DROWNS at LAKE LAND SUNDAY

Dominick Scarpino, aged 20 years was drowned at Lake Sunday at 4:30 P. M. His home was at Niagara Falls, N. Y. but he has been a student at the University of Michigan for the past two years. With a party of friends from Ann Arbor he had come out to spend the week end at the A. G. Carwell cottage at Lakeland. The party had gone out for a launch ride but had only gone a short distance when the propeller broke. Scarpino who was the only one who had on a bathing suit announced his intention of taking a swim and jumped in. He followed the drifting launch awhile and then was evidently taken with cramps as he suddenly sank. Samuel Souli who was in the launch jumped in and tried to save him but was unable to. The sheriff's office was notified and work had to recover the body but were unable to find it.

The deceased is survived by his parents, two brothers and a sister of Niagara Falls.

FOOTBALL SEASON OPENS

The Pinckney High School team will open their season at Stockbridge Thursday, September 22 when they meet the Stockbridge High School football team. The boys have been practising hard and should give a good account of themselves. The exact line-up has not as yet been determined and it will be picked from the following men: James Nash, Capt. Roy Reason, Walter Graves, Cecil Hendee, Wayne Carr, Norman Miller, Clarence Miller, Conley Ahrens, George Kennedy, Gerald Kennedy (all of these played last year), Stanley McCluskey, Peter Garish, Harlan Hall, James Hall, Chas. Yoeman and Pete Stackable, Clarence Blades.

PINCKNEY ENDS SEASON

Pinckney ended her base ball schedule her last Sunday in a game with Dexter at the local grounds Sunday. The score ended in a tie of 5 to 5. Dexter claimed the score was 5 to 4 in their favor and refused to play any longer. The game was well played with Pinckney having the advantage until the ninth when Dexter tied the score mostly on Pinckney errors. Pinckney got four runs in the first when Shehan was hit by a pitched ball, Doyle singled, Shehan taking second, Cole sacrificed, Shehan taking third and Doyle second, Drinkert doubled to center Shehan and Doyle scoring, Cooper struck out. Lewis singled Drinkert taking third and scoring together with Lewis when Wrigley throw to second landed in center field and the return throw also went wide. Dexter got two in the second when Morris singled, Wrigley was safe on an error and B. Cole hit over second scoring both of them. Pinckney got another run in the third when J. Cole singled to right, advanced to second on Drinkert's long fly to right and scored on a single by Ike Lewis. From then on until the ninth inning the Dexter men reached first base. Pinckney had men on every inning but was unable to score them. In the ninth Elsasser was safe when he hit to Kennedy and Cooper dropped the latter's throw, Spencer hit a high fly to left which they were unable to field on account of the high wind and it went for two bases, Eck hit a fly to right which Lewis was unable to hold onto and both men scored. Likely singled to right, Eck taking third and later scoring when Kennedy threw out Wrigley.

Pinckney's record for this season is thirteen games won, six lost and one tied.

DANCE AT DEXTER SEPT. 23

There will be a dance at St. Joseph's Auditorium, Dexter on Friday evening, September 23rd. This is the first of a series of dances to be given at Dexter every two weeks throughout the winter. Music will be furnished by Banta's orchestra.

GIVEN FAREWELL RECEPTION

The people of Pinckney and vicinity gathered at the opera house last Thursday evening to do honor to Rev. Frank J. McQuillan who has been pastor of St. Mary's church for the past four years but has been transferred to Redford. Previous to the reception a banquet was held at the rectory for the visiting priests. At the reception, Rev. Fr. Gabriel of Lansing acted as toastmaster and called upon the following for speeches: Rev. Fr. Coyle of Albion, Rev. Fr. Courtney of Owosso, Rev. Fr. Dupoy of Brighton and Rev. Fr. Higgins of Dexter all of whom responded with humorous and interesting remarks. Reginald Schaefer and R. T. Read on behalf on the town and business men of the vicinity thanked Rev. Fr. McQuillan for his deep interest and aid in civic affairs and his kindness to others in times of trouble. John Hoy of Dexter sang two vocal selections and Mesdames Earl Baughn and Clifford VanHorn rendered two duets with Miss Nellie Gardner as accompanist. J. P. Doyle then with a few fitting words presented Rev. McQuillan with a purse of $350 as a token of the esteem in which he is held by the community. Rev. McQuillan responded in a touching address in which he voiced his regret in leaving Pinckney on account of the many friendships formed here but felt that duty called him to a larger field.

Other priests who were present were the Rev. Fr. Fallon of Chelsea, Fr. Duffy of Bunker Hill, and the Rev. Frs. Hernes and Cain of Lansing.

JACKSON FAIR NEWS

Pinckney carried off her share of honors at the Jackson Fair last week. James Roche took second money in the colt race with his colt, Diamond Dewey, and first in the 2:14 trot with Morgan Dewey. He won this in straight heats and broke the track record his time being 2:11 1/2. He is at the Adrian Fair this week.

W. C. Hendee & Sons took over 50 percent of the prizes with their Black Top Delaine sheep. They have exhibits at both the Adrian and Grand Rapids Fairs this week.

OIL LEASES GIVEN ON FARMS

Representatives of Norris & Smith of Chester, West Virginia secured oil leases on farms in this section. Among the farmers who gave leases were Eugene Campbell, Wm. Smith, John M. Harris, W. H. Gardner and C. George. We understand that drilling will start soon. According to the men who took the leases there is an oil field lying between the Saginaw and Ohio oil fields but its location has never been determined. These men are the same ones who secured oil leases in Webster township recently.

PINCKNEY LECTURE COURSE

The tickets for the Pinckney Lecture Course have arrived and will be on sale at the Pinckney State Bank on October 1. The course consists of five numbers. The first one is billed for November 2 and is the Cutler Griffin Co. who will put on a program of Concert, operatic and entertainment revue. The second number is on December 19 and is the 3-Act comedy "The Bubble" a Broadway success put on by a professional cast. The next number is on February 1 and is the "Howard Russell Collegians," Canadian entertainers and fun makers. Frye and Company will furnish the entertainment on March 19 with magic, illusion, music and spiritualistic manifestations. The last number is on April 10 and is a lecture by Henry Black Burns, a word painter of heart interest pictures.

DANCE SATURDAY EVENING

Dancing at Chalker's Dance Hall, Patterson Lake, Saturday evening, September 24. Dances for old and young. Good music, good floor and a good time promised. Come one! Come all! Refreshments. Bill $1.00.

GOLD MEDAL RADIO CONTEST

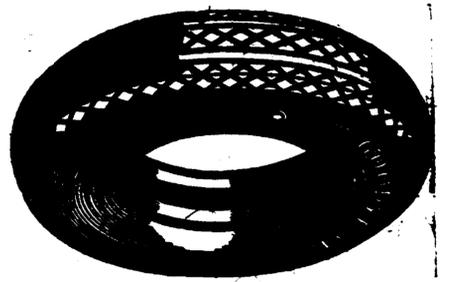

The Gold Medal Flour Co. is putting on a radio contest. The first prize is $5,000, 2nd $1,000, 3rd $500. There are also 20 $50 prizes, 100 of $10 each and 100 of $5 each. These prizes will be awarded to those who send in the five best reasons why housewives find it to their advantage to buy and serve the products of the baker. It is open to every woman not an employee of the Washburn Crosby Co. or member of immediate family of employees. The contest is open from September 26th to November 5th, 1927. All answers must be post-marked not later than midnight of November 5th, 1927. Entry blanks can be obtained at the Larson Bakery, Pinckney.

POULTRY CULLING CONDUCTED

The first poultry culling demonstration of the season will be conducted at the A. C. Taylor farm in Hamburg township Friday, Sept. 23, at 9:00 A. M. by County Agent Bolander.

Mr. Taylor who has been in the poultry business less than a year has an extensive program under way. He has recently completed the construction of a modern Jamesway type poultry house 18 ft. by 160 ft. and has raised sufficient pullets this season to fill the house. He is specializing in the production of White Leghorn eggs.

Everybody interested in poultry or who have poultry problems should plan on attending this demonstration.

A Rare Tire Combination

Sometimes you get a real quality article but you pay a high price for it. Again you pay a low price, but what you get is almost entirely lacking in quality. Neither of these is a good value. WHEN YOU BUY A GOODYEAR YOU GET THE BEST, AT THE LOWEST PRICE—ALL IN ONE. The Goodyear line is complete—many types—every size—regular tires—Balloons—world-famous Goodyear—and the price, at a figure you can't beat anywhere. So when it comes to tires—don't take anything but the best—buy Goodyears.

LIFE OF HERRING GULLS

"BEST," said Harry Herring Gull to Billie Brownie, who had come to call on him and who was sitting by the edge of a great river. "I was a little olive-gray egg. I was spotted with black."

"I mean, of course, as doubtless you understand, that the egg which later became me, was spotted with black. That is not the way, perhaps, I should talk, but it's Harry Herring Gull's way."

"And if I'm not smart in book knowledge and in schooling and in talking and in all such ways, I'm smart as a gull, and gulls are smart."

"Oh, yes," Harry Herring Gull con-

"Indeed I do," Billie Brownie answered, "But Do Tell Me More."

tinued, "for years and years there have been gulls."

"Some of my ancestors were here when the Indians owned the country."

"Oh, yes, we have always been about, making our ways fit in with the ways of others, which is always wise."

"I am here now for the winter. I was born in an ugly little home."

"But that didn't make any difference. We fly about rather than stay much in our homes."

"For those who care for their homes it is well to make the homes beautiful, but not for us."

"We are quite satisfied with a shabby nest of weeds and any kind of nest-building trash.

"Our homes are in hollows in the ground. I had one sister and one brother who came out of their eggs at the same time I did."

"We were covered with down and we could swim and run and were considered pretty smart little herring gulls."

"Of course all herring gulls in that way are alike. They're all smart, but the mothers say the same thing over and over as each new group of downy gulls begins to swim and run."

"Aren't they smart little gulls?"

"I am here for the winter, as I said. You will notice that my head and neck are grayish brown in color. In the summer I wear a white suit with a gray cloak and I have touches of black and white for style."

"My summer costume is gayer and brighter than my winter costume, which I think is right."

"It is nice to see creatures put on their light clothes in the summer. Don't you think so, Billie Brownie?"

"Indeed I do," Billie Brownie answered. "But do tell me more about yourself."

"As you can see, I have a yellow beak with a red spot for a beauty mark."

"And my eyes are yellow. My feet are a pretty pink color."

"When I was a little fellow I had a pink beak, too, with a black spot."

"But of course the colors I now have show that I am a grown-up herring gull."

"For we do not get these colors at first. The older ones dress differently from the younger ones."

"When summer comes I go further north. Of course a few members of my family stay around here—but they are the ones who do not care about summer homes or little homes of any sort."

"They're not the home lovers among the herring gulls. For we love to build our nests and have our homes even though we don't care to make them beautiful. We don't care to make them beautiful because we like to fly away from them a great deal and have adventures."

"But we like to have them just the same. Yes, we like to build our nests and have summer homes."

"Cack, cack, cack, that is the truth."

And Harry Herring Gull flew off now for Billie Brownie had thanked him and had bidden him a most polite good afternoon!

How It Started

By JEAN NEWTON

"CAT O' NINE TAILS"

THE whole idea of corporal punishment is fast going into the discard. Yet we still hear children threatened, on occasions, with the "cat o' nine tails," for centuries the accepted medium of punishment wherever whipping was the order of the day. As late as the first half of the Nineteenth century, we are told, in our own navy, delinquent sailors were lashed to a gun and whipped with the cat o' nine tails. In the parlance of the sea, this form of chastisement was familiarly known as "Marrying the gunner's daughter." It was only in 1850, when congress abolished corporal punishment, that this practice ceased.

For the origin of the form of the "cat o' nine tails" itself, we must go back further to the days of the Inquisition, that prolific progenitor of methods of torture and abuse. In those days it was the conventional weapon of the jailer and the executioner, its strands numbering nine, because the number nine was credited with having supernatural powers in bringing about confessions and repentance of offenders!

Did Without Music

THE WHY of SUPERSTITIONS

By H. IRVING KING

DIVINING BY BOOKS

A RATHER common practice with those who "seek for a sign" is to open the Bible at random and find their answer in the passage upon which their thumb rests as they part the leaves. In pagan times this divination was accomplished by placing the finger at random on a passage of Homer, Virgil or some other great author. Virgil was an especial favorite in this connection and the practice of consulting him continued down to modern times, though the Bible is the book generally used.

During the Middle ages the historic Virgil became so enveloped in a mist of tradition and superstition that he was alluded to by the uneducated as "Virgil the Wizard"; and in the unpoplar estimation the chief value of the Aeneid was as an oracle. As late as the time of Charles I the Bible had not entirely supplanted the Aeneid for purposes of divination, as is evidenced by the well-known story of how that monarch learned his fates by the "Sortes Virgilianae," as it was called.

This practice of divination by books is said to have "originated in the respect and veneration of certain books arising from their wisdom and reputation"; and it is easy to comprehend the psychology which induced the people of the Middle ages to consult "Virgil the Wizard" and leads men to a superstitious trend of mind today to turn the Bible into an oracle. But the incipency of the idea dates back to the first introduction of letters when, to the common mind, there was something supernatural in the power of a few marks made in a certain way to convey from one person to another not merely ideas but whole speeches, word for word; a feeling which is displayed today by remote tribes of savages when they see, for the first time, the use of the printed or written word in communications.

Court Backs Satan

Protection to Satan is now legally given in Poland. A priest was tried in a Bromberg court for preaching an irreligious sermon, in which he denied the existence of the devil. He was sent to prison for 30 days. It is believed to be the first occasion for many centuries on which the devil has been recognized by a European law court and protected against scoffers.

NOT BREAD ALONE

JOHN RUSKIN, in the fifth volume of his "Modern Painters," in the chapter on Peace, writes: "No amount of pay ever made a good soldier, a good artist or a good workman. Examine your writers and artists; for ten pounds you shall have a 'Paradise Lost,' and for a plate of figs, a Durer drawing. For love of country, or their duty, men will fight steadily; but for massacre and plunder, feebly."

Three motives may control one's actions in life. Pleasure, power and service. "Let us eat, drink and be merry, for tomorrow we die," is the spirit of the first. The testimony of many of those who have made this their life's motive is that there is nothing in it. The peril of the second motive, self-preservation first, is that it inevitably ends in failure. Success in life cannot be inspired by a motive which subjects higher spiritual ends to material needs. The deepest satisfactions and most enduring successes are realized only as we give ourselves in sacrificial and altruistic service to others.

Altruism, however, alone will fail. A person cannot give of his poverty. He must first possess before he can give away. The motive of service presupposes that we possess something that will be of help to others. Service requires possession.

Bread acquired for the purpose of "Being merry today for tomorrow we die," is an epicurean philosophy of life, which, it has been demonstrated many times, brings only tragedy and failure. Bread acquired for the mere sake of solitary possession, which is power, also ends in failure. John Holland in his little volume, "Katherine," writes: "Of all dead, dull weights man ever bore, sure none can haunt the soul with discontent like the consciousness of power unused." Service means that we acquire that we may give—succeed that we may help others to succeed—make such an investment of character that the world shall be enriched by the contribution which we shall have made.

Chat-Pat-Pat for School Girls

Youthful and Smart Costume of Vital Importance to Young Miss.

The problem of clothes for school girls is one of the most important matters that faces the average household each autumn, for being well-dressed at school is half of being happy. The average girl finds it a very comfortable feeling to know that she looks right, and a misery to wear a dress she feels is even just a little wrong.

Being exactly right is not easy. A mere belt may spoil the whole effect these days when smartness counts for more than prettiness. Yet the smarter the clothes the more simple the lines, which means that dresses, even woolen ones, are easy now to make. It is just a matter of choosing the right pattern, one appropriate for the wearer's age and type.

The dresses shown herewith were chosen for the school wardrobe by Jane Warren Wells of the fashion staff of Farm and Fireside Magazine. They are youthful, they are smart, and the girl who wears them will feel well-dressed for almost any occasion.

In choosing the material Miss Wells finds that the new fall fabrics have "honest dignity." There are plain tones of warm brown and tan, dull red and navy blue, even black. The newest prints are small and of geometrical design chiefly. They seem to be a little more pronounced than the designs of early spring, yet they are subdued enough to be appropriate for frequent wear.

Among the woollens and fine cottons, checks and plaids abound. The fine woollens have many interesting weaves that add to their attractiveness, especially for the tailored dress. Plain flannels and kashas promise even greater popularity for the fall than they had during the spring.

Accessories are of course a part of every costume, and a most important part they play in the business of being well dressed. This fall, no matter what accessories you buy—shoes, hat, bag or hose—consider they are to be unusual in their simplicity. Nothing else counts so much.

In footwear, tan, light brown and black kid shoes have promised to be favored for conservative wear. These are really new because they have been out of fashion for two seasons, now.

Stockings have taken on a little darker tone for fall. They are just faintly lighter in color than the dress itself, except of course where the dress is very dark, then the stockings may be two shades lighter. Sheer stockings are worn for evening with the old yet once again new satin slipper. Satin is gaining favor over dress slippers of other types.

The slip-on glove, as simple as it can be made, is the order of the day. Wash cambric and lace are appropriate for school wear, the heavier kid slip-on for hard service.

The small hat continues popular, yet many hats boast a small, fluttering brim. The small antelope purse with shell or narrow metal top is chic and interesting and plenty large enough. For evening a shawl is the most attractive wrap the college girl can have.

Crystal beads seem to be the latest fashion but the younger girls are still showing their preference for pearls.

Umbrella Compartment in Under-the-Arm Bag

Paris, which is so used to rainy weather, has thought up another clever way of carrying the indispensable umbrella, or "en cas," as they call the short combination umbrella-paraol which accompanies the Parisienne during the months when rain is to be expected. This time the "en cas" occupies one compartment in a double bag intended to be carried under the arm. The top compartment has the usual fittings, purse, vanity case, mirror, card case and so forth, and directly beneath this is another pocket which accommodates the very short umbrella whose silk matches the leather of the bag. This unusual novelty comes in various colors and in the finest quality of ecrase leather.

Washable Bags Among Season's Accessories

In leather imports one finds bags guaranteed to wash. Those of lizard, alligator and ecrase are finished in such a manner that they can survive a moderately severe scrubbing. Washable also are the white bags, developed in German chalk beads. These are for evening wear. A new note in bag design is the oriental patterning which has quite supplanted in popular favor abroad the usual floral designs. These oriental patterns look somewhat like miniature prayer rugs. Sometimes the coloring is vivid and bizarre, and then the bag will have a mounting of gold, inset with semi-precious or imitation stones. One of these was patterned gayly in reds, blues, greens, gold and silver and had a gold mounting encrusted with imitation rubies, emeralds and sapphires. Most of these bags, however, come in combinations of the pastel shades. Since each one features a variety of colors, the bags, while costly, are practical, for they will harmonize with any number of gowns as a bag of no single color ever could.

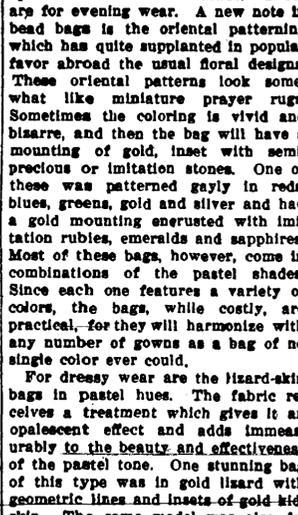

For an eager youngster, says the Woman's Home Companion, half the fun of starting off to school is to appear in a suitable up-to-date new outfit. Either the full-length coat of a girl from eight to sixteen years, or the collarless sports jacket of jersey or flannel for the fourteen to eighteen-year-old girl would be both practical and smart for fall. Sporty styling, revers, collar and cuffs, a plain coat or a plain blouse, a simple sweater or "knit" is suggested. The darker-toned binding and cuffs of the sports jacket may be either jersey or flannel.

Peach-Colored Velvet for Fall Evening Wear

Alice Bernard of Paris is making a lovely frock of gold-brocaded flane, plaited from neck to hem, without a bit of trimming save a jade-green velvet girdle which ties in a huge bow at the side. Another comes in mauve chiffon, the skirt composed of a series of jabotlike cascades of shaded mauve. A simple frock of gold lace is made over a pink satin slip and an exquisite beaded gown in pale pink has a long, straight bolero bodice and plain, slightly full skirt covered with a small all-over pattern in pink beads like the inside of a seashell.

One of the autumn models of evening gowns comes in peach-colored velvet with a deep pointed overskirt, edged with a wide band of fluffy yellow fur, which seems to mean the return of this kind of trimming for evening wear this winter.

Stamped, Hand-Stenciled Apron Ready for Needle

An irresistible ready-made cottage apron that is stamped and hand-stenciled for embroidery on unbleached muslin will surely tempt you to get out your needle to complete it with the required simple but colorful stitches. Together with sufficient floss for the embroidery work, this charming apron costs only a small sum, and so interesting and easy is the task that you will most likely want to make several as gifts for your friends.

IN OKLAHOMA

Princess Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Because It Gives Health and Strength

In a sunny pasture in Oklahoma, a herd of black cows was grazing. They made a pretty picture. But the thin woman in the blue checked apron sighed as she looked at them. She was tired of cows, tired of her tedious work in the dairy. She was tired of seeing her cows for a beautiful of boarders, besides caring for her own family. The burdens of life seemed too heavy for her failing health. She had lost confidence in herself.

One day she began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and her general health began to improve. She took it faithfully. Now she can do her work without any trouble, sleeps well and is no longer blue and timid. This woman, Mrs. Cora Short, R. R. 2, Box 257, Oklahoma City, Okla., writes: "Everybody now says: 'Mrs. Short, what are you taking for your ailment?' I weigh 135 and my weight before I took it was 115. I have taken seven bottles of the Vegetable Compound." Other women who have to work hard and keep things going may find the road to better health as Mrs. Short did, through the faithful use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Ask your neighbor.

romance. Minnette said to Minnette just after Bessie, their efficient maid, had placed their breakfast before them. "I notice that our new neighbors have arrived next door. I can see from where I sit that the ladies are up and people moving about. There! They are just coming into the dining room for breakfast." Minnette turned to look and saw through the large double windows of the nearby house two men sitting opposite each other at the table and being waited upon by a third man who was evidently a servant. "Oh, my dear! Minnette breathed. "Just look at that young man! He is perfectly handsome." Discreetly screened by their lace windows the two women gazed at their next-door neighbors. The young man was handsome in a stunning black-and-white way. He seemed full of vigor, too, for he talked a great deal with many gestures. Smilingly his companion listened. This other man might have been the father of the first, for he was plain and white-haired and looked uninteresting. The servant, too, was elderly and plain. But the Misses Russell were only attracted by the delightful younger man.

"We must make their acquaintance—invisiting them over to dinner," Minnette said.

"Poor things, without a woman in the house! I think I will have Bessie take them again of her incomparable blucuit for their lunch," murmured Emille.

Bessie was reluctant to present the blucuit but at last she was persuaded to do so by Emille's bestowing upon her the gift of an old gown she had found that morning in the bureau drawer—landsdowne, eighteen feet around, and of a gorgeous crimson color. It was a relic of younger days, and Emille thought that it might be dyed into suitability for her hand-maiden, but Bessie loved red.

She returned with a courteous message of thanks from the older men. So far, good.

For a long time the Misses Russell had been wondering who would rent the vacant house next door, which was to be let furnished. Mrs. Tucker, who owned it, had lost her husband and gone to live with a married daughter. The house was very cozy and the Misses Russell had been certain that only nice people could afford to live there, but people with children or dogs—or deprecating cats! The fact that the household was of the gentlemanly, unoffensive kind predisposed them in favor of their new neighbor.

That afternoon as Miss Emille was weeding her garden she heard a slight cough and saw the handsome new neighbor smiling at her over the fence. He had a gift of red roses for her and when, rather fattered, she entered into conversation with him he immediately took her into his confidence. His name was Harold Frederick Delaney, and he was writing a book entitled "Metaphysical Aspects of the Universe." He was interested in the Einstein theory of relativity, and thought that the extensive use of explosives in the last war had made our earth change poles. So deep was his knowledge of all so charming that Emille, with her head as well as her heart, was immediately attracted.

The next morning Minnette had a similar experience, only she received white roses instead of red. The conversation was along the same lines and she literally fell for Harold Frederick head over heels.

An invitation to dinner followed and the Misses Russell had the time of their life feeding their darling, Mr. Bowker, whom Harold called Uncle Hop, they didn't like at all. But Harold filled their eyes.

The weather was beautiful and never had the Misses Russell spent so much time in their garden. No sooner did they appear than Harold appeared also. He sat with them on the bench and talked about his book heels she had recently adopted. She jarred herself in falling that she could not leave her room for the same length of time. As for Bessie she would neither receive Harold nor carry messages for him. Pale and sorry, the sisters were sitting together in their living room on the first evening they were able to be downstairs when Mr. Bowker entered. "I have come to bid you farewell," he said in a dignified manner. "We are leaving on the ten o'clock train. The time has come when I can no longer manage my charge, and his guardians have ordered him placed in a hospital for an operation." "Your charge?" gasped Minnette. "Harold. It is a very sad case. He was injured in a football scrimmage, a blow on the head and he has not been rational since. But they think by removing a piece of the skull—" There was more, but neither lady heard it. They endured, however, until Mr. Bowker departed. "Well," Bessie said as she came in to throw another stick on the fire, "we are going to be rid of that lunatic next door. I'm clear out of patience with his carryings on. Making love to me with his roses and poetry!" "To you!" Emille whispered. Bessie snorted.

Triumphs of Science Increase Life's Span Now the claim is made that our scientists are about to fight the germ that causes consumption with a remedy furnished by the bacillus itself. In other words, from the poison it puts into the blood, which the scientists at Berkeley say they have discovered and isolated, they hope to make a serum that will repeat the triumphs won in other fields. This gives point to the recent assurance that the span of life is growing far beyond the threescore and ten formerly allotted us. Indeed, we are told that the meager few who reach the century mark are but the advance guard of the multitude to reach and pass far beyond that record in the near future. To the triumphs already won, in case the first redoubt has been carried by some invading disease, must be added the greater triumphs of preventive medicine. The report of the Rockefeller foundation acquaints us with a wonderful work they have accomplished in that direction, not only in this country, but all over the world. The dry pages of the usual report turn out to be an inspiring booklet of great deeds accomplished. Here as elsewhere an ounce of prevention is better than a pound of cure. All workers engaged in making broad the pathway of health and longevity—and they are to be found everywhere now—insist that optimism, cheerfulness, throwing off worry and fear as you would a discarded garment, and the cultivation of the right mental attitude toward disease is of the utmost importance. Where disease claims one victim, worry and fear claim a score. We are living in a wonderful age—in fact, we are just beginning to live as the Creator intended us to. It has required untold centuries for man to gain his present vantage ground. He is just beginning to assume his rightful authority over the many ills to which flesh is heir. We will learn to grow old gracefully when double our present tale of years has run its course. And we will need these added years to gain even a passable knowledge of the wonders and beauties and mysteries; the, at present, little-known forces of the universe in which we have been placed.—Los Angeles Times.

WHY PLUMBERS GET RICH

Mr. Spriggs was complaining loudly to the plumber of the high cost of plumbing. "Well," said the plumber, "we've got to pay a man and his helper." "But you don't need a helper for a job like this, do you?" said Mr. Spriggs. "No," admitted the plumber. "But, see, it's like this. The man who goes out to your house has got to run the machine, and it ain't worth his while to run the machine for just one we send the helper with him."

FARM STOCK CLEAN QUARTERS INSURE PROFITS

Cleanliness of farrowing quarters and fresh, new ground for the rearing of young pigs is one of the keynotes to successful pig raising, according to C. G. Elling, specialist in pork production at the Kansas State Agricultural college, who has completed a statewide study. Newly-born litters that suckle, sleep, eat and drink in insanitary quarters are usually unthrifty, and the owner is subject to heavy losses, Mr. Elling states. He further contends that worms, lice, mange, scours, thumps and sores afflict the pigs and reduce their vitality, making them stupid and weak, fit subjects to be trampled to death or die from weather exposure.

"It is a well-known fact that thrifty pigs give good return on such practical rations as corn and tankage or corn, tankage, and skim milk," declares Elling. "But the basis for their thriftiness lies in their getting a good start from the very beginning, and clean quarters result in good thrifty litters at weaning time." To cite an example of what can be done in the way of raising pork at the most economical cost to the producer, the pork specialist points out Willis Mosteller of Washington, Kan., who raised his pigs in the sanitary way from the time they were born until they were put on the market.

In the spring of 1926, Mosteller started with 10 gilts at $280. During the spring and summer, the total expense of feed, labor and material was $1,164.46. Added to this the initial cost of the 10 gilts, the entire cost was $1,444.46. The total sales of hogs on hand at the end of the year was $2,326.37. The difference between the total expense of $1,444.46 and the total receipts of $2,326.37 was $881.91. This summed up made a net profit of $88.19 per sow or a return of $1.51 per bushel for each bushel of corn fed the gilts.

The results obtained by Mosteller will be, on the average, an exceptional case, but it is indicative of the superior results that can be obtained and probably fairly illustrates the difference between the results in profits secured from thrifty and unthrifty stock.

Small Pastures and Pigs Always Found Together

Small hog pastures and runty pigs go together, judging from the results of the swine sanitation movement pushed throughout Illinois during the past few years by farm advisers and the extension service of the college of agriculture, University of Illinois. In addition to bringing out other valuable sidelights on profitable pork production these co-operative swine sanitation demonstrations staged by farmers have shown that pigs raised in large pastures do better than those kept in a small area.

The average area of pasture allowed for one sow and litter on 160 farms which reported was nine-tenths of an acre. Many sows and pigs were kept on a still smaller plot of ground.

Altogether, 9,421 pigs were raised in pastures of less than one acre a litter. The number of runts in these small pastures averaged one runt to each 71 pigs. In pastures a little larger, ranging from one to two acres a litter, there were 2,827 pigs raised and the number of runts was one to each 77 pigs. In pastures of two or more acres a litter there were 1,204 pigs raised and the number of runts was only 1 to 100 pigs.

Fail-Farrowed Pigs

The raising of fail-farrowed pigs has not become a general practice on many farms in the Northern states. Many farmers who have at various times become interested in producing fall pigs have found that fail-farrowed pigs made slower gains, required more feed, and oftentimes looked very unthrifty. As a result of such experiences farmers generally came to the conclusion that the raising of fail-farrowed pigs was unprofitable.

Live Stock Squibs

Pigs which are to be used for breeding should not be fed from a self-feeder.

Alfalfa in a winter hog ration of corn and tankage will greatly increase its efficiency.

Pigs being grown for breeding purposes should not be allowed to become too fat.

The threat against an animal's life is greatest at birth or shortly afterwards.

Experiments show that lambs gain faster on rape and corn or on soybeans and corn than when turned into a cornfield without other forage.

For growth and development of strong-boned pigs, they must have plenty of protein, which can be furnished by tankage and dairy by-products, such as skim-milk or butter-milk.

THE DETROIT EDISON COMPANY

THE "GET-RICH-QUICK EXPRESS"

By W. R. MOREHOUSE
Public Relations Commission, American Bankers Association

SO many millions of people have been defrauded out of their savings that it is the most natural thing for them to assume that the failure of any company in which they have stock is due to dishonest manipulations within the company.

W. R. MOREHOUSE

The facts are that many companies go on the rocks financially due to mismanagement and poor judgment and without any intent on the part of those in charge to defraud the stockholders.

Because men of good moral character organize a company for the purpose of engaging in some business enterprise is no assurance in itself that the business will succeed. Good intentions are one thing and business ability another, and usually unless there is plenty of business ability the business fails.

Before you invest in any new enterprise you should not only satisfy yourself as to the integrity of the managers but you should be certain that they have the experience, the technical knowledge and the ability to make the business a success.

What I am seeking to emphasize is the importance of making a thorough investigation before you draw your savings from the bank and entrust them in the hands of persons who may lose them, not through dishonesty but through poor business judgment.

Too many inexperienced investors rely on hearsay and on information too general to be at all adequate, when it comes to parting with their cash. So I say, make it a rule always to go to the bottom of every investment, and as it costs nothing to consult your banker, or the local Better Business Bureau, or the National Better Business Bureau, New York City, leave no stone unturned in order that you get the facts.

If you find that the organizers are trying to avoid an investigation, take that as a tip for making a most searching investigation.

In making investments a hasty investigation, or a superficial investigation is a most dangerous thing. To get the facts about an investment you usually have to dig deep and wide, and no rush investigation permits you to do this. Promoters of the worst type often welcome a hasty investigation, knowing that it does not give the investor sufficient time to get below the beautifully camouflaged surface finish with which they have so adroitly covered their tracks.

The road to happiness and contentment lies along the safe investment road, the road made safe by the "Investigate Before You Invest."

At no point does this safe road run parallel, cross or form a junction with the route carrying the "Get-rich-quick Express." And although the safe route is devoid of thrills and the excitement peculiar to the other route, it is also devoid of its worries, heartaches and disappointments.

Although the safe investment route makes no rash promises of "independence for life," or "a million a minute," and although it does not use the slogan, "Ride along with us to Fortune and Live in Ease and Comfort in your Old Age," it actually brings comfort, independence and happiness to those who travel it, while the other route leads to despair, drudgery and poverty.

According to a certain survey of investments sold to the public by irresponsible promoters 97 per cent proved to be a total loss, notwithstanding they were sold with the assurance that they would bring financial independence for life.

Of new promotions sold to the public in a certain city more than 50 per cent were doomed to failure from the beginning for they were waterlogged with too much free promotion stock given to the organizers. It is said of most all promotions 85 per cent are doomed to failure before a share of stock is actually sold.

So I repeat, you cannot afford to take the "Get-rich-quick Express," for she's headed for the ditch.

Five More Aviators and Two Planes Thought Lost in Atlantic.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

FIVE more lives apparently have been sacrificed to the overweening ambition of aviators to make transoceanic flights. And there may be further additions to the list before this reaches the reader. Tuesday the great monoplane Old Glory, owned by William Randolph Hearst, took off from Old Orchard, Maine, on a projected nonstop flight to Rome. Lloyd Bertand and James D. Hill, both experienced flyers, were the pilots, and with them as passenger was Philip A. Payne, managing editor of the New York Mirror. Near midnight the plane was sighted about 850 miles east of St. John, N. F., flying well, though the night was foggy and the sea rough. About four o'clock Wednesday morning steamers and shore stations received the dread S O S call from the plane. The radio men and the ships sent out frantic calls for position and six minutes later came the reply: "Five hours out from Newfoundland bound west."

The steamships Carmania, Transylvania, California and American Merchant, all somewhere near the estimated position of Old Glory, carefully searched the sea for hours, but no trace of the plane had been discovered up to the time of writing. Seemingly it was lost without there being an inkling of what had happened to it, even as was lost the St. Raphael and other land planes in which transoceanic flights have been undertaken. Anthony H. G. Fokker, designer of the plane, said he thought only engine trouble would bring the plane down. Doctor Kimball of the weather bureau eliminated the weather as a cause, saying there were no severe storms in the plane's path, although there was fog and cloudiness.

There was some hope that the plane might still be afloat even though rescue ships were unable to find it. The huge gasoline tank had a dump valve by which it could be speedily emptied and it would then provide buoyancy for some time. A collapsible rubber raft was carried, but probably the sea was too rough for its use.

On board the Old Glory was a wreath which the pilots had prepared in tribute to the French flyers who had made the first attempt. On it was written, "Nungesser and Goll: You showed the way. We followed. Bertand and Payne and Hill."

Undeterred by bad weather and ignorant of the supposed loss of the Old Glory, Capt. Terry Tully and Lieut. James Medcalf in the plane Sir John Carling hopped off from Harbor Grace, N. F., for the last lap of their trip from London, Ont., to London, England, on Wednesday. At this writing nothing has been heard of them, and it is assumed they, too, perished in the ocean.

Schlee and Brock in the Pride of Detroit were making good progress in their globe circling flight for a new time record, despite the fact that they were delayed at Constantinople by red tape. The most perilous part of the trip was the jump from Calcutta to Rangoon. At this writing they are in Hongkong. In Tokyo they planned to install a new motor for the flight to Hawaii via Midway island and thence to San Francisco. Their Detroit friends were trying to persuade them not to undertake the flight across the Pacific, and Schlee's brothers chartered a boat to meet them at Tokyo and bring them to San Francisco, believing that in that way they could still lower the round-the-world record.

Frank Courtney and four companions, who started from Plymouth, England, for New York, via the Azores, in the flying boat Whale, ran into head winds and were forced to land at Corrunna, Spain.

Numerous persons around the Macareo river in Venezuela saw a plane, supposed to have been that of Paul Redfern, on August 27. It was headed southeast toward the delta of the Orinoco, which is uninhabited except for a few Indians. There is a chance that the Georgia flyer may be found in the jungle.

CHARLES EVANS HUGHES returned last week from a two months' trip through France, in robust health and so chipper that the reporters who met the boat said he had never been so genial. At once he was put high in the list of possibilities for the Republican Presidential nomination, and though he declared to the interviewers that he believed Mr. Coolidge would be renominated and rejected, he declined to say that he still stood on his "too old to run for the Presidency" statement, made last May. Politicians in Washington think that of all the potential nominees Hughes would be the one favored by Mr. Coolidge. Many persons have thought Hoover was the President's first choice, but the indications are that these two men are not in such accord as formerly.

In the Eastern states, according to wise observers, the Republican leaders think Vice President Dawes has the best chance to win the nomination, though they admit Lowden will be hard to beat and that Hoover is perhaps the ablest man in the field.

Among the Democrats not much is heard except "Smith" and "anti-Smith." The popular governor of New York was attacked by Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Lowman in an address at Buffalo for the failure of prohibition enforcement in the Empire state. Explaining why the federal government does not step in and police the state of New York, he declared that in the face of the "open opposition of the state and local officers, it would require an army of 80,000 prohibition agents to handle a proposition like that."

Congressman Boylan, Democrat, of New York, sent to Secretary of the Treasury Mellon a vigorous protest against Lowman's speech as a "gross abuse" of his federal office.

NEW ENGLAND coast guardsmen are involved in another liquor scandal. In Boston five of them and six other men were indicted by a federal grand jury for a rum-running conspiracy. Federal investigators charged that protection was obtained in landing liquor by payments of a certain fixed sum per case. It is further charged that coast guard boats were used in assisting in landings which would otherwise have been difficult. One of the accused men was executive officer of the coast guard base in East Boston.

While on the subject of booze, it may be noted that the province of New Brunswick, Canada, ended its eleven years of prohibition last week. The intoxicating liquor act went into effect and retail liquor stores under control of the government were opened. Purchase permits are not required.

PROHIBITION lost its ablest supporter when Wayne B. Wheeler, general counsel and legislative superintendent of the Anti-Saloon league, died at a sanitarium in Battle Creek, Mich. He had been undergoing treatment for a kidney ailment and was taken to Battle Creek for an operation, but had improved so much under treatment that it was decided not to operate. Then he took a sudden turn for the worse and died on Monday afternoon. The funeral was held in Columbus, Ohio, and Mr. Wheeler was buried beside his wife, who was burned to death a few weeks ago.

Whatever may be thought of the merits of national prohibition and of Mr. Wheeler's methods in bringing it about, there can be no question about the skill and perseverance with which he conducted the affairs of the league. He repeatedly demonstrated his power in influencing legislation and the selection of men for office, and as the general of the dry forces proved himself to be one of the shrewdest politicians in the country. The league could scarcely find one man to fill his place, and it is believed two will be named to take over his work. E. B. Dunford, Wheeler's confidential legal adviser, may become general counsel, and some one else the legislative superintendent. The three leading candidates for the latter position are: A. J. Davis, superintendent of the New York State Anti-Saloon league; Rev.

A. J. Barton of Nashville, Tenn., a member of the national league's executive committee, and James White, former superintendent of the Ohio State league.

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE'S last week in the Black hills was uneventful, and he started back to Washington much benefited physically by his summer vacation and ready to tackle such big matters as taxes, ambassadorial appointments, naval building and other questions. The White House, renovated, repaired and with a fine new roof, was all ready for his return. All the inhabitants of Rapid City gathered at the station to bid Mr. and Mrs. Coolidge farewell, and the President made a little speech expressing his appreciation of their hospitality. The eastward trip was interrupted briefly Saturday at Brookings, S. D., where the President dedicated the Lincoln Sylvan theater, built for lectures and entertainments for students of agriculture.

LAST week was not a good one for Russian Communists. Down in Bolivia the government made public conclusive proof that the Third Internationale was plotting communist revolt there and in other countries of South America; and at the same time a number of Red leaders were arrested in La Paz and quantities of explosives were seized. French Nationalists and Conservatives united in demanding the resignation or recall of Christian Rakovsky, soviet ambassador to Paris, because he signed the Trotsky manifesto urging "all foreign soldiers to join the great Red army" and inviting the Reds of all countries "to work actively to defeat their own governments." The French foreign office sent such strongly worded dispatches to Moscow that Chicherin, soviet foreign minister, had to disavow the manifesto, and Rakovsky tried hard to persuade the French that he was not trying to stir up trouble in France. At the annual meeting of the British Trade Union congress in Edinburgh the Communists were overwhelmingly outvoted and a resolution was adopted cancelling all relations with the Russian trade unions and the Third Internationale. The Pan-German league adopted resolutions demanding the dissolution of the Communist party in Germany and the suppression of its organs. The league represents the Nationalist extremists and bases its demands on the recent world-wide demonstrations in favor of Sacco and Vanzetti.

OPENING its eighth annual assembly in Geneva, the League of Nations was a decidedly gloomy gathering. This was due to the failure of the league's disarmament conference in the spring and the collapse of the Coolidge naval parley in August, to which was added the fact that the economic conference was practically devoid of results. Among the notable absentees were Lord Robert Cecil and M. de Jouvenal, resigned, and Baron Ishii of Japan. Dr. Alberto N. Guani, Uruguayan minister to France, was elected president of the assembly. Supported by the Belgians, French, Germans and Hollanders, Beetsaerts van Bloklands of Holland submitted a resolution asking for the revival of the nonaggression protocol of 1924, declaring the failure of conferences of the past year had proved that actual disarmament was impossible for the time being. Japanese and Swedish delegates criticized the league severely for its failure to bring about reduction of armaments and to curb the quarrels of some of the nations of Europe. Poland's demand for an eastern Locarno guaranteeing its security against Germany and Russia was supported by France, but Sir Austen Chamberlain and the British delegates looked on it coldly.

CHINA'S Nationalist government has disclosed the contents of an agreement with Japan whereby the Nationalists undertake to guarantee the protection of lives and properties of Japanese in Nationalist territory. It is said this agreement led to the Japanese decision to withdraw their troops from Shantung, which movement was accomplished last week. The Christian general, Feng Yu-hsiang, wired the Nationalist government that he was launching an offensive against the Northern troops in Shantung province from Heena.

Individual Morality

By W. E. HADOW, Vice-Chancellor of Sheffield University.

THE aspiration of the world should be to make the level of international morality as high as that which holds between individuals. When we do, there will be a lot less war in the world. Why is it that international morality lags so far behind individual morality? Why is it that individuals are so much more moral than nations? There are three reasons as I see the problem.

First, in private affairs, a man is solely responsible for his act. It is his and his alone. In public affairs, as a member of a government, he may share responsibility and so be less sensible to the weight of his own decision.

Secondly, the crises of public business are far more important and involve far higher stakes than those which occur in a man's private negotiations. The temptation to gain is greater.

Thirdly, and this is the only creditable reason of the three, a man's private business concerns his own interests, his public business, the interests of other people. He cannot be generous with their property or unselfish in their cause. The public man is in the position of an advocate who must make the best terms for his client.

Whatever be the psychological explanation, there is only one practical remedy for making international morality as high as individual morality. Nations should meet together more often. The same forces of comradeship which molded and modified the conduct of individuals can eventually determine the relations of nations. Get the world about a common meeting place and standards of international morality will develop. Distance promotes thieving standards among nations.

Man's Work in the World Should Be Source of Satisfaction and Pleasure

By DR. LINDLEY, Chancellor University of Kansas.

Civilization has now come to be an earth conquest, and there has dawned a new humanism which proclaims that neither war nor worship nor contemplation nor the enjoyment of leisure are the chief ends of man—but the shaping of nature through human industry to realize human ideals.

Choosing of an occupation is too much by chance, the old-world tradition of following in a father's trade too often prevails, to the end that three-fourths of the men now in industry are badly placed. A man's employment should be such as will enrich rather than impoverish the personal life; it should be a source of satisfaction and pleasure.

Happiness in one's work comes from adjustment of task to aptitude. Scientific management is nothing less than the application of the arts and sciences to the problems of human industry. Chief progress in scientific management has been made in the perfecting of machine processes.

The bulk of the crude work of the world will eventually be done by machines. Plato despised labor in his day, just because it was rule of thumb, a routine, devoid of invention. Followers of Plato today, to be loyal to their high human ideals, must realize that a vast amount of creative intelligence of mankind is now engaged in industrial production and organization. This is the domain in which new human values are being wrought.

Church's Methods of "Conversion" in Great Need of Revision

By REV. ALFRED NEWBERRY, Chicago Minister.

The "hot house" method of converting the Twentieth-century man to Christianity is a failure; the church needs a new vocabulary, and a new approach. The old-fashioned idea of "winning souls" no longer fits in the religious approach to the average man. The trouble with the old technique of the church lies not in any unfitness to its own period, but in its unsuitableness for the present. It involves a vocabulary that is often meaningless or unattractive to the mind of the man outside the church. The picture of somebody working on him and "winning his soul" is by no means a winning one to his mind.

A new religion technique should meet these points. Do not seek to convince beyond the limits of personal experience of the man you talk to; seek for a willingness to see the reasonableness rather than the finality of your point of view; do not try to hot-house an individual into belief by an argument or a dilemma.

Seek rather to make him acquainted with a life of worship which will gradually demonstrate its indispensability.

God Loves a Good Laugh. He Wants a Song on the Lips of Men

By REV. CHARLES H. ROBINSON, Wheeling, W. Va., Minister.

All work and no play is bad hygiene and bad religion. God loves a good laugh. I know when I hear the the birds sing and see the flowers grow. He wants a song on the lips of men. A merry heart is good medicine, better than medicine.

God is not a tyrant Who sits on a throne making petty laws to govern our every move. He wants us to be happy. A mournful face and long hair are not proof of piety.

Our great national game, baseball, should be rescued from the gamblers and the Sabbath-breakers and turned to making people healthy. Golf and tennis have done a world of good in exercising men and regulating their digestion.

The last hope is the Christian citizen. The trouble with Christian citizens is that many of them, while exemplary in their homes and in society, when they go to the polls, forget their Christian ideals. They surrender Christ to party allegiance. Thus are the righteous sold out in their own house and the wicked rule the people.

Too Ardent Rooting for Favorite Baseball Team Is Not Good Sign

By DR. THADDEUS L. BOLTON, Temple University.

A man who would stand in line for hours for a seat in the bleachers and then shout himself hoarse rooting for his favorite baseball team, is not well-balanced mentally.

The well-balanced man will not become fanatical in his love for one particular sport. If he does, he is suffering from a mental hypertrophy. A hypertrophy is a growth. There are mental and physical hypertrophies. Physically they manifest themselves in the form of corns, bunions, boils, etc. Mentally, in the case of the baseball fan, by a tendency toward over-ardent, hysterical devotion to the one particular sport.

Poultry

CLEAN HOUSE IS FIRST ESSENTIAL

A clean house is the first essential in good poultry management. The cleaning should be done before the pullets are put in the house for the winter, according to John Vandervort of the University of Illinois. Clean, healthy pullets cannot be expected to remain so if they are placed in a filthy hen house which is likely to harbor worm eggs and disease germs, he points out.

"Nests, roosts, water dishes and other utensils should be taken out of the house and cleaned and then left in the sunlight. Dropping boards should be cleaned and all litter and manure scraped from the floor. The floor, sidewalks and ceiling should then be swept, after which the interior of the house should be thoroughly scrubbed with hot water containing lye at the rate of one pound to 40 gallons of water. No disinfecting should be done until after the house has been thoroughly cleaned and allowed to dry out. The final step includes replacing the fixtures and putting clean litter on the floor and material in the nests. Houses should be cleaned and fresh material put in the nests monthly."

Preparing for Eggs in Cold Weather of Winter

With the coming of colder weather and the necessity of getting the pullets into winter quarters, poultry flock owners again are confronted with the matter of which ones to keep. Pullets should be well grown and healthy. Pullets that are undersized or stunted are seldom if ever worthy of their feed. The balance of the flock between hens and pullets will be determined by conditions such as the number of pullets available. The average is about two-thirds pullets and one-third old hens, the pullets being kept for winter egg production and the hens for breeding stock.

As insurance against an outbreak of colds and disease in the poultry flock, good housing and proper management of the flock are better and more reliable than vaccination or any other medical treatment. Providing plenty of room in the poultry house is necessary to the health and productivity of the flock. Three to four square feet is the proper amount of floor space for each bird.

Prevent Fall Troubles in Farm Poultry Flock

One of the most common diseases of the poultry flock during the autumn is roup. This disease is often found in damp, poorly ventilated houses and is most often contracted by birds that are poorly developed and of low vitality. Fowls of this type frequently get roup and are the means of spreading it throughout the flock. Obviously, prevention should consist of eliminating the weaklings from the flock and providing a house that will be dry and free from drafts, but well ventilated.

An additional prevention against this disease is the following: Add as much potassium permanganate as will remain on the surface of a dime to each gallon of drinking water and keep before the fowls. This acts as an antiseptic and will help to keep the birds in good condition. An attempt to cure the individual of roup is not advisable, for, although in the majority of cases there may be an apparent cure, the danger of reinfection is great and frequently such birds cause the disease to spread throughout the flock.

Don't Wash Eggs

Experienced egg packers condemn the practice of washing eggs with either water or vinegar, most severely because such eggs do not stand up in storage. The fact that the eggs thus treated cannot be detected allows many of them to go into storage with the result that when they are taken out of the coolers next fall and winter their poor quality will result in lessened consumption. So don't wash eggs for sale.—National Poultry, Butter and Egg Bulletin.

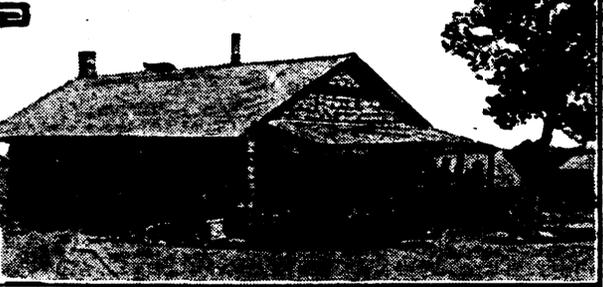

Teach Chicks to Roost

Many people make a mistake in not teaching the young chickens to roost. It is usually advisable to do this when the chicks are from eight to ten weeks of age. When they are allowed to sit on the floor it is difficult to keep them clean and there is a tendency for them to crowd on cold nights, which often results in loss. The chicks can usually be taught to roost by putting perches close to the floor and placing one or two old hens with them.

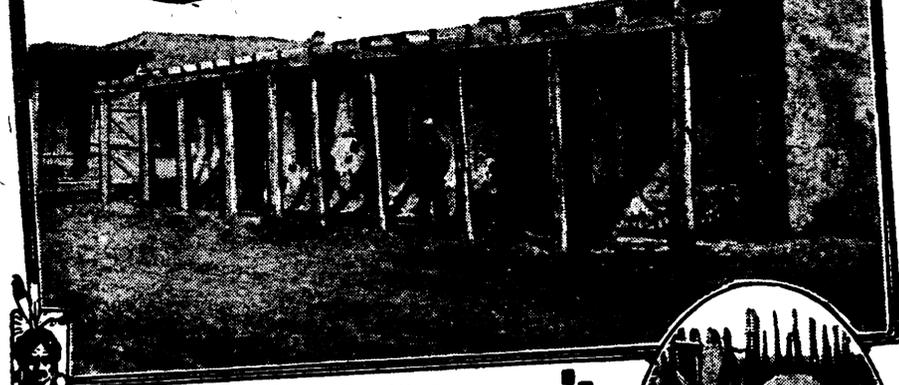

Whitewash Formula

Here is a standard formula for exterior whitewash which has been found satisfactory. Dissolve 12 pounds of salt and 6 ounces of powdered alum in about 4 gallons of hot water. Add 1 quart of molasses. Make a thick cream by thoroughly mixing 50 pounds (1 sack) of hydrated lime, or 88 pounds (½ bushel) of quicklime, thoroughly slaked and screened before use, with about 7 gallons of hot water. Add the clear solution to the lime, stirring vigorously.

CARSON'S GRAVE IN TAOS

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

NEXT to his grandfather, Daniel Boone, Kit Carson is perhaps the most widely known and best beloved of American pioneers. There has probably never been written a book of sketches of frontiersmen, pioneers or scouts which does not include Carson in the roll of these early American heroes, and many more volumes have been written about Carson alone. As has been the case with so many other figures prominent in taming the American wilderness, a great mass of legend has been added to the known facts about his life and the dime novelists have contributed their share to make the truth about Kit Carson obscure. Too often this quiet, modest little man has been included in the general category of Indian-killing, buckskin-clad swashbucklers and the sensational aspects of his career have been so played up as to cause most Americans to lose sight of his historic importance.

Kit Carson

I was nine when my father died, killed by a falling limb; Daniel Boone was my father's friend— Maybe you've heard of him.

He and his kind were my teachers, then hunter and guide; They taught me to shoot and to speak the truth; I taught myself to ride.

Woodman I was till I saw the plains And I scolded and rode away To the little old Injun town of Taos And the city of Santa Fe.

Plainsman I was till I saw the hills And the trails that westward ran To the farther hills and the farthest hills— And I am a mountain man.

Mine were the days of the mountain men, The days that are now a dream; As once we followed the buffalo track We followed the beaver stream.

Trapping the beaver on lake and creek In woods till then unknown We ranged from the Platte to the San Joaquin.

From the Salt to the Yellowstone.

Old Jim Bridger, Robidous, Meek, Young from the Rio Grande, Cut-throat Sublette, Peckler Smith And Pits of the Broken Hand— None knew the roads through the desert dust.

The train of mine and mine, None knew the paths to the Western Sea.

But we that were mountain men! Young Fremont came over the pass With a hard and weathered face; Keenly looking across the waste With his troopers, two-and-two.

They won the California land, For each may claim his share; But the mountain men and the plainsmen That Carson brought them there.

Well, I helped to hold these hills of ours For the Union, cliff and crag; When we fought our fight, both Red and White.

Under the starry flag:

And that's why I'm General Carson, now, In my grand adobe house, With Indians there at the open door, In the little old town of Taos.

The six-foot braves come striding in, With scapular knife and gun To tell their troubles to Father Kit— And I not five foot one!

They call me friend, and their friend I am; Though I fought them hard and long, For the Injun's right is the Injun's way, And the white is mostly wrong.

But the Injun's got to learn our way, So I'll help him while I can, For the Injun's way is near the end, Like the way of the mountain man.

Williams, Beckworth, the tall Crow Chief, Gant with the Eastern hand, Cut-throat Sublette, Peckler Smith And Pits of the Broken Hand.

Whether you're up and away once more On the last uncharted trail, Whether you're waiting here like me With the rifle on the nail, Light one dare to the mountain men And the joy of our reckless way, When we probed the heart of the wilderness Ahead of the pioneers.

Reaching the heights with the Cimarron, Cutting the trail with the grizzly bear, Trapping the beaver for means to live, Living as free as air.

Doing the work we were meant to do, Though little we dreamed it then— Finding the Rita in the mountain wall For the march of a million men!

—ARTHUR QUINTERMAN.

how thrilling the affair nor how hair-breadth the escape, which Carson describes, the simple, straightforward manner in which it is told shows plainly why Carson was beloved for his modesty, which was equaled only by his courage and his daring. One instance will suffice. Almost without exception those who have written of Carson have made much of his famous duel with the French bully, Captain Shunan (or Shunar) and the dime novel type of writer especially has told it with much sensational detail. Here is the way Carson tells of the affair:

There was in the party of Captain Dripe a large Frenchman, one of those overbearing kind and very strong. He made a practice of whipping every man that he was displeased with—and that was nearly all. One day, after he had beaten two or three men, he said, that for the same Frenchman had no trouble to dog and, as for the Americans, he would take a switch and switch them. I did not like such talk from any man so I told him I was the worst American in camp. He said nothing but started for his rifle, mounted his horse, and made his appearance in front of the camp. As soon as I saw him I mounted my horse and took the first arms I could get hold of, which was a pistol, galloped up to him and demanded of him if I was the one he intended to shoot. Our horses were touching. He said no, but at the same time, drawing his gun so he could have a fair shot at me, I was prepared and allowed him to draw his gun. We both fired at the same time; all present saying but one report was heard. I shot him through the arm and his ball passed my head, cutting my hair and the powder burning my eye, the musle of his gun being near my head when he fired. During our stay in camp we had no more bother with this bully (of a) Frenchman.

Thus does Carson dismiss this incident, which many writers expand into pages of thrilling detail, nor does he say anything about the fact recorded by reliable historians that Shunar begged for his life after his first shot failed and that Carson stayed his hand when he had his enemy at his mercy.

Not the least of the interest of this book, as the one authoritative life of Kit Carson, lies not only in the careful editing by Miss Grant and the numerous footnotes which supplement the text, but also the reproductions of old photographs never before published and the contemporary account of his death on May 23, 1868, at Fort Lyon, Colo.

Fortunately for the memory of Carson, the latest addition to the biographical material about him has been the plain, unvarnished story of his life as given by Carson himself to one of his closest friends some seventy years ago. This is "Kit Carson's Own Story of His Life" as it was dictated to Col. and Mrs. D. C. Peters about 1868-67 and never before published until it was brought to light by Miss Blanche C. Grant of Taos, N. M., who recently edited it and published it at her own expense.

The story of the manuscript, as given in the book which Miss Grant has published, is an interesting one in itself. The story is as follows:

Col. DeWitt C. Peters, surgeon, U. S. A., was a close friend and admirer of Kit Carson, the great Taos scout. He finally induced him to dictate his life story. This was written down, according to a son, Clinton Peters, during Carson's frequent visits to the Peters family, who were stationed at "some fort near Taos," probably Fort Union, and in the town of Taos, as well. It is probably most of it was written down in the old adobe house in Taos, now owned by the Masons and called the "Kit Carson house," on the street leading eastward from the Plaza toward the mountains.

The original manuscript is for the most part in the handwriting of Mrs. Peters, though at times the colonel helped with the writing, probably in the year 1867. Colonel Peters then wrote his long "Life and Adventures of Kit Carson," which was published in 1881. Carson never read the book as a whole, but enough so that he is said to have remarked that Peters "said it on a leaf to too thick."

This early manuscript was evidently prized by the poet's son, Theodore Peters, who took it to Paris, France. Here, after his death, about 1907, his brother Clinton found the papers among his brother's effects, while rummaging around in a cellar on Avenue St. Ouen, Montmartre. Clinton Peters brought the manuscript back to New York and had two copies made. The original he sold to Edward E. Ayer for his famous Newberry library in Chicago, Ill. The copies came into the hands of Charles E. Camp of Berkeley, Calif., as well as the permission from Clinton Peters himself to publish the story. This in turn passed to the writer.

And it is just for the reason that the book "reflects the real Carson" that it is both historically important and humanly interesting. No matter

Fifty Miles on a Gallon

When the "perfect automobile" comes it can travel 490 miles on one gallon of gasoline. But if such a machine were made at the present time, it would be so unsightly and so uncomfortable that no one would ride in it. However, new developments in engine-making and in fuel make it likely that a car capable of traveling 50 miles on a gallon is on the way. Man is never satisfied. If he was, he would make no progress.—Copper's Weekly.

"Grow" This Armchair

John Kruback of Embarras, Wis., has "grown" an armchair. By grafting and bending the limbs of 32 box elder saplings, Kruback trained the trees to grow in the form of an armchair. It took 11 years of patient effort, but the chair was sold for $4,000.—Indianapolis News.

In Praise of Youth

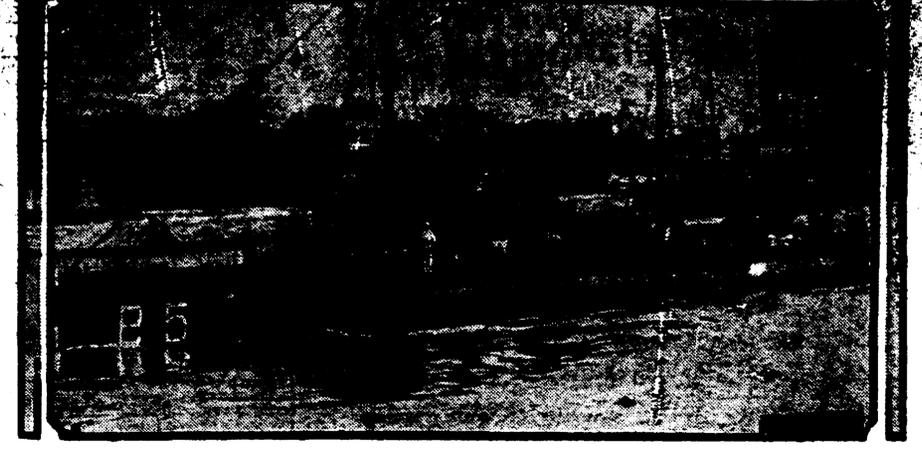

Orville Wright, praising Charles A. Lindbergh at a dinner in Dayton, said:

"Only a young man could have achieved this feat. For youth is braver than age. It is more generous, too, more honorable. Yes, it's better all around."

The great airman smiled rather sadly.

"The good don't really die young," he said. "They outgrow it."

Lincoln Tomb to Be 500 Feet High

Monument at Springfield with Beacon for Aviators Is Suggested

Springfield, Ill.—A Lincoln tomb and monument 500 feet high, to be surmounted with a powerful searchlight which would serve as a beacon for aviators in Illinois, has been suggested in a carefully worked out plan by Herbert Wells Fay, custodian of the Lincoln tomb and monument here.

Fay's plan would put to an end a charge that the state has been unappreciative of its great statesman as far as building a suitable memorial for him is concerned.

Fay asserts that the present memorial is sadly in need of repairs and entirely inadequate, considering the prodigious increase in the number of tourists who visit it daily. In its place he suggests the construction of a 500-foot monument which would be visible for 20 miles, to serve as the air traffic beacon.

Statue 200 Feet High.

Fay's carefully worked out scheme calls for a competition between architects for a gigantic statue of the emancipator 200 feet in height mounted on a base 300 feet high. The structure would be surmounted by a powerful searchlight to make it visible, at night, especially to air pilots.

The grounds owned by the state, totaling nine acres, are adequate for such a monument, according to Fay. Around the base it would be possible to build a memorial hall to match the proportions of the monument and accommodate Lincoln memorials.

The present tomb and monument were erected in 1874 at a cost of $350,000. The memorial at Washington completed a few years ago cost nearly $3,000,000.

Fay, in presenting his suggestion, declares that 400 people visit Lincoln's shrine daily whereas five years ago the number each week hardly equaled that. Last year 150,000 tourists signed the register at the tomb, whereas in 1920 but 30,000 signatures were attached. It is claimed that recent works on the life of Lincoln, coupled with a general increase in tourist travel in the Middle West, accounts for the increase.

Outlines His Plan.

Fay, in describing his plan for the monument and memorial, says:

"Make three circles of rooms. On the outer wall arrange to record the principal events in Lincoln's life, especially from the cradle until he went to Washington. In frames on the walls and in show cases put pictures of every spot he ever visited, letters and speeches he wrote, things he said, stories he told, friends, documents and surveys he made. A systematic arrangement of all these would give a patriotic thrill to every visitor, American or foreign.

In this exhibit could be shown a copy of every letter, speech, survey or document he made in chronological order. Pictures of every person mentioned and place visited could be shown. There could be shown all publications about Lincoln, authors of books, photos of the scenes and everything. Make it answer every question asked about Lincoln. Have every county of the state represented.

"In the center circle reproduce his birthplace, probably exact size, showing its surroundings. Build in miniature the contour of the country and make it show all the places he frequented in Kentucky.

"Then in the next room faithfully reproduce the Indiana home and vicinity. In adjoining rooms of the center circle show a miniature of the Decatur home of Thomas Lincoln, the Coles county home, and reproduce the New Salem log cabin village. One room could be devoted to the Black Hawk war, showing the contour of each county traveled.

"Rooms could be set aside showing Vandalla, the campaign for congress, Lincoln-Douglas debates, battles of the Civil war, the assassination and funeral. Another room could be set aside to the Lincoln memorials erected in his honor.

"The inner circle of rooms next to the base of the statue could be devoted to a display of paintings of Lincoln, scenes of his life depicted in sculpture and photographs."

Blow Torch Enlisted in War on Fruit Pest

Chipmunk Kills Rattler Then Dies From Poison

Bellefonte, Pa.—A chipmunk, weighing scarcely half a pound, thwarted the plans of foresters near here to witness a battle royal between a rattler and a black snake.

Capturing a rattlesnake 4 1/2 feet long the foresters decided to hold it until a black snake—traditional enemy of the rattler—could be found.

Unable to locate a black snake, the foresters placed a chipmunk in the rattler's den to provide the reptile with a meal. The chipmunk had other plans and, taking the aggressive, literally bit the snake in two.

The chipmunk was bitten during the struggle and died of the poison from the rattler's fangs, but not until it had lived to see its enemy die.

entomologists that the germs of such virus diseases as mosaic, curl, streak and wilt are carried from diseased plants to healthy stock by aphids. Under the old method of roguing with grub hoes, it was observed that the aphids fell to the ground and migrated to healthy plants.

By using the torch to kill the plant before removal the state inspectors also are killing the insects before they have an opportunity to migrate to healthy plants.

E. C. Manderberg, chief of the inspection service, advises growers to have their raspberry plantations inspected by the state, which employs trained men to do the work.

Leaping Scribe Lures Bear to Death in Pit

Rock Springs, Wyo.—With an eye to detail acquired in a newspaper office, Robert S. Wilson, Rock Springs newspaper man, recently told a bear story that makes all other similar tales appear no more exciting than crop reports.

And since he had no eyewitnesses Wilson's silenced scoffers with steak from the bear he caught inadvertently with the aid of his feet and one of Wyoming's canyons.

Wilson's bear epic started when he covered his typewriter and went to the nearby mountain for a day of peaceful fishing.

He hardly had cast his first fly, Wilson said, when the bear sauntered up. He looked hungry, Wilson added.

So Wilson, remembering how he had evaded the left tackle when he was a football star at the University of Wyoming years ago, took to his heels.

The bear gave chase. Wilson kept just ahead of the animal's teeth for about a mile, more or less.

Ahead loomed a small canyon approximately 100 feet deep. Wilson couldn't stop. Momentum and the bear wouldn't let him. So he leaped and landed safely on the other side.

The bear couldn't stop either. But he wasn't so lucky as Wilson. He landed with a crash at the bottom of the chasm.

The bear's carcass, except for the steaks Wilson cut from its flanks, was left at the place where it fell.

Discover Anesthetic When Flowers Die

Chicago.—Because Wisconsin carnations went to sleep when brought to Chicago, science was able to discover ethylene, a new anesthetic as powerful as ether and less poisonous, doctors say.

Discovery followed an investigation by William Crocker and L. I. Knight, University of Chicago botanists, according to Dr. Arnold Luckhardt of the university's physiology department.

The botanists were called in to explain why carnations wilted when exposed to illuminating gas.

Laboratory work then disclosed the gas possessed the principle of ethylene. Doctor Luckhardt conducted tests, even trying the new anesthetic on himself, before he introduced it to the medical profession.

RACE OF SLAVES IN CHINA ARE FREED AFTER 550 YEARS

"Lazy Men" Tribe, Descendants of Mongol Conquerors, Are Given Full Citizenship.

Peking.—After being held in bondage for 550 years, the descendants of the Mongols who conquered China in the fourteenth century and who have been kept in a state of virtual slavery ever since in Chekiang province, south of Shanghai, have been freed by formal edict of Gen. Chiang Kaishek.

From the year 960 to 1127 the Sung dynasty ruled China undisturbed. Then, at the time of the Crusades in Europe, when Russia also was being overrun by Mongol tribes, the Mongols descended from the north and west upon China.

After a long period of civil war and chaos the Mongols founded the Yuan dynasty, with Peking as their capital, in the year 1280. This dynasty lasted less than a century, being superseded in 1368 by the Ming dynasty, which in turn was overthrown by the Manchus in 1644, the latter holding the throne until the republic was founded in 1911.

When the Mongol dynasty collapsed in 1368 and the Imperial Yuan family retreated northwestward to Urga, about 80,000 Mongol garrison troops in Chekiang province were cut off. An imperial edict issued by the first Ming emperor made these Mongols all slaves and, though they have not been subject to personal sale for some hundreds of years, they have been harshly oppressed for five and a half centuries.

For 500 years these marooned Mongols have been officially listed as an "inferior race." They have been barred from taking part in civil service examinations and have not been permitted to hold public office.

So strong has been the prejudice against them that not a single case of intermarriage with a Chinese has been recorded. In occupations they have been limited to chair bearers, richshaw pullers, firemen, barbers and shoemakers.

Today these Mongols number about 20,000 at Ning-Po, where they are nicknamed "lazy men." 200,000 live at Chu-Chow and Wen-Chow, where they are called "cheap men," and others distributed throughout the province number 150,000 more and are known as "the nine degenerate families."

Under the new mandate all trades and professions are thrown open to these Mongols; their children may be educated with Chinese children (when and if the war lords release any revenue for educational purposes), and the ban against intermarriage is officially abolished.

WASHINGTON HOME FURNACE

Has Improved Air Duct
There are only three furnaces of this type fitted with an air duct—the improved Washington Home Furnace and two others—yet the improved Washington Home Furnace will cost you less money.
The air duct is that large six-inch heavy corrugated cast iron pipe that draws the air from the outside right over the fire where it is intensely heated and forced out at the top. This improved air duct adds 30 o/o to the heating efficiency of the Washington Home Furnace. If the air duct was removed from the Improved Washington Home Furnace it would be necessary to burn at least 30 o/o more coal to produce the same amount of heat.
The Improved Washington Home Furnace will heat as much as two or three ordinary stoves, or five or six grates, yet requires no more fuel than one ordinary heating stove.
Your coal bill reduced one-third to one-half.

2000 CATHOLIC MEN COMING TO CONVENTION

High Churchmen and Lay Delegates to Meet in October

Nearly 2000 delegates and visitors, representing every state in the Union, with cardinals, archbishops, bishops and other high dignitaries of the Church, are expected to attend the seventh annual convention of the National Council of Catholic Men, which will be held in Detroit Oct. 16, 17 and 18. The invitation was issued by the Rt. Rev. Michael J. Gallagher, D. D., Bishop of Detroit, who heads the local committee in charge of arrangements for the gathering.
Bishop Gallagher will pontificate at the solemn High Mass which will open the convention Sunday morning, and the Rt. Rev. Joseph C. Schrembs, D. D., Bishop of Cleveland, will deliver the sermon. A monster mass meeting, open to Catholics and non-Catholics alike, will be held in a public auditorium Monday evening, Oct. 17, with internationally-known speakers on the program. One feature of the convention will be a sightseeing trip for delegates and guests to the various Catholic institutions of the city and to several industrial plants.

CORN BORER TOUR

The corn borer tour of Livingston County to Monroe County last Friday was very well attended and worth while. The Experimental Station conducted by the Mich. State College in Monroe exhibited some very interesting results of their various experiments. One feature that was very noticeable was that the earlier planted corn had the heaviest infestation and in these plants the infestation reached 90 o/o of the stalks.
The group visited one farm and the Federal Corn Borer station where the parasites of corn borers were seen and method of incubation explained. The spread of the corn borer has been quite extensive this year as indicated by the following report recently received by County Agent Bolander:
Numbers of new townships in various counties found to be infested so far this year are as follows: St. Joseph two, Kalamazoo one, Branch Calhoun six, Barry nine, Eaton seven, Clinton seven, Bay three, Cass six, Shiawassee eleven, Ingham six, and Hillsdale

FORMER GRAND RAPIDS NUN HEADS GOOD SHEPHERD HOME

Grand Rapids, Mich.—Sister Mary of St. Patricia, a native of Grand Rapids, whose family name is Golden, has been appointed superior of the House of the Good Shepherd here. The new superior is a sister of Sister Mary of St. Anne, who for 18 years has been an influential worker among wayward girls in this city. The two sisters will celebrate the twenty-fifth anniversary of their entrance into the order next year.
