PINCKNEY FARMERS ORGANIZE

Friday the farmers met in the Sphinx club rooms and organized an association known as the Pinckney Association, the local branch of the Farmers Co-Operative Society.

The immediate object of the society is to market live stock on their own hook instead of through middlemen. The local organization may also buy all farming supplies including coal and also buy and conduct an elevator. But it seemed to be the prevailing opinion that nothing further than stock marketing would be undertaken at this time.

About thirty-five representative farmers of this vicinity signified their intentions of joining this movement and more are ready to join with them at once. Judging from the opinions expressed at the meeting and the deep interest displayed the organization stands a good chance of success.

They showed good judgement in the selection of the Board of Directors, every one of which is a highly respected successful farmer. Their terms of office are as follows:

The Board of Directors: 3 year, S. G. VanHorn, Lynn Hendee; 2 year, Fred Temple, James M. Harris; 1 year, Fred Burgess, Alfred Morgan, Bert Roche. The Board of Directors met after the adjourned meeting and elected

TO THE TEACHERS OF MICHIGAN

My dear Fellow Workers:

Eight hundred thousand women and children in Armenia and the Near East are starving. The world has heeded the call of Europe but has largely overlooked these sufferers in Asia Minor.

The first week in February will see a campaign for their relief conducted throughout the United States. I hope that you will make it possible for the children of your school to contribute to these people who must feel that they have been forgotten by even God Himself. Two hundred thousand are certain to die but the other six hundred thousand can be saved by prompt action. Will you help?

Cordially yours,

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL PLAY

The play "Lighthouse Nan" given by the Federated Sunday School Friday evening was a pronounced success in every particular. In spite of the poor roads and much prevailing sickness in the country nearby the crowd was so large that some of the spectators were obliged to use standing room throughout the evening.

Everyone seemed satisfied with the entertainment and the members of the cast, under the direction of Mrs. Doyle, may feel proud that they have kept the standard of amateur theatricals in Pinckney up to the usual high mark.

Madeline Bowman in the title role showed that she can successfully handle something besides emotional work. Her portrayal of a soubrette was a delight. The acting of Prof. Doyle, F. E. Weeks, Wm. Vince, Dede Dinkel, Roy Campbell and Pauline Swarthout was a creditable delineation of character and Lucille Tupper by contrast to the comedy features helped make the play ed team work. She couldn't get her men past third. She unable to score."

How many communities have reached third base, but have failed to score?

Community life is a gigantic contest. Men and women are merely players, and each must play honestly, fairly and in co-operation with others. Each must work with his friends, or he will be played with by his enemies.

A city in the far west was selected for a factory site. The company had looked over the ground, was well pleased, and had started negotiations for land, when suddenly Breadbox Jim discovered that a factory meant the foundation for a progressive town, and that a progressive town meant that he would have to move, that he would have to drop into line or drop out of his favorite position. This he seriously opposed. He gathered some followers. The company noted the lack of teamwork or co-operation in the town and immediately but gracefully withdrew. Through lack of team work the town was pushed aside and never reached third base again.

Mules are comparatively few in numbers and the number is not changing materially. The total estimate number is 4,000 and the valuation, $396,000.

Milch cows show an increase of three per cent, and a total number of 873,000. They have been in good demand throughout the year and are bringing on an average, $96 per head, an increase of about 16 per cent over one year ago. The total value is $83,808,000.

Other cattle have also increased both in number and in value; the gain in the former being three per cent and the latter, 10 per cent. The total number is placed at 778,000 and the value at $33,084,000. The combined value of milch cows and other cattle is nearly equal to that of all other live stock in the state.

Sheep have continued to gain in numbers although more slowly than the previous year. The estimated number is 2,224,000 which, at the average price of $11.8 per head, gives a total value of $26,243,200. The value is 70c per head less than one year ago. The gain in numbers was mainly in the northern half of the state, as some southern localities report a decrease.

Michigan Stock Report

The amount of each kind of live stock except horses and mules, on the farms of Michigan was greater than that of one year ago, according to the results obtained from a recent inquiry addressed to farmers, live stock breeders, live stock feeders, live stock shippers, dairymen and others, by Coleman C. Vaughn Secretary of State, and Verne H. Church, Field Agent, U. S. Bureau of Crop Estimates. The value of all stock on the farms of the State on that date $236,231,000, or $8,482,000 more than last year. Milch cows and other cattle have increased in value per head during the year, but all other live stock declined the decrease in the price of horses being greatest.

Motive power furnished by automobiles, trucks and tractors is gradually displacing the horse population, the increase during the past year being three per cent, or 20,000 head. There is a fair demand for first-class draft horses, but the cheaper grades are a drag on the market and in some sections almost unsalable. The average price has dropped from $139 in 1914 and $105 one year ago to $95 on January 1,

Night had settled when Dave left the office. A soft wind blew from the southwest; June was in the air. June too, was in Dave's heart as he walked the few blocks to his bachelor quarters. What of the drab injustice of business? Let him forget that; now it was night . . . and she had called him Dave.

He dressed with care. It was not until he was about to leave his rooms that he remembered he must dine alone; he had been dressing for her, unconsciously. The realization brought him up with something of a shock. "This will never do," he said. "I can't eat alone tonight, and I can't ask Reenie, so soon after the incident with her mother. I know—Bert Morrison."

He reached for the telephone and rang her number.

Her number did not answer. He thought of Edith Duncan. But Edith lived at home, and it was much too late to extend a formal dinner invitation. There was nothing for it but to eat alone. He suddenly became conscious of the great loneliness of his bachelor life. The charm of bachelorhood was a myth which only needed contact with the gentle atmosphere of feminine affection to be exposed. He took his hat and coat and went into the street. It was his custom to take his meals at a modest eating-place on a side-avenue, but tonight he directed his steps to the best hotel the city afforded. There was no wisdom in dressing for an event unless he was going to deflect his course somewhat from the daily routine.

crue to her therefrom was very obvious.

Elden was glad when Mrs. Hardy remembered that she must not remain up late. Her physician had prescribed rest. Early to bed, you know. Dave had opportunity for just a word with Irene before they left.

"How did this happen—tonight?" he asked, with the calm assumption of one who has a right to know.

"Oh, Mr. Conward telephoned an invitation to mother," she explained. "I was so glad you happened in. You have had wonderful experiences. Mr. Conward is charming, isn't he?"

Dave did not know whether the compliment to Conward was a personal matter concerning his partner or whether it was to be taken as a courtesy to the firm. In either case he rather resented it. He wondered what Irene would think of this "ennobling" business in the drab days of disillumination that must soon sweep down upon them. But Irene apparently did not miss his answer.

"We shall soon be settled," she said as Mrs. Hardy and Conward were seen approaching. "Then you will come and visit us?"

"I will—Reenie," he whispered, and he was sure the color that mounted to her cheeks held no tinge of displeasure.

CHAPTER X.

Elden lost no time in making his first call upon the Hardys. Irene received him cordially, but Mrs. Hardy evinced no more warmth than propriety demanded. Elden, however, allowed himself an annoyance over nty to talk to you—wanting it for weeks," he said. "But it always seemed—"

"Always seemed that you were thwarted," Irene completed his thought. "You didn't disguise your annoyance very well the other night."

"Do you blame me for being annoyed?"

"No. But I rather blame you for showing it. You see I was annoyed too."

"Then you had nothing to do with—bringing about the situation that existed?"

"Certainly not. Surely you do not think that I would—that I would—"

"I beg your pardon, Reenie," said Dave, contritely. "I should have known better. But it seemed such a strong coincidence."

She was toying with her cup, and for once her eyes avoided him. "You should hardly think, Dave," she ventured—"you should hardly conclude that—what has been, you know, gives you the right—entitles you—"

"To a monopoly of your attentions? Perhaps not. But it gives me the right to a fair chance to win a monopoly of your attentions."

He was speaking low and earnestly, and his voice had a deep, rich timbre in it that thrilled and almost frightened her. She could not resent his straightforwardness. She felt that he

you will speak. I will not reopen the subject."

His words had something of the ring of an ultimatum, but no endearments that his lips might have uttered could have gripped her heart so surely. She knew they were the words of a man in deadly earnest, a man who had himself in hand, a man who made love with the same serious purpose as he had employed in the other projects of his successful life. Had it not been for some strange sense of shame—some fear that too ready capitulation might be mistaken for weakness—she would have surrendered then.

"I think that is best," she managed to say. "We will let our acquaintanceship ripen."

He rose and helped her with her light wrap. His fingers touched her hand and it seemed to him the battle was won. . . . But he had promised not to reopen the subject.

In the street he said, "If you will wait a moment I will take you home in my car."

EATS IN PECULIAR POSITION

Flamingo Forced to Contortions Because Its Upper Jaw, Not the Lower, Is Movable.

Nature has so created the beautiful flamingo that he does some things both backwards and upside down. For one thing, he eats with the crown of his head on the ground, in the bottom of some shallow stream. From one glance at his jaw one would think it was badly broken. Instead, his bill is in perfect working order, only things are reversed with it, and his lower jaw is securely fixed, while his upper jaw is movable. Both portions of his big beak are arranged in a series of thin plates, like the bills of all members of the duck family, so that he can easily sift the nice squirming things he likes from the soft mud.

Flamingoes frequent salt marshes, and when these become dry will then go long distance to find others. Florida used to be the birds' happy hunting ground and many lovely members of ment his eye fell on Conward, seated at a table with Mrs. Hardy and Irene. Conward had seen him and was motioning to him to join them. The situation was embarrassing, and yet delightful. He was glad he had dressed for dinner.

"Join us, Elden," Conward said, as he reached their table. "Just a little dinner to celebrate today's transaction. You will not refuse to share to that extent?"

Dave looked at Mrs. Hardy. Had he been dealing with Conward and Mrs. Hardy alone he would have excused himself, but he had to think of Irene. That is, he had to justify her by being correct in his manners.

"Do join us," said Mrs. Hardy. It was evident to Mrs. Hardy that it would be correct for her to support Mr. Conward's invitation.

"You are very kind," said Dave as he seated himself. "I had not hoped for this pleasure." And yet the pleasure was not unmixed. He felt that Conward had outplayed him. It was Conward who had done the gracious thing, and Dave could not prevent Conward doing the gracious thing without himself being ungracious.

which had preceded him had been already a guest of the Hardys.

Dave knew Conward well enough to know that purpose always lay behind his conduct, and during the small talk with which they whiled away an hour his mind was reaching out acutely, exploring every nook of possibility, to arrive if it could at some explanation of the sudden interest which Conward was displaying in the Hardys. These explanations narrowed down to two almost equally unpalatable. Conward was deliberately settling about to capture the friendship, perhaps the affection, of either Mrs. Hardy or Irene. Strangely enough, Elden was more irritated by the former alternative than by the latter. Perhaps this attitude was due to subconscious recognition of the fact that he had much more to fear from Conward as a suitor for the hand of Mrs. Hardy than as a rival for that of Irene. Conward as a prospective father-in-law was a more grievous menace to his peace of mind than Conward as a defeated rival.

The more he contemplated this aspect of the case the less he liked it. To Conward the affair could be nothing more than an adventure, but it was already asserting his claim upon her, and there was something tender and delightful in the sense of being claimed by such a man.

"I must have a fair chance to win that monopoly," he repeated. "How did it happen that Conward was present?"

"I don't know. It just happened. A little after you telephoned me he called up and asked for mother, and the next thing I knew she said he was coming up to spend the evening."

Dave dropped into a sudden reverie. It was not so remarkable as it seemed that Conward should have telephoned Mrs. Hardy almost immediately after he had used the line. Conward's telephone and Dave's were on the same circuit; it was a simple matter for Conward, if he had happened to lift the receiver during Dave's conversation with Irene, to overhear all that was said. That might happen accidentally; at least it might begin innocently enough. The fact that Conward had acted upon the information indicated two things: first, that he had no very troublesome sense of honor—which Dave had long suspected—and second, that he had delib-

Red Hair.

A perturbed correspondent of the Indianapolis News raises an interesting question. Do women, he wishes to know, shun red-headed men and, if so, why? His own hair is of the hue sometimes thoughtlessly and inaccurately described as carrot colored. Hence the query is of vital personal importance. He has given the matrimonial question "serious consideration," but each time has been met with discouragement due, he believes, solely to the tinge of his hair. The matter is one calling for the thoughtful attention of the philosopher and the sociologist. If women generally are frowning on the matrimonial offers of red-haired men, the future of the race is threatened. Was it not a red-haired man who fired the first shot in the American war against the Hun? Society cannot afford to lose the red-head temperament because of the perplexing perversity of marriageable women. The red-head will be needed next war, whenever and wherever trouble is brewing.

Dave Paused for a Moment, but in That Moment His Eye Fell on Conward.

of semi-paternal authority over both Irene and Elden.

to show signs of weariness Irene served coffee and cake, and the two men, taking that as an intimation that their welcome had run down, but would rewind itself if not too continually drawn upon, left the house together. On their way they agreed that it was a very delightful night.

Dave turned the situation over in his mind with some impatience. Irene had now been in the city for several weeks, and he had had opportunity for scarce a dozen personal words with her. Was he to be hailed by such an insufferable chaperonage as it seemed the purpose of Mrs. Hardy and Conward to establish over his love affair? No. In the act of undressing he told himself, "No," suiting to the word such vigor of behavior that in the morning he found his shoes at opposite corners of the room.

Several days passed without any word from Irene, and he had almost made up his mind to attempt another telephone appointment, when he met her, quite accidentally, in the street. She had been shopping, she said. The duty of household purchases fell mainly upon her. Her mother rested in the afternoons—

"How about a cup of tea," said Dave. "And a thin sandwich? And a delicate morsel of cake? One can always count on thin sandwiches and delicate morsels of cake. Their function is purely a social one, having no relation to the physical requirements."

"I should be very glad," said Irene. They found a quiet tearoom. When they were seated Dave, without preliminaries, plunged into the subject nearest his heart.

"I have been wanting an opportu-able to fathom. He would at least guard against any further eavesdropping on his telephone.

He took a card from his pocket and made some figures on it. "If you should have occasion to call me at the office at any time please use that number and ask for me," he said. "It is the accountant's number. There's a reason."

The cups were empty; the sandwiches and cake were gone, but they lingered on.

"I have been wondering," Dave ventured, at length, "just where I stand—with you. You remember our agreement?"

She averted her eyes but her voice was steady. "You have observed the terms?" she said.

"Yes, in all essential matters. I come to you now, in accordance with those terms. You said that now we would know. Now I know; know as I have always known since those wonderful days in the foothills; those days from which I date my existence."

"I realize that I owe you an answer now, Dave," she said frankly. "And I find it very hard to make that answer. Marriage means so much more to a woman than it does to a man. . . . Don't misunderstand me, Dave. I would be ashamed to say I doubt myself or that I don't know my mind, but you and I are no longer boy and girl. We are man and woman now. And I just want time—just want time to be sure that—that—"

"I suppose you are right," he answered. "I will not try to hurry your decision. I will only try to give you an opportunity to know—to be sure, as you said. Then, when you are sure,

Money in Seaweed.

All along the coast of Norway seaweed is gathered and burned. This seaweed grows in veritable forests, and is not of the common grass variety. In fact, there are actual trees of it five or six feet high, with stems like ropes and leaves tough as leather. They begin to sprout early in the year and cover the ocean bed with a dense, impenetrable brush.

As a source of income the seaweed industry now surpasses the fisheries, and it is more valuable than agriculture, even in one of the leading farming districts of Norway. Owners of land abutting on the seashore reap a great harvest.

After the weeds have been burned the ashes are exported to England, where valuable chemical substances are extracted from them. The most important of these products is iodine.

The Brighter Side.

"Well, did the captain of industry see you?"

"No," replied Mr. Gadspar.

"You bear up well under the disappointment."

"Yes. You should have seen his private secretary. It was a pleasure to be turned down by such a rare combination of feminine tact and loveliness."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

clogged and need a nursing occasionally, else we have backache and dull misery in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twinges, torpid liver, acid stomach, sleeplessness and all sorts of bladder disorders.

You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean, and the moment you feel an ache or pain in the kidney region, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good drug store here, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is harmless to flush clogged kidneys and stimulates them to normal activity. It also neutralizes the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is harmless; inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everybody should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean, thus avoiding serious complications.

A well-known local druggist says he sells lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming kidney trouble while it is only trouble.—Adv.

Doctors Or Druggists Who Dispense Liquor Must Obtain Permits From Federal Officials.

Washington—Methods by which intoxicating liquors may be obtained for medicinal purposes and detailed regulations governing their sale were made public last week by the bureau of internal revenue.

Both the physician who prescribes and the pharmacist who sells liquor, the regulations provide, must have a permit which may be obtained from the federal prohibition director. Other details of the method by which liquor for medicinal purposes may be purchased follow:

"Any physician licensed to practice medicine and actively engaged in the practice of such profession may obtain a permit to prescribe intoxicating liquor and then may issue prescriptions for distilled spirits, wines or certain alcoholic medicinal preparations for medical purposes for persons upon whom he is in attendance in case where he believes the use of liquor as a medicine is necessary. In no case may spirituous liquor be prescribed by one or more physicians in excess of one pint for the same person within any period of 10 days.

FUEL SHORTAGE HITS STATE

Industrial Tieup Threatened—Rail Ad-

Detroit—Industries of Detroit and Michigan, facing an acute shortage of freight cars and fuel, attributed to mismanagement by the federal railroad administration, will have to start closing down next week, unless immediate relief is offered.

This statement was given out from two sources: Alex Dow, president of Detroit Edison company, and John L. Lovett, general manager of the Michigan Manufacturers' association.

According to Mr. Dow the present fuel shortage can be charged to the failure of the federal railroad administration to provide sufficient locomotives to handle traffic.

So serious is the situation at the Edison plant that telegrams appealing for aid from the railroad administration headquarters at New York and Washington were sent to Regional Director A. T. Hardin and Congressman Frank E. Doremus.

ARMY NEEDS 75,000 RECRUITS

Governors of All States Asked to Help in Enlistment Drive.

addressed a letter to the governor of each state requesting his official cooperation in the nation-wide recruiting drive to be inaugurated by the war department and to be intensified February 22 to 29, which is to be made national enlistment week.

Army officials say a minimum of 75,000 new enlistments would be required before March 31, in order that the best results can be obtained from the training of the reorganized army.

Each unit in the new army has been assigned to a specific locality from which it will draw all its enlisted personnel, the purpose being to engender local interest.

LOAN TO FEED EUROPE PASSES

House Committee Recommends Passage of Relief Measure.

Washington—An agreement has been reached by the House Ways and Means Committee to recommend passage of legislation authorizing new Government loans of $50,000,000 for European food relief.

Democratic members reserved the right, when the bill is before the House to propose an increase to $125,000,000, the sum approved by Treasury officials. President Wilson and Herbert C. Hoover, former food administrator, had approved a loan of $150,000,000.

The legislation will not specify any countries which may receive the loans, the committee deciding that the bill would merely state that the relief would go "to populations in the countries of Europe or countries contiguous thereto."

If You Need a Medicine You Should Have the Best

Have you ever stopped to reason why it is that so many products that are extensively advertised, all at once drop out of sight and are soon forgotten? The reason is plain—the article did not fulfill the promises of the manufacturer. This applies more particularly to a medicine. A medicinal preparation that has real curative value almost sells itself, as like an endless chain system the remedy is recommended by those who have been benefited, to those who are in need of it. A prominent druggist says "Take for example Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, a preparation I have sold for many years and never hesitate to recommend, for in almost every case it shows excellent results, as many of my customers testify. No other kidney remedy has so large a sale."

According to sworn statements and verified testimony of thousands who have used the preparation, the success of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is due to the fact, so many people claim, that it fulfills almost every wish in overcoming kidney, liver and bladder ailments; corrects urinary troubles and neutralizes the uric acid which causes rheumatism.

You may receive a sample bottle of Swamp-Root by Parcel Post. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., and enclose ten cents; also mention this paper. Large and medium size bottles for sale at all drug stores.—Adv.

Ha-Ha-Ha!

At the foot of a steep hill stood a signboard on which the following notice was painted:

"Danger—Bicyclists and autoists are hereby notified that this hill is dangerous and they are cautioned to come down slowly."

Appended to this were the equally funny lines:

"Any person not able to read the above will have it read for them if they call on the blacksmith who lives around the corner."

A Scotsman saw the notice and explained to his friends that the point of the joke was that the blacksmith might not be at home.—Boys' Life.

general public, and under such conditions had failed to score. Many a church has been carried on to success by a broad-minded, forceful pastor and was about to round third with the winning run when all was lost because Deacon Dubbs broke up the team work by criticizing other churches. He became a destructive element rather than a constructive factor in his community.

Many a town has lost business through jealousy and lack of organization among its business men. We must have team work in every community, and this must be definite and decisive if success is to follow. Every individual whether connected with church, school or business interests must pull together. Many a town has been beaten out of its birthright through lack of efficient organization or because one man or group of men, were looking for some personal advantage rather than penetrating the wider vision of a greater success through sympathetic co-operation with their fellow men.

"Real towns are not made by men afraid. Lest somebody else gets ahead; When everyone works and nobody shirks You can raise a town from the dead. And if while you make your personal stake, Your neighbors can make one, too, Your town will be what you want it to be; It isn't this town, it's you."

DIPPING SHEEP

East Lansing, Feb.—That one of the most important factors in the successful management of sheep is a clean skin and fleece, kept in a healthy condition and free from parasites, is the opinion of Prof. G. Brown, head of the Animal Husbandry Department of the Michigan Agricultural College. Dipping is held as the proper method of keeping the flock in the desired condition.

"The external parasites that often cause serious losses are the tick, the louse and the scab mite," says Professor Brown. "The sheep should be dipped in ten days. Every nock should be dipped twice each year to keep the skin and fleece in a healthy condition as well as to destroy ticks and lice."

"Any one of the standard dips on the market will prove satisfactory. At the College, we have found the coal tar dips especially satisfactory. The water used in mixing the dip should be warmed to a temperature of 90 degrees Fahrenheit and each sheep held in the solution for two minutes, the head being immersed just before the sheep leaves the vat."

SAVINGS CERTIFICATES OUT; INVESTMENT VALUE SHOWN

"They Always Are Worth More Than You Paid for Them." Slogan of 1920.

"They are always worth more than you paid for them." With this as their slogan representatives of the War Savings organization of the Seventh federal reserve district are touring the states of Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Wisconsin and Iowa.

showing banks, corporations and individuals the high investment value of the 1920 Treasury Savings certificates of $100 and $1,000 denominations. This form of government security has been placed in local banks, and for the financial prosperity of the nation and the individual, the government is urging a wide distribution.

The Treasury Savings certificates, which are virtually "Baby" bonds, bear interest at a rate a little better than 4 1/2 per cent. The price of the $100 certificates for January is $82.40; February $82.60. The price increases 20 cents a month. The $1,000 certificates may be purchased in January for $824 and in February for $826. This class of security increases $2 a month.

Here are some of the attractive features of the $100 and $1,000 certificates:

- They carry valuable tax-exemption privileges.
- They cannot depreciate in value, not being subject to market fluctuations.
- They are always worth more than you paid for them.
- They yield a substantial income, actually more than 4 1/2 per cent.
- They are short term, maturing January 1, 1925.
- They represent absolute safety as obligations of the United States government.
- A change has been made in the terms of the 1920 certificates. They are redeemable at the treasury beginning with the second calendar month after the month of purchase without the ten days' demand required by the terms of the 1919 certificates.
- A special issue of Treasury Savings certificates has been put on the market for conversion purposes. It is possible for the holders of 1918 and 1919 War Savings certificates to convert them into these special Treasury Savings certificates, whose terms and conditions are substantially the same as those of the 1920 issue except for their earlier maturity dates.

Holders of one or more War Savings certificates of the 1918 or 1919 issue which bear War Savings stamps having a total maturity value of $100 or some multiple of a hundred dollars—$200, $300, $400, etc., may exchange the certificates for the same maturity value of Treasury Savings certificates of the corresponding issue. When two or more War Savings certificates of the same issue are offered for exchange, each one need not bear its full complement of 20 War Savings stamps, provided the total value of the stamps aggregates $100 or some multiple of it. Treasury Savings certificates taken in exchange may be made out in favor of new and different owners, if the owners of the War Savings certificates so request.

HERE'S REAL GUIDE IN BUYING

Expert on Economics Gives Some Practical Tips on How and When to Purchase.

"How to buy, when to buy, when not to buy; save food, but encourage business."

With this as his guide, A. L. Marlatt, director of course in economics at the University of Wisconsin, has compiled the procedure to cut the high cost of living, and his outline has been sent to every woman's organization in the Seventh Federal Reserve District by the Government Savings organization in connection with the three months' campaign of the women in savings as paying the way for safe investment in government securities. Following is the guide as outlined by Prof. Marlatt:

- HOW TO BUY:
1. Direct from the producer; at points where material is made; by parcel post; in municipal market.
 2. Through wholesaler; co-operative buying (NOT for hoarding, but reasonable use); reasonable buying (contracts for future delivery insure reasonable prices).

SELECT HOGS FOR BREEDING

Mating Will Not Only Give Unsatisfactory Results, but Likely to Discourage Beginner.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Influence of the sow upon the offspring is just as great as that of the male. Mating a poor sow will not only give unsatisfactory results in breeding, but it will likely discourage the beginning breeder. This latter fact would be especially true of a youth carrying on a home project with swine. If possible, secure a pure-bred animal of a good strain. The forehead should be broad, the throat clean and trim, the neck moderately thin, the shoulders smooth and deep, the back wide and straight, the chest wide and deep, sides straight and deep, the body long and capacious, pelvic region broad and well developed, legs straight and moderately short, and a generally refined appearance; yet overrefinement may indicate a delicate constitution.

If a number of brood sows are to be used they should be uniform in type. This is necessary to secure a uniform lot of pigs. It is very unsatisfactory and unprofitable in breeding to have litters of pigs varying in appearance and lacking uniformity. To insure a uniform result it is advisable to select from a well-established strain of hogs.

offspring; however, the male has the greater influence on the entire herd, since every pig is sired by the male, whereas all pigs do not have the same dam.

While too much stress cannot be placed on the importance of the sow, if possible the male should be superior to the sow. Regardless of the type of the sow, a poor male should never be used.

Secure a pure-bred animal of a good strain. The masculine characteristics should be strongly developed, especially in the head and neck; the back should be broad, straight and deeply fleshed; sides deep and long; quarters well developed; legs straight and strong. The animal should stand well up on his toes.

Overfatted sows should be mated to rather masculine males, and coarse sows should be mated to males of high quality indicated by fine bone, skin and hair.

I was much provoked and said, "Young man, will you please go out again and try and see if you cannot close that door more quietly?" He looked rather surprised and said, "Yes ma'am," and did as I asked. I said, "That was better."

He then inquired where he would find one of our teachers. To my surprise he was not a student as I thought, but a friend making a call. I tried to apologize, but he said it would serve as a good lesson.—Exchange.

WESTERN CANADA CORN

Wins First Honors at Kansas City.

While visiting the Canadian Government Information Bureau at Kansas City, where there is on exhibition a very creditable display of Canadian products, my attention, says a writer in the agricultural press, was directed to a few ears of Dent corn, bearing the modest inscription,

"This Northwestern Dent corn took the first prize at the Soil Products Exposition recently held in Kansas City, Mo., and was grown by John Hamilton of Kelwood, Manitoba."

Kelwood, Manitoba, lies about twelve hundred miles north of Kansas City, and it was quite pardonable that these Canadians should so proudly parade the fact that they had been able to carry off for their corn display the blue ribbon that for years the old "corn-growing" states had looked upon as being practically their own, and for which they were strong contestants in the recent show.

I asked Mr. Hewitt, agent in charge of the Canadian Government office at 2012 Main Street, Kansas City, what the winning of the prize means for Canada. His reply was that it means the "corn belt" is moving northward, and in a few years to the fame that Canada has already achieved as a wheat, barley and oats producing country, will have to be added that of growing the best corn in America.

"Why," he said, "twenty years ago a friend of mine was attracted at the Minnesota State Fair by the number of those who were examining some corn grown north of Crookston, Minnesota. It was not the large ear produced farther south, but it was an even ear and perfect kernel. The interest centered in it was the fact that it had been grown so far north. That was twenty years ago. Today, the traveler on any of the railways in that section of the country may see field after field of corn. In many portions tion, at present mainly for fodder, but within a short time, with acclimated seed a maturing corn of good quality may reasonably be expected. Already the number of silos in use in Western Canada indicates that the progressive farmers there look forward to the day when corn will be one of their most important crops.

"Corn lands in South Dakota are said to be selling as high as $250 per acre, and if corn has been the means of placing these lands at this price what may be expected of Western Canada lands, when the day comes that corn will be grown as successfully there?"

It was not in corn alone that Western Canada carried off the honors at the Soil Products Exposition. The awards won by Western Canada were 40 first, 29 second, and 26 third prizes. These included 1st, 2nd and 3rd prizes for hard spring wheat; the sweepstakes for wheat and the cup offered by Canadian Pacific Railway for the best half-bushel of hard spring wheat; 1st, 2nd and 3rd prizes and sweepstakes for oats; 1st, 2nd and 3rd prizes for barley; and 2nd and

It is interesting to note that the sweepstakes for wheat and first prize for hard spring wheat have been won by Saskatchewan exhibitors seven times in the last eight years, Manitoba winning one year.

Potato classes have some interesting successes for Western Canadian exhibitors, who won four firsts, three seconds and three thirds. Exhibitors from these provinces also made fine showing in the vegetable classes, winning among other prizes the premium prizes for cabbages, cauliflowers, pumpkins, squash and watermelons.—Adv.

Phew!

One cold, windy morning, after a sudden change in the thermometer, a man in the 3800 block in East Tenth street, came rushing downstairs in the morning in his nightshirt to change the drafts on his furnace. He decided to put the thermometer outside to see how cold it was. The wind blew the door shut. He stood out in the cold with only his night apparel on for 15 minutes before he could awaken any members of the family.—Indianapolis News.

Good Night Tip.

"Is that your father I hear coming downstairs?" asked the startled young man of the fair young thing by his side on the parlor sofa.

"No, George," replied the girl, looking inquiringly at the clock on the mantel; "you won't hear papa when he does come down."

I have a small brother, writes a Youth's Companion subscriber, who is three years old. On one occasion he came walking slowly and quietly up to his mother and turned a very wan, pinched little face up to her. She asked him in a sympathetic voice:

"What is the matter, Joe? You aren't sick, are you?"

"No, ma'am."

"Well, what is the matter?"

"Nothin', only I just feel so pitiful!"

By now his feelings were so "worked up" that he began to cry.

"Well, is that what makes you cry so easily?"

"No, ma'am, that's what makes me cry so hard!"

"Now, Joseph, what is mamma's boy crying so hard about?"

"I'm cryin' 'bout as hard as I can." And he proceeded to do so.

BREEDING OF FANCY FOWLS

Practice Results in More or Less General Improvement of Poultry—Some Suggestions.

(From the United States Department of Agriculture.)

There should not be any discrimination of the breeding of what is ordinarily known as fancy poultry. That term is usually applied to the standard breeds as kept by specialists who produce exhibition birds. That practice has always resulted in more or less general improvement of poultry and should continue to perform just that function at this time when the wider keeping of a better grade of poultry stock cannot fail to result in an increased production. The work of the poultry specialist also gives encouragement to the general farmer and the back-yard poultry keeper to take better care of the flocks. The continuance of poultry exhibitions, maintained almost wholly by the poultry specialist, is certainly justified during the present emergency. It has always been the breeders of exhibition fowls who have been the leaders in promoting the welfare of the poultry industry, and these men have been especially willing to give their time and efforts in working for increased production. The poultry shows themselves afford an opportunity for interesting individuals in poultry keeping and have served as effective centers from which to launch and extend the campaign for increasing poultry production.

To the specialist in poultry production it is not necessary to say in this connection anything with regard to breeds that should be used, but to the general farmer some suggestions along that line might be of assistance in making the adjustment to changed conditions.

Standard poultry, as the phrase is commonly used in America, is poultry bred to the standards established by the American Poultry Association. The object of making standards for poultry is the same as the object of making standards of weight, volume or quality for any product or commodity; i. e., to secure uniformity and establish a series of grades as a basis of trading in the article.

In making standards for poultry which apply in the process of production, the principal points considered are size, shape and color.

Size and shape are breed characters and largely determine the practical values of poultry. Many standard breeds are divided into varieties differing in color but identical in every other respect. Color is not a primary a black variety of the same breed are actually identical in table quality, but because black birds do not dress for the market as clean and nice looking as white ones, it often happens that they are not as salable.

is much less important than approximately uniformity in size and type, yet the more attractive appearance of a flock of birds of the same color justifies selection for color as far as it can be followed without sacrificing any material point.

When a poultry keeper grows his own stock year after year he should by all means use stock of a well-established popular standard breed. By doing so and by selecting as breeders only as many of the best specimens of the flock as are needed to produce the chickens reared each year, a poultry keeper maintains in his flock a highly desirable uniformity of excellence in every practical quality and, with little extra care and no extra cost, can have a pleasing uniformity in color. To the novice in poultry keeping it often appears that there is no real necessity for so many breeds and varieties as have been standardized in America. Further acquaintance with them, however, shows that although color differences are in most cases merely to please the eyes of persons having different preferences for color, the differences in shape and size which make breed character have been developed with a view to adapting each to particular uses or particular conditions.
