

PINCKNEY DISPATCH

Vol. XXXVII

Pinckney, Livingston County, Michigan, Thursday, September 30, 1920

No. 40

JOHN MONKS

In the days when this vicinity was largely wilderness and only sparsely occupied by white people, and Pinckney was only a very small settlement, Indians traveling back and forth to and from the trading station at Detroit, camped on the banks of the creek flowing through what was later the Village of Pinckney.

One of their favorite camping spots was on the farm south of the mill, which was known as the Maloney farm and was later acquired through a trade by Christopher Monks who built a brick house on the spot of the old Indian encampments.

Here he and his wife, Mary McCrain-Monks lived and here their son John Monks was born February 14th, 1852 and died September 20, 1920, having lived his entire life—sixty eight years—in the same house, the last survivor of the Christopher Monks family of eleven children, nine boys and two girls.

It was to this home he brought his bride, Miss Zoa Murphy of Dexter township, November 8, 1880 and here their three children were born, Erwin and Claude, now of Detroit and Miss Lela, of Lansing.

John Monks was a good citizen, a kind husband, a fond father, a true neighbor in the highest sense of the word, and a friend whose loyalty could always be depended upon in times when friendship is most greatly to be desired. He was a large man physically but his body was none too large for the big, warm heart it contained. Many a one besides the family will miss John

WILLIS L. LYONS FOR JUDGE OF PROBATE

For judge of probate the voters at the primary election nominated Willis L. Lyons who is well known to all the people in this county. Urged to become a candidate he permitted petitions to be filed for him, when he learned there were no others in his party who wanted the nomination, and received a large vote at the primaries. The editor of this paper remembers him as a student in our high school, when he went south in soldier's uniform, when he later returned broken in health but not discouraged. We remember too his studying late at night and taking law lectures at the University of Michigan, and later passing the State Bar examination. As prosecuting attorney he has handled the criminal affairs of the county in such a way as to save the county thousands of dollars each year. His plan has always been to keep people out of trouble and it seems to us that he is particularly adapted to the position of judge of probate. In this office where disputes over property sometimes arise we are sure a peacemaker can be used to good advantage. By straightforward work and square dealing Willis Lyons has won the confidence of the people. He has saved many dollars for this county, let's give him a chance to save money for the estates of this county. There is doubtless not a voter in Livingston county who has the least doubt as to his ability and peculiar fitness for the

IS "13" UNLUCKY?

No one would have guessed it had he heard the merry laughter of those thirteen girls of years ago as they gathered on the lawn at G. A. Sigler's residence Wednesday Sept. 22. Jest and repartee were thrown back and forth as they sat or stood for the snapshots.

These girls were Jessie Burnett, Mary Smith, Jennie Clark, Dids Webb, Jennie Wood, Luella Haze, Lizzie Darrow, Kate Brown, Hattie Haze, Lizzie Grimes, Ella Nash, Leal Haze, and Laura Darrow.

A bounteous table was spread on the lawn to which all did ample justice. All this was in honor of Mrs. Jessie Burnett Day who has been visiting her girlhood friends. As a remembrance of the olden times she was presented with an ivory clock.

FOWLerville FAIR

After all is said and done on the Fair question you'll have to admit that there's something about the way they conduct their Fair over at Fowlerville that makes it one of the most popular Fairs in this section of the State.

If there are any old timers—or young timers for that matter—that you have not seen for some time and would like to meet again for a gabfest, you will be sure to meet your party at the Fowlerville Fair, and the chances are that he will be on the lookout for you also.

Everybody goes to this Fair and this year there are extra attractions that will keep you entertained until you run across Bill or Mary and the rest of the bunch you always expect to meet at least once a year—at the Fowlerville Fair.

This year the base ball situation is absorbing the attention of all in this county who are interested in sports. That Stockbridge team has won so many games in this county that people living over in Ingham are getting cheery about their team—a little too much so for comfort to Livingstonites and there is a rumor going around to the effect that an extra effort will be made at the Fowlerville Fair to transfer that chestiness from Ingham county to the neighboring county on the west. October 5, 6, 7, and 8.

GLASS PRESENT

The "Live Wire" class of the Federated Sunday School met at the home of Mr. Roy Campbell on Thursday Sept. 23rd and spent a pleasant evening with him prior to his departure for Lansing. A few of the oldtime boy's games were played with the usual enthusiasm.

Before leaving they presented him with a very pretty fountain pen as a small token of their love and esteem for him. He has been a very faithful help to the boys and we wish him every success in his profession.

SIX MONTHS I COULD NOT WORK

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Made Me Strong and Able to Work—I Recommend It To All My Friends.

Bayonne, N. J.—"I had pains in back and legs so that I could not stand caused by female trouble. I felt so tired all the time, had had headaches, and for six months I could not work. I was treated by a physician and took other remedies but got no relief. A friend told me about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it has helped me very much. I am well and strong and now able to do my work. I cannot thank you enough and I recommend your medicine to my friends who are sick."—Mrs. SUSIE SACATANSKY, 25 East 17th St., Bayonne, N. J.

It must be admitted by every fair-minded intelligent person, that a medicine could not live and grow in popularity for over forty years, and today hold a record for such wonderful success as does Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, without possessing great virtue and actual worth. Such medicines must be looked upon and termed both standard and dependable by every thinking person.

A New Definition.

"What is a widow?" asked the teacher of a Sunday school class, the subject of the day's lesson being the widow of Ham.

There was silence until she nodded to a little boy to her left, and said, "You know what a widow is, don't you?" for she knew that the little boy's mother was one.

"Yes," he answered, "it's a lady what takes in washing!"—Edinburgh Freeman.

OPEN FIGHT ON R. R. REGULATION

STATE OPPOSES FEDERAL LEGISLATION FIXING PASSENGER AND FREIGHT RATES.

CLAIM STATE RIGHTS NULLIFIED

Railroads Contend That United States Control During War Changed Application of State Laws.

Detroit.—First hearing on the proposal to allow railroads to charge the interstate passenger rate of three and six-tenths cents a mile for interstate travel in Michigan was opened by the Interstate Commerce commission Sept. 27th in the Federal building. Robert W. Woolen, member of the commission, presided.

Strenuous efforts will be made by the Michigan Public Utilities commission and the attorney general to prevent the granting of the proposed increase. On the result of the case hinges the right of the state to control and regulate rates for travel in its own borders.

Previous to the war legislation pertaining to intrastate travel was left to individual states, the Interstate Commerce commission dealing with interstate travel only. Then the railroads were taken over by the government and, it is contended by the carriers, this automatically nullified all state laws and left the federal commission in control. On this contention they are basing their demand for the higher rate.

Michigan representatives hold that this condition is not so, and that if it was the entire structure of state rights would be nullified. They further assert that local conditions in Michigan differ from the country-wide conditions upon which the federal commission allowed the recent 20 per cent increase to the roads.

inasmuch as the state legislature passed a law regulating intrastate carrier rates after the roads had been acquired by the government. This in itself, it is asserted meets the argument that previous laws are invalid and therefore the federal commission is supreme.

CHEAPER BREAD BOARD'S AIM

Co-Operative Sales System For Wheat Is Planned.

Lansing.—Cheaper bread in the cities and more money for the producers of wheat are the results sought by 17 agricultural economists, who have set themselves the task of devising new methods of marketing the grain crop of the country, according to officials of the Michigan State Farm Bureau.

The committee was selected by the American Farm Bureau Federation and is representative of all farm organizations of the grain producing regions of the country, the agricultural press, agricultural colleges and the public. C. A. Bingham, secretary of the Michigan State Farm Bureau, is one of the four representatives of the farm bureaus of the country on the committee.

According to the bureau's announcement, speculation on grain exchanges of the country has brought about the high bread prices and the comparatively low price paid the farmer for his wheat. It is to eliminate speculation and substitute a farmer's co-operative sales system that the committee was formed. It is too late for this year's crop to be handled by any such system, it is said, but it is hoped that by 1922 a new system may be made effective.

WILL FIGHT IN SHIPPING WAR

U. S. Plans Checkmate For Acts of Britain and Japan.

Washington.—Reports of the shipping war which Great Britain and Japan are planning to wage against the United States because of the Jones law is only making officials here determined to build up a greater merchant marine.

The United States is now preparing to meet the first step in this war on the Pacific coast. The Holt line has made an agreement with the Canadian railways and will desert American for Canadian ports because of preferential railway rates and other schemes.

The whole trouble is a pure case of jealousy, say officials, for Europe is rapidly coming to the conclusion that Uncle Sam means business on the seas. Ample checkmates are planned.

"LAND OF PLENTY"

Western Canada a Country of Marvelous Fertility.

Literally Hundreds of Miles of Wonderful Grain Fields Delight the Eye—Yields Will Run Well Over a Billion Dollars.

A trip through the wheat fields of Western Canada may lack the inspiration, such as one may find working intently through his being as he traverses the mountain areas of Canada, rich in the variety of color and depth of shades that they cast, wonderful in their magnitude, their grandeur, restful, even although the streams that flow from their sides come down with a swish and a swash creating a noise that makes one's eardrums beat their last beat. Then as we rest beside the lakes in the clouds and see the calm and peace which they enjoy in the midst of nestling hills, we wonder if there's another world. Care has vanished; all we want is to dwell upon the scene. But it was not the intention to speak of mountain scenery, roaring torrents, placid lakes, and restful haunts. Rather, we were about to speak of the other kind of inspiration that is aroused as one traverses Western Canada's immense plains, gridironed with railroads and splendid highways, along whose borders and away back are to be seen the most wonderful grain fields. The crops of wheat, oats, barley, flax, and corn—yes, corn—have just been harvested, the threshing machines are busy, the elevators are ready—the thirty and forty thousand-bushel elevators, with three, four, and five and more at nearly every station along the thousand miles of railway that serve this immense new area of agricultural land. There is not a more inspiring sight than these grain fields. They lead one to pause and reflect, get one into a mental arithmetic strain, and the mind wanders as it gathers the great length of figures that represents the Western Canada grain crop of 1920. ### THE AOUADAS.

"As I've said before," said Mrs. Aoudad, "I am one of the few lady animals who care about being more gentle than the gentleman animals."

"Take the lioness, for example. She is far wilder than the lion, and the tigress is far wilder than the tiger, and so it goes; but not with the aoudad. Mr. Aoudad is the boss! He is wilder than I am, too, by nature."

"I am a great deal more gentle. I wait until he has finished eating until I have my meal, for if I don't he shoves me away into a corner."

"You've all heard of that before. It strikes people as very funny when they come and see us, and watch Mr. Aoudad shove me out of the way until he has his meal, and then when he is all through I go and have mine."

"But with all that Mr. Aoudad has many fine points, and I admire them."

"Thank you, thank you," said Mr. Aoudad, who had been listening.

"Sometimes when I look at you, you run away, don't you?" he asked after a moment.

"I do when I see that you want me to move," she said meekly.

"Ah, that is very right and proper," he said, "for a Mrs. Aoudad to be so obedient, even to the mere look of a Mr. Aoudad!"

"Ah, I say it again, how fine my handsome mane is which hangs down below my throat. It is a most beautiful mane, and my horns are so beautifully long and curved. They are just right in thickness and in size, in length and in everything else that horns should be right in! How about that, Mrs. Aoudad?"

"Right, my dear, right," she said. "You are a handsome fellow, and I am always here to tell you so. Except, of course," she added, "when you send me off into a corner."

themselves posted as to values believe.

The wheat crop alone will run over 250,000,000 bushels, and if you figure this at $2.80 per bushel, the price it is selling at as we write, there you have $700,000,000 alone. Then there is the oat crop, with a yield of one hesitates to say the quantities in bushels, for the threshers are reporting yields of 110 and 120 bushels per acre, where but 80 and 90 bushels were expected, but their value, apart from that of barley and rye and flax, will carry us over the billion dollar mark.

Of course all this means—but we had almost forgotten to speak of the cattle and horses, the sheep and the pigs, the dairy and many other farm products, the increase and production of which this year will bring in many more million dollars—all this means that there will be a rush of buyers to Western Canada this fall, during the winter, and next spring.

A certain amount of satisfaction is derived by those "back home here," whose friends are writing them inquiring the statements that are appearing in the press of wheat yields of thirty, forty, and fifty bushels to the acre; of oats yielding anywhere from sixty to 120 bushels per acre. Districts have not been specially favored. Travel anywhere, eight hundred miles east and west, four hundred miles north and south, and it is the same story, splendid yields, good acreage, excellent prices, easy marketing, but labor a little scarce.—Advertisement.

SMALL MISS WAS WRATHFUL

Properly Indignant When Careless Boy Spoiled the Result of Her Mother's Hard Work.

Small children, as a rule, do not seem to appreciate all the efforts that are put forth in their behalf, merely taking good food, clothing and all other things provided by parents as part of the game, and paying no attention to them. However, there are exceptions, as was shown by a Columbus miss of four years. She was daintily attired in a pink gingham dress, every ruffle and tuck of which was ironed to perfection. While walking on the sidewalk in front of her home she passed two boys who were scuffling, and one of them slipped into a puddle, splashing muddy water over her clothes. She gave one horrified glance at her dress, then before the boy could realize what was happening she ran to him and began to wallop him with all the strength her small fists possessed.

"My mother worked hard to iron this dress," she said, between blows, "and now it will have to be washed again," and she gave him a final whack as emphasis.—Indianapolis News.

"Well, and what have you to say to me today? What have you to tell me? Stay around and talk to me, Mrs. Aoudad. I'm glad to welcome you as a talker today. That is to say, I would like it if you talked to me, and talked a good deal to me, and talked to me of the things you know it makes me happiest to hear! You will talk to me, eh?"

"That is a very gorgeous fact, a very gorgeous fact, indeed!"

"I will talk to you," said Mrs. Aoudad. "And you may stand on yonder rock as I do so."

She need not have said that, however, for already Mr. Aoudad was

"As I said before," he remarked, "I would be a good one to photograph, for I always stand in interesting positions for the photographer to photograph! That's a fine sentence now."

"And now, Mrs. Aoudad, pray continue."

"You're a fine aoudad, one who loves admiration and who is just as vain as the peacock family. For while they strut about you stand on high rocks and pose this way and that, so everyone will see you and admire you."

"But it is quite right that you should do this, for you deserve admiration."

"You are a handsome fellow, and you should be admired."

"And what is more, as I've said before, and as the keeper has said, you are a very nice sort, for you are not a weather grumbler."

"You come from the mountains of northern Africa, where it is hot and dry, and yet you do not mind the cold or the wet weather that you get here in the zoo."

"You never grumble of the weather. I've said this before, but it is so much in your favor that I say it again. True, I do not grumble of the weather either, but then I couldn't do such a thing when before me is your fine example."

"Splendid, splendid!" said Mr. Aoudad, a member of the Barbary wild sheep family.

UNADILLA

Miss Ella Corser of Lansing is spending a few weeks at her home here.

The weekly Bible Study meets each Monday evening at W. T. Barnum's and they expect to give an open meeting in one of the churches, to which the public will be cordially welcomed.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Marshall of Gregory visited Mrs. Mima Watson, Tuesday. We are sorry to report Aunt Nancy May as quite poorly.

Mr. and Mrs. V. Yokum, Mrs. Tate Watson and Mrs. T. Obert, all of Jackson, and Mr. and Mrs. E. Briggs of California were callers on Unadilla friends Sunday.

We are glad to report that Rev. H. Harris and family have returned for another year.

A great deal of excitement was in store for Unadilla people one day last week when one of the rear wheels of one of the large gravel trucks which are hauling gravel to the road west of Gregory broke through the south bridge. The truck weighs nine tons when loaded, but when its three tons of gravel was unloaded it was able to pull itself out, leaving the bridge in quite a demolished condition.

Clarence Harris entertained the Freshman class of the Stockbridge High School Tuesday night. It was supposed to have been a secret but the Sophmores and Juniors got wise and came along; consequently the Freshmen got their initiation—at least the natives of the village thought so.

Helgoland Beliefs.

Helgoland was called Hertha in ancient times. The island was independent from the tenth to the fourteenth centuries, until the dukes of Schleswig took it over and used it mainly as a pawn for loans until the Danes acquired it 400 years later. Denmark ceded it to Great Britain in the nineteenth century and the British fortified it for defensive purposes.

The islanders absorbed customs and ideas of the many nationalities that visited them, adorning each with a distinctive touch. They even had a curious quirk in their Satan, a wooden leg. Hence the Schleswig saying: "In Helgoland the devil goes on crutches."

There was a special assistant to the French ambassador in Constantinople years ago whose friends in Paris wished to play a trick on him, and so they told him to take a cargo of wigs with him to Constantinople, and he would make a lot of money. The man bought the cargo of wigs, only to find on arrival that the people had never heard of wigs and had no use for them whatever. The ambassador noticing that his friend was melancholy, discovered the cause to be the unsold cargo of wigs, so he told the story to the grand vizier, who told the sultan. Whereupon the sultan sent an order to all the synagogues in the city that all the Jews in the city must wear wigs. The Jews didn't even know what a wig was, much less where they could get one. And this was just the moment for the possessor of a cargo of wigs, who put them on the market and made a pocketful of money.

THE S O S.

By CRAWFORD LUTTRELL.

(© 1929, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Army men on a post welcome visiting girls as the glad old earth welcomes spring, but it was quite evident, after the first week of her sojourn in the house of Captain Anstruthers, that his sister Helen was going to have a sorry time of it. She was pretty enough in her way, but that elusive something that makes or mars a girl's success with men held no promise for the captain's uneasy wife, Anne. What was she going to do with her sister-in-law for a whole month?

Men came, perfunctorily, at her bidding. They ate her dinners, nibbled her cakes and drank her tea, but they returned the courtesies with the air of men paying just and honest debts when they could make far happier use of the money. None of them on leaving lingered a little to grasp her hand and whisper, "She's some little peach, your visitor! Say a good word for me! How about dinner with me tomorrow night, and could you squeeze in a horseback ride for the next afternoon?"

Something had to be done and done quickly.

Anne thought over the list of possibilities. Her heart gave a little convulsive gasp at thought of sending an S. O. S. to the colonel, and yet she looked forward happily to the opportunities that it would offer to exhibit herself in all her mature loveliness to the man whom she had refused to marry Tom Anstruthers. There was always a little glow of feminine satisfaction when she reflected that he was a bachelor because of her. His eyes were inscrutable, unfathomable. They looked at her as if they were still seeing the pretty, innocent young girl she had been when, visiting the

Only that once did she let the mask fall. Her face went white as a snow-drop and her hand, idly fingering the bar of sapphires on her breast, trembled visibly. There was the agony of confession in the eyes she lifted to his for one brief moment. "If it hadn't been for the memory of your kindness, I couldn't have endured it all these years."

"I know." His clasp on her hand was warm, reassuring. "I'll do everything that I can for the girl."

If a miracle can happen, then one happened at the post. The end of Helen's visit came, and Anne knew that no girl who had ever been entertained there had enjoyed greater popularity. There had been rides, luncheons, teas, dinners and theater parties to the nearby city, all of them sponsored by the able, quiet-looking colonel. Anne was grateful beyond the power of words to express, but the visit had been a trying one for her. She was conscious every time that she saw the commanding officer at the post that all he did was for her. She had worn her blue dresses because she had heard him say so many times in the old days that blue was his favorite color, and she wanted to please him because he was doing so much for her.

He came to call, alone, the night before Helen was to leave. The girl seemed strangely excited, as if she were just bubbling over with happiness. Anne said good-night to them early and went to her room, thinking over her own care-free days and her unwise choice of a partner. She would try to save Helen from the same fate. She wondered if the girl had come really to care for any of the men who had danced attendance on her. None of them probably cared a straw for the girl herself. Of course, they rushed her to please the colonel. There was a little lieutenant who had seemed sincere in his attentions. Could it be that he—Anne was startled from her reverie by Helen tiptoeing into the room, with her finger on her lips. The little visitor was in a flame-colored taffeta with wide-plaited ruffles that served to round out her slim, girlish figure. A high Spanish comb held her yellow curls on top of her head.

looking either more, the best dancer and the most adept at making love. Well, she had paid for her failure to discriminate, but nobody knew how much she had paid. Outwardly she was the toast of the officers' mess, beautiful as a star and just as cold, men found who ventured to make up for Anstruthers' obvious lack of attention.

She had never asked a favor of Colonel Kent, but the time had come when she felt that the end justified the means. She could not have Tom's quiet little sister go back home with a tale of unhappiness to tell. The girl had looked forward to the visit for years. Anne knew. She remembered how it had been when she was young.

So Anne wrote a little perfumed note and asked the colonel to call at tea time the next day. She planned to have a few others in so that she could take the colonel aside and explain just what was wanted without having Helen suspect anything.

She longed to wear a blue georgette frock elaborately embroidered in steel beads, but the colonel had often mentioned his fondness for her in that color in the never-to-be-forgotten days of youth, so she resolutely pushed aside the alluring little garment and selected a drab gray to which only her sapphires gave color.

Of course they had met almost every day in the year, but he never went to Anne's house unless he was invited there, and Anne only asked him when there were many other guests. Lately she had seen little of him. He was beginning to plead that middle-aged officers ought to turn over social affairs to the younger fellows and let them have their fling.

When the few people whom she had asked had all been served, Anne left the gray little tea table and casually moved over to sit beside the colonel.

"I'm so glad that you came," she said. "I want to ask a big favor of you."

"Granted," he answered, smiling inscrutably, "before you ask, as you must have known it would be."

"Captain Anstruthers' little sister is visiting me for a month. For some reason, not known to me, she is not proving very popular. My sixth sense tells me that."

"Woman's intuition."

"She is young, as you can see, so young that her heart and her eyes are still filled with dreams. I want her to be gay and happy while she is here. Already she is beginning to feel that the men are not rushing her as she had hoped they would. Can you help me? Will you help me to make her visit here all that I want it to be?"

A little wistful smile played about his full lips and etched with a bold stroke the fine lines that were already showing at the corners of his brown eyes. "It's a big task to put up to a man whose own dreams have never come true, but I'll do my best. Whatever you say goes, you know. I told you that same thing, fifteen years ago."

she confided rapturously.

"Yes?" questioned Anne; but already that strange sixth sense was at work, prophesying the astounding news.

"I'm coming back—think of it! The colonel's wife! Maybe I'll snub you and Tom," she laughed, rocking herself back and forth on the low stool by Anne's dainty dressing table. "You know I was wild about him before I came here. Tom had told us so much about him. I cared even before I saw him. So you see your quiet, demure little sister-in-law has something that all the lovely, scintillating visitors who came here before must have lacked. I met him two or three days before you asked him to tea. He said then that if you didn't soon ask him to call he would have to hint to you." Then suddenly she changed the subject. "I think that I will have a brown going-away dress, Anne. I thought of blue, but he hates it. Isn't that queer? Most men adore it. Why don't you say something? Aren't you perfectly thrilled to have a sister who is the colonel's lady?"

Anne was staring at her, eyes dark as shadowy pools, as if she were seeing her for the first time. "Why, of course, I am delighted."

"I wanted him to tell you, but he said it would be better for me to break the news. Wasn't that thoughtful of him? Women do love startling secrets, don't they? And just think, Anne, he says that he has never loved a girl before, and he is nearly forty years old."

Had to Stick.

The most embarrassing moment I can remember was the time my husband accepted an invitation and understood it was for a dinner instead of just for the evening. When we arrived at seven the host was just returning from work, and it was apparent from his manner that we were not expected for dinner. We wished that we were far away, but had to stick and admit the mistake.—Exchange.

Car Tracks Wear Tires.

The severest wear on solid tires is caused by driving on the car tracks, according to an official of a rubber company, quoted by the Scientific American. He says that when on the tracks most of the load is concentrated on a limited portion of the tread, so that it is overloaded and quickly worn away, besides, a sharp pointed frog may actually cut a piece off the tire just as a knife would.

REASON IN LOWER ANIMALS

That They Possess More Than Mere Instinct Seems to Have Been Abundantly Proved.

In the woods when male deer get to fighting, the rattle of their clashing antlers may be heard a long way off, and sometimes other males hearing the sound make toward it and lure away the female over which the other two are fighting.

Hunters frequently employ this knowledge of deer habits to decoy bucks into range of their rifles by rattling together a couple of sets of old antlers.

Take it all in all, it is hardly fair to the animals to say they merely possess instinct, when we have so many instances of their reasoning powers. If monkeys were able to preserve the best thoughts of each generation of their species as humans do with the printing press—well, anyway, it is too bad that Garner didn't live to establish on the Florida coast his monkey colony. Had he done this, who knows what startling discoveries he might have made concerning their intellect?—Exchange.

Government Expected to Ask That Hearing Be Speeded.

Washington.—The appeals of Senator Newberry, of Michigan, and 16 other defendants convicted last March at Grand Rapids, Mich., on charges of corruption in connection with the 1918 Michigan senatorial election were formally filed in supreme court.

The Great Shadow

By A. CONAN DOYLE

Author of "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes"

Copyright by A. Conan Doyle

It was very well to draw pictures of him, and sing songs about him, and make as though he were an impostor, but I can tell you that the fear of that man hung like a black shadow over all Europe, and that there was a time when the glint of a fire at night upon the coast would set every woman upon her knees and every man gripping for his musket.

So begins this thrilling and important historical romance. It is thrilling because Sir Arthur Conan Doyle wrote it. He has been a successful author for 33 years. He has written more than 40 novels, novelettes and plays. Some of his characters, Sherlock Holmes and Brigadier Gerard for example, will live. "The White Company" is a classic.

It is important because it is a story of the latter days of Napoleon, from the viewpoint of Scotch villagers who lie under "The Great Shadow." There are three men and a woman in the story. Two of the men die on the field of Waterloo, the culmination of the story.

CHAPTER I.

It is strange to me, Jack Calder of West Inch, to feel that though now, in the very center of the nineteenth century, I am but five-and-fifty years of age, and though it is only once a week, perhaps, that my wife can pluck out a little gray bristle from over my ear, yet I have lived in a time when the thoughts and the ways of men were as different as though it were another planet from this. For when I walk in my fields I can see, down Berwick way, the little tufts of white smoke which tell me of this strange, new, hundred-legged beast with coals for food and a thousand men in its belly, forever crawling over the border. On a shiny day I can see the glint of the brass work as it takes the curve near Corriemuir. And then, as I look out to sea, there is the same beast again, or a dozen of them, maybe, leaving a trail of black in the air and of white in the water, and swimming in the face of the wind as easily as a salmon up the Tweed. Such a sight as that would have struck my good old father speechless with wrath as well as surprise, for he was so stricken with the fear of offending the Creator that he was chary of contradicting Nature, and always held the new thing to be nearly akin to the blasphemous. As long as God made the horse, and a man, down Birmingham way, the engine, my good old dad would have stuck by the saddle and the spurs.

When he died we had been fighting with scarce a break, save for two short years, for very nearly a quarter of a century. Babies who were born in the war grew to be bearded men with babies of their own, and still the war continued. Those who had served and fought in their stalwart prime grew stiff and bent, and yet the ships and the armies were struggling. During that long time we fought the Dutch, we fought the Danes, we fought the Spanish, we fought the Turks, we fought the Americans, we fought the Montevideans, until it seemed that in this universal struggle no race was too near of kin or too far away to be drawn into the quarrel. But most of all it was the French whom we fought, and the man whom of all others we loathed and feared and admired was the great captain who ruled them.

It was very well to draw pictures of him, and sing songs about him, and make as though he were an impostor, but I can tell you that the fear of that man hung like a black shadow over all Europe, and that there was a time when the glint of a fire at night upon the coast would set every woman upon her knees and every man gripping for his musket. He had always won. That was the terror of it. The fates seemed to be behind him. And now we know that he lay upon the northern coast with a hundred and fifty thousand veterans, and the boats for their passage. But it is an old story how a third of the grown folk of our country took up arms, and how our little one-eyed, one-armed man crushed their fleet. There was still to be a land of free thinking and free speaking in Europe.

There was a great beacon ready on the hill by Tweedmouth, built up of logs and tar barrels, and I can well remember how night after night I strained my eyes to see if it were ablaze. I was only eight at the time, but it is an age when one takes a grief to heart, and I felt as though the fate of the country hung in some fashion upon me and my vigilance. And then one night as I looked I suddenly saw a little flicker on the beacon hill—a single red tongue of flame in the darkness. And then the flame shot higher, and I saw the red, quivering line upon the water beyond, and I dashed into the kitchen, screaming to my father that the French had crossed and the Tweedmouth light was aflame. I can see him now as he knocked his pipe out at the side of the fire, and looked at me from over the top of his horn spectacles.

"Are you sure, Jock?" says he.

"Sure as death," I gasped.

He reached out his hand for the Bible upon the table and opened it upon his knee as though he meant to read to us, but he shut it again in silence and hurried out. We went down to the gate which opens out upon the highway. From there we could see the red light of the big beacon, and the glimmer of a smaller one to the north of us at Ayton. The old road had more folk on it than ever passed along it at night before, for many of the yeomen up our way had enrolled themselves and were riding now as fast as hoof could carry them for the muster. Some had a stirrup cup his strength; how he put his fist through the oak panel of the game-room door. How when Long Merri-dew was carrying the ball, he caught up Merri-dew, ball and all, and ran swiftly past every opponent to the goal. It did not seem fit to us that such a one as he should trouble his head about spondee and dactyls, or care to know w' o signed the Magna Charta. When he said in open class that King Alfred was the man, we little boys all felt that very likely it was so, and that perhaps Jim knew more about it than the man who wrote the book.

For two years we were close friends, for all the gap that the years had made between us, and, though in passion or in want of thought he did many a thing that galled me, yet I loved him like a brother, and wept as much as would have filled an ink bottle when at last, after two years, he went off to Edinburgh to study his father's profession. Five years after that did I bide at Birtwhistle's, and when I left I had become cock myself, for I was as wiry and as tough as whalebone, though I never ran to weight and sinew, like my great predecessor. It was in jubilee year that I left Birtwhistle's, and then for three years I stayed at home, learning the ways of the cattle; but still the ships and the armies were wrestling, and still the great shadow of Bonaparte lay across the country.

How could I guess that I, too, should have a hand in lifting that shadow forever from our people?

CHAPTER II.

Some years before, when I was still but a lad, there had come over to us upon a five weeks' visit the only daughter of my father's brother, Willie Calder had settled at Eyemouth as a maker of fishing nets, and he had made more out of twine than ever we were like to do out of the whin bushes and sand links of West Inch. So his daughter, Edie Calder, came over with a brow red frock and a five-shilling bonnet and a kist full of things that brought my dear mother's eyes out like a parter's.

I took no great stock of girls at that time, for it was hard for me to see what they had been made for. There were none of us at Birtwhistle's that thought very much of them; but the smallest laddies seemed to have the most sense, for, after they began to grow bigger they were not so sure about it. We little ones were all of one mind that a creature that couldn't fight and was carrying tales, and couldn't so much as shy a stone without flapping its arm like a rag in the wind was no use for anything.

So when this one came to the steading at West Inch I was not best pleased to see her. I was twelve at the time (it was in the holidays) and she eleven, a thin, tallish girl, with black eyes and the queerest ways. She was forever staring out in front of her, with her lips parted as if she saw something wonderful; but when I came behind her and looked the same way I could see nothing but the sheep's trough or the midden or father's breeches hanging on a clothes-line. And then if she saw a lump of heather or bracken, or any common stuff of that sort, she would mope over it as if it had struck her sick, and cry, "How sweet! how perfect!" just as though it had been a painted picture. When I used to tell her that she was good for nothing, and that her father was a fool to bring her up like that, she would begin to cry, and say that I was a rude boy, and that she would go home that very night, and never forgive me as long as she lived. But in five minutes she had forgotten all about it. What was strange was that she liked me a deal better than I did her, and she would never leave me alone, but she was always watching me and running after me, and then saying, "Oh, here you are!" as if it were a surprise.

Jim Horscroft was away when Cousin Edie was with us, but he came back the very week she went, and I mind how surprised I was that he should ask any questions or take any interest in a mere lassie. He asked me if she were pretty; and when I said that I hadn't noticed he laughed and called me a mole, and said my eyes would be opened some day. But very soon he came to be interested in something else, and I never gave Edie another thought until one day she just took my life in her hands and twisted it as I could twist this quill.

That was in 1813, after I had left school, when I was already eighteen years of age, with a good forty hairs on my upper lip and every hope of more. I had changed since I left school, and was not so keen on games as I had been, but found myself instead lying about on the sunny side of the braes, with my own lips parted and my eyes staring just the same as Cousin Edie used to do. It had set than my neighbor, but now all that seemed such a little thing, and I yearned and looked up at the big arching sky and down at the flat blue sea, and felt that there was something wanting, but could never lay my tongue to what that something was. And I became quick of temper, too, for my nerves seemed all of a fret; and when my mother would ask me what ailed me, or my father would speak of my turning my hand to work, I would break into such sharp, bitter answers as I have often grieved over since. Ah, a man may have more than one wife, and more than one child, and more than one friend, but he can never have but one mother, so let him cherish her while he may.

Mandan Indian Legend Says Fat Woman Broke Down Only Exit to the Upper World.

The fundamental simplicity of the American aborigine is illustrated best in the Indian myths and legends which have come down to us, asserted Dr. Rudolph Bieder in an address before the Wisconsin Archeological society.

"These myths," Doctor Bieder said, "cannot be translated into pretty phrases, as in that case the simple beauty of the original is lost."

"There is a rather interesting legend concerning the origin of the Mandan tribe. It says that once the Mandans lived underground in a cave from which a large vine grew. One young warrior climbed up this vine one day, and liked the country so well that he induced several of his tribesmen to follow him up the vine into the world outside. Several chiefs and warriors did so, as well as many women, but when a fat woman tried to climb out of the cave, against the counsel of the chiefs, the vine broke and the rest of the Mandan tribe had to remain underground. This fable may account for the fact that the Mandans were a relatively small tribe and also for their antipathy to fat women."

Drink Water When Tired. Dr. Eliza B. Mosher of Brooklyn urged the members of the Women's Medical society of New York state to drink a glass of water at 10 a. m. and others at 3, 4 and 5 p. m. This, she told them, would dilute the products of fatigue which were entering the blood and causing that tired feeling.

Friday, Sept. 17th, four young men and a girl visited Saline and deputy sheriff Cook, after watching them for awhile, placed them under arrest. Four loaded guns were found upon searching them and one of the gang finally admitted they intended to hold up Saline bank. Four men were sentenced to Marquette prison for two years, the girl being held on a disorderly conduct charge.

A deputy sheriff is a good thing to have around sometimes. The last Pinckney bank robbery might have been frustrated if we had had a good live deputy at that time, but for some unfaithful reason we are compelled to wiggle along the best we can without one.

Henry Ahnemiller has just picked a peck of prunes from an old tree in his yard, which never before has borne fruit. The tree was planted many years ago, but had never been given particular care. This year Mr. Ahnemiller has sprayed it carefully and as a result the tree has borne fruit for the first time in its history. It is a German variety of prune quite similar to a plum in appearance.—Chels. a Tribune.

FALL PLOWING

Fall plowing is the most universally effective way of controlling the pests that annually cause great losses to the grain farmer. It is much easier and cheaper, says the Bureau of Entomology, United States Department of Agriculture, to prevent an insect outbreak in this manner than it is to stamp out the infestation, once it is fully developed. The Hessian fly, so destructive to wheat, is one of the insects that can hardly be eradicated once it is established in the crop. Plowing is recommended because it breaks up the soil and destroys the grubs and pupae of many insects by exposing them to the sun and air.
