A COMMUNITY BUILDING

The editor was one of a considerable number of Pinckney people who accompanied the Pinckney High School basketball team to Chelsea last Wednesday evening to see them play Chelsea High School. The Pinckney Congregational team also played the Chelsea Christian Endeavor team. Chelsea has a brand new gymnasium which was opened for the first time this winter. The cost of it was $25000 which was raised by a bond issue. It is a brick structure connecting on with the school and has a balcony extending around the building on the inside which is large enough for four rows of seats. On the main floor is room for two more rows along the wall on each side giving it a seating capacity of several hundred. It is also equipped with a stage and props for theatricals and a complete kitchen outfit for banquets. It is used as a community hall by all churches and organizations and by four different basketball teams besides the business mens volley ball league who had possession of the floor when the Pinckney bunch arrived. This game has gained great favor in many towns of late as a means of exercise and reducing weight.

Now of course Pinckney could hardly afford such an expensive building as yet but they have one already available which could be secured for about one tenth of the cost of the Chelsea gymnasium and would be suitable. This is the Pinckney Opera House, which has seldom been used as such of late years and is for sale. Of course it would have to be fitted up which would cost a little as the walls are plastered which are not suitable for a gymnasium and a few other changes made, the cost of which would be small. The Pinckney basketball teams are handicapped by the smallness of their hall and last Friday night at the Byron games the crowd was so large as to impede the playing. Many people stay away from the games because they know they will be forced to stand as there are no room for seats. It is too bad with such a building available it can not be made use of.

THE VALENTINE SOCIAL

A large number of people had a very enjoyable time at the Valentine Social given by the Sunday School of the Community Church, Monday evening. The church was very nicely decorated with red and white streamers and hearts galore. The committee on games and stunts was on the job promptly with the result that something was going every minute.

Of the many games played, the hoop race drew the most attention. This consisted of two teams of ten members each, captained by George Snively and Steve VanHorn. The VanHorn team won because their build was more suited to the occasion, the other team being more adapted to heavy work.

The stunts consisted of a whittling match between Cecil Hendee and Daniel VanSlambrook pulling jokes on members of the crowd. Mrs. Maycroft is still puzzled about where the lap goes when a person stands up. The Scarecrow Trio consisting of P. Swarthout, Milo Kettler and Stacy Hall, gave two renderings, "Way Down Yonder in the ornfieid" and "Under the Crust of the Old Apple Pie." During the evening the Sunday School Supt. became suddenly sick. Dr. Calvin Hooker was called and decided an operation was necessary and with the assistance of Mrs. Maycroft performed a complicated operation removing the appendix, spinal cord and finally a "can sir." The patient is doing nicely.

A bountiful supper was served and Messrs George Snively and Wm. Brown won the title of Champion Cake Eaters.

The success of the social was due to the fine work of the committees and especially to Mrs. Harry Lee and Mrs. Milo Kettler who supervised the games and stunts.

FRANK McQUILLAN

Frank McQuillan, for many years engaged in the clothing business at Jackson died at St. Joseph's Hospital, Ann Arbor following an operation. The funeral services and burial were held at Jackson Tuesday. The deceased is survived by his widow, four sons and one daughter. He was the father of Rev. Frank J. McQuillan, pastor of St. Mary's Church, Pinckney, and has many relatives in this vicinity.

REAL ESTATE DEVELOPEMENTS

The following is a letter received from Nicolie & Harger of Pontiac who have purchased about 2000 acres of land in this section in the last three months and as it will prove of interest to our readers we are publishing it.

Pinckney Dispatch

Pinckney Mich.

Gentlemen:

Under the date of December 9, we noticed that you carried the story concerning the option that we were securing on 1000 acres of farm land lying west of Pinckney, and now that the deal has been completely closed we thought possibly you would like to carry another story in your paper.

The transaction of land in question was purchased by Col. Edwin S. Georges, whose place of business is in Detroit, Michigan, and who resides in Bloomfield Highlands just south of the city of Pontiac.

Col. George is now journeying in South America and will be there three or four months on a vacation. The tract of land that was sold to Mr. George was purchased from the following people: Loy McCleer, M. J. Roche, Mrs. James Marble, Frank Hanes, E. A. Barton, Wm. Murphy, James Doyle, Mrs. E. A. Sprout, Percy Ellis, Roy Placeway, E. E. Crane, Nora Sider, John Dunne, Wm. Gardner.

Of course I am not in a position to say what the future plans for the property are, but will say that for the present Col. George plans on fencing the tract of land and stocking the same with sheep and deer. There are many beautiful building sites on this tract of land and no doubt there may be a beautiful home built there.

Since making the sale of the above tract we have also sold 200 acres for Mr. John Dunne. This sale was made to Mr. F. B. Wallace who resides in Grosse Pointe, Michigan. This property joins that which was purchased by Mr. George and is another beautiful piece of property.

We have also sold for Mrs. Bert Gardner and her children their 140 acre tract of land located north of Pinckney to Mr. F. R. Matthews of Pontiac, Michigan.

LOST A CLOSE GAME

Pinckney High School dropped a hard fought basket ball game to Brighton at Brighton last evening by a score of 24 to 27. Swarthout for Pinckney was right on his heels with 7 field and 1 foul goal for a total of 15 points. Roy Reason got 4 field goals.

The church team will meet the Brighton team at Pinckney some night next week.

Man or Superman?

George Washington

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

WHAT will the final verdict of history on George Washington be: Man or Superman?

If we are to believe the early day biographers of the Father of His Country, it will be Superman, a paragon of all the virtues, who was not only first in war, first in peace and first in the hearts of his countrymen but first in faultless living. Such is the model which Parson Weems, who invented the cherry tree story, established, and it has been industriously copied by many later biographers, especially those who write our school histories.

If we are to believe a later generation of historians, it will be Man, a man of his times with the habits of a man of his times, including its faults as well as its virtues—in short, George Washington, the human being.

For more than a century George Washington has baffled the historians in their effort to present the "real Washington." Forty years ago one of them, Prof. John Bach McMaster, pointed out the difficulties which confront the biographer of Washington when he said:

"General Washington is known to us, and President Washington. But George Washington is an unknown man. When at last he is set before us as he lived we shall read less of the cherry tree and more of the man. Naught surely that is heroic will be omitted, but side by side with what is heroic will appear much that is commonplace. We shall behold the great commander repairing defeat with marvelous celerity, healing the disensions of his officers and calming the passions of his mutinous troops. But we shall also hear his oaths and see him in the terrible outbursts of passion to which Mr. Jefferson has alluded and one of which Mr. Lear has described.

"We shall see him refusing to be paid for his services by congress, yet expecting from the family of the poor mason the shilling that was due. We shall know of him as the cold and forbidding character with whom no fellow-man ever ventured to live on close and familiar terms. We shall respect and honor him for being not the greatest of generals, not the most shiny of his race, but a man with many human frailties and much common sense, who rose in the fullness of time to be the political deliverer of our country."

Those words, written nearly half a century ago, long before any effort had been made to dispel the myths which had grown up around Washington, are strangely prophetic of the events of the past year which have brought up again the question of the real Washington and focused public attention upon it more sharply than it has ever been focused before. Outstanding among those events was the criticism which met the attempt by one of America's best-known novelists to write the sort of Washington biography of which McMaster speaks. The novelist was Rupert Hughes and his biography was "George Washington, the Human Being and the Hero," published by William Morrow & Company of New York.

In fact, looking back upon the year just past it is curious to note how many times the two names "Rupert Hughes" and "George Washington" have appeared in the news dispatches together. It began in January when Hughes made a speech at a banquet of the Sons of the American Revolution in Washington, D. C., in which he was described as having pictured Washington as a "profane, irreligious and pleasure-loving man." Although it was afterward learned that he had been misquoted, the mischief was done as soon as the story went out.

Immediately he was attacked and defended all over the world. Sermons were delivered on his speech, his name was heard in congress and put in the Congressional Record, senators denounced him and he received clippings of newspaper comment on his speech in almost every language, French, German, Dutch, Spanish and Italian.

Interest in the controversy was revived in September when the Hughes book appeared. Even though it did not arouse such a storm as did his speech, it, too, was met with divided opinion, both censure and praise. Reviewers—for the most part historians themselves—were far from unanimous in their verdicts. Where one praised the biographer for his painstaking care in minute documenting of his statements and refraining from making a statement without backing it up with authority, another criticized him for "fatal illogic and false romance of the movies." A Harvard professor, Albert Bushnell Hart, announced that he had found 287 errors of fact in the book. Another reviewer declared that "Mr. Hughes walks on all the eggs without breaking a single one. Even the most rabid biographical fundamentalist will find little to complain about in this book."

So there you are! The case of Rupert Hughes, the biographer, is proof anew of the statement made by one writer that George Washington is an "elusive" person, for although "for forty years, from early manhood until the time of his death, he was increasingly in the public eye, the real man, high on his pedestal of official and personal reserve, has been hard to come at." A part of this is no doubt due to the early biographers, such as Parson Weems, who began building up the myths about him, and the increasing years only served to give them an increasing firmness of fixity in the popular mind.

Hughes has well expressed it when he wrote, "No other man in history has suffered so much from misfeasance in office by historians. Nearly all of Washington's biographers have felt it their duty not only to correct his writings, but to blue-pencil, prettify and falsify his character. In their frantic zeal for denaturing this big, blundering, bewildered giant they have done a further injustice to all his contemporaries, of whom they have made either dwarfs or acolytes, and of his sincere adversaries demons of malice and envy. It is poor patriotism, ridiculous idolatry and rank dishonesty to rob the host of other strugglers for liberty and progress of their just deserts and to perpetuate old slanders against his enemies at home and abroad in order to turn Washington into a god. As a god, Washington was a woeful figure; as a man he was tremendous."

No wonder then that "the real Washington" is yet to be delineated. One type of mind would make him a Superman; another a Man. But the final verdict of history probably will decide that he was a bit of both and the picture which it will draw of him will be somewhere in between the two extremes.

Mystery in Old Rails

Fragments of iron or steel rails were found in the ruins of the old city of St. Joseph, in Florida. These were along the right-of-way of the old St. Joseph and Iola railroad. The fact that these pieces of rail were none the worse for rust, although they had been lying in the open salt air for more than 85 years, aroused such interest that they have been sent to laboratories in Philadelphia for investigation. They are smaller than those made today, but heavier in proportion. An effort will be made to determine just what they are and how they were made.

The Beautiful Souls

There is no so wretched and so illiterate a soul wherein some particular fancy is not seen to shine; no soul so buried in sloth and ignorance, but it will make a sally at one end or another; and how it comes to pass that a mind, blind and asleep to everything else, should be found sprightly, clear and excellent in some one particular effect, we are to inquire of our masters. But the beautiful souls are they that are universal, open and ready for all things; if not instructed, at last capable of being so.—Montaigne.

Rural Churches Losing Membership by Following Ancient, Out-of-Date Methods

By REV. F. D. GOODWIN, Episcopal Rural Church Worker.

THE old-fashioned idea of the "Godless city" has been reversed, and it is now the "Godless country," if statistics on the religion of these two great American groups are to be accepted.

Country people, who for a long time were considered a simple and religious lot of folk, have slumped in their religious status. Eighty-eight per cent of the members of the Episcopal church are in the urban group of the American population, while only 17 per cent are found in the country or rural group.

Out of more than 55,000,000 persons living in rural America, less than 9,000,000 are members of any religious body.

The old-fashioned idea that the country folk are simple and religious people, and that they more than make up for the lack of religion in the Godless cities has held sway for many years. We have not realized how rural life today has changed.

Improved roads, advanced methods of farming, automobiles and more recently the radio have forced such institutions as the rural school to change to meet these conditions while the rural church still tries to function along the old lines and follow ancient and out-of-date methods. Still we wonder why we have failed to reach the country people.

The difficulty has been that we have not known the facts. We have not known that the country people of America constitute one of the great neglected missionary opportunities before us, where more than 4,000,000 children are growing up without religious training; where the efforts of religious bodies in many localities are often dissipated in useless competition while whole areas in other sections go without even the opportunity for Christian services.

Harmonious Relations Have Benefited Both Capital and Labor During Year

By WILLIAM GREEN, President A. F. O. L.

Labor's great progress during the last year foretells the gains to be made in 1927.

Wages were increased, the five-day week was established in many occupations, collective bargaining became recognized by thousands who had previously opposed that meritorious principle, recognition of the rights of labor resulted in increased efficiency and low wages were admitted to be an evil and not a benefit to our country.

Furthermore, the spirit of organization grew enormously in strength and promises great returns for 1927. Most wonderful strides were made in bringing about harmonious relations between management and organized employees in many industries, out of which came improvements in manufacturing processes and in conditions of employment.

Adequate wages increased the consuming power of the great mass of wage-earners and this brought most substantial returns to the business world. The amazing sums spent during the Christmas holidays were the result of the wages enjoyed by the workers.

From one end of the country to the other the sentiment is expressed that the successful efforts of the American labor movement for higher economic standards has had tremendous influence on the bringing about of the prosperity enjoyed in 1926.

Misunderstandings That Have Led to Friction Between Europe and United States

By STANLEY M. BRUCE, Prime Minister of Australia.

Europe has forgotten all that America did during the World war and sees the United States glutted with gold and bent on holding every country to ransom.

Knowing America as I do, the misunderstanding in Europe with regard to your nation is to me a matter of deep regret. Europe forgets that American money and materials kept the war going until victory was in sight.

Europe forgets, too, the decisive effect of America's intervention. She thinks only that America, enriched at the expense of her allies, glutted with the world's gold, is bent on holding every country to ransom.

America, on the other hand, does not attach sufficient importance to the racial and national difficulties of Europe, the ancient feuds and antipathies, nor understand fully what tragic sufferings came to Europe as a result of the war.

Mankind's Passion for Show Has Led, Through the Ages, to Cruelty and Excess

By G. A. STUDDERT KENNEDY, King George's Chaplain.

The urge behind the vulgar ostentation and insensate luxury that marks our age and that marks American life is the desire to show off. It is a causeless craving. It begins when we are little children and does not end even with our death, because it comes out in our funerals.

Man's passion to show has been a merciless, insatiable urge, driving him to cruelty and excess. Always it has driven some men to live in palaces and keep their brothers in pig sties, some women to dress, or half-dress themselves in fabulously costly clothes while their sisters went in rags.

Man is still in a stage of "demi-semi-civilization," with his primitive passions still fierce and unrepressed. Above all his passions emerges his hunger for truth and beauty and goodness. It is that hunger that leads man to God, though that God might be a figment of his mind, created because he needed and wanted a God to make life worth living.

Widespread Distribution of Wealth Big Factor in Stability of Country

By WILFORD I. KING, National Economic Research Bureau.

Whether wealth is widely distributed or instead concentrated in the hands of the few is a matter of great significance from a political standpoint. These who possess the wealth of a nation are, oftentimes, its real rulers. The fact is generally recognized that the country in which most of the wealth is in the hands of the few, while the great majority of the people are propertyless, is one in which it is easy to incite the inhabitants to revolution, for under such circumstances the masses feel that they have little to lose through any political upheaval that may occur.

On the other hand, in the nation in which the greatest majority of the inhabitants are property owners, governments tend to be unusually stable.

Not a Mechanical Ailment
Recently, a rather nervous young man entered a downtown typewriter establishment. When asked by the office girl what he desired, he replied, "There's something wrong with my typewriter, and I wish you would send someone over to fix it." The girl called the service manager who inquired as to what the trouble might be so the repair man would have an idea as to what to look for.

With an earnest look on his face, the young man replied, "I am not sure, sir, but it doesn't seem to spell right."

Bone of Contention Between Two Senators

All the quarrels between United States senators are not in the capitol building in Washington. One concerns the occupancy of Riverdale, the picturesque colonial mansion in Prince George's county, Maryland. Senator Caraway of Arkansas owns the property and Senator Johnson of California is his tenant. Recently Caraway decided to move in himself and asked Johnson to vacate. The Californian flatly declined to do so until his lease was up and there the matter rests.

Winter Sports in Summerland

Countries of the Tropics Have Games and Fetes Peculiarly Their Own.

By T. A. KEAN
Chicago.—While winter sports in the North are confined largely to affairs that are concerned with ice and snow, the tropics and the West Indies boast winter sports some of which are peculiarly their own. Golf, to be sure, is popular there as a year-round sport. Water sports, however, hold chief place, but there are other athletic diversions strenuous enough to appease the appetite for excitement. All the diving champions are not known to the athletic world. In the harbor of Bridgeton, Barbados, are some of the most expert divers to be found anywhere. On a recent visit of the Canadian Pacific steamship Montroyal to that port some of the native boys dived from the top of the ship, 75 feet above the water, down to the bottom, got a handful of mud, swam under the ship, about thirty-five feet, and came up on the other side through about forty or fifty feet of water. Quite some feat, if you should ask us. This is only one of the many equally thrilling water stunts performed by the natives of the Bahamas.

Bobbed Hair Girls Ousted by Village

Munich, Germany.—Word has reached here of a miniature peasant uprising against bobbed hair. Two young Viennese women, accompanied by their husbands, arrived in the Alpine village of Lungau and, tired after a long tramp, removed their hats. Shocked villagers observed that their heads were bobbed. Turning in an emergency fire alarm, one of the local citizens hastily summoned the village graybeards to a conference. The meeting promptly decided that the two Viennese Alpinists must be deported from Lungau. Despite rain and chill darkness, the bobbed-haired women were routed out of the inn at night and forced to leave the precincts by a crowd of indignant villagers. The innkeeper who had given shelter to these "disreputable" guests was warned never to disgrace the village again by harboring bobbed-haired strangers under his roof.

SCIENTIST DECLARES AMAZONS WERE MEN WITHOUT BEARDS

Says Greeks Mistook Sex of Ancient Warriors on Account of Their Shaven Faces.
Philadelphia.—The centuries-old legend about the Amazons, a nation of female warriors who carried fire and sword to ancient Greece, Asia Minor, Arabia, Syria and Egypt, was declared a myth by Dr. J. L. Myres, secretary of the British Association for the Advancement of Science, at the meetings of the American association. The Amazons, according to Doctor Myres, were not women at all but men who had shaved and consequently looked like women to the bearded Greeks, who first gave them a place in history. Professor Myres declares careful study of recent archeological evidence clears up the mystery of the Amazons. Their shaven appearance, he adds, either led their foes to believe them the world in a fairyland cave 200 feet underground and 45 feet deep, but the water is so clear that it appears to be four or five feet deep. The cave is a bewildering fantasy of colors, spotlighted with sunshine from a break in the roof far overhead. In Havana, there is horse racing in winter, and the visitor to this city should not miss a jal alai (high low) game. This is the Spanish national ball game, handball, but our way of playing it is mild in comparison. It is played by two-men teams on a paved cement court 210 feet in length by 18 feet in width. In a sort of grooved and curved basket, strapped to their hands, the players catch and throw the ball much like a boxer giving a full arm swing blow. The players, professionals most of them, are on their toes all the time, and if you think of any existent game to compare with it, for strenuousness of action, let me know of it. There are no innings and time is only called by the referee who is in charge after about thirty minutes of the fastest volleying ever seen. The spectators around the court shout and clamor for their favorites to win, and the wagers made with "bookmakers" almost rival those made at the race tracks in the United States. Society attends in full force.

Variety of Sports.
The Bermudas are a cluster of islands lying in the path of the Gulf stream, with an even temperature rarely descending below 60 degrees. Water polo and golf are the most popular sports. Golf under smiling southern skies is a most pleasant part of a West Indies cruise. Soccer football, as we know it, is an autumn or winter game, too active for summer. Imagine getting off the steamship on a Sunday morning in February or March, wearing summer sports clothes, with the temperature between 90 and 100 in the shade, and no shade, and finding two teams of colored men playing soccer football. This will greet you at Port au Prince, Haiti. The whole town will seem on a holiday and will be found on the side lines rooting for their team and having as much fun as we do at a world series baseball game. Regular British sports, football, cricket, etc., are engaged in at Jamaica, but at Caracao, Dutch West Indies, if you inquire what the greatest sport on the island is, the natives will tell you with a smile, selling the "forbidden" to visiting Americans.

Swindled by Message From Dead Husband

Turin.—A single egg containing a supposed message from the other world, was the device used to swindle Francesca Pellissero, widow, of 11,000 lire, her entire wealth. The widow was approached by a man and a woman who told her that they were bearers of a message from her dead husband. They broke an egg, from which they extracted a piece of paper signed with her husband's name. The husband communicated that she was to do explicitly as his representatives, the bearers of the message, instructed her. The rest was easy. The couple asked for a loan of all the money she possessed, in order, they said, to release her husband of obligations incurred in the other world.

LIVE STOCK

SANITATION BIG AID TO HOG MEN

Swine sanitation this past year was again the big idea in pork production on Illinois farms and as was the case in 1925 it paid out well to the advantage of farmers who practiced it, it is reported by Prof. E. T. Robbins, live stock extension specialist of the college of agriculture, University of Illinois. He had charge of the demonstrations which 1,213 farmers in 75 counties of the state conducted in cooperation with the college and their county farm advisers to show their neighbors the benefits of the sanitation system which the college advocates.

Written reports from 160 of these farmer-demonstrators have been filed with Professor Robbins. These reports cover 38 different counties of the state. They confirm the fine showing made a year ago by the simple sanitation system in practical farm practice. More pigs raised by each sow, fewer runts, cheaper gains and quicker market weights are some of the main benefits which the farmers who used the system obtained again this year.

The reports show that some of the men skipped one or two of the four factors of cleanliness which constitute the system, but altogether their work was 86 per cent complete in these details.

The average time required for one man to clean and scrub the farrowing quarters for one sow was 45 minutes. The average time to wash a sow was 20 minutes. On 56 per cent of the farms the "clean" pasture had not been used for hogs within the last two years. The average area of pasture allowed for one sow and her litter was nine-tenths of an acre.

On 18 per cent of the farms the pigs drank running water from a creek, ditch, or the outlet. These farmers got the best results. They had only 1 runt pig among each 111 pigs raised. Where pigs drank from troughs there were twice as many runts.

On all the 160 farms the average was one runt among each 71 sanitation pigs. The men raised 94 per cent of the pigs saved at birth. The litters raised averaged 1.5 pigs more than when pigs were raised the old style "wormy way," they averaged 24 pounds heavier at four months old and were ready for market when six weeks younger than usual.

Although 99 per cent of those who reported said that the sanitation system is more profitable than the old way and that they will continue to use it.

The system calls for clean sows at farrowing time, clean farrowing pens, and clean pastures to which the sows and pigs should be hauled, not driven, and the pigs kept there until they are at least four months old.

Mature Sows Superior to Gilts for Raising Pigs

With approximate information that the hog cycle revolves in from thirty to thirty-six months, many farmers have concluded that it is more profitable to raise one litter of pigs from gilts, then fatten the sows. These young sows generally classify as "light packers" and bring from two to three cents more per pound than the heavier packer sows. Will the gilts raise as many pigs as the sows? Careful experiments at Purdue university show that two-year-old sows raise more pigs than gilts. The experimenters also found that if the sows are kept too long, their productivity rapidly diminishes. "Most farmers who keep aged sows keep them a year too long," said C. M. Vestal, commenting on the fact that the sows are sold a year too late rather than at the proper time.

Feed Grain to Lambs to Prevent Any Setback

Grain should be kept before lambs, and while the quantity of grain may be relatively small, it serves a much needed place in balancing the ration and preventing a setback in the growth of the lamb. The man who has a small flock of mutton-bred sheep should have his wether lambs large enough and in condition to go to market during the summer months when comparatively few lambs are coming and the high price is generally to be had. These lambs should weigh around 70 to 80 pounds and can be made to reach that weight at three or four months without undue forcing. Fine wool lambs will probably reach a weight of 50 to 55 pounds at that time if well grown and are ideal to go into the feed lots for winter feeding.

Feeding Young Stock

Young stock cannot make normal growth during the winter season on corn stalks, silage, prairie hay and the like. Such feeds furnish enough heat to maintain the body temperature, but do not provide the nutrients necessary for building bone and tissue. Legume hays such as clover and alfalfa should be furnished in addition to the poorer grade roughages. For the best possible growth it is necessary to feed some grain to young stock during the winter.

POULTRY

POULTRY SUFFER FROM DISEASES

Poultry suffer from colds and associated troubles in winter just as do human beings, but a little care and doctoring will help to keep down the heavy annual toll that these diseases exact from poultrymen. According to Dr. B. F. Kaupp, head of the poultry department at the North Carolina State college, the birds suffer most from diseases of the respiratory tract in cold weather.

Common colds result from the birds becoming wet or chilled because of poor housing, quick changes in weather or cracks in the house permitting a draft to blow on the birds. One of the signs of this disease is a discharge from the nose. Any bird so affected should be immediately removed from the flock, states Doctor Kaupp, because the discharge will contaminate the drinking water and give the disease to the other birds. In the case of colds, the nose should be cleared out by syringing with a 10 per cent solution of argyrol or a purple solution of permanganate of potash. In the case of roup where there is a stinking discharge, pure iodine should be used in the syringe and the bird treated morning and night until cured.

Weak pullets come from crowding in the summer and they must have proper feed and care in the laying pen. Most of them will develop sore head even in a new house. These pimples should be greased with carbolic grease.

Sore eyes is another familiar winter-time trouble. The eyes need to be swabbed out, states Doctor Kaupp, and a drop of a 10 per cent solution of argyrol or a 1 per cent solution of sulphate of zinc placed in the eye twice each day.

Canker or diphtheritis is a winter disease which attacks the mouth. It forms a spot where the sore is covered with a cheesy material. Scrape this off, states Doctor Kaupp, and use on it a canker pencil, pure iodine or powdered carbonate of potash. Repeat once each day until the sore has been cured.

Early Hatched Pullets Produce Eggs in Winter

The results of laying tests at the Massachusetts experiment station show that early-hatched chicks of the heavier breeds make the best winter layers. Rhode Island Red pullets which were hatched in March gave a winter egg production of 42.65 eggs. April-hatched pullets gave a winter production of 35.40 eggs and May pullets gave a production of 22.50 eggs. The profit in producing eggs comes largely from producing them at a season of the year when they are highest in price. This means that we must plan to produce eggs during the winter months. The Massachusetts experiment station shows that, with the general-purpose breeds, the early-hatched chicks are the ones which mature in time to start laying in the latter part of October and continue throughout the winter.

Poultry Hints

- Cull out the hen that is persistently broody.
- Isn't it funny? Almost everybody's hens start to lay like fun when the price drops.
- The incubator should be located, preferably in a cellar, having good ventilation. If no such location can be had, a room facing the north is the next best place.
- Goslings dress easier in warm weather than they do in cold, as the feathers do not set so tightly, and in picking them the flesh is not so likely to be torn.

Many of the old, unfit poultry houses now found on farms could be remodeled at little expense and trouble in such a way that they would provide a comfortable home for the flock.

Plan to get chicks out on the ground in the sunlight as soon as possible, or for a short while each day.

It will soon be the season for gape worms, and all yards not sown to green feed should be spaded or plowed up. If the worms are thick, scatter lime about the yard before plowing.

Brood coops for the crop of growing young fowls need strong wooden floors and the openings in front should be closed tight each night to keep down the losses from rats and weasels.

When the eggs begin to hatch, the hen should be confined and not disturbed until the hatching is complete.

Hens in the breeding flock should be allowed out of doors in direct sunlight during the winter and encouraged to take plenty of exercise.

The little chicks are not one bit better off where you insist on feeding them before they are 48 hours old. In fact, their chances for developing into useful birds are much enhanced by such delay.

As to Effeminacy
Ideas of what constitute effeminacy are purely a matter of geography, according to Frederick Tisdale in an article in Liberty. "Chinese women wear long trousers that fit tightly around the waist and hips," he points out. "So do sailors in the American navy. Therefore, it is evident that a Chinese woman so dressed, observing the toughest tar of the battle fleet, would consider said tar effeminate and beneath the notice of a woman."

New Skyscraper Idea
A 108-story skyscraper is being planned in New York city. Certain features of the steel design are being patented, notably a method of connecting each column to the girders in such a way as to make the building rigid and proof against swaying in a gale more than many other buildings of half the height. Heretofore most skyscrapers have relied solely on wind bracing in the side walls.

BASKET BALL NEWS

The Pinckney High School team and the Congregational team went to Chelsea last Wednesday to play a double header with the High School and Christian Endeavor teams of that place and both were defeated, the first by a score of 28 to 9 and the latter by a score of 17 to 6.

The local school team was at a distinct disadvantage on the Chelsea full sized floor and this coupled with the fact that they were up against a very fast team made the game one sided

Simplicity Marks New Evening Duds

Line, Beauty of Color Now Being Emphasized in Formal Attire.

A tendency toward simplicity in the mode for evening, first apparent last fall, has grown still more pronounced in the evening models being exhibited for the season at the Riviera and at Palm Beach, writes a fashion correspondent in the New York Times. These newest designs depend almost wholly on charm of line and beauty of coloring rather than on applied intense ornamentation, thereby achieving an effect of unsophisticated youthfulness for which the extremely elaborate gown strives in vain.

Worth compromises in one instance with this new order to the extent of confining the bead embroidery on the gown to a single panel down the back. Otherwise the frock is simplicity itself, made in black of a soft crepe satin, with the front of the waist demurely straight, a modestly high round neck line and side fullness in the skirt resulting from a circular cut. The traditional Worth elegance is reserved for the back of its low, V-cut back and its panel hung with row after row of black bead fringe. The gown bears its own permanent shoulder decoration in the form of embroidered flowers done in palleettes in various tones of peacock blue.

Simplicity composed of many intricacies is the boasted forte of Vionnet and one sees in her collection many charming examples of the complicatedly simple evening gown. A favorite type is made of georgette, perfectly flat but flowing in line, the exquisite fit effected by the use of a deep V-shaped gore inserted down one side of the waist and even deeper V in-

Two-Piece Sports Dress Is Made of Silk Crepe

This charming two-piece sports dress of silk crepe should appeal to many women. It is smart and plain and dignified.

One-Piece Frock Again Winning Milady's Favor

One-piece frocks are again coming into favor. With the new one-piece dress return smart little jackets of matching material of velvet.

The modern one-piece dress is not, however, the straight-lined affair worn a few seasons ago. It is made with a suggestion of the low-placed waistline and usually has a skirt decorated with inverted plaits, tucks, tiers, aprons or godets. Most often the fullness appears at the front of the skirt only since the back of the frock must appear slender-fitting and seem to be drawn rather snugly over the hips. Wide, tight hipbands are well thought of by the smart modistes who are featuring the one-piece frocks in preference to simple jumper models.

As to sleeves, they continue long. Set into narrow armholes the newer models appear to gradually gain fullness until they reach the wrists where they gather into narrow wristbands. Collars may be V-shaped, square in front and rounded at the rear, high, or of the girlish turn-down type. Sleeveless velvet jackets, embroidered in colors or plain are being worn over one-piece dresses in the home these chilly days.

What to Wear to Add That Individual Touch

What can a woman wear to add that smart "finishing touch"? What can she do that will make her individual—add a something that will give her the long-for individual stamp?

Gowns, hosiery, slippers, even jewelry all conform to a certain ever-changing style, but that "finishing touch" is a matter each woman must decide for herself. The smart woman gets it and rejoices, the other woman just misses it.

Look in the glass and decide for yourself. No one can help you. It must be your own original thought that will add the thing you need. Try arranging a scarf at your throat some new way. Take beads and twist them in some odd fashion. Get a piece of chiffon and make a bow of it for your shoulder, your hip or even the edge of your skirt.

Give yourself an individual air. Do all that fashion demands and then add your own personal touch and you will be smart!

Formal Fabrics Used in Informal Models

Informal frocks fashioned of formal fabrics is a description that applies to many of the smartest of the new models. Such informal frocks mark the fashion trend of using certain materials, heretofore reserved for occasions of ceremony, for costumes that in line duplicate rather casual sports modes.

The great success achieved by the striped sports jumper introduced by one of the best-known French creators needs no emphasis. It appears in any number of different versions featuring both wide and narrow stripes. Unquestionably these have been the inspiration for certain of the latest models which keep to the same lines but gain new interest by the use of formal materials.

Modified Tones Chosen for Late Winter, Spring

By a quirk of fashion, raspberry promises to be one of the most popular shades in the late winter and spring. Wild raspberries and wild cherry are also modiste selections. Peppercorn, a light yellow, and gooseberry green, are shades being selected for the southern resort season, as are cameo pink and a soft, greenish blue, known as vert de gris. They call these muted tones, for while they call to you, they don't yell at you.

A LITTLE EXPERIENCE IN BOHEMIA

By GEORGE MUNSON

(Copyright by W. G. Chapman.)

"HOW do you like Bohemia, Miss Lane?" inquired Sanford at the party.

Dorothy Lane drew in her breath. "I think it is just heavenly," she said, watching the lights and the dancers in the cabaret. "And to think I lived all my life without knowing that these things exist!"

"They're all very well in their way," answered Sanford. "Only don't estimate them beyond their real value, Miss Lane."

Dorothy had persuaded her parents, who were rich, to give her a year in New York. Ostensibly she was studying at an art school; but if you had questioned her and she had been honest, she would have told you that she was studying life.

A young man, dressed in the extremity of fashion, who had been executing a dance with a slim blonde, came up and sat down at the table.

"I'm thirsty," he remarked, addressing all the party, though his eyes rested on Dorothy.

"What'll you have?" asked Sanford, smiling.

"Absinthe," answered the young man. "Hello! Excuse me a moment!"

While he was gone to speak to his late partner, Sanford turned to Dorothy.

"It's the way in Bohemia," he said. "Introductions aren't considered necessary. You don't mind?"

"Oh, I think it's delightfully unconventional," the girl answered.

When the young man came back he drifted into an earnest conversation with Dorothy, after drinking the strange, greenish-white liquid which was supplied him. He asked her to dance. The girl, in exhilaration, seemed to float over the boards.

And when the dance was over the young man and she sat down in a corner behind a screen, under a palm.

He was the son of an English nobleman, he told her. But for family reasons the marriage had to be kept quiet.

He had borne the undesired stigma upon his birth at his dead mother's plea. His father had refused to acknowledge him. He did not like life in the cabaret. But he had to live.

Dorothy listened in a trance. Such things, then, happened in real life, and not merely in books! It seemed impossible. In a moment kindly Sanford was forgotten. Sanford, well-meaning, and a good friend to her, had taken her to the Cabaret Richelleu at her request to see "something of the shady side of life." He thought the inexperienced girl more worldly than she was. Had he understood nothing would have induced him to take her, with the party of friends, to such a place.

The young man's soulful blue eyes seemed unutterably sad. "May I hope to meet you again?" he asked.

"Perhaps," breathed Dorothy.

"When?"

"Tomorrow night?"

It was settled, and the girl's heart beat fast as he led her back to the table, where Sanford gave her a kindly scolding for sitting out with the man. He did not know the secret of his birth, and Dorothy felt honored in keeping it to herself. Sanford took her home, laughed at her enthusiasm, and said good-by. He never dreamed what plan was in Dorothy's head.

On the next night Dorothy, innocent, went to the cabaret alone. Timidly she sat at a table. She did not know what to order. Before she had answered the waiter, a young man came up to her and invited her to dance. The leer on his face struck Dorothy cold with terror.

Suddenly, with a bound, her friend of the night before was at her side.

"Get out of here!" he stormed at the other, who withdrew grudgingly. A moment later Dorothy saw him laughing with the slim blonde woman. It might have seemed curious, but all her attention was concentrated on the young man at her side.

She told him her own story, of the pent-in life in the country home, her rich old father, absorbed in money-making, her loneliness in New York.

"But you need an escort," said the young man. "May I be privileged to call myself your friend? I can show you life—the real life."

On the next evening he called for her in a taxicab and took her to half a dozen cabarets. Dorothy had an impression of a whirl of music, dancing, and laughter. The young man had no change and Dorothy paid the taxicab bill—twenty-two dollars. She had an idea that the cab driver smiled when he took the young man home.

St. Clair—that was his name—had explained how his share of his grandfather's property was being held up pending a lawsuit. It would be a matter of a few weeks only. Dorothy, with all the money she needed, had offered to be his banker. The next day she bought him a diamond pin. He had said he had lost his pin. How surprised he would be at the gift!

He was. And always respectful, he took her here and there and everywhere. The girl's eyes were opening fast. Their comradeship, so frank and friendly, took on a softer note. She let him hold her hand. Once he kissed it, and she thrilled with happiness.

He was to call and take her to a private theatrical entertainment—very exclusive, very elite. Dorothy was surprised that it was to be given in a private house, but she went upstairs without demur. They were the first guests. Excusing himself a moment, the young man withdrew, leaving the girl alone in the dimly lit room.

It was a two-room apartment, with a curtain in the middle. Dorothy began to grow uneasy. She heard footsteps—and suddenly two men and a woman—the slim blonde—burst in.

"There she is!" shrieked the woman. "Oh, you hussy! I'll teach you—I'll tear your eyes out—"

She struggled wildly in the grip of the men, while Dorothy, white with terror, waited mutely.

"Well, miss, we've trapped you," said one of the men. "We are detectives from the Dolf agency. If you've got any friends you'd best communicate with them, for Mrs. Seaforth here means to prosecute her divorce suit through thick and thin."

Before Dorothy had quite taken in his meaning the second man, seizing advantage while his comrade struggled with the blonde, came quietly up to Dorothy.

"Five hundred will square it, and we'll swear we never found you," he whispered. "Come, give me your note—all your money and an I. O. U. It's safest, and you won't have any publicity."

At last the girl realized the trap into which she had fallen. Half fainting, she clung to the window curtains, her eyes fixed mutely on the scoundrel's face.

Suddenly the door burst open, and there stood Sanford—kindly Sanford, now red with rage, and wielding a revolver.

"Get out of here—the pack of you!" he snarled.

With wonderful speed the blonde, recovering, shot through the doorway, followed by the two confederates.

Sanford held Dorothy in his arms. "There, my dear!" he said, stroking her hair. "I was to blame. I felt uneasy and followed things up. Those rogues had laid a trap for you. I know. I know."

And, half supporting her, he led her from Bohemia.

"Whale Steaks" Taken From Buried Mammoth

The proprietress of an inn at Dikovina, in the Trans-Balk territory of Siberia, provided her customers with "whale steaks" from a mysterious source of supply, and failed to pay the regulation tax on her profits. The health inspector for the district, knowing that no whale meat was obtainable within 100 miles of the inn, set out with a police inspector to investigate the matter. After sampling the famous steaks at the inn, he announced his identity.

Madame informed him that a crazy woodman had supplied over 1,000 roubles' worth for fifty bottles of vodka, but she had no idea where he got his supplies. On being interviewed, the woodman made the amazing statement that he dug the meat from the ground.

The inspector accompanied the woodman to a place in the forest where, surely enough, was buried a gigantic carcass. It was sound, fresh meat, evidently kept from decomposition by the cold.

The site was excavated, and the carcass was found to be that of a gigantic mammoth of prehistoric times, and with it a baby mammoth almost as big as an elephant of today. Except for the hole in the back of the adult animal from which the woodman had dug his "steaks," both carcasses were whole and perfect.

Entombed by some primeval catastrophe, the two carcasses had been preserved by the Arctic cold for nearly 20,000 years.—London Mail.

Wise Collie

Not long ago a large collie dog limped into a country hospital in England and held up one of its paws. Examination showed that the left foreleg was broken.

A doctor set the leg and put it in splints, and the dog then settled down and made itself comfortable at the hospital. The authorities did not know to whom it belonged, but they kept it and cured it. In the morning after its first night as a patient it found its way to the kitchen and was given breakfast.

Nothing was discovered to show how it had found the hospital. It may have been pure chance—a turning into the first open door in search of aid and pity.

Family Failing

One day an Ebell club woman asked Harry Carr why domestic relations in this present day and age seemed so unending.

"It's because there isn't enough variety among wives," answered The Lancer promptly.

"My gracious!" exclaimed the lady. "you are not advocating polygamy, are you?"

"Oh, no," was the reply. "What I meant was, that today there seem to be but two types of wives: those who expect things of their husbands, and those who suspect things."—Los Angeles Times.

Classic Names for States

Thomas Jefferson proposed a plan in 1784 to form the northwest territory into states, each state to be two degrees wide and the lines to be intersected by two meridians, one passing through the falls of the Ohio river and the other through the mouth of the Kanawha river. The states were to be named Cherooesus, Assensipia, Sylvania, Pellisipia, Illinoia, Polypoma, Washington, Mesocoetia and Michigania.

Private Gas Well

E. C. Hamilton, who lives east of Independence, Mo., has earned a name as a resourceful fellow. He decided that a gas well would be a handy thing to have about his yard, so he went about 50 feet from his house and dug one. His well, which has a pressure of 475 pounds, has been cased and the gas is piped to Hamilton's house, being used for heating, cooking and lighting.

Forgot Year Zero

Whether the year 1930 or the year 1931 A. D. is the two thousandth anniversary of the year 70 B. C. is a subject that has been agitating the British press. The Times says 1930 but one of its correspondents, Doctor Glover by name, maintains that it is 1931.

The latter view is based on the theory that, among other errors, historians have mistakenly omitted the year zero from their computation of time on an A. D. and B. C. basis. The system now is that the morning after December 31 B. C. was January 1 A. D. But astronomers know better and insist on inserting a zero year at this point.—Living Age.

Clean Kidneys By Drinking Lots of Water

Take Salts to Flush Kidneys if Bladder Bothers or Back Hurts

Eating too much rich food may produce kidney trouble in some form, says a well-known authority, because the acids created excite the kidneys. Then they become overworked, get sluggish, clog up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly backache and misery in the kidney region, rheumatic twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation, torpid liver, sleeplessness, bladder and urinary irritation.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right, or if bladder bothers you, begin drinking lots of good water and also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to activity; also to neutralize the acids in the system so that they no longer irritate, thus often relieving bladder disorders.

Jad Salts can not injure anyone; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to help keep the kidneys and urinary organs clean, thus often avoiding serious kidney disorders.

serted on the opposite side of the skirt. This diagonal line is repeated by cutting the top of the bodice to cross only one shoulder, the other side of the bodice being held by a strap.

These unusual necklines are very popular this season. Chanel achieves a very interesting one on a gown of black Chantilly lace, built over a pink foundation. A narrow strip of the lace, applied as a little berth across the back of the gown, is left loose from the shoulder seam to be thrown across the front of the neck as a tiny scarf. Otherwise the gown is very simple with its two flounces on the skirt and its low but distinctly up-front waistline.

Furs Now in Limelight for Women's Sports Wear

Where preference only is to be considered one may select pony, stencilled sea lion, gazelle, antelope, muskrat, raccoon, leopard or otter if a coat is wanted principally for sports use, because these furs belong quite definitely in the category of stylish sports furs. Reversible coats—one side a smooth, soft cloth, the other one of flat sports fur—are also favored for the new season.

For more general wear a choice can be from among such furs as Mendoza beaver, Hollander Hudson seal, squirrel, krummer, caracul, American broad-tail and mole.

Use Judgment in Colors When Adding New Things

So many pretty girls and women seem to have not the faintest notion of smartness in the matter of color. They've bought a brown coat, a black hat, a blue dress and wear them all at once. Consider what you have on hand before adding what you need to get. Even the cleverest of us ought to sit down with a pad and pencil before taking the simplest shopping expedition. To be well dressed is not, in the main, a matter of income; it is rather a matter of brains.

The Sandman Story by Martha Martin

THE TOAD FAMILY

"If I could write a book," said Teddy Toad to Taddy Toad, "I would not go around lecturing, for it would take the time away from my writing."

"I Am Going to Give a Course of Lectures," Said Taddy.

one who talks and lectures and whose talk is quoted but whose talk is silly. "If you say that beforehand," said Taddy, "no one will want to come and hear you talk."

"I am taking it for granted that they may," said Teddy. "What are you going to lecture about?" asked Taddy. "Ah," said Teddy, "that is the question."

"And then what will your next lecture be about?" asked Taddy. "I thought I would also give another lecture and call it: 'The World in Which We Live.'"

When you're walking down a road and you come across a dear little toad. Remember he's the gardener's friend. And has been for summers without end.

For Meditation BY LEONARD A. BARRETT

WHEN we examine the balance sheet of a bank we find upon the side of liabilities an account called "Reserve." The money invested in this account is held for purposes of emergency.

In the world of moral values a "reserve" is as indispensable a factor as it is in the business world. It is a balance of reserve power on the right side of the moral ledger that enables one to overcome many a difficulty and successfully encounter many moral struggles.

WHAT THE GRACIOUS HOSTESS SAYS: BY DELLA THOMPSON LUDES

THE BREAKFAST TABLE

THE table for a breakfast party is set as for luncheon. At each place is a service plate, with such forks at the left, and such knives and spoons at the right as will be used.

The breakfast napkin, which matches the cloth, is folded diagonally and laid on the service plate with the embroidered point toward the edge of the table.

A ball of butter may be placed on the plate before the guests enter if economy of service is desired. The supply plate is not left on the table.

The menu for a breakfast party or brekko-lunch should be simple, else we lose the point of this form of entertaining. It may consist of the following:

- Whole Strawberries (with powdered sugar)
Curl'd Bacon / Scrambled Eggs
Baked Potatoes / Johnny Cake
Sliced Cucumber
Raspberry Tarts / Coffee

- Red Raspberries and Cream
Fried Ham and Eggs
Creamed Potatoes
Oatmeal Muffins / Tomatoes Sliced
Doughnuts / Coffee

- Cantaloupe
Soft-Boiled Eggs
French Fried Potatoes
Lettuce / Tomatoes Sliced
Corn Meal Muffins
Coffee / Doughnuts

- For an autumn breakfast the following is suggested:
Fruit Cup
(Mixture of orange, banana, grapefruit, grapes, pineapple)
Waffles and Honey
Coffee / Doughnuts

- and for winter:
Grapefruit
Buckwheat Cakes / Maple Sirup
Coffee / Sausage / Doughnuts

In either of the above two menus extra service in the kitchen would be needed, unless made by electric equipment at table, but either would be hailed with exclamations of delight. (Copyright by The Eastman Syndicate.)

THE DEATH PENALTY

The capital punishment bills before the Legislature at Lansing have had tough sledding the past week.
The Palmer bill providing death by lethal gas was found to be faulty and sent back to the committee on judiciary. The Armstrong bill providing death by electrocution was then trotted out and then another one providing death by hanging. Debate is expected to open on them this week and also a public hearing to which Clarence Darrow, noted criminal lawyer,
Warden Hagle of Sing Sing prison,
New York, Judge Frank Murphy of Detroit will speak against it and Editor Nimmo of the Detroit Saturday Night will speak for it.

Sponsors of the bills claim to have enough votes pledged to carry them but they made the same claims in 1925 when it failed by a narrow margin. One of the obstacles in its path is that no one has been able to find out the Governors attitude. Although he has come out strong for many things he has been silent on the subject of capital punishment but instead has made the suggestion that hustling up the work of the criminal courts in order to secure speedy trials and prompt punishment, with the idea that this method of procedure will have a deterrent effect on hold-up men and thugs in general.
