Two of her sisters have preceded her in death within the past four months. Since November 10 she had been confined to her bed, bearing her sickness with all patience, the great example of a true Christian soul. DENTAL EXAMINER AT MANISTIQUE

The appointment as Designated Dental Examiner, to render treatment to the patients of the United States Veteran's Bureau in accordance with regulation Number 17, has been awarded to Dr. C. M. Sigler of this city. This appointment comes through the treasury department of the government.

During the war the extremely large number of men being handled by our army dental corps made it impossible for our service men to receive modern dentistry treatment.

In many instances, acute dental disorders treated as emergency cases, and extractions were ordered. In other cases, temporary work was done, and the service men being called into action or transferred, resulted in the loss of numerous teeth.

Any service man, who has dental disability traceable to service, is eligible to treatment, and should appear before Dr. C. M. Sigler the examiner, for examination and recommendation.

The appointment comes through the U. S. Public Health Service making it necessary to undergo a rigid examination, to receive the Appointment.—Pioneer Tribune.

The accident occurred on Main street near Johnson's hardware store. A crowd quickly gathered and one of the by-standers was heard to remark that a person should be punished for not protecting himself against such an accident. He said that he knew of a preparation called "SEE THRU" that could be bought for a dollar from a concern in Baltimore, Maryland, called the Baltimore "There Cures" concern that would have prevented the accident as no matter how hard it should be raining a wind shield treated with this preparation would always remain as clear as on a bright summer day and that every person who drove a car should not endanger life by going without it. He said that he had driven over from Govanstown several nights before and could not understand how the driver of the jitney could make such speed on a rainy night until he told him he always used "SEE THRU". After the driver explained to him how simple it was to have a clear wind-shield and guaranteed to be so as long as it rained he said he did not lose any time sending off his dollar for a box and that he found that it certainly did the trick. Thousands Have Kidney Trouble and Never Suspect It

Applicants for Insurance Often Rejected.

Judging from reports from druggists who are constantly in direct touch with the public, there is one preparation that has been very successful in overcoming these conditions. The mild and healing influence of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its remarkable record of success.

An examining physician for one of the prominent Life Insurance Companies, in an interview on the subject, made the astonishing statement that one reason why so many applicants for insurance are rejected is because kidney trouble is so common to the American people, and the large majority of those whose applications are declined do not even suspect that they have the disease. Dr. Kilmer's Swamp Root is on sale at all drug stores in bottles of two sizes, medium and large. However, if you wish first to test this great preparation send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention this paper. Advertisement.

The Empty Bin and Bowl. The Ukraine, which has been known as the sugar bowl and flour bin of Europe, is pretty nearly empty and it is a question whether the country has enough to keep its own people until the next harvest. The wheat crop last year was hard hit by reason of the absence of the snows which allowed the seed to be frozen in the ground for lack of protection granted by the mantle of snow.

TAMADA.

Synopsis.—Littering on the San Francisco water front, John Rainey, newspaper reporter, is accosted by a giant blind man, who asks Rainey to lead him aboard the sailing schooner Karluk. In the cabin they find Captain Simms and a man named Carlsen. Simms recognizes the blind man, calling him Jim Lund. Lund accuses Simms of abandoning him, blind, on an ice floe, and denounces him. Simms denies the charge, but Lund refuses to be pacified. He declares his intention of accompanying the Karluk on its expedition north, where it is going in quest of a gold field which Lund has discovered. Peggy, Simms' daughter, is aboard, and defends her father. Carlsen, who is a physician as well as first mate, drugs Rainey, awaking from his stupor, Rainey finds himself at sea. Carlsen informs him he has been kidnapped. He offers Rainey a share of the gold, and Rainey is forced to declare himself satisfied. Lund gives him a brief account of a former expedition of the Karluk, tells him he distrusts Carlsen, and suggests a "partnership." Rainey to act as Lund's "eyes." Rainey is made second mate. Captain Simms is ill and the navigation is entirely in the hands of Carlsen. At the latter's suggestion a shooting match is staged and the seal hunters exhaust their ammunition. Carlsen shows his skill with the pistol and Lund does some astonishing shooting "by sound." Sandy, the ship's boy, is swept overboard and is rescued by Rainey, who thus wins Peggy's admiration. The captain gets worse. Sandy tells how Carlsen is stirring up trouble over the division of the gold. Carlsen draws a gun on Rainey, who overpowers him.

He talked in a low voice, but it rumbled like the distant roar of a bull. Rainey looked at the indomitable jaw that the beard could not hide, at the great barrel of his chest, the bough-like arms, the swelling thighs and calves, and responded to the suggestion that Lund could rise in Berserker rage and sweep aside all opposition. "Carlsen says that the skipper's life is in his hands," he said. "What do you make of that?" "I don't know what to make of it," answered Lund. "If it is, God help the skipper! I reckon he's in a bad way. Ennyhow, he's out of it for the time bein', Rainey."

"There's the girl," said Rainey. "I don't believe she wants to marry Carlsen."

"If she does," said Lund, "she ain't the kind we need worry about. If you're interested about the gal, Rainey, an' I take it you are, I'm tellin' you that Carlsen'll marry her if it suits his book. If it don't, he won't. An' if he wins out, he'll take her without botherin' about prayer-books an' ceremonies. I know his breed. All men are more or less selfish an' shy on morals, in streaks more or less wide, but that Carlsen's just plain skunk. I'm no saint, but, so long as I can keep wiggin', there ain't enny hunter or seaman goin' to harm a decent gal. That's another way they ain't my equal, Rainey. Savvy? Nor is Carlsen. There ain't enough real manhood in that Carlsen to grease a skillet. How about it, Rainey; are you lined up with me?"

"Just as far as I can go, Lund. I'm with you to the limit."

Lund brought down his hand with a mighty swing and caught at Rainey's in mid-air, gripping it till Rainey bit his lips to repress a cry of pain. "You've got the guts!" cried the giant, checking the loudness of his voice abruptly. "I knew it. It ain't all goin' to go as they like it. Watch my smoke. Now, then, keep out of Carlsen's way all you can. He may try an' pick a row with you that'll put you in wrong all around. Go easy an' speak easy till land's sighted."

"What do you think Carlsen's game is, if it goes through?"

"He's fox enough to think up a dozen ways. Run the schooner ashore somewhere in the night. Wreck her. Git 'em in the boats with the gold. Inside of a week, Deming an' one or two others would have won it. Then—he'd have the only gun—he'd shoot the lot of 'em an' say they died at sea. He ain't got enny more warm blood than a squid. Or he might land, and accuse 'em all of piracy. What do we care about his plans? He ain't goin' to put 'em over."

Rainey had to relieve Hansen. He left Lund primed for resistance against Carlsen, against all the crew, if necessary, resolved to save the girl, but as Lund stayed below and the time slid by, his confidence oozed out of him, and the odds assumed their mathematical proportion.

What could they do against so many? But he held firm in his determination to do what he could, to go down with the forlorn hope.

The Karluk was bowling along northward toward landfall and the crisis between Lund and Carlsen at good speed. The weather had subsided and the half gale now served the schooner instead of hindering her. Rainey turned over the wheel to a seaman and paced the deck. Lund's mysterious hints were unsatisfactory. He could not believe them without some basis, but the giant would never go further than vague talk of a "joker" or card up his sleeve. And they would need more than one card, Rainey thought.

He wondered whether they could win over Hansen, who had spoken for Lund against the skipper, and had then kept his counsel. But he dismissed Hansen as an ally. The Scandinavian was too cautious, too apt to consider such things as odds. Sandy was useless, aside from his good-will. He was cowed by Deming, scared of Carlsen, too puny to do more than he had done, give them warning.

Tamada? Would he fight for the share of gold he expected to come to him? Lund had described him as neutral. But, if he knew that he was to be left out of the division? At any rate, Tamada might provide him with a weapon, a sharp-bladed vegetable knife if nothing better. He could not class Tamada as an unimportant factor. There was no question to Rainey but that Tamada was, by caste, above his position as sealer's cook. It was true that a Japanese considered no means mental if they led to the proper end.

Was that end merely to gain possession of his share of the gold, or did Tamada have some deeper, more complicated reason for signing on to run the galleys of the Karluk? Somehow Rainey thought there was such a reason.

CHAPTER VI.

Tamada Talks.

It was an hour from the third meal of the day. Tamada was juggling the food for three messes, and he was doing it with the calm precision of one who has every detail well mapped out and is moving on schedule. The boy Sandy was not there, probably engaged in laying the table for the hunters' mess, Rainey imagined.

Tamada regarded him with eyes that did not lack a certain luster, as a slobbery might hold it, but which, beneath their hooded lids, revealed neither interest, nor curiosity, nor friendliness. They belonged in his unwrinkled face, they were altogether neutral. Yet they seemed covertly to suggest to Rainey that they might, on occasion, flame with wrath or hatred, or show the burning light of high intelligence.

"You Are Not Hating Me Because You Are Californian and I Japanese," He Said.

"Tamada," he queried, "you think I am your friend, that I would rather help you than otherwise?"

"I think that—yes?" answered the Japanese without hesitation and without servility. "You are not hating me because you are Californian and I Japanese," he said. "I know that."

There was little time to spare, and there was likelihood of interruption, so Rainey plunged into his subject without introduction.

"They promised you a share of this treasure, Tamada?" he asked. "They promised me that, yes."

"They do not intend to give it to you. You may have guessed this, but I am sure of it. I, too, am promised some of the gold, but they do not intend to give it to me. They will offer Mr. Lund only a small portion of what was originally arranged, the same amount as the rest of them are to get. He will refuse that tomorrow, when a meeting is to be called. Then there will be trouble. I shall stand with Mr. Lund. If we win you will get your share, whether you help us or not. If you help us I can promise you at least twice the amount you were to get."

"How can I help you? If this is to be talked over at a meeting I shall not be allowed to be present. I do not think it will help you for me to join. I do not see how you can win. If you can show some way out I will do what I can. But I like to see way out."

He mollified the bald acknowledgment of his neutrality with a little bow and a hissing-in-breath. Back of it all was a will that was inflexible, thought Rainey.

"If we lose, you lose," he went on lamely. He had come on a fool's errand, he decided.

"I think I shall get my money," said Tamada. The Oriental gave a swift smile, that held no mirth, no friendship, rather, a sardonic appreciation of the situation, without rancor.

"They are very foolish," he said. "They make me cook, they eat what I serve. They say Tamada is very good cook. But he is Jap, d—n him. Suppose I put something in that food, that they would not taste? I could send them all to sleep. I could kill them. I could do it so they never suspect, but would go to their beds—and never get up from them. It would be very easy. Yet they trust me."

The statement was so matter-of-fact that Rainey felt his horror gather slowly as he stared at the impassive, Oriental.

A thought suddenly flashed over him. Was Tamada in league with Carlsen? Had he mistaken his man? Did Carlsen plan to have Tamada undertake a wholesale poisoning to secure the gold himself, providing the drugs? Was it a friendly hint from the Japanese?

When Rainey's watch was ended and he was closeted with Lund in the latter's cabin, the giant promptly quashed all discussion of Tamada's attitude.

"I'll put no trust in any slant-eyed, yellow-skinned rice-eater," he announced emphatically. "They're against us, race an' religion. They want California, or rather, the Pacific coast, an' they think they're goin' to git it. They're no more akin to us than a snake is a cousin to an eel. They're not o' our breed, an' you can't mix the two. I'll have no deal with Tamada, beyond gettin' dope out of him. If he helped us it'd be only to further his own ends. Not that he can do much—unless—"

He lowered his voice to a husky whisper.

"There's one thing may slip in our gold-gettin' matey," he said—"the Japanese. I doubt if this island is set down on American or British charts. But I'll bet it is on the Japanese. They don't know of the gold, or it wouldn't be there. Rightly, the island may belong to Russia, but since the war, Russia's in a bad way, an' enny-thing loose from the mainland'll be gobbled by Japan."

"What the Japs grab they don't let go of. If they should suspicion us of gittin' gold off enny island they'd trump up to call theis. If they found gold on us at all, it'd be all off with us an' the Karluk. We'd be dumped inside of some Jap prison an' the schooner confiscated."

"An' if things go right with us, an' we ever sight the smoke of a Jap gunboat comin' our way, the first thing I'll be apt to do will be to scrap Tamada or he'll blow the whole proposition, whether we've got the gold aboard or not. Even if he didn't want to tell becoz of his own share, they'd git it out of him what we was after."

"Ever play much at cards?" he went on. "Play for yore last red when you don't know where to turn for another, an' have all the crowd thinkin' yo're goin' broke as they watch the play? An' then you slap down a card they've all overlooked an' larf in the other chap's face?"

"That's what I'm goin' to do with Carlsen. I've got that kind of a card, matey, an' I ain't goin' to spoil my fun by tellin' even you what it is, though yo're my partner in this gamble. It's a trump, an' Carlsen's overlooked it."

Lund chuckled hugely as he mixed himself some whisky and water. Rainey refused a drink. He was nervous, bothering over what the outcome might be, and how he might handle himself. He was not at all sure of his own grit. There was a nasty doubt as to his own prowess and his own courage that kept cropping up. And that state of mind is not a pleasant one.

Rainey went over and over the situation as a squirrel might race around the bars of his revolving cylinder, and came to only one conclusion, the inevitable one, to let the matter develop itself. Lund's winning card he had bothered about until his brain was tired. When he turned in at last, despite his determination to follow Lund's admonition concerning sleep, it would not come to him.

He was awakened at half-past seven, got a cup of coffee after dressing warmly, and went on deck. Carlsen and the girl had preceded him. Lund stood at the rail with his head of a nose wrinkled, sniffing toward the icy crags that were spouting a dazle of white flame, set about with smaller, sudden flares of ruby, emerald and sapphire.

Tamada appeared and announced breakfast.

"You'll be coming later, Rainey?" asked Carlsen. "You and Lund?"

He started for the companionway and the girl followed. As she passed the wheel Rainey spoke to her:

"I am sorry your father is so ill, Miss Simms," he said.

She looked at him with eyes that were filled with sadness, that seemed liquid with tears bravely held back.

"I am afraid he is dying," she answered in a low voice. "Thank you for your sympathy. I—"

She stopped at some slight sound that Rainey did not catch. But he saw the face of Carlsen framed in the shadow of the companion, his mouth open in a wolf grin, and the man's eyes were gleaming crimson. He held up a hand for the girl. She passed down without taking it.

Lund came over to Rainey. "Clear weather, they tell me!" he said. "That's unusual. Fog off the Aleutians three hundred an' fifty days of the year, as a rule. Soon as we sight land, which'll be Unalaska or thereabouts, Carlsen will have the course changed. There's a considerable fleet of United States revenue cutters at Unalaska, an' Carlsen won't pull ennything until we're well west of there. He's pretty cocky this mornin'. Wal, we'll see."

There had always been a certain rollicking good-humor about Lund. This morning he was grim, his face, with its beak of a nose and aggressive chin beneath the flaming whiskers, and his whole magnificent body gave the impression of resolve and repressed action. Rainey fancied whimsically that he could hear a dynamo purring inside the giant's massiveness. He had seen him in open rage when he had first denounced Honest Simms, but the serious mood was far more impressive.

The big man stepped like a great cat, his head was thrust slightly forward, his great hands were half open. One forgot his blindness. Despite the unsightly black lenses, Lund appeared so absolutely prepared and, in a different way, fully as confident as Carlsen. A certain audacious assurance seemed to ooze out of him, to permeate his neighborhood, and a measure of it extended to Rainey.

Carlsen, before he went below, had sent a man into the fore-headers and now he shouted, cupping his hands and sounding his news as if it had been a call to arms:

"Land-ho!" "What is it?" called Rainey back. "High peak, sir. Dead ahead! Clouds on it, or smoke."

He came sliding down the halcyards to the deck as Lund said: "That'll be Makushin. Now the fun'll commence."

From below the sailors off watch came up on deck, and the hunters, the latter wiping their mouths, fresh from their interrupted breakfast, all crowding forward to get a glimpse of the land. Minutes passed before Carlsen came on deck. He had not hurried his meal.

"I'll take her over, Rainey," he said briefly.

Rainey and Lund were barely seated before the heeling of the schooner and the scuffle of feet told of Lund's prophesied change of course. Rainey looked at the telltale compass above his head.

"Heading due west," he told Lund. "West it is," said the giant. "More coffee, Tamada. Fill your belly, Rainey. Get a good meal while the eatin' is good."

Although it was Hansen's watch below, Rainey found him at the wheel instead of the seaman he had left there. Carlsen came up to him smiling.

"Better let Hansen have the deck, Mr. Rainey," he said. "We're going to have a conference in the cabin at four bells, and I'd like you to be present."

"The shots blended. Lund stood there erect, uninjured. A red blotch showed between Carlsen's eyes."

This was the second district contest in oratory and declamation of the Michigan high school oratorical association and in which eight schools were represented as follows: Charlotte, St. John, Hill-dale, Howell, Alma, East Lansing, Williams-ton, and Adrian.

HOWELL.—A suit for $10,000 damages has been started against Livingston County growing out of the death of Myron L. Carr, manager of the Heath Carburator Company of Detroit, who died from injuries received from an automobile accident on the Grand River road in this county last September.

The suit is brought by Fred G. White, special administrator of Carr's estate. Prosecutor Glenn C. Yelland, of this place, will represent both township and county, who are the defendants in the case.

The accident occurred the evening of August 14, 1921, while it is said Mr. Carr and his companion, Stonewall Keats, also of Detroit, were returning to the Michigan metropolis from Island lake in Green Oak township, this county, and about 14 miles from this city.

Carr, who was driving a Winton Six touring car turned out on the right hand side of the road and the claim of the plaintiff is that the loose gravel in the highway, which was at that time under construction, gave way, the auto precipitating into a gully eight feet deep, the accident occurring about one-half mile east of Island lake.

Mr. Carr was taken to the Mellu hospital at Brighton, suffering from concussion of the brain and later taken to St. Mary's hospital in Detroit, where he died from his injuries on September 8 last. He was 35 years of age at the time of his death.

BRIGHTON.—The Island Lake hotel is to be opened May 1. Roy M. Downing of Cleveland, Ohio, has been secured as manager during the summer. The hotel is very nicely furnished and contains 29 rooms. A large dining room on the first floor has a seating capacity of 120 persons. A fine large piano-orchestra is being installed. A large covered veranda is built over the water. The main building is three stories high, with the rooms on the two upper stories. The kitchen will be entirely separate from the dining room and will be of all steel construction as proof against fire. A separate building will be devoted to the bath house, and this is being fully equipped. Five hundred new bathing suits have been purchased.

HOWELL.—Cyril Humphrey, of Hamburg, who has been boarding with Sheriff Teagle at the county jail here since Saturday when he was arraigned and bound over to circuit court for trial in the charge of grand larceny, has confessed to the charge and will probably be sentenced at the next term of court here. Humphrey was accused of breaking into the cottage of R. G. Gwinnar at Silver Lake in Hamburg township and procuring a quantity of household furnishings including bed blankets and towels, maintaining that he purchased them at a sale in the Hype farm. The penalty for the offense carries with it an imprisonment of five years.

BRIGHTON.—This community was moved to hear of the death of Claude H. Elliott, Sunday at the U. S. P. H. S. hospital at Prescott, Ariz., where he had last fall hoping to recover from tuberculosis, which he contracted while in the service.

Claude is a belated victim of the Great War. One of the nation's heroes, of whom his home town is proud. He served gallantly during the war, having been in active battle at the Somme, Aisne, Mont-Dier, Nonon, and Champaign-Marne, as well as on the offensives at Aisne-Marne and Soame in August, and Aisne-Marne and Soame in October of 1918. He was discharged from the service June 26, 1919, but has since been the victim of the white plague which he contracted while fighting for his country.

Claude H. Elliott was born in Marion, Livingston County, October 11, 1893, of Mr. and Mrs. George P. Elliott. Until the war he lived mostly in this community, where he went to school.

He is survived by his sister, Miss Leeta Elliott of Brighton, and three brothers, Charles of Lakeland, James of Detroit and George of Denver, Col.

The body will be received at Brighton and the funeral will be held at the home of Charles Austin upon his arrival. Burial will be made at the Chilson cemetery.—Argus.

MUNITH.—Over 250 coins valued at more than $400, which comprised a collection belonging to Frank Olds, of Munith, were stolen Sunday night when thieves broke into his hardware store in that village by smashing a rear window. Undersheriff Kutt and Deputy Walter Carrahee, who spent Monday at Munith investigating the robbery, are inclined to think the job was the work of someone familiar with the place, for many things of value in the store, such as watches, knives and flashlights were not touched. Included in the collection were many foreign coins as well as a $2.50 gold piece. Undersheriff Kutt asks that the public notify the sheriff's department if any attempt is made to pass any of the coins.—Stockbridge Brief-Sun.

CHELSEA.—Andrew Fabien, alias Miller, who has been an employee of the Michigan Portland Cement Co. at Four Mile Lake, and who resided on Buchanan street, is taking a long time to change his clothing. He was taken before Justice Cummings Saturday afternoon on the charge of stealing tools from the cement company and was given permission to get a drink of water. Deputy Sheriff Martin met the man on the stairway and the man told him that he had permission to go to his home to change his wearing apparel. On entering the Justice's office Mr. Martin was told that the man asked to get a drink of water, and Mr. Martin went to the home and found that Fabien had been there but had skipped without changing his clothing. The last reports of the fugitive was that he was headed south and was hiking toward Manchester. Fabien, or Miller, as he called himself, has sold to E. F. Klump about $20 worth of tools, some of them being identified by employees as belonging to the cement company. If the man is caught, he will probably do a short stunt in prison. It is said that he came here from Sandusky, Ohio.—Standard.

WOOL MARKETS ACTIVE First local pooling and grading in the State Farm Bureau's third farmers' wool pool was done at 17 local pooling points in Jackson, Eaton, Lenawee and Washtenaw counties last week, beginning at Adrian and Eaton Rapids May 1, said the bureau. Three grading crews are in the field. They will visit from 75 to 100 local pooling points during the summer campaign, some of them twice. The bureau is making a forty percent cash advance on wool at the time of pooling. Last year Michigan farmers pooled 2,358,000 pounds of wool. Wool markets revived last week, said the bureau. Vigorous bidding by eastern wool houses trying to establish a market basis for the new crop was said to be an underlying cause. The American Woolen Company recently announced an increase in cloth prices of ten to 45 cents a yard, saying that mounting costs of raw materials was one reason for the increase. President Wood of that company said he believed woolen goods would not be bought again for several years at price levels which have prevailed recently. He said that the country is again on the verge of prosperous times. Snake-Eaters Avoid Venom. HARDIN PUT BACK ON HIS FEET TWICE

Was Relieved of Both Rheumatism and Stomach Trouble by Tanlac, States Los Angeles Man.

"For the second time Tanlac has put me on my feet, and you may know by that what I think of it," said William T. Hardin, 1406 Garden St., Los Angeles, Calif.

"Three years ago, I had rheumatism in my shoulders and neck so bad I could hardly work. I tried medicine after medicine only to get worse, but finally I got hold of Tanlac, and I haven't had a trace of rheumatism since.

"Then last summer my stomach got out of order, I lost my appetite and what little I did eat made me feel bloated, all stuffed up and miserable. I always felt weak, tired and worn out, and was so nervous I couldn't sleep.

"Well, Tanlac did a good job for me before, so I just got some more of it, and now it has again fixed me up, and I'm feeling strong and energetic like I used to. I'll tell the world Tanlac's the medicine for me."

Tanlac is sold by all good druggists.

"ALL aboard! All aboard!"

The guards who had charge of the London local which was due to stop at Hackney shortly after six o'clock in the evening, were even more insistent than usual in their demands one night in the summer, for the train was already late, and trying to make up time. But a cry of consternation from one of the men who was boarding the train brought the attendants flocking around him.

"Look!" he cried, pointing through the glass of the compartment toward the cushions of the seat on the far side. My God, man! Don't you see? They are soaked with blood! And there's a man's walking stick and a black leather bag! Where's the occupant of this compartment?"

That was the question which puzzled every member of the London police force, and especially Col. James Fraser, head of the department.

Where was the man who had evidently been murdered in the coach? Who was he?

The black bag contained no information whatever, and the walking stick was merely an ordinary one, lacking even initials. The guard who had charge of that car said that he "seemed to recall two men getting into that compartment at Fenchurch street, in London," but he wasn't sure.

When Colonel Fraser examined the car carefully, however, he found the print of a bloody hand—a hand with short, squat fingers—on the wall of the coach, evidently where the murderer had steadied himself after committing the crime. But where was the body?

This angle of the case was soon cleared up by the discovery of the body of a man near the railroad tracks in Victoria park. The head and face had been so disfigured that identification would have been almost impossible, had it not been for the card which was found in his vest pocket. By means of this it was found that the dead man was a certain Thomas Briggs, chief clerk of a London banking house, who had been on his way to visit his daughter in Peckham. According to his associates, he was in the habit of carrying a considerable sum of money with him, and also wore a very handsome watch and chain. When the body was discovered, however, the watch, chain and the money were missing.

Immediately after the body was discovered Colonel Fraser measured the fingers of the left hand, but found that they were entirely too long and well shaped to fit the bloody imprint on the wall of the coach.

Pinning his faith to the fact that the murderer would probably try to sell Briggs' watch and chain, the police settled down to watch all the pawn brokers in and around London, but days passed without any developments from this end of the case.

Finally, just as Fraser was nearing the end of his patience a second-hand dealer in Cheapside reported that a chain, similar to the one worn by the dead man, had been brought into his establishment on the day after the murder. The chain, he said, had been placed in with some others, and had slipped his mind, until he commenced to go over his stock. The only description he could give of the man who sold it was that he was "foreign-looking," in fact he felt certain he was a German.

More in order to quiet the press than because he attached any real importance to the discovery, Colonel Fraser made public the details of the dealer's story, and the following morning a man called at police headquarters, bringing with him a card which he said his daughter had found on the floor of the room recently occupied by Franz Muller. The card bore the name of the second-hand dealer who had purchased the chain!

Muller, stated Fraser's informant, was a German who had boarded in his house for some time past, but who had suddenly disappeared, leaving most of his effects behind him.

"Didn't happen to leave a photograph, did he?"

"Yes, sir, he did. Here it is," and the man produced a picture which the second-hand dealer immediately identified as the man who had sold him the chain.

It was a matter of only a few hours to trace the German to a steamship office and to find that he had sailed, 48 hours before, for America. Wishing his own men to have credit for the capture, Fraser dispatched two of them to New York on a fast boat, and when Muller stepped off the gangplank he was arrested for the murder of Thomas Briggs, although he vigorously protested his innocence, and stated that he had bought the chain from a man on the street. As further proof of his assertion, he produced Briggs' watch, which he said he had bought at the same time as the chain.

Inasmuch as the guard who had seen the man enter the coach at Fenchurch street could not positively identify Muller, the case against him appeared to be very flimsy—until Colonel Fraser compared the man's hand with the bloody outline on the wall of the coach. The two were identical to the thousandth part of an inch!

Some months later Franz Muller paid the penalty for his crime on the gallows.

Revives Old Archery Art. Hoquiam, Wash.—Wesley Evans has restored an ancient art in the Northwest. In the days before the coming of the white man the Indians obtained yew wood in the Cascade Mountains from which they made bows and arrows. Evans now makes the same pilgrimages to the woods, where he selects choice sticks for archery sets. He began the work as a pastime, but the fame of his yew wood articles spread and now he is compelled to employ help in his shop.

CROPS AND PROFIT

PROBLEMS JUST NOW PRESSING ON AGRICULTURISTS

Farmer on Low-Priced, Fertile Lands, Still to Be Had, in Best Possible Position.

The economic problems connected with the advantageous marketing of farm crops and the financing of the movement of those crops are pressing upon agriculture most severely. They will be solved, however, and while that solution is being worked out it is simply good sense on the farmer's part to make his efforts toward production tell to the very maximum, as best carrying him through the period of depression and hard times and placing him in the best position to take the greatest possible advantage of the better times to come. We may repeat that the cheapest farm crop, whether from fields or from live stock, is almost invariably the largest crop which can be obtained. Or in other words, the greater the crop, the greater the net profit. To attain such crops and to place himself in the advantageous position referred to above, the farmer must study, and must apply the results of his study to such problems as soil fertility, its conservation and increase; soil moisture, its control; cultural methods, suitable and productive varieties, etc., etc.

The question is how can you best accomplish and secure these things? Can they be done on high-priced lands, by paying high rents, with the prices you get for your produce no greater than may be had from that grown and raised on much cheaper lands, whose production is fully as great as that of the high-priced lands? The answer is unquestionably in favor of the low-priced lands, when they are selected because of their soil fertility and the other requirements necessary. It is not the purpose here to point out merely that the lands of Western Canada would prove a splendid and ready solution, but to emphasize the fact that in order to overcome your present difficulty, to remove some of the burden that you are laboring under, you must secure some line of cheaper operation, whether it be removal to other parts in your own country where such opportunity may offer, or take advantage of that which Western Canada affords.

For information regarding these advantages apply to any Canadian government agent—Advertisement.

EXAMPLE OF HIGH FINANCE

Many Who Go Into the Game Come Out of It Feeling Like This Country Boy.

Representative Rosenbloom said at a dinner in Wheeling: "The average man had better leave high finance alone. When the average man goes up against high finance he generally feels like the farm boy.

"A city boy had a half-dollar and a circus had just come to town; but the cheapest circus ticket cost 75 cents, and this put the city boy in a hole.

"But he was a financier in embryo, and so he went right off to a pawn broker's and pawned his half-dollar for 40 cents.

"Afterward he waylaid a country boy, displayed his pawn ticket, and offered to sell it for 85 cents. A half-dollar for 85 cents! Of course the country boy snapped up that bargain.

"The city boy with his 75 cents then hurried off to the circus. The country boy, after he had worked out this deal of his in high finance to the bitter end, sought a retired place and kicked himself."

To earn much money a man generally has to earn it the way he likes to.

Simple Explanation of American's Reverent Attitude Toward Relics of Great English Poet.

John D. Rockefeller, Jr., said in a Y. M. C. A. address: "A guide was showing a party of tourists over Milton's cottage at Chalfont St. Giles.

"This 'ere's 'is chair," said the guide and an American tiptoed out from the group of tourists and kissed the chair reverently.

"Say, guide," he said, choking a little, "I'd like to buy those two pieces of furniture for a souvenir. What do you ask for them?"

"They ain't for sale, sir." "Come on now. Name yer price. I'll give you anything in reason."

"No, no, sir. They ain't for sale." And the guide went on, "This is the cane wat the pore blind old man—" "Blind?" snorted the American. "I wish I had his vision. Blind! Why, you must be crazy, guide."

"Of course Milton was blind," the guide insisted.

"Milton?" And the American stamped to the door in disgust. "Milton? Holy smoke, man, I thought you were talking about Lipton."

Chilean Volcanic Disturbances. The eruptions in Chile last December were attributed to the volcanoes of Cañlle and Rinchua. They were accompanied by violent earthquakes and it was stated that deep crevices had formed in the mountain sides, from which steam was pouring.

Enormous damage was caused to grazing lands on the Argentine side of the frontier, which for 30 leagues was covered with cinders and volcanic ashes from the erupting peaks, which swept across Argentina, obscuring the sun. Ashes were reported to have fallen all the way across to the Atlantic ocean.

RATHER PUT MAMMA IN BAD

Her Offspring Had Chosen Decidedly Unpropitious Moment for "Fixin' Billy's Teef."

My fussy guest was getting ready to make her departure. She was in a hurry, but took time to comment on life in general and mine in particular. "Children are all right, I suppose, but so meddlesome. They snatch this and that and spoil everything."

"Not mine," I interrupted indignantly. "My children have a proper respect for others' property. They never touch anything that doesn't belong to them."

"Where's my dental floss?" panted my guest. "It was here a moment ago."

A frantic search ensued, ending in the kitchen. On the floor were yards and yards of dental floss, and at the end of the floss was my youngest child, her puppy held between her knees. "Fixin' Billy's teef, mummy!" —Chicago Tribune.

At What Age Should You Take Needless Risks With Your Health?

Is that a queer question? Then many people are doing a queer thing—and often it turns out to be a serious thing. The Federal Bureau of Education says in its rules for the health of school children that children should not drink coffee or tea.

This rule is based on the well-known fact that the drug element in coffee and tea whips up the nerves, and that serious ills often follow.

If it's a good rule for children to keep away from the harm of nerve-stimulation, isn't it a good rule for everybody?

Think it over. Granted that your body may stand more, can your judgment afford to risk more? Any doctor can tell you what coffee and tea often do to the health of adults as well as children.

There's no sacrifice in being safe. Postum is a delightful, satisfying mealtime beverage, wholesome and pleasant alike for adults and children. Postum has no age limits!

TWO BALL GAMES

Last week two ball games were played in Pinckney by the High School team and one composed of business men. The first game was close and was won by the business men, who were promptly challenged for a return game.

The second game was played as scheduled, but if reports are true, unfair advantage was taken in order to defeat the students. It is alleged that Pharmacist F. E. Weeks doped the men of his nine for three days and three nights with Vitamine yeast tablets, infusing a large amount of pep into their systems and the result was that they all batted hard and also raced the bases like scared cats, which is considered unsportsmanlike. One indignant senior co-ed says that she "has a good notion to quit going to Superintendent Week's Sunday School" and other dire results may develop in the future.

It is further alleged that Wm. Vince inveigled one of the student players into the barber shop to give him a shampoo but instead of using the usual dressing, he reptitiously massaged the student's head with triple fluid extract of bone, which caused the student player to steal third base when it was already occupied by a high school base runner, who was forced out at the plate after being run down by two alleged Vitaminists.

which caused the student to steal third base when it was already occupied by a high school base runner, who was forced out at the plate after being run down by two alleged Vitaminists.

It is also charged that the umpire is related to two of the business men players.

R. Day Bird, although himself a business man, pitched a few innings for the students without helping matters much. This also looks suspiciously like.

The business men connected in the nefarious plot were:

- C. Kennedy 3rd base
- Leo Lavey 2nd base
- Lorenzo Murphy Pitcher
- F. E. Weeks R. F.
- W. Vince L. F.
- W. Cook 1st base
- Roy Graham Shortstop
- W. Capple C. F.
- Roy Bird C.

The High School team is:

- S. Hall P.
- C. Cook C.
- D. Reason 1st
- C. Hooker 2nd
- N. Campbell 3rd
- J. C. Bowman S.
