OBITUARY

Ella Briggs, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Horace Briggs, was born in Howell, Mich., November 8, 1872, and died suddenly of a heart ailment after a brief illness of six months at the age of 50 years, 8 months and 27 days.

In her early teens she moved with her parents to Pinckney. Here she lived until March 14, 1888, when she was united in marriage to Mr. Docking, also of Pinckney.

Her entire married life has been one of happiness and service.

To this union five children were born: Mr. Wm. Allan of Howell, A. S. and Ollie at home, all of whom with their loved one are left to mourn the loss of a loving wife and mother. She is also survived by her aged mother, Mrs. Mary Briggs of Livonia, and a host of relatives and friends.

She will be greatly missed by most, but one of her greatest pleasures was helping others in time of need to make their burdens lighter, even at the sacrifice of her own strength.

The funeral services were held at the church, Jackson, Miss. Rev. Bessie Fitzimmons of Jackson assisted.

Interment was in the Pinckney cemetery.

1910, William H. Camp, then known as the “Wizard of Yale” football, was honored by a distinguished group of college football players at a special dinner held in his honor. The event marked the beginning of an organization called the “Father of American Football.”

Years ago, Mr. Camp was the director of the sport at Yale. He had turned his knowledge into money. The fact that five to six changes per game were receiving money by this time for coaching, but he had received no compensation for his services. But they were after Camp. It was his secret that he had contrived to save $135,000 out of the receipts of the Yale football.

So-called "Declining" Villages

Rural America Holds Its Own

New York—In the growing panic over the supposed decline of the rural areas the General Motors Corporation has just issued a report showing that the rural increase in recent years has been only slightly less than the urban increase and much greater than the suburban increase.

In a special study made by the Corporation's research department, the rural increase was found to be 26.8 per cent in thirty years, from 1900 to 1930, the rural increase over a period of last thirty years being 27.4 per cent.

Further, the report shows that the rural increase in the last thirty years has been 27.4 per cent, the urban increase in the same period being 24.1 per cent, and the suburban increase being 20.7 per cent.

The report, which is based on the Census of 1930, shows that the rural population has increased from 5,512,000 in 1900 to 26,576,000 in 1930, an increase of 21,064,000. The urban population increased from 22,225,000 in 1900 to 61,801,000 in 1930, an increase of 39,576,000. The suburban population increased from 7,732,000 in 1900 to 14,383,000 in 1930, an increase of 6,651,000.

The report also shows that the rural population in 1930 was 26.8 per cent of the total population, the urban population was 61.5 per cent, and the suburban population was 11.7 per cent.

Furthermore, the report shows that the rural population in 1930 was 26.8 per cent of the total population, the urban population was 61.5 per cent, and the suburban population was 11.7 per cent.

This report is the first in a series of studies to be made by the Corporation to determine the real status of rural life in the United States. The next report will be on the economic and social situation of the rural areas.
