OPERATIONS AT THE RESORTS

Work was started last Wednesday by Leonard K. Rumsey on the Strawberry Lake Frontage which he recently purchased of John Potts. A road is being built through the property, some of which lies low. The filling contract has been awarded to the George Smith Construction Co. of Franklin. A steam shovel has been placed in the Kettle pit at Buck Lake and ten dump trucks are at work moving 200 yards of dirt daily. Twenty choppers and teams are at work clearing up the property. It is hoped to complete the main road and fill in fifty lots before the cold weather sets in.

J. Bonk of Detroit who purchased the lots just south of the bridge between Big and Little Portage has let the contract for filling it in to C. J. Snyder and Sons of Ann Arbor. They have a steam shovel and six dump trucks at work. The dirt is being obtained from the road running west at the base of Peach Mt. where the hill is being cut down. Dexter township gave him permission to cut down the hill if he would gravel it.

Work is progressing nicely on the two miles of road being built to Highland Lake. The first mile has been graded and work has been started on the second. The work of spreading the gravel has already begun and it is hoped to get it all or nearly done before cold weather.

DEER HUNTERS RETURN

The first bunch of deer hunters arrived home Thursday with a 1 1/2 lb buck shot by Will VanBlaricum at Cold Creek, near Conins, Montmorency county. C. J. Clinton and J. C. Bowman were the other members of the party but were not fortunate enough to bring back a deer.

The second party consisting of Edward Parker, Earl Baugan and Clare and Gladys Swarthout got back late Friday night with two deer, one of which was shot by Ed Parker and the other by Swarthout brother. They hunted near Lovens Mich.

Pinckney's five crack shots returned from Hillman Monday night with out any deer. W. H. Meyers and H. T. Read got a shot at one but failed to bring it down. They claim they missed on purpose as it was such a nice animal they would have been ashamed to kill it. Norm Reason, Lynn Hendse and Jay Smith had a number of excellent shots but scorned to take them as they never shoot at anything less than 500 yards away and the deer (fortunate for them) were much closer than that.

MRS. FLORENCE ANDREWS RATZ

Word was received here last Friday of the death of Mrs. Will Ratz at her home at 150 McFadden Pl., Hollywood, California, on November 17 of pneumonia at the age of thirty-nine years. She is survived by her husband and one son, Robert. The funeral services were held from the Chapel of the Gates Crane & Earl, funeral directors, Sunday at 2:00 p. m. The remains will be brought to Detroit for interment.

The deceased was a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Frank L. Andrews, former owners of the Pinckney Dispatch and a graduate of the Pinckney High School. After her marriage to William L. Ratz of Howell she made her home in Detroit until about seven years ago when she moved to California on account of her health.

MRS. MARY McCABE SHEHAN

Mrs. Mary Shehan, widow of the late John Shehan, died at the home of her brother's, James and Hugh McCabe, in Dexter township, Friday, November 18, aged 79 years.

The deceased lived on the John Shehan farm until the death of her husband since which time she has made her home with her children and her brothers. The funeral was held from St. Joseph's church, Dexter Monday at 10:00 a. m. Rev. Fr. McCabe of Detroit officiating, assisted by the Rev. Frs. Coyle, McQuilhan and Higgins. Burial was in St. Joseph's cemetery, Dexter.

THANKSGIVING DAY DANCE

There will be a Thanksgiving Day Dance given at St. Joseph's church, Dexter on Thursday evening, November 24th. You and your friends are cordially invited. There will be dances for young and old.

NOTICE

CAR GOES IN DITCH

When a party composed of Mrs. Tel Bourbonnais, Marion Durkin, Gertrude Tupper and Wilhelmina Bourbonnais were on their way home from the Stockbridge debate Thursday night in a car driven by the latter, the machine skidded in the loose gravel at one of the sharp turns this side of Stockbridge and went into the ditch near a creek there, stopping on the brink of the stream. Other Pinckney people homeward bound pulled the car back into the road where it was found that all the damage sustained were two bent fenders and they were able to continue home with it.

On account of there being no rural mail delivery on Thursday, the Dispatch is coming out Wednesday morning instead of afternoon.

Mrs. Peter Raider of Dexter spent Tuesday with Mrs. Elisabeth Carlett.

THE PINCKNEY HIGH SCHOOL DEBATING TEAM

The Pinckney High School Debating team composed of Wilhelmina Bourbonnais, Gertrude Tupper and Marion Druks won a decision over the Stockbridge team last Thursday evening. Prof. Menahof of the Michigan State College was the judge of the debate. For the past three years the Pinckney school has been attempting to develop public speaking by conducting local contests in the field. This year she decided to place a team in competition. The question debated was, Resolved, that the Direct Primary should be abolished in the United States. The Pinckney team upheld the negative side of the question.

The school has four debates scheduled with outside teams. The Pinckney team which will uphold the affirmative side will be composed of Helene Fiedler, Raymond L. Dillig and Loretta Dillingham.

The school is also planning upon entering the state oratorical contest as well as the state declamatory contest. The Public speaking squad is composed of over twenty members and requires the time of all the high school teachers. The same regulations which govern athletics apply to public speaking. That is, all students representing the school must be bona fide students carrying at least fifteen hours of work. Students above the tenth grade are not eligible to take part in the declamatory contest.

Byron forfeited their football game to Pinckney last Friday. The Pinckney team has closed a very successful season having lost but one class D game.

School closes Thursday for the Thanksgiving holidays. After the vacation school will open in the morning at 9:00 o'clock. This arrangement has been made so as to accommodate students coming a considerable distance.

FOOTBALL THANKSGIVING

A game of football will be played at the local field Thanksgiving Day at 10:00 a. m. between the High School football team and the Alumni. The high school expect to be strengthened by the addition of Don Swarthout and Ed Brown while Coach Doyle has announced his intention of playing at least a quarter himself. An admission of 25c will be charged which will go to the high school athletic fund. The following line-ups have been worked out but there may be several changes in them. Any former alumni who wish to get into the game should be on hand as there will undoubtedly be many substitutions:

Invents New Airplane Brake

J. E. Carroll of Los Angeles, inventor, with his new airplane brake. It includes a small motor mounted in the center of the propeller, to be controlled by the pilot from a button on the control stick. The angle of the propeller blades may be changed at the will of the aviator, and when at their extreme reverse pitch they will "push" the air instead of drawing it back. An aviator landing can reverse the propeller and stop the plane in twice its own length, according to the inventor, who says that the ability to control the pitch of the blades will also be invaluable when the plane strikes air pockets or rarefied air.

THE RUSH FOR GOLD

By JOHN BLAKE

IT HAS been a long time since the world has witnessed such a gold rush as that which took thousands of people to the Klondike, most of them to return broken in health, or poverty stricken.

But gold rushes of various kinds follow every reported story of the get-rich-quick variety.

Not long ago a young man, who had never been heard of before, swam the Santa Catalina channel, off southern California.

For the swim he got a prize of $25,000, and because of the celebrity he earned he was able to make $1,000 a day by exhibiting himself for some weeks afterward.

The prize was offered for just one swim—for the first successful effort to master the channel.

Shortly after this channel feat, a prominent American baseball player was signed to play with a ball team for a salary as great as that which is paid President Coolidge.

That will set more boys to turning from useful work, for which they are fitted.

The very fact that a great prize was offered for swimming the Santa Catalina channel is proof that only a very few people, possessing singular endurance, can accomplish such a feat.

The combination of strength, quickness of eye and co-ordination which makes a remarkable baseball player is rare. It is a gift which nature has bestowed upon him.

To seek to emulate such qualities is worse than useless.

As well seek to emulate the circus giant or the human skeleton.

To the average person success of any sort means slow, patient effort, abundance of hard work and determination.

But these are tedious and laborious. It looks so much easier to swim a channel or to play remarkable baseball, or to achieve distinction by some unusual way, that every time athletic celebrities are spoken of in to be ball players, and take them the paper, great numbers of people begin to seek their laurels.

People differ in brain quality, but most of them can be more successful and more useful than they are if they will try to improve by ways which are perfectly possible.

As long as they join every gold rush they will always face disappointment, always nurse a grievance, because somebody else seems to be luckier than they.

It is lucky, of course, to be born with some unusual quality, but success can be secured without that kind of luck and is constantly secured by people who never join a gold rush.

Nugget of Wisdom

Eight actions for the future are the best explanations or apologies for wrong ones in the past; the best evidence of regret for them that we can offer, or the world receive.

The BABY

No mother in this enlightened age would give her baby something she did not know was perfectly harmless, especially when a few drops of plain Castoria will right a baby's stomach and end almost any little ill. Fretfulness and fever, too; it seems no time until everything is serene.

That's the beauty of Castoria; its gentle influence seems just what is needed. It does all that castor oil might accomplish, without shock to the system. Without the evil taste. It's delicious! Being purely vegetable, you can give it as often as there's a sign of colic; constipation; diarrhea; or need to aid sound, natural sleep.

Just one warning: It is genuine Fletcher's Castoria that physicians recommend. Other preparations may be just as free from all doubtful drugs, but no child of this writer's is going to test them! Besides, the book on care and feeding of babies that comes with Fletcher's Castoria is worth its weight in gold.

Planning Meals for the Day

By NELLIE MAXWELL

Wouldst thou fashion for thyself a "family life"? Then do not fret over what is past and gone. And spite of all thou mayst have left behind live each day as if thy life were just begun.—Goethe.

TO HAVE FOR DINNER

THE planning of three meals a day, as well as preparing them and clearing away the debris after each meal, is the work of at least twenty million housewives, year after year. In our own U. S. A. The mere washing dishes for a family of five amounts to two and one-half acres of dishes a year to handle over from shelf to table, from table to sink and back to the shelves. Monotonous! Yes, but the fact that she is doing this for the ones she loves best, makes the task a labor of love. Because of the sameness of her work, a vacation is a great necessity, even if it be taken a day at a time.

If one has plenty of means to provide varieties of food, the problem is not so great, but the vast majority of our American people must count the pennies and make them stretch as far as possible in buying food.

Chop Suey.

Take two pounds either of pork or veal with a little beef or chicken four onions cut into small pieces, three stalks of celery cut into bits, one can of bean sprouts, a half dozen Chinese water nuts or potatoes, two teaspoonfuls of head molasses, two teaspoonfuls of salt and one-fourth teaspoonful of pepper. Beat a little oil—two or three tablespoonfuls in a frying pan, add the meat, brown and cook until nearly done, then add the vegetables, one cupful of beef stock, the seasonings and molasses. Cover and cook an hour, using great care to keep from scorching. Serve with boiled rice and soy sauce.

Spanish Toast.

Cut up two green peppers, a slice of onion, two sprigs of parsley and add a cupful of tomato sauce. Simmer until smooth. Toast rounds of bread, butter and put a spoonful of the tomato mixture on each with a poached egg on top.

Kiddies' Good-Night Story

By MARTHA MARTIN

"I'M GOING on a little winter trip today," said Billie Brownie to Peter Gnome.

He had just met Peter Gnome right on the outskirts of Brownie land.

"What are you about to do, Peter?" Billie asked. "I don't mean to be rude, but I'm always interested in your adventures."

"I have a meeting today of the Every-Day-is-Nice-Day club," said Peter. "Sorry you cannot come to the meeting. But, of course, you don't need to come! You think every day is nice, anyway."

"Sorry, too, I cannot come," said Billie Brownie. "You see, I am taking so many trips these days—getting to know so many of the children of dear old Mother Nature."

"Today she suggested that I should take a winter trip and meet some of the winter birds, I believe. Couldn't you come, too?"

"I don't believe I possibly could," said Peter Gnome. "But when you come back from your trip, won't you come and give us a talk about winter birds?"

"Gladly, gladly," said Billie Brownie. And then they shook hands, hugged each other and went in different directions, each shouting after the other: "Then I'll see you soon again!"

"Hello, Billie Brownie!" said a voice, and, looking about, Billie Brownie saw his friend, Judge Just Praise.

Judge Just Praise is a great believer in praising and encouraging. He doesn't think there is enough praising of creatures. He says it makes people do much better in their work and in their studies and in their conduct—in everything—to be praised and encouraged once in a while.

"Hello, Judge!" said Billie Brownie. "I just saw a lovely collie dog being given a collar with a silver plate attached, upon which was the collie's name and some nice words about the dog," said the Judge.

"That collie," Judge Just Praise continued, "saved a great many people in a little cat from a burning building. "The dog had awakened the different members of the family, which soon became flames."

"Then he had noticed that the cat was missing. Back into the burning house he had gone to come forth a little later carrying his cat friend in his mouth. The cat was frightened, but not hurt."

"And that dog is going to be rewarded for saving the lives of all the family—the cat, too! I heard some one say that he would be given a medal. If he had not awakened the family when he did the famas would have kept them from being able to escape out of the house."

"But now I must be on my way. Hope to see you soon, Billie."

Then Billie Brownie met groups of the winter birds.

"We're the American Crossbills," the American Crossbills chirped. "We sing and we twitter and we fly off and then fly back again without any special reason—just for fun."

"We don't believe in doing everything for a special reason. But we are fond of pine cones and our crossed bills or overlapping bills make it easy for us to pull the pine cones apart so we can reach the seeds."

"We're somewhat alike," said the White-Winged Crossbills, "only you don't see so many of us. Some winters we don't appear at all."

"I wear a lovely rose-colored costume," said Mr. White-Winged Crossbill, "and the Mrs. White-Winged Crossbill wears yellow. It is something the same with the American Crossbills, though the Mr. American Crossbills wear more of a brownish-red costume, and my favorite color is rose."

Then Billie Brownie met the Chickadees, the Song Sparrows and the Cedar Waxwings, and they all told him they liked to be about in the winter, but they did love to have some delicacies left about for them.

FOR MEN AND WOMEN

By VIOLA SHORE

FOR THE GOOSE—

BEING free with your kisses is like goin' in the automat and puttin' a nickel in the slot market "Cocoa" without first gettin' yourself a cup.

A woman always changes her mind. A fool never.

A theater ain't the only place where you oughta be sure and spot your exit first.

The more sickle a dame is about her opinion of others, the more constant she generally is about her opinion of herself.

FOR THE GANDER—

The people that raves about your house ain't gonna rent it. Paste your hopes on the couple that starts pickin' on the condition of the plumbin'.

There's no livin' if you're gonna try and have everybody satisfied with you; or if you ain't gonna try and be satisfied with yourself.

Talk about your friends' good points as if they was your own; about their faults as if you was gonna be held responsible for 'em.

Saving Up

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

WE USED to dream of merry days. The lands to see, the things to do—

And then so suddenly we grew So busy in so many ways Youth slipped away before we knew.

So many things our hearts concerned, So much of toil, so many cares, To build the house, to sweep the stairs— Returning tasks with day returned And life slipped by us unaware.

But now we dream of other years, Of later years, of quiet age: Ahead we see the final page— And yet how fair that page appears, No more concerned with work or wage.

For now we put a little by So when we weary we may rest; And, though the sun is in the west, We still are dreaming, she and I, And often think this dream the best—

Of days when we may take our time, Together face the fading light, And have a little fire at night, A cottage where the roses climb, When limbs grow weary, temples white.

And none shall say, "They're very old," And none shall say, "They're quite a care."

We've saved a little here and there, And just as high our heads we'll hold As in the days when days were fair.

Industry Faces Ruin in Russia

Soviet Cannot Make Mills and Factories Pay, Says Observer.

Riga, Latvia.—Both entering and leaving Russia is an experience. Going in one guards his tongue immediately upon boarding the train. The camaraderie existing between travelers is slightly strained. One subject is taboo and that is Russia. Upon leaving Russia as soon as the train crosses the frontier a change is noticeable among the passengers. It seems as though every one has heaved a sigh of relief. People who were friendly before become even charming. Tongues wag and before the train arrives at Warsaw, Riga or Reval, as the case might be, all the passengers in the car have become friends.

Leaving Moscow my neighbor in the compartment went to bed before I did and in the evening we did not see each other. In the morning, after we passed the Latvian frontier we both seemed to feel a load lifted from our shoulders. The peculiar mental depression which affects visitors to Russia was gone. We invited each other for breakfast and began to get acquainted. We had both been in Russia for three months and visited widely separated districts.

Visited Industrial Centers.

He turned out to be a German engineer who had visited all of the industrial districts in Russia, from Leningrad right down to the Caucasus. Representing one of the big German industrial combines he had been sent to Russia to investigate industrial conditions and discover what chance there was of establishing a large plant in there. He talked with workers, foremen and managers. He was bringing back a pessimistic report and personally he was disillusioned about doing business in Russia. He also had met and talked with many Americans.

"After the Rapallo treaty was signed we Germans had illusions about exploiting the Russian market and gaining control of the Russian industry," he said. "Today we know better. We have discovered that the trade relations existing between Germany and Russia are not for the improvement of trade and commerce but for the furtherance of Bolshevik politics.

Politics Ahead of Business

"Russia, we found, does not do business with countries where she can sell the most profitably and buy the cheapest, she does business for politics. Today in Moscow the hotels are filled with Americans, they sit in the waiting rooms at the various commissariats and are taking out officials of the various soviet trusts, syndicates and co-operatives to dinner. They are receiving encouragement. Just what we got before the Rapallo treaty was signed. They are going to learn just what we have learned during these last three years.

"The reason why there are so few representatives of German concerns in Russia today is not because we are not interested in the Russian market. Neither does it mean that we have capitulated to American competition. It only means the soviet government is now doing everything possible to convince Americans that business can be done and that there is much more business awaiting around the corner just as soon as they can force the United States to recognize the soviet regime. They worked the same game successfully with Sweden, Germany, Italy, England and France and now they are trying it on America.

Purchase Few German Articles.

"At present there are very few German concessions operating in Russia. The soviet foreign trade monopoly is using almost no licenses permitting the import of German goods. I called on many trusts attempting to sell the many varieties of machines we produce, but found they all had to obtain special permits to import them from the trade monopoly, and if after long negotiations such a permit was received, then it would take several additional months before the order would be officially placed by the soviet trade delegation in Berlin.

"Just now the soviet delegation in Berlin is not buying because there is no political profit in doing business in Germany. They would rather pay higher prices to the United States in hopes of obtaining political recognition and huge loans and credits in the future.

"The second reason for the poor business in Russia is the extreme poverty of all soviet institutions which all demand credit. These same syndicates, trusts and co-operatives bargain to the last penny and after endless bureaucratic negotiations and reams of requisitions, one discovers they can buy nothing. If business is finally transacted there is no profit because of the expenses en-ailed.

State Factories Losing Money.

"Heavy industry is buying the most abroad. The purchases mainly consist of replacements in machinery for mills, factories, mines, railroads, all of which need new equipment. The oil, coal and metal industries are buying most. In regard to the electrical industry I found many of the old works in operation and a few new ones. Some hydro-electric stations have been built and they are making slow progress in the process of electrification. Chimneys are smoking, workmen come to the mills and in the offices employees calculate endlessly for reports.

"The soviet press is full of articles about industry, the industrialization of the country is the latest slogan. There are lots of meetings and conferences. They are going to make everything they need themselves. That is, when they get the machinery they need to start this miracle working program. But when one has seen it all one has the impression of looking at a dead body being galvanized into action by an electric current. This is because all of the mills and factories are working with worn-out machines. Under state monopoly, having a protected market, still all these concerns are losing money and are continually in need of new subsidies from the government.

Jobless Army 2,500,000.

"Nationalized industry in Russia is a luxury which the soviet government can ill afford. If tomorrow the present Russian industry were placed in a position where it could compete with European industry, still it could not exist. Imagine six weavers on an island having a monopoly. Suppose one weaving machine started to work there. What would the other five weavers do. Russia today has more than a million and a half unemployed skilled workers and another million unemployed unskilled and white collar workers. Industry in Russia is so old fashioned that it cannot be compared with any industry in more progressive countries.

"What is more amazing is that all industry in Russia is operating at a loss. It is not helping to increase state revenues, but exists because it is supposed to support itself, and it does not do that. I obtained the impression that one of the chief reasons why industry is continued in Russia is as an advertisement to show that industry actually can exist under Communist government. This is an expensive advertisement.

Chaos for Industry.

"The peasant pays. He is paying for the present government. He is paying for the good-for-nothing industry and he pays the demoralized workers who are so busily engaged in haling water with a sieve. The government appropriations to purchase new equipment are not a drop in the bucket of Bolshevik need.

"The enterprises themselves, administered and run by former workmen are a sad sight to an industrial man. The management is without experience or education. They have been appointed chiefs of enterprises which, even though they may not be modern, still are large, and the heads of which should have theoretical and practical education and culture.

"It is true they are now trying to remedy this situation by calling back the 'specialists', those who were the brains before. But they are employed only in an advisory capacity. If the Communist director wishes to demonstrate three times each week against Germany, England, or America he

French Claim Many of "Biggest" Things

Paris.—France really leads in many things, says a newspaper writer, who, like many Frenchmen, rather smart under the endless list of things—"the biggest in the world"—that are from time to time reported as existing in the United States.

Here are some of the things claimed for France as being the "biggest" in the world:

Tour Eiffel, the highest structure.

The Caraby viaduct, the biggest metal viaduct.

Lille de France, 42,000 tons, the biggest steamer built since the war.

The Saint Pierre de Vauvray bridge, the biggest reinforced concrete bridge.

The fastest electric train, running from Paris to Vierzon.

Le Bourget, the biggest airfield.

The biggest aviation hangars, at Orly.

The Canal de Roava, the biggest underground canal.

The 1,000,000,000 candle-power searchlight at Mount Valerien.

The 50,000-kilowatt alternating current generators, at Gennevilliers.

calls out all the workers and gives them a half holiday to listen to his speech. With proper encouragement he will talk all afternoon. He frequently does this, and no wonder production falls off.

High Prices for Poor Products.

"In many of the mills they are trying to produce several articles. And this is the age of standardization. It is hardly necessary to speak about the awful quality of the goods produced, but it is necessary to remark about the prices. They are by far the highest in the world today. Such is the soviet nationalized industry which is being managed by a bunch of incompetents.

"And despite the terrific loss in operating this industry the soviet government is now engaged in trying to cut down prices. This is most senseless politics. How can prices be cut when industry is being operated at a loss? When prices are cut quality also falls. To reduce overhead means the discharge of more employees, and, as I have mentioned, the unemployment problem is serious enough without making it more serious.

"As for the condition of the workers and employees at the mills, well, there is a strong discipline. They are not forced to work, but they know for every employed man there is three jobless willing and anxious to take his place.

Fines, Deductions, for Workers.

"There is a system of fines which cut into the worker's pay, and from his pay envelope is also deducted between one-fifth and one-fourth his entire wages for the aid of various government revolutionary enterprises, such as the Aviation-Chemical society, which is preparing Russia for the next war; the International society, to provide foreign imprisoned revolutionists with luxuries in jail; the fund to aid the homeless children, etc., without end.

"There is supposed to be an eight-hour workday, but it averages between nine and ten hours, with a military drill in the evening three times each week, lasting an hour. However, the Communists I talked with never mentioned war. It is not a popular subject. The workers and employees have a hopeless look, which depresses one. There is nothing to defend in Russia. A laugh startles the nearer. The government is not popular, but the people seem too apathetic to hate.

"My final conclusion? Well, I'm not a politician I am an engineer and merchant. I know my line. I also know that it is sensible to have trade politics, but I believe that political trade cannot exist. Political trade, that is the crowning absurdity of Russia today."—Chicago Tribune.

Must Return Ring

New York.—Murray Brenner raised a mustache and got fit to please his fiancée, he testified to a jury, and the jury decided that Miss Frances C. Berge, who broke their engagement, must return a $1,000 diamond.

In what was once an execution pit. The Picpus cemetery was a gravel bed where the bodies of more than a thousand of the French nobility, executed during the revolution of 1793, were thrown.

Lafayette was related to some of the nobles who were beheaded and his body, therefore, was placed in this cemetery, which, aside from its origin, is perhaps the most unusual in France.

Princesse de Hohenzollern, members of whose family were revolutionary victims, returned to France after the country became quiet and obtained a secret authorization from the government to establish a cemetery. She was enabled to buy the sand pit where the 1,798 executioners tossed the bodies of those beheaded on what is now the Place de la Nation, near by. There were 1,306 bodies there. Of these about 100 were of certain noble families that co-operated in establishing the cemetery. It is private property, controlled still by representatives of the Lafayette and other families.

ELIMINATES BAD WEATHER, ASKS U. S. FOR $18,000,000

Brooklyn Man Presents Elaborate Report of Services Performed and Requests Pay.

Washington.—Michael J. King, writing from No. 488 Fourth street, Brooklyn, to United States senators, says the government owes him $18,000,000 for "services rendered in the elimination of inclement weather conditions in the United States of America in rotation from Vermont to Kansas." This sum, he says, pays for the period from 1892 to June 6, 1923.

Mr. King's letter hit here at a bad time for favorable consideration, for Washington has seldom seen a more inclement week.

"It is possible to control atmospheric conditions and distribute the elements according to our needs, also to the financial advantage of the mercantile, building and agricultural association," King wrote.

"In the past year I have performed work consistently to the advantage of the entire associated business enterprises of New York city. The minimum valuation of the work that I performed in elimination of inclement weather I would estimate to be at the rate of $25,000,000 a day."

Mr. King presents an elaborate account of his elimination, and adds: "To continue this work for the next few years without an accountability would be unwise."

The letter is carefully typed and it carries with it, on a separate sheet, the bill for the $18,000,000.

Cooking by Clock—

In the Arabian tale, a nicely prepared meal promptly made its appearance out of the air when Aladdin rubbed his Wonderful Lamp.

Nowadays, in Electric Range cooking, the magic lamp is replaced with a clock, which automatically attends to the cooking. All you have to do is to put the food in the range, set the clock—and forget the kitchen till dinner-time.

Electric Range cooking is done without hovering over a hot fire, without watching, without trouble or anxiety, without smoke or dust or fumes—and with perfect cleanliness.

THE NEW FORD CAR

The Northville Record recently published the following description of the new Ford car soon to enter the American automobile market.

Sleeveless-valve motor improves with abuse. The more coke that gathers on the pistons the better it goes. All advantages of a Hell-head motor. None of the disadvantages of a cold-in-the-head motor. George Bungle Rubber Fenders. Barney Google Spark Plugs. Loose Nut Steering Gear. Lovebumps Shock Accelerators. Whosis fusilage control and dirigible balloon tires enable the driver to lift the Bunk Six instant over all obstacles. The Bunk Six Aero-Carbureter effects such great saving in gas that it is necessary to drain the gas tank every 500 miles to keep it from overflowing. Exhilarates from 5 to 50 miles in a fifth of a second. The Bunk Six is so full of unrestrained spirits that it gets away the instant you put your foot on the running board. Totally unconscious of all hills—not a shake or a shudder quiver or jolt. All speed and no control. Ridiculous artistry and raw originality for pediculous people. Stable thinking people will buy the Bunk Six. Sell your horses; the covered wagon is a back number. Prestige deflected by the nuregeneration of extinguished owners. The dynamic Bunk Six outbunks even the Bunk Six.

Route Seems Rough on Wedding Finery

Rice and confetti, for use after wedding ceremonies, both have their opponents, but they seem preferable to the coal dust which, we are told, was thrown at St. Pancras recently after the wedding of a coal heaver and his bride.

But the idea of this occupational tribute is not quite new; some years ago a confectioner and his bride were pelted with the little sweets which are known as "hundreds and thousands." The idea might be endlessly extended—on leaves for the grocer, sawdust for the joiner, chopped sweet for the butcher, bums for the baker, buttons for the draper, orange peel for the grocer, and pills for the doctor and chemist. In the case of writing people and journalists, presumably all their friends would turn up and empty their fountain pens at the bride and bridegroom. That sounds a curious compliment—but, then, so does coal dust.—Manchester (England) Guardian Weekly.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Election Day Results in New York, Detroit and Elsewhere.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

GOV. AL SMITH'S stock as a Presidential nominee possibility, already pretty high, took quite a jump as a result of the elections in New York state. The Democratic organization elected nearly all their candidates in the metropolitan district, but the party's biggest victory was in the vote on the nine proposed constitutional amendments. The governor opposed the sixth of these, to lengthen the term of the governor to four years and hold the state elections in Presidential years, and this was defeated by a huge majority. The other eight proposed amendments, all supported by Smith, went over by big votes. One of them raises the debt limit of New York city so that additional bonds for $300,000,000 may be issued for new subway construction. The adoption of this was considered a personal victory for Mayor Walker.

Detroit's exciting mayoralty election resulted in the defeat of Mayor John W. Smith, an avowed enemy of prohibition, by John C. Lodge, the candidate of the Anti-Saloon league and other reform organizations on a bone dry program. However, the glee of the drys was somewhat tempered when Mr. Lodge, who had maintained silence during the campaign, asserted that he was absolutely free from obligations and pledges, and continued:

"This wet and dry matter was dragged into the campaign. It was never an issue. We can have orderly law enforcement without asking the aid or advice of the professional drys, with the emphasis on 'professional.' There will be positively no 'mooching.'"

In Ohio the Anti-Saloon league met with defeat when the voters rejected the Marshall bill which would place justices of the peace on a fee salary basis and thereby give them authority to hear and decide cases involving infraction of the prohibition laws.

Lovers of horse racing and those who like to bet on the ponies rejoiced in the victory of Judge Flem D. Sampson, Republican, over J. C. W. Beckham, Democrat, for governor of Kentucky. The winner made his campaign as a friend of racing, and the loser was opposed to it and to pari-mutuel betting, and the Kentucky Jockey club took a most active part in the fight.

Senator-elect William S. Vare of Pennsylvania scored in Philadelphia, where his campaign manager, Harry A. Mackey, was elected mayor, defeating J. Hampton Moore, Citizens' party candidate. But this may involve Mr. Vare in a new snafu fund scandal, for the Citizens' party council asserts that the Vare forces expended "approximately $1,000,000" and crowded the polls with watchers and workers, "some of whom not only intimidated voters but doled out copious allowances of $10 notes and dispensed liquid refreshments lavishly." Wherefore the council may seek to invalidate the election.

At this writing it appears certain that James Rolph, Jr., was re-elected mayor of San Francisco, defeating James E. Power.

Indianapolis has a new mayor, who will serve until 1930, when the city manager system goes into effect. He is L. Ert Slack, former United States district attorney, and he was elected by the city council to fill the unexpired term of John Duvall, who resigned after conviction of corrupt practices. Slack at times has served as an attorney for the Klan and for the Anti-Saloon league. He is personally a dry. His friends point out he is not a Klansman, and that his sole income has always been his legal fees.

It is being splattered all over the place down in Washington, where the grand jury is investigating the alleged attempts to fix the Fall-Sinclair jury or to subject the jurors to improper surveillance. William J. Burns, head of the detective agency whose operatives were employed by persons acting for the defense, sought to justify the actions of his men, asserting that the defense had the same right to shadow and observe juries as the prosecution has. An apparent attempt to start a back-fire was the charge made by Burns' men that a young assistant attorney general had had improper contact with one of the jurors, but this fell through. A. Mason Day and Sheldon Clark, Sinclair company officials who were charged with directing the operations of the detectives and receiving their reports, refused to testify before the grand jury as to who actually hired and paid the investigators and what relationship existed between them and Harry Sinclair. Both Day and Clark were arrested and held under bonds. Every Burns operative who was sent to Washington for the Teapot Dome job was quizzed by the government prosecutors in the effort to establish the identity of two strangers who approached Jurors J. J. Costinette and G. P. Grenfall, as related by those two men to the grand jury.

SEVERAL thousand residents of the Mississippi valley, with Mayor Thompson of Chicago and a big delegation of his admirers at their head, went to Washington and presented to the house committee their demands for comprehensive flood control legislation. Mr. Thompson, Governor Small of Illinois, Mayor O'Keefe of New Orleans and a number of others addressed the committee, and while no specific legislative program was proposed there was agreement among the speakers that the federal government must assume complete responsibility for the adoption of a program to avert future flood disasters on the Mississippi. Willingness was expressed for the most part to support whatever program might be recommended by the army engineers. There was insistence that other legislative projects, which might be attached to a Mississippi flood control bill, be kept separate.

While in the national capital Mayor Thompson reached an agreement with General Jadwin, army chief of engineers, in Chicago's water meter dispute with the government.

NEW ENGLAND'S floods, which spread death and disaster throughout several states, are subsiding, but the conditions in the stricken regions are so serious that President Coolidge and the Red Cross were asked to go to the rescue. Bitterly cold weather, impassable roads, shortage of food supplies and threatened outbreaks of pestilence combined to render the situation of the people desperate. About 150 lives were lost in the floods, and the damage to property probably will run far into the millions. Farmers lost great quantities of live stock and in many cases all their buildings were swept away. In cities and towns along the rivers the losses of both lives and property were heavy.

CONTRACTS calling for the construction of eight Atlantic cargo airplanes, similar to the one piloted across the Pacific to Hawaii by Lieutenants Maitland and Hegenberger, have been let by the War department. The planes will cost approximately $25,000 apiece. They are tri-motored monoplanes, with a capacity of ten persons to each plane.

FROM native sources comes the story of the heroic fight and tragic death of Lieut. E. A. Thomas and Sergt. Frank Dowdell, American marine aviators who were killed by Nicaraguan rebels several weeks ago. When their plane crashed they escaped unhurt and made their way toward Jicaró, capturing two prisoners whom they met. One of these men suddenly attacked one of the marines with a machete, severely wounding him. The other marine shot the rebel dead, but the other prisoner fled and carried word of the happening to Sandino. The outlaw leader sent a force that trapped the marines in a cave. In the desperate fight that followed the Americans killed a number of the guerrillas before they were themselves shot to death.

SOVIET RUSSIA celebrated the tenth anniversary of the Bolshevik revolution with great demonstrations in Moscow and other cities. In the capital a wild, cheering throng of a million men, women and children marched through the streets, passing before the tomb of Lenin, on which stood President Kallin of the soviet union. Thirty thousand troops under General Voroshiloff took part in the parade. In Shanghai, China, and Harbin, Manchuria, the White Russians staged counter demonstrations and there were bloody encounters between the two factions, which were finally ended by the consular guards.

SEYMOUR PARKER GILBERT, the American agent general for reparations payments, scolded the German federal states recently for their lax administration of finances, and part of the German press and public was greatly offended by what was considered dictatorial interference. Especially was Bavaria angered, and that state and Wurttemberg threatened to separate from the German republic and join Austria. It developed later that Mr. Gilbert issued his warning at the instigation of the government in Berlin to open the way to administrative reform and financial economies. Chancellor Marx planned a trip to Munich to calm down the Bavarians.

FRANCE has arranged for the disposal of $75,000,000 in government 5 per cent bonds to the Swedish Match company and thus will be enabled to retire the balance of the 8 per cent Morgan loan of 1920. Financiers in Paris believe the Swedish concern expects sooner or later to get the very lucrative French match monopoly. From the start the Swedes will win important commercial advantages by the deal. The French agree to buy millions of francs worth of match-making machinery, which the Swedes alone manufacture, in the hope of trying to make a good thing out of the monopoly, the potential value of which is evident from the fact that everybody in the world wants to exploit it.

GEN. ARNULFO GOMEZ, Presidential candidate in Mexico, and chief of the late insurrection, was captured with a number of his supporters in the mountain region of the state of Vera Cruz by Gen. Gonzalo Escobar. Gomez and his nephew, Francisco Viscarra, were summarily tried by court-martial and executed. Later several of the military officers who had followed his fortunes were condemned and shot.

Generals Matus and Espinosa, leaders of the Yaqui Indians lately in rebellion against the Mexican government, have surrendered and with 600 of the Indians were taken to Mexico City. The Yaquis were lodged in barracks to await forced enlistment in various sections of the army. The entire tribe will be dispersed in accordance with the plans laid by General Obregon some time ago.

COLORADO'S coal-mine strike seems to be fizzling out, for the men have lost nearly all their leaders. Thirty of them were arrested by the state police in a concerted drive designed to put an end to illegal picketing, and though new leaders sprang up, the men appeared to have lost heart and were reported returning to work in considerable numbers. On the other hand there were stories of plots to storm the jails at Walsenburg and Pueblo and release the imprisoned agitators, and at the former place a mob of 400 strikers attacked a squad of state policemen and severely beat six National Guard officers.

MILLICENT ROGERS, daughter of Henry H. Rogers of New York, who recently divorced Count Salm von Hoogstraeten, was married last week to Arturo Peralta Ramos of Argentina. It was reported the bride received $500,000 from her father as a wedding gift. The couple sailed for the groom's home in South America.

ANOTHER wedding, of more interest in Europe, was that of Princess Anne of France, daughter of the duke of Guise, pretender to the throne of France, and Prince Amadeo Umberto, duke of Apulia and cousin of the king of Italy. The ceremony was performed in Naples and was witnessed by a brilliant gathering that included the kings of Italy and Spain and many members of the nobility.

Smart Frocks for Statuesque Women

Dresses That Are Flattering to Those Above Average in Height.

The Woman's Home Companion designer here presents two dresses smart in detail and flattering to those who are a bit above the average in height, whether slim or well rounded. The one shown at the left combines four important new style notes; it is collarless, it has a pointed yoke effect, it is a one-piece dress but looks like a two-piece and it has fullness below the knees. The unusual yoke and tie starts midway on the armhole from the shoulder, is stitched to the blouse part way and falls loosely down the front and ties at a becoming length. The fullness below the knees is achieved by means of soft gathers at the neckline where the skirt joins the blouse. The dress shown at the right is just as chic as its partner but in a different way. Here a deep collar with wide revers ends in a little vest while two gathered ties on the front of the skirt tend to shorten the silhouette. Either of these dresses would be smart made of crepe faille, a soft canton satin-back crepe or even one of the new sheer wool velvets or georgettes or a very soft jersey.

Chic Dresses That Will Appeal to Women Who Are Tall.

Black Antelope Chosen for Two Charming Bags

Black antelope is chosen for two very new bags that have been copied from a recent Lanvin creation. The underarm model has scallops on the side and a hint of color in the jeweled clasp. The other model has a composition amber frame made in four sections. The frame, instead of following the plain straight stops, has twists and turns that eventually form two rings on each end, through which a finger may be poked in carrying. A horizontal strap handle is fastened in back. Inside light-colored moire is used for the lining fittings. The scallops all about—that is, at the sides and bottom—lend a smart touch and carry out the idea of curves seen in the frame.

Small pouches mounted on frames covered with either silk or velvet have corners of sterling silver set with marcasite and a square emerald. The same metal and stone combination is repeated on the pendant tab and the upstanding clasp.

Velvet Replaces Beading for New Evening Gowns

Velvet is replacing beaded dresses to quite an extent in evening fashions. The bead embroidered dress has by no means disappeared, but not every house shows the extensive choice of models that would have been on view several months ago.

Chinese embroidery has taken the place of beads with some of the biggest houses. The new velvets, for formal evening wear, occupy a large part of every collection. The beautiful metal fabrics also are supplanting beads in the evening styles.

Suede-like Fabrics Are in Fashion Limelight

Duvetyn and kindred suede-like fabrics are in more evidence than usual this season.

For the outdoor sports costume it has always had an important place. But Paris dressmakers are using it this season for the jackets of three-piece sports costumes, for sleeveless sweaters and for the trimming on cloth dresses. Milliners also show a revived interest in materials of this type. They are most seen in brown, dark green and bright blues.

Pearls and Brilliants With Square Cut Gems

This is the season of jewels which glitter and pearls, the favorite for many seasons, are now second in favor to diamonds and brilliants of all kinds.

Square-cut gems often are inserted as the keystones in pearl necklaces, under the new influence. Necklaces of rhinestones are fashionable and much old paste jewelry is coming out of hiding places to be refashioned to modern requirements.

Tan Pony Coat Is Among Fashions of the Season

A prominent motion picture actress poses for the purpose of showing this handsome light tan pony coat with light brown border, collar and cuffs. The cuffs are bell-shaped.

Length of Skirt as It Is Prescribed by Worth

Two fingers in a washtub are not more potent than four fingers on the bottom of a woman's skirt—or off of it—in the opinion of Monsieur Jacques Worth.

As president of the Association of French Dressmakers, and head of the house of Worth, granddaddy of fashion-houses, the opinion of Monsieur Worth is listened to in Paris. Day skirts, this season, he says, should be four fingers below the knee. Evening skirts find their own level by dint of their draperies and general style, and are longer.

M. Worth's placement of hems is somewhat higher than some other Paris designers. At the length he sets below the knee as proper, women with pretty legs need have no fear that they will be prevented from displaying them. For those who haven't, or believe in hidden charm, there are plenty of authorities willing to add several more fingers to the length below the knee.

Waistlines are officially placed nearer the normal than they have been for many seasons, by the president of the French dressmakers. He makes no definite rule for them as he does for hems.

Fashion Hints That Will Interest Women Who Care

Nutria, krimmer and Persian lamb are among the fashionable furs that have followed fox in the fall running.

Chanel's beaded tissue evening dresses are fashion leaders. Crepe satin, especially black, heads the list of smart and useful materials.

The skull cap, completely covering the coiffure, is a Paris favorite. Molyneux is among those who indorse printed chiffon for evening. Printed velvets also have standing.

The tweed hat bearing the Descat label is an exceedingly smart affair. The velvet, heavily furled evening wrap is the season's favorite, although handsome lame brocades are by no means passe.

Your new hat must be draped to your head and carefully fitted. The side flare and the pointed panel offer possibilities for graceful, uneven hemlines.

Sashes Are Reinstated by Paris Dressmakers

The new "little girl" frocks, which are not for children but grown-up versions of the flaring skirted dresses with normal waistlines, often have broad sashes tied around them. Not many grown-ups are slender enough to wear the style, but there are a few Paris dressmakers with very special clientele who are pushing it. Sometimes the sash is a wide taffeta ribbon. Often it is of the same soft material as the dress. Satins, chiffons and crepe de chine are all used for the sash dresses.

Hint of Greek Draping in Some Winter Models

There is more than a hint of Greek draping in some of the winter models which Paris is praising.

Paton has a conspicuous example of flowing lines in a dress for evening made of black chiffon. A bertha effect is extended into a scarf which hangs from the right shoulder in a long forward falling drape. There is also a suggestion of drapery in the chiffon skirt which hangs much longer on the left side than it does on the right. A jewel of aquamarine holds the scarf in place on the shoulder.

Black Coats With Badger

One of the smartest combinations of fur and fabric is seen in the new coats of fine black broadcloth luxuriously trimmed with badger.

Are You Left-Handed?

The Left-Handed Man Was Highly Honored in Those Days

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

ARE you left-handed? And if you are, do your friends look upon you as being—well, just a bit "queer" because you're different, even in this little respect, from the rest of humanity?

If you are, and they do, don't let it bother you. For, instead of left-handedness being something to be concerned about, it's something over which you can be just a bit proud. Here's one reason: away back in ancient times a left-handed man was considered "the darling of the gods" and he was frequently honored with high office for no other reason than that he was one of these "darlings of the gods," the evidence of which being the fact that he was left-handed. So, although you may not believe in gods, as did the ancients, if you have any faith in Lady Luck, or any of the other members of the modern pantheon which we know by a variety of names, all having to do with luck or chance, you might well allow yourself to believe that these modern gods will smile upon you because you're a "south-paw," even as the ancient deities did in the olden days.

And you can tell your friends, too, that you have illustrious company in your left-handedness. The Pharaohs are said to have been left-handed, as were the greater Caesars—and they were rather important people in their times. Alexander the Great, who conquered the world, did it with his good—not right but—left arm, for history records that he grasped his trusty sword with his left hand. Then there was Charlemagne, the patron of scholars, who, when he did any writing at all, grasped his pen in his left hand. Surely these are notables with whom you wouldn't be ashamed to claim left-handed kinship!

But to get down to more modern times—which would you rather be, one of the host of right-hand pitchers in the major leagues or one of that more exclusive group of diamond stars, such "port-wheelers" as Willie Sberdel of the St. Louis Cardinals, one of the heroes of the 1926 world's series, or Herb Pennock, the hero of the 1927 championship battle, or Babe Ruth, who was a left-handed pitcher before he deserted the slab to become the "Sultan of Swat"? Of course, one of the earliest of the great south-paws, "Rube" Waddell, is still remembered as one of the "queerest" players in baseball history. But the fact remains that he was one of the truly great slab artists of all time, so it doesn't matter whether he was "queer" because he was left-handed or left-handed because he was "queer."

As a matter of fact a lot of this belief about the "queerness" of left-handed people is mere superstition, after all. To get at the explanation of left-handedness and some of the phenomena, such as the so-called "mirror" or reversed handwriting, connected with it, it is necessary to go back to the earliest day of the genus homo. In the day of the cave man neither right nor left hand had preferred usage and modern excavations have brought to light just as many implements fashioned for left-hand use as for right-hand. When the cave man desired to set down his thoughts in picture writing, it was done with either hand.

More than that, the writing was from right to left quite as often as it was from left to right. And this survived to a much later day for a form of writing, called "boustrophedon," used in early Greek and Latin inscriptions, often showed every other line written right to left in mirror fashion, that is, it would resemble left-to-right writing if reflected in a mirror.

The increasing usage of the right hand in preference to the left came about as primitive methods of warfare developed. The left hand and arm were used to hold the shield over the heart to guard it from a fatal thrust and the sword or spear was wielded in the right. Since the nerve fibers which govern the right arm and right leg (you remember from the study of physiology in school, of course, about this "crossing over" in the nervous system) are located in the left side of the brain, that side of the brain, being more active, became highly developed and the right side of the brain, controlling the left side of the body, accordingly became less highly developed. So as time went on men became not only right-handed and right-legged and right-footed but right-eyed as well (that is to say, the vision in the right eye became keener than in the left). The skin also became more sensitive on the right side and the senses of touch, taste and smell became more acute on that section.

Along with this greater development on the right side there began to grow up a certain amount of superstition. It included the old paganistic Roman custom of putting the right foot forward at the beginning. From this custom originated the saying, which persists to this day, about "putting your best foot forward," the best foot being, of course, the right. This superstition is responsible also for the fear which many people have of entering a room with the left foot forward.

Despite the fact that most people are right-handed, approximately one out of every twenty-five is a "throwback" to the primitive days when all were ambidextrous and these four per cent persist in being left-handed. Just why they are left-handed science has never yet been able to explain satisfactorily. One of the curious evidences of this "throwback" is the tendency toward the so-called "mirror" or reversed writing, although not all left-handed persons have that tendency.

A short time ago one of the news pictures which was widely published in this country was that of Willie Cosens of London, Eng., a six-year-old boy who was described as "suffering from a rare ailment. He is physically normal, but because of a peculiar development of the brain he writes backwards, beginning at the right side of the paper and writing all the letters the wrong way round." As a matter of fact Willie's habit of writing his name "anesoc malliuv" (only the letters themselves are also reversed) is not a "rare ailment" at all. It is rather common, as the testimony of Dr. Robert Kingman of Brooklyn, N. Y., a physician who has made a special study of "mirror" writing, will show. He says:

In nearly every school there are several left-handed first graders who will annoy their teachers and alarm their parents by insisting on writing words backward, as "appa" for "apple." They may also copy numbers backward, as "234" for "432." Unfortunately there are many teachers and parents who stigmatize such a child as "feebled-minded" or "queer." They ridicule him and force him to write with his right hand only. Many girls and boys are afflicted with stuttering and other nervous disorders from just such coercion. If allowed to use their left hand they could learn to write the conventional way and later become ambidextrous.

Ambidexterity is advisable as a means to promote symmetrical development of body and mind. Bimanual dexterity is of practical advantage to ball players, carpenters and surgeons. The hero of the western movie thriller always saves his fair lady with two-handed gun play, and there seems sound reason for the belief that two-handed facility would serve equally well in real life.

As a matter of fact, mirror writing is the easiest and most natural movement for any untrained person who holds a pen in the left hand. This is true because outward movements are easier than inward movements. I know personally of numbers of cases where adults of high intelligence reverted to mirror writing unconsciously at some period of their life.

According to Doctor Kingman, there are two different centers for the act of writing as for all other muscular movements. One is partially suppressed by modern habit and often tries to work at the same time as the other. When the child tries to learn a skilled movement with the right hand he cannot prevent the left hand from following with the same movement. So the left hand when it produces mirror writing uses muscle movements that are natural because the brain centers for mirror writing unconsciously are formed symmetrically with those for the right hand. Because our system of education is one-sided the mirror-writing centers in the right brain are suppressed but they are potentially available just the same. They crop out in the left-handed person but that is not a sign of "queerness" at all. It is simply the "throwback."

If your child is left-handed, don't try to "break him of it," encourage him to use his right hand more, to become ambidextrous, thus promoting that "symmetrical development of body and mind" of which Doctor Kingman speaks.

MOSES SAID "YES" FOR HER

(By D. J. Walsh.)

AT THE sound of wheels Amelia Ballard's lips tightened and her eyes followed more closely her flying crochet needle. In the mirror opposite—she had placed it there on purpose—she could see Judge Fane getting out of his car, going up the front steps of his house across the street. As usual, she sat at the window, the curtains wide apart, and pretended to be unaware of his existence. It was her only comeback. Yet she sighed.

Amelia was fifty and a pretty woman, although the gold lights in her hair had given place to silver, and there were few lines about her brown eyes. She lived alone in a house much too large for her upon an income much too small for even a frugal soul who thought love was done and all the future held for her was an endless succession of baby booties crocheted at 23 cents the pair. Some days she earned nearly a dollar. The dollar went to pay taxes. For Amelia was determined that Judge Fane, whom she had loved always, should not see her ousted from the home where she had once lived in plenty.

She smiled at the sound of the door he slammed in manlike exasperation at her indifference. But the smile faded as she heard another sound—a prolonged caterwauling from the back yard. Flinging aside her work, she dashed from the house. Moses, the great gray cat which was her sole companion, was tethered to the clothesline. More than ordinarily he was objecting to restraint. When she attempted to soothe him he hissed, spit and made strange, resentful sounds in his throat. His eyes burned upon her like two incandescent lights.

"Oh, dear," moaned Amelia, "if I let him loose he will start straight for the judge's house. He acts possessed to get over there. The judge's housekeeper, that horrid old Mrs. Pease, gives him—chicken. I can't permit it. And yet if I continue to keep him fastened up here he will hate me. Oh, Moses, darling! Be reasonable. Can't you understand that you are all I've got left?" Amelia's sweet voice trembled. She reached out an appealing hand, offering caress. Moses flew upon her, bit her finger, left an ugly red scratch upon her slender wrist. She gave a cry of hurt and dismay. Then with a desperate swiftness of movement she snatched off her apron, threw it over his head, unfastened his collar and let him go free. With long leaps Moses raced across the street.

Amelia sat down upon the back steps and stared long and hard into the distance. It was fully ten minutes before she was able to go in and apply iodine to her wounds.

Moses did not return until bedtime. He came home looking fat and fit with traces of cream on his whiskers. No, he did not care for supper, thank you. And he was cold to his mistress. She in her turn could not forget that he had deserted her for that judge's chicken dinner. But she decided to let him take his freedom as he would.

Next morning Moses again disappeared before breakfast. Amelia missed him dreadfully. When one is intolerably lonesome even a cat is company. After lunch she took her basket of finished work clear across the town and up the hill to the house of Mrs. Birch, who employed her.

"You needn't hurry the next dozen pairs," Mrs. Birch said as she rather grudgingly counted out $2.76 in change. "There doesn't seem to be the call for booties there has been. Do you know this, Miss Ballard," she looked hard into Amelia's troubled brown eyes with her aghast greenish-gray ones, "I should think you could find some real work to do if you need it. Like housekeeping, now. Take Mrs. Pease, right in your own neighborhood. She has been with Judge Fane ever since his wife died. And see what he pays her. Fifteen dollars a week! Her board alone would come to that. I've heard they have chicken three times a week and fresh cream every day."

Amelia laughed. But she walked away with her pitiful basket, her cheeks aflame, her heart like a chunk of ice in her breast. She had $2.76 in her purse. And the taxes were due. Suppose she should not be able to pay the taxes? Why, they would sell her property as they had sold old Jenny Waters'. But the hurt that smarted worst came from her inability to persuade Mrs. Birch that she was crocheting booties for parttime merely. Mrs. Birch had perceived Amelia's desperate need.

"Oh, if only my folks had trained me to be something besides a parlor ornament," she thought. "Of course they couldn't foresee that I shouldn't consent to marry where I didn't love, or that father's wonderful investments were to become worthless paper, leaving me poor and helpless. Times change and I haven't changed with them."

She went round her house by the shaded path that led to the back door. On the steps sat a stout elderly man with twinkling blue eyes full of humor and sound sense and keen wisdom. A pair of crutches rested beside him. Upon his knee was the wheedling Moses.

"I brought him home, Amelia," said the judge. "He hung on to my shoulder while I limped along on crutches. Pretty near broke my leg this morning falling off a stepstair while I was trying to get a dish I wanted off the top shelf of the cupboard. You see, I'm limping home alone today. Mrs. Pease has left me—went yesterday to visit her daughter."

"I am sorry," Amelia replied stiffly. "The judge picked up his crutches, pushed Moses off his knee and arose. He looked at Amelia's cold face and turned away. "Here, go back to your missus," commanded the man.

Amelia gave a hard, dry sob. "I don't want him," she cried. "You can have him. Take him home with you and keep him—if he'll stay."

"He won't," said the judge. "He'll be running back and forth. There are too many cars. He's clumsy. He'll be killed." He gave Amelia a penetrating look. "Why don't you come, too, Amelia? Then Moses will be contented."

Amelia flung up her proud head. "Thank you! I don't want to be your housekeeper," she flashed out.

"My housekeeper, eh?" The judge spoke softly. "I never thought of such a thing. I want you to be my wife—my dear!"

When a man proposes in a voice that has won a hundred cases, when he looks forlorn and in need of love and sympathy, no wonder a woman's heart falters. Moses leaped upon Amelia. "Yes! Yes! Yes!" he yowled. She picked him up and hid her happy face in his fur.

Proof That It Pays to Use Good Material

Under ordinary conditions construction materials such as are used in the building, transportation and utility industries will last forever, says Cecil F. Elmes, Chicago engineer, who has studied depreciation.

"Frame and stucco are thought of as perishable building materials, yet Ann Hathaway's cottage at Stratford-on-Avon, England, Shakespeare's sweetheart, made of them, is in perfect condition today.

"We talk as if a brick building would do well to last a century. My own boyhood was spent in an old priory, near the country home of Wolsey, the great cardinal. The brick cellars were old when Wolsey was born. Wolsey is dead 400 years and the cellars are as good today as when they were built.

"And even this does not remotely indicate the endurance of common brick, for across eastern Asia stretches the Great wall of China, much of it brick, 1,500 miles long and 2,000 years old. The copper roof of the cathedral of Notre Dame has stood for 700 years. There are wrought iron floor beams still in service in Ceylon 1,200 years old.

"Few people would credit a tile roof with as much as half of a century of life. Yet the tile roofs of Oxford university are 500 years old. The whole study of Assyriology comes down to us in the form of writing on clay tablets, done by fine incisions, as with a knife, as clear and sharp today as if they had been done yesterday. Our knowledge of civilization, dating back 7,000 years, rests on the extraordinary endurance of common tile."

Neglect, lack of use and the destructive effect of the actinic rays in sunlight, says Mr. Elmes, are the principal causes of decay and deterioration. Of these he classes sunlight as the most destructive.

Business and Art

When human beings went in for profit-making, that was supposed to put an end to all their fine qualities. Beauty could mean nothing to them after that. Art could mean nothing. The only thing that could have any meaning, supposedly, was profits; and in the pursuit of profits, men could be depended upon to denude the nation of all that was true and beautiful and good and turn it into a reeking dump of ugliness and dirty dollars.

Somehow, it hasn't turned out quite that way. Prosperity has not destroyed America's beauty spots; and modern industry, instead of strangling art, has stimulated it in many ways.—Forbes Magazine.

Nothing Doing

A young reporter was sent out by the city editor of one of the Rochester papers to report a meeting.

About two hours after the assignment was made the young reporter returned with the sad countenance.

The city editor told him to get the report up immediately, as it was nearing time to go to press.

"There will not be any report on that meeting," was the answer.

"Why not?" queried the city editor. "There was no meeting," replied the young reporter. "It broke up in a big row, and the chairman was chucked under the table."—Rochester Democrat-Chronicle.

Drinks in Other Lands

Sake is the most common distilled liquor of the Japanese; it is made entirely of rice. Kvass is a sour beer made of barley and rye by a maiting process similar to that used in the manufacture of beer; it is a Russian drink, much favored by the Russian peasantry. Soma, probably the earliest known intoxicant, is carefully brewed by the Hindus from the milky sap of the climbing bindweed. It is highly revered by the people of Persia and India, who consider it a beverage of the gods.

If Kidneys Act Bad Take Salts

Says Backache Often Means You Have Not Been Drinking Enough Water

When you wake up with backache and dull misery in the kidney region it may mean you have been eating foods which create acids, says a well-known authority. An excess of such acids overworks the kidneys in their effort to filter it from the blood and they become sort of paralyzed and loggy. When your kidneys get sluggish and clog you must relieve them, like you relieve your bowels, removing all the body's urinous waste, else you have backache, sick headache, dizzy spells; your stomach sour, tongue is coated and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment, channels often get sore, water scalds and you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night.

Either consult a good, reliable physician at once or get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize acids in the system, so they no longer irritate, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, cannot injure and makes a delightful, effervescent lithia-water drink. Drink lots of soft water.

Why I Love America

Now ask me why I love America! Such homes as mine are to be found all the country over and they are what make it a great country. Every boy scout has these loved ones that he prizes above all others. For these we would gladly give our lives, for all our souls are brave and unselfish. Being unselfish we are not only interested in the happiness of our loved ones, but we are determined to see that every other family is just as happy as our own.—Lieut. Belvin W. Maynard in Boys' Life.

Don't Ask for Perfection

Children who get the idea that it is a sign of weakness to admit any failure or fault are being prepared for a whole series of lies. No one can maintain such a standard; none of us is perfect. Yet there are parents who hold up before their children impossible notions of how exalted the position of the family is; no member of it has any defect. Fathers cherish the reputation for the perfection to preserve it; mothers are smotherish and filled with false pride. It is far better to face one's defects honestly. To be a hypocrite is to be a liar.—Winthrop D. Lane in Delinquent Magazine.
