Vol. XXXVIII

Pinckney, Livingston County, Michigan, Thursday, February 10, 1921

UNANIMOUS FOR EDISON SERVICE

A Single Ballot in the Heaviest Vote Ever Cast in Pinckney was Against Franchise

Village to Have Streets Lighted Again in Thirty Days After Three Years of Darkness

Pinckney went on record Thursday with a total of 200 votes, the largest number by far that has ever been cast at any previous village election, unanimously for the Edison service. Only one vote was uncounted, having evidently been marked to vote both Yes and No by mistake.

After the election the common council held a meeting and a contract was given the Edison Company's representative, H. M. Thompson, for the street lighting. The work of installing the necessary equipment is to begin at once and it is expected that within thirty days the streets of Pinckney will be properly illuminated after having been dark for nearly three years.

SCHOOL NOTES

Due to vaccination several people were absent from classes, causing attendance to be very low for last week. The following people were absent: Irene Warner, 6 half days, Margaret Driver 2, Edward Tiplady 1, Weldon Cappel 2, Gerald McCluskey 4, Gilbert Campbell 5, Agnes Carr 1, Cynthia Hanes 2, Eleanor Chambers 2, Irene Richardson 10, Georgia Fitzsimmons 8, Harold Clinton 8, Gladys Maebon 8, M. L. Hinchey 4, J. C. Bowman, 4, L. J. Henry 2, Henry Stackable 2.

The second semester's work is well under headway. Last semester's tests show that out of 300 tests given, 12 failures were recorded. This is a fair record, however parents should endeavor to find the cause of such failures, and many times by co-operating with the school, such conditions may be avoided.

Rita and Emmet Roche got 100 in attendance for the first semester, Russell Read 99.5, Loretta Roche, 99, and Stanley Dinkel, 98.5.

Phyllis Plummer spelled down her class Monday.

The B class, 1st grade, are getting well started in their first reader.

The next question for debate is Resolved—That the Michigan legislature should pass a law reviving capital punishment.

The school was well entertained last Tuesday morning by Prof. and Mr. Douglas.

The list now being compiled will be the February issue of a regular Quarterly List gotten out by the College.

By far the largest gathering of farmers ever brought together in Michigan for a meeting of its kind assembled at East Lansing from January 31 to February 4 during the annual Farmers' Week at M. A. C. Agricultural men from every part of the state were among the crowd of visitors, a check of registration placing the attendance well above 5,000.

Favorable weather all through the early part of the week played a large part in bringing in the farmers. Meetings of the sixteen associations and conferences held during the week were all crowded, the State Farm Bureau, of course, drawing the biggest attendance at its annual business meeting on Feb. 3 and 4.

Educational exhibits covering every phase of agricultural work proved to be among the most popular features of the program. Farm crops, horticulture, animal husbandry, dairy products, mechanics, soils, and other major divisions of the agricultural field were represented by graphically presented exhibits bearing upon vital problems of production and distribution. The present demand for improved marketing machinery and facilities to distribute farm products was reflected in the displays, the keynote or central theme of which was based on "Marketing."

That farm credit is the crux of the whole agricultural problem of today, with allied questions of distribution and marketing demanding attention was the outstanding thought expressed by agricultural authorities of national reputation who addressed the big general meetings of the M. A. C. Farmers of Pinckney and the Clinton Lighting Company—a contest that has been long drawn out and punctuated frequently with arguments that have sometimes resulted in unpleasant incriminations and bitterness. As is usually the case, in this instance both parties of the controversy have been losers—the citizens have been compelled to grope around in darkness for three years and Mr. R. Clinton, proprietor of the lighting company is out of pocket the considerable revenue that might have accrued if the streets had been lighted.

Now, however, the matter is settled. So let's bury the hatchet, forget the past differences and get together and work for the best interests of the community. The way is now fully opened for Pinckney to forge ahead. We are ready to offer inducements to manufacturing plants, and it is no longer necessary to make excuses for the dark streets.

To Dr. C. L. Sigler, Village President, and every member of the Common Council great credit is due for the manner in which they have steadfastly and consistently protected the interests of the village during the time the question has been unsettled. Many citizens have also taken an active part in upholding the village, part in the controversy, and we wish to call especial attention to the efforts of G. W. Teeple and Rev. J. A. Crowe. Mr. Teeple's testimony and private talk with the State Utilities Board carried great weight with that body, whose final action made it possible for the Edison Company to enter the village. Rev. Crowe has used his great influence in the community to secure its rights and in this way he has further cemented the man that bind him to the people of this village. His activities in their behalf

Foster City, Mich.—At the age of fifteen I went through an operation for appendicitis and our doctor said that I would be relieved of other distressing symptoms also, but it was of no help. FORMER ARMY HEAD SAYS VALUE OF INVESTIGATION SPOILED BY PARTISANSHIP.

DECLARES QUIZ WASTE OF TIME

Reminds Committee of Disgraceful Government Waste That Could Be Investigated Here.

Washington—Turning sharply upon house war investigating committees as a whole, Charles G. Dawes, former head of army supply procurement service in France, told one of them that the value of their work had been rendered useless through injection of partisan politics.

"I bitterly resent this effort to reflect upon the entire army because some poor devil blundered in Switzerland," he shouted. "You cannot put a blotch on the army. What the hell did we go in for—to steal money? It was not a Republican or a Democratic war. It was an American war and yet as a rule these committees try to bring in partisan politics.

"You could use your time investigating to a better advantage right here trying to save disgraceful government waste. You could save more money for the people. But as to France, you haven't got evidence to make a case if one existed, and I don't believe it does."

Representative Flood, Democrat, Virginia, told General Dawes his idea of investigation was to draw a lesson for the future; if bad administration was shown to say so, and if there was fraud and graft to find it and see that the guilty were punished.

"Yes," General Dawes replied, "but don't let this thing go before the people as a partisan fight. Everybody wants to hear something bad about somebody else. I am not here to make charges that would blacken the name

mother of the first American soldier killed in France, who gives entire credit for recovery of her health to the well-known medicine Tanlac.

The following remarkable endorsement of Tanlac was given recently by Mrs. Alice Gresham Dodd, at the Gresham Memorial Home, Gavin Park, Evansville, Ind., which home was presented to her by the patriotic people of Indiana, as evidence of their appreciation of the services rendered to his country by her son, Corporal James B. Gresham, the first American soldier killed in France. Expressions of sympathy were received by Mrs. Dodd from all parts of the United States, and the newspapers of the country carried the story of the first "war mother."

The shock of her son's death resulted in the serious breakdown of Mrs. Dodd's health, but everyone will learn with interest and pleasure that she is now in splendid health again. When seen at her home recently she made the following statement, giving entire credit for her recovery to the well-known medicine Tanlac. "After my son's death I had a general breakdown in health," said Mrs. Dodd. "At first it was just indigestion. My food used to upset me and I had to diet myself very carefully, which wasn't much hardship, as I lost all desire to eat. Then I had an attack of rheumatism, with severe pains in my shoulders, back and arms. Sometimes I used to suffer a great deal, and my joints would get all swollen up and stiff. I was able to do very little about the house, and at times couldn't even cook a meal. I got very nervous and restless, and at night would lay awake for hours, and lost many a night's sleep as a consequence.

"A friend of mine had received a great deal of help from Tanlac, and it was she who advised me to try it. I am so glad I did for it proved the best medicine I have ever taken. It soon gave me a good appetite and seemed to settle my stomach so that I was no longer troubled with indigestion. I don't know what it is to have rheumatic pains now, the swelling and stiffness has all gone out of my joints and I am able to do the work of the house with the greatest ease. My nerves are now steady and strong. I sleep fine at night, and I feel better in health than ever before in my life. I shall always be grateful for what Tanlac has done for me, and shall recommend it every chance I get."

Tanlac is sold by leading druggists everywhere.—Adv.

Catarrhal Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result. BEULAH AND JIM. Synopsis.—Disheartened because of the seemingly barren outlook of his position as a school teacher in a Canadian town, John Harris determines to leave it, take up land in Manitoba and become a "homesteader." Mary, the girl whom he loves, declares she will accompany him. They are married and set out for the unknown country. Alec McCrae, pioneer settler and adviser of newcomers, proves an invaluable friend. Leaving his wife with the family of a fellow settler, Fred Arthur, Harris and McCrae journey over the prairie and select a homestead. Mary insists on accompanying him when he takes possession, and they begin their life work of making the prairie fertile farm land. Returning from selling his first crop, Harris finds his wife despondent almost to insanity from loneliness, and with the definite expectation of becoming a mother. A son is born to them to whom they give the name of Allan.

CHAPTER IV.

In the Spell of the Mirage. A quarter of a century is a short time as world history goes, but it is a considerable era in the life of the Canadian west. More things—momentous things—than can be hinted at in this narrative occurred in the 25 years following the great Inrush of 1882. The boundless prairie reaches of Manitoba were now comparatively well settled, and the tide of immigration, which after a dozen years' stagnation, had set in again in greater flood than ever, was now sweeping over the newer by any work of man, was pierced and broken with elevators, villages, and farm buildings, and the whiff of coal smoke was blown down the air which had so lately known only the breath of the prairies.

Mary, Harris hurried about her capacious kitchen, deep in preparation of the evening meal. The years had taken toll of the freshness of her young beauty; the shoulders, in mute testimony to much hard labor of the hand, had drooped forward over the deepening chest; the hair was thinner, and farther back above the forehead, and streaked with gray at the temples; the mouth lacked the rosy sensuousness of youth, and sat now in a mold, half of resolution, half submission. Yet her foot had lost little of its sprightliness, and the sympathy in her fine eyes seemed to have deepened with the years.

A moist but appetizing steam rose from the vegetable pots on the range, and when she threw back the iron door to feed more coal the hot glow from within danced in reflection along the bright row of utensils hanging from the wall, and even sought out the brass plate on the cream separator at the far end of the big room. Through the screen door came the monotonously redundant click . . . . . clank of the windmill, and a keen ear might have caught the light splash of water as it fell in the wooden horse troughs from the iron nozzle of the pump.

Mary stuck a fork in a potato to ascertain if the "bone" was all gone, meanwhile shielding her face from the steam with the pot lid, held aloft in an aproned hand. Having satisfied herself that the meal was making satisfactory progress, she stepped to the door and sent a quick look across the fields, to where a streak of black smoke was scrawled along the sky.

"Beulah," she called, turning toward the interior part of the house. "Come, Beulah, set the table. They're coming from the field."

In a moment a girl of twenty, plainly attired in a neat calico dress, entered the kitchen. She was fresh and beautiful as her mother had been that first summer in the sod house on the bench, and something in her appearance suggested that with her mother's beauty and fine sensibility she had inherited the indomitable spirit which had made John Harris one of the most prosperous farmers in the district. She moved in an easy, unconscious grace of self-reliance—a reliance that must be just a little irritating to men of old-fashioned notions concerning woman's dependence on the sterner sex—drew the long wooden table, with its covering of white oil cloth, into the center of the kitchen, and began placing the dishes in position.

and his hair, too, was streaked with gray, but every muscle in his great body seemed to bulge with strength. His face was brown with the prairie sun and wind of 25 summers, and lines of worry and care had cut their tracings about the mouth and eyes. Beside him stood Allan, his only son, straighter and lithier of figure, but almost equally powerful. The younger man was, indeed, a replica of the older, and although they had their disagreements, constant association had developed a fine comradeship, and, on the part of the son, a loyalty equal to any strain. The hired man, Jim, was lighter and finer of feature, and his white teeth gleamed against the nut-brown of his face in a quiet smile that refused to be displaced in any emergency, and at times left the beholder in considerable doubt as to the real emotions working behind.

The men all wore blue overalls, dark blue or gray shirts, and heavy boots. They were guiltless of coat or vest, and tossed their light straw hats on the water bench as they passed. There was a quick splashing of greasy hands at the wash basin, followed by a more effectual rubbing on a towel made from a worn-out grain sack. The hired man paused to change the water and wash his face, but the others proceeded at once to the table, where no time was lost in ceremony. Harris helped himself generously to meat and vegetables and having done so, passed the platters to his son, and in this way they were circulated about the table. There was no talk for the first few minutes, only the sound of knife and fork plied vigorously and interchangeably by father and son, and

Harris had long ago recognized the truth that the destiny of food was the mouth, and whether conveyed on knife or fork made little difference. Mary, too, had found a carelessness of little details both of manner and speech coming over her, as her occasional "ain't" betrayed, but since Jim had joined their table she had been on her guard. Jim seldom said anything, but always that quiet smile lay like a mask over his real emotions.

When the first insistent demands of appetite had been appeased, Harris, resting both elbows on the table, with knife and fork trained on opposite corners of the ceiling, straightened himself somewhat and remarked:

"Allan an' me's goin' to town tonight; anything you want from Sempster's store, Mary?"

"That lets me in for the cows," said Beulah. "You were in town night before last, too, and it was 9:30 before I got well milked."

"Oh, well, Jim was away that night," said Allan.

"Jim has enough to do, without milking cows after hours," returned the girl. "What do you want to go to town for again tonight, anyway?"

"Got to get more coal," said Harris. "We'll take two teams, an' it'll be late when we get back."

"I think it's all nonsense, this day-an'-night work," persisted Beulah. "Is there never going to be any let-up on it?"

"Beulah, you forget yourself," said her father. "If you'd more to do you'd have less time to fret about it. Your mother did more work in one summer than you have in all your life, an' she's doin' more yet."

"Oh, Beulah's a good help," interposed Mary. "I hope she never has to work like I did."

"I guess the work never hurt us," said Harris, helping himself to preserved strawberries. "Just the same, I'm glad to see you gettin' it a bit easier. But this younger generation—it beats me what we're comin' to. Thinkin' about nothin' but fun and gaddin' to town every night or two. And clo'es—Beulah there's got more clo'es than there were in the whole Plainville settlement the first two or three years."

"I got more neighbors, too," interjected the girl. Then springing up, she stood behind her father's chair and put her arm around his neck.

burned, but with the dawn of the "better times" there came a gradual shifting of standards and a new conception of essentials. The crops of the early years were unprofitable on account of the great distance to market; later, when the railway came to their doors, the crops were still unprofitable, owing to falling prices and diminishing yields due to poor cultivation. Then came a decade during which those who stayed in the country stayed because they could not get out, and it became a current saying that the more land a man farmed the deeper he got in debt.

Then came the swing of the pendulum. No one knows just what started it prosperityward. Some said it was that the farmers, disheartened with wheat growing, were applying themselves to stock, and certain it is that in "mixed farming" the community eventually found its salvation; others attributed the change to improved agricultural implements, to improved methods of farming, to greater knowledge of prairie conditions, to reductions in the cost of transportation and enlarged facilities for marketing, or to increasing world demand and higher world prices for the product of the farm. But whatever the causes—and no doubt all of the above contributed—the fact gradually dawned upon the settlers that land—their land—was worth money.

It was the farmers from the United States, scouting for cheaper lands than were available in their own communities, who first drove the conviction home. They came with money in their wallets; they were actually prepared to exchange real money for land. Such a thing had never before been heard of in Plainville district.

But a few transactions took place; lands were sold at five dollars, six dollars, eight dollars an acre. The farmers began to realize that land represented wealth—that it was an asset, not a liability—and there was a rush for the cheap railway lands that had so long gone a-begging. Harris was among the first to sense the change in the times, and a beautiful section of railway land that lay next to his homestead he bought at four dollars an acre. The first crop more than paid for the land, and Harris suddenly found himself on the way to riches. The joy that came with the realization that fortune had knocked at his door and he had heard was the controlling emotion of his heart for a year or more. But gradually, like a fog blown across a moonlit night, came a sense of chill and disappointment. If only he had bought two sections! If at least he had proved up on his pre-emption, which he might have had for nothing! He saw neighbors about him adding quarter to quarter. None of them had done better than himself, but some had done as well. And in some way the old sense of oneness, the old community interest which had held the little band of pioneers together amid their privations and their poverty, began to weaken and dissolve, and in its place came an individualism and a materialism that measured progress only in dollars and cents. Harris did not know that his gods had fallen, that his ideals had been swept away; even as he sat at supper this summer evening, with his daughter's arm about his neck, he felt that he was still bravely, persistently, pressing on toward the goal, all unaware that years ago he had left that goal like a lighthouse on a rocky shore, and was now sweeping along with the turbulent tide of Mammonism. He still saw the light ahead, but it was now a phantom of the imagination. He said, "When I am worth ten thousand I will have reached it;" when he was worth ten thousand he found the faithless light had moved on to twenty-five thousand. He said, "When I am worth twenty-five thousand I will have reached it;" when he was worth twenty-five thousand he saw the glow still ahead, beckoning him on to fifty thousand. To stop newly, mean losing sight of his goal, and John Harris held nothing in heaven or earth so great as his attainment.

So, gently enough, he disengaged his daughter's arm and finished his supper in silence. As soon as it was ended the men started for the barn, and in a few minutes two wagons rattled noisily down the trail.

Beulah helped with the supper dishes, and then came out with the milk pails to the corral where the cows, puffing and chewing, complacently awaited her arrival. But she had not reached the gate when the hired man was at her side and had slipped one of the pails from her arm.

"Now, Jim, I don't think that's fair at all," she said; and there was a tremor in her voice that vexed her. "Here you're slaving all day with coal and water, and I think that's enough, without milking cows at night."

But Jim only smiled and stirred a cow into position.

There was a tuneful song of the tin pails as the white streams rattled on their bottoms.

"Here I've slaved and saved until I'm an old woman."

SONGS THAT ARE IMMORTAL

Greatest Minds of All the Ages Bestowed Their Labors on the Poems of Homer.

The Iliad and Odyssey were probably sung by Homer about a century and a half after the destruction of the town of Troy following the ten years of war that was waged in the cause of Menelaus, king of Lacedaemon, whose consort had been carried away by the son of the Trojan monarch. The two poems are as old as David's psalms. Originally the Iliad would appear not to have been a single connected poem, but to have attained at a later period its present complete state.

About one hundred years after Homer, Lycurgus, the lawgiver of Lacedaemon, brought these poems into Greece, and two centuries and a half later Pindarus is supposed to have of reciting rhapsodies at the Panathenae, or festival of the tutelary goddess. A more complete edition of the Homeric poems, from which the modern ones are taken, was prepared for Alexander the Great by Aristotle, which the former used to keep under his pillow in a golden case. Also Aratus, the astronomer, Aristarchus of Samos, and Aristophanes, librarian at Alexandria, bestowed their labor on these immortal songs. Because of the fine moral sentiment, Homer became the pattern of Thucydides, the favorite author of the greatest and noblest men, and one of the best teachers of the wisdom of human life.—Detroit News.

Boy and a Sermon.

The way of a boy with a sermon is thus:

Composes himself with a deep sigh, listens attentively for three minutes, in unimpeachable form. Cautiously reaches hymn book from rack; drops it; recovers it; reads hymns for five minutes. Explores trousers pocket and examines with deep interest one magnet, two nails, three pencil stubs and several bits of unclassified junk. Drops something and hunts under seat until discovered. Sighs heavily; inspects all the stained glass windows and the overhead architecture and decorations. Puts sole of left foot against back of pew in front, at level of knee, and is highly surprised when foot drops noisily. Repeats same exercise with right foot with the same result. Sits still and gratefully sucks peppermint offered by merciful aunt. Sighs heavily. Experiments to see what will happen if he presses on his Adam's apple while head is extended forward; strange choking sound ensues, immediately suppressed by domestic authority.—Life.

Moths Take Big Chances.

The high-flying species of morpho which inhabit the mountainous districts of western America, are much easier captured than those which frequent the plains, though their capture is often attended with difficulty and danger, says the American Forestry Magazine of Washington. One naturalist hunting moths and butterflies in Bogota, fell over a precipice and broke his arm, and then found that he had three days' journey to make on horseback before he could meet with a doctor to set it. Another naturalist, who was collecting in Bolivia found that morpho godartii, Guer., a beautiful species, of a rather light blue which was previously almost unknown to entomologists, frequented an inaccessible ledge in the mountains; he was obliged to have himself lowered by ropes over the precipice before he could obtain it.

Fifty-Fifty. Ward's latest collection in the dog line was a young puppy which his father compelled him to put in the barn for the night. It waited the whole night through and next morning Ward's father said indignantly: "Ward, you get rid of that pup. It howled all night and I did not get a bit of sleep." With eyes full of indignation the little boy replied: "Well, papa, you got as much sleep as the pup did."

PROMINENT MEN EXPRESS FAVOR FOR COUNTY HOME RULE

In order to show how the proposed amendment to the State Constitution to permit Home Rule reorganization of county government has aroused enthusiastic support throughout the entire state the following comments information of those interested: "With the rapidly increasing burden of taxes some plan must be devised for reducing expenses. Most any method of county administration is better than the present cumbersome and expensive board of supervisors method. Political control always has been and always will be expensive. The multiplicity of boards and commissions of one kind and another has created a vast army of non-producers whose work is practically valueless to the community and state. Fewer and more conscientious and efficient officers would mean a lessening of the tax burden. This has been abundantly proved in the numerous cities throughout the country which are being operated under the managerial form of government. Having proved such a success in the cities, it is time now to try the system out in the next larger political unit, which is the county."

F. L. BALDWIN,
Editor Escanaba Journal.

"You have taken up a real vital subject in your effort to establish a different form of county government. Much has been said about reforms in city government, but County affairs have been conducted very much the same since Michigan became a State. In my official position, I am daily impressed with the lack of co-ordination and co-operation in the conduct of the county business."

CORNELIUS HOFFIUS,
Prosecuting Attorney, Kent Co.

"Michigan county government is something like the kitchen of a miserly housewife. It has the utensils the adoption of which from time to time has been forced by necessity—and to that extent is up-to-date—but also it has all the original tin pans, the worn-out brooms, the useless stove-lifters and the makeshift bins whose purpose to begin with has been forgotten. That government is more a miscellany than a business institution. It is rich in historical traditions and poverty-stricken as a plant operated without any clear idea as to efficiency."

act promptly and effectively to restore weak, overworked or diseased kidneys and bladder to a healthy condition.

Mrs. Robert Blair, 481 S. 20th Street, Terre Haute, Ind., writes: "I suffered two years with kidney and bladder trouble frequently getting backache. Mornings I would arise feeling very tired and having headaches, and see floating specks before my eyes. I saw Foley Kidney Pills advertised and made up my mind to try them. After taking them a few weeks I found my troubles dispelled. The backache stopped and my kidneys were restored to healthy, normal action. I am also free of those tired spells and headaches and my vision is no longer blurred. My recovery is entirely due to Foley Kidney Pills, which I gladly recommend."

A STRANGE STORY

Detroit, Mich.—"When I was about twenty-three years of age I suffered from general breakdown, due to worry and overwork. I was also troubled with catarrh. My appetite became erratic, indigestion resulted and constipation followed. After seven months of suffering my wife had me use Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, Pleasant Pellets and Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy, and in spite of the physicians' predictions, and my own doubts, I gradually began to feel better, and in less than three months I was well."—HARRY VANDERBURG, 318 Euclid Ave.

FURTHER USE FOR RADIUM SEES HIMSELF IN SPOTLIGHT

Its Employment in Pottery is Said to Be Productive of Results of Great Benefit.

Bachelor is Naturally Wondering If That is How the Ladies Really Regard Him.

Water containing radioactive compounds is used as a curative agent for certain illnesses. Mere contact with such compounds for a sufficient length of time will make water slightly radioactive.

Pottery is now manufactured which has in it a small percentage of radioactive material. This is mixed with the clay and baked in the kiln. Water left in pottery of this nature for a short time will become radioactive by "induction," and a health-giving drink is made.

Such water may also be employed in the watering of plants with good results, since the presence of a radioactive compound near the roots of a plant is very helpful to its growth.—Popular Science Monthly.

A Terre Haute bachelor stopped at a friend's house the other night to get him to accompany him to a community meeting. The friend was a "much married" man and his spouse did not wish him to go to the lecture. So she told her husband so.

They were in the next room and her husband was afraid the bachelor might hear her and he did not desire for the other man to think that he was so henpecked. So he raised a warning hand at his wife. But she continued in a voice louder than ever. "I don't care if he does hear. If there's anything that makes me tired it is some old bachelor going around clattering up the earth."

The bachelor was startled. What he wants to know now is whether or not all women regard him in the same light.—Indianapolis News.

BAD COLDS AND KIDNEY TROUBLE KEEP HIM UP AND AWAKE ALL NIGHT

Always Had Cold and Cough—Had Kidney Trouble Years.

"THEN I FOUND A QUICK, SURE REMEDY"

"For several years I suffered with weak kidneys and would be forced to get up often during the night. I did like everybody else and tried all sorts of medicines. Still I didn't get relief, and then for one solid year I had a very bad cough and throat trouble. It seemed like I had a cold and cough all the time. I would cough so at night that I couldn't sleep, and then every little while I'd have to get up on account of my kidneys. Then several months ago I saw Hypo-Cod advertised. I saw where the druggists were saying it was the 'last word' in modern medicine, so I got a bottle. The first bottle took right hold, and I was amazed the way it worked. I took three bottles altogether and since then my kidneys haven't troubled me at all. The cough began fading away and in no time I was going to bed and resting fine throughout the night. Just ask the lady I board with how I eat. She said—'For the sake of the grocery bill stop taking Hypo-Cod.' I couldn't possibly be better pleased, and I can't praise Earle's Hypo-Cod too high." declared Arthur H. Carrier, 252 N. Van Buren St., Bay City, Mich.

Just as soon as you get the system toned up and in good shape all those minor troubles disappear. Nature throws off such things like water off a duck's back. Kidney trouble with most people is—they are weak and too weak to ward off or prevent the minor troubles.

Earle's Hypo-Cod has worked wonders for thousands. There is no reason why it should not do it for everybody. It is nice to take. It is powerful, palatable, and more modern. Results come days and weeks sooner. The formula is approved by leading physicians in this country (see label). The name, Earle Chemical Co., is a guarantee of finest quality in medicine. Why anybody should linger along any longer nobody knows.

Drop in at the nearest high class drug store. The cost shouldn't make a person suffer a single day. Your druggist has genuine Earle's Hypo-Cod. Get a bottle tonight.—Adv.

Important to all Women Readers of this Paper

Thousands upon thousands of women have kidney or bladder trouble and never suspect it. Women's complaints often prove to be nothing else but kidney trouble, or the result of kidney or bladder disease. If the kidneys are not in a healthy condition, they may cause the other organs to become diseased. You may suffer pain in the back, headache, and loss of ambition.

"I have taken only two boxes of Eatonic and feel like a new man. It has done me more good than anything else," writes C. O. Frappin.
 Eatonic is the modern remedy for acid stomach, bloating, food repeating and indigestion. It quickly takes up and carries out the acidity and gas and enables the stomach to digest the food naturally. That means not only relief from pain and discomfort but

MONEY IN BREEDING MUSSELS

United States Fisheries Bureau Reports That a Profit May Conscientiously Be Looked For.

EVERYTHING WAS ALL RIGHT

Judge Couldn't Be Spilling the Water When He Didn't Use Any Soap in the Bath.

A serious inconvenience is caused in Australia by the lack of spring water that a money profit is consequently promised.

To produce in this way 1,000 baby mussels costs about 20 cents. When they are full grown 13,000 of them will weigh a ton. Thus the cost of producing a ton of pearly mussels of market size (if all survived) would be, as exactly reckoned, $2.68. Assuming a loss of 50 per cent, the cost would be $5.36.

Pearly mussels occasionally yield valuable pearls, but commercially it is the shells, utilizable for mother-of-pearl, that are importantly to be considered.

The fisheries bureau has devoted its attention wholly to the propagation of superior varieties of mussels, the shells of which have at present time a market value of $35 a ton.

Naturally, toward the breaking up of the dry season, water becomes very precious.

A judge, on circuit, arriving at a bush shanty, asked for a bath. Such a luxury was naturally refused, as there was only a little water left at the bottom of the tank reserved for drinking purposes, says the author of "Quaint Acquaintances."

When dinner was ready, as the judge could not be found, the landlord went to call him; whereupon a muffled voice issued from the tank, where the judge was bathing!

The landlord, justly furious, roundly abused his guest.

"Do not excite yourself," the latter observed, calmly. "I am not spilling the water, for I am not using any soap!"

THEY NEED MONEY

Just imagine yourself in their predicament and ask yourself if you too, would not need it. And we are sure, knowing the community as well as we do, that every man or woman who owes this concern—the oldest mercantile firm in this part of the county—will come down this week and pay their accounts in full if possible. If this is not possible, give them what you can on account, and if you are not just at present in a position to do either, you surely can come down and give them a hearty, sympathetic handshake and tell them you will do the best you can as quickly as possible.

The future of this concern is largely in your hands at the present critical time. What are you going to do about it?
