THE OLD PINCKNEY MILL

As the wrecking of the old mill is now about completed, by request the Dispatch reprints the history of its building, written by the late J. T. Eaman and published in this paper in June 1918, also some verses written in June 1921 by Winfield Lionel Scott.

OLD MILL AT PINCKNEY

In Memory of Samuel Sykes, Miller 1850-1864

The wheel is still, but the race sings on.
A soothing song to the resting mill
Empty the hopper, the miller gone.
He lies asleep on the sunlight hill.
The mill a dreamer, idle and lone.
But the race sings on at its own sweet will

Sing softly and low, thou olden race—
A lullaby stealing up to the hill;
Each quiet sleeper in his resting place.
Mayhap to dream like the idle mill
Of yester-years forever gone,
While the race sings on—the race sings on.

O, land with glim'ring radiance filled;
All bloom and balm, and trill of bird;
The ambient air is music thrilled
And through it all sweet tones are heard.
For each glad hour till day is done—
The race sings on—the race sings on.

Along the west, a rosy sunset fleece.
Lights apace the city on the hill
Till twilight in its restful peace
Wraps stream and vale and dreaming mill.
In lessened flow and monotone—
The race sings on—the race sings on.

OBITUARY

ALBERT G. WILSON

Albert Gallatin Wilson was born July 20, 1844 in the village of West Greenville, Mercer County, Pennsylvania. His parents, Samuel and Emily Wilson, moved to Michigan in 1855, when Albert was eleven years old and settled on a farm near Dansville, Michigan, temporarily. A year later they came to Putnam township as a permanent home.

For more than sixty-four years Albert G. Wilson has lived among the people and amid the surroundings of Putnam. In those sixty-odd years of activity and success he got to know, and be known by, the generation that was building Livingston county. Though public life was distasteful to him, his capacity for making individual friendships and retaining them over the years, brought to him, in his last days, a priceless return of sympathy and good will. Few persons of his age are so fortunate as he was in keeping the friendships of young men forty years his junior. Through them he continued a keen interest in a younger world, and his judgments as well as his outlook on life remained, to a striking degree, that of a younger man. He was confident that the world is growing better and he expected that each year would be a finer one than the last. His optimism was mixed with a calm courage and an absolute confidence in the ultimate triumph of Truth and Right.

He was the only survivor of the pioneer company that came overland from Pennsylvania to Michigan together.

I have mentioned Samuel Marble as the first settler of Pinckney and the only person living there when my father came in 1835. While this is true,

Samuel Peterson was the first settler in 1828; James Pullen in 1831 on Section 25 and Jacob Sigler on Section 35 in 1833. A study of these yearly entries discloses a remarkable fact that between 1835 and 1837 near-

Plains but few are left. Mr. James Marble and Mr. Wilson, were, for several years past, the only remaining members of the neighborhood group of men that worked and played together for a generation.

It was October 14th, 1866 that Albert G. Wilson and Sarah Bullis were married. Almost fifty-three years of happy married life was theirs. Five children were born to them and grew to maturity. The first and only break in the family circle is the death of the husband and father. Those of the immediate family who remain to mourn the loss and venerate the memory of the deceased are Mrs. Sarah R. Wilson two daughters, Mrs. Louis E. Howlett and Miss Mollie E. Wilson, three sons, Dr. Norman D. Wilson, Lucius E. Wilson, and Samuel Wilson, and twelve grandchildren.

Death came to Albert G. Wilson at his home in Putnam at eleven o'clock in the evening of Tuesday, July 6th, 1921.

JAMES HEFFERNAN

James Heffernan was born in Unadilla township May 17, 1875, and passed away on Monday morning July 4, 1921, at the age of 46 years, 1 month, and 17 days, after many months of pain and suffering.

He was unmarried and has always lived (with the exception of two and one half years which were spent at Detroit) with his mother.

There are left to mourn their loss his aged mother, one sister, Mrs. Kate Lane of Ann Arbor, many other relatives, and a host of friends.

The funeral was held Wednesday morning July 6th, at St. Mary's Church, Pinckney, Rev. Fr. Crowe officiating. Burial in St. Mary's cemetery, Pinckney.

MURDER Baffles POLICE OFFICERS

SOO, ONT., FARMER IS SHOT TO DEATH BY MEN WHO ENTER HOME DURING NIGHT.

WIFE FLEES, CALLS NEIGHBORS

Assailants Fire Upon Woman and Bullet Grazes Arm as She Jumps Through Window.

Saulte Ste. Marie, Mich.—The bloody imprint of a human hand on a farm fence rail is the principal clue being followed by Canadian mounted police and Dominion constables following the murder of Albert Gough in his bedroom at his farm home near here on the morning of July 7. Another clue is the fact that two strange men hired a livery rig prior to the murder, promising to return it shortly, and the horse returned alone in the morning.

One of the men had used a flash light while helping hitch up the horse, and this flash light is thought to be the same one which was used in the Gough home when the murder took place.

Mr. Gough was shot to death by three bullets fired from a 38-caliber gun which was equipped with a silencer, and Mrs. Gough, who was sleeping with her husband, was shot through the arm as she fled through a window to neighbors, where she summoned help. The circumstances of the shooting are not very clear, but Mrs. Gough, who was not seriously hurt, was able to tell a fairly connected story of the events of the night.

"Our house is a one-story brick building," Mrs. Gough said. "We went to bed at 11 o'clock. It must have been about two o'clock when something awoke me. I don't know what it was. I could hear a lot of whispering, keeping up continually. We always close the bedroom door before going to sleep and when I awoke it seemed to me that the door was open.

"I sat up in bed alarmed and put my hand on the railing at the foot of the bed, and my fingers touched the hand of a man, whose face I could not see in the dark. I imme-

WORLD TO DISARM

WAY TO END FUTURE WARS IS POINTED OUT BY PRESIDENT TO WORLD POWERS.

WASHINGTON SCENE OF ACTION

If Proposal is Accepted, National Capital May Be Scene of New World Congress.

Washington.—President Harding has made an armament reduction proposal to the great powers so broad in its scope that it constitutes a move toward a new order of world affairs.

The state department has announced that the president has proposed to Great Britain, France, Italy and Japan a conference in Washington not only on the "limitation of armaments," but on a settlement of the Pacific and far eastern problems.

If the proposal is accepted, Washington will be the scene of a new world congress, rivaling in importance that of Paris in 1919.

The conference, as proposed by the president, would consider not only a settlement of the issues which might precipitate war between the United States and Japan, but a re-shaping of the policies and relations of all the nations bordering the Pacific ocean, upon which Mr. Harding deems a permanent reduction of armament largely dependent.

Out of this conference, if held, may come a new international understanding on affairs in the Pacific and far east which will obviate any necessity of a renewal of the Anglo-Japanese alliance, a question now embarrassing the British government. So prominent is this possibility that the question is raised whether the British government has not already approved, if it did not originate, the suggestion that the far eastern and Pacific problems be considered by the conference on reduction of armament.

Out of the conference also may come President Harding's plan for an association of nations to preserve world peace and promote the Pacific adjudication of international disputes. Altogether, the step taken by the president is not only the most important

Adrian—James Powers, a Fairfield township farmer, whose land extends into Fulton county, Ohio, didn't move quite fast enough from one state to the other when Ohio deputies confiscated his still and a quantity of mash, while Lenawee county officers, on the other side of the line, waited for him to come across, where they placed him under arrest.

Howell—Liquor, dripping from an auto aroused the suspicion of two Howell boys Wednesday and resulted in the arrest of A. C. Kaiser and Gilbert Van Meter, both of Detroit, on a charge of transporting liquor. The boys notified Sheriff Teasle. The two men were caught in Fowlerville after a chase by the sheriff. Fifty quarts of whiskey was confiscated.

Colon—Fred Teadt, escaping from officers who sought to arrest him, fled into a swamp where he fell into a quagmire and was rapidly sinking in the soft ooze when rescued by pursuers. It required the efforts of several 15 minutes to extricate him from the engulfing mire. Teadt is charged with driving two automobiles with but one set of license plates.

Kalamazoo—Harry Knowles, under arrest here charged with attempted blackmail, confessed, the sheriff says, that he wrote a letter to A. H. Pratt, president of the King Paper Co., demanding $50,000 or Pratt's life. Officers placed a dummy package where the $50,000 was to be left. They say Knowles was arrested as he crept out of a clump of bushes to seize the package.

Monroe—By an unanimous vote, board of supervisors opposed the action of the state board of agriculture in discharging Monroe county agent, M. C. Thomas. It was also requested in the resolution that Mr. Thomas be re-instated as county agricultural agent until such time when the board of agriculture will grant Thomas and the Monroe county farm bureau a hearing.

Both bodies were recovered.

Kalamazoo—In answer to the call of Mrs. Fred Workman, who telephoned that her brother had committed suicide, a squad of policemen, with a doctor, was rushed to the Workman home. All the evidence they found of a suicide was a little note reading: "Goodbye, Ralph." Ralph Oakwood, the brother, was later found nonchalantly walking along the street. He indignantly denied he was dead or intended taking his own life. He explained he left his sister's home suddenly and, in her absence, scribbled the note in lieu of a verbal farewell.

Detroit.—The General Motors corporation has begun suit in federal court here to recover approximately $490,000 from Edward VerLinden, Lansing, who until his dismissal last May, was general manager of the Olds Motor works division of General Motors.

The immediate cause of the suit was the action of Mr. VerLinden, it is claimed, in countersigning, as assistant treasurer, April 20, 1921, a check of the Olds Motors works division, to his own order, on the City National bank of Lansing for $490,000, upon which was endorsed the notation, "Loan to Edward VerLinden pending settlement of amounts due him from the corporation."

MAY SOON FORM FOREIGN POLICY

ADMINISTRATION IS WORKING ON ITS PLAN FOR AN ASSOCIATION OF NATIONS.

PEOPLE ASKING FOR ACTION

Not Even an Outline Has Yet Been Put in Writing, But Secretary Hughes Has Been Busy in the Matter.

By EDWARD B. CLARK.

Washington.—Is the administration soon to formulate definitely an association of nations policy? There are indications of a rather specific nature that such is to be the case.

There are evidences in Washington today that there is not so strong a desire today as in the immediate past to give so definitive a name as the "Association of Nations" to the plan which the President and his secretary of state have in view. Whatever the policy in connection with foreign affairs is to be, it is understood that Secretary Hughes today is working on the matter with certain ends in view.

From time to time letters have come to Washington from various parts of the country, most of them going to the White House, asking if something is to be done soon with a matter which has occupied the people in one way or another ever since the armistice was signed. It is held here that the evident interest of the country, as shown in letter form, is not responsible at all for the evident quickening impulses on the part of the officials to do something. It is declared that their determination to act was fixed some time ago and that action simply was waiting on what seemed to be the proper time.

The United States senate holds members who are kindly disposed toward an association of nations of the kind which President Harding more than hinted at in his speech of acceptance of the nomination. There are a few Republican senators who do not want an association of nations any more than they want the League of Nations. Then there is another group of sen-

Director of purchases and supplies for the army in France during the war has been appointed as budget director. It is probable that not even the political opponents of General Dawes will intimate that he has sought a government job for the pay or the glory that is in it. His civil life position probably paid him many times the amount of the salary which the government will hand him each year. Mr. Dawes is going to take hold of a five billion dollar a year business and try to run it so that enough money can be saved to Uncle Sam each year to make the installment of the necessary machinery of accomplishment a justifiable bit of legislation.

And so the long looked for budget system is to go into operation. By the provisions of the law every president of the United States in the future will be under legal obligation to send to congress in December the first budget of government.

What will this budget include? Well, it must have in it estimates of every forthcoming appropriation and with them estimates of the probable government income from every source under the law as it exists, and it also must contain an estimate of the receipts as they are likely to be under such proposals for revenue raising as the budget may contain.

In addition to this there must be a statement of the condition of the treasury and what it is believed the condition of the same department will be when another fiscal year is ended. In addition to this there must be a complete statement of the indebtedness of the government and such other financial statements as congress may need to see its way clear to legislate wisely in what may be called a financial way.

Of Prime Interest To All of Us. The country probably will watch the operation of appropriating money under the new budget system with keen interest. It is the people's money which is being spent, and therefore in a way the chairman of the budget will be the steward of the people.

In the house of representatives there already is a consolidated committee on appropriations. The chairman of this committee, James W. Goode of Iowa, has left congress. Nobody knows who will succeed him. The job of the consolidated appropriations committee is a peculiar one, for it is a sort of guardian of bills proposing expenditures and it is its duty in a large measure to see to it that the smaller committees when they propose shall not be

GINGHAM IS THE STYLISH FABRIC

"The best thing I can tell you about gingham," said the head of a highly successful firm in America importing materials for wash dresses, "is that they are the best thing in the world. No other cotton dress fabric approaches them in volume of sales this year."

Every summer wardrobe that makes any pretension whatever of approaching completeness should include several gingham frocks. This is good news, because gingham has much besides fashion to recommend it. No woman is averse to buying inexpensive clothes that are in the height of fashion, and this is one of the things that still may be said of the gingham frock. The price of gingham is now considerably lower than it has been for two or three years.

The prettiest dresses of this fabric are simple, the beauty of such a dress lying in the selection of colors and perhaps an unusual bit of trimming.

Checks Brighten Landscape. It might be expected, with the present craze for dull, black silk dresses, that black and white cottons would be chosen. But fashion, ever contradictory, says no. In wash fabrics we must be gay. Black and white cottons had their innings last year. Now their place is usurped by red and white checks. There is a goodly showing of brown and white as well as many greens, but reds are most prominent.

According to an old-time saying, an individual is as old as he or she feels, and no woman could help feeling very young in these fresh, crisp, wash dresses that in design, material and coloring are very like those she wore in her schoolgirl days. Except for the size it would be next to impossible to distinguish them from little girls' dresses.

The full skirt which stalks so threateningly among the new clothes finds a logical place in the cotton dress. The slim silhouette is retained by dressmakers catering to the women who really know most about dress, and who always demand beauty in their clothes, but the full skirt is among us. It is not nearly so beautiful in model of cloth as those which follow the natural lines of the figure, but it both gathered and plaited, are seen. If you are a youthful amateur dressmaker you may prefer the Mexican note sponsored so strongly by Jeanne Lanvin of Paris in her spring and summer collection of clothes. A frock shows the straight bodice just described, with a Mexican collar fastened to one side. By way of variety, this skirt is plaited and cut longer in the front and back than it is at the sides, but any plain skirt may be used with a bodice such as this.

Embroideries are not lacking on wash dresses, but they are reserved more especially for models of linen or crash. A straightline frock of nat-

Live Stock and Meats
As a variation of the embroidered trimming, straight chemise frocks of heavy white linen—the chemise model is used for the heavier fabrics—are trimmed straight down front and back panels with points of red and white checked gingham. The gingham also is stitched in pointed effect around the neckline, which is somewhat high but a shallow oval in form, and around the sleeves.

The short cap sleeve, which is just a little puff, is used in summer dresses of the lighter materials, such as velvets and crepes. It also makes an occasional appearance in some of the heavier fabrics, but, although the dress itself is of a heavier cotton, the 1830 sleeve is of a thinner material. For instance, a quaint looking dress of flowered chintz, made with a straight bodice and full-gathered skirt, has puff sleeves of white organdie, the cuffs of which are stitched with red worsted. Further touches of the organdie appear in the form of plaited ruffles encircling skirt and deep, round neck.

Modes of Hairdressing.
The modes of hairdressing in Paris indicate a vogue for smooth and uncurled arrangements of the hair, as in opposition to the much-waved and puffed coiffure which has been worn for several years. The exaggerated psyche knot low down on the head is much affected by Englishwomen as well as Parisiennes. Although the hair is arranged not only with plainness, but apparently with precision, most fantastic headdresses are worn.

The large Spanish comb is retained. The newest combs are of ivory rather than shell. These white combs are most effective. For those who do not like an all-white comb they may be had with beautiful enameling in color as well as with settings of precious stones.

The weirdest of feather ornaments are chosen for the hair. Bands of the costly and forbidden paradise may completely encircle the head or plume of the common barnyard fowl may make the craziest looking headdress imaginable.

Evening Gowns.
The dyed lace evening gown is often accompanied by a square cape of the same lace lined with taffeta.

Youngful Model, Organdie Trimmings.
A charming dress for warm summer mornings may be made of red and white checked gingham in the following way: Cut the bodice portion just like a chemise dress with kimono sleeves and gather a full skirt to this slightly below the normal waistline. The neck may be squared or round and finished with a bias fold of bright red organdie underlaid with one of white. The sleeves may be cut off at any length desired, although rather short ones would be attractive, and these should be edged with organdie in two colors to match the neck.

Now make a narrow belt of the red organdie or of the gingham if you like, and line it with white, allowing the white to show at either edge in the form of a piping. Ornament this with two tiny stiff flat bows of the red, faced with white. Tie the girdle in the back, permitting the stiff little bows to come at either side of the front. The skirt may be plain or it may have two large tucks encircling it. If further ornamentation is desired, sew the tucks in a long running stitch with red worsted and trim the neck and sleeves in the same way.

Neither worsted nor organdie is a new trimming for gingham dresses, but evidently designers have not been able to think of anything prettier to take their place, for we have them used more profusely than ever this year. This is especially true of organdie. Quantities of organdie frills, Hughes Making Some Progress. It is admitted directly in high quarters that nothing has yet been put on paper to outline, or even to suggest an outline, of an association of nations plan. This does not mean, however, that mentally a plan has not been formulated. Mr. Hughes has been more or less busy in the matter and it is known that some of the greater foreign nations have been questioned with a view of finding out whether or not they would be willing to become parties to an association of nations along certain lines, even if its forming virtually should mean a repudiation of the present League of Nations.

Now that it is known that other nations have been felt out on this subject, interest has been expressed in Washington as to why the "feeling out" should have been done without submitting with the queries something concrete concerning the plan in mind. The general impression is, however, that the communications to the foreign offices of other countries simply have been in the form of intimations that the United States would like to do something if the other nations eventually would give the proposition consideration.

Virtually the enlarged appropriations committee of the house has taken over everything which pertains to finance, or at least it has constituted itself a sort of court of last resort in appropriation matters.

If the same course shall be applied in the senate, the committee of which Senator Penrose now is chairman will have greatly enlarged powers, and while all appropriation measures must originate in the house of representatives, the fact that the senate has a last word in the matter will give to the chairman of the senate appropriations committee a power perhaps greater than that held by the house committee chairman.

Dawes a Vigorous Man.
Charles G. Dawes, who has been appointed director of the budget is the Charles G. Dawes who aroused the risibilities of the country, and to a considerable extent its admiration, by the course which he pursued as a witness before the sub-committee of the army expenditures investigating committee of the house of representatives.

It will be remembered that Mr. Dawes served in France and doubtless made a side excursion or two into Flanders. It may be that he learned some of his picturesque language in the latter country, for it was the mud in Flanders which gave Uncle Toby the inspiration for his simile when he said, "swore like the army in Flanders."

There may be no occasion for picturesque language in the office room of the new director of the budget, but if a man is to be moved to strong expressions by hard work, the moving force will not be absent. The budget is a new thing; it is intricate in its imposed duties and moreover it deals largely with finance, about which men have disagreed ever since the days when the Indians and the early settlers used wampum as a medium of exchange.

His Advice. A young woman was on a motorboat trip, when the smell of smoke became perceptible. The man at the roadside garage told them it was a hot box. "It'll take me about 20 minutes to fix it," he said.

The owner stood watching him minute as he got to work; then he said: "By the way, while you're about it, I wish you'd grind the valves, take up a foot brake and fill all the grease cups. You'll have to work lively. It'll give you just half an hour."

The man crawled from under the car and stood up. "As long as grease in such a hurry, miss," he said grimly. "I reckon you'd better get your back jacked up and run a new car under it."—Ladies' Home Journal.

SPECIALISTS GIVE DIRECTIONS FOR PUTTING DOWN EGG SUPPLY

What is Needed in Preserving Eggs for Winter Supply.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Boys and girls who are members of poultry clubs, or those who are interested in any way in chickens, should learn how to candle and preserve eggs. Candling means the sorting out of bad eggs before a strong light in such a manner that the rays of light come to the eye through the egg so that the contents can be seen and the condition noted.

The shell of a newly laid egg has a soft "glow" or "bloom" which is a sign of perfect freshness. This glow or bloom is destroyed by handling, and in any case disappears after the egg has been exposed to the air for a short time. After that it is difficult to distinguish a fresh egg from an old one by the appearance of the shell, so candling becomes necessary if you would be sure that the egg is good.

Candle Eggs in a Dark Room.

Eggs can be candled best in a dark room, by the use of a bright light enclosed in a box or case having a hole a trifle smaller than an egg directly opposite the light. The egg is held at this hole for examination. An ordinary hand lamp, a lantern, an incandescent bulb, or a flashlight can be used. If you are using a box and a hand lamp the box should have a hole at the top, otherwise the heat from the top of the chimney would set the box on fire. A tester chimney made of tin, such as is used on a lamp for testing eggs in incubators, may be used for candling, in which case you and preferably infertile. For this reason it is always best when possible to candle the eggs carefully before preserving them unless they are known to be strictly fresh. If an egg is only slightly soiled a cloth dampened with vinegar may be used to remove stains, but eggs should never be washed with water or soap and water as water removes the protective coating on the shell and may tend to cause the contents to spoil. Never use badly-soiled or cracked eggs. They may spoil all the others.

Fresh eggs preserved according to these directions usually will keep for from six to ten months, and can be used satisfactorily for cooking and for the table. If, however, preserved eggs are to be boiled, a small hole should be made with a pin in the larger end of the shell before placing them in the water, to allow the air in the egg to escape when heated, and thus prevent cracking.

"Life as I See It"

GREAT DAY IN LANCASTHIRE

"Sermons Sunday" a Gala Occasion in the Lives of People of Northern England County.

"Sermons Sundays" are state occasions in Lancashire, writes a northern parson in the London Daily Mail. No one who has not been present at one of them can have any conception of what they are. "Sermons" are held annually in most of the large towns outside of Manchester.

In normal times of regular employment "Sermons Sunday" is the Sunday when new summer clothes are put on for the first time. This year, of course, the majority have had to be content with making old things do.

The day usually starts with a procession—Lancashire people love processions outside their churches. The procession is intended partly as a witness to the faith, partly to show the size of the Sunday school.

In this procession, which consists of from 350 to 1,200 persons, ages range from three-year-old little toddlers to men and women of eighty and even more.

The technical Lancashire term for the procession is "walking."

"Are you walking on Sunday?" is probably the most frequent question on people's lips the week before sermons; and to be prevented from "walking" is almost a tragedy.

"I once knew an old lady of eighty-six," writes the parson, "who claimed to have 'walked' 87 times, for the first she had been carried as an infant in arms—and her proudest boast was that she had never missed since."

"Sermons" is a time for renewing old associations. If there is a churchyard it becomes a veritable garden, so much care and affection is bestowed upon the graves during those few days, and in many cases the evening congregations are so large that an extra service has to be held in the churchyard.

Other main features of sermons are the "little singers," the special preachers, the immense congregations, and the huge collections.

The "little singers" are twenty or more little girls dressed in white, who lead the procession and afterward sing special hymns during the service.

Special preachers, of course, form a great attraction. In the days of cheaper fares preachers were brought from all parts of England and in some churches the same preacher would be engaged year after year.

As to the congregation, it is a "poor day" if the church is not filled to overflowing at least twice, and the size of the collection leaves the poor southerner gasping.

Last year in one town collections of more than £700 were made in one church and over £550 in another in a single day. And even this year, with unemployment and under-employment so general, sums of £450 and £280 have been realized in the day.

Saving Something.

A certain railway official has preached economy in and out of season until it has rather got on the nerves of the employees. He likes to talk to the men, putting questions which he thinks will bring out their special abilities and demonstrate their fitness for promotion, and recently he cornered a locomotive fireman.

"What would you do," the official asked, "if you saw that your train was heading into an unavoidable collision that promised to be an utterly destructive wreck?"

"Why," the fireman responded promptly, "I'd grab a lump of coal in each hand, yell to the engineer to bring the oil can, and jump."—Life.

side of the tin.

A perfectly good, clean egg should be "full" and "clear" before the light.

A Shoebox and a Lamp Will Do for Candling Eggs.

There is almost no air cell at the large end and the yolk outline is only faintly visible. A fixed air cell of one-eighth to three-sixteenths of an inch in depth indicates a fresh egg, as eggs run generally. A larger air cell with a movable lower line indicates—according to sizes and fluctuations—a stale egg or one becoming weak and watery. Very small dark spots sometimes seen usually are blood clots. Large dark spots, blood rings, and shadows are due to heat and germination, and indicate first stages of decay. An egg that appears very dark or black, except for a large fixed air cell, contains a chick at an advanced stage of incubation.

Fresh eggs, properly preserved, may be kept from six to ten months and be almost as good for household purposes as fresh eggs. Another reason for preserving eggs in water glass, for instance, is the fact that they do not acquire the objectionable "cold-storage taste."

Allow Three Dozen to Gallon.

To preserve 15 dozen eggs in water glass these directions are given by the specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture:

Select a five-gallon earthen crock, clean it thoroughly, scald, and allow it to dry. Heat ten to twelve quarts of water to the boiling point, and allow it to cool. When the water is cool, measure out nine quarts, put in the crock, and add one quart of sodium silicate, commonly called water glass, which can be bought at any drug store. Stir well, so that the solution becomes thoroughly mixed.

The solution thus prepared is ready for the eggs, which may be put in all at once, or from time to time as they are obtainable. Care should be taken in putting them into the jar not to crack or break the shells; also be sure the solution covers the eggs at all times. Put the crock containing the preserved eggs in a cool, dry place, and cover with a tight lid or waxed paper to prevent evaporation.

To preserve a smaller or larger number of eggs, the solution should be mixed and prepared in the same proportions.

Use Only Clean Fresh Eggs.

If best results are to be obtained the eggs should be clean and fresh.

ment of Agriculture.)

co-operative organizations is an important feature of co-operative marketing, specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture have found. By pooling is meant averaging the returns received for products sold during a certain period, or for certain shipments, so that each grower having products of the same grade receives the same price. The success of a pooling system depends upon the observance of uniform grading and packing of the products.

This method of operation, it is said, protects the individual member from loss because of unfavorable market conditions of a temporary nature. Some farmers' marketing organizations, especially grain-elevator companies, purchase the members' products outright. Conditions and practices in grain marketing make such a plan feasible, but organizations handling other products usually find it to their advantage to pool shipments and await returns before making payments to the growers.

In this way the association is relieved of speculative risks, the avoidance of which is highly desirable. Co-operative creameries, which prorate to the members monthly, in accordance with the amount of butter fat each has delivered the preceding month, the returns received for products sold less operating expenses, are good examples of pooling.

The length of the pooling period varies with the products handled and the local conditions. Thus there are car lot, daily, weekly, semi-monthly, monthly, and seasonal pools.

MATERIAL FOUND IN WHEAT

Specialists Define Terms Used in Federal Standards—Dockage is Easily Removed.

There are two terms in the federal wheat standards which apply to foreign material, explain specialists of the bureau of markets, United States Department of Agriculture—"dockage" and "foreign material other than dockage." The term dockage is applied to the foreign material which can be removed readily from the wheat by the use of appropriate sieves, cleaning devices, or other practical means suited to separate the foreign material present. Foreign material other than dockage is the foreign material that is not separated in the screening and remains in the dockage-free sample and is a factor in the grading, definite percentages being permitted within each numerical grade. Dockage does not affect the grade.

DARLING BABY BRIGHTENS HOME

Children's Laughter a Pleasing Sound

Altoona, Pa.—"I am writing to tell you what Lydia E. Finkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. We had six children die almost at birth. From one hour to nineteen days is all they have lived. Before my next one was born I took a dozen bottles of your Vegetable Compound, and I can say that it is the greatest medicine on earth, for this baby is now four months old, and a healthier baby you would not want. I am sending you a picture of her. Everybody says 'That is a very healthy looking baby.' You have my consent to show these few lines to anybody."—Mrs. C. W. BENT, 181 3rd Avenue, Altoona, Pa.

Mrs. Janssen's experience of interest to childless wives.
Millston, Wis.—"I want to give you a word of praise for your wonderful medicine. We are fond of children, and for a considerable time after we were married I feared I would not have any. I began taking Lydia E. Finkham's Vegetable Compound, and it strengthened me so I now have a nice, strong, healthy baby girl. I suffered very little at childbirth, and I give all the credit to your medicine, and shall always recommend it highly."—Mrs. H. E. JANSSEN, Millston, Wis.

Mrs. Held of Marinette, Wis., adds her testimonial for Lydia E. Finkham's Vegetable Compound. She says:

Marinette, Wis.—"I was in a nervous condition and very irregular. My doctor advised an operation. My husband brought me one of your booklets and asked me to try Lydia E. Finkham's Vegetable Compound. It overcame my weakness so that I now have a healthy baby girl after having been married nine years. I am glad to recommend your medicine, and you may use my letter as a testimonial."—Mrs. E. B. HELD, 330 Jefferson St., Marinette, Wis.

There are many, many such homes that were once childless, and are now blessed with healthy, happy children because Lydia E. Finkham's Vegetable Compound has restored the mother to a strong and healthy condition, as it acts as a natural restorative for ailments as indicated by backache, irregularities, displacements, weakness and nervousness.

Women everywhere should remember that most of the commoner ailments of women are not the surgical ones—they are not caused by serious displacements or growths, although the symptoms may be the same, and that is why so many apparently serious ailments readily yield to Lydia E. Finkham's Vegetable Compound, as it acts as a natural restorative. It can be taken with perfect safety and often prevents serious troubles.

Therefore if you know of any woman who is suffering and has been unable to secure relief and is regretfully looking forward to a childless old age, ask her to try Lydia E. Finkham's Vegetable Compound, as it has brought health and happiness into so many homes once darkened by illness and despair.

Lydia E. Finkham's Private Text-Book upon "Ailments Peculiar to Women" will be sent to you free upon request. Write to The Lydia E. Finkham, Medicine Co., Lynn, Massachusetts. This book contains valuable information.

"AFTER SHE'S MARRIED"

Synopsis.—Lonely and almost penniless, Tonnibel Devon, living on a canal boat with a brutal father and a worn-out, discouraged mother, wanders into a Salvation Army hall at Ithaca, N. Y. There she meets a young Salvation Army captain, Philip MacCaulay. She is almost afraid to enter, but Philip assures her everyone is welcome and she hears from him, for the first time in her life, about God. She returns home and tells her mother about her visit.

CHAPTER II.

The Master of the Dirty Mary.

A week before this story opens, Uriah Devon had steamed the length of the lake, anchoring his boat at near Ithaca as he dared. Even to his wife, Edith, he had not confided why he had brought her to a town where yawning prison doors gaped for her every passing hour.

"I won't go, Riah," Mrs. Devon had cried when her husband had made the statement that he intended to visit Ithaca. "You couldn't get me near that place with a rope around my neck."

But the very fact that she now sat on a small bench against the boat rail, gazing moodily at the water, proved that Uriah Devon had contrived to have his way.

Occasionally Mrs. Devon lifted her head to listen and turned her eyes to the west where a narrow path zigzagged its length up the hill to the boulevard. Into her tortured soul had come a belief since the night before, that Tony's "Glorious God," would send her man home.

Suddenly the sound of heavy feet, clanking around, at least he was coming, this man she loved, perhaps drunk, perhaps to beat her; but nevertheless he was coming, and that was all she cared about.

the girl in between John Pendlehaven and his precious cousin, Reggie's mother, and then Reg and me gets Tony's money, see?"

Edith shivered.

"I hear what you say," she muttered, "and I s'pose I'll do it if you promise not to let that pup hurt Tony when he gets her. . . . Best let's wait another year before talkin' marriage to her, though."

"Nothin' doin'," rasped the man. "Tony's almost a woman, and she's eatin' her head off. After she's married—"

"You two men'll rag the kid to death or do something worse to her," gritted the woman. "Well, you won't! Bather'n have that I'll tell her she ain't ours. I'll go right bold to Paul Pendlehaven and blurt him the truth. I'll do it today if you keep naggin' at me."

Devon studied her face, his own distorted with rage.

"You'll do no such a thing, mad woman," he returned, running his tongue over his dry, cracked lips. "If you get me in a temper you'd better look out. Reggie knows Tonnibel's got rich folks, but he don't know who they are. You spill the beans, by G—d, and the lake for yours."

The woman's gaze sought the sheet of blue water.

"She'll grow a beard a mile long before I tell 'em," she said finally, bringing her eyes back to his face. "Tell 'er yours, and see how you like it!"

There was a ring of revolt in her tones that brought an expression of surprise to the man's face, leaving it angrily, frowningly red. But the sound of a girl's voice on the hill brought him suddenly to his feet.

"There she is, by G—d," he cried abruptly. "Now if you want any more want to stay where I live, you got to with a roar the man sprang forward, knocked the girl flat on the deck. When Tonnibel rolled over and sat up, her mother was stretched along the boat rail, and Devon was standing over her. She lay so dreadfully still and limp that the girl scrambled to her feet.

It wasn't the same Tony who had come fearfully to them but a short period before with the little pig in her arms; nor the same girl who had swung in the treetops making play fellows of the squirrels and answering the shrill calls of the forest birds. She seemed suddenly to have grown taller, and as she flung herself on Devon, the very strength of her little body sent him sprawling against the side of the cabin. "Now you killed her, d—n you," she screamed. "If you kick 'er—I'll—I'll—" She dropped at the side of her mother, her threat broken in two by the awful pallor on the woman's face. "Oh, God, mummy darlin', mummy darlin'," she ended in a bitter cry.

Growing in rage, Devon turned on her.

"Mebbe I have killed 'er," said he. "If so, I'll make a good job of it and finish you too."

The girl rose before him, her eyes blazing into his, her little fists clenched together.

"Folks that murder other people, Pappy Devon," she shot back, "get strapped in a chair, and they get lightnin' run through 'em. Go on and finish up! Go on and finish me! I'd ruther have you kill me than make me marry that old Reggie."

As if his name had brought him out of the forest, Reginald Brown walked down the Hoghole path.

"My baby, Caroline Pendlehaven, aged six months."

United States' Bad Lands.

This is the translation of "Mauvais Terres," the term used by the French-Canadian trappers to describe these regions of unconsolidated rocks that have been extensively eroded. Bad lands occur on arid plateaus formed by horizontal strata of loosely cemented sands and gravels. The best examples of such regions are found in the upper portion of the Missouri drainage basin, in the vicinity of the Black hills. Some are to be found also in Colorado, Arizona, New Mexico and Texas.

Baptism in Cyprus.

A baptism in Cyprus is a curious ceremony. The infant is rubbed with oil by his godfather, blown upon in the face by the priest and waved in the air, then dipped several times in the font, and again anointed with oil on various parts of the body.

COULD BEAT HANDS SHUCKING HIS CORN

At Least J. A. White Would Bet So, After Being Relieved of Dyspepsia by Tanlac.

"My wife and myself have had stomach trouble," says Mr. J. A. White, residing on the Leestown Pike, R. F. D. No. 3, near Lexington, Ky., "and have both been nervous and run down."

"We could not see anything without suffering afterwards and could not sleep at night. We were regular nervous dyspeptics. We tried many remedies without permanent benefit until we heard of Tanlac. I got this medicine and began using it. We noticed immediate results. We are both greatly improved by Tanlac. We give all credit for the change of health to Tanlac. It is a remarkable medicine."

"I personally feel so good that I told my hands a day or two ago that I could beat any of them shucking corn. I meant it and believe I could have beat 'em all."

Of all the maladies that afflict humanity chronic dyspepsia, such as Mr. and Mrs. White suffered from, is probably the most prevalent, and hours might be consumed in describing the sufferings, mental and bodily, of the victims of chronic dyspepsia.

A morbid, unreal, whimsical and melancholy condition of the mind, aside from the nervous physical suffering, is the usual state of the average dyspeptic, and life seems scarcely worth living.

Tanlac, the celebrated medicine, was designed especially for overcoming this distressing condition and millions of people have taken it with the most astonishing and gratifying results. It seems to go straight to the spot, toning up and invigorating every organ of the body.

Ancient Almanacs.

The clog almanac, once in common use in parts of England, is a square stick, on the four edges of which are cut notches to represent the days of the week and various symbols to indicate different festivals and holidays. More ancient than clog almanacs are the Scandinavian runic calendars, made of wood, or sometimes of horn or bone, and inscribed with runic letters.

Lawyer's Sharp Questioning Finally Drew Material Answer From Old Lady on Witness Stand.

Phlander C. Knox used to tell the story of a Pennsylvania lawyer, known throughout the state for his sharpness, who once met his match in a very unexpected quarter.

An old woman was being cross-examined by him as to how the testator had looked when he made a remark to her about some relative.

"I don't remember. He's been dead three years," she answered, testily.

"Do you mean to tell me that your memory is so bad that you cannot go back three years?" demanded the attorney.

The witness was silent.

"Did he look anything like me?" the lawyer finally ventured.

"Seems to me he did have the same sort of vacant look," responded the old lady.

"They can make their fool laws if they want to," exclaimed Alec, "but so far as I'm concerned I pay no attention to that. Why, old Susie could never make that speed, and I'll be darned if I try to urge her to, even if th' law does require it."—Hwy Ratek.

Day Would Be Spoiled.

Hugh received a bright red vest as a birthday present. A few days later his auntie died and his mother told him that he must go to the funeral. "Thinking it a good occasion to wear his red vest for the first time he asked his mother for it."

"Why, you can't wear this bright red vest at a funeral, my boy, when everybody wears black."

Standing straight before his mother, he replied with great determination: "If I can't wear my red vest then I won't have any fun at the whole funeral!"

Special Care of Baby.

That Baby should have a bed of its own all agreed. Yet it is more reasonable for an infant to sleep with grown-ups than to use a man's medicine in an attempt to regulate the delicate organism of that same infant. Either practice is to be shunned. Neither would be tolerated by specialists in children's diseases.

Your Physician will tell you that Baby's medicine must be prepared with even greater care than Baby's food.

A Baby's stomach when in good health is too often disarranged by improper food. Could you for a moment, then, think of giving to your ailing child anything but a medicine especially prepared for Infants and Children? Don't be deceived.

Make a mental note of this:—It is important, Mothers, that you should remember that to function well, the digestive organs of your Baby must receive special care. No Baby is so abnormal that the desired results may be had from the use of medicines primarily prepared for grown-ups.

CONCLUSIONS
 desirable tract of land in the township was pre-empted, either by actual settlers or land speculators, probably twenty five percent being of the latter class. Previous to this time western homeseekers had doubtless been influenced by the report of the surveyor general in 1815 in which he stated that "the country between the Great Lakes (Southern Michigan) is, with few exceptions, low wet land with a thick growth of underbrush, inter-juncted with bad marshes, bordered with a species of pine called tamarack. The country is so bad that probably not one acre out of a hundred, if there would be one out of a thousand, that will, in any case, allow of cultivation." But some enterprising prospectors had discovered the falsity of this report and an influx of settlers, principally from New York and New England, within ten years had been 1830 and 1840—rapidly developed Michigan into a settled state. Of course, the major part of these were in pursuit of farm homes and the "oak openings" of Putnam, partially cleared by the annual forest fires which the Indians took care to perpetuate, were an inviting prospect for early cleared fields. But Mr. Marble was a mechanic, and with an eye for a possible mill site, and possible town which might grow around the mill, he located the ground on Section 22 where the Pinckney mill now stands. Although he had not sufficient capital to build the mill unaided he laid the foundation and began getting out timbers for its construction. He had not progressed very far when William Kirtland, a capitalist from New York City, attracted by the possibilities of this rapidly growing country, came on and bought Mr. Marble's mill site and made preparations for a mill. Mr. Kirtland completed the mill in time to convert the crop of 1838 into flour for the hungry settlers. How many of us realize how those pioneers managed to feed their families before their first crops could be converted into bread? Potatoes, corn and garden vegetables are raised in a summer, but wheat must take a year and then be hauled to Ann Arbor, the nearest mill, to be ground for bread. Mr. Marble relates how, in the fall of '34, hearing that a farmer named Bead in Webster township, had raised a surplus of wheat, he drove with oxen and cart to his place some twenty miles distant, the nearest neighbor who had wheat to spare. Although a stranger Mr. Bead was in deed a neighbor, for although he could only offer his promise to pay, Mr. Marble came away with his sacks filled with wheat and a dressed pig in the bargain. I mention this incident to show the importance of a grist mill to a pioneer community before railroads were projected. Of equal importance was the construction of a saw-mill, and S. L. Bignal supplied this want by erecting one on the site of the Reeves dam, which only a few years ago passed into oblivion. Seth A. Pettys, the founder of Pettysville, was the millwright of those days. He made and installed the machinery in the mills at Pinckney, Reeve's Unadilla, and his own at Pettysville. Who realizes what it was to build a mill in those days? It was not merely to order one from Milwaukee or Seneca Falls, a system of iron and steel rolls, shafting, pulleys, and bolts, to be set up and running in a week's time, but every bolt, reel, conveyor, elevator box, hopper and casing must be dressed, fitted and put together by hand. Who remembers the big spur wheels, made of wood, entirely by hand the cogs of hard maple fitted to mesh perfectly into the niches of the pinion chiselled into the main upright shaft, or the big overshot water wheel whose buckets carried several barrels of water from upstairs to down cellar with every revolution. They supplied a dire need in those days, and Oh! for a loaf made from that good old stone-ground red wheat flour that they used to make

Not all progress is improvement. I count it one of the pleasant memories of my childhood days—going to mill with father; seeing the miller empty the sacks into a hole in the floor and a little while after seeing the same stuff shot down a smooth board from the upper floor into the wagon—the flour in its own sack, the bran and "shorts" in another. Sam'l Sykes, Caspar's father, was the miller then.

FARM AND GARDEN

Quality in vegetables depends largely upon their being used while strictly fresh. Chemists tell us that sweet corn loses 50 per cent of its sugar content within four hours after it has been removed from the stalk.

Corn, beans, peas and all other vegetables used for canning, drying, or table use should be prepared as soon as possible after they are gathered, if vegetables of high quality are desired.

Make your garden work all summer by sowing a succession of crops. Succession crops are valuable because they furnish a supply of fresh vegetables for fall and winter use.

Try these for planting now in the spaces where the early short season crops have been grown: Bush beans, turnip beets, lettuce, summer radishes, winter radishes, kohlrabi, rutabaga, turnip, and chinese or celery cabbage.

There is still time to sow seeds of perennial flowering plants. Make the soil in which they are sown very fine and keep it cool and moist by shading and frequent watering.

Grape black-rot is all set to infect the Michigan crop this year, and fruit men face heavy loss if rainy weather occurs in the latter part of July, according to G. H. Coons, plant pathologist at the Michigan Agricultural College.

"Recent field work in South-western Michigan shows that Grape Black Rot may be serious this year" says Coons. "Special attention must be given to thorough and timely spraying if loss is to be kept down. Control of black rot is accomplished by use of bordeaux mixture. To be most effective this should be applied before a rainy spell rather than after it. The disease spreads during wet, muggy weather, and the spray should be put on to protect the crop during the danger period."

Fordson

Ford Plant Builds 108,962 in June

Demand Exceeds Output as Ford Breaks All Previous Records

During the month of June, the Ford motor company, thru its Detroit Factories and 22 Assembly plants throughout the country reached the production of 108,962 Ford cars and trucks, setting up a new high record for one month.

Production of Ford cars and trucks has been steadily increasing since early last spring, and shows substantial gains over the same period last year. The second quarter of 1921, viz., April, May and June, shows an out put of 301,796 Ford cars and trucks against 220,878 for the same three months of last year or a net increase of 80,918.

Despite the fact, however, that the Ford Plants have been running at maximum capacity, many thousand unfilled orders have been piled up ahead so that Ford still is limited by manufacturing facilities rather than marketing possibilities. Particularly is this true with respect to enclosed cars, for which the demand has been unusually heavy.

One reason cited by Ford Officials for the unprecedented demand for Ford cars is the present tendency toward economy. Many of those who have been added to the long list of buyers might well have afforded larger and more costly cars than the Ford, but it is the belief that most prospective motor car buyers are investigating all of the costs incident to motoring much more carefully than at any other time during the past five years.

And we are sure, knowing the community as well as we do, that every man or woman who owes this concern—the oldest mercantile firm in this part of the county—will come down this week and pay their accounts in full if possible. If this is not possible, give them what you can on account, and if you are not just at present in a position to do either, you surely can come down and give them a hearty, sympathetic hand-shake and tell them you will do the best you can as quickly as possible.
