MRS. LOUISE BAUGHN WILCOX

Mrs. Louise Baughn Wilcox was born March 11th, 1881 at St. Johns, Michigan and died June 17th, 1927 after an illness of less than a weeks duration. During this short time all that the best medical attention and loving hands could do, was done but to no purpose.

On October 21st, 1908 she was united in marriage to Robert A. Wilcox of St. Johns. Two children came to bless this union, Myron Otis and Neitz M. who with her mother, Mrs. Sarah Baughn, one sister, Mrs. William Miller, one brother, Earl Baughn and a host of friends are left to mourn the loss of a loved one, her husband having passed away on June 14th, 1926, also one brother, Clifford, who preceded her to the great beyond in 1907 and her father in 1917.

The deceased came to Pinckney to live with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Baughn in 1906 and after a few years took up nursing and for the past eight years has been in attendance at the Pinckney Sanitarium under the direction of the Drs. Sigler. Here her greatest ambition was fulfilled by doing good for others and her cheerful words and kindness endeared her to everyone who knew her. She was a member of the Pinckney Community Congregational Church and the Pinckney Chapter, Eastern Star.

The funeral services were held from the Pinckney Congregational Church Monday at 2:00 P. M., Rev. H. E. Maycroft officiating. Interment was in the Pinckney cemetery.

Sunset and evening star,

Clear call for me,

And may there be no moaning at the bar,

When I put out to sea,

But such a tide as moving seems asleep,

Too full for sound and foam,

When that which drew from out the boundless turns again ohme,

Twilight and evening bell,

And after that the dark,

And may there be no sadness of farewell,

When I embark,

For tho' from out our borne of time and place,

The flood may bar me far,

I hope to see my Pilot face to face

When I have crossed the bar.

MRS. M. E. CHALKER

Another successful school year has been brought to a close. School ended last week, the pupils only going this week in order to obtain their final standings.

The Baccalaureate Sermon for the Senior Class was delivered at St. Mary's Church Sunday evening by Rev. F. J. McQuillan. He gave an excellent address and took for his subject "Gaining Success in Life." After telling of the many ways in which this is possible closed with the statement that success in life can not be measured in dollars and cents.

The Junior Reception for the Seniors was held at the Masonic Banquet room on Tuesday evening. The Star Ladies served. Wayne Carr officiated as toastmaster. Cecil Hendee gave the toast to the Seniors and Elizabeth Bokros responded. Hazel Smith spoke on "Graduation." Robert Stackable and Fred Reas were called upon and responded for the alumni. Rev. F. J. McQuillan made a brief address in which he touched on "Ideals." Prof. J. P. Doyle was then called upon and made an address in which he touched upon athletics and the great value of teamwork. Mrs. Clifford VanHorn and the Misses Nellie Gardner and Helen Fiedler favored with vocal selections.

The High School base ball team closed a successful season last Friday when they won from Stockbridge by a close score of 4 to 2. Their record this year is 7 won and 3 lost. # Given Fortune of Old Friends

Made Heir by Brother and Sister He Met When a Student.

Toronto, Ont.—Romance as highly colored as a fairy tale has gilded the personal fortunes of R. B. Bennett, K. C., who comes into national prominence as a formidable contender for the leadership of the Conservative party in Canada.

Through his own efforts in the practice of his profession Bennett is credited with having become a millionaire. On top of this he now enjoys a "windfall" which, if it were an episode described in fiction, would be challenged for straining credulity.

When Bennett, nearly 40 years ago, was studying law in Chatham, N. B., along with Max Aitken, now Lord Beaverbrook, among his friends were a sister and brother, Jennie Shirreff and Harry Shirreff, both of whom were a few years his senior. They worked together in church and in the temperance lodge.

Girl Trains as Nurse.

Whether sentiment existed between Jennie Shirreff and the young law student is not known. In any case, their ways parted. The girl went to Brookline, near Boston, to train as nurse. Bennett went to the new town of Calgary, Alberta, to practice his profession, and grew up with the West.

In 1904 Jennie Shirreff married Ezra Butler Eddy of Ottawa, proprietor and founder of the E. B. Eddy company, paper, pulp and wood-ware manufacturers, whose daughter by a former marriage she had served professionally.

When, 12 years later Eddy died, his will declared it to be "one of the great desires of his heart" that his business should be continued. To that end he established a trust with his widow as one of the trustees to operate for ten years, at the end of which period his widow was to inherit five-eighths of the estate.

Thus in 1916 the former nurse came into possession of a controlling interest of one of the great industries of Canada. She brought to her new responsibility an executive capacity which had found play even during her husband's lifetime when she had accompanied him on his daily rounds and had become familiar with every detail of his enterprises.

Meanwhile Bennett had reached Ottawa as a member of the House of Commons. He, like Jennie Shirreff, had prospered and they resumed their contact on equal terms.

Names Bennett as Trustee.

In 1921 Mrs. Eddy died. Like her husband, she also established a trust which was not to be broken for five years. She appointed as trustees and executors of her estate her brother, J. T. "Harry" Shirreff, who held an important executive position in the Eddy company, and "my friend for the last 50 years, Richard Bedford Bennett, barister." As trustees she directed that her brother was to receive $15,000 and Bennett $7,500 a year.

Subject to the provisions of the trust she bequeathed 1,007 shares in the Eddy company to her brother and 500 shares to Bennett. The value of each bequest was in the millions. In addition to the shares in the company which she had inherited from her husband, she was able to bequeath another million dollars to charities, churches, relatives and friends.

Harry Shirreff did not survive the five-year trusteeship. He died on May 20, 1923. Even more surprising than Mrs. Eddy's bequest was the following clause in her brother's will:

"My surviving sister, Edith Jessie Richardson, and my surviving relatives having been amply provided for by my deceased sister, Jennie Eddy, I give and bequeath 1,008 full paid-up shares of the capital stock of the E. B. Eddy company, limited, owned by me, by special bequest to Richard Bedford Bennett, on the expressed condition that the said Mr. Bennett shall have paid all estate and succession duties and taxes which may be payable with respect to the said shares, and, further, shall have paid also to the Montreal Trust for the purpose of establishment of the Guillaume Patching Shirreff trust fund, hereinafter more fully described, the sum of $250,000."

Inheritance Worth Millions.

The trust fund provided for an annuity for the testator's widow, and that provided for, Bennett, the sole survivor of the three young comrades who merrily frequented the debates in Temperance hall in Chatham, N. B., in 1888, finds himself by the revolution of fortune's wheel possessor of an inheritance worth many millions.

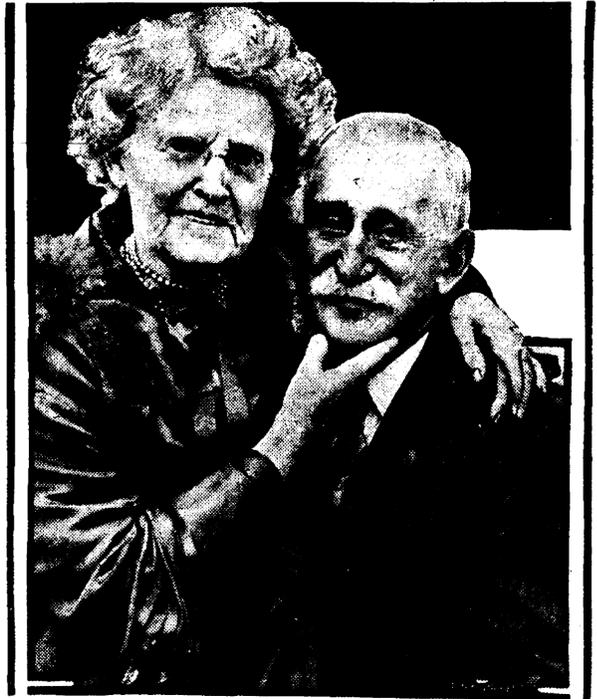

Bennett's 1,008 shares give him a

CHEESE MONUMENT

The monument erected in the little town of Camembert, France, to Mme. Harel, the first maker of the cheese that has made itself world famous. Quite appropriately a box of the cheese was placed at the base of the shaft.

His Dancing Captured Her Heart

Four months ago Frank Richie, despite the burden of his eighty-three years was sauntering gaily down the street in Sawtelle, Calif. His shoes shined, his hat at a rakish angle and his eye on the alert for any entrancing femininity. On a porch sat Mrs. Emma Lyckberg, eighty-two years old. Out of the corner of his eye Richie saw her. He noted her fashionably curled bobbed hair, sauntered on to the corner, walked around in a circle, then went back "and made himself acquainted." Soon after he took her to a dance, and she was so entranced with the way he "hoofed it" that she consented to be his wife. They both have been married before and have children and grandchildren.

BESIEGED BY CHILDREN FOR LOST-DOG REWARDS

Physician Flees From Farmhouse on Claiming Canine When Faces Appear Everywhere.

Stout Falls, S. D.—When Dr. Anton Kaufman set out at a farmhouse in the Marion (S. D.) district to reward the children of a farmer for finding and taking care of his lost dog he found children to the right of him and to the left, of him as well as in front of and behind him. Incidentally, he accidentally discovered what may be the largest family of children in South Dakota. Even now he does not know how many children there were in and about the farmhouse, but he states there were plenty and to spare.

The physician was driving along a country highway in his car with his valuable bird dog occupying a place on the fender. While the motor was traveling at a snail's pace, the wheels struck a rut in the road and the dog was hurled under the car. Fortunately the wheels did not strike it. But the animal did not like such rough treatment and upon regaining its feet started off on a run across a pasture. It paid no attention whatever to the whistling and calls of its master.

Several days later the physician learned that his missing dog was at a certain farmhouse in the district. Supplying himself with silver dollars he went to the scene. It was his dog, all right, but he asked himself whom should he reward? George, one of the children, saw the dog in the pasture first. Henry, another of the children, had told the other tots about the stray dog. Frank, still another of the children, told them how to surround and capture the dog, so all of them had assisted in "taking up" the stray animal.

Six or seven boys were each given majority of the 2,000 shares of the Eddy company. They are not on the market and their value can only be estimated. The plant in Hull, across the river from Ottawa, is assessed at $4,500,000 and the company possesses huge timber limits in the Gatineau valley and elsewhere. As a going concern the business is worth possibly $20,000,000.

There have been rumors that the International Paper company is trying to buy control. But the desire of R. B. Eddy, the founder, that the business should continue as an independent growing enterprise remains in force. And the capable hand of Bennett is at the helm.

Propaganda Had Its Birth in Ancient China

Washington.—Although it took a World war to develop it into an element of everyday life, propaganda, like powder and printing, was produced in China long before Europe became aware of its possibilities.

Emperor Cheng Lung, who ruled over China in the Eighteenth century, wanted his people to believe that his domain embraced the world. So he had printed a book in which 42 European peoples and 231 tribes were represented as paying tribute to him, this being shown not only through the text but through engravings.

His book is included in a Chinese collection on exhibition at the Congressional Library, which also embraces a few volumes printed in the Twelfth century, 800 years before the art of printing was developed in Europe.

Polar Fur Bonnets Lady Eskimo's Choice

Seward, Alaska.—What woman who gets her styles from Paris can boast of possessing in her fur chest baby reindeer pelts as soft as velvet, silver fox, seal, mink, ermine and wolverine? All of these enter into the making of Milady Eskimo's winter clothing.

The Eskimo maiden labors with the same enthusiasm as her white sister in filling her hope chest. And each garment bears some mark expressive of her dreams. Not only must designs be consistent, but color blendings must create harmony.

The little squares which adorn the flounce of her parka are cut from different colored pelts and the coat is made from many furs, alternating in color, yet harmonizing.

Polar bear and wolverine are the most popular for hoods.

1—Soldiers rescuing flood refugees in New Iberia, La., in the "Evangeline country." 2—New coast guard cutter Northland which takes the place of the famous cutter Bear in the Arctic service. 3—Clarence D. ## NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Flight of Chamberlin and Levine to Germany—"Lindy" Comes Home.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

TRAVELING considerably farther than did Lindbergh, but in no way dimming the glory of that young man's achievement, Clarence D. Chamberlin, pilot, and Charles A. Levine, his financial backer, flew in the Bellanca monoplane, Columbia, from New York to Kisleben, Germany, a distance of about 3,906 miles. Their destination was Berlin, but they wandered in a fog and ran out of fuel and were compelled to land at the old town where Martin Luther was born and died. They obtained a little gasoline there and again started for the German capital, but fog again hampered them and they descended to a swampy meadow at the village of Klengen, near Kottbus, breaking the propeller. Repairs were made with the assistance of the Germans and next day the two Americans flew to the Tempelhof aviation field at Berlin.

Germany, especially Berlin, was wild with joy over the arrival of the Columbia, and the reception accorded the aviators was no less enthusiastic than that given Lindbergh in Paris. President von Hindenburg and everyone else all the way down the scale showered attentions and honors on them, and they were the guests of Ambassador Schurman during their stay. Von Hindenburg and President Coolidge exchanged cable messages of congratulation and good will, and Berlin even renamed one of its streets "Columbia." In this respect the little town of Kottbus, however, had the jump on the capital, for in its glee over the landing of the plane there its officials named a thoroughfare for Chamberlin.

Levine's part in the exploit was a complete surprise, even to his wife. At the last minute he stepped aboard the plane in his ordinary clothing and away they went on the long flight. Their earth inductor compass did not function well, and they made their way across the Atlantic largely by guess and by observing the drift of icebergs. Toward the end of the flight they ran into much rough weather and fog. Chamberlin and Levine said they intended to fly to various European cities, including Vienna; but as soon as the news of their safe arrival was received their wives started across to join them, and this admittedly complicated their plans. Whether or not they will fly back to America is unknown. Chamberlin and Levine are expected to receive the plaudits of their fellow Americans. Chamberlin was a passenger on the Lusitania, which was sunk by a squadron of German submarines in the Gulf of Mexico. Chamberlin, who was born in Los Angeles, is a well-known aviator and has been awarded the highest aviation honors in the world.

COMPLICATED and obscure political negotiations are going on in Poland that may result in at least temporary peace. Any way, the prospect is that there will be no fighting in Poland and that the foreign legations will not have to move out. Chang Kai-shek's armies having been driven platform and presented to President Coolidge, who with a few fitting words pinned on his breast the new Distinguished Flying Service cross. The aviator and his mother were then driven to the temporary White House, and for the following day and a half were banqueted and feted and interviewed and photographed without respite. Before his arrival in Washington Lindbergh was promoted to colonel in the Missouri National Guard flying service and was awarded the Langley medal by the Smithsonian Institution and the Hubbard medal by the National Geographic society. By radio on shipboard and from committees that journeyed to Washington he received innumerable invitations to visit cities and persons that wanted to entertain him. It was certain that he would visit New York, which had arranged a great reception for him, and Chicago hoped to have him as its guest during a military tournament June 24, 25 and 26. St. Louis of course will entertain him for that is his residence, and Little Falls, Minn., his "home town," expects a visit.

MOIKOFF, Russian minister to Poland, was assassinated in the Warsaw railway station by a young Russian student, and alarmists see in the event and its consequences the possibility of another European war. Maxim Litvinoff, soviet assistant commissar of foreign affairs, immediately dispatched a note to Warsaw demanding that the Polish government take responsibility for the murder and that Russian officials be permitted to take a part in an investigation of "the plot which led up to the murder." The assassination, he said, was "part of the whole sequence of acts intended to disrupt soviet Russia's diplomatic missions abroad," and he linked it up with the raid on the soviet embassy in Peking, the raid in London and Great Britain's severance of relations with Russia.

The Poles made all sorts of official apologies for the murder and delayed their reply to the note in the hope of finding some form that would conciliate Russia without hurting Poland's dignity. It was felt that compliance with Russia's demand for participation in the inquiry would be most difficult. The similar murder at Sarajevo in June, 1914, which led to the World war, naturally, was in all minds. However, Polish government circles regarded the tragedy as an internal Russian affair, saying that although it happened on Polish territory, Poland had no moral responsibility for it. As usual in such cases, the soviet authorities in Moscow staged a big popular demonstration against the Polish legation and ostentatiously protected it with troops.

PREMIER POINCARÉ of France told the chamber of deputies he hoped to get better debt settlement terms from the United States—and that he intended to try, particularly as he realized that the French parliament would not ratify the accords with America and Great Britain in their present form. The premier said that was why he had made the "provisional" payments on the debt account—so as to keep free to renew the negotiations. His declaration came after he had remarked that "the French parliament does not seem to wish to ratify" the accords.

MAYOR THOMPSON of Chicago and the members of the executive committee of the recent flood control conference went to Washington and laid before President Coolidge the recommendations for legislation adopted by that gathering. The President has been urged by several national leaders to call congress in special session at least six weeks before the regular December assembly in order that the flood control and farm relief problems may be disposed of, and possibly revenue legislation framed, thus leaving the program of the regular session.

COMPLICATED and obscure political negotiations are going on in Poland that may result in at least temporary peace. Any way, the prospect is that there will be no fighting in Poland and that the foreign legations will not have to move out. Chang Kai-shek's armies having been driven by the Cantonese out of all the territory south of the province in which Peking is located, the Manchurian marshal is apparently making a deal with the opposing generals which will be followed by reorganization of the government through a people's conference. Chang is said to have stipulated that all the factions shall war on communism.

Meanwhile the troops of the foreign powers were gathering in Tientsin and that city looked like an armed camp. The reiteration was made that the forces will be solely for the defense of life and property, which assurance is accepted by the better class of Chinese. There is no intention immediately to reinforce the legation guards. The Peking foreign office, however, fled with Minister Murray a protest against the augmentation of the American forces at Tientsin, contending that under the Boxer protocol this country was entitled to maintain only such forces as were actually needed to keep open communications between Peking and the sea.

CHICAGO, having obtained from the legislature and the voters authority to raise funds for the erection of an adequate building for great public meetings, has become definitely a contender for the Republican national convention of 1928. Allen F. Moore, Republican national committeeman from Illinois, went down to Washington to find out whether President Coolidge would be willing to have the convention given to Chicago. He said the Chief Executive's attitude was sufficiently encouraging to warrant the city going after the prize. According to Washington correspondents, Mr. Moore was closeted with the President long enough to find out whether Mr. Coolidge is going to be a candidate for another term, where he would prefer to be nominated, what Democrat he would prefer for an opponent, how he proposes to placate the farmers, what stand he will take on prohibition, but he came away completely unenlightened on any of these subjects. All he learned was that Mr. Coolidge has no objection to the holding of the Republican national convention in Chicago.

WILLIAM G. McADOO, in a commencement day address at Tusculum college, Greenville, Tenn., declared the prohibition question presents a vital issue that responsible statesmanship cannot ignore, and challenged the political leaders of all parties to make known their stand on it. He uttered the warning that efforts to nullify the eighteenth amendment are part of a movement that menaces the foundations of popular government.

YEARS of litigation in which the government has sought to dissolve the International Harvester company and affiliated corporations as a combination in restraint of trade, ended when the United States Supreme court ruled that the Harvester company has neither restrained nor suppressed "a free, untrammelled, keen and effective competition" in farm machinery.

The opinion of the court, written by Justice Sanford, affirmed the decree of a federal district court dismissing the government's petition in July, 1923, for an order compelling the Harvester company to dispose of its business and assets to at least three separate and distinct corporations with wholly separate owners and stockholders.

DIPLOMATIC relations with Albania were broken by Jugo-Slavia and the entire legation staff departed from Tirana. The break was occasioned by the failure of the Albanian government to accept conditions set forth by Jugo-Slavia demanding the release of an attaché of the Jugo-Slav legation in Tirana, who was recently arrested by the Albanian authorities on a charge of espionage. Albania appealed to the League of Nations to avert hostilities between the two countries.

DEATHS of the week, included those of Dr. Joseph Schneider of Milwaukee, world-famed oculist; W. R. Stansbury, clerk of the United States Supreme court, and Robert G. Hilliard, veteran actor.

High Wages, Dependent on High Average Production, Secret of Prosperity

By H. H. RICE, Detroit Manufacturer.

HIGH WAGES are the result, rather than the cause, of prosperity in this country. The theory that high wages cause prosperity is putting the cart before the horse. Neither do shorter hours, Henry Ford's theory, have anything to do with prosperity, unless unit production warrants the shortened working period.

Prosperity is the result of high average production per man, however that high production may be achieved. So that the order is: First, high production; second, prosperity and high wages. Though it may be admitted that high wages mean greater purchasing power, that merely is saying in another way that high wages indicate a prosperity that can only exist with high production.

Prosperity in this country is due to efficient large-scale production with accompanying low manufacturing costs. Without large production there can be no general prosperity.

So the way to increased wages in a larger sense can only be reached through increased production which is in turn dependent upon a larger market through lower prices to the public.

We cannot have our cake and eat it too. Wages cannot be higher without a corresponding increase in production from which only can wages get their return.

Progress of Humanity Brought About by Inspiring Influence of Women

By JAMES J. DAVIS, Secretary of Labor.

All that I am in life, all that I have been able to accomplish, I owe to my mother.

The best in any man is what he derived from his mother, and the greater the man the more indebted to his mother he is always found to have been.

Humanity is slowly making progress, and this progress, I believe, is brought about by the inspiring influence of woman. She has lifted us from the lowlands to the heights, and on those heights marked the milestones of our progress by her love and devotion.

There are pessimistic voices which profess agreement with everything that has been said in behalf of the motherhood of the past, but are skeptical of the young women of today. I find that the old folks have always been a little skeptical of the younger generation, but they forget their elders, in turn, were quite skeptical of them. All ages are pretty much alike, and I know of nothing particularly wrong with the girls of today. Some of them are doubtless quite frivolous, but we do not need to worry over them as a class. Most of them will give a good account of themselves when they shall have taken up their places amongst the matrons.

Bankers Wrong in Making Loans to Nations for Military Preparations

By HERBERT HOOVER, Secretary of Commerce.

Nations should decline to lend money for purposes of military preparation. Money should be loaned only where some productive result would be gained by the recipient nation.

No nation should itself borrow or should permit its citizens to borrow money from foreign countries unless this money is to be devoted to productive enterprises.

Out of the wealth and the higher standards of living created from enterprise itself must come the ability to repay the capital, together with the net gain to the borrowing country. Any other course of action creates obligations impossible of repayment except by a direct subtraction from the standards of living of the borrowing country and the impoverishment of its people.

In fact if this principle could be adopted between nations of the world, that is, if nations would refuse to allow the lending of money for the balancing of budgets for military or war purposes, or even that type of public works which does not bring some direct or indirect productive return, a great number of blessings would follow to the entire world.

Acute Need of Universities Is Renaissance of Great Teaching

By GLENN FRANK, President Wisconsin University.

American universities stand in acute need of a renaissance of great teaching. Let the demagogues of narrow minds continue to be disturbed, free discussion should continue to be free among college students. Nor let the undergraduate be a laboratory guinea pig for inexperienced experts in mental hygiene and personnel work.

Great teaching is needed first of all. A new technique—perhaps to come slowly from mental hygiene work—must be developed in the art of leading and instructing mentally, morally, and emotionally. Research, overemphasized, needs reevaluation.

Student suicides, an especially disconcerting phase of a universally increasing suicide rate, represent the breakdown of individual.

No one thing in American universities accounts for student suicides. The religious demagogue who parades the broken hearts of bereaved ones in support of his own single track theory should be denounced.

Americans Must Unite to Discourage Tendencies Harmful to Nation

By WILLIAM LIBBEY, Princeton Banker.

Eternal vigilance is necessary to protect "the spirit of '76" and of the framers of the Constitution against current tendencies.

We must combat all efforts to subvert our Constitution. Many "new" schemes to change the government were old when the framers of the Constitution were at their task and were studied and rejected by them.

They were answered then and were saved by Washington, Jefferson, and Franklin. We must remember this is still George Washington's country. If we would keep it so we must discourage traitors.

There are 1,000 newspapers in the country with anarchistic leanings, and patriotic citizens must guard against them and also against misinterpretations of the American Revolution in history textbooks. A committee of the Sons of the Revolution has been appointed to discuss a scrutiny of textbooks with the National Historical society.

POOR CORNELIA BRINK

(© by D. J. Walsh.)

CORNELIA BRINK slowly opened her eyes. Could it possibly be morning so soon? Surely it was hardly daylight. But when a hoarse, commanding voice came up the stairway to the little back bedroom Cornelia no longer had any doubts.

"Cornelia Brink," shouted the voice, "with a note of suppressed rage in it, "this is the second time I've had to call you. Ain't you got a mite of sense? Don't you know we've got a hard day's work ahead of us? Who do you think you are, anyway, snoring away at this time of the morning? You get yourself down here double quick," and the voice trailed away as the speaker went back to some interrupted task.

Cornelia did not waste any time in answering. She knew the only answer that would be acceptable to her mother would be her instant appearance in the kitchen below. She jumped out of bed hastily, put on her coarse undergarments, drew on a pair of old shoes, twisted her hair in a tight little knob at the back of her head, and lastly donned a much faded and badly shrunken gingham dress. Downstairs she flew without further delay.

Cornelia was a plump girl, thirty-six years old. She had nice eyes and if she were not always tired with too much work and dull from too little sleep, she would have been rather attractive. She was lovable and it was a wonder to the few people who knew her really well how she could keep sweet and wholesome under the constant nagging of her mother, for Mrs. Brink was the hardest kind of a person to live with. Her god was work and her medium to serve her duty was by wringing every ounce of strength out of her one and only child. It was suspected by the neighbors that Mrs. Brink had another motive and that was to keep away all possible suitors from Cornelia. To hear Mrs. Brink talk one would conclude that there was not a decent man in all creation. If they were not actually mean openly they were sly and underhanded and brutal in secret. Every woman was a martyr, and she always ended her dissertation on men by holding up old Cyrus, her eighty-year-old husband, as an example of depraved manhood.

Now old Cyrus Brink was anything but horrid. It is true he was an old man, but Mrs. Brink herself was past seventy, and Cyrus was possessed of more than ample means. He had an even disposition and seldom turned on his wife. This tolerance on his part might have been due to the fact that his poor old ears were so deaf they failed to register all the sarcasm she hurled at him. But once in a long time Cyrus would turn on his wife and in a few well-chosen words would tell her exactly what he thought of her; but these outbursts on his part were called forth only when he happened to see that she was bearing unusually hard upon Cornelia, who was the apple of his eye, the one thing in all the world he really loved. And Cornelia loved her father but hardly dared show it because any sign of affection on the part of father and daughter was sure to bring down such an overwhelming shower of wrath upon poor Cornelia's head that sometimes it actually seemed to leave her stunned for days.

The house the Brinks lived in was old Cyrus' one extravagance. He had loaned money to a promising young business man and when the fellow had failed the house and contents had been turned over to old Cyrus to satisfy his claim. The house was too big for anyone of ordinary means to support and so the Caseys had moved out and the Brinks moved in. Now the Brinks were supposed to be enjoying their fine house. Whenever anyone called the house was always found to be in perfect order, but if it happened to be in winter they were greeted by Mrs. Brink with remarks something like this:

"So glad to see you, my dear friends," she would say cordially, her black eyes snapping. "But I'm afraid I shall have to take you right out into the dining room. I was just noticing a minute ago that Cyrus had let the fire get low, and so I'm afraid it would be too cold for you to try to sit in the parlor. But I'm sure you won't mind and maybe the fire will get started up soon." But the fire never seemed to start up, and after a short call in which the room would get colder and colder the callers usually remembered some forgotten errand and hurried away with teeth chattering. As for Mrs. Brink and Cornelia, they always sat at the side of the room nearest the kitchen door, which was left open, and some there were mean enough to say they didn't believe there was a mite of fire in the house except in the kitchen, but this was sometimes disputed because one time when Amelia Briggs was calling on Cornelia she had been so bold as to actually put her hand on the radiator and she said afterward that she could distinctly feel heat in the first five coils. In the summer no one ever got inside the house because when a caller rang the doorbell they were sure to be met by either Cornelia or Mrs. Brink, who were just coming out to sit on the porch, and, of course, their visitor had no choice but to sit on the porch with them. And here again some of the neighbors were so mean as to say that Mrs. Brink, who was somewhat afflicted with rheumatism, always sat when she could command a view of the front walk and so was prepared to get any callers off before they could get into the house.

This was the life the Brinks were living when the new minister came to the First church, of which both Mrs. Brink and Cornelia were members. Brother Carew, as he was known to his parishioners, was a thin, gray man of fifty. He had shrewd eyes and had been a widower for three years. When he was called by the church to become its pastor Mr. Brink had fought him tooth and nail and had even gone so far as to offer to double her subscription for the support of the church if the committee would not call him. But the committee had gone right on, and Mr. Carew had now been pastor of the church about three months.

Now the church and its functions were the only social life permitted of either herself or her daughter to enjoy, but so licensed was she at Brother Carew at first that she tried to persuade Cornelia to stay away from church entirely, but on this point Cornelia had been quite firm. She got a lot out of the sermons—more, much more, than her mother did, because Mrs. Brink was so busy watching the direction of Cornelia's eyes that she lost much of what was going on. In fact, she failed entirely to see the glances of admiration that Mr. Carew was soon throwing in Cornelia's direction. As for Cornelia, she sat with hands clasped demurely in her lap, getting the only hour's rest she was permitted in the week and incidentally the first thrill she had ever had in her life.

When Cornelia entered the kitchen this dull morning in answer to her mother's command she set briskly about the breakfast getting. So far as she knew this day was going to be just like all the others. But fate had something better in store for her.

At two o'clock that afternoon Brother Carew called. He was received by Mrs. Brink, who grudgingly called her daughter into the room after the minister had asked for her. And then Mrs. Brink got the surprise of her life. Brother Carew asked Cornelia to marry him right there in the presence of her mother and before Mrs. Brink could bring her sarcasm to bear upon the minister Cornelia had tremblingly accepted him.

It was surprising how old Cyrus aided and abetted his daughter during the days preceding the wedding, which, after all, was quite an elaborate affair. When Mrs. Brink found that Cornelia was really leaving her and was marrying a minister, which in her eyes placed her over the head of even herself, she did quite the handsome thing by her daughter. Her conversation ever after was something like this:

"You know my daughter, Mrs. Dominic Carew, says so and so, or does so and so," as proudly as if she had planned it all herself.

As for old Cyrus, he slips away every day to have a visit with his daughter and her husband, and he has purchased an ear trumpet with which to better hear all that is being said. The strange part, however, of the whole affair is that when old Cyrus goes back to Mrs. Brink he always leaves the precious ear trumpet with Cornelia, and that is their secret.

Mixtures of Metals Alter Tints of Gold

Gold is a metallic chemical element, valued from earliest ages on account of the permanency of its color and luster. Gold has a characteristic yellow color, which is, however, notably affected by small quantities of other metals; thus the tint is sensibly lowered by small quantities of silver. This is pale gold or whitish gold, but it is gold, just the same, except the small quantity of silver. The tint of gold, on the other hand, is heightened by a small quantity of copper. Gold from different mines often has a different tint, some being deep yellow or orange, and some is considerably paler. Gold forms alloys with most metals, and of these many are of great importance in the arts. It readily alloys with silver and copper to form substances in use from remote times for money, jewelry and plate. The amount of gold in an alloy is commonly expressed as karats, that is, the amount of gold in 24 parts of the alloy. Our gold coins are 22 karats fine, that is 22 parts are gold and two are alloy used to give a certain degree of hardness. A greenish alloy used by goldsmiths contains 70 per cent of silver, and 30 per cent of gold. "Blue gold" is stated to contain 75 per cent of gold and 25 per cent of iron.

Just Had to See Game

The baseball instinct is strong in the family of Harry D. Lord of South Portland, Maine, one-time Red Sox player. Mrs. Lord, wife of the former big leaguer, asked to be excused from jury duty in the Superior court in order to watch her son, Don Lord, pitch for South Portland High. Justice Arthur Chapman, once a star twirler for Bowdoin college, appreciated the pride of Mrs. Lord in her son and granted her request.

POULTRY

LARGE YIELD AIDS POULTRY SUCCESS

Poultry raisers who can get high egg yields are almost certain to make a profit, because egg production is closely tied up with labor income and profit, it is pointed out by L. E. Card, chief in poultry husbandry at the college of agriculture, University of Illinois.

"Studies of the farm poultry enterprise as a business have shown that there are certain major factors involved in determining whether a given poultry flock will show a profit or a loss. Egg yield per hen is an accurate barometer of success in almost any poultry enterprise. Other factors are size of flock, proportion of pullets to yearlings, rate of mortality, price received for market eggs and experience of the operator. However, if egg production is low, no other factor can make up for the handicap and the profits will be small.

"Size of flock is a convenient measure of size of business. A small business can never make either a large profit or a large loss. A large business is necessary for a large profit, but it must carry the risk of a possible large loss.

"Mortality of hens and young chicks is frequently a major cost in the production of eggs and unless the mortality rate can be kept down to a reasonable level it will be very difficult, if not impossible, to show a profit.

"The price received for market eggs is an important index of profits from a poultry flock. It is often easier to increase returns by producing a better product and finding a higher market than by raising the egg yield per hen, assuming that the egg yield is not too low to begin with.

"Finally, experience helps the operator to achieve results. Even if it does nothing more than teach him how to make the business measure up in respect to the other factors mentioned, it is an important asset. It is unwise for a poultry business to be allowed to grow faster than the ability of the operator to manage and control it."

There Is Much Profit in Proper Management

Shiftlessness has been, and always will be, the price of dear experience. There is a profit in only what we take care of.

To go about the work of caring for poultry in a mechanical way, important matters will be forgotten, details will not be noticed. There are entirely too many who trust to luck and do not stop to think, writes Michael K. Boyer in the Farm and Ranch. A man who rushes in a constant hurry, and never accomplishes much. Good management, cuts down expenses. Scrub treatment brings scrub returns. Poultry raising commands the same business methods as employed in good dairying—the best food and care for best results.

The idea that "anything is good enough for hogs and chickens" is wrong. It has ruined the prospects of many otherwise good farmers. Nothing can be secured without effort, and the more intelligent and practical that effort, the better will be the success.

Methods of Spreading Disease Among Poultry

One method of carrying disease is on the shoes from a yard of sick chickens. Farmers learned to forbid entrance to their hog yards when there was a scourge of hog cholera. They should forbid entrance to the chicken runs when disease is prevalent. Poultry buyers should be kept out. Indeed, the only safety to the flock is in quarantining them against all visitors and dogs. The caretaker should wear rubbers if sickness breaks out in one of his pens, and not allow the soles of his shoes to touch contaminated grounds. Take the rubbers off before stepping out of the door. Clean up and clean out often. Burn all dead birds and the litter from houses where there has been sickness. Expense and worry are saved by avoiding disease. It is folly to let a condition go until it is big enough to demand a fight.

Minerals Big Factors

Minerals are often limiting factors in egg production. Heavy laying fowl require from three to four pounds of oyster shell or its equivalent per year. Even though the hens have enough protein and other food to produce a large number of eggs, they will cut their production down to meet the amount of minerals which they have for shells. A balancing ration means supplying minerals and vitamins so that all of the organs of the fowl work efficiently.

Shade Is Necessary

Shade is very necessary for chicks, especially if they are late hatched, for they are stunted by the hot, dry weather and are more liable to be affected by disease and worms, than if hatched early. Plenty of grit and charcoal should be within easy reach of chicks when on range unless sand or gravel is present in large enough quantities to make it unnecessary to furnish it extra. Plenty of fresh water should be within easy reach of the growing chicks.

What to Choose

When young folk elect to marry, ancient custom has decreed that they be given something to help them on their way. Utility, then, is the essence of a wedding gift, not mere ornament.

In selecting an electric housekeeping aid—toaster, percolator, cooking appliance or what not—you make a gift that combines everyday usefulness with beauty of design and finish.

The gift of an electric domestic appliance will be a constant reminder of your thoughtfulness and good taste.

According to my grandfather's records, my mother's mother, Emma B. Kissane, was born Dec. 10, 1818, in Douglas, Isle of Man, where the family moved from Tipperary. They later returned to Ireland. Her mother and father were Aphra and William Kissane. (I believe that Aphra was a Healy.)

BIG HAY-DAY

The alfalfa hay-day on the Homer Wasson farm in Unadilla township was a decided success from every standpoint. The weather was ideal and a good crowd was present to see the demonstration.

The alfalfa was cut on Thursday so as to be ready for hauling on Friday and was in good condition, and as a result Mr. Wasson put a load in the barn. The process of cutting alfalfa following with a side delivery rake and going in the same direction as the mowing has a tendency to make a loose winrow with a large number of stems sticking out and the tops and leaves are toward the center. The theory of making pea-green alfalfa hay with this method is to keep the leaves from drying up until the stems have at least partially dried. It is a well known fact that the natural course for the moisture to go when leaving the stems is through the leaves, but when the leaves are dried up the moisture must evaporate through the stem walls making much lower process.

Paul Miller of the Farm Crops Dept. of the Mich. State College explained this process very thoroughly and was followed by a number of questions from interested farmers on both hay making and alfalfa growing. To wind up the days program, County Agent Bolander explained the results of the first cutting of alfalfa on the test plots on the various varieties of alfalfa.

The Sandman Story

AT THE MUSEUM

"ONE story has reminded me of another," commenced the Sandman. "The other day in a big museum where all sorts of old and quaint things are to be seen, there was a special exhibition of dolls and toys."

"An exhibition, as you know, is something put on view for us to see. An exhibition of pigs at a county fair means that there are pigs being exhibited or being shown."

"Or there may be an exhibition of drawings from the drawing class in school."

"But this exhibition was of old, old toys and dolls."

"About 4,000 years ago there lived an important and noble gentleman

ing and were so beautifully made. "When I say that he had his children copied into toys I mean that instead of having their pictures taken as people would do these days he had little toys made which looked just like his children."

"Just as though I had some toy maker come and make a little figure to look exactly like Nick or exactly like Nancy—and yet it would be a toy doll!"

"And then he had a toy copy made of the kitchen boat that used to go alongside the boat he was in and at mealtime it would come up closer and the kitchen workers would pass over the meals. All of this was copied in toys."

"There were toy copies made of both boats, you see, when close together and of the figures in the boats."

"Oh, wonderful toys these were of so many, many, many years ago, and for a great, great many years these treasures were hidden in the group."

"When I saw these toys I thought at once of taking you both to see them soon, and we'll go, just as soon as ever we can."

Both the children were delighted, for they wanted to see just now these old, old toys were made.

"And as I said," the Sandman continued, "the story I had to tell you of the dolls and toys reminded me of the little girl who was sick."

"She had been sick for quite a long time. And her dolly felt so badly that she, too, had been sick. She had been in the bed with her dear little mother and she had been very quiet and very still as she did not want to disturb her mother."

"And then, of course, she did not feel well herself. Oh, no, she didn't feel well when her darling little mother wasn't well."

"But one day her mother began to feel much better and the doctor said: "She is so much better she can sit out in the sun today."

"So they took her out in the sunshine and she sat in a little chair, feeling quite weak, but oh, ever and ever so much better."

"And beside her sat her dolly, enjoying the sunshine, too. For just as soon as her mother had felt better she had felt suddenly so much better, too."

"So together they had been sick and together they got well, and Mr. Sun did his work, never fear, both for the little girl and for her beloved dolly."

"And he smiled more brightly each day than ever as he saw the strength come back to his nice little friend whom he had missed sadly when she had been ill."

"For she had always been very fond of Mr. Sun, and he knew it, too!"

who thought it would be interesting to have everything he owned copied into a toy.

"So the boat that he went forth a-sailing in was copied. The animals he owned were all copied into little toys, too; so were his children and all the things that were a part of his life, too."

"Every day he would watch his cattle go by and he had a toy made showing himself sitting and gazing upon the cattle as they went by—just such a toy as you will see today of a whole circus, only more interesting."

"And these toys seemed more amaz-

WHEN I WAS TWENTY-ONE

BY JOSEPH KAYE

At 21—Maria Barrientos Had a Fitting and Sweet Revenge.

"WHEN I was a young girl my teacher took me to the great opera house in Barcelona, Spain, to sing for the conductor. I was a very small, unimpressive little girl, somewhat lost in the cavernous darkness of the great stage, but my teacher was very proud and very jealous of my ability."

"My voice must have been unusually good even then to challenge the opinions of the great orchestra leader of the fashionable opera house. But he was not impressed and said to the teacher, 'I do not like her voice; I do not care for it.'"

"Some years later, when I had grown to be twenty-one, and of some celebrity, I was selected as the prima donna for the gala performance in honor of the coronation of the king of Spain. The conductor of this performance was the same man who had refused to believe in little Maria."

Maria Barrientos.

TODAY—Maria Barrientos is a prima donna of international fame. She was the leading coloratura soprano with the Metropolitan opera, in New York, until a few seasons ago, and created many famous roles.

Cotton Again in Fashion Picture

Fabric Is Popular in Paris for Sports and Spectator Costumes.

The fact that cottons are regaining their former position in summer fashions is recorded by the Woman's Home Companion, and is good news to the many women who like the crisp look and feel of a cotton dress for hot-weather wear. Paris, after making cotton an outcast from the fabric family for several seasons, has brought it again to the fore, especially for sports wear and spectator costumes. For golf, an English cotton print in a flower and geometric pattern is attracting attention, while pique is very chic for tennis. Summer dresses of printed batiste are bolt-proof, tub-proof and sun-proof.

The dress on the left is designed for the older woman, to whom the square neck is always becoming. Groups of tucks at the shoulders and skirt front give just the right amount of fullness. A nice effect has been obtained by the pointed line where waist and skirt join, which suggests a yoke when the dress is belted. There's a small vest portion beneath the front opening and a flower of the dress material for the left shoulder.

The dress on the right, which has the young girl in mind, makes use of the present vogue for bows, placing one at the shoulder and another at the waist, where it emphasizes the unusual waistline treatment.

"Linge de plage," as the French call their beach costumes, may be for either sun or sea. Mary Nowitzky, who has the facility for combining mediums in an unusual manner, has created a "sun suit" of beige crepe de chine which expresses the present-day freedom of color and line. Over it she poses a sleeveless coat of yellow sponge edged with raffia and inlaid with points of multicolored crepe de chine. To complete the costume there is a rug and a small matching parasol with bright silk inlays and a straight handle.

Jane Regny, the leading Parisian sports couturiere, has made a new use of the modern arts influence in her sports costumes. She has adapted exaggerated flower motifs from designs made by her husband, who is a well-known artist. The material used is light beige jersey, with dark beige toile de soie forming a thistle plant which supports the flower on the left shoulder.

"There is a vogue nowadays for smartness and for being well dressed," says Hazel Rawson Cades, the beauty expert. Not so much emphasis is being placed on natural prettiness as on good grooming, and we think a great deal of the skill with which clothes are chosen and the knack with which they are worn."

Black Satin With White Fur; Satin, Crepe Lined

Black satin with white fur and with white satin or crepe for lining and facing is an exceedingly fashionable conception in coats. In this style, the fine tucking in graceful lines is much used, and white fox, sheared caracul and rabbit are the popular furs for trimming. A scarf of the satin lined with white crepe is shown on a stylish black satin coat, and the most chic model that has appeared this season is a coat of black satin made without tucking or other trimming, with a shawl collar and cuffs of heavy white kaasha. White coats will be worn later for both sports and more elaborate dress—in mohair, cheviot, angora and all of the fancy weaves in wool.

Gray Is Fashionable
"Gray is the most satisfactory color for travel clothes," says an important designer, who proceeds to prove his point by showing a collection of suits, frocks and coats for travel, each one developed in gray or grayish mixtures. They are strikingly effective and one does not need to be told that they will be quite impervious to dust and travel stains.

Plenty of Soapsuds in Washing Dainty Frocks

Many women buy delicate fabrics without considering, until afterward, the problem of cleaning them. L. Ray Balderston, instructor in household arts, Teachers' college, Columbia university, gives some expert advice in McCall's. She says:

"Plenty of soapsuds is needed for this work and the first consideration in making suds is that the soap or soap flakes must be good—good enough to wash the most delicate skin. A perfect test of a soap in any form is that a woman can use it without shriveling her hands."

"Then dissolve the soap flakes or cake soap shavings in hot water so there will be no lumps of undissolved soap. The result is a perfect soap solution, which is a real working necessity, for undissolved soap streaks and spreads in the fiber and often leaves white spots which are really stains in themselves. Add this solution to the wash water."

"One soapy wash water usually is too little to clean a garment. Have two bowls of soapy water ready and then transfer the garment from the soiled suds to a clean, fresh wash water."

"The temperature of the soapy wash water is one of the all-important points. Mostly dainty work will give the best results if you have the water about the temperature of the hand, 88 degrees Fahrenheit, or even lower."

"After the garment has been freed of all the moisture you can squeeze out, it should be laid in dry clean cloths (white, of course.) To roll a dress so no colors will touch each other put a large cloth up through the length of the dress like a slip and a piece down each sleeve. Then lay the garment on a cloth and under another cloth. These wrapping cloths will show you that your garment has been saved, for there will be a complete stencil of the pattern on the cloth where the garment bled while it was rolled."

Most Charming Model for Women's Outfit

A dressmaker's pet saying is that to be successful a model must also be practical. A white georgette crepe dress over a black satin slip is a striking illustration of the old saying. The French woman uses such dresses for bright spring days at the races and for afternoon functions at which she wishes to look her informal best. The American woman uses them for luncheon parties, for bridge, country club teas and for afternoons at home.

White silk braid alternates with graduated tucks on the skirt of the overdress. It opens down the front to show the black underdress. A steel buckle holds the overdress together at the low waistline. This is one of the most charming spring models.

Feather Embroidery Is Used on Shawls, Gowns

New feather embroidery is perfected. Delicate fronds of ostrich worked into rich designs form the decoration on many shawls and some evening dresses and exclusive evening slippers.

Particularly striking are shawls of white silk, embroidered in black and white ostrich with a fringe of black or white. The softness and grace of the wrap make it good for flapper or grandmother.

On returning home daddy had not arrived as yet. Barbara hesitated for a moment, then curiously said: "Well, mother, where is our husband tonight?"

The same little Barbara followed grandpa to the basement and was heard to say: "You don't need to worry, I'll help you, money isn't everything."—Indianapolis News.

THE WHY OF SUPERSTITIONS

By H. IRVING KING

BREAKING THE NEEDLE

THE superstition with regard to breaking a needle while sewing upon a new garment differs in different sections of the country; but has in all a general signification of good luck. In some places they say that to break a needle while sewing upon a new dress is a sign that the owner will live to wear out the garment. In other places they believe that it is a sign that the person for whom the garment is being made will, if single, be married before the year is out; while in some sections the breaking of the needle means that the garment will be "lucky" for its owner.

The magic of this superstition is based upon the idea so firmly held by the ancients that iron was obnoxious to evil spirits—they hated it and they feared it and sought to work mischief upon anything into the composition of which iron entered and to revenge themselves upon those who worked in iron.

The needle is an iron implement—or, which is the same thing, a steel one—and the evil spirits hover about in anger when it is being used, but are afraid to touch it. They might, however, try to "hoodoo" the garment which was being constructed by the feared and hated implement. But when you break the needle, thereby destroying it, you do just what the spirits would have done had they dared and they go off satisfied, leaving the garment being worked upon therefore "lucky"; their vengeance is accomplished by the destruction of the needle.

CHARACTER

CHARACTER is a most important factor in the economic and social world. Remove character from business and you have bankruptcy. Remove character from society and you have the downfall of civilization. What is this subtle, hidden and mysterious force which is of so much value in life? What is character? It is easier to tell what it is not than to tell what it is.

Character is not what a person assumes to be. Mere conventional imitation is not character. Imitation or pretense is like a veneered piece of furniture: it soon discloses the "real" when the outer surface is removed. Character is not what a person thinks himself to be. His standards may be very low in the scale of moral values and thus he deceives himself. Character is not what some other person thinks we are. The opinion which others may have of us is our reputation, and reputation is not necessarily character. Character is neither assumption, imagination nor is it reputation.

What then is character? Character is what a person is in the organic unity of his secret thoughts. It is our true self divorced from all assumptions. No person's character can rise higher than his ideals, and ideals are thoughts reaching out for the highest possible realization.

Character expresses itself in some unconscious moment, in some un-studied deed. When taken unawares a person expresses his real self. A heart set right and strong is not likely to go wrong when temptation comes in the flash of a moment. It is not so much in a studied act as in an unconscious act that character is usually revealed.

A person always lives his moral life from within outward. "Out of the heart are the issues of life." It has been said that a person can successfully lie with his mouth but not with his eyes. The face is the index of character, because it is the mirror of the thoughts and intents of the heart. "He who steals my purse steals trash, but he who steals my good name steals not only takes that which enriches him but makes me poor indeed."

HELP FOR SICK WOMEN

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Has Restored the Health of Thousands

Brooklyn, New York.—Mrs. G. Hegmann of 222 Schenck st. was in a run-down condition and could not do her housework. She could not sleep at night. Her story is not an unusual one. Thousands of women find themselves in a similar condition at some time in their lives. "I found your advertisement in my letter box," wrote Mrs. Hegmann, "and took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I feel like a new woman."

There are women in your state—perhaps in your town—who have written letters similar to this one telling how much Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has helped them.

CLAIMS BLOOD OF NOW EXTINCT RACE

Believed Only Survivor of Nah-Dah-Ko Tribe.

Anadarko, Okla.—Blood of an extinct race flows in the veins of Harry Shirley, believed to be the last of the Nah-Dah-Ko Indians, who attained a degree of civilization as long as four centuries ago.

His father, Pat Shirley, was a white trader, but his mother was a Nah-Dah-Ko. With his white wife and two children, Shirley lives on a farm near Anadarko. He is fifty-five years old.

Virtual annihilation of the Nah-Dah-Kos was completed when Shirley was four years old, and his knowledge of the fate of his people is vague.

The town of Anadarko is named for the vanished tribe. Legend has it that the elder Shirley's Irish pronunciation of the tribal name was responsible for the corruption of the name from Nah-Dah-Ko to Anadarko.

Although the present town was not founded until 1901, an Indian agency of the same name was located near here as early as 1858.

The original home of the Nah-Dah-Ko band was in Louisiana. Records of a Spanish explorer reveal that in 1542 the Indians lived in houses, farmed extensively and owned cattle.

They were driven westward by the encroachment of the white man and gradually lost their identity through absorption into other tribes and losses in warfare.

New Diamond Fields Attract Farm Labor Pretoria, Transvaal.—More than 60,000 Europeans and 120,000 natives are working on the newly discovered diamond fields in the Lichtenburg area.

The lure of lucky strikes is responsible for a great dearth of farm labor, and Lichtenburg farmers are bewailing the fact that kaffirs cannot be induced to do farm work when they can earn 30 shillings a week in the diamond fields.

No less than 48 per cent of the diggers belong to the agricultural classes, and only nine per cent are diamond miners by trade.

Curious tales of fortune hunting abound. Some who believed they had the richest claims suffered disappointment, while, on the other hand, an old man who sat down when he saw he was being beaten in the race for claim pegging, dug where he sat and struck a rich patch.

In another case a digger cursed when he sprained his ankle, falling over a tuft of grass, but later discovered that he had fallen on a claim that is now panning out rich.

Find 100-Foot Worms Off California Coast Berkeley, Calif.—Species of sea worms classified as "amazing creatures," some of which are said to be 100 feet long, have been seen and studied in the Pacific ocean near San Diego by Prof. W. R. Coe, Yale university, as guest research worker at the University of California, Scripps Institution of Oceanography, at La Jolla, he reports.

These remarkable sea denizens, known by the scientific name "nemertean," have been examined by few biologists of the world. Doctor Coe is believed to be the only living scientist knowing much about them.

To zoologists the worms are especially notable for their length, some of the more common species extending a yard, their bodies being only a fraction of an inch in width. Certain of the nemertean species are reported to be longer than any known animal, 100 or more feet. Even the whale has not been found to reach quite that length, says Doctor Coe.

Soot From Smudge Pots Colors Grave Monuments Toppenish, Wash.—Sextons are busy with sponge and chamomile cleaning grave monuments after the sootfall from the smudge pots burned in central Washington to fight off frost.

Polished granite has an affinity for heavy soot and most of the tombstones in cemeteries resembled charred tree trunks in fire-swept forests. The heavy smoke and soot did much temporary damage, but through it all the fruit and prosperity were both saved to the apple growers.

Honey Burden Weighs Down Roof of House Gornhall, England.—There's so much honey in the roof of a Fifteenth-century farmhouse here, called "Cole Kitchen farm," that the ceiling of the room immediately underneath is giving way beneath the weight after 100 years' service as a gigantic beehive.

T. H. English, the owner, says nobody ever tried to get the honey because it would necessitate removing the roof.

In the swarming season the place is smothered with bees.

DAGGER IS FOUND IN UR 5,000 YEARS OLD

Hilt Made of Lapis Lazuli With Studs of Gold.

London.—A wonderful five thousand-year-old golden dagger was one of the many treasures of Ur described by Prof. Leonard Woolley, head of the British Museum section of the Anglo-American expedition which has been excavating the neighborhood of the birthplace of the patriarch Abraham.

The flight of time is vividly depicted by Woolley in his latest report to the British museum when he emphasizes that many of the expedition's finds date from a period "more remote in time from Nebuchadnezzar than Nebuchadnezzar is from us, and 2,000 years or more older than the treasures of Tut-Ankh-Amen with which they challenge comparison."

The excavation work has just been closed for the "season," partly owing to lack of funds, but Woolley and his fellow-scientists strongly favor more extensive examination of the ruins for, as he says, "The further we go back the more elaborate and the more finished seems to be the art of Sumeria."

At the end of the expedition's fifth season archaeologists and historians are now able to picture in detail the civilization of Mesopotamia in 3500 B. C., and "what is truly surprising is the wealth and the high level of the culture of that remote time."

As regards the dagger referred to, Woolley declares the hilt is made of one piece of deep blue lapis lazuli decorated with studs of gold; the blade is of gold, sharp and bright; the sheath, also of gold, is plain at the back, but in front covered with an exquisite design in filigree. With this was found a golden reticule also decorated with filigree, containing a tiny toilet set, tweezers, stiletto and spoon, all in gold. They were at least five thousand five hundred years old.

Excavating the ancient cemeteries during recent weeks the expedition found cylinder seals of no fewer than five early kings, of whom three were unknown to history. It was when the excavators got below the two thousand-year-old graves that they made the best discoveries, for below these they found three thousand two hundred-year-old relics and, still lower, graves going back to 3,600 years before Christ.

The earliest graves were the richest, though naturally not all the treasures they once contained had survived the passage of time. There were no rock-cut chambers, hermetically sealed, such as preserved the woodwork and even the linen fabrics in Tut-Ankh-Amen's tomb. In a land formed entirely of river silt, the ancients but dug a hole, laid at the bottom of it a square of matting, placed on this the body, draped likewise in a mat, with round it such offerings as they could afford, spread another mat over all and then filled up the pit again.

"Naturally after 5,500 years," says Woolley, "much has perished. Wood may have left a film of brown color in the soil, black tinder may represent the fassinated garments or the shroud of the dead, but that is all. Silver is generally reduced to powder, copper may survive, or may become green dust or splinters, the very bones of the man himself may have vanished; only gold remains untouched by time."

But although much has gone a vast deal was yet found to throw light on the earliest period of Mesopotamian history. During the last month of the expedition's work not a day passed that did not produce at least one gold object; vessels of pottery and stone; copper tools and weapons, beads and amulets turned up daily in bewildering numbers and every now and then there was a special prize in the shape of some unique monument of art.

A Gaming Board. One such remarkable treasure was a gaming board. The actual wooden board had long since decayed, but the incrustation which had covered it remained in position in the earth. It was a difficult and lengthy task to lift without disturbing them the hundreds of tiny bits of inlay that composed it, but this was done at last and now it needs only to be rebaked and clean the mosaic to possess again, just as it originally was, this royal "chess board."

The edging of the board is of mother-of-pearl, the border of mother-of-pearl, ivory and lapis lazuli. The squares, divided by strips of blue lapis and red paste, are of shell engraved and inlaid with red and blue in geometrical designs. Woolley says it is indeed a triumph of ancient craftsmanship.

Pays Tribute Andorra.—This tiny Pyrenean republic of 5,200 inhabitants has just paid its annual tribute of 1,400 francs (about $56) to its two "co-princes," the President of France and the Roman Catholic bishop of Urgel, Spain. For 648 years Andorra has paid tribute and enjoyed undisturbed sovereignty.

Income in U. S. Increased Billion Dollars in 1928 New York.—Total income in the United States among its 110,000,000 inhabitants was $78,640,000,000 for 1928, compared to $77,818,000,000 for the preceding year, the National Industrial conference board reports.

If the value of all goods and services produced in the country last year had been evenly divided, every man, woman and child would have received $671.43, the report says.

Briton Makes Bungalow of Air Liner Cabin London.—Everyone knows that most English houses of any antiquity at all generally boast a small collection of spooks, but it is believed that no house on these islands is quite as "shady" as the summer home of Capt. G. H. Leverton, in Wallington, Surrey.

Through it roam the shades of 10,000 travelers who have flown over the city of London in the Vimy-Rolls Royce air liner of the Imperial Airways. After the big plane had outlived its usefulness flying from London to Paris, Captain Leverton bought it and turned the roomy cabin into a bungalow.

ENGLAND'S STORY REVEALED IN INNS

Faded Signs Tell Past of Many Villages.

Birmingham, England.—English villages in agricultural sections are often more than 1,000 years old, and bits of their history are often written in quaint signs which have survived for many centuries.

Next to the church, the inns and smithies are usually the oldest buildings in the villages which have not been engulfed by industries. Before the days of railways and motors the smithy was the center to which everyone had to go both in peace and in war.

Inns signs are particularly useful in tracing the history of villages, as they often show the seals or insignia of lords under whose protection the village thrived in past ages, and frequently indicate the past character of the neighborhood.

But the purely fanciful signs are even more interesting than those which have historical background. One sign, which used to be very common on old English inns, was the "Five Ails." The sign represents the king, "who governs all"; the bishop, "who prays for all"; the lawyer, "who pleads for all"; the soldier, "who fights for all"; and the laborer, "who works for all."

Although many individuals in direct line of descent link the present villagers with their ancestors before the Norman conquest, the villagers of today often know little about the history of their communities, and search of village records often yields little information about the early struggles of the tiny communities which are made up of low brown cottages screened by trees and vines.

Says He Has Found Lost City of Ophir London.—After a search lasting 20 years, a British naval officer, Commander C. Cranford, declares he has discovered the lost lands of Ophir, whence the queen of Sheba brought to Solomon her magnificent gift of 33 tons of incense, spices, gold, jewels, apes, peacocks, pearls and other valuables. Lecturing to the United Services Institute recently, Commander Cranford said he found the city of Ophir exactly where it ought to be—in Arabia, about 400 miles east of Aden.

The city, with its ruined temple of God, is now little more than ruins, which have been visited by many seamen and political agents, he said, but they have never identified it. The commander suggested that excavations on the site would be richly repaid, and said that the land, which was mineral wealth, should be developed.

"The city is ideally situated," he said. "It has a harbor to the north and has a river which gives wharf space for a seaport. But a thin ribbon of coral sand is drawn across the harbor mouth! It is this strip of sand that strangled the life of Ophir. There is great wealth in Ophir still."

"Palestine now is the Palestine of King Saul. It lies in our power to develop the land to the prosperity of Solomon. There are gold mines and precious stones in the ground, a veritable Transvaal there."

French Alchemist Again Reports Making Gold Paris.—France's modern alchemist, Jollivet Castellet of Douai, again is sure he is hot on the trail of the famed but unfound philosopher's stone with which the ancients believed base metals could be transmuted into gold.

This alchemist asserts his process of producing gold synthetically now is commercially profitable.

Out of six grams of silver, two of sulphur of antimony, one of orpiment and one of tin, he affirms, he has produced ten milligrams of gold.

He melts the metals, he says, heating them to 1,100 degrees Centigrade, and a complicated process ends in precipitating the gold.

The addition of tin, he says, has improved his earlier process. He claims that besides the gold, almost all the original quantity of silver is recoverable.

Modern Dancer Needs Supply of Calories

Hostesses should lay in a heavy supply of refreshments when they expect to entertain guests who like to display their Charleston proficiency, says the Kansas City Star.

An account of an exhaustive survey of the energy consumed in dancing made by a group of Scandinavian scientists at the physiological institute of the University of Helsinki, has just been received at Washington which sets down in precise figures the number of calories used in different kinds of dances.

The waltz went to the bottom of the list with 3.96 calories used per hour per kilogram of body weight. The schottische, beloved of grandfathers and grandmothers, scored .02 of a point below the modern fox-trot, using 4.76 calories while the latter required 4.78. The polka, another institution of grandmother's day, needed 7.56 calories an hour, while the masurka, evidently the fastest dance the learned Scandinavians could get anyone to practice for them, took 10.87 calories, or almost twice the amount of energy consumed by the stonemason plying his trade.

"Remade" Husband Not Often High Product No wife is ever satisfied with her husband as he was when she married him, maintains Charles J. McGuirk in an article in Liberty. "In every woman lurks the desire to mold a man," the writer contends.

"She'll tell you she wants to make him a bigger and better citizen, but what she really wants to do is to make him something different from what he is, no matter what he may be. Her methods are determined by her type," the writer continues. "If she is strong and masterful, she informs him of the changes she desires and from then on reminds him frequently and forcibly.

"If she is tactful, she works by indirection. If she is sweet and clinging, she seeks to soften him with tears. If she is easily discouraged, she packs up and leaves him flat. But, whatever type she is, Lord help the husband who is weak enough to be molded; because, having finished the job to her utmost satisfaction, she universally realizes that the job is rotten."

PINCKNEY HIGH TAKES GAME
Pinckney High school had little trouble in winning the last game of the season from Stockbridge last Friday by a score of 4 to 2.

Don Swarthout pitched his usual good game for Pinckney holding Stockbridge to six hits which were widely scattered.

Stockbridge scored in the first inning when Mellenkoph walked, stole second and score on Barton's two base hit. They had men on every inning but were unable to score them.

Their second run came in the 8th when R. Stevens was safe on an error and scored on a hit by Barton. Pinckney got a run in the first when Swarthout singled and scored on hits by R. Reason and N. Miller. They secured three more in the fifth when Graves singled, C. Miller walked, Swarthout was safe on an error and R. Reason hit to left driving them all in.

FOWLerville WINS EASY ONE
The Pinckney team came out on the small end of a 12 to 2 score last Sunday in their game with Fowlerville.

Glover pitched for Fowlerville and although getting few strikeouts was appuzzled to Pinckney who only got 7 scattered hits off him. He was also given errorless support by his teammates.

Cox on the other hand got poor support, Pinckney making nine misplays, four of which came in the first inning and aided Fowlerville to score five runs. Cox only allowed 8 hits. We will not go into details or attempt to place the blame for the defeat but will say that the boys are determined to do better and will practice several nights a week from now on.

is to render the service that will be most valuable. That might be taken as an axiom by all funeral directors with good results.

We try always to mould our service to fit the exact needs, requirements and desires of those we serve. We feel that in doing so, we are serving better, because we are giving the kind of service preferred.
