ELECTION OVER

After a hard fought battle the results of election are in doubt as we go to press. A radio message at 10:30 this morning states that Ferris is elected Senator by 20,000 majority.

First reports in Livingston county were that Drewry, Coll, Hoff and Van Winkle were elected but a later message from Howell gave Drewry a majority, with all other county candidates in doubt.

The vote in Putnam township was large and all Democratic candidates received substantial majorities.

Following are the majorities for the principal candidates as Putnam township voted.

THE LYCEUM COURSE

Thursday, November 16th

The second number on the Lyceum Course will be given at the opera house Thursday evening, November 9th.

Pinckney is fortunate in securing for this occasion the noted poet, Edmund Vance Cooke, whose pen has entertained millions of people with entertainment and pleasure with his infectious humor, delightful wit and pleasing philosophy.

Mr. Cooke's programs are for two kinds of people—those who like poetry and those who don't. One critic says: "Edmund Vance Cooke is an actor as well as poet and humorist." He is a popular favorite everywhere as is shown by the large number of press notices from the many cities where he has appeared.

This is the second number on the High School lyceum course. If you missed the first one you can buy tickets for the remaining numbers or for this number alone.

Don't forget the date, Thursday evening, November 16th.

RED CROSS NOTES

The annual Red Cross Roll Call will begin November 11. If you are interested in the peace program as carried on by the Red Cross, which includes aid to soldiers and soldiers' families; also health work in each community, send your membership dues ($1.00) to the County Treasurer.

In Livingston County the Red Cross organization has employed for the past year a County nurse and are now entering upon the second year of health work in the county. Miss Grace Lewis the nurse, has visited all the schools of the county examining the pupils, also keeping a card index of each school, advising the parents where corrections were necessary for the eyes, ears nose and throat; also keeping her office open in Howell all day Saturday each week in order that parents may consult her at that time. Of the $1.00 membership 50 cents goes to the national society to be used everywhere in the world to relieve suffering. The other 50 cents stays in the county for our local health work.

We know you want to help make Livingston County the healthiest county in the state. Send your dues to Mrs. A. Smith, Howell Michigan.

MRS. W. P. VAN WINKLE,
Chairman A. R. C.

DECISION AFFIRMED

A decision has just been handed down by the Supreme Court in the Deceasare case, affirming the conviction of Frank Deceasare, Detroit bootlegger by the Livingston County Circuit Court at Howell a year and a half ago. This was the first case tried by Prosecutor Glenn C. Yelland of Howell after assuming office.

It will be remembered that on December 4, 1920 three men in a big Packard car drove into Howell and were arrested by Sheriff Miller who searched the car and found a quantity of booze.

Deceasare's defense held that the constitutional rights were invaded by searching his car without first obtaining a search warrant and appealed the case to the higher court with the result above stated, the decision being handed down yesterday after pending in the Supreme Court since April last. The court held that the officers have a right to search a car if an arrest has been made first and they have reasonable grounds that there is a violation of the law.

NINIAN

SYNOPSIS.—General factotum in the house of her sister Ina, wife of Herbert Deacon, in the small town of Warbleton. Lulu Bett leads a dull, cramped existence, with which she is constantly at enmity, though apparently satisfied with her lot. She has natural thoughts and aspirations which neither her sister nor her brother-in-law seemingly can comprehend. To Mr. Deacon comes Bobby Larkin, recently graduated high-school youth, secretly enamored of Deacon's elder daughter, Luana, an applicant for a "job" around the Deacon house. He is engaged, his occupation to be to keep the lawn in trim. The family is excited over the news of an approaching visit from Deacon's brother Ninian, whom he had not seen for many years. Deacon jokes with Lulu, with subtle meaning, concerning the coming meeting.

11 May.

Lulu was dusting the parlor. The parlor was rarely used, but every morning it was dusted. By Lulu.

She dusted the black walnut center table which was of Ina's choosing, and looked like Ina, shining, complacent, abundantly curved. The leather rocker, too, looked like Ina, brown, plumply upholstered, tipping back a bit. Really, the davenport looked like Ina, for its chintz pattern seemed to bear a design of lifted eyebrows and arch, reproachful eyes.

Lulu dusted the upright piano, and that was like Dwight—in a perpetual attitude of rearing back, with paws out, playful, but capable, too, of roaring a ready bass.

And the black fireplace—there was Mrs. Bett to the life. Colorless, fireless, and with a dust of ashes.

In the midst of all was Lulu herself reflected in the narrow pier glass, bodiless-looking in her blue gingham gown, but somehow alive—natural.

This pier glass Lulu approached with expectation, not because of herself but because of the photograph on its low marble shelf. A large photograph of a man with evident eyes, evident lips, evident cheeks—and each of the six were rounded and convex. You could construct the rest of him. Down there under the glass you could imagine him extending, rounded and convex, with plump hands and curly thumbs and snug clothes. It was Ninian Deacon, Dwight's brother.

Every day since his coming had been announced Lulu, dusting the parlor, had seen the photograph looking at her with its eyes somehow new. Or were her own eyes new? She dusted this photograph with a difference, lifted, dusted, set it back, less as a process than as an experience. As she dusted the mirror and saw his trim semblance over against her own bodiless reflection, she hurried away. But the eyes of the picture followed her, and she liked it.

She dusted the south window sill and saw Bobby Larkin come round the house and go to the woodsied for the lawn mower. She heard the smooth blur of the cutter. Not six times had Bobby traversed the lawn when Lulu saw DI emerge from the house. DI had been curing for her curacy and she carried her bird bath and went to the well, and Lulu divined that DI had deliberately disregarded the handy kitchen taps. Lulu dusted the south window and watched, and in her watching was no quality of spying or of criticism. Rather, she looked out on something in which she had never shared, could not by any chance imagine herself sharing.

The south windows were open. Airs of May bore the soft talking. "Oh, Bobby, will you pump while I hold this?" And again: "Now wait till I rinse." And again: "You needn't be so glum—the village salutation signifying kindly attention.

Bobby now first spoke: "Who's glum?" he countered, gloomily. The iron of those days when she had laughed at him was deep within him, and this she now divined, and said absently:

"I used to think you were pretty nice. But I don't like you any more."

"Yes, you used to." Bobby repeated derisively. "Is that why you made fun of me all the time?"

At this DI colored and tapped her foot on the well-curb. He seemed to have her now, and enjoyed his triumph. But DI looked up at him shyly and looked down. "I had to," she admitted. "They were all teasing me about you."

"They were?" This was a new thought to him. Teasing her about him, were they? He straightened. "Huh!" he said, in magnificent evasion.

"I had to make them stop, so I teased you. I—I never wanted to." Again the upward look. "Well!" Bobby stared at her. "I never thought it was anything like that."

"Of course you didn't." She tossed back her bright hair, met his eyes full. "And you never came where I could tell you. I wanted to tell you." She ran into the house. Lulu lowered her eyes. It was as if she had witnessed the exercise of some secret gift, had seen a cocoon open or an egg hatch. She was thinking.

"How easy she done it. Got him right over. But how did she do that?" Dusting the Dwight-like piano, Lulu looked over-shoulder, with a manner of speculation, at the photograph of Ninian.

Bobby mowed and pondered. The magnificent conceit of the male in his understanding of the female character was sufficiently developed to cause him to welcome the improvisation which he had just heard. Perhaps that was the way it had been. Of course that was the way it had been. What a fool he had been not to understand. He cast his eyes repeatedly toward the house. He managed to make the job last over so that he could return in the afternoon. He was not conscious of planning this, but it was in some manner contrived for him by forces of his own with which he seemed to be co-operating without his conscious will. Continually he glanced toward the house.

These glances Lulu saw. She was a woman of thirty-four and DI and Bobby were eighteen, but Lulu felt for them no adult indulgence. She felt that sweetness of attention which we bestow upon May robins. She felt more.

She cut a fresh cake, filled a plate, called to DI, saying: "Take some out to that Bobby Larkin, why don't you?" It was Lulu's way of participating. It was her vicarious thrill.

After supper Dwight and Ina took their books and departed to the Chautauqua circle. To these meetings Lulu never went. The reason seemed to be that she never went anywhere.

When they were gone Lulu felt an instant liberation. She turned absently to the garden and dug round things with her finger. And she thought about the brightness of that Chautauqua scene to which Ina and Dwight had gone. Lulu thought about such gatherings in somewhat the way that a futurist receives the subjects of his art—forms not vague, but heightened to intolerable definiteness, acute color, and always motion—motion as an integral part of the desirable. But a factor of all was that Lulu herself was the participant, not the onlooker. The perfection of her dream was not impaired by any longing. She had her dream as a saint her sense of heaven.

"Lulu!" her mother called. "You come out of that damp." She obeyed, as she had obeyed that voice all her life. But she took one last look down the dim street. She had not known it, but superimposed on her Chautauqua thoughts had been her faint hope that it would be tonight, while she was in the garden alone, that Ninian Deacon would arrive. And she had on her wool chally, her coral beads, her cameo pin.

She went into the lighted dining room. Monona was in bed. DI was not there. Mrs. Bett was in Dwight Herbert's leather chair and she lolled at her ease. It was strange to see this woman, usually so erect and tense, now actually loling, as if loling were the positive, the vital, and her ordinary rigidity a negation of her. In some corresponding orgy of leisure and liberation, Lulu sat down with no need.

"Nin ought to make over her delaine." Mrs. Bett comfortably began. They talked of this, devised a mode, recalled other delaines. "Dear, dear," said Mrs. Bett, "I had on a delaine when I met your father." She described it. Both women talked freely, with animation. They were individuals and alive. To the two pallid beings accessory to the Deacons' presence, Mrs. Bett and her daughter Lulu now bore no relationship. They emerged, had opinions, contradicted, their eyes were bright.

Toward nine o'clock Mrs. Bett announced that she thought she should have a lunch. This was debauchery. She brought in bread and butter, and a dish of cold canned peas. She was committing all the excesses that she knew—offering opinions, laughing, eating. It was to be seen that this woman had an immense store of vitality, perpetually submerged.

When she had eaten she grew sleepy—rather cross at the last and inclined to hold up her sister's excellencies to Lulu; and, at Lulu's defense lifted an uncut weapon.

"What's the use of finding fault with Inie? Where'd you been if she hadn't married?"

Lulu said nothing.

"What say?" Mrs. Bett demanded shrilly. She was enjoying it. Lulu said no more. After a long time:

"You always was jealous of Inie," said Mrs. Bett, and went to her bed. As soon as her mother's door had closed, Lulu took the lamp from its bracket, stretching up her long body and her long arms until her skirt lifted and she wore her really slim and pretty feet. Lulu's feet gave news of some other Lulu, but slightly incarnate. Perhaps, so far, incarnate only in her feet and her long hair.

She took the lamp to the parlor and stood before the photograph of Ninian Deacon, and looked her fill. She did not admire the photograph, but she wanted to look at it. The house was still, there was no possibility of interruption. The occasion became sensation, which she made no effort to quench. She held a rendezvous with, she knew not what.

In the early hours of the next afternoon with the sun shining across the threshold, Lulu was paring something at the kitchen table. Mrs. Bett was asleep. ("I don't blame you a bit, mother," Lulu had said, as her mother named the intention.) Ina was asleep. (But Ina always took off the curse by calling it her "si-esta," long!) Monona was playing with a neighbor's child—you heard their shrill yet lovely laughter as they obeyed the adult law that motion is pleasure. DI was not there.

A man came round the house and stood tying a puppy to the porch post. A long shadow fell through the west doorway, the puppy whined.

"Oh," said this man, "I didn't mean to arrive at the back door, but since I'm here—"

He lifted a suitcase to the porch, entered and filled the kitchen. "It's Ina, isn't it?" he said. "I'm her sister," said Lulu, and understood that he was here at last.

"Well, I'm Bert's brother," said Ninian. "So I can come in, can't I?"

He did so, turned round like a dog before his chair and sat down heavily, forcing his fingers through heavy, upspringing brown hair.

"Oh, yes," said Lulu. "I'll call Ina. She's asleep."

"Don't call her, then," said Ninian. "Let's you and I get acquainted."

He said it absently, hardly looking at her.

"I'll get the pup a drink if you can spare me a basin," he added.

Lulu brought the basin and, while he went to the dog, she ran tiptoeing to the dining room china closet and brought a cut-glass tumbler, as heavy, as ungrainy as a stone crock. This she filled with milk.

"I thought maybe . . ." said she, and offered it.

"Thank you," said Ninian, and drained it. "Making pies, as I live," he observed, and brought his chair nearer to the table. "I didn't know Ina had a sister," he went on. "I remember now Bert said he had two of her relatives—"

Lulu flushed and glanced at him pitifully.

"He has," she said. "It's my mother and me. But we do quite a good deal of the work."

"I'll bet you do," said Ninian, and did not perceive that anything had been violated. "What's your name?" he hethought.

She was in an immense and obscure excitement. Her manner was serene, her hands as they went on with the peeling did not tremble; her replies were given with sufficient quiet. But she told him her name as one tells something of another and more remote creature. She felt as one may feel in catastrophe—no sharp understanding, but merely the sense that the thing cannot possibly be happening.

"You folks expect me?" he went on. "Oh, yes!" she cried, almost with vehemence. "Why, we've looked for you every day."

"See," he said, "how long have they been married?" Lulu flushed as she answered: "Fifteen years."

"And Nin into—say, Nin, what are you, anyway?"

Verging on Bootlegging. "The air around here is like wine." "Then I guess we'd better not pump any into our tires."

BOYS' AND GIRLS' CLUB RALLY

The boys' and girls' club rally as a final windup of club work for this year took place at the Howell High School, Saturday Nov. 4 and was, without question enjoyed by all.

The program of the day was opened by music by everyone with Miss Frances Randall at the piano. This was followed by the address of welcome by A. Riley Crittenden, Secretary of the Board of Commerce of Howell, who, in a very pleasing manner, showed the hearty cooperation of the city. At noon a lunch furnished by the Board of Commerce was served to all.

Miss Van Heulen, Assistant State Club Leader, gave a very interesting talk on the value of club work and what is being done in other parts of the state. Livingston County, where there hadn't been any club work done until four months ago, is now up near the front ranks.

R. C. Reed, Secretary of the Michigan Milk Producers' followed with a very interesting talk on general conditions existing in different states and value of club work in fitting club members for the future.

As all the record books were not completed, the awards will not be given out until the latter part of the week.

The final wind-up was a trip to the observation tower in the court house, led by T. B. Gilkes and City Marshall Hardy, who had all arrangements made. Judge Collins gave them a very interesting ten minute talk, after which they were shown through the jail by Deputy Sheriff Moran, which ended the day.

The opportunity of having Dr. David Friday President of the Michigan Agriculture College at a banquet in Howell on November 17 is sure a fortunate one. The appreciation of the public and keen interest shown is very manifest by the number of reservations that have already been made with County Agent C. L. Bolander. Dr. Friday, no doubt, will have a message on the economical conditions today that every good citizen, men and women, want to know and should know. Being directly interested in farming himself, and knowing the problems confronting the business men, there is, without question no man so able to present the message as he.

The banquet, which will start promptly at 6:30 P. M., fast time, will be held in the gymnasium at the Howell High School. Supt. Page who is cooperating in every way possible, is now making arrangements with Miss Bullis of the Domestic Science Department, who will prepare the whole menu. The menu, which has not as yet been completed, will have a healthy variety of fish and meat and its cooperating constituents. The price will be 75 cents per plate.

Anyone who has not received a reservation card and who is interested in being present, should write or see Supt. Page of the High School, or County Agent C. L. Bolander at once. As the space is limited to three hundred, it is necessary to get the reservations at once, so as to be able to take care of everything efficiently.

MADE REALISTIC ON SCREEN

Effect of Tree Being Struck by Lightning Produced With Remarkable Effectiveness.

In one of the leading film productions there is a very realistic storm scene, and as a team of horses is being driven by a tree is struck by lightning. This wonderful lightning effect was entirely artificial. A charge of flashlight powder was laid in the tree, over which the bark was replaced. An electric wire ran from the charge to a battery a little distance away.

Two big searchlights were then connected up with a portable electric generator a few feet behind the camera and focused on the tree at the spot where the flashlight charge was placed. The night was pitch dark when the scene was taken. The character in the scene was placed, and the signal given. The camera man started "shooting." At a word from the director, the two big lights were suddenly flashed on, and off again, illuminating the entire scene with a sudden blinding flash of light.

At the same time the flashlight charge in the tree was exploded, giving the effect of a bolt of lightning coming in contact with the tree. Then all was darkness again. A few carefully placed scratches on the emulsion of the film ahead of the scene served as perfect lightning streaks just before the big flash.

FARMER'S WILL HAVE HELP, SAYS WALLACE

U. S. Cabinet Member Reviews Agricultural Legislation at M. A. C. Meeting

Reviewing farm legislation enacted by the recent United States Congress and discussing the future of the agricultural industry, Henry C. Wallace, secretary of agriculture in the Harding cabinet, addressed thousands of farmers, business men, and college students on the campus of the Michigan Agricultural College last week.

"During the past eighteen months the needs of agriculture, both temporary and permanent, have had more sympathetic and intelligent consideration at the hands of Congress than during any other similar period in our entire history," said Wallace during his address.

"In the end the largest responsibility rests upon the farmer himself, but there are some things which must be done by legislation and other things which must be done by administrative action, if the farmer is to have that free hand which is absolutely necessary for him to produce efficiently and continuously to feed our people at reasonable cost. These things the national government, and more particularly the U. S. Department of Agriculture, have been endeavoring and will continue to endeavor to provide for the farmers of the nation.

"An encouraging development of the last two years is the better appreciation by the general public of the national dependence upon a prosperous agriculture. Because of this it is going to be much easier for agriculture to be re-established upon a sound and enduring basis.

Cornerstones of M. A. C.'s two new buildings, a library and a home economics building, were laid on the morning of Wallace's visit to the college, with impressive ceremonies. Gov. Alex Groesbeck, the State Board of Agriculture, President David Friday, Sec'y. H. H. Halladay and various other prominent state officers took part in the exercises.

How Much do you Lose Every Year from Rats and Mice?

The annual tribute to these pests is millions and you pay your share

They can be Destroyed at Small Cost

Of the many rat and mice poisons, the one most highly recommended by the U. S. Government is

Barium Carbonate

Barium Carbonate is peculiarly efficacious for getting rid of rats and mice. It destroys the rodent nuisances but is practically harmless to humans and all domesticated animals, so it can be used about the house or barn with very little danger to anybody or any form of animal life except those you wish to get rid of. It is the base of many high priced secret rat poisons, but its true cost is small. Enough to destroy a thousand rats can be bought at our store for an insignificant sum

WE WANT YOU TO TRY BARIUM CARBONATE

and in order to prove its efficiency we will place it on sale at 20 cents per ounce—enough to destroy 1000 rats.
Full directions to use Barium Carbonate given.

Mason—The annual meeting of the Ingham county Farm Bureau held in the courtroom here, brought out a very small attendance. L. T. Lasenby was again elected president and Frank Seely was re-elected secretary. The organization is in good shape financially, having a substantial balance of some $1800 on hand.

Battle Creek—The price of milk was advanced from 10 to 12 cents a quart here by milk distributors, following a raise in price by the Calhoun County Milk Producers from $2.50 to $3 per hundred pounds. Producers say that all supplies which go into the milk producing business have recently been raised around 30 per cent.

Muskegon—The Crosby Transportation Co. will start work soon on two large boats to be built for the Muskegon-Milwaukee run. George F. Munzer, traffic manager of the company, was in Muskegon recently making arrangements for the placing of $800,000 in bonds on the market in connection with the financing of the project.

Cadillac—Though the local Michigan Potato Growers' exchange is handling about 25 carloads of potatoes a day, it could ship many more if cars were available. The delayed movement of potatoes, however, is seen as a factor in the farmer's favor. He will receive more for his product when it is eventually shipped, it was stated.

Muskegon—"Swat the Fly" was the unseasonable warning issued Nov. 1 by the Muskegon Health Department. The department says it believes the fly is the carrier of typhoid fever germs in this city. There are now 12 mild cases of typhoid fever and the department says a further spread is not expected if persons will "swat the fly."

October levies on luxuries were greater than for many months, he said.

Charlotte—After a lapse of more than 30 years since his death, a petition has been presented in probate court here for the re-opening of the estate of Henry L. Robinson, of Bellevue, and the naming of Attorney R. R. McPeck of this city as administrator. The reason for asking the continuance of the administration of the estate is that the final accounting had been made without any mention of the real estate being made or the heirs being determined.

Grand Rapids—Ray Judd, 17, farmer boy, living near Mesick, shot and killed Loretta Redman, 16, shot and seriously injured Nettie White, also aged 16 and then turned his gun on himself, committing suicide. The girls had been attending a high school lyceum lecture at Mesick. Judd, also had attended the lecture, hastened home for his gun, met the girls and fired upon them. Monroe—Four big paper mills here are working full blast, day and night, with more business in sight. There are more than 3,600 hands employed. Rather, superintendent of the Ionia schools, was made vice-chairman. The secretary will be appointed by the executive board of the state association.

Muskegon—"Stop, Look, Listen" warning posts at railroad crossings in Michigan are soon to pass, say county road officials. They are giving away to progress. Under the new law, signposts announcing railroad crossings are placed 300 feet from tracks, and these will take the place of warnings of the olden days. The new posts were brought about by automobile traffic. The new signs give the motorist warning before he reaches the crossing and can be seen at night.

Monroe—A mail pouch, containing first class mail gathered from southern points, stolen from the Pere Marquette depot in this city, was found by Postmaster Sidney Younglove, in a field within the city limits of Monroe. The lock to the pouch had been jimmied, most of the letters opened, but the contents were left intact. Many checks were found nearby. It is believed the thugs were amateurs and obtained but little money. Furs stolen from parcel post sacks have not been recovered.

Muskegon—Eugene Meurer, Muskegon's millionaire paper manufacturer, is happy with the prospect of getting his $40,000 back. He received word that Mrs. Margaret Wasserman had sailed from Germany to resume her work in his home. She left several months ago after a dispute with Meurer's daughter following the announcement that Meurer had given the servant $40,000 in cash in hopes of keeping her when she threatened to leave. Since the cook left, Meurer's daughters also have moved away.

RAILWAY EXECUTIVE TAKEN BY DEATH WHILE TRAVELING

THOMAS DEWITT CUYLER

Philadelphia—Too much hard and continuous work is believed by friends to have been the chief factor that led to the sudden death of Thomas DeWitt Cuyler, national railroad figure, who was found dead in a Pennsylvania railroad private car Nov. 2. He had for some time warned him to "go slow," telling him that for a man of his years—he was 68—he was working too hard.

Mr. Cuyler, who was chairman of the Association of Railway executives and a director in the Pennsylvania, the Santa Fe and the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroads, died as his car was coming into Philadelphia from Rochester, N. Y., where he spoke on railroad matters. A report made to the coroner's office gave the cause of death as acute dilation of the heart.

As president of the Association of Railway Executives Mr. Cuyler was severely criticized by labor leaders who charged him with a leading part in the movement for reduction of wages.

BORAH PREDICTS THIRD PARTY

Says People Will Seek Relief Through New Political Organization.

Spokane, Wash.—Prediction that a third party movement will sweep the country in 1924, unless there is a complete change of program on the part of the Republican party by the adoption of a "liberal and constructive policy," was made by United States Senator William E. Borah, of Idaho, here. Senator Borah is on a speaking tour.

"A man is totally blind to political conditions in this country who does not understand that there is practically a political revolution," he declared. "The people are going to have relief, and if they cannot get it through the old parties, they will get it through a new party."

"The economic conditions growing out of, among other things, governmental extravagance and oppressive taxation, demand a change of program and policy, and if the Republican party does not give it, another party will."

It was her third experience with what she terms the puritanical mind. At Providence she was requested to delete two dances because she didn't wear tights beneath her filmy costume. "Just as if a silk encased knee were more moral than an unclad one," she sniffed as she boarded her train.

CO-OPERATIVES TO HOLD FIRST MEET

INVITATIONS OUT FOR NATIONAL COUNCIL OF FARMERS AT WASHINGTON, DEC. 14-16.

MICHIGAN DELEGATES TO ATTEND

Better Marketing of Agricultural Products to be Chief Topic to Receive Consideration.

Washington—Invitations to send delegates to the first annual convention of the National Council of Farmers' Co-operative Marketing Association were sent out last week from headquarters of the national committee to more than 200 co-operative marketing associations of the commodity type including among others in Michigan, the Michigan live-stock exchange, and the Farm Bureau Produce exchange in Detroit, the Michigan Farm Bureau Elevator exchange and the Michigan State Farm Bureau wool pool, of Lansing, the Michigan Fruit Growers' exchange of Benton Harbor, and the Michigan Potato Growers' exchange of Cadillac. This will be the first nation-wide meeting of commodity co-operative marketing associations, or farmers' business organizations for orderly marketing, ever held in the United States. It is scheduled for December 14 to 16, 1922, in Washington.

While one of the main features of the convention program is consideration and recommendation from the standpoint of co-operative marketing associations of rural credits legislation, all common problems of co-operative marketing will be considered and problems common to handling of each commodity will be discussed by group meetings of representatives of organizations handling the same product.

KIDNAPPER GETS LONG TERM

Mob Threatens Man Who Confessed Luring Away 12-Year Girl.

Muskegon—Hurried from the city where a frenzied mob was threatening his life, Raymond Eugene Wilson, 31 years old, confessed kidnaper of 12-year-old Rosalie Shanty, was taken to Marquette, to begin serving a 35 to 40 years sentence.

As the judge pronounced the sentence and recommended that Wilson be confined for the maximum term, there was a storm of applause. Instantly, Judge Vanderwerp leaped to his feet and sharply rebuked the spectators.

Wilson confessed he lured Rosalie Shanty, pretty 12-year-old champion swimmer of Muskegon, to a lonely spot in the jack pine lands near Dublin, Mich., and attacked her. The girl was found wandering in the woods, half nude, and 81 miles from home. She is expected to live but may suffer for many months from the effects of exposure.

U.S. DEBT INCREASES IN OCTOBER

Issuance of New Securities Causes Rise of $265,000,000.

Washington—An increase of more than $265,000,000 in the public debt during October, is shown in figures made public by the treasury. On October 31, the gross public debt stood at $23,077,000,000, as compared with $22,812,000,000 on September 30, and with $23,459,000,000 on October 31, 1921.

Issuance of government securities in excess of redemptions during the month, particularly the half billion dollar bond issue, treasury officials explained, was responsible for the increase, but was not regarded as interfering with the orderly reduction of the national debt, which is effected quarterly.

OLD RAGS USED IN ROOFING

Discarded Odds and Ends Play an Important Part in the Nation's Housing Supply.

Old rags play an important part in the nation's housing supply, as most of the roofs on modern homes are partly made from them. In the form of roll roofings and prepared shingles, old rags cover more American homes than all other types combined. In the preparation of asphalt materials for roofing purposes thousands of tons of rags are made use of every year. Thrift states.

After the housewife has thrown away her accumulation of odds and ends or sold them to the leather-lunged junk man who roams the streets of all American cities and towns with his jingling bell, they pass through many hands before eventually reaching the factory, where they are sorted and reduced to a pulp. This is made into a raw, coarse fabric of long fiber and great durability. Into every pore and opening of this cloth hot asphalt is pressed and the material is then covered on both sides with asphalt and crushed slate. The product of the process is a very durable, waterproof solid material which is used to cover most American houses.

Anyway, It Pays.

About ten days ago Caulte lost a $10 bill. He advertised his loss and two days later a man called and delivered to him the bill. Caulte gave the man a reward and thought no more about the incident, except to reflect that mankind was more honest than most people were willing to admit. A few days later he changed suits and in the hip pocket of the other suit found the $10 bill that he had supposed lost.

It seems difficult to draw a moral from this tale, but it undoubtedly must be one in favor of the great American art of advertising.

Frog Carries Young in Pouch.

Lions symbolize Africa; tigers, Asia; and the kangaroos, Australia, but South America's most characteristic creature is the frog, says A. Kingsley Noble in the Mentor Magazine. There are no important mammals in South America, but there are more kinds of frogs there than anywhere else in the world. Of these there is no more interesting one than the marsupial frog, which carries its young in a pouch on its back. Noble spent many days with a Harvard museum of comparative zoology expedition studying South American frogs.

Shot!

Maurice, nine years old, received the anti-toxoid treatment when a diphtheria epidemic seemed imminent in the town where he lived just at the beginning of the school term. A few days after the little fellow's visit to the doctor a friend, grown-up, met Maurice on the street and he was stilly stinking along leaning heavily on a slender pole in his hands. Thinking he was acting, as children are wont to do, she gayly inquired: "Why, Maurice, what is the matter with you?" Maurice stopped and eyed her for a few seconds, surprise, interrogation and disgust mingled in his look, and then: "Why, I got shot!" he exclaimed.—Indianapolis News.

INSECT PESTS LIVE IN GARDEN REFUSE

Cleaning Up Vines and Rubbish Will Reduce Losses for Next Year

Losses in gardens and on truck farms caused by insect pests and diseases can be materially lowered by cleaning up refuse left on the land after crops are harvested according to Prof. E. P. Lewis of the horticultural department of the Michigan Agricultural College.

Clean culture in the field seed-bed or greenhouse will greatly reduce the cost of production and also result in a product of better appearance and higher quality.

After a crop has been harvested, there is usually a residue which is left in the field, such as cabbage stumps, asparagus tops, celery trimmings, tomato vines, and rejected plants. This refuse affords an ideal place for insects peculiar to the crop to multiply until killing frosts, and then to hibernate over winter, insuring injury to similar crops the following year.

Many fungus and bacterial diseases pass the winter on the crop residue and cause primary infection in the spring.

As soon as the land crop is harvested, the land should be plowed and planted to a suitable cover crop, or to a succession planting. Deep plowing is usually recommended so that the materials will not be brought to the surface by cultivation until the germs and insects have been killed. In barely infested fields the residue should be burned.

Many insects and disease pests live for a part of their existence on allied plants or weeds which grow in the field or in adjoining fields. Thus the eradication of weeds is an important factor in proper sanitation. The burning of fence rows and grasslands is effective in controlling army worms, chinch bugs, grasshoppers and plant lice. Any method of breaking up the hiding place of the insect or disease pests will greatly lessen the danger of infection or attack the following year.

Why Egyptians Are Hopeful.

Egypt is looking for better times on the strength of a tradition that prosperity always comes after seven lean years. She has just gone through the proverbial seven years and a return of prosperity is anticipated in a flood of tourists. In these seven years, however, great changes have taken place in the matter of the water supplies of some of the larger cities and also in the matter of transportation. Travelers will find it much more comfortable to get about than heretofore. The motor car has been extensively introduced and the main roads have been improved for them.

The Burden Is Already Too Heavy

The motorists of Michigan are already paying a tax equalling 5.12 per cent of the value of their property as compared with a 2.90 per cent tax on real and personal property in the state. A one cent gasoline tax would add another .01 per cent to the motorist's tax burden, making 8.13 per cent in all. Isn't it time that a more equitable distribution of our taxes was made instead of putting a bigger load on the car owner?

GASOLINE TAX WOULD ADD UNFAIR BURDEN ON AUTOMOBILE OWNERS

Proponents of Scheme Working to Force a One Cent a Gallon Penalty Through Next Legislature—Motorists Already Paying More Than Just Share of Taxes.

By Colonel Sidney D. Waldon, President, Detroit Automobile Club.

Michigan motorists will soon be paying the equivalent of 8.13 per cent per annum in taxes on the valuation of their motor vehicles if the proponents of the proposed gasoline tax have their way and force that measure through the 1923 Legislature in January.

Figures furnished the Detroit Automobile Club by oil companies dealing in gasoline within the State of Michigan indicate that the total percentage of taxes will reach this unusually high figure with the gas tax added.
