MAMMOTH SUMMER RESORT

Reeves' Mill Pond to be Made Into Large Lake

Negotiations for the sale of the Van Winkle property have been under way for some time and last week the water power rights and 5 acres of beautiful grove on the edge of the Reeves Mill Pond, were sold by R. Clinton to Detroit real estate parties. Five hundred and seventy-five acres, all of the C. V. Van Winkle property, are under option which is expected to be taken up very soon.

It is the intention of the promoters to raise the water to the highest possible level, and this will add one more lake to over thirty that are within a radius of five miles from Pinckney.

A beautiful public park and free camping grounds are expected to be built and a summer resort of large magnitude will be in operation in a short time if the plans of the promoters are realized.

SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES

Ventilation

Indoor air is vitiated by the occupants of the rooms, by fires, by illuminants other than electricity, by dust, gases, and smoke, particularly tobacco smoke. To sweep out the used air and admit a fresh supply of pure air is the business of ventilation. Good ventilation requires that the air in the house shall be kept in gentle, if imperceptible, motion; that it shall be warmed or cooled to the right temperature and shall have the proper degree of humidity and freshness.

Windows and outside doors are the chief means of ventilating the ordinary home and should be kept open most of the time in summer and be opened at frequent intervals in winter. The best way to ventilate a room is to open the windows or doors on opposite sides in order to secure a cross current. If the wind happens to be blowing strongly, it will speedily fill every part of the house with clean, fresh air, but on a still day the process will take longer. Every occupied room in the house, including dining room and sitting rooms, should be completely flushed with pure outdoor air at least once in 24 hours.

To prevent the cold air from chilling the floor a window board may be inserted in the opening made when the lower sash is raised a few inches, which permits the cold air to enter the room between the two sashes, while the heated air passes out through a slight opening at the top of the window. This method of ventilation is particularly well adapted to rooms which are in constant use. In severe northern winters it is a very difficult matter to keep the house comfortably warm and at the same time to keep the air fresh. In the daytime the rooms may be aired when they are not in use. Rooms which have been chilled must be warmed again before children come into them. The play room or sitting room may be aired after the children have gone out or while they are asleep, and the bedrooms may be flushed thoroughly at least once during the day even in the coldest weather. At night at least one window in the bedroom should be constantly open, even if only a crack. The children can be put into sleeping bags, using two or three if necessary. The beds can be screened to protect the children from drafts or the heat can be kept on all night; but if they are warmly covered, children will be benefited in every way by the fresh air. One method of ventilating bedrooms in cold weather is to cover an ordinary window screen with a thickness of two of cheesecloth and insert it in the widely opened window. A screen of this kind will afford a surprising amount of protection against a too sudden inrush of icy air.

Sleeping porches have largely solved the question of ventilation for bedrooms, and wherever such a porch is available the children may safely use it after they are past infancy, except in extremely cold or stormy weather and when a high wind is blowing. There is a popular prejudice against drafts, but after a person has become accustomed to air in motion he will find out that he does not suffer from it. Children who are used to rooms through which a gentle current of air is constantly passing are far less likely to suffer from diseases of the nose and throat than are those who are kept in tight rooms where the air is still and tends to become overheated. An open fireplace or grate is one of the best means of securing good ventilation. No system of ventilation, however, faithfully carried keeps the indoor air suitable for children to live in continuously. As one writer has said, it is necessary also to "ventilate the children." Even in winter and in stormy weather, when many forms of outdoor life are necessarily curtailed, a sheltered porch, preferably on the sunny side of the house, will make it possible for the children to have many happy and beneficial hours out of doors, while in the milder months they should live out of doors as large a part of the day as possible.

Heating

A heating system is successful when it warms the house so well that windows may be kept slightly open much of the time, even in cold weather. A system that requires the rooms to be sealed in order to be kept comfortably warm is bad. The real and practical problem of heating is the cost of fuel, but "coal is cheaper than colds."

Houses in the United States are usually heated by indirect radiation—that is, by steam, hot water, or hot air—or by direct radiant produced by stoves of various kinds or by open fires. Hot water and steam are clean and easily controlled and give an even heat throughout the house, but houses and apartments thus warmed are apt to be overheated much of the time because of the ease with which the heat is distributed. Neither system brings fresh air into the rooms. A hot-air furnace is troublesome and dusty, but has the advantage of combining ventilation with heating. All indirect systems make the inside air too dry, but various methods of adding moisture medium-sized house requires the addition to the air of 10 gallons or more of moisture every 24 hours. Shallow pans of water on the registers, radiators, or stove will keep the air in the rooms somewhat moist.

Stoves help to keep the air in the room in circulation, but distribute the heat unevenly. A fireplace or an open stove is an excellent ventilator and is useful as an accessory to a general heating system. Every open fire should be covered with a strong wire screen to protect children against accident.

An oil or gas heater has the disadvantages of other stoves and consumes much larger quantities of oxygen. Such a heater may be used in a small room if no other means of heating can be had or when quick heat is needed, but is suitable only for temporary use. Every precaution must be taken to guard children against accident if these stoves are used.

"Hip, hip, hurrah!" shouted Little Jack Rabbit, hopping out of his warm little bed in the dear Old Bramble Patch. "As soon as I've wound my gold watch I'll look out of the window to see what kind of a day it is."

It certainly was a beautiful day, but oh dear me! Right there on the sunny meadow stood Danny Fox. Yes, sir, there stood that wicked old robber waiting for the little rabbit to hop out of the Old Bramble Patch.

"Hello, Danny Fox!" shouted the little bunny from his bedroom window. "What do you think?"

"There's to be a story or two about me and you!"

"I don't care," replied the little fox. "If it's a story or three about you and me, I'll take mighty good care I'm not caught unaware. My den is the rock."

"Is a pretty safe box," replied the little rabbit, "but some day, when the children know me better, I'm going to make a call on Uncle Dave. Maybe I'll bring him a bunch of pretty red clover tops and a lollipop from the lollipop tree."

"Oh, how!" sneered Danny Fox. "You'd better stay here in the Old Bramble Patch or a blue coated copper rabbit might catch!"

Then away went that old robber to find a stray chicken near the Old Farm Yard. But just as he came in sight of the Weathercock on the Big Red Barn, it began to sing:

"Look out, look out! Here comes a fox; He's sneaking along In his tiptoe sox."

"Bow, bow!" barked Old Sid, the King Farmer's Dog. "Moo, moo!" went Mrs. Cow. "Cock-a-doodle-doo!" crowed Cocky Doodles.

"Quack, quack," went Ducky Waddles.

Blueberry Puffs

Wash and pick over carefully a cup of large fresh blueberries. Mix a pint of flour with two teaspoons of salt, ½ teaspoon of mixed spice and 2 tablespoons of sugar. Mix to a soft batter with a little milk. Grease as many custard cups as are needed and put in alternate spoonfuls of the fruit and the batter, filling them ¾ full. Steam 20 minutes and serve with any good pudding sauce liked.

Rhubarb Pie

Mix ¾ cup of sugar with 1 tablespoon of flour, stir in 1 tablespoon of lemon juice and 1 beaten egg, then add 2 cups of finely cut unpeeled rhubarb and mix well. Line a pie plate with pastry, fill with the mixture, dot with butter, cover with paste having slits for the steam to escape, press the edges well together and bake half an hour.

Cabbage and Apple Slaw

Mix in a cold bowl two cupfuls of thinly sliced firm cabbage, with two cupfuls of peeled, cored and sliced apples, two tablespoonfuls of capers, one tablespoonful of sugar, a seasoning of salt and paprika and two-thirds of a cupful of vinegar.

Fruit Salad

Peel and cut 2 fine large oranges into pieces, add 1 cup of shredded pineapple, ½ pound of Malaga grapes, from which the skins and seeds have been removed, and ½ pound of marshmallows cut into quarters. Sweeten to taste, place in nests of lettuce leaves and crown with boiled dressing mixed with an equal quantity of whipped cream.

"Cluck, cluck!" went Henry Jenny, while Turkey Tim spread his great wings and looked as fierce as a Turk.

Just then, the Kind Farmer came to the kitchen door and away went Danny Fox, off to the Shady Forest. He was afraid of the Kind Farmer.

"Ha, ha!" laughed Little Jack Rabbit from his window in the Old Bramble Patch. "Danny Fox is a great old coward. He doesn't dare talk to anyone but little rabbits and chickens and he doesn't speak to them if he can sneak up behind and catch them first. Oh, how I hate that wicked old robber!"

Just then Lady Love, the little rabbit's mother, rang the breakfast bell, so downstairs hopped the little rabbit and in the story next week I'll tell you what a narrow escape he had from Mr. Wicked Wolf.

Yours for a story,
DAVID CORY,
The Jack Rabbit Man.

Boys and girls, cut out this week's picture of Little Jack Rabbit and color it with paints or crayons. Then mail your picture to Mr. David Cory, the Jack Rabbit Man, 58 Market St., Grand Rapids, Mich. The kiddie who sends in the best colored picture will be rewarded with a Little Jack Rabbit book as a prize.

Advice on Personal Affairs

Given by
MRS. MARGARET REID

She Adores Her Teacher

"I am a girl of 17 and in high school. I am a great admirer of my teacher. I think much of her and when I am in school I am sure I will do better than I have done. I don't know whether to tell her or not. Sometimes she is so kind and at other times she is so strict. I have tried to decide whether I ought to write to her or not. I think she would consider it silly if I did write. Do you know of any magazines or newspapers that buy short stories? I have written for our high school paper and now I would like to make some money. O. W."

"I should not write to my teacher if I were you. Your admiration of her as you describe it, is a little off normal anyway, and the sooner you can rid yourself of the habit of and the happier you will be. Spend your time with boys and girls your own age, and take on natural and healthy amusements and if possible, outdoor sports. Forget teachers till next fall. Newspapers practically never buy short stories. Put your stories into good form, typewritten, and send them to story magazines which you think might take them, enclosing return postage if you want them back. They probably will be accepted, for some of the best of the stories written are never published and you are rather young to know how to write a story. Better advise your mother to write to teachers."

Wearing Engagement Ring

On what finger should the girl wear the engagement ring? Is it on the third or the fourth finger? A. S. T.

A girl wears her engagement ring on the third finger of the left hand. There is no definite rule about a man's wearing the ring, but usually, I think, on the same finger, the third of the left hand.

Shall She Ask Him In?

When a girl is accompanied home by a boy should she ask him in, should they sit on the front porch, or should he leave. Should a girl of 16 go to public dances, if she dances only with a boy? U. D.

If it is before 10 o'clock when they reach home, she may ask him in. Otherwise he should leave. It is not strictly correct for them to sit on the porch, though if he is an old family friend, there is no reason why they should not sit there and chat a few minutes, but he should stay only a few moments.

Write your questions to Mrs. Margaret Reid, 58 Market Street, S. W., Grand Rapids, Michigan. If you want a personal reply, enclose a self-addressed envelope.

THE HOME BEAUTIFUL

—THE HAWTHORN—

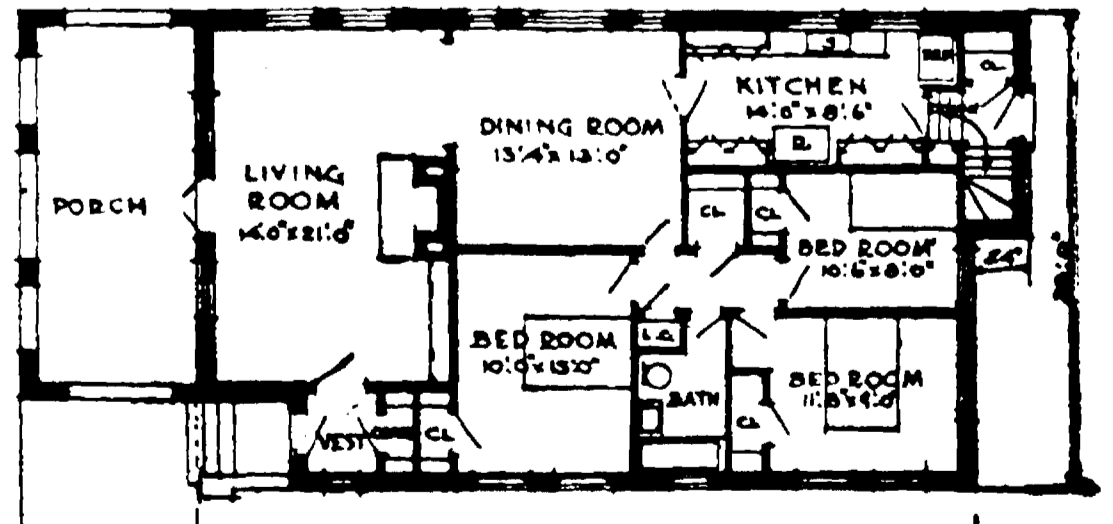

A House With a Large Living Room

The living room is certainly the one indispensable room of the house. Where in all other rooms there is today a tendency to reduce size and make compact adjustments such as the kitchenette, breakfast nook and closet bed accommodations, the living room is, wherever possible, made larger. We have done away with parlors and in general with reception halls, replacing them with sun rooms, sleeping porches and genuine living rooms. A real fireplace with neat mantle shelf goes far toward making a home out of a house, and when bookshelves are added we have a combination conducive to ideal home life.

The living room of the Hawthorne includes both of these features. It is large, 14 by 21 feet, and the veranda across the entire front, reached through double French doors, makes it appear doubly roomy and pleasant. Privacy of the room is maintained by the side entrance through a generous veranda which has a closet for outdoor wraps.

The dining room is not shut off from the living room by doors but is reached through a wide-cased opening. Its location, however, permits dining without interruption from callers at mealtime. There are three bedrooms with large closets, good-sized bath, a linen and a storage closet.

No space has been wasted in the kitchen. Three built-in units provide place for cooking utensils, cleaning equipment and bins for supplies. The sink and working table are under a window and away from the range. The refrigerator has a special nook of its own. In the service entry is a closet and steps down to the cellar which contains fuel and boiler room made fire-safe by concrete-resistive ceiling, a laundry, fruit storage and workshop.

The exterior of this house while simple is in unusually good taste and adapts itself well to fire-safe construction of concrete masonry, Portland cement stucco walls and cement-asbestos roof. The color scheme can be arranged to suit the owner's taste.

Home and Household

What You Can Make with Orange Juice

Orange juice and oranges may be introduced into the menu in so many different ways that the family will not tire of them. For the children oranges are a valuable food, supplying necessary vitamins in an acceptable form. Oranges were never better in flavor or sweetness than they are this season. There are many small ones on the market, purchasable for a lower relative price than the larger sizes. They are just as good for most household purposes as bigger ones, and are more economical.

Pure orange juice may be served in glasses for breakfast. Orangeade, punch, or any fruit beverage in which orange predominates, is suitable for lunch, at afternoon or evening gatherings, at card parties, dances, or sociables. Give the children orangeade made from pure orange juice when they come in, hot and thirsty, from play.

Use pure orange juice for making orange gelatine or any of the mixed fruit gelatins. A dainty way to send orange jelly to an invalid is to scoop out the contents of one orange, leaving the rind a basket shape, and to fill this with the jelly when ready to mold it.

Orange tarts or other ways of serving sliced oranges in custard are good. Orange cake filling and icing is always delicious when made with the pure fruit juice. The United States Department of Agriculture gives the following directions for making an uncooked orange icing.

Orange Icing

One egg white, beaten stiff, grated rind of 1 small orange, 1 tablespoon orange juice, 1 ½ cups sugar, pinch salt, ½ teaspoon lemon juice, 1 table spoon cold water.

Add the water to the egg white and beat until stiff. Gradually add nearly all the sugar, beating with a spoon. Then add the grated orange rind, the orange and lemon juice and the remainder of the sugar, and beat all smooth.

LAXATIVE for Aged People

THE BANE of old age is constipation. The bowels become weak and unable to perform their functions without aid. For this purpose only the mildest and gentlest laxative should be used. The use of harsh cathartics aggravates the trouble and makes the constipation worse. Chamberlain's Tablets are a favorite with people of middle age and older on account of their gentle action.

Michigan Makes Substantial Progress In Trunk Line Road Construction

By J. W. HANNEN
Editor Michigan Roads and Pavements

The construction of substantial highways is now recognized, with one exception, as being the biggest business of the United States, the exception being the steel industry. When one takes into consideration the tremendous amount of money involved in the production of automobiles and motor vehicles, which ranks close to the top in the nation's industrial progress, the position occupied by the good road industry necessarily attracts universal attention and without contradiction comes closer home to the individual taxpayer and motor car user than any other problem dealing with the welfare of the state.

The tremendous possibility of road extension in Michigan can be realized when it is stated that there are 75,000 miles of roads in the state which, up to this time only approximately 14,000 miles have been improved by modern construction.

It is estimated by State Highway Commissioner Rogers that this amount involves by the state and counties the expenditure of no less than $150,000,000 since the establishment of the State Highway Department in 1905 and when it is considered that only 14,000 miles out of the grand total have thus far been improved, the problems of road construction for the next few years must be given serious consideration.

With the establishment of the state trunk line system under the authority of the State Highway Department through legislative enactment in 1913, the State Highway Department has pursued a consistent policy of construction, covering as many miles each year as the financial resources of the state would warrant.

Under this legislative enactment a total of 6,500 miles have been designated as state trunk lines. When this year's program has been completed, which exhausts the fifty million dollar bond issue voted by the people all but about 300 miles of this system will have been improved with some sort of pavement or surfacing adaptable to traffic conditions and most of the 800 miles specified are now in passable condition. Indeed, very little, if any, of the trunk line system may be called impassable except possibly under extreme weather conditions, usually in the early spring. A portion of this mileage which has already been improved will need reconstruction due to the demands of increasing traffic, and this will be accomplished after the close of the present fiscal year when financial provision shall have been made by the State Legislature.

It will be recognized by these observations that the trunk line system now connects practically every important industrial and market center in the state which was the object of the law creating the system. However, it must not be considered that the completion of this system as originally planned and extended, will close the highway construction operations by the state. Industrial and agricultural expansion have shown during the past few years an insistent demand for other roads than those on the trunk line system and while such roads have been the concern of the individual counties, it is conceded that the state must carry on a consistent policy of construction and maintenance each year until all reasonable needs have been fulfilled. This extension, however, will depend, as above noted, entirely upon the financial provisions made by the next legislature and just now this problem is giving members of the Legislature and other state officers as well as the taxpayers much concern. It is expected, however, that this problem will be met upon a practical and workable basis, without undue stress on the taxpaying public.

With the increasing years since the organization of the State Highway Department, its business has increased by leaps and bounds until it is now conceded to be the state's biggest business. This is recognized by Governor Groesbeck and the Administrative Board and they are working harmoniously with State Highway Commissioner Rogers in meeting the needs and putting over a road program as large as the state's finances will permit.

During and following the 1923 session of the State Legislature, owing to differences of opinion, a system will have been improved with some sort of pavement or surfacing adaptable to traffic conditions and most of the 800 miles specified are now in passable condition. Indeed, very little, if any, of the trunk line system may be called impassable except possibly under extreme weather conditions, usually in the early spring. A portion of this mileage which has already been improved will need reconstruction due to the demands of increasing traffic, and this will be accomplished after the close of the present fiscal year when finan-and State Highway Commissioner Rogers, which now exists.

Up to 1923 the entire burden of the responsibility of the operations of the State Highway Department was borne by State Highway Commissioner Frank F. Rogers and his deputies. While this responsibility was not overburdensome for a few years, the rapid increase in travel on the public highways and the large construction program that created new problems and responsibilities demanded a strong State Highway Department with all the support that the Governor and the Administrative Board could give it.

With the reorganization in view, early last year State Highway Commissioner Rogers and Governor Groesbeck devoted a great deal of time to considering changes that would promote efficiency and handle the road work of the state at the lowest possible cost consistent therewith.

The result of these conferences was a change from the old district system to a plan of rearranged districts whereby five supervising engineers took the place of nine district engineers previously employed, supplemented by a force of resident road and bridge engineers co-operating with the supervising engineers. This system is now being carried on and while it may not achieve all of the results expected of it, it at least has laid the foundation for an efficient and practical road building organization, which is now functioning smoothly.

The general supervision of the Highway Department is still in the hands of State Highway Commissioner Rogers and his deputy, G. C. Dillman, who is also Chief Engineer. Mr. Rogers and Mr. Dillman, therefore, have the responsibility of directing the engineering and construction activities of the Department, which are separated somewhat from the business management, now in charge of Frank D. Fitzgerald. The various divisions of the State Highway Department and their officers now are: Bridge Engineer C. A. Melick; Road Engineer C. F. Boehler and Maintenance Engineer B. C. Tiney.

It is a matter of common knowledge that the relief from the many burdensome details have enabled State Highway Commissioner Rogers to give the state greater service than would have been possible under the old conditions.

It was only after much diligent study and many conferences between Governor Groesbeck, Commissioner Rogers, Chief Engineer Dillman and the Advisory Board that a practical working program was devised. Early last fall Commissioner Rogers submitted to the Governor a complete list of all of the roads remaining to be improved on the trunk line system of the state and from this total the final program within the funds available for 1924 was worked out.

This program contemplated a total of 813,712 miles, divided into various types as follows: 66.6 miles of grading and drainage structure; 307.12 miles of gravel and 439,992 miles of pavement. Up to the first of July, the State Administrative Board had awarded contracts for 12,394 miles of grading and drainage; 170,144 miles of gravel and 224,408 miles of pavement, making a total of 406,946 miles, at an estimated cost of $9,140,282.00.

It has been shown in the awarding of numerous contracts that in most cases the contract prices have run very close to the estimated cost of such projects and it is believed that if present prices prevail, the total cost will come within the total estimate for the same.

In order to estimate the actual progress in 1924, it must be taken into consideration that 390 miles of construction was carried over from 1923, of which 150 miles was pavement. It is not to be expected that the mileage left over from last year plus the 1924 program can be completed this year. But when the last of the $50,000,000 appropriation is exhausted, there being something less than $10,000,000 now remaining, the remainder of the 1923 program and the 1924 program should be completed. However, it is not expected that the whole of the 1924 program can be completed until some time in 1925, but it is expected that 400 miles of pavement and 200 miles of gravel will be completed this year.

One of the distinctive elements in state road construction which has been sponsored by Governor Groesbeck was the building of concrete roads with prison labor. The most extensive of these projects was begun last year on the Grand River Road which is officially known as trunk line 16 between Detroit and Lansing. Rapid progress is now being made and it is expected that this road will be completed, with the possible exception of two grade separations and the Okemos relocation, from the State Capitol to Detroit in the early fall. The state is also building a section of 14 miles on Federal Aid Road No. 73 and 50 from the Wayne County line south to the Ohio State line on the Toledo road. Satisfactory progress is being made on both of these projects and good progress is also being made on 14 miles on trunk line 16 from Grand Rapids to the Kent County line under the supervision of G. P. Scharl, Contractor, whose equipment is being used on this job. Bids will be received soon for the completion of this road from the end of the completed pavement west of Lansing to Portland, all of which should be completed this year. This will have only 20 1/2 miles to make a complete paved road to Grand Rapids and incidentally across the state from Detroit to Grand Haven.

One of the important elements in State road construction in the matter of funds received from the Federal Government. The state has already had available from the Government a total of $13,562,947 and a recent bill passed by Congress assures to Michigan $2,225,000 additional for the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1924, making a total of nearly $16,000,000.

It will be seen by the program as enumerated under existing conditions that whatever is accomplished during 1925 by the state must depend upon such financial provisions as the next Legislature may make and the majority of the people believe that a further bond issue is impossible.

Couple Are Evicted From Farm After 40 Years' Possession

Belding, Mich.—Forty years married and 40 years residents in the same farm home until last month, when Deputy Sheriff Franch, of Ionia, evicted them on a mortgage foreclosure. Mr. and Mrs. Henry Luicks had lived in happiness. But now for 40 days and nights they have been forced with their stock into the road. The sky is their roof, a milk wagon, their bed, no barns for their stock and still they put up a brave front.

It was a most unpleasant job the Ionia county official and local deputy, Mark A. Brown, were required to perform, but Mr. and Mrs. Luicks bear no ill feeling, nor will they accept aid even in the shape of a tent. It is their battle, they say, and they will fight it alone.

Mr. Luicks says he still has right of possession and did not submit to the foreclosure except as it was necessary to obey the sheriff. He says he feels sure everything will come out all right. Meantime, he and his wife camp within sight of what for 40 years was their own door, which now is locked against them.

Third in Potatoes

The principal changes in the acreage of potatoes planted in the important potato states in 1924 are: increase in Maine, New York and Virginia of 24,000, and a decrease in Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota and Colorado of 80,000, according to an official statement issued by V. H. Church, U. S. Agricultural Statistician for Michigan, and L. Whitney Watkins, State Commissioner of Agriculture.

The decrease for the country as a whole is 63,000 acres as compared with 1923, and 564,000 as compared with 1922. The average condition as reported for all states on July 1 was 86.8, which is equivalent to a production of 372,968,000 bushels, or 40,000,000 bushels less than that of last year, and 80,000,000 bushels less than that of two years ago.

While it is impossible to accurately estimate the production for the northern states at this early date, the figures given are based upon the average trend of conditions during the growing season in past years. The final yield will be above or below this estimate in proportion to the amount the future condition is above or below the ten-year average.

The Michigan acreage is 301,000, the lowest since 1919, but the state still holds its usual third place, being exceeded by Minnesota and New York, the former with 367,000 and the latter with 333,000 acres to its credit.
