COMMUNICATION

Pinckney, Mich, June 18, '28

Dear Alumnus:

I can hardly wait until next Saturday, the day of our Alumni Reunion, for I am anxious to see how the years have treated my old school mates. Are they older looking than I? Will they still seem the same? Is Sally as jolly as ever? Can Ralph still imitate the circus clowns like he used to? Can Lee still tell funny stories that would keep a large audience laughing? How many of the old dancing crowd will get out on the dance floor now? And although the grey shows in my hair and the scales show that I do not lay claim to the slender lines of bygone days, I don't feel a day older than when we used to walk in couples "Down by the Old Mill Stream."

There is nothing like a play day to revive sagging spirits and tired nerves. Come to our Reunion next Saturday, June 23rd. Forget business and household cares and review old friendships. And if you don't feel you have enjoyed this occasion, then all our efforts have been in vain.

MRS. LAURA DOLAN RUEN

Mrs. Laura Dolan Ruen died at her home in Detroit June 12 after a lingering illness. She leaves her husband, Dr. Michael C. Ruen, two daughters, Jean and Barbara, and one son, Thomas. Also her mother, Mrs. Ellen Dolan and one brother, Thomas Dolan, all of Detroit. The deceased was born in Pinckney and was the daughter of William and Ellen Dolan. Her early life was spent here but she has resided in Detroit for a number of years. Her husband, Dr. Ruen is also a former Pinckney boy.

The funeral was held at the Anunciacion church, Detroit Friday and the burial was in Detroit.

ROAD CLOSED

The Hi-Land-Patterson Lake road is closed on account of the new bridge being built over Hell Creek this side of the John M. Harris farm. All persons driving to these lakes should take the first turn to the right south of Pinckney which goes by St. Mary's cemetery.

FITCH MONTAGUE

Fitch C. Montague, aged 73 years, died at his home near Gregory Sunday after a long illness. His wife died several years ago. He leaves two brothers, Ben Montague of Marion and Judge Arthur Montague of Howell.

The funeral will be held from the home Thursday at 2:30 p. m., Rev. Jones of Munger officiating.

KILLERS STILL AT LARGE

Sheep killing dogs still get in their work among the sheep flocks in this section. A Marion farmer had 24 killed last Friday night. James White cut another notch in his gun Tuesday when he caught four dogs in his sheep. This one like the others shot carried no license tag.

RICHARD BARTHELMUSS IN "THE NOOSE"

This film comes to the Washington Theatre Brighton, Sunday, June 24 for a three days run. It is a story of gang life with Barthelmuss in the leading role. He shoots Buck Gordon, leader of a gang of rum runners in order to protect a woman's name. He is tried and sentenced to death for the deed. The woman talks and the sentence is commuted. The staging is admirably carried out, the scenes being laid in the Box Stall Cafe, the prison and the highway. It is a film well worth seeing.

FORMERLY LIVED HERE

Joseph Kovacs, arrested in Detroit on suspicion of being implicated in the bombing of the county building there in which 12 people were injured formerly lived here. His parents owning the Bailey castle farm. He was arrested here last winter for the theft of an auto battery of Chas. Carr but sentence was suspended.

DANCE AT CHALKER'S

There will be dancing at Met Chalker's Patterson Lake Dance Hall every Saturday evening. Good music, good floor and a good time promised.

FREE MOVING PICTURES

The business men of Pinckney have contracted with Mr. Ford who is superintendent of the North Branch schools to furnish the people of this vicinity with a free moving picture show one night of each week. The first one will be put on Thursday evening, June 21. The pictures will be shown on a screen put up on the public square and will start as soon as it is dark. Mr. Ford guarantees to show only good up-to-date films.

GAINES PLAYS HERE SUNDAY

The Pinckney base ball team will play the Michigan Oil Team of Gaines at Pinckney next Sunday, June 24. This game was obtained through Frank Bowers who is the district manager for the Michigan Oil Co. The Gaines aggregation are a good bunch of ball tossers and the game ought to be a good one. The record of the home team up-to-date is four games won and four lost, giving them a 500 average. They have split even with Howell and Hamburg, won from Plymouth and Ann Arbor and lost to Dexter twice. The management has decided to make a change and discontinue the use of hired players. Here-forth beginning next Sunday the line-up will consist of only home players.

PINCKNEY LOSES TO HOWELL

The Pinckney base ball team lost to Howell last Sunday by a score of 8 to 1. Bill Cooper pitched for Howell and let Pinckney down with six hits. He only struck out 3 men, but was given errorless support. Jameison was found for ten hits and his cast made 7 bobbles behind him, most of which were costly. Pinckney's only run came in the third when McCleer singled and scored on Brown's two base hit. Kennedy tried to score from second in the fifth on Granger's long hit but was thrown out at the plate by Chink Cotten from left field. Pinckney had no trouble finding Cooper but their drives always went into someone's hands. The Howell outfield played a nice game, handling seven chances without an error.

TRUCK HITS BRIDGE

Last Wednesday evening when Steve Barber accompanied by his son, Lormer, and son-in-law, Claude Hoard, all of Gregory were returning home, their truck hit one of the concrete sides of the bridge between Big and Little Portage Lakes on the Dexter road. The truck was wrecked and Hoard was severely injured. Barber suffered a broken jaw. His son was not seriously injured. The injured men were taken to the hospital where they are doing as well as could be expected.

PAVING CONTRACT LET

Last Tuesday, June 12, was the day for the letting of the bids for the paving of Pinckney's Main St. These bids were opened at Plymouth and we understand that the contract for the grading and paving was awarded to a Jackson Contractor by the name of J. J. Ryan. It is expected that the work will be started at once.

FISHING SEASON OPENS

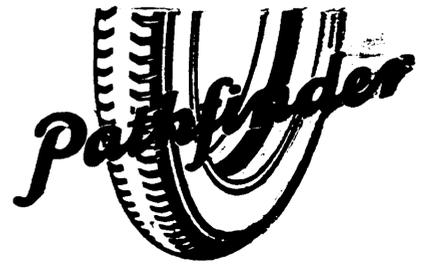

The fishing season opened at midnight last Saturday and most of the local anglers were out long before daylight. One enthusiastic Waltonite reached one of the nearby lakes at about 5:00 a. m. and found 11 boats containing fishermen on the lake ahead of him. Norman and Roy Reason got the limit in roach and pike and Will Fisk, Bernard Lynch and others also got their share. The local lake resort men were unable to supply the demands of the out of town fishermen for boats. Taking it all in all, the opening of the fishing season was fairly successful.

It Pays to Watch Your Step When You Buy Balloons

Unknown brands are risky "bargains" in any type of tire-but especially so with Balloons. Balloons work at lower pressures. They've got to be flexible. And it takes good materials and the highest degree of manufacturing skill to combine flexibility with strength in a tire carcass.

Pathfinder Balloons are made and guaranteed by Goodyear, the world's largest manufacturer of quality tires. They're a safe and sane solution to your equipment problems AT A MIGHTY LOW PRICE.

POULTRY

RAISING TURKEYS IN CONFINEMENT

America's great holiday bird is getting ready to strut again in the Middle West just as his proud ancestor did years ago. The wild gobbler was once monarch of the feathered family in the woods that stretched up and down the Mississippi valley. As he disappeared from the timber, turkeys were brought into the barnyard and an attempt was made to tame them so they could be handled as chickens are today.

But disease drove them out. Then came the apparently erroneous theory that turkeys were delicate and could not be raised successfully unless they were given an open range where they could get plenty of exercise and catch grasshoppers and bugs. That theory has been disproved.

It is now known that turkeys can be successfully raised in close confinement. This may change the entire system so that in the future the laying, brooding and marketing season can be greatly lengthened. Turkeys may eventually be produced almost the year around and be brought in fresh from the farm every month in the year. Instead of turkey raisers marketing practically all of their surplus birds at Thanksgiving and Christmas holiday seasons, as they do at the present time, they will be able to furnish fresh ones winter and summer.

The production of squab turkeys, weighing from eight to ten pounds, on a year around basis may be developed in the future. It is at least made possible through the use of artificial incubators and brooders and the development of the confinement method of handling the birds. Breeders will have to change the laying habits of the turkey hen just as the poultrymen did with the chicken hen.

Print Frock for Little Misses' Vacation Wear

So many very young people are learning to sew that the Woman's Home Companion fashion expert has chosen the frock illustrated especially for them. The pointed bib which becomes a soft sash when it reaches the back is perhaps the most important feature of this youthful frock, giving character to the front and a bow to the back. Cherry cotton print is suggested, and for the trimming bias binding in a shade matching the predominating color in the print.

On Rearing Children from CRIB to COLLEGE

Compiled by the Editors of "CHILDREN, The Magazine for PARENTS"

Cook any fruit which is slightly over or under ripe before serving.

Read your children those stories that teach heroism, love of truth and beauty, and other great virtues. Through the contemplation of that which is noble, parents and children may thus grow together in the strength of these qualities.

Between the ages of four and seven raw fruits may be introduced cautiously, provided the child chews them well. Begin with apples, pears, berries which are not too seedy, melons, and peaches. It is wisest to use only cooked fruits for supper at this age. After the eighth year, all fruits, fresh or cooked, may be introduced gradually, provided they are sound and perfectly ripe. It is well to postpone somewhat the use of strongly acid fruits, except in diluted form. Dried fruits, raw and cooked, are useful for their laxative properties.

The commonest cause of child delinquency is lack of respect for the personality of children on the part of adults. We do not trust them. Respect for the personality of the children means that we have an attitude of active good will towards them, that we treat them as human beings and responsible citizens, and we grow and live with them as comrades.

The childish brain works with the slow precision of a retarded moving picture and this oftentimes gives the effect of unwillingness to obey. So give the child time, always.

The setting free of the child should start almost as soon as he leaves the cradle. At least the parents should consciously face the necessity of gradually getting the child ready for the test life will finally make. The breaking of home ties should not be sudden, an emotional cataclysm, but the result of a steady, increasing development of the child's confidence and judgment. To accomplish this the parent must plan from the beginning to help the child grow in power to take care of himself; the parent also must give the child more and more opportunity to build up self-reliance and only by adding to his freedom as he advances in years can such a policy be carried to success.

The little gardener should be supplied with tools of correct size, for he will be quickly discouraged if his rake is too large to be managed easily or his hoe too small to be effective. In choosing flowers for the first garden, some of the more hardy and more showy varieties should be selected and also those which are prolific bloomers. Bulbs are always interesting to children and of these, crocuses, snowdrops and tulips are among the best.

Be a zealous fanatic about your milk for the baby; it may mean a lifetime of good digestion and vitality. No money is too much and no care too great to give to laying the foundations of child health and a good block of the stock invested in this way should go into milk and its refrigeration. It pays big interest, compounded three times daily, in health and happiness to the whole family.

June Chicks as Easily Reared as Early Birds

June-hatched chicks are no more delicate than those hatched during the early part of the year, although some poultry-keepers think they are.

What makes them more difficult to rear without loss in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred is that they are run over ground that has been occupied by broods of chicks for months past.

You'll find the June chicks go ahead without mishap if only you'll give them a piece of fresh ground—ground that hasn't been used for any kind of fowls for four or five months. If you haven't much space you'll maybe find this difficult to manage, but failing grass land there is no reason why you shouldn't turn them out onto a piece of "turned" soil.

Test to Find When Eggs Will Become Fertile

A test conducted in Canada shed some light on the question of how soon after the male is introduced eggs become fertile. In this test five days after the introduction of the male half the eggs were fertile. On the seventh day 70 per cent of the eggs were fertile, and the per cent of fertility remained fairly constant at this figure. Another test was conducted to see how long the eggs remained fertile after the male was removed. For the first four days 70 per cent were fertile. On the seventh, half of the eggs were fertile. On the tenth day after the removal of the male all were infertile.

Poultry Facts

Ask your county agent about the confinement method of growing chicks.

Feeding and housing of hens are the most important factors affecting the hatchability of eggs.

As a whole grain in the scratch feed, wheat is a very useful feed. It can be ground and used in the mash with good results.

If a turkey hen settles upon a suitable place to make her nest she should not be disturbed, but it is best to remove the eggs every day, leaving a china egg in the nest.

All notions of the warm house should be abandoned and a house built along lines that will furnish the best shelter.

As soon as the ducklings are all hatched, pick up the hen mother by the feet, hang head downward and ruffle the feathers before dusting well with insect powder.

Cannibalism among young chicks usually starts either from idleness or lack of a proper ration. Be sure chicks are fed properly and then keep them busy at all times.

Fine sand is best for the floor of the brooder house. The sand should be clean, sharp and sifted for young chicks.

Overcrowding the young chicks will cause heavy losses. Each four chicks should have at least one square foot of floor space in the brooder house.

Toe picking and cannibalism are common poultry worries. The cause is crowding too many chicks together under one hover, or an unbalanced ration—lack of protein and green stuff

English Women Live Longer Than American

Statistics show that English women live longer on the average than American women. English men and American men have about the same expectation of life.

Rollo Briten, statistician of the United States public health service, finds that the expectation of life which decreases gradually the older the person, is higher for English women than for American women at average age between ten and eighty years.

The difference between the two countries in this respect ranges from about four years in young womanhood to less than one year at the age of eighty.

This means that the English woman of twenty may expect to live to be sixty-nine, while her American sister may expect to reach the age of only sixty-four or sixty-five.

No attempt is made by the public health service to explain why this difference in longevity exists between the female population and not between the males.

Fun of Bear Hunting

A bulletin of the American Game association contains the following: "Bears are now prized as game in Maine as highly as deer and moose. The bear is equipped with wonderful keen scent, and can detect a hunter for at least half a mile when wind conditions are right. His hearing is equally good, and it tests the skill of the best hunters to approach him within shooting distance. His eye sight is not keen.

"The Maine commissioner of game advises hunters to use a heavy rifle in bear hunting, nothing less than the 30.30. The .25 caliber fails to deliver a blow with enough shock to put a bear down for keeps. He says that only an average of one out of four bears hit by Maine hunters is secured, and many of the wounded animals undoubtedly die later and are wasted. It is generally a waste of ammunition to hit a bear anywhere except through the shoulder or head. A body shot will not stop them."

Memorial of Schiller

A hitherto unknown letter of Friedrich von Schiller was found at the town of Asch, Czechoslovakia, by the college professor, L. Huelder. The letter, not dated, is addressed to Amalie von Imhoff, a niece of Frau von Stein, whose epic poem "The Sisters of Leshoe" was included in Schiller's Almanac of the Muses in 1800. It is assumed that it was written during the last years of the great German author's life.

Efficiency, in one phrase, is keeping out of your pockets everything except what you need there.

DERELICT

Derelicts on the sea of finance have only themselves to blame. 'Tis human to have an alibi-and blame conditions over which we think we have no control. But in the last analysis, this is not true. Every man in his heart knows we speak the truth.

The first rule of thrift is keep the outgo always within the limits of income. Failure to do this results in shipwreck. The best anchor in time of storm is money--and money to fulfill its full purpose should be busy at all times. Your modern bank makes this possible--paying interest on savings and dividends on good and sound investments. The firm, family or man who comes safely through all storms is the one who has learned this lesson well and regulates its affairs accordingly.

Four Aviators Make Flight Across Pacific Ocean in Three Big Hops.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

CALIFORNIA to Australia by airplane in three hops! For the first time the Pacific ocean has been traversed by the air route, the great feat being accomplished by two Australians, Capt. Charles Kingsford Smith, war ace, and Charles T. P. Ulm, and two Americans, Harry W. Lyon and James Warner. Their machine was the monoplane Southern Cross, once used unsuccessfully in the Arctic regions by Captain Wilkins.

In constant communication with the mainland and with vessels by radio, the aviators made the flight to Hawaii without much trouble. The worst part of the trip was the next hop, nearly 3,200 miles to the Fiji Islands, and during this they ran into repeated storms that were most skillfully dodged by Kingsford-Smith, the chief pilot. This was the longest overseas flight ever made, and if they had been forced down before reaching Suva the only possible places to light without disaster were two coral atolls in the Phoenix group 1,866 miles from the starting point in Hawaii. As it was they landed safely at Albert park, Suva, with only 30 gallons of gas left in the tanks, having made the hop in 54 hours and 33 minutes. Whites and natives of Fiji joined in giving the flyers a rousing welcome. After a brief rest the plane was flown to Naselal beach for the take-off for Brisbane, Australia, 1,762 miles away, the route taking the aviators through a region of frequent storms, south of the Loyalty Islands and New Caledonia. From Brisbane they were to fly to Sydney, 500 miles to the south.

Sydney newspapers printed the report that Captain Kingsford-Smith was on the brink of insolvency and started a campaign to raise a fund for him. When the trans-Pacific flight originally was planned Kingsford-Smith sought the aid of the Australian government and it was promised. Advance payments purchased the plane and the flyer came to the United States. There followed the disastrous Dole flight from Oakland to Honolulu in which seven lives were lost. The Australian government withdrew its support and urged Kingsford-Smith to return home. He refused and continued plans for the California-to-Australia flight on limited resources and finally obtained backing from Allen Hancock, millionaire oil man of Los Angeles. But even with this backing the flyer faces financial ruin.

During the week there were reports, based on alleged radio messages, that Noble and the dirigible Italia were on Franz Josef land east of Spitzbergen. Search for the missing explorers was continued by the steamship Hobby, by Lieutenant Holm, Norwegian aviator, and by parties of Alpine chamois. The Italian department of aeronautics was in communication with Captain Wilkins, hoping to induce him to join in the hunt by air.

SO FAR as the Republican national committee was concerned, Herbert Hoover was given nearly all the contested Southern delegates in the hearings conducted at Kansas City. The contests, however, it was stated would be carried before the committee on credentials and possibly before the convention. In the committee hearings the secretary of commerce won 65 out of 73 contested delegates, his most impressive victory being in the case of Texas in which he gained the entire delegation. By conservative estimates this brought the total number of Hoover votes to 472, the majority necessary for nomination being 545. The experts then figured that Mellon with his 79 Pennsylvania delegates could put Hoover across the line—if he chose to do so. The contest for the South Carolina delegation, which was for Lowden, was withdrawn by the Hooverites.

Among the politicians gathered in Kansas City many expressed the opinion that Senator James Watson of Indiana or Senator Charles Curtis of Kansas would make a good vice presidential nominee. Some Hooverites especially favored Watson for second place, figuring his nomination would "pull the stinger of the corn belt."

Further crusaders of the regions surrounding Kansas City were preparing to move on the convention city in considerable numbers, by automobile and train, and many of them wore badges on which was printed this amended version of the Hoover slogan: "Who but Hoover? Anybody?"

ACCORDING to the partial report of the senate campaign fund committee, total expenditures in behalf of the various Presidential candidates to date have been only $731,087. Of this sum the Hoover expenditures have been $380,822. Frank O. Lowden is credited with having spent $90,922.40. The committee found $579.50 has been collected and expended by the supporters of Vice President Dawes. The expenses of Governor Smith of New York, leading Democratic aspirant, were $121,471.04. Callections to the Smith fund amounted to $120,911.40. The Reed convention campaign fund amounted to $11,430.64. His expenditures are listed at $38,752.79.

GEN JOHN J. PERSHING made a rush trip from Paris to Copenhagen and jumped aboard the Levantian for the United States, and both in New York and in France the report was circulated that he was called hurriedly by friends who were starting a boom for him as a dark horse candidate for the Republican nomination for President.

MARSHAL CHANG TSO-LIN, Northern war lord, gave up his dictatorship and abandoned Peking to the Nationalists. With his household he fled to Manchuria and just as his train reached Mukden it was bombed presumably by Nationalist agents. Some soldiers were killed and Chang himself was so badly injured that his recovery was considered doubtful. The Nationalist troops gradually occupied Peking while forces led by Chang and those of the foreign legations strove to prevent disorder. General Hsi-shan, for years known as the model governor of Shansi province, was appointed garrison commander of the Peking-Tientsin area and at once began the work of reconstruction and development. The Nationalist government asked the immediate evacuation of American troops from Tientsin, where the United States has maintained part of a regiment since the Boxer rebellion. In Washington it was stated that our government could not comply with the request at once.

PASSING upon two cases arising in the state of Washington, the Supreme Court of the United States has ruled that evidence of prohibition violations obtained by wire tapping is admissible in a criminal proceeding and that a conviction resulting from such evidence is not a violation of the constitutional guarantee against "unreasonable search and seizure." The question was decided by a five to four ruling. Chief Justice Taft wrote the majority opinion. Justices Holmes and Brandeis, in dissenting opinions, scathingly denounced the placing of judicial sanction upon the commission of a crime to detect crime. Justice Butler also filed a dissenting opinion and Justice Stone announced he concurred with the views of Justices Holmes and Brandeis.

In holding wire tapping did not amount to a search and seizure within the meaning of the fourth amendment to the Constitution, Chief Justice Taft said that while this amendment might have a proper application to a sealed letter because of the constitutional provision for the Post Office department and because such a letter is in the possession of the government it could not apply to communication by wire.

UNCLE SAM proposes to get a lot of money from Henry M. Blackmer, the wealthy Denver oil operator who fled to France to avoid the Teapot Dome inquiry. Income taxes, interest and penalties aggregating $8,498,955 have been assessed against him and tax liens filed in Denver and

New York federal courts. Also writs of attachment against any property held by or for Blackmer were filed with 22 companies or individuals, including all financial institutions in which Blackmer is believed to have accounts. In New York city they were also served upon banks with which he did business.

Only a part of the tax, interest and penalties assessed against the oil man was understood to be for his alleged profits in the Continental Trading company, an adjunct of the Teapot Dome case.

LITHUANIA'S assertion, in her recently adopted new constitution, that Vilna is the capital of the country was denounced before the League of Nations council by Poland when the council opened its fifth session in Geneva. Foreign Minister Zaleski submitted a copy of his note of protest to Kovno in which he asserted this could only envenom the Polish-Lithuanian relations. Lithuania's claim he said, had no juridical foundation as Poland's rights over Vilna were definitely established by the Vilna and Polish diets and by the ambassadors' conference in 1921. It was not believed this session of the council would do much business as both Briand of France and Stresemann of Germany were absent on account of illness.

VIENNA received reports, seemingly authentic, that Ahmed Bey Zogu, President of Albania, was getting ready to proclaim a monarchy with himself as the king. He has had a stormy career, fighting with the Democrats and Liberals and once being wounded by an assassin. In December, 1924, he led a successful revolt against Bishop Nohi's rule and next month was appointed President by the national assembly. He is only thirty-four years old and besides being President has held the offices of premier and commander in chief of the national forces.

PREMIER MUSSOLOINI took a good deal of wind out of the sails of his detractors by the restraint of his annual address before the Italian senate. His hearers were especially interested in what he might say about the threatening situation in the Balkans but the Duce cut out all violent talk and made a plain offer of friendship to Yugo-Slavia. Then dismissing the idea of enmity, he declared Italy could not wait forever for Yugo-Slavia to settle its domestic problems, and warned that treaties would be no good anyway if a friendly, moral atmosphere between the two peoples was not developed. He ridiculed the prediction made by a former Yugo-Slav minister that war soon would break out between the two countries, ending with a peace signed at Venice. He had nothing to say concerning the disputes with Austria about Upper Adige, but announced that a treaty would soon be signed with France that would settle all outstanding differences between the French and Italians.

Mussolini spoke at some length about the astonishing growth of the United States in wealth and world power. He said he had no complaint to make against American immigration restrictions and the Italian quota, though deploring the reasons which prompted that legislation. "As for the naturalized Americans of Italian origin," he continued, "they are American citizens and therefore foreigners so far as we are concerned. We limit ourselves to hoping they will continue to be proud of their Italian origin."

ATLANTIC CITY having abandoned its annual beauty contest, the "international pageant of pulchritude" held in Galveston attracted the attention of those who enjoy such affairs. Selected beauties from many states and a number of foreign countries gathered in the Texas city, and paraded along the sea wall. Miss Ella Van Houson, the entrant from Chicago was first chosen as "Miss America" and then being adjudged the most pulchritudinous of the whole lot, was crowned "Miss Universe." She is twenty-two years old, tall and slender, with long, dark brown hair. The other prize winners in their order were the girls from France, Italy, Colorado, West Virginia, Canada, Luxembourg, Ohio, San Antonio and Teja.

Train 250,000 in Summer Camps

United States to Spend $20,000,000 for Preparedness This Year.

Washington.—Uncle Sam will materially aid the great out-of-doors movement in America this summer by sending more than 250,000 men into barracks and life in tents, clad in army uniforms, to get fresh air and exercise, as part of his preparedness program. Into this mighty task he will pour many millions of dollars and a world of effort.

During a 15-day period more than 19,000 reserve officers of the army will be put through their paces. Ten of these officers will be put on duty here with the War department for a year, 110 with the air corps for a year, 144 from six weeks to three months with the service schools, and 336 with the citizens' military training camps as instructors. In the reserve officers' training corps camps, lasting six weeks, 7,200 students from colleges and universities will be given a taste of real military life. From that source the army will draw many of its officers of the future.

Will Train 33,000 Youths. More than 33,000 of the youth of the nation will be fitted for 30 days' training in the citizens' military training camps and more than 161,000 men of the country's National Guard.

Assisting in training all these various branches of the military establishment, which is now known as the army of the United States, will be 12,000 officers and 118,750 enlisted men of the regular army and 6,000 Philippine scouts. Nearly the entire regular army will be used in training the civilian components, but in addition the "regulars" themselves will have exercises and maneuvers.

The bill for the summer training activities of the government will be close to $20,000,000. For the National Guard $9,693,532 will be expended for pay and allowances. For the reserve officers $2,583,667 has been allotted by congress, with $673,552 for those to be in training for a period greater than fifteen days and with $463,614 allowed for mileage to take them to and from camps. For the U. S. M. T. C. $2,801,240 has been set aside for mileage and other expenses. For the R. O. T. C. $2,970,000 is allowed for total upkeep. These training centers are located all over the country in each army corps area and will be in full blast from June 15 to September 1.

While the army is busily engaged putting the finishing touches on plans for the summer camps, the navy, too, is busy.

Navy to Train 9,500 Sailors. Tentative plans of the navy call for training 1,325 officers and 9,500 enlisted men. This represents a jump in the number of enlisted men for last year only 5,285 underwent training. A large share of the naval reservists' training will be aboard the department utilizing twenty-five destroyers. In addition to four gunboats on the Great Lakes for the 15-day training periods.

The marine corps is also shaping up plans for summer training. Most of the training is done at Quantico, Va., and it is expected that about 600 men and 200 officers will receive a stiff infantry workout.

Poker Game of Chance, Is Ruling for All Italy

Rome.—Poker is a game of chance. Italy's court of cassation, the highest in the land has ruled, and the Fascist newspapers which have been conducting strong anti-gambling campaigns, rejoice editorially.

Little games of penny ante at home or club are not likely to be disturbed at the decision since it stipulates that the "ain or lure" must be established as the preliminary to any prosecution.

Also "the account must be taken of the age and social and economic condition of the player," in other words professional poker and playing for high stakes by the working classes is distinctly discouraged.

Two men were arrested for playing poker in a cafe of Novara. They were gambling, ruled the judge of the lower court. Mere recreation maintained both defendants, who then appealed to the court of cassation.

Lindy "Angel Gabriel" to Mexican Indian Village

Mexico City.—Lindbergh is the Angel Gabriel to an Indian village in Chiapas, near the Guatemalan border, and probably always will be. Travelers from the tropics have brought in the tale that at the time Lindbergh flew from Mexico to Guatemala this village became excited over the story that an image of the Virgin of Guadalupe had miraculously appeared upon the trunk of a great palm tree. Accounts of such appearances crop up often in various parts of Mexico.

Investigators could not find the image. The Indians insisted it had been there. "As proof that the image appeared," they said, "there was another miracle that day. The Angel Gabriel flew over our village to see the image himself. We saw the image and we saw the Angel Gabriel."

The Indians had never heard of Lindbergh and when told of him refused to believe. The rest of the world may accept, if it pleases, that Lindbergh flew that day from Mexico City to Guatemala City. The Indians hold to the Angel Gabriel theory.

War Grenades Still Take Toll of Lives

Paris.—Nearly ten years after the conclusion of the armistice old shells and grenades of the great war still are claiming a toll of lives and injuries.

Explosions of these war relics, found in former battlefields, cause casualties of some sort practically every week. Eight people recently were killed and seven were gravely wounded within three days in various parts of France when they tried to take home these deadly souvenirs of the war.

A catastrophe which might have cost many lives was averted near Douai by the timely discovery of an old German mine loaded with 200 kilograms of powder in front of the Labor court station. The explosive had been buried two meters deep so as to blow up the station, tracks and neighboring buildings by electric connections. Had a worker's pick struck the shell, as it almost did, war plans would have been realized a decade too late.

Although many of the victims are persons desirous of having sinister reminders of the world conflict, a great number are junk dealers who are trying to utilize valuable metal to be found in old war material. Still others are children who strike the explosive just to see if they will go off.

Moose Unafraid of Man on Lake Superior Isle

Winnipeg.—Isle Royale, in Lake Superior, off Port Arthur, Ont., is of interest not only to the naturalist and advocate of conservation of wild life in North America, but to students of ancient civilizations on the continent as well. Frank M. Warren, vice president of the Minneapolis chapter of the Izaak Walton league, said at a reunion of the Veteran Scouts' association in Fort William.

Isle Royale lies in northern Lake Superior, 16 miles off the Canadian mainland. It teems with wild animal and bird life, the speaker said, and also was the scene of copper mining of ancient Americans. Ruined shaft houses and shallow pits there are to be excavated this summer by scientists from American universities studying these ancient people.

Mr. Warren said that several thousand moose live on the island without fear of man. Naturalists have been able to go there and carry on studies of moose and other wild life as in no other part of the country.

GOTHAM POLICEMAN FINDS HE OWNS FAMOUS FIDDLE

Stradivarius Lay in Coal Bin for Thirty Years Until Daughter Decided to Learn to Play.

New York.—A Stradivarius violin which for 30 years lay in the dust in a grimy coal bin in Port Chester has just been discovered. The instrument is the property of John Dyer, who, though he lives in Port Chester, does duty as a patrolman in Rye. Recently Patrolman Dyer went into a Port Chester music shop with a brown paper parcel under his arm. He had an old fiddle, he said, and wanted the coal dust cleaned out of it, because his daughter desired to learn to play the violin.

The dealer picked up the instrument, blew some of the coal grime off, and squinted inside. Right then and there he offered the policeman $1,500 for his fiddle. Afterward Dyer said that if the offer had been $5 he would have accepted it gladly. The size of the offer interested him to such an extent that, though dealers from all Westchester bargained with him, he took the violin to New York. Experts found that the instrument was a No. 5 Stradivarius, made in 1736. The policeman promptly had it insured for $50,000.

Back in Rye, Robert Kahn a musician played on the fiddle—by then it was quite free from coal dust—and offered Dyer $22,000 for it. Dyer received $75 from Kahn, who used the instrument a week in concerts in Philadelphia. When he returned to the policeman placed the fiddle in the vault of the Port Chester National bank.

Beyond the fact that his father gave him the instrument to play with Patrolman Dyer knows little about the violin. It is believed, however, that his grandfather possessed it. It

Sickly Rose Bushes Should Be Burned

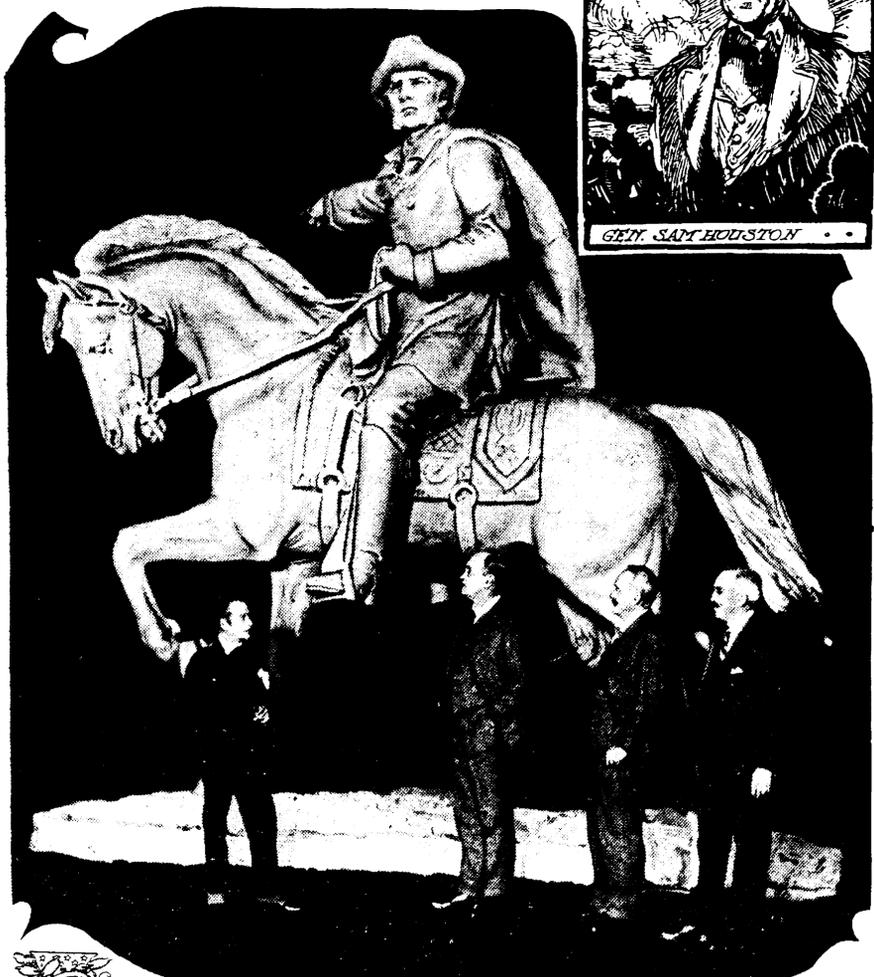

Washington.—Burning of all infested plants, Department of Agriculture investigators have concluded, is the only way to eradicate graft canker after it attacks rose bushes which have been grafted.

The disease sometimes appears on or near the point where the stock and scion are joined, affecting either or both, and if it entirely circles the stem the bark cracks, the wood tissue becomes rotted and water soaked, and the plant quickly dies.

Some plants are more susceptible than others to this disease, which may be detected by the formation of the canker or callus and the wilting of the leaves. It is most likely to appear in forcing frames and no means of control are known for plants once infected.

A Colossus in Buckskin

SAM HOUSTON MONUMENT IN CITY OF HOUSTON ©Underwood & Underwood

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

With the eyes of the nation turning toward Houston, Texas, where the Democratic party will soon be engaged in choosing its nominee for President, it is particularly appropriate that the name of the man for whom this city was named should be rescued from the comparative obscurity which has been its fate and that the deeds and importance of this man in our national history should be made better known to all Americans. There are thousands of cities and towns in the United States named after men, but comparatively few of these individuals are worthy of having their names thus perpetuated. If ever a man deserved that honor, however, surely it was Sam Houston of whom it has recently been said "Unless 'Old Sam Jacinto' is known and understood, until he is given his just dues, there can be no clear and proper understanding of the stars that stud the flag. Leave Sam Houston out of the story, and the American chronicle is a thing of gaps and many unintelligibilities, for not only did he make history at various times, but in a great critical period he WAS history."

Although three states vie for the honor of calling Sam Houston their own, he belongs not only to them but to the whole nation. So it is appropriate that the name "Houston" should be upon the tongue of all Americans within the next few weeks. It is also appropriate that there should appear at this time a new biography of "Old Sam Jacinto" such as George Creel's "Sam Houston—A Colossus in Buckskin," published recently by the Cosmopolitan Book Corporation.

That sweeping characterization of Houston, the new biographer justifies in this statement:

Between Hernando de Soto, first to blaze a trail through the wildernesses of the New World, and Kit Carson, last of the great frontiersmen, streams an endless procession of tremendous figures—Homer in courage and achievement, flaming hugely against the dull background of uniformity, yet not in the whole colorful story of America as there record of a more amazing career than that of Sam Houston, the Colossus in Buckskin—a man who won an empire for his country.

From the cradle to the grave he walked with drama. As a boy he ran away from home to live in the wigwams of the Cherokees, serving under Andrew Jackson in the war against the Creeks; he led the charge that carried the Indian breastworks, receiving wounds that stretched him on the ground for dead, elected congressman and then governor by the adoring Tennesseans, even the Presidency was not beyond his hopes, yet that happened which sent him into exile between two suns; seeking refuge with the Cherokees for a second time, drink and melancholy sank him to a dark level beneath the regard of men; entering Texas, resolved to build a new life in a new land, he lifted himself high above his degradation; and when the coldest rose in rebellion against the brutal tyrannies of a Mexican dictator, it was a clear-eyed, indomitable Houston who marshaled ragged volunteers, conducted masterful retreats and finally, crushed Santa Anna and his army in a day of slaughter.

His later years were no less packed with color and high accomplishment. As President of the Lone Star Republic, he beat down the greeds, impatience and vagaries of men, building firm and enduring foundations under the tottering superstructure of government. Which States, he suffered deposition, rather than surrender his principles, and walked out of office to the humble cabin that was his home, old, poor and proscribed, but with his head unshaken.

Such was the career which enables its chronicler to say by way of summary:

A greater, nobler figure, with worthy to rank with the Washingtons and Adamses of America, yet save in the Southwest, born of 18th century, Sam Houston is not a name known in detail only to the inquiring few. Out of the annexation of Texas, an expansion important enough in itself, came the Mexican war that added California, New Mexico, Arizona, Nevada and Utah to the Union, yet schoolbooks either ignore Houston's connection with these epochal events, or else confine themselves to casual and misleading mention.

While the average American may be but faintly interested in the work of Houston, the empire-builder, he can not fail to be stirred by the deeds of Houston, the man. We can admire the pure zeal he displayed when he received that dreadful wound in the assault on the Indian stronghold at Tohopeka, but we must admire more the moral courage he displayed when he faced a vast crowd of Texans, dejected their hasty decision for secession and dared to predict defeat for the South. For "it is far easier to do something spectacular with all the world applauding than it is to stand square for a principle and to flout the mighty monarch, Majority."

Small wonder then that three states should claim him as their own. Virginia's claim lies in the fact that he was born March 2, 1793 at Timber Ridge in Rockbridge county not far from Lexington, the son of Samuel Houston, who served in the Revolution as one of Daniel Morgan's stalwart riflemen, and one of those pioneer mothers, who were "tall and strong" and a fit mate for such a man. Last year Virginia, with Texas cooperating, erected a monument at that place and there each year memorial ceremonies are held on April 21, the anniversary of Sam Houston's greatest victory, the battle of San Jacinto.

When the elder Samuel Houston died in 1867, his wife took her six sons and three daughters with her over the Alleghenies and established them a pioneer home on the borders of the Cherokee nation in eastern Tennessee. So Tennessee spreads upon the record of its contribution to national history that she sent Sam Houston to his first war under the leadership of her greatest hero, Andrew Jackson, in his expedition against the Creeks; that she sent him to represent her in congress and that she later made him her governor.

Texas' claim to Sam Houston is based upon events too well known to need repeating here. The events themselves are well known, but the significance of these events and the man responsible for them are not such common knowledge and that is why the appearance of a new biography of Houston at a time when it will be easiest for his name to be recalled is a happy circumstance. Virginia, Tennessee and Texas may claim Sam Houston for their own but as his contribution to the building of the United States becomes better known, these three states must share him with all their sister commonwealths. For this Colossus in Buckskin like all other empire-builders, belongs to us all.

By a method devised by Prof. George E. Boggs of Princeton University, models now made in celluloid are tested in mercury and the same information is secured at a greatly decreased expenditure.

How Come?
Auto Dealer—Police station?
Voice on Phone—Yeah, What's wrong?
Auto Dealer—I've got a suspicious character here—he wants to pay cash for a used car!

She had made up her mind to that. Some day she had hoped to dress up and look like other folks. Silas was used to folks who dressed in pretty clothes. He rode with them in their cars. Their names suited him, too, she supposed.

He was a great man, they thought. Maybe he was. She loved him, but she didn't know what a great man was like. He knew all about scenery, but she was plumb tired of scenery. She liked the cities and the big buildings he brought home to her on postcards. She couldn't expect to know much in this little mountain town. She ought to be able to talk to Silas as the folks he took sight-seein' talked.

Back in town they heard the big clock on the postoffice strike four. Silas put the last trout in the basket and wound up his reel. He was thinking of the home which he enjoyed to the fullest extent of his nature; the screened-in porch with pots of red geraniums scattered about; the kitchen floor all covered in blue and white oilcloth; a pretty room where Belinda loved to cook. All the townsfolk said she was the best cook in Treatville. Well, he'd second that motion.

Belinda put on her bonnet as she saw him coming. She would lean on Silas' arm going home. Then tomorrow or the next day or maybe the next some one would come for him and he would be gone again; not long trips, but he'd be gone. She'd put on extra fixings tonight—the sliced beets round, the edge of the blue platter that had belonged to her mother, the tablecloth with crocheting on the edge.

It was two days later that an oil magnate came. Did Silas know of a good cook, a woman of good appearance and worth. They were to start that very night for California. Belinda clasped her hands. Californian! Silas had never been in California! A good cook? That request sent her into the house to her own quiet room. "Would I be a woman of good appearance if I had on them beads?" she thought. "Would Silas let her go?" Seating herself in her rocker, she rocked back and forth. The men had gone for more gasoline. She was safe; no other cook in town could please Mr. Gower. She'd cooked trout for him time and again. "Maybe he was hintin' to Silas that he wants me to go," she mused as she rose and took down her bonnet from the shelf. "Maybe he didn't like to ask right out loud. Now, Lindy Peterkin, you go this minute, and buy one of them blue floutin' veils to cover this bonnet and to match your blue beads. They're yours, now, cause you've got the money you earned yourself to pay for 'em, and don't you come back empty-handed again."

It was the third day out that Belinda really dared to talk when Silas came to the back seat again to keep her company. Mr. Gower had been kinder in his praise of her cooking than usual when she had fried the potatoes and trout along the way; he had sent his man back to make her more comfortable with cushions. He had given her the first box of "New York candy." She had ever owned, and when they stopped at the cities and towns she was to eat in the big hotels; but the cause of the silence which had possessed her, which filled her heart with unexpressed joy, brought forth such an outburst of gratitude that Silas was amazed. "If you wasn't a great man, Silas Peterkin, Mr. Gower wouldn't ever have asked you to manage his big place in California, and we live right there."

"And if I didn't have a good pal to help me keep up the appearances, Lindy," he answered, "I'd never have accepted the honor my employer bestowed."

SILAS APPRECIATED HIS PAL

(By D. J. Walsh)

SILAS ADOLPHUS PETERKIN, followed by his faithful, hungry-eyed wife, climbed slowly to the rocky slope leading to the most picturesque stream in their vicinity. His hand grasped the fishing rod firmly as though in preparation of a good day's catch. "I hate to bother the frisky little fellers, Belinda," he said pleasantly. "I wouldn't ketch 'em if we didn't get hungry way up here in these high mountains."

Belinda received his usual outburst in silence; somehow she didn't feel like talking today; it seemed so good to have Silas home again, although she felt proud when the big prospectors of the country employed him as their guide.

When they reached the brow of the slope Silas halted for a silent approval of the valley below. He loved these mountains and he wasn't ashamed of the sentiment he felt. He knew them from ridge to ridge, every snow-capped peak, each precipitous chasm. He was the inspiration of the tourists. Many an excursion he had conducted in safety to some perilous place of wonder in the range, many more had declined because of Belinda; it wasn't fair that she should take all her pleasures second-handed. He spent hours telling her stories of the great world outside. She had never been away from these mountains, they had shut her in until she had almost ceased to think of anyone but Silas.

"Some day," Silas constantly told himself, "I'm going to take Belinda some place; I don't know where." As they climbed up and again hurried on he glanced toward her contentedly. "Belinda," he told her, "I get more out of livin' than I guess most folks do."

Belinda held up one foot as though both to take another forward step. "Life is like this rocky road," she contributed.

"You ain't seen life," he hastened to console her. "I can't somehow ever get enough money to take you into it—the cities where there's music and folks smile because they know things."

"You better rest a while now, hadn't you, Silas? We can set right here on this rock."

Silas drew himself up in the strength of his spirit, his long, lithe body, the picture of the freedom he felt. "Me take an old-age tonic? Jerushy's kingdom! No-see," he cried as he caught her up in his arms and hurried on down the hill.

NEARBY and YONDER

By T. T. Maxey

The Keystone State's Capitol
FOR massiveness of construction and outstandingness in its home town, Harrisburg, the impressive capitol of Pennsylvania, ranks high among the beautiful capitols of America. Dedicated in 1906, the cost of building, furnishings and equipment was more than $11,000,000.

A description prepared by the state librarian relates: "The capitol building is 520 feet long, 254 feet wide and 272 feet high. It covers two acres of ground and is half a mile in circumference. It is larger than St. Paul's cathedral, for the building of which Sir Christopher Wren was knighted. It is longer than Westminster abbey. The building contains 475 rooms. The dome, which has been called 'the heart of the capitol,' weighs 52,000,000 pounds. Every country in the world contributed material for the construction and furnishing of the building, and the most famous artists in the world devoted their talents to making it beautiful."

Each of the great main entrance bronze doors were cast in one piece and weigh a ton. The governor's reception room is 72 by 27 feet. The senate chamber is 35 by 80 feet. The house of representatives is larger and even more ornate. The stained-glass windows in both are celebrated examples of the art. The great paintings which ornament both legislative halls have called forth unstinted praise.

In the dome are set the memorable words of Penn., the founder of the state: "There may be room there for such a holy experiment. For the nations want a precedent. And my God will make it the seed of a nation. That an example may be set up to the nations. That we may do the thing that is truly wise and just."

Continental Slippage

CERTAIN errors disclosed in longitudinal records have given rise to suspicion that this continent may have slipped or skidded sidewise. Naval observatory officials, determined to solve this puzzling problem, have worked out a plan of procedure. Leading governments located on other continents have become interested and joined in this most extraordinary undertaking.

A big job. And yet a comparatively simple one! The process is termed world longitudinal determination. This is how they go about it:

For a period of 60 days powerful wireless stations owned by the co-operating governments, and stations in California, China and Africa, forming a world girdle, sent out frequent time signals, each at carefully predetermined times. Meanwhile, leading observatories in America and Europe radio-broadcast accurate time signals. All such signals received were painstakingly recorded by all interested parties. After making proper allowances for necessary lapse time in the process of signal transmission and synchronizing all records, the tabulated result of the combined record time scientists declare, should disclose whether America has slipped and, if so, which way and how far.

If it develops that continental slippage has occurred, those engaged in the work hold out no hope and in fact have no plan for forcing the continent back to its former position. It shall have to remain right where they find it to be. They do point out, however, that the finding will enable the interested governments to correct their official maps and longitudinal records and eliminate the uncertainty which has prevailed, all of which will be of immeasurable value from astronomical and geographical standpoints.

Cotton in Auto Tires

Most motorists know of the important part that cotton plays in the sturdy carcass of an automobile tire. But it is not generally known that cotton fiber of length required for tire cords is raised in only two similar but widely separated areas. The delta regions of the Mississippi river, in this country, and of the Nile river in Egypt produce almost all the cotton for the highest grade tires.

Mummy Still in Tomb

(By T. T. Maxey)

The mummy of King Tut-Ankh-Amen was removed by Mr. Carter under the permission of the Egyptian authorities, to the museum of Cairo for exhibition purposes. The inside of the golden coffin, the golden mask, with the shroud of pall, were also exhibited for a time and then Mr. Carter replaced the mummy in the sarcophagus or outside case in the tomb October 31, 1927.

The Way to Wealth

The way to wealth is as plain as the way to market. It depends chiefly on two words, industry and frugality; that is, waste neither time nor money, but make the best use of both. Without industry and frugality nothing will do, and with them every thing.—Benjamin Franklin.

Expensive Laugh

It is mighty pleasant to raise a laugh and to tingle to the applause of one's wit, says the modern philosopher, but there is no surer way of rousing the hate of that wit's butt.—American Magazine.

Prisoners Thrive Outdoors

Sunshine and open-air work are the best and most advisable in the treatment of prisoners, believe administrators of Swedish prisons. In the near future the obligatory one-year confinement in cells for those under sentences of 20 years or more will be reduced to 6 months. It is not always wholesome for prisoners to be alone with their thoughts, the authorities say, and often cases of physical de-

J. STUART LATHERS PLAYERS

To Present Booth Tarkington Play Here June 26

On next Monday evening, June 26, at the Pinckney Community Hall, starting at 8:15 o'clock, the J. Stuart Lathers Players of the Ypsilanti Normal will present Booth Tarkington's comedy, "The Intimate Stranger." The players consist of Carl Bettall Smith, Dearborn; Bernice A. Dendel, Allegan; Helen M. Shoup, Oxford; Von E. Kinsley, Quincy; Marjorie Adams, Flint; and Doursoff E. Morley, Ypsilanti. All are students or graduates of Michigan State College and have appeared together in a wide range of plays. They are making a tour of thirty towns in Michigan during the summer.

The play, "The Intimate Stranger," is a very clever and humorous play dealing with the love affair and its complications of a middle-aged man and a woman of uncertain age who meet when they are forced to spend a night in a deserted railway station. Tarkington is perhaps at his very best in this play.

The play was first presented in Ypsilanti in a packed house where it was so enthusiastically received that they are to appear there again this summer.

The admission is forty cents for adults and thirty for children. It is well worth the time and money to see this group of players.

Mr. and Mrs. Will Fiske entertained Sunday, Vern Fisk and family of Monroe, Miss Una Fisk, Win Martin and Clarence Fisk of Detroit.

The Circuit Court for the County of Livingston in Chancery

Roy K. Darwin and Edith E. Darwin, Plaintiffs

Jacob Corry or his unknown heirs, devisees, legatees and assigns, Defendants

Suit pending in the Circuit Court for the County of Livingston in Chancery, at Howell, Michigan, on the 2nd day of May, 1928.

In this cause it appearing by affidavit on file and from the sworn bill of complaint filed in said cause, that the plaintiffs after diligent search and inquiry, have not been able to ascertain whether the said defendant is alive or dead or where he may reside or if living or if he has any personal representatives or heirs living, or where they or any of them may reside, or whether the title interest, claim lien or possible right of said defendant has been assigned to any other person or persons, or whether such title interest, claim, lien or possible right has been disposed of by will by the said defendant.

And it further appearing that the plaintiffs do not know and have not been able after diligent search and inquiry to ascertain the names of the persons who are included as defendants without being named.

Upon motion, therefore, of Hiram R. Smith, attorney for plaintiffs, it is ordered that the above named defendant and his unknown heirs, devisees, legatees and assigns cause their appearance to be entered herein within three months from the date hereof, and that in default thereof said bill be taken as confessed by said defendants and each and all of them.

It is further ordered that the plaintiffs cause this order to be published within forty days in the Pinckney Dispatch, a newspaper printed, published and circulating in said County, in said County, once in each week for at least six successive weeks.

Joseph H. Collins, Circuit Judge
