

PINCKNEY DISPATCH

Vol. XXXVII

Pinckney, Livingston County, Michigan, Thursday September 2, 1920

No. 36,

ALBERT JACKSON AN HONORABLE AMERICAN CITIZEN

During the year 1836, Dr. Cyrus Jackson of Lyons, Wayne County, N. Y., made a trip to Michigan and bought from the Government 2,080 acres of wild land, paying $4,000 for the 26 eighties.

His son Dan was one of ten children, five of whom emigrated to Michigan in 1843. On New Years Day, 1844 Dan Jackson and Juliza Backus were married and moved onto four of the eighties near Stockbridge, now known as the Asher Miller farm where their three sons, Albert, Orla and Allen were born.

After clearing the farm and erecting a large brick home the farm was sold and the family moved back to New York State.

After two years the Michigan fever again prevailed and they returned, buying a farm near Hamburg where they lived 11 years.

They then bought the John Sigler farm, later known as the Orla Jackson farm and now owned by S. D. Lapbam.

March 3, 1868 a double wedding united Albert and Orla to two sisters, Misses Tillie and Ella Brown. The farm joining on the south was bought and Albert and for many years, gaining high esteem and respect from all who knew them. Their only son, F. G. Jackson, for many years one of Pinckney's prominent business men, was born there. W. C. Miller, Sheriff of Livingston County, in his boyhood days was taken into the family, living there for a long period practically, a son. It was at his home in Howell that Albert Jackson died Saturday, August 21st.

The Jackson family have had an active part in the development of the nation before and after its birth. Joseph Jackson, Sr. one of Massachusetts' settlers fought the Indians in and near the historical village Lexington and was one of the signers of the Indian Peace Treaty.

His son, Joseph Jackson, Jr. was for three years directly under General Washington during the Revolution fighting for American independence, and in order to preserve the liberty his efforts helped to gain he furnished three sons who were officers during the War of 1812, one of whom was Surgeon Cyrus Jackson, Albert's grandfather.

For over half a century Albert Jackson has lived in this community and during that time no man has been more highly respected by all who knew him socially or in a business way and the hospitality of his home was a by-word.

Some time ago he was stricken by partial paralysis from which he never completely recovered, although able to get about and meet his many friends.

His only descendants are his son Floyd and his grandson Harry both of Detroit.

The funeral services were held in the Federated church, Rev. W. G. Stevens of Toronto officiating; burial in the Pinckney cemetery.

PINCKNEY HORSE DOING WELL IN OHIO

James L. Roche, the veteran Pinckney horseman, owner and driver of St. Druseus, a 4 year old bay gelding, is making an enviable showing with this promising young trotter, and incidentally gathering many Ohio shekels for the proverbial rainy day.

Although not in the pink of condition owing to trouble with teeth, St. Druseus has taken first money in all his races this season, having copped at Urbana, Salina and Lima.

Last week he won at Lima and was marked 2:14, by the judges. Several unofficials made the time 2:13 flat in the fastest heat.

He is entered at Columbus and his performance will be watched with interest by Mr. Roche's many friends.

THE B SHARP CLUB

The B Sharp Club held its annual picnic Thursday, Aug. 26th at Reeves Grove. A potluck dinner was served.

The afternoon was pleasantly ed to meet with Mrs. Wm. Gardner in September.

GARD OF THANKS

We take this opportunity to express our heartfelt appreciation for the many acts of kindness and words of sympathy extended during our recent bereavement, also for the many beautiful floral offerings and to the choir for the appropriate music.

The other lucky candidates having contestants on the county ticket were Clarence J. Fuller for State Representative, J. B. Munsell for Circuit Court Commissioner and Alex S. Montague for Prosecuting Attorney.

Milo D. Campbell nosed out Frank Leland for Governor in the only other interesting race.

ORIENTAL TYPE IS POPULAR FAD

New York Fall Fashions Display Note of Far East.

Suits Heavily Embroidered—Jungle Effects Are Supplied by Tufts of Monkey Fur.

Fall fashion has its far and near East problem. Shall the Serpent of the Nile be the season's favorite daughter, and shall slinky, vampish robes of gorgeous hue be style's demand, or shall Helen of Troy, with white, flowing and corded raiment, be the model that the times demand? asks a New York fashion correspondent. Whatever the solution, today's indications, as seen in the smart shops of Fifth avenue or in the tawdry shops of the Bowery, are that nothing in the realm of feminine raiment will be a fault for the coming season unless it bears some earmarks of the Orient. Said earmarks may be almost literal, for one eastern note is seen in earrings that dingle-dangle from many smart lids. Fall millinery fabric itself is exotic with rich stuffs such as abound in Arabian Nights lore. There are rich brocades of purple or dusky rose, lustrous satins of Algerian blue or Chinese crimson, stiff ribbons of metallic thread interwoven with flower, bird and butterfly designs, and even velvets embossed with rich embroideries in gold and silver threads or incrustated with seed pearls or rhinestones. And from these gorgeous hats hang earrings of wooden beads in startling hues, or of black jet, or even real sparkling gems.

Suits are heavily embroidered until they resemble the coronation robe of some fairyland prince. Wool and silk, metallic threads, jewels, colored hemp, or painted designs are used in work that out this effect. Many of the suits and coats have the sleeves fairly embossed in embroideries, and ullover embroid-beards are also hung about the collars of many suits and coats, giving a bona fide "bearded lady" effect.

Among the new fashions shown at the recent Chicago fashions revue was this charming mole trimmed chiffon velvet suit, hand embroidered.

Even the lines of the new dresses, suits and coats are taken from the East. The prevalent, sackish line of the new coats is a direct adaptation of the Arab's burnous. Dresses display of the Orient, and the new suit coats is taken from the uniform of the Greek soldier.

Evening gowns are very much a la Cleopatra. Black net embroidered in an all-over scroll pattern in black silk is very popular, and the gay oriental note is given by a rich girdle of velvet or satin in many colors. Many of these girdles and sashes extend into a train. Some of the trains are wired up so as to form a canopy behind midday. Do-lors of the famous peacock gown is held responsible for this fad—another folly for which the Follies may be blamed.

Shoes and hose are embossed in color and crusted with jewels until an American lady on a New York hotel dance floor looks like a direct Egyptian importation or a lady from a cigarette package.

"Dardanella" is the tune demanded by these dancers.

Vella.

There has been a good deal of argument in connection with the all-important vell. There are certain women who, fondly imagining they are possessed of Spanish beauty, insist on draping themselves with floating vells on all occasions. The result is frequently very unsmart, for however graceful a floating vell may be, it is entirely unsuitable as an accompaniment to a tailored costume. Yet often the hard type of headgear, as felt or straw that suits our "tailleur" is greatly assisted by one of the new draped colored net or dyed lace vells. But it must be short and practical, and exploit the sartorial fitness of things.

Quakerish.

The American designed street costume shows a Quaker influence in its soft gray coloring and demure lines.

BLOUSE OF GEORGETTE CREPE

Adapted from Paris, this unusual blouse is of cream colored georgette crepe with panel vest and high collar of white broadcloth.

Linen in Favor for Summer

Starch Favorite Fabric in Loveliest Colors—Must Be Embroidered to Be in Style.

It is delightful to see that real linen, as transparent and filmy as the finest of handkerchiefs, is being worn once more, says Harper's Bazar. In the loveliest of colors it is abroad on summer sands and lawns, but never as an unadorned fabric; it is invariably embroidered either in fine white cotton braid, in matching wool, or in satin ribbon. The ornamentation may take the form of small motifs applied at equal distances, or of a single motif covering the entire front of the skirt, but ornamentation there must be. There is one other mode of adornment for these frocks—broad bands of perforation exquisitely embroidered often give the effect of entre-deux.

This renaissance of linen, however, has by no means submerged the popularity of organdie, which is used in many charming ways this season.

Slips of black silk or satin, or of some color, are often worn under full length, sleeved tunics of organdie which are left open in the front. Be it white, rose or jade, the crisp transparent fabric is unutterably lovely when thus combined.

The chapeaux which surmount these airy frocks are appropriately seductive. There is one that may be recalled with joy; of pale pink organdie, generous in size and with slightly rolled back brim. It was wreathed uniquely with black and white grapes. One can but note the prevalence of fruit as trimming for hats. A broad-brimmed chapeau of deep rose organdie is encircled with a garland of white grapes; another of faintest mauve is adorned with black cherries and with leaves of green crepe ribbon, while broad hats of red horse-hair bear a luscious burden of ripe red strawberries.

SUDAN GRASS IS IMPORTANT CROP

Now Being Successfully Grown in Nearly All Parts of the United States.

HAS SHORT GROWING SEASON

Gaining Popularity Because of Its Ability to Produce Fair Yield of Hay Under Conditions of Low Rainfall.

Ten years after its introduction to the United States from Khartoum, Africa, Sudan grass was being successfully grown in nearly all parts of the United States. It does not serve well either as a "money crop" or a soil improver, hence it may never find a permanent place in regular crop rota-

Sudan Grass Grown in Rows and tures with the Sudan grass. Such a mixture produces a hay of higher feeding value than the grass alone, because of the high protein content of the legumes.

Sudan grass hybridizes freely with the sorghums. It is necessary, therefore, if pure seed is produced, to have the Sudan grass field at some distance from any sorghums, otherwise it will result in a mongrel crop the following year.

The department of agriculture's new bulletin goes very thoroughly into the details of cropping, planting, harvesting—both for hay and for seed—as well as the best methods of feeding the hay to live stock.

BIG HARM TO CROPS FROM GRASSHOPPERS

Situation is Particularly Serious in Dakotas.

Pest Destroying First Good Crops Farmers Have Had Since Beginning of Extended Dry Season—Poison Bait Favored.

Grasshoppers are infesting the farms in the northern portions of North Dakota, Michigan and Oregon east of the Cascade mountains, according to reports received by the bureau of entomology. In the Dakotas the situation is particularly serious because the farms have suffered from several years of drought, and the average farmer's bank account is much decreased by these years of extremely low crop yields. Now comes the grasshopper to destroy the first good crop the farmers have been able to grow since the beginning of the extended dry seasons. In many cases the farmer's predicament is desperate, with no funds available to enable him to fight the pest which threatens him with bankruptcy.

The United States department of agriculture has no available funds for the purpose, but is giving such assistance as it can toward putting control portant place in the farmer's second line of defense as a catch crop which can be planted to give satisfactory returns when conditions have brought failure to other hay crops. This is the verdict pronounced by the United States department of agriculture in Farmer's Bulletin 1126 recently issued.

Sudan grass is replacing millet as the premier catch crop in many localities because of its ability to produce a fair yield and a high quality of hay under conditions of low rainfall; its rather short growing season, and its ability to thrive on a wide range of soil types. Large yields of Sudan grass are obtained only on good soils, but the grass fails completely only on cold, poorly drained land.

There are certain parts of the United States where the department of agriculture considers it unwise to depend on Sudan grass for hay. This is true of the strip of territory 200 miles wide along the northern boundary; the regions of high altitudes in the western states; and also most of Florida and a narrow strip of land along the gulf coast. Low temperatures prevent success with the grass in the first two regions named, and disease is the limiting factor along the gulf coast. In a majority of the central and southern states, however, climatic and soil conditions are favorable to Sudan grass.

Although Sudan grass is best adapted by nature to use as a hay crop, it is also used with great success as a soiling and pasture crop for summer pastures.

High Feeding Value.

The feeding value of Sudan grass is equal to timothy hay. In localities where soy beans or cowpeas do well these legumes may be grown in mixtures with the Sudan grass, according to the directions given below and scattered over the infested areas, is a highly successful weapon to check the pest.

Use 25 pounds of wheat bran; 1 pound of paris green, or white arsenic; 6 oranges or lemons finely chopped; 2 quarts of low-grade molasses, and from 2 to 4 gallons of water.

Other baits are described in Farmers' Bulletin 747, United States department of agriculture, but there is very little difference in their relative efficiency. In moist climates the baits may be applied in the morning, but in semi-arid regions it should be put out in the evening to secure the best results.

FARM FORESTRY MAKES FARMING PAY BETTER

1. Marketing timber profitably.
2. Supplying timber for farm needs.
3. Furnishing employment for men and teams in winter.
4. Making waste lands yield a profit.
5. Increasing the sale value of the farm.

Get Rid of Gophers. Poisoning is unquestionably the best way of getting rid of gophers. There are several proprietary poisons which are advertised and which are cheap and convenient to use.

Fowls to Avoid. Fowls that have shown any signs of physical weakness at any time in their lives, should not be used for breeding purposes.

REPAIRS REQUIRED ON FARM

Unless Money is Judiciously Expended on Buildings, Tools, Etc., Run-down Place Results.

Buildings need repairs; machines and implements wear out; team and tractor need replacement and soil loses its fertility. Unless expenditures are judiciously made to maintain the farm, to keep up the out-buildings, to replace the machinery, a rundown farm will soon be an inheritance.

Fight Insects and Disease. Fight insects and disease by spraying; send to your experiment station or extension director, or call on your county agent, for free literature.

Must Have Proper Feed. If the hens do not get sufficient or proper feed they cannot be expected to give satisfactory results.

Increase Wheat Yields. Wheat yields can be increased on most farms by the use of better seed.

Mrs. G. C. Brookington, 619 W. Ludington St., Iron Mountain, Mich., says: "My back bothered me an awful lot and for a time I was feeling so badly with backache I couldn't do my washing. Meaning of the Name Ida. Ida and Ada are practically synonyms. In early times, however, Ada was believed to be derived from Adah, meaning ornament, and the name Adah was given to the wife of Lamech in the Old Testament. But later etymological authorities believe that Ada is merely a latinized form of Had, meaning happy or rich, and the same as the German Ida. Ida's gem is the garnet.

An investigation will be made.

U. S. FORECASTS FALLING PRICES

EFFECTS IN RETAIL MARKET TO BE FELT IN SPRING, SAYS RESERVE BOARD.

FEW CHANGES IN FOOD PRICES

Checking of Speculation and Increase in General Efficiency Given As Reasons for Drop of Prices.

Washington—Retail prices, in the opinion of the Federal Reserve Board, will decline slightly during the autumn and winter months and will slump next spring to still lower levels.

Summarizing recent changes in prices of various commodities, the board said the "saving afforded by manufacturers through lessened cost of materials and increased efficiency of labor most assuredly will be felt in a downward movement of retail prices."

A general slump in retail prices during the next few months was forecast, although higher prices in some lines are probably due to the fact that many purchases for the autumn and winter trade have been contracted for at the old level of prices.

Changes in the prices of raw material, which were reported to have been sharp during the recent weeks will not show their effect, according to the board, in retail prices until spring.

The board stated an "important downward tendency" in prices of all commodities except food had been evident throughout the country. The reduction of prices of raw material was especially marked. This general lowering it was believed, indicated a drop in food prices soon.

The board said there had been a "pronounced checking" of speculation as well as a definite, although slight, equally positive yet limited curtailment of extravagant expenditure and unnecessary borrowing." There has been also a "sustained tendency" to pay off loans secured by Government and other bonds and securities.

Price changes have been most noticeable in wool, silk and leather. These reductions are said to have been accompanied generally by a corresponding drop of retail prices of clothing, shoes and several other staples.

SAILOR SUSPECT UNLIKE LEROY

Man Being Held in South America For Identification.

Detroit—A description and interview with the man held at Rio Janeiro on board the steamship Dryden, suspected of being Eugene LeRoy, received from Robert Carlton Brown, editor of the Brazilian American, does not seem to bear out his identification as LeRoy, the man wanted in Detroit for wife murder. The man, who gives his name as Morris Fox, is described as six feet tall, brown eyes, swollen and red, dark brown hair and a small mustache, raised since he left New York.

He says his father is Max Fox, 225 Augusta avenue, Toronto. His papers, which are old and worn and appear authentic, show him to be a naturalized Russian.

He has a union card of the International Ladies Garment Workers, New York, dated Aug. 6, 1919, and a sailor's identification card showing discharge from the Lake Osage Sept. 25, 1918.

ATTEMPTS TO SWIM CHANNEL

POLITICAL PORCH PARTIES IN VOGUE AMONG WOMEN

New York—A new "front porch campaign" among women of the Republican party which was inaugurated in the middle west several weeks ago, has spread to the eastern states and promises to become the rage among women politicians. The plan as explained by its originator, Mrs. Manley L. Fosseen, national committee woman of Minnesota, is for a woman to hold a political meeting on her front porch, with five minute speeches for Harding and Coolidge. Afterward the hostess and all her guests may display a special Harding and Coolidge banner in their window. The system is an endless chain. Mrs. Fosseen said, and has spread rapidly through the middle west.

PLANNED SHOOTING COMISKEY

Intended to Raid White Sox-Yankee Gate Receipts.

Chicago—Confession of a plot to shoot Charles A. Comiskey, base ball magnate, and the office force and police guard at the White Sox base ball park box office has been made to police by the three boy bandits who were arrested in an attempted robbery of a $40,000 payroll of Wilson & Company, packers.

According to the police, the three said that they intended to raid the gate receipts of the White Sox-Yankee game Sept. 16, when they figured "Babe" Ruth would draw a record-breaking attendance. They said they also planned to shoot the witnesses.

They said they knew that Comiskey was not permitted by his physicians to watch the games and that he was in the box office every afternoon. They told the police that they planned to kill the bank messengers and escape identified at the state's attorney's office as a member of the gang that shot and killed Frank McGurk, detective sergeant, recently.

Sugar Cheaper in U. S.

Toronto—Dispatches tell of Canadians crossing to Detroit and getting sugar, product of Canadian refineries, at prices much lower than they get supplies in this country. This information was partially confirmed by reports that heavy shipments are being made from the Atlantic coast to Michigan ports. The board of commerce will be asked to investigate the information from Detroit that Canadians are being discriminated against.

Big Increase in Land Banks

Washington—Earnings of the federal land banks established a new record in July, their net returns totaling $257,203, approximately $18,000 more than in the previous record month of last February. The increase in net income for July, says Commissioner Lobdell, is explained by the fact that while the fixed gross income is the same, the land banks have reduced their operating expenses through a reduction in personnel. Dividends will be paid as usual.

ESCAPED AN OPERATION

By Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Many Such Cases.

Cairo, Ill.—"Sometime ago I got so bad with female trouble that I thought I would have to be operated on. I had a bad displacement. My right side would pain me and I was so nervous I could not hold a glass of water. Many times I would have to stop my work and sit down or I would fall on the floor in a faint. I consulted several doctors and every one told me the same but I kept fighting to keep from having the operation. I had read so many times of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it helped my sister so I began taking it. I have never felt better than I have since then and I keep house and am able to do all my work. The Vegetable Compound is certainly one grand medicine."

—Mrs. J. R. Matthews, 5311 Sycamore Street, Cairo, Ill.

Of course there are many serious cases that only a surgical operation will relieve. We freely acknowledge this, but the above letter, and many others like it, amply prove that many operations are recommended when medicine in many cases is all that is needed.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass.

SHE KNEW WHAT WAS IN IT

Little Eve Fairly Well Acquainted With the Varied Contents of the Family Bible.

Bishop Hoss said at a Nashville picnic:

"The religious knowledge of too many adults resembles, I am afraid, the religious knowledge of little Eve. 'So you attend Sunday school regularly?' the minister said to little Eve. 'Oh, yes, sir,' said she. 'And you know your Bible?' 'Oh, yes, sir.' 'Could you, perhaps, tell me something that is in it?' 'I could tell you everything that's in it.' 'Indeed!' And the minister smiled. 'Do tell me, then.' 'Sister's beau's photo is in it,' said little Eve promptly, 'and ma's recipe for vanillin' cream is in it, and a lock of my hair cut off when I was a baby is in it, and the ticket for pa's watch is in it.'

Quite Superfluous. After a little tea party the children were playing some game quietly in a corner of the room.

The lady of the house was curious to know what was keeping them so interested, so she called her own girl toward her.

"What game are you playing, Mollie?" she asked.

"Weddings, mother," replied the small girl. "I'm the bride, and Margery Jones is the bridesmaid."

"And who is the bridegroom?" asked mother, knowing that there was no small boy among the guests.

"Oh," came the quick answer "this is only a very quiet wedding, you know."—London Answers.

Forgiven.

"Can you help me out, sir?" said the seedy looking stranger. "I've had some hard luck."

"I suppose you've seen better days?" replied Mr. Twobble.

"Oh, yes, sir. I once got $75 a week for playing in a jazz orchestra."

"Well," said Mr. Twobble, as he thoughtfully thrust his hand into his pocket. "I'm a humane man and I won't hold that against you. Here's a quarter."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

The Double Squeeze

BY HENRY BEACH NEEDHAM

Illustrated by IRWIN MYERS

Copyright, by Doubleday, Page & Co. PART II—Continued.

She was plainly embarrassed. It was a perfectly justifiable question, and there was no reason, which he could see, why she should hesitate. Yet she did.

"I'm not going to use it—till you want me to."

"Oh, it's not that—not that at all. I'd be glad to have you call me—Imogen. It's Imogen."

"Imogen Riley," repeated Win. "Say, that's some name. If I'd named you myself, I'd have called you—Imogen."

"Mother will be glad." And she laughed.

"Now, what's your name?" she asked.

It was his turn to be "fussed" and to hesitate. "My middle name's Winston—most everybody calls me Win." "I suppose because you always do."

"Till now I have."

She edged away a trifle.

"Winston James is an excellent name," she declared. "I don't believe I would have it anything else."

He kicked the rail with his toe. It was an impatient kick. Masquerader!

"Look!"

She pointed to the lights, myriads of lights, bobbing on the shipping in the harbor and stretching high up to the summits of Monte Peraldo, where they lost their identity in the twinkling stars.

"But tomorrow we go to Naples, and then—" Win regarded Imogen wistfully.

"Don't speak of tomorrow," she hastened to say.

"No," he agreed. "We have tonight—all to ourselves."

"Yes," she whispered. But they didn't.

As the Colonia was warped in to the dock, olive-skinned officers, most of them with black moustaches, swarmed about the head of the pier. In their dress and cocky bearing they closely resembled soldiery. And they formed a guard about each gangway before any one was permitted to land.

Other officers came aboard immediately, and the word soon flew around the decks, started by some prattling petty officer of the ship, that the "boarders" were connected with the secret service of Italy. This resurrected the ship's mystery, and tongues began to wag and heads turn in excitement over the imminent disclosure of the fugitive's identity. At length was circulated the information that the officers were seeking a young woman who was wanted by both the Italian and the United States governments. Finally came the name—a Miss Leonard.

Hearing it, Imogen trembled and clutched Win Shute by the arm.

"What's the matter?" he asked, staring into her terrified face. "It's—It's Leonard."

"My name's Leonard—Imogen Leonard. Forgive me!"

PART III.

Pulling Off the Play. Win Shute had been jolted at Genoa. Another, but more agreeable surprise awaited him at Naples. After the Colonia, having cut a white lace across the cobalt Bay of Naples, was maneuvering to dock, he saw on the wharf, scanning every face looking down from the big black ship—Tris Ford.

As Win Shute learned afterward, the manager of the Giant-killers had kept his objective a secret from every living soul save his wife. Even the club officials supposed, for several days, that the manager had slipped quietly out of the city to rest after the hardest fought diamond battle in the records of the national game. The secretary had been told to reply to any cablegram from Win Shute in one way: to say that Tris Ford was out of town, and to urge the second baseman to remain on board until the ship called at Naples, where he would be met by the American consul. The big series ended on Tuesday, and at 1 a. m. next morning Tris Ford, under the nom de mer of Anson Jones, had sailed on the Lauretania. The following Monday morning he landed at Fishguard, boarded the special train for Dover, crossed the cantankerous channel, and arrived in Paris in the afternoon. Ford left the Gare d'Orly at ten o'clock that night, and after a night, a day, and a second night on the train arrived in Rome early Tuesday morning. The Colonia wasn't due at Naples until the next day. He was at the palace leased by the Hon. John Bismar, American ambassador to Italy, before that Chicago millionaire had finished his uncontinental breakfast of fruit, oatmeal, ham and eggs, and coffee, eaten to the accompanying perusal of the Continental Daily Mail.

The ambassador was expecting TRISTRAM CARLINGFORD. John Bismar's boss, the president of the United States, was a thirty-third-degree fan; also, the White House staff were fans down to the clerk who addressed the social invitations; and when the assistance of Washington had been solicited in the hunt for the king of second basemen and the pursuit of his kidnapers, all other government business, foreign and domestic, was shunted into second place. President Bancroft of the American league afterward observed that not for naught had he been distributing annual passes in Morocco leather cases to the executive branch of the government.

So if Ambassador Bismar succeeded in rendering valuable service in the search and capture, he would be certain of more official favor even than when he secured the contracts for two Chinese battleships for Yankee shipbuilders—his one real diplomatic triumph.

As in all of the pourparlers of diplomacy, the interview between John Bismar and Tris Ford was some time arriving at the main point. Ford had to play over the world series for the ambassador's benefit before he could get down to the business at hand.

As in all of the pourparlers of diplomacy, the interview between John Bismar and Tris Ford was some time arriving at the main point. Ford had to play over the world series for the ambassador's benefit before he could get down to the business at hand.

"What a heart-breaking finish!" exclaimed the ambassador—"deciding

"Lost us the world's championship—there ain't nothing to that."

"The skunks!" exclaimed the ambassador. "Those kidnapers ought to be strung up!"

"Ought to be," agreed Ford. "But, as far as I'm concerned, all I want is to put the chief crook in stripes—Jake Stinger, the New York gambler."

"You've got some of the gang, I understand from Washington."

"Yes—the secret service men got hold of a fellow who squealed."

"How'd they work the dirty trick?"

"They faked up a newspaper syndicate. Transcontinental has squares game—score 1 to 0 against you—men on second and third—nobody out—and you mean to tell me you couldn't squeeze a run across the plate?"

Tris Ford was literal-minded when talking baseball. He took it that the ambassador used squeeze in the technical sense—that he meant to ask why the "squeeze play" hadn't been attempted.

"You'd naturally think we'd 'a' tried the squeeze, now wouldn't you?" said Ford. "It was a great chance for it—for our double squeeze, in fact."

"You got me," confessed the ambassador. "What on earth's the 'double squeeze'? Must have come in since I put on velvet pants."

John Bismar laughed at his own joke on the diplomatic service, as did Tris Ford.

"It's this way," explained Ford. "You have a man on second and a man on third, and nobody out, we'll say."

"Just the situation in the seventh game of the world series," emphasized the ambassador.

Tris Ford nodded and went on: "You also have a man at bat who is a natural hunter. Well, the batter signals to the base runner on third—hitches up his trousers, or some such ordinary signal as that. Then when the pitcher begins to wind up, the man on third breaks for the plate—comes sailing into what looks like a sure putout. But the batsman reaches out and taps the ball—if you pull off the play—and the man scores! You see—a ball knocked to pitcher, or half-way even, will be enough to 'squeeze' the man across the plate, because he's got such a long start."

"I see!" exclaimed the ambassador, his eyes shining like the orbs of an American boy. "But what about the double squeeze?"

"I'm just coming to that," said Ford, smiling. "Taking the same play—when the man on third starts for home, the runner on second legs it to third. But he doesn't stop—keeps right on running, and—well, somehow or other the pitcher—or it might be the catcher, if it was a short hunt—seeing that the first man is bound to score and tearing he won't get any put-out, throw the ball to first to head off the batter. And—the second man scores!"

"Couldn't the pitcher get the second man at the plate?" asked the ambassador excitedly.

"Sure he could," grinned Ford; "why—the second base runner isn't more than halfway home when the pitcher fields the ball."

"Then why in Sam Hill doesn't the galoot throw to the plate?"

"You tell me," said Ford. "That's the queer part of it. Of course the crowd is yelling like maniacs; the man scoring first is upsetting, and the desire to get at least one man on the play, overwhelming—all that, I suppose. Anyhow, we tried the play seven times last season and got away with it all but once. That time the batter failed to connect with the ball, and the first man was an easy out."

"Now you've explained it so a woman or a foreigner could understand, tell me why you didn't try it at the crisis of the world's championship."

"Because the man at bat couldn't bunt—and we didn't have a sure bunter to substitute. The man who would have batted had been in the game is the best in the country at pulling the squeeze," added Tris Ford sadly.

"You don't mean—"

"Win Shute—yes, I do," finished Ford.

"And if he'd been in the game, you'd have won it?"

"Nine chances out of ten we would."

"So losing Shute lost you the world series?"

"Lost us the world's championship—there ain't nothing to that."

"The skunks!" exclaimed the ambassador. "Those kidnapers ought to be strung up!"

"Ought to be," agreed Ford. "But, as far as I'm concerned, all I want is to put the chief crook in stripes—Jake Stinger, the New York gambler."

"You've got some of the gang, I understand from Washington."

"Yes—the secret service men got hold of a fellow who squealed."

"How'd they work the dirty trick?"

"They faked up a newspaper syndicate. Transcontinental has squares recounted Tris Ford, and offered Shute big money to report the world series. Naturally he accepted, so they sent a man to Phillie to arrange details. He was supposed to arrive the day before the series opened, but was actually there a week earlier—at our best hotel, spending money, paying his checks with cash, and scattering coin in tips until he was solid with all the hotel people. Called himself 'Walter Noble'—nerve of it!"

"Who gave him away?" interjected the ambassador.

"Why—they had to have a double for their victim—some one to masquerade as Shute. That's where they fell down—picked the wrong man. The 'dummy' couldn't stand prosperity. After he left the hotel with his pockets full of money he started in to make a night of it—kept the taxi and blew in most of his money, then got in a row with the taxi driver over the fare. 'Wasn't so hard to trace him after that. He 'gave up' to the secret service men."

"How'd they manage with Shute?"

"Something like this," explained Ford: "The dummy came to see Noble in the afternoon, and the two of them kept ordering drinks right along—probably throwing most of the stuff away. When Shute called on Noble in the evening he was shown into the parlor of Noble's suite—the dummy was in the bedroom keeping dead quiet. Well, the crook—that's Noble—gave Shute a knockout in ginger ale—Win Shute never took a drink in his life; but they tell me ginger ale disguises that knockout powder better'n any beverage. Moment he began to pass away and lose consciousness, the dummy put on Shute's hat and overcoat, went downstairs, and was sent away by the doorman in the taxi ordered 'for Mr. Shute.' Just before Shute became helpless—when he was able to stagger, but too dazed to know anything—the porter was called. Noble told him that his friend—Shute now passed for the dummy—must be helped down and put into his automobile, as Noble was leaving town. Thinking it was the case of a 'drunk,' the porter—probably well fed—willingly helped Noble to carry his victim down and put him in the machine.

Red Squirrels. The red squirrels are found most abundantly in woods of chestnut, hemlock or oak trees. These little squirrels do not lay up big stores of food as some of the other varieties. In summer time they make excursions to the fields and orchards. Apple seeds are a favorite delicacy.

Jamaica Grows Green Roses. In some parts of Jamaica it is not unusual to see green roses.

Sugar From Timber. Sprinkling of the suggestion of sawdust sugar, a Ceylon planter says: "While I cannot vouch for the sweetening properties of timber in general, I know there are trees which yield sugar. We might have been sending you considerable quantities from Ceylon had an experiment made then been more efficiently carried out. Palmyra trees which yield a sugary syrup, were tapped, and modern machinery installed to refine the juice, but for some reason the native workers could not be prevailed on to carry the stuff down from the forest to the works. There is still a future for palmyra sugar, when the fluck is fixed down.

Stepping Out. The late long staple cotton crop has made quite a lot of money for South Carolina negroes. A short time ago one of them purchased a high-priced car. A few days later he went back to the salesman.

"Cap, is you got any of dese here cowketchers?" he inquired.

"Do you mean bumpers, Charlie?" "Yassir."

"Well, Charlie, do you want one for both ends of your car?"

"Nawwir, cap, ain't nobody gwine ter ketch up wid me. Ah jes want one to do front."

Bright Youth. Eugene was leaving for New York alone. His brother wrote out for him a telegram announcing his safe arrival, which he charged the youngster to send as soon as he reached his destination.

No telegram came. After burning up the wires to assure himself of the youngster's safety the older brother awaited with interest Eugene's first letter.

It said, "I arrived safe, so I did not think it necessary to send the telegram."

Great is the Value of Service

Though the product that a man sells has a wonderful reputation behind it for inherent worth, though it has the enduring qualities of the eternal hills and its appearance is a delight to the eye, if the seller thereof is not able to give you along with it that part of his own self we call Service, it profiteth little.

A tractor may have the power to pull twenty plows through black gumbo without a slip, it may be able to run your largest separator and it may be a beautiful piece of machinery—when it runs—but unless it is backed up by the Service of the dealer and the manufacturer it is a poor investment.

Ten thousand dealers from Maine to the Gulf, from Can braska. We use the word service in the fullness of its meaning for they are the same men who have served the Ford automobile owners for years. The name Ford has made good service commonplace in the light car field and the same men who have performed this miracle are doing the same in the tractor field.

Much more important is it that your tractor be ready and working at all times, when the seed is to be put in the ground before the spring rains, or harvest must be hurried, than that your auto should be ready for a pleasure trip.

That's what Fordson Service means—keeping your tractor running. No long waits for repairs are in store for the Fordson owner. Every one of the ten thousand Fordson dealers carries a complete stock of repairs in his own store.

FORDSON—SERVICE. Ask a Fordson Owner.
