SCHOOL NOTES

DEBATING

In the third debate of the season which was held last Thursday evening Pinckney won from Belleville. The judges gave Pinckney a unanimous decision, giving her first place in thought and composition and also first place in delivery. This is the third straight decision that Pinckney has won in debating this year. The local team was composed of Helen Feidler, Loretta Dillingham, and Raymond Ledwidge.

The local team will take part in one more debate this season. On Feb. 27 they will go to Fenton to meet the team of that school. Fenton is a class B school in a town of over three thousand people. They have won all of their debates this year by a unanimous decision. The local team can hardly be expected to win from Fenton.

Reports have just come to the office which show that Fenton had one of the best teams in the state last year, having placed high in both the preliminary and elimination debates. Fenton's team is composed of the same speakers as last year.

All classes in school are receiving preparation for the first semester tests, which will be held next week. One of Pinckney's former graduates and prominent athletes called at the school last week and left ten dollars to be used in developing the community hall.

PHILATHEANS MEET

Mrs. Fred Bowman was hostess to the Philatheans at their regular meeting last Wednesday afternoon. The radio furnished entertainment while comfort was being tied. Following the business and devotional meetings a bountiful potluck supper was served.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Wales Leland, Wednesday, Feb. 8th.

SOCIETY MEETS

The Women's Missionary Society met at the home of Mrs. Brown for the closing meeting of 1927. Officers were elected. Also the very interesting study book was finished. The first meeting of the new year will be at the home of Mrs. Wegener Jan. 26th at 2:30 P. M. Topic: "The Church and a Christian America." Varied programs will be taken up throughout the year. Ladies, please come out to these meetings and make it the best year of this society.

TO BE GIVEN TOXIN

Arrangements are being made to have all children Schick tested, who have received the three doses of toxin-antitoxin.

For the sake of conserving time, it will be necessary to group the schools, as soon as details can be completed, the teacher in each school district will be notified of the place and time when the children of her school will be given the test.

Last winter more than two thousand children in this county were given three doses of toxin-antitoxin, and every effort will be made to see that they have an opportunity for having the Schick test to determine whether or not they are immune from diphtheria or whether another series of treatments will be necessary.

In the case of the children who prove not to be immune, the parents will be notified, so that they can have the toxin-antitoxin repeated by their family physician.

NOTICE

The King's Daughters will hold a musical matinee at the Masonic hall, Wednesday afternoon Jan. 25th commencing at 2:30 o'clock. Admission 35 cents. Everybody

Letters accompanied most of these donations which we are unable to publish on account of lack of space. All stated that they were in favor of the project and glad to be able to help make it a success. For the benefit of our readers we are publishing the letter of Col. George who owns a 1500 acre estate just west of town.

The job of painting a new curtain for the stage and also back curtains and scenery has been let to Jay Allen of Elkhart, Ind. former Pinckneyite who happened along as usual just when he was needed. The old curtain will be probably sold to the highest bidder. We are informed that the bid of Dr. C. L. Sigler is the highest one received so far. If any other people desire the curtain they had better get their bids in.

Attention Committee:
Norman Reason
P. W. Curlett
C. H. Kennedy

Gentlemen: Confirming my conversation yesterday with Mr. Reason I am pleased to enclose herewith my check for $100.00 as a contribution toward the purchase of the Opera House as a Community Hall.

I shall also be very glad indeed some time next May, when I have returned from Spain, to give a lecture in this hall showing them my pictures on India, which I consider one of the most interesting countries I have ever visited, or possibly some of the pictures which were made when the George Expedition made the journey from Cairo to Cape, through the interior of Africa, 800 miles of which we were obliged to walk.

The pictures of India give an unusually fine illustration of the life of these very interesting people, and also includes views of some of the magnificent temples and shrines, as well as scenery of the country in general. These pictures of India represent about 2,000 ft. of motion pictures and 175 colored lantern slides. The African pictures give general views of the country and the natives and their customs, which, of course, represent a very primitive people and a very primitive mode of living.

I want to congratulate the people of Pinckney on making possible a Community House of this kind for the use of the young people. While I am not a resident of Pinckney, I do own some land in the near vicinity and, therefore, I am naturally interested in the community welfare.

Yours very truly,
Edwin S. George.

TWO GAMES PLAYED FRIDAY

The Pinckney Community Hall was opened last Friday evening to the public, two games of basketball being played. The alumni won from the high school in the opener by a score of 14 to 11. This game was fast and close from start to finish and the result was in doubt up to the last minute. Lefty Reason led the high school scorers with four field goals and Henry the alumni with three.

In the second game the Pinckney Independents got away to a poor start in the game with the Flazing Arrow team of Ann Arbor and were on the short end of a 17 to 3 score at the end of the first half. In the third quarter they braced and held Ann Arbor scoreless and in the last half scored six points to Ann Arbor's four. The final score was Pinckney 11 and Ann Arbor 21. There will be another double header tonight, the high school playing the Madison Reserves and the Independents taking on the Madison first team, both of the teams are from Ann Arbor. The Independents play the Chelsea M. E. church team here on Jan. 27, and at Chelsea on Jan. 31. Byron comes here on Feb. 3 and Pinckney goes there on the 10th. Other games will be scheduled and it is planned to have one home each week. Below are the lineups for the two games.

WHERE MAN CAME FROM

By F. A. WALKER

IF YOU read the religious advertising you have perhaps come across a series of announcements with a heading, "The Origin of Man."

Not all religious advertising is interesting, although it should be, but this particular series arouses curiosity and leads to thinking.

The origin of man has been a subject of discussion and thought ever since the first man began to wonder "Where did I come from?" Science has delved deep into the question, theologians have written libraries about it and the nonbeliever, in anything but chance, has smiled in a self-satisfied way at the wide diversity of those who would attribute and place the real source of man.

One thing is certain, if anything can be certain, man did not HAPPEN. He was not the result of chance.

The thirteen elements which are associated in the flesh and bones and muscles and tissues did not happen to fall together.

And if they had by chance come together it would not account for the brain, the intelligence and the power of reason which characterize the human being above the lower forms of life.

The book of Genesis tells us that man was made in the image and likeness of the Creator. Elsewhere in the Scriptures we are told that God is Spirit.

The associating of the two statements would result in the statement that the creation of God was spiritual and not material.

Whatever his origin, man is the apex, the pinnacle of all existing things. History is made up only of what he has done. Science is made up wholly of what he has discovered. All law is the summarization of what he has determined as the right basis of conduct. All revelation consists of what he believes he shall be.

Nor does it matter so much, if at all, from whence we came. You do not ask whether the keystone of the arch was quarried in the valley or on the mountain. You only ask if it be worthy to bear the burden put upon it.

That is the most important question regarding man. Has he and is he proving himself worthy of that power of dominion which, if he does not believe, he has almost universally assumed?

The question is one which may be applied to mankind as a whole no more justly than each of us may apply it to himself.

Some Quacks

By VIOLA BROTHERS SHORE

FOR THE GOOSE—

NEVER lie about your inmost thoughts. But never tell the truth about them, neither.

An unbecoming hat lasts the longest.

Funny, ain't it, the more you take away from a hole the bigger it grows and the more you give of yourself, the richer you get.

Learnin' will never hurt you none. Even lessons from a forger can't do you no harm if you don't use 'em.

FOR THE GANDER—

A man that acts like he don't know nothin' might not be dumb—on'y housebroke.

Even if a paper boat don't sink, it will.

You can't expect logic from a hungry man. Or from a hungry woman. Or from a woman that ain't hungry.

If you learn to expect nothing, and like it, life can't do much to you.

Good Things to Eat

By NELLIE MAXWELL

A WHOLESOME dessert which will be enjoyed by the children, is: Butterscotch Pudding.

Melt one cupful of brown sugar and two tablespoonfuls of butter, cook until brown in an iron frying pan, using care not to burn. Pour over the mixture two cupfuls of hot milk and simmer until dissolved. Meanwhile soak a one-inch slice of bread in cold water until soft, squeeze out and crumble into bits.

Pour the milk over the bread, add two beaten egg yolks, a bit of salt, and a spoonful of vanilla. Pour into a buttered baking dish and bake in a pan of water for twenty-five minutes. Cover with a meringue, using the egg whites beaten until stiff, adding two tablespoonfuls of powdered sugar. Brown in a moderate oven.

Scalloped Salmon.

Make an ordinary white sauce using two tablespoonfuls each of butter and flour and one cupful of milk. Flake one can of salmon and add to it one finely shredded green pepper and cook gently. Cut up ripe olives rather coarsely—six or eight, according to size or taste. Just before serving add a few walnut meats, cover with buttered crumbs and brown.

Pineapple Rice.

Cook one-half cupful of rice in two quarts of boiling water until tender, but unbroken. Drain, blanch with cold water. Cut two cupfuls of sliced pineapple into small pieces. Beat one cupful of heavy cream until stiff. Fold the cream and pineapple into the rice. Serve in sherbet cups garnished with maraschino cherries.

Dumplings With Steak.

Season well a steak which has been well browned in a hot frying pan on both sides. Cover with boiling water and drop on top of the meat any good dumpling mixture. Drop by teaspoonfuls on the steak and cover tightly. Let cook for ten to twelve minutes, according to size.

Franconia Potatoes.

Cook potatoes in boiling water for fifteen minutes, drain and place around the roast, basting often with the roast.

The Happy House

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

HOW happy any house could be

That had a happy family—A house that had the sort of folk Who spoke with kindness when they spoke.

Or, if unkindness they recall, Think twice before they speak at all And what a happy house the one Where all came home when day was done.

To tell the pleasant things today They heard and saw at work and play And not come home their burts to shout.

With something to complain about, How happy any house would seem The kind of house that mothers dream.

Where each would do his proper part, And do it with a willing heart, And not expect just one or two To wait on them, like some folk do.

How happy any house would grow If those within would make it so, Not envy others, but be glad For everything their own house had.

How happy any house could be—And, more than that, how easily.

About Discoveries

By JOHN BLAKE

IT IS no disparagement of Christopher Columbus to say that if he had not discovered America in 1492, somebody would have discovered it a very few years thereafter.

After men had learned to sail the ocean, the great Western continent could hardly have escaped notice for any great length of time.

The Columbus situation was admirably expressed by a Briton touring North America, who said after he had crossed the continent that the remarkable thing would have been if Columbus hadn't discovered America. But the Genoese was at least seeking a new land, and he made all the sacrifices and suffered all the privations that are necessary to really great exploits.

Some of the more important discoveries in the world—the men who have isolated disease germs, and found means to destroy them—were not always looking for exactly what they found.

But they were looking for the same sort of thing—for micro-organisms of one kind or another, and they deserve all the credit which they gained.

There are now no more continents to discover, and only a few more tracts of land on the globe remain to be explored and charted.

Look at a modern map and you will find that the region around the poles which are left white, or dimly defined are very small.

But discoveries will be at work for all time, and we shall never be able to set a limit on their achievements.

In the department of human affliction, their work is only a little more than a century old, as far as scientific knowledge is concerned, and not until every tiny animated creature which preys on the human or brute system is discovered and circumvented, will the work be complete.

It is within the memory of most men living that a way to use electricity for the aid of men was discovered, although Franklin learned that the lightnings were composed of it, and found a way to bring some of it to earth from the clouds and imprison it.

The day will probably come—perhaps within the next hundred years—when the forces of nature, developing water and wave power will supply all the heat we need, and it will no longer be necessary to dig into the land for coal.

We have learned to fly, but not yet to fly around the world in a continuous flight. That will come—perhaps sooner than we think.

Some Columbus may now be on the track of the way to accomplish it. The last discoverer of all will teach us the utility of war and wrangling and selfishness, after he has discovered a way to make men listen to reason, and behave intelligently.

Neither you nor I will ever know his name, for he will be a long time in coming, perhaps a thousand years.

But if the evils of disease can be tamed, and the face of the earth mapped and charted, surely the mind of man can be plumbed, and the reasons it behaves as it does fathomed. Then it will be discovered how to make it what it ought to be.

Colorado's Distinction

Colorado is known as the Mountain State of the Union. Of the 53 named peaks of the United States (exclusive of Alaska) which exceed 14,000 feet in height, Colorado has 42, California 12, and Washington 1. There are, probably, at least five more peaks of this altitude in Colorado which remain unnamed. It is estimated that one-seventh of the state stands above 10,000 feet in altitude, that it contains at least 350 peaks above 11,000 feet, 220 above 12,000 feet, 150 above 13,000 feet and 47 above 14,000 feet.

Versatile Pumpkin

"The pumpkin, or pompon," we read in Peter's General History of Connecticut, 1781, "is one of the greatest blessings and held sacred in New England. Of its meat is made beer, bread, custards, sauce, molasses, vinegar and, on Thanksgiving days, pies, as a substitute for what the blue laws brand as anti-Christian minced pie."—Boston Transcript.

A Bird Story for Children

By MARTHA MARTIN

SO WE can hear of some of the other birds in the world besides those we see. I'm going to tell you of still another Bird Talk they had in the zoo when they told each other who they were and some of their family ways.

"I think," the Sandman continued, "that it is nice to hear of different birds around different parts of the world just as it is nice to know of different people and of foreign lands and of interesting places.

"So I will tell you of some more of the birds' own stories about themselves.

"I," said the Grass Finch, "come from Australia. There I am a very popular cage bird. I am very, very small and dainty.

"We do not mind if we have very small quarters, and we do not mind if the little birdlings share the smallest of quarters with us.

"I mean by quarters the same as anyone would mean by speaking of their home. I do not mean money, of course you understand!

"Well, I have a gray head and I have a black throat and a black tail. The rest of my feathers are a mixture of tan and red and a dull yellow.

"My name," said another bird, "is the Black-Cheeked Love Bird, and I come from East Africa. I have soft black feathered cheeks.

"We welcome the little birds to the zoo. None of us are very strong, but we keep pretty well.

"We have green feathers and red throats and tan heads and our beaks are like the beaks of parakeets, only very small.

"I am the Brush-Bronze-Wing Pigeon from Eastern Australia, said the next speaker at the meeting.

"I come from Eastern Australia, as I've said, but you're hearing so many stories that I thought I would repeat that so that you are doubly sure of remembering it.

"I like low, swampy underbrush kind of country, and I can fly quickly.

"But I seldom do fly. I have green-brown wings with touches of green and orange. My breast is gray and slate blue in color, and I am supposed to be very pretty. I hope you all think so, too."

"And the birds all agreed that they did.

"I am the Java Sparrow," said the next one. "I am not very unusual.

"I have white cheeks and a black head and a little of my throat is black, too.

"My beak is pink and my body is of gray slate color, and folks say I'm nice looking.

"The little birdlings are born here in the zoo, too, for they think we have such a big, big home here."

"Dear me, dear me," said the Jackson Whydah bird, "I was afraid that there would not be time for me to tell my story.

"I come from British East Africa. I am black and I am very fat and puffed out and good-natured looking.

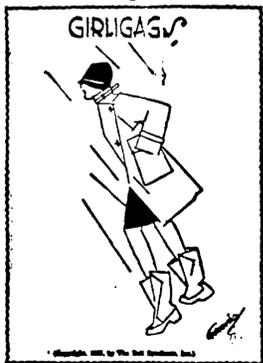

"I have brownish touches on my wings, and my tail is long and feathery as a nice tail should be, and is curved beautifully.

"It hangs down very far. I'm proud of the way my tail hangs down.

"Well, I believe the meeting is over, but even so, I will chirp, chirp, chirp."

"And the Jackson Whydah chirped, chirped, chirped," ended the Sandman.

GIRLHOOD TO MOTHERHOOD

Iowa Woman Found Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Always Helpful

Vinton, Iowa.—"When I was seventeen years old I had to stay at home from school. I finally had to quit school, I was so weak. I suffered for about two years before I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, then I picked up one of your books and read it. I began taking the medicine. Now I am a housekeeper with six children, and I have taken it before each one was born. I can't tell you all the good I have received from it. When I am not as well as can be I take it. I have been doing this for over thirteen years and it always helps me. I read all of your little books I can get and I tell everyone I know what the Vegetable Compound does for me."—Mrs. FRANK SULLANA, 510 7th Avenue, Vinton, Iowa.

Many girls in the fourth generation are learning through their own personal experiences the beneficial effects of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Mothers who took it when they were young are glad to recommend it to their daughters.

For over half a century, women have praised this reliable medicine.

Remedy for Myopia

Myopia, or short-sightedness, is a condition in which the rays from a distance are focused in front of the retina of the eyes, which results in the image being blurred. Such an eye is permanently focused for near objects, but may be corrected by the wearing of concave lenses which diverge the rays and in this way prevent their coming to a focus too soon.

ALFALFA ACRES MAKE DAIRY DOLLARS

That Alfalfa Acres make Dairy Dollars is quite evident by the expressions of the many farmers who have taken advantage of the alfalfa acres in the past few years.

New problems in the growing of alfalfa have presented themselves each year. In order that the farmers may get first hand information on the best methods of growing of alfalfa growing, also the very important relationship between alfalfa and dairying, an Alfalfa-Dairy program is scheduled for Livingston County for the week of February 6, 7, 8, 9, and 10th.

About sixteen will be scheduled in the various townships on these days, on both alfalfa and dairy problems. The day meetings will be held in the dairy barns on the various farms. These meetings should be of interest to all farmers interested in dairying or not.

The schedule of farms where the meetings will be held will be published very soon.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

More Marines Sent to Nicaragua—Government's Policy Attacked.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

THAT rebellion in Nicaragua whose head Uncle Sam cut off last year is still wriggling its tail vigorously enough to cause the United States government a lot of trouble. The tall consists of General Sandino and his band, who are holding out in Nueva Segovia, where the leader has set up a new "republic." A few days ago the American marines, in conjunction with the Nicaraguan constabulary, fought those rebels for several days and took the town of Quilali, but six marines were killed and many others wounded. Washington was aroused not only by this encounter but by adverse criticism of the administration's conduct of the Nicaraguan affair, and after the President had discussed it with the cabinet orders were issued for the immediate dispatch of 1,000 more marines to the scene of action. The reinforcements were gathered at Quantico, Paris Island, San Diego and Panama. At the same time it was announced that Brig. Gen. Logan Feland had been ordered to proceed to Nicaragua and take over command of operations there. The additions bring the force of marines in Nicaragua up to 2,415 men.

Secretary Kellogg, following a luncheon conference with the President, issued a formal statement announcing the government's intention to "co-operate with the constabulary of Nicaragua effectively to establish order throughout that country and make possible the holding of a free and fair election which we have undertaken to supervise."

The secretary reiterated that this government and Nicaragua consider the Sandino forces as bandits. "It will be recalled," Mr. Kellogg said, "that both sides agreed to lay down their arms and that they did so with the exception of a comparatively small body of men under Sandino, which has since been augmented by lawless elements."

When congress resumed its session on Wednesday the Democrats and some others at once opened their attack on the administration's Nicaragua policy. Senator Heflin of Alabama offered a resolution in the senate denouncing that policy and requesting the President to withdraw the marines immediately. Senator Nye of North Dakota presented another, declaring against the protection by the American government of investments of American citizens in foreign countries; and next day Senator Wheeler of Montana introduced a resolution for the appointment of a senate committee to investigate the American Nicaraguan policy.

In the house Bloom of New York offered a resolution calling on the secretary of state and the secretary of the navy to supply information concerning the recent bloody fight and the reasons why marines were sent to Nicaragua. Begg of Ohio defended the administration and engaged in a warm debate with Garrett, Huddleston and others.

Quilliam was Sandino's base, and its loss was a severe blow to the bandit leader. He is said to be concentrating his forces at El Chipote, a mountain stronghold, and the marines and Nicaraguan troops probably will attack him there.

SECRETARY OF STATE KELLOGG has answered the French note suggesting that France and the United States sign a treaty forever outlawing war between the two nations with a counter-proposal that the United States and France join in an effort to obtain the adherence of all the principal powers to a declaration renouncing war as an instrument of national policy in favor of the pacific settlement of international disputes. Mr. Kellogg's note makes it clear that the United States cannot consider the Briand proposal if it is construed to France and America, and that the United States will not enter any treaty binding this government never to go to war under any circumstances. Foreign Minister Briand promptly replied, asking for clarification of certain details of the Kellogg proposal, especially as to what would happen if the United States senate refused to ratify an arbitration award. He did not make serious objection to the idea of including all other nations, but that plan did not arouse his enthusiasm. He pointed out that the treaty must leave France free to execute its obligations to the League of Nations. European press comment on Kellogg's proposal was generally unfavorable.

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE transmitted to congress a letter from Secretary of the Navy Willbur, which he indorsed, asking the appointment of a commission of experts to investigate the disaster that befell the submarine S-4 and to make recommendations looking to the avoidance of similar accidents in the future. Identical joint resolutions carrying out the administration's recommendation were introduced by Senator Hale, chairman of the senate committee on naval affairs, and Representative Butler, chairman of the house committee. It was provided that the commission should consist of three civilians and two retired naval officers. Representative La Guardia of New York spent 36 hours on a submarine last week, and then announced that his experience had convinced him the navy had done everything possible in the S-4 disaster and that he would rise to the navy's defense in congress if the need arose.

Divers are beginning to recover the bodies of the victims of the S-4, although their operations are hampered by the extreme cold. Wednesday the first three bodies were brought to the surface and taken to the naval hospital at Chelsea, Mass. They were identified as those of Lieut. Commander R. K. Jones, Lieut. Joseph McGlinley and Chief Machinist's Mate Aaron A. Hodges. At the Charleston navy yard the naval court of inquiry was hearing testimony concerning the sinking of the submarine and the efforts to rescue the victims.

ALL doubt concerning the authenticity of the Mexican documents published by the Hearst papers was removed when handwriting experts employed by Hearst himself told the senate committee that the papers were undoubtedly spurious. They were sure the alleged signatures of President Calles were forged. Former Ambassador Sheffield testified that the embassy had not purchased or considered purchasing the documents offered it, and Miguel Avila, the half-breed, who procured the papers for Hearst, gave conflicting testimony.

COLONEL LINDBERGH'S air tour of Central America continued with great success and elation. He made a wonderful landing on a tiny field at Belize, British Honduras, and after a day there flew on to San Salvador. Two days there, and thence to Tegucigalpa, Honduras. On Thursday he hopped off for Managua, Nicaragua, avoiding so far as possible flying over the zone where the marines and the rebels are fighting. His route then was to Costa Rica and Panama, his arrival at the latter city being expected on Monday. Everywhere he was, as usual, welcomed by officials and enthusiastic populations and his collection of decorations was largely increased. An extraordinary honor was the issuance of a million special Lindbergh stamps by the Panama government.

Miss Ruth Nichols, a society girl of Rye, N. Y., made the first nonstop flight from New York to Miami. She was accompanied by Harry Rogers and Maj. M. K. Lee, and they covered the 1,200 miles in 12 hours. Half of the time Miss Rogers piloted the plane.

HANFORD MACNIDER has resigned as assistant secretary of war, effective January 12, and another Iowa is to succeed him. The President appointed Col. Charles Burton Robbins of Cedar Rapids to the post. Colonel Robbins is a close personal friend of MacNider and a former commander of the Iowa department of the American Legion. He served in both the Spanish-American and the World wars, and is now enrolled in the reserves. He was cited for gallantry in action in the Spanish-American war. While Mr. MacNider gave, as his reason for quitting, the need of looking after his personal business affairs, some of his friends in Iowa think he may seek the Republican vice presidential nomination this year or try for the United States senate in 1930.

WHEN Gov. Al. Smith delivered his annual message to the New York legislature—a long document declared by him to be his last—he took the opportunity to set forth his position on prohibition and law enforcement for the benefit of those of his fellow countrymen who are considering his possibility as a Presidential candidate. Ostensibly confining himself to New York state affairs, he discussed also water power, budget reform, agriculture and structural governmental changes. As for prohibition, he insisted it was the "sacred duty" of the state to sustain the eighteenth amendment and the Volstead act and reasserted that, so far as it was within his power, he would remove from office any public officer guilty of laxity in enforcement of the law. He said the failure of the Republican legislature of 1919 to submit to a popular referendum the question of ratifying the eighteenth amendment was "the direct cause of the unrest, uneasiness and dissatisfaction apparent in large portions of the state. It has gone further and been the prime cause of creating disrespect for the law among citizens who give the limit of obedience to every other regulatory statute ever enacted in the state or nation."

ORDERS entered by the United States Supreme court allowed the lake states, which seek to enjoin the diversion of Lake Michigan water at Chicago, 13 days in which to prepare and file briefs supporting their exceptions to the findings of Charles Evans Hughes, the court's special master in the lake level controversy. Thereafter, under the orders, the Chicago sanitary district and the state of Illinois, defending the water withdrawal for sanitary purposes, are to have 20 days in which to respond with reply briefs. As a result, it is practically certain that three months will elapse before the court hears oral arguments in the case.

THREE noted figures of the amusement world passed away last week. First of these was Lole Fuller, the famous dancer and friend of Queen Marie of Rumania. She died in Paris after an illness of two months. The others were Miss Emily Stevens, an actress, who had played leading roles in many plays, and Miss Dorothy Donnelly, actress and playwright. Charles M. Kittle, president of Sears, Roebuck & Co. and former vice president of the Illinois Central railroad, died in Chicago following an emergency operation. He was only forty-seven years old and had had extraordinary success in business.

PLANS just announced by the governing board of the Pan-American union contemplate the erection in Santo Domingo of the largest lighthouse in the world as a memorial to Christopher Columbus. It is to cost $4,000,000 and architects of all nations are invited to compete for the honor of designing it. Prizes totaling $50,000 will be distributed among the architects. Albert Kelsey of Philadelphia has been authorized to go to Santo Domingo to select the site and plan the competition. The Dominican government already has subscribed $300,000 to the fund, and other governments have indicated their willingness to participate.

IF AMERICANS thought they had a hard time during the week of extreme cold weather that prevailed over almost the entire country, they should contemplate the plight of the British. Over there they had a cold snap that was, relatively, as severe as ours, and then the deep blanket of snow that covered the island began to melt rapidly and much of the countryside was speedily under water. Cities and towns were flooded, communication was interrupted and there was widespread suffering.

FARM STOCK

CHOLERA SERUM WAS GREAT AID

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.) Comparatively light losses from hog cholera the last season are the consequence, experts of the United States Department of Agriculture believe, of wider and more intelligent use of anti-hog-cholera serum. To make more certain the correct use of serum, Dr. D. I. Skidmore, chief of the division in control of the manufacture of serums, has explained in Circular No. 11-C, "Comparative Values of Types of Anti-Hog-Cholera Serum," the differences between the three types of serum available for cholera prevention, namely, defibrinated-blood serum; clear, unconcentrated serum; and clear, concentrated serum. The value of each of these types as a preventive depends on the quality and quantity of true serum contained.

The concentrated serum contains 80 per cent of protective serum and the other two varieties 65 per cent each. Consequently, 100 volumes of the concentrated serum have as much preventive effect as 125 volumes of the unconcentrated or defibrinated-blood serums. With this known it is easy to calculate which offers the greater protection per dollar. The department, in supervising the manufacture of the serums, requires that each manufacturer specify the minimum dose of the serum he sells which should do the immunization in proper form. The doses vary with the quality of the serums and with the age and weight of the hogs to which it is administered.

The best time to immunize hogs, Doctor Skidmore says, is before they are eight weeks old. Larger pigs require larger and more expensive doses. An additional advantage is that younger pigs are handled more easily.

The clear, concentrated serum has the additional advantage of keeping its strength and preventive power for three years, while the unconcentrated serums are not considered reliable after two years. The added year of usefulness makes it easier for manufacturing laboratories to accumulate a supply sufficient for emergencies.

A copy of the circular may be obtained by writing to the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Silage Makes Baby Beef Production Profitable

In our strictly baby beef production cattle feeding our silo is a very important part of the equipment. By using silage we can have our calf crop come from four to six weeks earlier, says a McLean county (Ill.) writer in the Illinois Farmer. Fed on silage for two weeks previous to calving our cows, and particularly our heifers, deliver their calves and raise them as satisfactorily as they formerly did late in the spring when on good grass. These early calves are ready to wean first in the fall and learn to eat well before bad weather comes. In fact, they are in front all the way to market time.

We feed all the oats we raise on the farm, putting the threshed oats on the silage and also in the barn in the bundle. These threshed oats are fed in racks with a trough underneath to save the shattered grain from wasting.

Our system of baby beef production is the result of two generations of experience in the same game on the same farm. We have found it profitable and very interesting. Silage and alfalfa are two big items to reduce the overhead in this business.

Find Early Colt Gains Are Always Cheapest

Early gains are the cheapest gains with colts as well as with calves, pigs and lambs. Hence, it pays to push the young foal along as rapidly as possible, suggests A. B. Caine of Iowa state college, and to do this he strongly urges getting the colt onto a ration of grain at as early an age as possible.

By supplementing the mare's milk with grain, the colt should be well started when weaning time arrives, which should be at about six months, Mr. Caine says. Oatmeal is one of the feeds which colts will eat more readily while young, he says. Later, oats, bran and a small amount of corn may be substituted. The colt should be allowed all of the clover or alfalfa hay that it will eat.

Grinding grain for colts generally does not pay, Mr. Caine says, especially if the cost of the feed is increased 10 to 15 per cent thereby.

Vaccinating Pigs

Last fall the principal objection to vaccination came from those who thought that by the use of both serum and virus, the disease of cholera would be brought upon the place. In reality there is little danger in this respect, and whatever danger there may be is more than offset by the benefits, if the work is done in time. The hog, on most farms, represents the source of greatest profit. If the pig crop for the year is lost the profit of the farm is also lost.

TIPS ON SALESMANSHIP

By O. T. FRASH

The Well-Dressed Clerk THE clerk who stands behind the counter in sloppy attire is, to say the least, making a mighty poor display of his personal stock-in-trade. He should remember that all day long he is selling two commodities—his employer's merchandise and his own personality. And it's the personality of the clerk that largely determines his real value.

An attractive personality most certainly is not made so by a soiled collar, a three-days' growth of beard, frayed cuffs or a rumpled waist. When you're selling your personality, put it into a pleasing package. That's real merchandising. That's why crackers sell better in appealing cartons than when packed loosely in barrels.

Dirty finger nails and a grimy neck never helped the sale of a single article of merchandise. A clerk with a clean, comfortable, contented appearance creates an impression of confidence. The employee that becomes a fitting representative of the employer and of the institution for which he is working. And when the time comes for the boss to select some one for promotion, the chances are very strongly in favor of his choice falling on the clerk who has most effectively sold his own personality to the retail customer, and through them, to the boss.

Dress neatly and cleanly, but not gaudily. Avoid as you would a quarantine placard anything that looks freakish or bizarre. In other words, dress so that your appearance will convey the general impression of quiet neatness without ostentation. Remember that the merchandise you are selling is the thing on which you want your customer's attention concentrated, and when you wear something that will distract that attention, you deliberately reduce your sales efficiency and therefore your earning capacity.

I once knew a book agent, and a very successful one, who started out one Monday morning wearing a dark red vest. The following Friday, after nearly a week of miserable business, an incident occurred which revealed to him the fact that his prospective buyers were wondering why a salesman who obviously knew his business in other respects should decorate himself like a circus wagon. He went instantly to his hotel and changed vests, whereupon business improved to a marked degree.

It is every man's undeniable right, of course, to wear a crimson Windsor tie, or discard garters, or to go bat-less through life. But these things attract the attention of people who don't like such eccentricities, and those people have money to spend. If you want some of that money, do everything you can honorably to get it, including careful attention to your attire.

Working Off the Stickers

THERE are certain items of merchandise that have worn out their welcome. Possibly they're soiled, shelf-worn, out of date, or otherwise slightly below standard and they should be moved as quickly as possible. Your employer wants this done. But he doesn't want it done badly enough to justify any deception or sharp practices with the customer.

There is a certain thrifty class of trade that will welcome the opportunity to save a little money on such merchandise and those people gladly will buy the slightly imperfect goods at a fair price, especially if you call attention to the bargain as though you were conferring a favor, which is exactly what you will be doing.

In this case the customer will buy the goods, knowing exactly what they are, and you will not only have disposed of articles that are undesirable as merchandise, although perfectly good for all practical purposes, but you will have convinced your customer of your friendly personal interest in him and will have shown him that your store asks its regular prices only for perfect goods, and that it's good faith is beyond question.

Bear in mind the fact that putting a "P. M." on any article doesn't mean giving you permission to take advantage of a customer in its sale.

Nights Not Mentioned in Mr. Sykes' Sentence

"What the dickens is the matter with you?" furiously demanded the warden of William Sykes. "Kicking up a row like that at this time of night?"

"I only want to go home," said Bill. "Don't be a fool, man!" said the warden, coming nearer to see if his charge was quite well.

"Fool, indeed!" shouted Bill from the other side of the grating. "I'm in my rights."

"Now, look here," broke in the warden, meaningly, "you've got seven days' hard. Seven days you've got to do, so you'd better do them quietly." "You're right," smiled Bill. "The old boy gave me seven days; but he didn't say anything about nights; and you can surely trust me to come back in the morning!"—Edinburgh Scotsman.

In Memory of a Martyr

WILLIAM MCKINLEY

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

ON JANUARY 29 carnations will adorn the buttonholes of thousands of Americans who will thus be carrying on a unique tradition in honoring the memory of a President of the United States. February 12 and February 22 are set aside in our patriotic calendar for reverent tribute to the names of Lincoln and Washington. October 27, Roosevelt's birthday, is often observed as Navy day, thus recalling his part in building up our first line of defense. But January 29 is a date for remembering not so much those elements of statesmanship which twice made him Chief Executive of his country as it is for remembering the simple, kindly soul that was the man named William McKinley. Therefore this simple tribute of wearing his favorite flower on his birthday is singularly appropriate.

So swiftly has the world moved in the last quarter century that, to the present generation, at least, the name of the twenty-fourth President is comparatively unknown. His fame is greatly overshadowed by the dominating personality of his immediate successor, the "strenuous American," and by a still later strong personality of quite another sort, whose fortune it was to lead us in the greatest war this country has ever known. But to those of a previous generation the name of McKinley has a very definite meaning.

His mention recalls to them that September day in 1901 when the word was flashed all over the country that an anarchist had shot the President as he stood in Music hall at the Pan-American exposition in Buffalo, N. Y., greeting the long line of his fellow-citizens who flocked past him to shake his hand. They remember, too, how for the next week the whole nation watched his valiant fight for life; how he accepted the inevitable with the historic words, "They will, not ours, be done" and how, when the end came on September 14, his favorite hymn, "Nearer, My God, to Thee" was the requiem of sorrow of thousands who mourned the loss of William McKinley, the President, but more the passing of William McKinley, the man, whose "perfect devotion to his invalid wife had excited universal admiration."

So America added a third name to make its trinity of martyred Presidents, and as it did so little realized that it was definitely writing "Fate" to an era in American history. Little wonder that the present generation has almost forgotten him and his times! For in at least one important respect, the day of William McKinley is as remote from the present as is the day of Abraham Lincoln or even of Andrew Jackson. The year 1900 was more than the "turn of the century" for the United States. For 110 years America had been concerned with its own internal affairs, with the problems of forming a union out of a group of jealous and wrangling colonies lately freed from European domination, of conquering a wilderness and expanding westward until the land hunger of its people was satisfied, of preserving the nation from disunion and healing the wounds of civil strife. But when on the 25th of April, 1898, congress passed a reso-

Nearer, My God, to Thee!

Nearer, my God, to Thee,
Nearer, my God, to Thee!
E'en though it be a cross
That raiseth me;
Still all my song shall be,
Nearer, my God, to Thee,
Nearer, my God, to Thee,
Nearer, my God, to Thee!

Though like the wanderer,
The sun gone down,
Darkness be over me,
My rest a stone,
Yet in my dream I'd be
Nearer, my God, to Thee,
Nearer, my God, to Thee,
Nearer, my God, to Thee!

There let the way appear,
Steps unto heaven!
All that Thou sendest to me
In mercy given;
Angels to beckon me
Nearer, my God, to Thee,
Nearer, my God, to Thee,
Nearer, my God, to Thee!

Then, with my waking thoughts
Bright with Thy praise,
Out of my lonely griefs
Bethel I'll raise;
So by my woes to be
Nearer, my God, to Thee,
Nearer, my God, to Thee,
Nearer, my God, to Thee!

Or if on joyful wing
Cleaving the sky,
Sun, moon and stars forgot,
Upwards I fly,
Still all my song shall be,
Nearer, my God, to Thee,
Nearer, my God, to Thee,
Nearer, my God, to Thee!

—MRS SARAH F. ADAMS

lution, declaring war between "the United States of America and the Kingdom of Spain." It marked the end of America's "splendid isolation," the beginning of its concern with external affairs and its assumption of a place of importance in the congress of nations.

So the historical importance of William McKinley is that he was a guiding force in turning the American ship of state from the sometimes troubled waters of nationalism into the ever-turbulent waters of internationalism in which it seems destined to sail henceforth. What was the historic background of the man cast for this role and his preparation for his task? Not in the least the kind that a prophet would have called appropriate for the result to be attained. But it was apparently the kind that only a democracy such as ours could produce. For the man whom Fate had selected to be leader of the nation at this turning point in the relation of the United States to the outside world was an Ohio school teacher and lawyer who had served faithfully but with no especial brilliance in the Civil war and who had risen by the successive steps of prosecuting attorney, congressman, and governor to the Presidency. "Emphatically not a leader," writes Carl Russell Flah in his volume, "The Path of Empire" in the Yale University Press "Chronicles of America," and continues: "He was, however, unsurpassed in his day as a reader of public opinion and he believed his function to be that of interpreting the national mind. Nor did he yield his opinion in a grudging manner. He grasped broadly the consequences of each new position which the public assumed and he was a master of securing harmonious co-operation for a desired end."

Of him another biographer has written: "President McKinley's course during the many exciting events of his administration was marked by a degree of tact, prudence and foresight which surprised even his friends. He surrounded himself with able advisers, maintained cordial relations with congress and steadily grew in popularity with the country at large. He possessed to an unusual degree the faculty of forecasting public sentiment." In the light of these estimates it would appear that McKinley, even though he did not have that training in statecraft which might be considered essential to a situation involving international relations, was apparently an ideal leader for a people once they had entered upon a war which was to be so momentous in their history. It was a war which he was opposed to and during all the negotiations with Spain, that preceded the actual outbreak of war, he repeatedly counseled patience and restraint. Even after the destruction of the Maine, when the country was in a white heat of indignation against Spain, he held fast to his purpose of securing a peaceful settlement of the dispute between the two countries over the Cuban problem. Finally, convinced that Spain would not accept America's proposals and assured of the deep-seated conviction of the American people regarding their duty to the Cubans, the President reluctantly took the decisive step.

Not only did the Spanish-American war, the highlight of McKinley's administration, result in America's coming into possession of colonies in the Far East which brought the country into the realm of international politics, but during that administration were taken also the other steps which aided in furthering her interests in world-wide affairs. It was McKinley's secretary of state, John Hay, whose "open door" policy in regard to China made the United States an active factor in the future of the Orient and it was McKinley himself, whose proposal in 1899 for a Pan-American congress, who made the first overtures for a better understanding among the American republics, North and South. It was to popularize the Pan-American idea that the exposition, where the President received his death wound, was arranged, and it was just after he had set forth his views on the ties which should bind the two continents that he was shot.

Today a magnificent memorial stands in his home city of Canton, Ohio, as the tribute of that state and the nation as well to a beloved leader. Historians of the future may point to his administration as the most significant turning point in all American history, and as time gives a better perspective for evaluation of his importance, President William McKinley may loom larger and larger in the gallery of American notables. But for the American people, whom he understood as few Presidents have, the best tribute that they can pay him is the simple tribute on January 29 of each year of honoring his memory with a simple thing—his favorite flower.

POULTRY

YELLOW CORN IS BEST FOR HENS

Yellow corn should constitute at least 60 per cent of the total rations for laying hens. This is especially important during the winter months when the supply of green food is limited. The chief virtue yellow corn possesses which is not present in white corn is vitamin A which must be provided to maintain the health of the flock. Where rations are devoid of this vitamin the hens will develop a disease very similar to roup. In fact it is called nutritional roup. The eyes water, swell shut, and white pustules form in the throat. Naturally the egg production is very poor. One can tell by observing the color of the egg yolk whether the danger line is near. If the egg yolks are extremely pale, it is a practical index that the ration is low in vitamin A and that vitamin A must be provided, otherwise danger is ahead. This is due to the fact that feeds rich in the yellow coloring matter found in eggs are usually rich in vitamin A. If yellow corn constitutes half of the ration, there is no cause for alarm.

In case it is impossible to feed yellow corn, then it is absolutely necessary to feed some green leafy material, such as clover or alfalfa leaves. For green alfalfa leaf meal may be used to the extent of 10 to 15 per cent of the poultry mash, or clover or alfalfa hay should be kept in suitable racks before the hens all the time. Some people build a V-shaped rack of slats which will hold a bale of hay. The rack should be high enough off the floor so that the hens may pick easily off the lower corner. Later the bale may be rolled over, and after the leaves are consumed, the stems may be used as litter. It should be remembered that if yellow corn is used, it is not so necessary to feed the hay. Succulent material, such as root crops, is not a substitute for the green leafy material.

Materials Necessary for Producing Eggs

Every egg must have a shell. Bones also require minerals. Both bones and shells are largely made up of calcium. Without the necessary calcium, laying hens will lack the materials necessary for producing eggs. Even though enough other feed may be supplied to furnish the necessary materials for a large number of eggs a hen cannot lay more eggs than she has shell material for.

Considerable experimental data has been compiled which shows definitely that a plentiful supply of minerals has a marked effect on the number of eggs laid. In addition to a plentiful supply of oyster shell or other high calcium mineral, hens need free access to a supply of sharp sand to aid them in digesting their feed. These items represent a small cost to the producer but make a large difference in the net returns.

Growing poultry also requires a liberal supply of minerals. In addition to calcium, many producers are mixing from four to five pounds of bone meal with every 100 pounds of mash. Bone meal furnishes phosphates in addition to calcium and therefore aids in bone growth.

Plan to Keep Rats Out of the Poultry House

To keep rats out of a poultry house, build a concrete wall four inches thick on the outside or the inside of the old foundation. This wall should extend two feet below the ground level and at least one foot above it.

A four-inch concrete floor is then placed directly on the compacted earth. If the natural drainage is poor a cinder or gravel fill six inches thick is first placed on the earth; however, in most cases this fill is not needed.

The door is equipped with a spring hinge or some other device which will close it automatically. If the door is of wood, a good plan is to place a piece of sheet metal or of one-fourth inch, 12-gauge wire screen, one foot high on its base in order to prevent the rats from gnawing through it.

Sprouting Oats

One of the easiest ways to sprout oats is to place the oats in a bag and soak it in a pail of water overnight. Use warm water in winter. Soak two quarts for each 100 hens. After soaking overnight, hang the bag behind the kitchen stove. Dip the bag in warm water once daily, shaking the oats each time, and hang up again. The oats are ready for use on the fifth day. If one uses five bags for sprouting oats, he can have a constant supply by starting a new bag each day.

Eggs in Winter

Many poultrymen are finding that they need warmer houses for winter egg production and are lining their houses with commercial wall board at the time of the fall renovation. This lining gives the house a smooth appearance on the inside and removes a lot of the cracks and crevices around the uprights. This reduces the time required to brush out the dust and enables the poultryman to make a better fight against mites, lice and disease.

At Least Would Have Beecher's Good Wishes

A capital Henry Ward Beecher story is told by Joseph Bucklin Bishop in "Notes and Anecdotes of Many Years." At a Friday evening prayer meeting—Mr. Bishop was present—a man arose and with an air of "Watch me now and see me put him a poser," asked Mr. Beecher a question—it being question time.

"I should like to suppose," he said, "the case of a man who lives an upright and moral life; who is a faithful husband, a kind and generous father, a good citizen, taking part in all good works, gives freely to charity; in short, leads a life above reproach. Yet he is a pronounced disbeliever in Christianity, never goes to church and is nothing less than an atheist.

"Now, Mr. Beecher, I should like to ask you: 'Where does that man go when he dies?'"

Without changing his position Mr. Beecher with an engaging smile, replied:

"He would have my good wishes wherever he goes."

Land in Dispute

"Cook's Croft," made famous by Dick Turpin, is the cause of a dispute between the British ministry of agriculture and the rector of Fawkham, England. The land has two owners, yet in a sense is no man's land, because it is in no parish, and the rector refuses to collect any tithes from it. Part of it has been sold and the ministry of agriculture wishes to reappropriate it for tithes, but the rec-

Fred E. Yournds and Miss Mabelle Daley, both of Howell, were married Wednesday morning at 9:30, at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. A. Daley, the Rev. S. W. Stroh, of Coldwater, officiating.

The farmer's institute meeting held at Pinckney was not largely attended owing to misunderstanding in the program which resulted in its not being advertised as it might have been. Mrs. H. A. Fick, H. M. Padley, Miss Minnie Monks, and Mr. Reynolds were on the program.

Dr. H. F. and C. L. Sigler in their haste to reach home from Webberville last Tuesday, engaged a livery instead of taking the train. In this case the old adage "more haste less speed" proved true. The team proceeded to run away promptly after leaving the town. They succeeded so well in this case that in about ten seconds the two doctors and the driver were traveling through the air faster than Darius Green and his flying machine.
Dr. H. F. landed on the soft side of a body of ice and proceeded to perform acrobatic stunts while Dr. C. L. with better judgment chose an evergreen hedge for his landing. None of the men were badly hurt but the rig was badly demolished.
