in 1853 settling on the farm in North Putnam which I call the Gabe Allison farm adjoining that of the late Charles Love. It was there that the young bishop to be was born. Older residents will better remember the bishop's father as "Captain Burch" who enlisted a company of volunteers in that vicinity during the Civil War and was attached to the 26th, Rendezvoused at Jackson. THE LAST SOLDIERS ARRIVE HOME

Last week Gregory McCluskey surprised his parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. McCluskey, by arriving home unexpectedly, having traveled faster than the letters he wrote notifying them of his expected return. The letters did not arrive until after Gregory personally announced his return. For some time past he has been on special duty in Germany.

Saturday, Francis Harris, the last soldier from this vicinity, arrived home. He was with the First division, which made the body-guard of General Pershing in the parades which were held in honor of the Commander-in-Chief on his return to Washington.

The "Bridgehead Sentinel", a newspaper published by the first division at Nieuwied, Germany, states the Division was "First in everything but one: First to reach France, first to complete training, first to take part in offensive action, first to sacrifice officers and men in the world struggle, first to cross the Rhine into Germany—and last to come home."

It was composed of veteran regular outfits and gave a striking impetus to the admiration of American arms in Europe. It was in many actions, including Chateau Thierry, Toul, Lunéville, Camigny, Soissons, St. Mihiel, the Argonne and the Meuse. "The colors of every organization in

Just received several new pieces in gingham, outtings, percales also a full and complete assortment of bed blankets to choose from.

It is not probable that the bishop cherishes very tender memories of his boy hood days in Putnam, for he was only five years old when his father sold his farm and removing his family to Ann Arbor, prior to his entering the army. At the close of the war, Captain Burch, then Colonel Burch, engaged in the newspaper work in Chicago, leaving his family at Ann Arbor for the better educational advantages obtained there.

Charley was a brilliant student, graduating from the University with high honors in 1875. For thirty years he was engaged in the newspaper work and not until 1905 at the age of fifty years did he take orders as an Episcopal clergyman which had been his life-long ambition.

The youth of Putnam and of the world may take knowledge of Bishop Burch of the success which may be reached by aiming at a high ideal and persistently striving to attain to it.

Mr. Eaman sent to this paper with the manuscript of the above article a fine photo engraving of Bishop Burch from Pinckney who have not returned are Joe Mackinder, who was killed in action in September, 1818, and Bernard McCluskey, who was in the army post office department at Paris during the war and who surrendered to the charms of a Belgian beauty and is now a private citizen living with his wife in Belgium.

RAILROAD WRECK

Last Friday afternoon an accident occurred to a freight train about one-half mile west of Anderson. Several cars were derailed and about 300 feet of track torn up. The east bound passenger train was delayed at Jackson and the wrecking train and crew arrived on the scene several hours after the accident occurred.

When the east and west bound passenger trains arrived on the scene they were held there from about eight o'clock until nearly five in the morning.

The officials of the road show very little consideration for the traveling public. Other railroads generally transfer the passengers from one train to the other when a wreck blockades the track, thus allowing the passengers to reach their destinations with as little delay as possible. But not so on this branch of the Grand Trunk.

Rumors have been persistently circulating that railroad officials are doing all in their power to bring the government management into disrepute and in such instances as this wreck and other wrecks on the same railroad, when passengers have unnecessarily detained while they might be transferred seems to justify the assertions.

OBITUARY

Edwin Adelbert Sprout, son of Rowley A. Sprout and Polly Hinckley Sprout was born in the township of Putnam, April 21, 1856, and died at his home in Anderson September 27, 1918.

The years of his life were spent in the place of his birth in the occupation of farming. His life was marked by devotion to duty, love for his family, obliging disposition toward his neighbors and great kindness in time of trouble and sickness. He leaves to mourn his loss his wife and faithful helpmate of many years, two sons, one daughter, five grandchildren, three sisters, two brothers and numerous other relatives and friends.

The vacancy in our family circle can best be expressed by the words of the poet Teanyson:

"Break, break on thy cold grey stones, O sea,
But O! for the touch of a vanished hand,
And the sound of a voice that is still."

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to express our thanks for the services and kind words of sympathy extended to us during our late bereavement.

STEEL STRIKERS ASK ARBITRATION

HAVE EXPRESSED WILLINGNESS TO END WALKOUT IF GARY WILL MEET COMMITTEE.

U. S. STEEL HEAD DECLINES

Says "Moral Principles" Involved Make It Impossible—Number of Men Out Estimated At 340,000.

Washington—Indications, after a week of the great steel strike, pointed to a prolonged struggle for following a statement by John Fitzpatrick, director-general of the strike, that the walkout could be ended immediately if the United States Steel corporation would agree to arbitrate, Elbert H. Gary, directing head of the corporation, gave it as his personal opinion that, because of "moral principles" involved in the struggle, the directors could not deal with the union labor leaders.

A similar stand was taken by E. G. Grace, president of the Bethlehem Steel Co.

Appearing as labor's first witness in the senate's investigation of the steel strike, John Fitzpatrick, Chicago, chairman of the strikers' committee, declared that an agreement by the United States Steel corporation to arbitrate differences with its employees would result in an immediate end of the walkout, which, he said, now affects 340,000 men.

"We aren't fighting for money," insisted the strike leader, and he talked of babies and sunlight and happiness—and of state troopers riding down crowds of men and women. He said the men wanted to break the basic 12-hour day that deprived them of all that made life sweet.

Judge E. H. Gary was expected to appear before the senate investigating committee, October 1.

STEEL MAGNATE REFUSED OFFER OF ARBITRATION

JUDGE E. H. GARY.

Judge Gary, chairman of the United States Steel corporation, who refused to accept Leader Fitzpatrick's offer for arbitration to settle the steel strike.

William B. Rubin, counsel for the strikers, says the union will institute an "inquisitional proceeding" to call Judge Gary and "Mr. Morgan" to tell "how, when and where they acquired their steel corporation holding" and also to testify regarding the "legality of the corporation and its management."

Mr. Gary was cited to appear before the Senate Labor committee Wednesday.

Workers Demand 60 Per Cent Raise, 6 Hour Day, 5 Day Week.

Buffalo.—The first response of the soft coal operators to the demands of for a new wage scale, effective November 1, with the alternative of a general strike on that date, is based on the argument that the present Washington wage agreements run for the duration of the war, or until April 1, 1920, if the war be not ended by that time, and that there is, therefore, no reason to put a new scale into effect November 1.

The coal operators, in convention here say they cannot meet the general demands for the 60 per cent increase, six-hour day, five-day week and other conditions formulated at the Cleveland convention of the mine workers.

"A word in your ear, senior," he said, his voice and manner gayly impudent, his words low so that they reached no ears but those he intended to hear. "Twenty thousand dollars now, immediately, or I give you my word as a gentleman that when the sun is up you will rush to me, trying to make terms, and I shall then answer you by demanding fifty thousand!"

The threat in the man's voice again disturbed Stanway. He had a feeling which he could not entirely reason down that Torre meant what he was saying. Then he looked at the half dozen stern-featured, faithful servants, who served the De la Guerra as old subjects served a beloved sovereign; saw them watchful, armed, eager for an excuse to fling themselves upon their two captives; and, frowning at his own fears, he went to his room.

His windows faced westward and to the south.

He stood before one of them which looked to the border, half ready to expect a rush of cavalry through the olive trees.

He saw the olive trees sway to the little, warm wind from the south; watched his window curtains pulsing slowly like one breathing; noted how the moonlight gilded the ripe fruit upon the orange trees, and, with a last look toward the eastern wing of the house, where a little balcony jutted out among roses, he jerked down his shade, fastened his window, placed a lock on the door, and, with a sigh, went to bed. A sudden shiver of uneasiness upon him.

"Who it is?" he called sharply.

"It is Lugo, senior. Senor Torre sends me with a message. It is to come to the drawing-room immediately. He has something to say to you. He says it is very important. He insists you come to him before it is three o'clock—within fifteen minutes."

"He has his nerve," muttered Stanway. "Tell him to be more explicit or to go to the devil."

"Si, senior."

Lugo chuckled his approval, and hurried away through the still house. Stanway lay back upon his bed and closed his eyes, only to open them quickly to stare into the darkness of his room.

He was remembering those forebodings which had come to him with Torre's veiled threats; he was feeling an uneasiness which he could not drive out. Torre had sent for him in the middle of the night.

Again he sat up, groping for matches and a candlestick. In the little yellow glow he saw that it lacked but ten minutes of three. He sprang out of bed, drew on his clothes hurriedly, and hastened to the drawing-room.

His smile was full of mock-politeness. "To trouble yourself so at the slightest wish of a guest is—"

"Get down to business if you have any," Stanway interrupted bluntly. "What is it?"

"I want a word with you in private," Torre answered quietly. The man was fully dressed and now rose from the couch upon which he had been lying. "There is no objection to the others being in the room, but at least let us stand at the far side of the chamber so that they may not hear."

"If you have anything to say, say it aloud," Stanway retorted. "I am tired of your way of doing business, Torre. Now, what is it?"

Torre shrugged.

"Then I shall be silent," he said carelessly. "I think that you are making a mistake, senior."

Was he? Stanway didn't know. He looked about the room. Juarez seemed to be sleeping heavily upon his couch; the vaqueros, seven of them, sat along the walls or lounged about the room, each man of them as watchful, his eyes as keen and suspicious as at the beginning of their vigil at dusk.

And yet, in spite of all this security, in spite of the fact that Stanway and the De la Guerra servants were armed and their two prisoners unarmed, the rancher had the odd feeling that there was a weakness in his position which he could not see, but which was very plain to the smiling Torre. And then his curiosity decided him.

"Come," he said after a brief moment. And then again: "Now, what is it?"

He had stepped to the far corner of the room, motioning two of the lounging cowboys out of earshot. Torre, debonaire, his manner gracefully indifferent, stopped at the big mahogany table to light his cigarette at one of the candles and came to Stanway's side.

"Thank you, senior," he said, his voice very low now, his words guarded so that none but the rancher might hear them. "For this is in the way of a kindness to me, although you do not know that yet."

"It is not meant that way, so keep your thanks," returned Stanway. "I am waiting."

"Bueno. Now first I want you to remember this: I am in the position to be the key to the situation, and you must see that. If for any reason the vaqueros in some sudden fit of rage should seek to put a violent end to my gay little existence—"

He shrugged. "It would be like a man in a prison cell destroying the key to his liberty, senior."

"Go on. Needless to say I don't understand."

"You will in a moment." He glanced at his watch. "It is almost three. This you must understand: if such a thought should come into the vaqueros' bloody minds I shall look to you as my protector."

"Now"—his air, his smile, his very carriage eloquent of a laughing impudence, he stepped close to the shuttered window—"now something is going to happen."

Suddenly his hand shot out and a pane fell from the window, broken into many pieces tinkling upon the

"Ahora, companeros! Strike!"

A revolver flashed into sight in Stanway's hand; a revolver was in the hand of each vaquero in the room. The air was charged with expectancy.

"Watch him!" called out Stanway. "Jerk him back from the window!"

While he was speaking he had struck one of the candlesticks from the table; Gaucho had understood and had put out the other lights. The room sank into swift, impenetrable darkness.

Three of the cowboys had thrown themselves upon Torre, dragging him back, holding his arms pinioned at his sides. Stanway, with no minute lost, threw open the shutters, raised the window and peered out into the night.

It was very still. He could see little enough, but his straining eyes ran back and forth along the wall of the house and were certain that there were no lurking forms there. His ears told him of the heavy breathing of the men behind him, but brought him no sound of men without.

"Remember, senior," called Torre, his panting notes telling of the treatment he was receiving. "Remember about the key!"

Stanway closed the window and the shutters, calling to Gaucho for a light. The flicker of the match showed him Torre in the grip of the three men, his face looking a little pale, his eyes very bright.

"If we are attacked," cried the rancher sharply. "It is Torre who has given the signal. Remember he is not to go free."

Fierce fires leaped up in the savage eyes of the vaqueros, and the big, brown, muscular hands corded ominously.

A clock somewhere in the house struck—once, two, three. Stanway counted, every sense on the alert, his mind expecting, his heart dreading he knew not what.

And then came the thing he had not looked for.

It was a scream—a woman's scream, rising sharp through the sudden silence, telling of sudden, rude awakening, of blind, gripping terror.

"The senorita!"—shouted Gaucho. "Madre de Dios! They are killing the senorita!"

CHAPTER IX.

The Key.

Stanway had already recognized the voice coming to them faintly from the far eastern end of the building; a great fear for Teresa had already leaped out upon him, and he had fung open the door, running toward her rooms.

"Remember!" shouted Torre after him. "If I die—"

"Gaucho, Esteban, come with me!" called Stanway, his voice cutting through Torre's swift words. "The rest of you stay with your prisoners. Do not harm them—until I come back. They alone can help us save your master and mistress. But if they try to escape then shoot them like dogs!"

And he was gone, running swiftly through the long hall, his words floating back across his shoulder, the heavy boots of Gaucho and Esteban pounding just behind him.

Door after door he fung open as he raced on through the darkness, waiting for no candle. He came at last to the broad stairway leading up to Teresa's rooms, Gaucho and Esteban at his heels.

Here there was light, a candle burning low upon the floor at the side of Pedro's couch. And Pedro—

"They have killed him!" It was Gaucho's voice in a little expressionless grunt.

Pedro lay upon the floor at the side of his couch, his body half covered with the blankets which had fallen with him, his face very white, a smear of blood across temple and cheek. Celestino, the vaquero who had spent the night at Pedro's side, was not to be seen.

Stanway, rushing up the stairs, his revolver in his hand, bestowed only one look upon the unconscious Pedro and rushed at the door of Teresa's room.

The door was locked. He called. There was no answer. Everything was perfectly still. He knocked at the door loudly, calling again. And now, when silence answered him, a great fury swept through him, his facsimile of the notes remove it with alkalies. The secret of the ingredients of the ink is of course carefully preserved.

In a Balcony.

Up in the balcony of a big store's shoe department were boys busy with boxes to whom saleswomen from the floor below called like this: "Send me down a No. 2 Benny—a No. 2 Benny." "A four David, a four David." "I want a three-and-a-half Charles, understand? A three-and-a-half Charles." Gradually it dawned upon a woman observer that the names referred not to the boys, but to the boots. "What do you say when you want 'A'?" she asked. "With 'A?' repeated the saleswoman; "that's Able." Were there greater variety in women's feet, there might not be enough names to go round the alphabet and up to the balcony.—New York Evening Post.

Not His Unlucky Number.

Richard Wagner was essentially a child of the number 13. He was born in 1813. Add the numbers 1, 8, 1, 3, and we have again 13. Wagner had 13 letters in his name. He composed 13 great works. He finished—duced on March 13.—AND Wagner died on February 13.

But to do this eminence justice it must be admitted that the hill is beyond dispute above the level of the sea.—Exchange.

Paradise.

There is nothing that is nearer to you than heaven. Paradise and hell, into which of them are you inclined, and to which of them you tend to walk, to that in this lifetime you are most near. You are between both; and there is a birth between each of them. You stand in this world between both the gates, and you have both the births in you. God beckons to you in one gate, and calls you; the devil beckons you in the other gate and calls you; with whom you go, with him you enter in. The devil has in his hand power, honor, pleasure and worldly joy. On the contrary, God has in his hand crosses, persecution, misery, poverty and sorrow; but in the root of these is a fire; in the fire there is light, and in the light the virtue, and in the virtue the paradise.—Jacob Boehme.

Worry is Twin of Fear.

Worry is a homeopathic or attenuated dose of fear, and fear as all know, is a powerful depressant of the circulation and nervous system. It is fear that paralyzes the animal that is "charmed" by a snake; it is fear that "strikes at the heart" of a child frightened by some real or fancied apparition or threat, predisposing to shock or collapse. It is harmful emotion. There is no doubt that a successful individual might be somewhat "brightened to death."

BUSH HIDES HOLLAND'S HILL

But Even at That, the Mound is Justly Appreciated in That Flat Country.

It seems absurd to speak of a hill in Holland, but if the best guessers are right the name of the country is from our word "hollow," meaning a depression in the land. An American, however, found at Gronigan a hill that was the showplace of the town. It was artificial.

"There is a fine hill in the Plantage," said his companion, a Hollander, "and from the summit of it you will be able to see the country for a great distance around."

"It interested the American greatly to hear that there was such a thing at a hill in Holland.

"But where is it?" he asked, looking around the interminable plain. "I can see no hill."

"It is just over there, but you cannot see it, for it is hidden by that bush!"

The American ascended this fine hill, which proved to be an artificial mound not 20 feet in height, but the natives are very proud of it and speak of it as if it were some huge mountain. As an instance of how successfully a Groninger is deceived by his admiration for the town hill, it may be mentioned that the American's companion heaved a deep sigh, mopped his face and dropped as if exhausted in a chair, thoughtfully placed there by the corporation for this purpose, when he reached the summit.

Stanway scarcely heard the man. He was looking for a ladder, seeking to see how Teresa had been carried from the house.

There was nothing.

He thought that there had been many men here; that a man below had caught the girl in his arms as she was dropped down to him; he shuddered at the thought, and once more was running, now down the stairs, which he took almost at a bound, through the dim corridors, and toward the drawing room.

"The senorita!" several voices were clamoring at him. "Have they harmed her? Blood of the Savior, have they dared lay hand upon her?"

"She is gone," he answered crisply. "Listen, companeros. This is the work of Torre yonder. You know that. But you must not harm him—yet! There is time. See that he does not escape. If he does not bring the senorita back to us safe, unharmed—then we shall know what to do, shall we not, companeros?"

They answered him by silence and the quick turning of black, fierce eyes upon the man who had this second thing to answer to them for. Torre summoned his old bravado and the smile which went with it.

Torre did not speak, but, turning away, made a cigarette, Captain Juarez, seemingly just awakened, threw his blanket aside and sat up on his couch, his eyes roving from face to face, coming to rest at last upon Torre's as though he were awaiting a leader's move. His eyes were as grave as Torre's, his sense of a crisis as clear.

Reason for "Greenbacks."

Why the United States bank notes are printed with green backs is not generally known, although there is most excellent reason for it. The great drawback to paper currency is the likelihood of its being counterfeited, and therefore experts are constantly at work to contrive ways of making it impossible to copy such bills. Stacy J. Edison was the man who in 1857 invented the green ink that Uncle Sam uses on his bank bills. The ink, which

My limbs and back felt as though they were crushed. I had little control of the kidney secretions and the passages were painful. My head ached a great deal and I was dizzy. TOWNSHIP UNIT SCHOOL SYSTEM

An article written by a Unadilla citizen who sees advantages in the proposed centralized school for our neighboring township.

On Friday evening, the 26th inst. the people of Unadilla Township were entertained and instructed by an illustrated lecture on centralized schools given by Mr. Otwell at the Maccabee Hall, Gregory.

The speaker argued with force and ability, showing that the great war taught us the fact that we were not prepared from an educational standpoint, as well as in many other ways. This lack of preparedness showed many defects in the present system of education brought about by inadequate facilities, by the lack of manual, or mechanical training, and by the present crowding together of the grades, thus giving the teacher far too little time to bring about results that we have a right to expect.

A co-ordination of the three agencies, viz.—the home, the church and the school, will, when each is properly exercised, draw out and develop the noblest qualities of mind and heart, and direct their energies into channels of right thought and action.

We need go no further than observation to see that the church and the home are not every day mechanics and domestic arts were very well illustrated. The transportation of children did not fail to receive attention, the speaker showing that it was successfully done even in the rugged regions of Northern Michigan.

The state aid of $800 plus $200 for each vehicle necessary to draw the children and $750 from the Federal Government makes it possible to have all the advantages of a high school within the reach of every family in the township at no more cost to the taxpayers than the present system.

So enthusiastic was the audience that a straw vote showed but one dissenting voice. The hall was filled nearly to capacity.

HOW ABOUT THE COST?

Will the Township Unit System Make the Tax-Payer's Burden Heavier?

Perhaps, in a radical change in educational methods, where the change is for increased proficiency in teaching and brings practical experience in mechanical and economic studies, the cost should not be considered in view of the increased efficiency of the graduates under the proposed new township unit system.

To say nothing about the cost it will be of the greatest benefit to know that your son will be able to have a practical knowledge of the use of tools; that he will be able to make a nailbox, a step-ladder, a wagonbox or even a piece of furniture by the aid of his school instruction.

It will be a fine thing to know that your daughter knows how to bake bread, darn socks, make an apron, prepare a menu, cook and serve a good meal economically when her mother is are too busy with the duties of life to give much attention to this important matter. Others will not accept the responsibility, while many do not come under the influence of the church at all.

Hence we see that a very great responsibility rests upon the teacher to supply as best she may the work left undone as above mentioned in addition to that which rightfully belongs to school work.

There is no influence so potent in the building of character as that of home when provided over by conscientious parents who are ever watchful for the future welfare of their children.

During the adolescent period of life the children need most watchful care. This can be best obtained by a system of schools where by the children shall receive a writer or write a business letter will be a great help.

To know that agriculture—practical and theoretical—will be taught, to know that these studies will be to their credit if they desire to enter college. And to know that while their minds are being improved, their physical systems are under expert training, with a gymnasium in each school to keep their bodies in good physical condition.

Perhaps dollars and cents should not be brought into consideration in view of the better educated and better trained boy and girl graduates. But where the township unit system has been tried and is now in practical daily use, the authorities inform us that the cost is no more than under the present inadequate system. The actual figures show that Unadilla township can conduct the proposed central school transportation, pupils and give the increased educational values and the cost on the part of the taxpayers are not paying for the maintenance of the district schools.

of domestic arts, and at the same time be under the benign influence of home. In this way only can we develop the physical, mental, and moral qualities in such a way that, as the poet said—

"We need not fear the tyrant's rule When near the church spire stands the school."

In the present system of grade crowding there is too little time allotted to the training of each class.

Children, if not properly taught will acquire a considerable amount of knowledge that they will have to unlearn and learn correctly, or be handicapped in their future endeavors.

By a centralized school system, having a teacher for not more than two grades, adequate time and attention may be given so that some faculty of the child's mind may receive attention a good portion of the 4 1/2 hours of actual time in school.

One of Livingston county's most prominent farm real estate dealers is authority for the statement that a farm will sell for more money with a centralized township school and free transportation than it would bring today. His experience with Ohio and Indiana buyers is that they regard the old district school of no intrinsic value to a nearby farm. In Indiana and Ohio the centralized school has been practically universally adopted—it has stood the test—and farm buyers coming from those states know from actual experience what is of the most value for them.

Catarrhal deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian tube. WITH THESE FEW DRAWBACKS Critic Was Willing to Admit That the Performance Might Be Called an Excellent One.

Following his recent visit to the Russian show, Clerk took in a Yiddish performance at the Lyceum. The course of the evening of the performance

The regular comedienne, who is very young, padded her figure and played the part of mother to a heroine several times her size. On a street scene drop there appeared, among others, an ad, "For Good Photos," illustrated by a portrait of a cross-eyed man with a twisted lip. The prompter on occasion talked more loudly than the actors. The professor-pianist gave a very poor imitation of a man playing the piano on the stage, trusting implicitly in the camouflage of the orchestra leader in the pit. A man entered our box, and while we were advising on the possibility of throwing him out, we learned that he was the manager of the house. The newly rich mother of the heroine went visiting on her street, but remembered to take her lunch along, consisting of a corned beef sandwich, a mammoth pickle, and a soft drink, all purchased from the delicatessen in front; the entables she drew from her bosom and the drink from her stocking. The comedian threw a kiss to the wildly applauding fat man in the upper box. The broken-hearted lover used the same photograph as a portrait of his sweetheart and of his mother—we saw it on the bias from the box.
However, adds Clerk, the performance as a whole was excellent.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

ENGLAND TIED UP BY RAIL STRIKE

INDUSTRIAL PARALYSIS LOOMS AS RESULT OF WALKOUT OF RAILROAD MEN.

600,000 WORKERS INVOLVED

Organized Labor Testing Strength in First Blow At Government—Food Situation Serious.

London.—The strike of railwaymen, involving 600,000 workers, which was called September 27, has brought Great Britain to an almost complete standstill.

Premier Lloyd George terms it "an anarchist conspiracy." In stating the position of the government, he declared that the state would fight labor's blow with all the resources at its disposal. The premier appealed to the people for their support.

England, but especially London, faces a food crisis. The fish porters at Billingsgate have taken the lead among the food strikers. They went out in sympathy, refusing to load fishing barges.

Stoppage of the entire railway system opened the first battle in English history directly between the government and organized labor. Both sides were highly organized and were preparing for a finish fight.

The government's first precautions were to prepare against starvation. The Food Ministry sprung a surprise when it revealed that it had large food stores in London, which, it was estimated, are sufficient to supply the city for six weeks. Stocks in other parts of the kingdom will enable Britain to subsist for at least eight weeks.

Motor lorries, stationed in all parts of the country, began immediately operating between the sea ports and food depots in the inland cities. The

OLD SAYING SLIGHTLY MIXED

Familiar "Before You Could Say Jack Robinson" Does Not Convey the Right Idea.

Ophion differs as to the proper duration of a social call. "Anywhere from ten minutes to a half hour," says the woman who has a social secretary and whose daily job is "calling," to the tune of tea and wafers. "All afternoon," says the bourgeoisie, who takes along her knitting and sits down to coffee and cake. "And then," says some, "it depends upon the call. On some occasions and with different

REALLY NOT WAITER'S FAULT

Mr. Green's Perfect Mastery of the French Language Evidently Was Too Much for Him.

Mr. Brown and Mr. Green were taking their long-talked-of holiday in France. For three months Mr. Green had been learning French—by correspondence—and thought he had mastered the language.

One afternoon the pair went into a cafe to have tea, and Green, who always insisted on doing all the talking, gave the order to the waiter. When, however, the tea things were brought, he noticed that something was missing, and spoke angrily to the waiter about it.

"My dear fellow," objected Brown, "what on earth are you saying?"

"Will you kindly refrain from making your absurd criticisms of my use of the French language?" retorted Green.

"Oh, certainly!" answered Brown. "Only it seems rather a waste of time to ask the waiter to bring you a staircase when what you want is a teaspoon!"—Londof Tit-Bits.

to wear out his welcome. In fact hardly had he been announced, hardly had the servant who admitted him spoken aloud his name than he was gone.

So, as you see, "before you can say Jack Robinson" has no reference to the time it takes to say it. "As long as you can see Jack Robinson" would be more in order with its origin and significance.

Robert was visiting me and he went into the library one rainy day to get a book. He picked up a book that happened to be a French book. I said: "I am afraid you can't read that book, Robert. You had better take one written in English."

Mr. Smith hearing music and singing at his neighbor's house, decided he would drop in and see how they were.

Mr. Jones welcomed him and ushered him into the parlor where his daughter was playing the piano and his son singing. Mr. Smith begged them to continue. They consented.

The first song they selected was "Mother." They sang this very feelingly and then father joined in on "Mother Machree" and others of like sentiment or songs about mother—how true they were, how dear and how they loved to sing them.

Then, as Mrs. Jones hadn't appeared yet, Mr. Smith inquired about her state of health.

"Oh," said Jones, "she's well enough. She's in the kitchen doing the dishes, but after she has finished and has taken in the wood she'll join us."—Judge.

WILSON'S ILLNESS NOT SERIOUS

Absolute Rest Ordered By Physician—Speaking Tour Ended.

Washington.—President Wilson arrived here Sunday, September 28, cutting short his proposed long speaking trip.

All of Mr. Wilson's engagements for the near future have been canceled, and his physician, Admiral Goddard, has insisted upon a brief vacation.

The presidential special reached Washington at 11:45 o'clock Sunday morning.

The President's illness, although brought to a head by his exertion on his speaking tour, is ascribed by Dr. Grayson in large part to the attack of influenza from which Mr. Wilson suffered last April in Paris. On that occasion he was confined to bed for several days but continued his conferences with the other members of the "Big Four" at his bedside.

RAILMEN AND U.S. AGREE ON PAY

Agreement Reported to Include Wage Scale and 8 Hour Day.

Washington.—Representatives of affiliated unions comprising the railroad shopmen are reported to have reached a general understanding with the railroad administration covering wages and working conditions, to remain in effect while the government retains control of the lines.

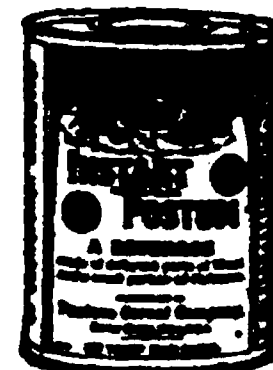

More than 600,000 railway employees are included in the group of unions known as the railroad shop men. According to meagre statements obtained from various sources, the contemplated agreement includes a union wage scale for each trade or craft involved, the basic 8-hour day, time and a half for overtime, and many other detailed provisions, all to be incorporated in uniform national contracts which would terminate automatically when the roads were handed back to private operation.

SOME FAVORITE DISHES.

This time of the year is filled with such sunshiny days, and even warm ones, that it is well to keep to the lighter foods and simple repasts until the first chilly days which give the appetite a zest and vigor.

The oyster now has come again to his own and is served fresh, preferably, though in a stew, fried, creamed or scalloped will always be popular with many.

Creamed Fresh Beef.—Chop one pound of beef from the round; put into a hot pan and stir until all is seared. Add one tablespoonful of butter and, as soon as it is melted, dredge the beef with one tablespoonful of flour; stir until the flour is browned. Add one cupful of cream, boil up, season with salt and pepper and serve on hot toast.

Delmonico Hash.—Take a pound of finely chopped meat from the top of the round, put it into a hot frying pan with two tablespoonfuls of butter, one small shredded onion and cook until the beef is nicely browned; add one-half cupful of hot water; or, better, soup stock, and eight chopped potatoes, previously cooked. Season with salt, paprika and chopped parsley.

Cheese and Olive Canapee.—Cut stale bread into one-quarter-inch slices. Shape with a small oblong cutter with rounded corners. Cream butter and add an equal quantity of soft, rich cheese; season with salt. Spread on the bread and garnish with one-quarter-inch border of finely chopped olives and a piece of red and green pepper cut in fancy shapes in the center of covered pan, with a teaspoonful of lemon juice, a little of the yellow rind, a cupful of sugar and water enough to cover the bottom of the dish. Stew until tender. Line a deep pastry plate with rich pastry; place the apples in it, fill the centers with peach marmalade and put strips of pastry over the top. Bake in a quick oven and serve with cream.

Russel Sandwiches.—Take an equal amount of cold boiled chicken and tongue, a dozen olives and six hard-cooked eggs; mix all together and chop as fine as possible. Work into a paste by the addition of mayonnaise dressing, then season and spread on buttered bread.

"To judge with candor and speak no wrong, The feeble to support against the strong, To soothe the wretched and the poor to feed, Will cover many an idle, foolish deed."

of a choice. Cucumbers.—Take 100 small cucumbers sliced thin, leaving on the peeling, three plants of small onions also sliced thin, three ounces of white mustard seed, one ounce of celery seed, one ounce of white pepper, two scant cupfuls of olive oil.—Add one and two-thirds cupfuls of salt, and add to the cucumbers; let stand three hours. Let the sliced onions stand in cold water three hours. Drain well, and mix the onions and cucumbers with the oil and the spices. Put into jars, and fill the jars with good vinegar. Keep in a cold place. Good in ten days.

Corn Relish.—Cut corn from twelve ears, chop one small head of cabbage, sprinkle salt over the cabbage, mix well and let stand three hours. Drain off the water and put corn and cabbage together; add one cupful of sugar, two quarts of vinegar, one-half cupful of mustard, four small red peppers chopped. Cook all until tender then put into sterilized cans and seal.

Mint Vinegar.—Put into a quart jar enough fresh mint, carefully washed and dried, to fill it loosely, fill up with vinegar and let stand well covered for three weeks. Strain, bottle and cork and the flavored vinegar will keep for years. Tarragon, chervil or any other herb may be used in the same manner.

Mushrooms make fine catsup. Arrange in layers in salt and let stand over night. Drain and cook with spices as one's taste desires.

The Effects of Opiates.

THAT INFANTS are peculiarly susceptible to opium and its various preparations, all of which are narcotic, is well known. Even in the smallest doses, if continued, these opiates cause changes in the functions and growth of the cells which are likely to become permanent, causing imbecility, mental perversion, a craving for alcohol or narcotics in later life. Nervous diseases, such as intractable nervous dyspepsia and lack of staying powers are a result of dosing with opiates or narcotics to keep children quiet in their infancy. The rule among physicians is that children should never receive opiates in the smallest doses for more than a day at a time, and only then if unavoidable.
The administration of Anodynes, Drops, Cordials, Soothing Syrups and other narcotics to children by any but a physician cannot be too strongly decried, and the druggist should not be a party to it. Children who are ill need the attention of a physician, and it is nothing less than a crime to dose them willfully with narcotics.

ALL AMERICA HONORS MEMORY OF COLONEL

GEN. PAYTON C. MARCH, Chief of Staff, U. S. Army—The plan for erecting a permanent memorial to Col. Roosevelt appeals in a peculiar manner to the officers of the United States Army. Col. Roosevelt's virility, force, and aggressive Americanism are qualities which are desired in every soldier, and he typifies to us the fighting American.

REAR ADMIRAL WM. S. SIMS, U. S. Navy—It is really difficult for me to express my admiration and appreciation of the late Theodore Roosevelt in adequate terms. I am glad that his friends are planning to erect a memorial to him, for certainly this country has never had a finer son or a more staunch supporter than he was. I was fortunate enough to have been closely associated with Col. Roosevelt, and my admiration of him as a man and a loyal citizen is unbounded.

IRVING S. COBB, Author—He could be wrong more often as a politician and right more often as an American than any man since Andy Jackson. He had visions to see what menace threatened us long before the danger became apparent to most of the men of his generation. He had courage to beg his countrymen to prepare themselves against impending peril. To the struggle he gave himself and his sons, and he died for America as surely as though he had died on the field of battle with the uniform of a soldier on his back and a bullet through his breast. Through all the years of his life he served his land, and of his land Theodore Roosevelt deserves a memorial which shall speak to future ages of his valor, his work, and his splendid Americanism.

emphasis. Whatever his name as a statesman, it can never outrun his fame as a man. However widely men may differ from him in matters of national policy, this thing men in their hearts would all wish—that their sons might have within them the spirit, the will, the strength, the manliness, the Americanism of Roosevelt. He was made of that rugged and heroic stuff with which legends delight to play. The myths and sagas and ballads have been woven about men of his mold."

JAMES CARDINAL GIBBONS—
"The memory of Colonel Roosevelt will be always fresh and green in the hearts of the American people. He was the most conspicuous statesman of his day. We honored him while living; it is only fitting that we should honor him now dead."

STEPHEN S. WISE, Rabbi of New York Free Synagogue—"Theodore Roosevelt was America in the breadth of his assimilateness toward the highest in all peoples and races, in the latitude of his hospitality to the of wealth against the mean and ignoble under all circumstances, in the depth of his passion for justice and freedom everywhere."

SAMUEL COMBERS, President, American Federation of Labor—"Col. Roosevelt's life was full to the brim. His energy, courage, ability to do were marvelous. I know him for more than a third of a century. During that period we were often united in the same cause. This gave me true knowledge of his wonderful character, his leadership, his sincerity of purpose and his anxiety to serve the people. His motives were of the highest. America, the world, has lost a great man."

EVERY CENT RAISED GOES FOR MEMORIAL

William Boyce Thompson, president of the National Roosevelt Memorial Association, has made the interesting announcement that every cent of expense in raising the funds for the Roosevelt memorial is being paid by the personal friends of Colonel Roosevelt, and that every cent obtained in the campaign will be used only in carrying out the memorial plans.
