Vice Pres. Mrs. B. C. Diller
Secretary Miss Blanche Martin

WILLIAM E. HARRIS

William E. Harris, son of Martin and Mary Harris was born in the old log house which stood on the old Harris farm in Putnam township Feb. 10, 1852 and died at the home of his brother, John M. Harris, Jan. 2, 1929 aged 76 years and 10 months. During his younger days he followed the profession of farming and was the owner of a farm south of town which he later sold to Patrick Kennedy and moved to Jackson where he lived for fifteen years. About three years ago he returned to Pinckney to make his home with his sister, Mrs. Casper Volmer. She passed away in Dec. 1927. Last spring he suffered a paralytic stroke and was taken to the home of his brother, John M. Harris where he was tenderly cared for until the end.

The funeral was held from St. Mary's Church, Pinckney Saturday at 10:00 Rev. Leo Dorsey officiating. Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery.

MRS. MARY MURPHY

Mrs. Mary Murphy, aged 81 years, widow of the late James Murphy died at her home in Grand Rapids January 4. She was formerly Mary Harris, a sister of Henry Harris of this place. Surviving here are six children. The funeral and burial were held at Grand Rapids Tuesday.

SCHOOL NOTES

The Debating team debates at Gaines Friday evening. The Pinckney team has won two debates while upholding the negative side of the question. At Gaines they will debate on the affirmative side.

Semester tests will be given the last week in January.

The students who were absent because of illness have all returned to school.

Classes in High School are beginning to review for semester tests.

The basketball team goes to Howell Friday evening. Pinckney finds it a difficult proposition to place a team in the field this year. Her men are exceptionally small and in basketball stand little chance against the tall rangy boys that can be picked from schools with larger enrollments. However, Pinckney is endeavoring to keep the sport alive by building a team around Roy Reason a capable player who has represented the school for two years.

The following is the Pinckney High School basket ball schedule:

- Jan. 11 Howell Reserves at Howell
- Jan. 17 Howell Reserves here
- Jan. 25 open
- Feb. 1 St. Thomas there
- Feb. 8 open
- Feb. 15 Dexter here
- Feb. 19 St. Thomas here
- March 1 Dexter there

CHELSEA PLAYS HERE TONIGHT

The Chelsea All Stars will play the Pinckney Independents at the Pinckney Community Hall tonight. This team defeated Pinckney handily in the first game of the season. However, Pinckney expects to have a strong team on the floor this time and plans to use the same lineup with which she won the Byron game except Weddige who has returned to college. Mayron will replace him. Come out and help the attendance and we will show you a good game.

A preliminary game will be played between the Pinckney high school and the reserves.

PINCKNEY BEATS BYRON

Pinckney did the unexpected last Friday evening when they defeated Byron at Byron by a score of 19 to 13. The flu and the migration of several players to Detroit left the Pinckney team short they secured Sopp and Miller of Fowlerville for this game in order to have a full team. The game was a dandy first one side taking the lead and then the other. Pinckney scored first on a field goal by W. Miller but Badgero knotted the count for Byron. Score at the first quarter Pinckney 2, Byron 2. In the second quarter Sopp got two field goals and Miller a field goal and a foul goal. Badgero got 2 for Byron and Henry and Van Alstyne each one. Score Byron 10, Pinckney 9. Pinckney forged ahead in the 3rd when Sopp got a field goal and Weddige two while Byron only got one. Score Pinckney 15, Byron 12. Byron made a strong comeback in the last period and scored 6 points leaving Pinckney one behind with half a minute to go. However Pinckney came through when Weddige got another goal and won by a single point.

JOHN JACOB TFELE

John Jacob Tfele was born May 22 1846 in Stenben County State of New York and departed this life on Dec. 31 1928 attaining the age of 82 years 8 months.

He was married to Helen Amelia Colman on Dec. 15 1867 and to the union was born four sons, viz. Charles J. of Pinckney, Percy G. of Marquette, Roy H. of Manistique and Guy L. of Jackson, Michigan, all surviving.

Coming to Michigan with Jacob, his father and family, their first residence was on the Jesse Burroughs farm in Hamburg township where they remained until the next spring 1850 when they established their first residence in Pinckney. At the age of 17 he became connected with the General Store of W.S. Mann where in the 12 years connected with the firm he obtained his business training.

In 1870 he entered into partnership with John A. Cadwell forming the firm of Tfele & Cadwell engaging in a General Hardware business of 25 years when Mr. Cadwell retired and the Tfele Hardware succeeded it. 19 years afterwards the fire destroying the large Main Store building, carried the stock and store of the Tfele Hardware with it. For the past 6 years he has remained in retirement after having been in a continuous Hardware business for nearly sixty years. On Dec. 24 1910 he suffered the loss of his wife Helen which undermined the great determination which carried him along and broke the great spirit which he had long cherished. With his home town, his community always foremost, his always congenial and friendly nature surrounded him with a host of friends which he greatly enjoyed, always a clean, loving and loyal father was the record left to his monument.

The funeral was held from the home of Charles J. Tfele Wednesday at 2:00 P.M. Rev. Hurlbert of Unadilla officiating. Burial was in the Pinckney cemetery. BOYNE CITY LOOKS TO TOURISTS

Boyne City has three and one-half miles of front on Lake Charlevoix. Ten years ago this front was lined with mills and factories; manufacturing plants piled their products on the docks and fleets of ships carried material to every port on the Great Lakes. Rail connections to the main trunk line placed the town at the doorstep of all the big markets.

Today but one of the plants remains. The smoking stacks, by which the incoming ships found their range, the towering stacks of lumber, piles of logs and cords of pig iron have disappeared. The waters of the lake are not vexed by the wake of hurrying boats. For half a decade the water front has been as quiet as a country churchyard. Here and there are great concrete structures, foundations of the busy hives of industries that had been. Residents have talked of "cleaning up the lake front," which resembles nothing so much as an area of devastated France. Three miles of slabs, millions of feet, in some places piled in 40 feet of water, is no small item to get rid of.

The Progressive club has taken up the work and is diligently clearing away the old ruins. The boom of dynamite is heard continuously, breaking up the old walls. The city is preparing to capitalize its beautiful location on Lake Charlevoix by making it attractive to the constantly increasing number of tourists. With the 25 miles of lake shore immediately contiguous on Lake Charlevoix, beside the 30 miles on Walloon lake, nearby, Boyne City promises to be a conspicuous resort center.

White Star Plans Large Oil Refinery for Detroit

The White Star Refining Co. is bringing to its home state a large new industry. H. B. Earhart, president and founder of the company, announces plans have been approved and ground broken for a second refinery, which means Michigan soon will have one of the finest and most modern petroleum refineries in the country.

Some time ago the White Star Refining Co. purchased more than 60 acres of land fronting on the Detroit, Toledo & Ironton railroad and located on the outskirts of Detroit, near Trenton.

For some years White Star has conducted its refinery operations at Wood River, Ill., near St. Louis. Its refinery at that point handles 210,000 gallons of crude oil daily. The new plant at Detroit will handle more than 250,000 gallons of crude oil daily. Upon completion of the Detroit refinery both plants will handle in excess of 160,000,000 gallons of crude oil annually.

Since little crude oil is produced in Michigan most of the raw material for the Detroit refinery will be transported all the way from Oklahoma and Texas. The entire 60 acres will be required to house the huge cracking stills, fractionating towers and storage tanks. The refinery will operate its own fire department.

All's Well That Ends Well

State Seeks Legislation to Protect Oil-Gas Wealth

Effective surface control of the Michigan oil and gas properties is to be sought by the state. R. A. Smith, state geologist, announces that proposed legislation has already been prepared and is being redrafted by the attorney general's office to avoid possible faults or loopholes that would make it ineffective.

There is a law on the books now which empowers the state to control the drilling, casing and plugging of wells, but there is no legal lever that may be used to cover ground operations about the wells. The department of conservation discovered this fact when it attempted to compel operators to conserve natural gas that was being turned into the air. The court denied an injunction to halt the waste and so far as legal responsibility was concerned, the operators were permitted to do about as they pleased in this direction.

"I venture to say," Geologist Smith stated, "that the waste of gas in the Traverse sand alone has been worth as much as all the oil that has flowed or has been pumped from this formation. We want to conserve this gas, if possible, and some of our proposed legislation is for this purpose."

If possible, the department wants to write a law into the books that will curb the city lot drilling practice. Oil and gas fields are always injured and often ruined by over-drilling. In the case of a field, extends into a suburban district of a city, every lot owner has the privilege of drilling a well. If several men in the same neighborhood choose to exercise their rights, the field is almost certain to be spoiled, so far as quantity production is concerned. The law, however, should permit the lot owners to drill and operate under a community lease.

January Parley Date of I. O. O. F. Set at Buchanan

The next district meeting of the Odd Fellow lodges of this part of the state will be held Jan. 18 in Benton Harbor.

At the recent meeting held at Buchanan one of the largest throngs to attend an Odd Fellow meeting in the St. Joseph valley was present at the grand encampment, I. O. O. F., in Odd Fellow hall.

Guests were present from South Bend, Benton Harbor, Niles, Dowagiac and numerous other St. Joseph valley points and the encampments of Benton Harbor and Niles attended in a body.

Grand Patriarch Reynolds of Ann Arbor, and Grand Scribe Hoyt of Battle Creek were guests of honor and gave addresses.

Following the conferring of the Royal Purple degree on two candidates by the local degree team, dinner was served.

Aids Michigan Roads

Illinois, New York and Michigan are the three leading states in the amount of federal aid roads under construction, according to the annual report of Thomas H. MacDonald, chief of the U. S. bureau of public roads. The report indicates that there are 12,793 miles of such roads under construction in all states, to cost the federal government $105,297,000.

"During the fiscal year 1928," says Mr. MacDonald, "improvements were completed on 8,184 miles of federal aid road which had not previously been improved with federal assistance. Advanced stages of improvement were completed on 1,014 miles. At the close of the year initial improvements were in progress on 9,494 miles and advanced or stage construction was under way on 1,285 miles. The total cost of the 8,184 miles of initial construction and the 2,014 miles of stage construction completed was $205,043,784, of which the federal government paid $88,056,984, or 43 per cent, and the states the balance."

BARBER BLOCKS SUPER-HIGHWAY

A three-year lease on a barber shop, expiring in 1930, is responsible for the continued existence of a 20-foot bottleneck just outside of Detroit on widened Grand River avenue, through which must trickle all the traffic on US16 entering and leaving Detroit. The state highway department secured rear property along the line of the improvement and traded it with the owners of the property in exchange for the frontage taken to widen Grand River avenue as a superhighway.

The department, however, neglected to dicker with the brave barber, who refuses to let his shop be moved back to the equivalent site on the edge of the new pavement unless he is given over $5,000 to move. In the meantime the barber shop, a little one-story frame shack, sticks out like a sore thumb 20 feet upon the roadbed of the new pavement, which is completed to 40-foot width right up to it on either side. Westbound traffic has to detour into the lanes for eastbound traffic to pass the bottleneck. Confusion and traffic jams, particularly on congested Sundays, are the result.

Bones Found Where "King's" Victims Fell

The days when Count Louis Remy, French refugee, ruled as grand seigneur of Maple Island, a fertile tract of 1,800 acres between two channels of the Muskegon river, were recalled recently with the finding of three skeletons by road builders.

Remy, whose descendants came to be known as Beine and later as Bean, ruled as king of the island empire in the early 1840's and legend says that strangers who went to visit the little principality seldom returned. The founder of the colony, raised to the nobility by King Louis Philippe, was exiled when he was accused of plotting against his majesty's life. Coming to the Muskegon river island, he became an expert woodsman, and his descendants became wealthy through selling hay to logging camps and through damage suits when their lands were flooded by log jams.

And now some believe the bones found are the remains of some of the wilderness leader's supposed victims.

New Products Popular

Two new products of the Lansing Company, a sweeping compound and a boiler cleaning compound, are proving popular additions to the concern's varied lines and are being produced in quantity. The company makes contractor's equipment and wood products, producing considerable sawdust which by-product is used in making up the new compounds.

Does Frequent Camps

After the last loaded gun is cleaned and laid away to await another season, upper peninsula does creep out of their hiding places and respond to the urge given them to feed around lumber camps. Their timidity and fright soon give way to confidence and they frequent their camp feeding grounds, even boldly facing a camera in idle curiosity.

MAPS TELL WHERE FISH CAN LIVE

Streams in Michigan are being inventoried by the land economic survey division of the conservation department. Almost every characteristic of the various waterways from small brooks to large rivers is being indicated on maps that the survey is making. The depth, width and temperature of both air and water are taken. The surveyors determine whether the water is clear, stained or muddy, whether the current is slow, moderate or rapid, what the bottom material is, its tendency to flood and the obstructions that may be in it.

The fish hatchery is one of the first divisions to benefit from these facts. It is practically possible to tell whether or not a stream is adapted to the support of fish by merely studying the various facts on the map. Any citizen in the state desiring to know about a stream in any of the ten counties already surveyed may easily do so by securing some of these maps.

Civil Service Plan to Be Used by State Conservation Dept.

In the future prospective employees of the department of conservation must meet certain requirements imposed by the commission. The civil service plan is to be followed as the result of recommendations made to the commission by Director George R. Hogarth.

Director Hogarth has studied the situation for several months and has arrived at the conclusion that steps must be taken to improve the personnel of the field organization.

"After a careful study of our field organization over a 22-month period," Director Hogarth told the commission, "I am convinced that some radical changes must be made in the personnel; and above all, a new policy must be adopted as to manner of selecting our field workers."

The recommendation was immediately approved by the commission. He at once appointed a personnel committee that consists of the director of conservation, the chief forest fire warden, the chief conservation officer and the chief of the division in which the vacancy may exist. This group will carefully examine all properly qualified applicants for positions in the field force.

Some of the general requirements are that the applicant shall be at least 25 years of age and not over 50; that his physical condition must be such as to permit him to carry out the duties of his position; that he be of good character and his social standing in the community be unquestioned; that his training be such as to equip him for the work and that preference be given those who have previously served the department in a satisfactory manner. The applicant will be required to appear before the examining board and shall be willing to be stationed wherever the board may designate.

Selfridge Gets $503,000

Announcement has been made by Col. Charles H. Danforth, commandant at Selfridge Field, Mr. Clemens, that $503,000 will be expended in 1929 as part of the post's share of a $3,500,000 five-year building program. The 1929 schedule calls for the erection of new officers' quarters, administration buildings, six new steel hangars and a new hospital. Selfridge Field has already received $750,000 for a new construction as part of the program. Other projects being considered for the field include a sea wall, technical buildings and equipment.

Plans 30-Seat Planes

Ford Motor Company is contemplating construction of airplanes capable of carrying 25 to 30 passengers. The Detroit factory is experimenting with the use of airplane wings on ships of the dirigible type with an idea of combining the lifting power of the dirigible with the speed of the airplane. The factory also is experimenting with an engine to burn oil instead of gasoline for use in aircraft.

IONIA TO HAVE LEGION MEET

January 23 has been set as the date for the eighth district convention of the American Legion in Ionia. This district includes posts at Belding, Breckenridge, Frankenmuth, Greenville, Hubbardston, Lake Odessa, Ovid, Owosso, Saginaw, Saranac, St. Johns, St. Louis, Stanton, Lakeview and Ionia.

Gov. Fred W. Green will be invited to represent his home city and Attorney General Wilber M. Brucker will be a speaker. Commander Elwood M. Brake of John F. Girard post, which will be host, has called a meeting of the post to appoint committees.

Kroger Plans $1,500,000 Packing Plant in Detroit

Kroger Grocery and Baking Company is planning the erection of a $1,500,000 packing plant in Detroit. It will be of reinforced concrete construction, from one to seven stories high, and will be located on Dix and Stair avenues. Bids for the construction contract were taken by Henschon and McLaren, Chicago, Illinois architects.

The Detroit announcement is another link in the expansion of the Kroger chain, which has earned for itself the title of the fastest growing grocery chain in 1928. Its units are scattered widely throughout the United States. It will have a total of 5,269 stores in the system at the close of the year, as compared with 3,749 stores at the end of 1927. Its latest acquisition is the 300 stores operated by the Consumers Sanitary Coffee and Butter Stores, with headquarters in Chicago. The Sanitary company operates stores in Racine and Kenosha, Wis., and in many towns surrounding Chicago.

Sales of the Kroger company, showing gains every month and all indications are that the company will close the current year with business of more than $210,000,000, as compared with $161,261,353 in 1927. For the eleven months ended Nov. 30, 1928, sales totaled $186,649,278, an increase of $39,378,940 or 25.8 per cent over the corresponding period last year, and 16 per cent over the sales for the full year of 1927.

Hazel Park Justice Pays Shortage

After a conference with Prosecutor Clyde D. Underwood, Justice Thomas H. Maynard, Hazel Park, announced that he had settled all his accounts with the county and with the village of Berkley. He also received an order for $200 owed him by the county. Shortages in Justice Maynard's accounts led to the demand of Prosecutor Underwood that he resign. Maynard refused to state if his resignation would be forthcoming. Prosecutor Underwood previously stated that he would ask Governor Fred W. Green to remove Maynard if the resignation was not received.

CONTAGIOUS BRONCHIAL INFLUENZA IN POULTRY

Within the past few weeks Co. Agent, C.L. Bolander, has discovered a number of cases of contagious Bronchial Influenza. This is one of the most dreaded contagious diseases of poultry, and if control measures are not administered at once, severe loss will be the result. Farmers having fowls with bad colds or showing symptoms of choking will do well to report same to the County Agent at once. Treatment is effective administered in the early stages.

WEEK OF JANUARY 13
A marked change to warmer weather will be in progress at the beginning of the week of January 13 in Michigan. This moderation of the weather will last over the greater part of the week, and as we predicted last week, will not definitely break up until shortly after the beginning of the week of the 20th.

About Monday of this week the sky will become more overcast with clouds, winds will increase and storms of rain, sleet or snow will fall over many counties. In some parts of the state, at least, these falls of precipitation will be quite heavy. The worst days will be Monday and Tuesday and Thursday and Friday.

Clearing and colder weather will end this week.

A New Feature
Pritchards Weather Forecast is bringing out a new feature with this issue, one that may seem like superstition to some, "bunk" to others and a real help to still another class. One person will claim everything for one make of automobile while another can see no good in it, yet we find all makes of cars running on our highways. There must be some good in all. For this reason we are publishing this new feature for those people who will get something of value out of it.

Best Days This Week
For greenhouse and hothouse planting: Jan. 15 and 16, 9 to 10 a. m.; 11:30 to 12:30 p. m. Jan. 19, 9 to 10 a. m., 11 a. m. to 12:30 p. m. and 2:45 to 4:30 p. m.
For fishing: Jan. 14, 15 and 16.
For baking: Jan. 17 and 18.
For setting ducks, geese and turkeys: Jan. 17 and 18.

We invite the readers' comments or experiences on any of these matters. Please address correspondence either to this paper or direct to Pritchard's Weather Forecast, 463 Umatilla St., Grand Rapids, Mich.

State Consumers Are Fond of Milk

Michigan consumers drank more milk and ate more dairy products during the past year, the state bureau of dairying reports. Production of milk, however, was not increased, chiefly as a result of reduction in herds as a result of the removal of tubercular animals.

More butter was imported into the state, the bureau reported, as certain areas which formerly produced milk for butter production shifted into the whole milk business. The butter output was placed at 69,000,000 pounds, compared with 72,000,000 in the previous year. Moderate increases in sweet cream and ice cream consumption were reported.

Milk consumption was reported at 2,359,480,000 pounds, compared with 2,293,900,000 pounds in 1927.

The dairy bureau said Michigan has become one of the leading producers of powdered milk. Production has increased from 1,683,000 pounds in 1926 to 11,671,000 pounds during the past year.

JACK and JILL

By CLIFFORD WEBB

(Copyright, 1928, the Central Press Association, Inc.)

This idea seemed to have been taken for granted by everyone save the person most concerned. Jack Stuart did not favor Tony's boarding proposition. Small town gossip, he argued, was a thing to be reckoned with, and there were too many wagging tongues in Elliston that were, as Father Ryan had once declared, "slung on a pivot so as to flap at both ends." Nor did he favor the proposal of his wife and her living with her family when they were married. On the contrary, he suggested that Jill and he rent an apartment and keep house by themselves.

This suggestion met with a triple alliance of opposition. Father, son and daughter arrayed themselves against him. But Jack Stuart's forbears were Scotch. He was, therefore, endowed with a tenacity of purpose that stood the test of the triple combination. He won out in the final argument, but it was a long and hard-fought contest.

"You win, Jack dear," conceded the prospective bride at last, with a smile of such Madonna-like renunciation that the prospective bridegroom felt almost as if he were robbing her of her birthright. This, evidently, was the impression he conveyed to Father Ryan when discussing the matter with the priest.

"You are developing something in the nature of an inferior complex, I'm afraid, my son," the dominie told him, affecting an air of facetious banter as a mask to cover his seriousness. "Be careful you don't fashion a club from the whips of your sympathetic conscience for someone else to pound you with!"

"No danger, Father, of me ever being called upon to pay a price for my trust and belief in Jill," said Jack Stuart smiling, and so generous is Youth, with its unspent years, that he added with large indulgence, "Why, I'd stake my life on Jill's goodness of heart, on her virtue and her integrity."

Father Ryan offered no comment in response to his young friend's declaration of trust. His failure to rise to the call of youthful enthusiasm did not, however, dull the young man's curiosity materially. It occurred to Jack that Father Ryan had known Jill since birth, so naturally he would know about her mother.

"How long has Mrs. Justin been dead, Father?" he asked casually. "Or is she dead?"

He knew instantly his question was one of deeper import than he had expected to encounter. This was indicated by the gleam that leaped into the priest's tell-tale eyes.

"Mrs. Justin is—not dead," Father Ryan stated slowly, hesitatingly, as though the admittance cost him an effort. "At least," he added, in the same careful vein, "she was alive a month ago. She lives in New York with her brother, a bachelor. Peter and she separated 12 years ago."

The matter was shrouded in more or less mystery—incompatibility, it was said. Peter seldom mentions her name. The brother with whom she lives is fairly wealthy, I've heard. Jill has been to New York four or five times to visit her mother. Tony goes once or twice a year."

Peter Justin evidently considered his prospective son-in-law was entitled to an introduction to the family skeleton. The presentation, however, entailed scarcely anything more than Jack had already been told.

Misunderstandings, said Peter aggravated by dislike of life in a small town, and the fact that ease and luxury were hers for the taking, had all combined to bring about the separation. Thus matters stood in Peter Justin's family.

The stifling heat of the early September evening was beginning to abate, although the ground still gave off an enervating humidity. To escape the torrid discomfort Jack Stuart drew himself up into the high crotch of an ancient apple tree, the lofty branches of which brushed the eaves of the cottage. He would wait until Jill came out and surprise her. Twilight's darkening shadows creeping up the broad mountainside in the rear of the little home cast something of a gloom over the adjacent land. An ominous silence that invariably precedes an electrical storm hung over the entire valley like a great, threatening cloud.

Jack scarcely had settled himself in the tree crotch when the sound of a door opening behind him startled him. He had expected to be alone. He turned and saw Jill standing in the doorway, looking at him with a curious expression.

"I love you, Jill, dearest," he said, very softly. "You asked me if I had ever kissed any other girl. I've told you. She is married now to another man—went out of my life before you came into it. You are now and henceforth the one and only girl. Now, how about me? Have I any rivals to worry about?"

through the dulcet tones of her voice. "There's Dad Peter, and Father Pat, and Tony, and—oh, ever so many of familiar voices struck on his ear. He recognized Father Ryan's deep, booming tones, and the next instant the priest and Peter Justin paused under the apple tree. Even as he drew in his breath to speak—to make his presence known—he was silenced by the words he heard.

"Tell me how many girls have you ever kissed?" asked Jill.

CHAPTER V

"Jack Stuart has a right to know, Peter," the dominie was saying. The dark form in the crotch of the tree tensed. The priest continued: "He is to be one of your family, so you should tell him. Better by far that he should get the facts from you than have them come home to him unexpectedly some day."

"Quite right, Father Pat," came the clearly enunciated reply of Peter Justin. "I realized the need and I've already told him. He understands, I'm sure, that the subject, being of the nature it is, can't help being painful to me and also to Jill and Tony. It is tentatively agreed that we never refer to it again. I don't think there ever will be any cause."

"I hope not, Peter—I sincerely hope not!" was Father Ryan's ejaculatory comment, which struck the listener above as being oddly emphatic, considering the nature of the remark that had inspired it. A moment later the two men resumed their stroll, leaving a somewhat perplexed Jack Stuart to mull over the brief talk he had inadvertently overheard.

There seemed to be nothing particularly vague in Peter's words, although he couldn't recall anything his future father-in-law had told him unless it was in relation to the separation of himself and wife. Probably that was it.

But Father Pat's exclamation. He could find no reason for that. Nor did he find the reason—until a few years later.

"Jack!"
Dark eyes, liquid dark, and shot with mystic lights reflected by myriad stars overhead, looked up into gray eyes, also in the moon's silvery rays. In the somber depth of the orbs looking into his, Jack Stuart read again the story old stages have told since time immemorial. He bent his head and his lips met. Golden moments of love, winged, swiftly-fleeting moments, so sweet, so rare.

"You're bad, Jack," said the girl, a little tremulously. Then: "Tell me, Jack Stuart, how many girls have you ever kissed?" Such an original question. Even Jill smiled inwardly as she gave voice to it.

And Jack told her—the truth—which was a foolish thing to do. He told her he had kissed only one other girl in all his life. The lids of the dark eyes quivered, and then narrowed. She had not lived 20 years without acquiring some inside information as to what young men usually say on such an occasion. However, there were other things to be considered.

"Tell me about her, Jack," she said softly. "Who was she, where did she live, and what became of her? Did you love her dearly—and did she love you?"

And Jack told her—the truth; told her of the boy at 17, and the girl, Mona, who told the boy to put away his love story until he was 23; told her of his father's failure and death, and then of Mona's change of heart and his "pulling stakes."

"Do you love her yet, Jack?" asked Jill, trying, obviously, to put the question in a casual way and failing miserably.

Then it was that Jack Stuart showed himself the master lover. He took the girl, he had asked to marry him in his arms—drew her up very tenderly and very close, and again he kissed her—kissed her lips, her cheek, her eyes and throat and, then her forehead.

"I love you, Jill, dearest," he said, very softly. "You asked me if I had ever kissed any other girl. I've told you. She is married now to another man—went out of my life before you came into it. You are now and henceforth the one and only girl. Now, how about me? Have I any rivals to worry about?"

through the dulcet tones of her voice. "There's Dad Peter, and Father Pat, and Tony, and—oh, ever so many of familiar voices struck on his ear. He recognized Father Ryan's deep, booming tones, and the next instant the priest and Peter Justin paused under the apple tree. Even as he drew in his breath to speak—to make his presence known—he was silenced by the words he heard.

"Heaps of 'em, Jack Boy," answered the girl, a lilting song ringing more — all sweethearts of mine! But— She paused and cuddled a little closer in his arms. "I don't guess my 'gonna-be-hubby' need worry so much 'bout rivals in this burg. I've lived here all my life and he's th' first yet to whom I'd give more'n a pleasant smile!"

When the "gonna-be-hubby" had thoroughly assimilated this, he told himself he was a "lucky dog," and with a sigh of content looked up in the sky and blessed the day—or night—he arrived in Elliston.

Whereupon the god, Jove, who, they say, always laughs at lovers' sighs, must have guffawed raucously while the dog-star, with an ear trained for petting parties, probably barked for hours at the winking Venus. But they were a long way off, the god, Jove, and the dog-star, so Jill and Jack heard them not!

They heard, however, waves of melody, the wonderful, glorious harmony of a master pianist in the perfect rendition of a Hungarian rhapsody. Father Pat was "singing off," as Peter expressed it, some of his pent-up feelings through the medium of Jill's baby grand.

The big Irish priest had few equals as a musician, and had he not sacrificed his personal ambition on the altar of the church he might easily have attained to a place in the musical world that would have brought him fame and fortune.

It was the first time that Jack Stuart had ever heard Father Ryan play, and being himself blessed with considerable musical ability, he marveled that any man should let such a talent become stultified in a small town like Elliston.

"He's very wonderful, of course," conceded Jill, almost grudgingly, when the dominie, having satisfied his own hunger for harmony, bade Peter good night and betook himself to his lonely home adjoining the church. "And I suppose my taste and appreciation of musical values are awfully crude. But, just th' same, Jack dear, I like your playing better than I like Father Pat's."

Which simply went to show, as "Jack dear" pointed out to her with painstaking care, that "this Jill" had the qualifications for a clever diplomat, since she could "spread the salve" with such a free and lavish hand.

Replying to which "this Jill" naively informed him that if she had "spread any salve" she had "done it with her little tongue and not with her hand."

"Now, that," declared Jack, softly but firmly, "certainly calls for something that no hand can spread!" And Jack, being a man of action and a fast worker, responded promptly to the "call!"

But, while Love's young dream may keep alive on love making and kisses, life, with its grim exactitudes, demands something more substantial. There came a time when ways and means must be considered.

"It's awful, dear heart, this being poor," was the rather graphic form that Jack's earnestness took in outlining the situation to Jill. He continued: "No disgrace, of course, as th' saying is, but devilish inconvenient. How far, would you say, will a thousand dollars go toward a start in housekeeping?"

"Oh, a thousand dollars for a start in housekeeping!" exclaimed the bride-to-be, in wide-eyed wonderment. "My goodness, Jack Stuart, what style of living do you expect we're going to begin with? I wouldn't dream of spending more than $500, including the first month's rent!"

Which shows the type of woman Jill represented. Not only that, but she held to the sum she had stipulated. In addition, too, she insisted on going fifty-fifty on the wedding and outfitting expenses out of her "dot"—her marriage portion. This was a French custom entirely new to Jack. But it was Peter's notion of what was proper and had been the custom of his ancestors for centuries. The sum remaining was placed in the bank and totaled up to $1,500. It was then that Jack Stuart pinched himself and inquired of the great, wide world if it were not really a dream after all? If it weren't a dream, then most assuredly the goddess of Luck had dealt him a royal flush on the night that he met Jill Justin!

CHAPTER VI

Never once during the first few years of their married life did Jill ever call attention, by word or action, to the folly of paying rent, when they could have had their rent free, as well as their heat and light.

But if Jill carried the burden of her husband's foolish pride with a brave front, and uncomplainingly to the opinions of her brother, why they should do the same.

As a matter of fact, neither Peter nor Tony overlooked any opportunity of telling their new relative that he was not only a fool, but was selfish as well. There came a time, too, when Father Ryan saw Jack Stuart's so-called independence as a new form of "mulkishness."

"Better watch your step, my son," he cautioned his young friend, after the latter, having acknowledged his own system as faulty, still held to it. "For never was there a truer saying coined than the ancient warning that 'pride goeth before a fall.'"

Coincident with the first anniversary of their marriage, Jill presented her Jack with beautiful twin boys. They were named Peter and Paul. Immediately the "high cost of living" which, even before the arrival of the wonderful pair had reached a lofty altitude, now began to soar in a manner truly alarming.

But despite their difficulties in making ends meet, despite strikes and had times, the passing of the first three years in the married life of Jill and Jack were marked by happiness vouchsafed only to the exceptional few.

There was a light in Jack Stuart's gray eyes, a light "ne'er seen on land or sea," nor any other place save in the eye of a canny Scot on the trail of quick and easy money!

"I see by th' papers," said Jack, one evening, as he sat by the cheerful open grate in their cozy sitting room, where also sat Peter and Tony and Jill playing with Peter and Paul, the twins. "I see by th' papers," he repeated a bit absently, dragging his gaze from the ever-alluring antics of his wonderful boys, "that a tax-title sale is to be held next Tuesday forenoon in the Elliston county court house."

His eyes being free for the moment, he glanced at Peter and Tony. The latter said not a word, and his parent followed suit. Whereupon Jack repeated his statement. Then Tony spoke.

"I heard you th' first time, Jack," he drawled, with laconic brevity, "but who cares for tax titles?"

Jack Stuart looked at his young brother-in-law with large tolerance, a look that bespoke a kindly forbearance and consideration for youthful ignorance.

"One of the parcels of land to be sold Tuesday for taxes," he said, speaking slowly so as to lend impressiveness to his announcement, "involves property which I happen to know is worth at th' very least $10,000. In six months from now, or even in less time, that property will sell quick for $10,000."

Three pairs of eyes stared at him, incredulity mixed with amazement written large on each countenance. Jill was the one to break the spell engendered by his startling declaration.

"But, h-how could that be possible, Jack, dear?" she queried nervously, almost reproachfully, as if she feared he had said something likely to bring ridicule on him. "If such a thing were true, th' property would have been grabbed up before this!"

"Th' property hasn't been grabbed up, and is being sold for taxes for th' simple reason that nobody knows its value except myself," replied Jack, with such an air of conviction that none there could doubt his seriousness whatever he or she might think of his judgment.

"Do you mind telling us where th' property is located, and how you came to know about it?" asked Peter Justin, interestedly.

"Most assuredly I'll tell," answered Jack promptly. "That was my purpose when I mentioned th' matter. It was just sheer luck—blind luck, you might call it—that led me to stumble onto th' thing."

"As you all know from what I've said at various times," he continued, after lighting a cigarette, "I've had more or less experience in th' sinking of oil wells. Father put down three on our place back home, all fairly good producers for a year or so. Then they went dry. It was the oil game that eventually broke father."

"I guess you know, all of you, where that peculiar rocky formation they call th' Devil's Leap is located, some six miles out in th' hills. I went out there yesterday morning to hunt rabbits. It's a regular jungle all around th' place, but a good spot for rabbits, so I pushed my way in."

"Suddenly I came to an enormous pile, what I took at first to be a small hill. Then I saw it was a species of ore piled up like a pyramid, and I remembered hearing of an 'old abandoned mine' in that locality. I found th' mine which is said to have yielded a small quantity of silver, but not enough to make it a paying proposition. After sinking a shaft the company quit. That was back in 1860."

"It was while I was prowling around that I discovered oil signs. An hour's investigation revealed positive proof to me of big deposits of oil rock. A hundred feet from the ore pile the ground is a perfect quagmire, where the oil has been forced to the surface and then seeped back again. Any oil man would see at a glance the presence of immense quantities of oil. I put th' valuation of th' property at $10,000 in mentioning th' tax sale. In reality, it is worth many times that."

"Well, th' upshot of my discovery was that when I got back to town and went to the court house to find out who owned the property, I learned it was to be sold for taxes. All th' embraces is about 10 acres, being just a spur marking off a surveyed tract or section which is owned by New York parties. Th' owner of this 10 acres, I found, had been a young man named Davison, who was killed in France during th' war. His only relative, a mother, died a year ago without leaving any will. That's how it comes th' piece is being sold for taxes which haven't been paid for more than 20 years. It has been up for a time and again, but nobody could see it worth even th' taxes due on it."

The result of "Jack's" discovery after a brief investigation by Peter Justin the following day was the decision by Tony and he to attend the tax title sale. This resulted in the two combining their capital and purchasing the property. It left Jack with $40 in the bank, and Tony with less than $20.

When Food Sours

Lots of folks, who think they have "indigestion" have only an acid condition which could be corrected in five or ten minutes. An effective anti-acid like Phillips Milk of Magnesia soon restores digestion to normal.

Phillips does away with all that sourness and gas right after meals. It prevents the distress so apt to occur two hours after eating. What a pleasant preparation to take! And how good it is for the system! Unlike a burning dose of soda—which is but temporary relief at best—Phillips Milk of Magnesia neutralizes many times its volume in acid.

Next time a hearty meal, or too rich a diet has brought on the least discomfort, try—

Resurrection Plant

The Genuine "Rose of Jericho"
These peculiar plants are found among sand and cedars of Palestine. When you get the plant it will have the appearance of a ball of tightly folded leaves, dry and dead. But if it is watered and it will open to its handsome fern-like foliage, turn green and begin to grow in about twenty minutes. Take it out of the water and it curls up tight again and becomes dead again. It is capable of surviving dry and coming to life again repeatedly, and will keep in its dried or dormant state for years and recover throughly when placed in water. It is an interesting variety and most beautiful house plant with fine fern-like leaves of very attractive fragrance. If you want to see the plant in its various states, write to us for a free literature. We will send you a sample of the plant, and it will be greatly appreciated by everyone.

Help Check Influenza!

Local People Urged to Help Prevent Epidemic Spreading

Eat Wisely, Exercise Regularly, Keep Away From Crowded Places and Treat All Colds Promptly

Medical authorities now agree that influenza is a germ disease—most commonly spread by breathing in the germs. If the system is in good shape—the membrane of the air passages in a healthy condition—these germs do not usually breed. It is only when the bodily resistance is lowered that the germs do the most harm.

Start Protective Treatment at Once
Right now while influenza is so prevalent every precaution should be taken to protect the air passages. When you feel one of these "Flu Colds" coming on don't wait; start the following treatment at once:

Get a jar of Vicks VapoRub and place some up each nostril, or insert some in a bowl of hot water and inhale its medicated vapors. This helps to keep the air passages in a healthy condition, thus making it difficult for the germs to breed.

At bedtime take a laxative, if you are constipated, and rub Vicks VapoRub on the throat and chest. Vicks medicated vapors are then released by the heat of the body, and breathed in all night long, direct to the air passages. At the same time, Vicks acts through the skin like an old fashioned poultice, drawing out tightness and pain and helping the vapors to break up the congestion. If you feel feverish call a physician.

Avoid Crowds and Use Vicks Freely

It is best to keep away from sneezers and coughers in street cars and public places. If you must go out in crowded places insert some Vicks up each nostril before starting out. On returning home melt some Vicks in hot water and inhale the vapors. This is a simple precaution which everyone should take to prevent the flu spreading as it did in 1918 when millions of lives were lost.

FARMER WEEK GROUPS NAMED

Committees to have charge of arrangements for the annual farmers' week at Michigan State College, February 4 to 8, have been appointed by President R. S. Shaw. Nearly 10,000 farmers are expected to attend. According to present plans, morning meetings will be given over to conferences of sectional groups, while the afternoon and evening programs will be mass meetings in the college armory. Tuesday evening has been selected as "banquet night."

The following members of the college staff comprises the general arrangements committee: J. F. Cox, dean of agriculture, chairman; R. W. Tenny, short course department, secretary; Dean Ward Giltner, veterinary division; V. B. Gardner, director of the agricultural experiment station; Miss Jean Krueger, dean of home economics; R. J. Baldwin, director of extension; G. A. Brown, head of the annual husbandry department; Professor E. L. Anthony, head of the dairy department; Professor H. B. Dirks, of the engineering department; H. C. Rather, head of the farm crops department, and J. B. Hasselman, director of publications.

The first experiments to determine the exact amount of infestation and the damage to forest trees, inflicted by attacking insects, are now in progress at the woodlots on the W. K. Kellogg experimental farm, near Gull Lake, under the direction of L. M. Wood, holder of the two-year scholarship for forestry research, given by Mr. Kellogg.

Similar experiments have been held in orchards, but this is the first time the work has been conducted in woodlots or forests. Mr. Wood is caging off the infested parts of trees and will study the insect population which is harbored by dead wood.

He is also in charge of the first plantings, to take place next spring, of what will form the nucleus of a large arboretum. The college, last spring, supervised the planting of 40 acres of trees, surrounding Wintergreen lake, where Mr. Kellogg maintains a wild-life refuge. Rare species of hardwood trees will be included in the forest nursery, which will be started next year.

Construction has been started on the one-story log-cabin, which will serve as headquarters of the Woman's Athletic association. It is being built in a clearing of the college woods, one and one-half miles south of the campus.

The co-eds borrowed $1,250 from the college to be repaid within a period of five years, with the interest rate at 5 per cent, a transaction officially approved by the state board of agriculture.

The construction of a new sugarhouse, in the college woodlot, will enable the college forestry department, this spring to resume the practice discontinued in 1926, of making maple syrup.

The house, which will replace the old one, was destroyed by fire two years ago, was completed the first week in December. A steam maple-syrup evaporator, the first to be used in Michigan, will be installed. One of these evaporators has been used successfully in Pennsylvania.

Leon C. Brady, Unionville, is the winner of the 1924 Michigan ton-litter contest. Thirteen Chester White pigs which weighed 2,805 pounds at six months of age brought home the bacon for the Unionville man.

High priced feeds and low priced pork reduced the farmers' interest in the ton-litter contests this year and the number of contestants was lower than in previous years. The winning lot of pigs received skim milk, whole oats, and barley after weaning and were finished on barley.

Other leaders in the contest and the weights reached by their pigs were: Harry Ward, McBain, 2,614; Bert Parker, Mason, 2,451; Fred Shilling, Coldwater, two litters, 2,446 and 2,328; John York, Portland, two litters, 2,335 and 2,178; Warren Laubaugh, Hastings, 2,290; Cox and Son, Coldwater, 2,275; and H. S. Haas, Scotts, 2,090.

Harry Ward, McBain, has entered the ton-litter contest five of the six years during which it has been conducted and each time has placed his pigs in the heavyweight class. The pigs which were owned by Bert Parker, Mason, were marketed 15 days before they were six months old in order to reach a better market.

The ton-litter contest in Michigan will be discontinued next year by the animal husbandry department at Michigan State College in favor of the pig-crop contest which began this year.

Government Seizes Farm for Income Tax

Prairie farm, consisting of 9,000 acres in Saginaw county and owned by the Owosso Sugar company, has been seized by the federal government for delinquent income taxes and will be sold at auction on January 18, it is announced. The taxes, which are for 1921, the only year the company is said to have made money, amount to $4,266. The assessed valuation of the land is $350,000. The farm was the only property of the sugar company, it having sold its factory here to the Michigan Sugar company in 1926.

More Farm Profits Are Seen Through Use of Accounting

More profits from agriculture, through the use of farm accounts which determine the points of strength and weakness in organization and operation, is the goal of the program to be launched soon by the farm management department of the Michigan state college.

A new farm account book has just been issued by the department and is available to all farmers who are interested in making an analysis of their business. The system, on which the book was developed, is based on the experience of hundreds of farmers who have kept accounts of farming operations over a long period of years.

The plan of the farm management department is to offer assistance to interested farmers in about 20 counties during 1929 through the medium of groups organized for the purpose. The work will be extended as the personnel is increased.

The farm management specialists urge that farmers procure the books, take inventory and start their accounts with the beginning of the new year.

The new book, they say, is so simplified that the inventory may be entered in about two hours and that thereafter, about 15 minutes per week will suffice to keep the accounts up-to-date.

State Farm Crops Are Up $8,861,000 Over 1927 Report

Michigan's farm products this year were valued at $236,478,000, an increase of $8,861,000 over the valuation for 1927, in a report by the Federal agricultural statistician issued recently.

The state's bean crop jumped in value from $14,423,000 in 1927 to $26,335,000 this year for the greatest increase. Corn products increased $9,807,000 in valuation.

Eleven out of the 18 major crops suffered a decline in valuation over the 1927 figure, but the great increase in bean and corn valuation offset this loss. Potatoes, with a production of 35,802,000 bushels this year, against 23,120,000 bushels last year, heavily slumped in total valuation for the greatest decline. The crop this year brought $14,321,000, a cut of $5,487,000 under the 1927 valuation.

Crops which showed an increase in valuation were: Corn, barley, buckwheat, beans, apples, peaches and grapes. Crops declining in value were: Winter and spring wheat, oats, rye, potatoes, sugar beets, cloverseed, tame hay, wild hay, commercial apples and pears. Sugar beet valuations were cut almost half, with a value this year of $2,998,000, against $4,861,000 last year.

New Bulletin Describes Rabbit Skin Handling

Rabbit fur is used more extensively by the fur trade than any other kind, according to a bulletin issued by the department of agriculture on "Rabbit Skins for Furs," by D. Monroe Green of the biological survey. With the disappearance of many of the fine-pelted fur bearers from many parts of the United States, the use of rabbit skins is steadily increasing. More than 100,000,000 rabbit skins are now utilized annually in this country, about 98 per cent of which are imported. Of this number, says the bulletin, about 55,000, dressed and dyed, are made into fur garments and into trimmings for women's coats, suits and dresses. The remainder, not suitable for garments, are used as linings for men's and boys' gloves and in the manufacture of felt, used chiefly for making hats.

Aided by modern processes, American fur dressers and dyers have become so expert in changing the colors and appearance of furs that in many instances the pelt of the rabbit, under a variety of trade names, which are listed in the new bulletin, is replacing other skins more costly and attractive, as ermine, seal, beaver and leopard.

Dogs Attack on Sheep Arouse Eaton Farmers

Dogs are attacking sheep on farms in this vicinity. Frank Sellen, south of Charlotte, reports the loss of 32 sheep and the entire flock of 18 on Ivan Montague's farm was badly chewed. A number of these probably will die. Twenty-seven sheep on four other farms also were reported killed. The village council at Olivet has ordered all dogs owned in the village to be kept tied unless accompanied by their owner.

Find Deer With Front Legs Broken

A large doe floundering helplessly on the ice at Rice Lake, with both front legs broken, was discovered by John T. MacDonald, district deputy game warden, recently. A dog standing nearby bore mute testimony as to the cause of the deer's condition for the head of the doe was lacerated from the dog's attacks. The doe was immediately shot, but the dog disappeared as the warden approached.

The doe, which weighed about 175 pounds, evidently had been pursued by the dog, and in crossing the ice-covered lake had slipped and broken its legs. The dog is believed to be owned by some farmer living in the vicinity. The deer was presented to the county infirmary.

MUCK COUNTRY SEES PROSPERITY

The muck farmers in and around Hudsonville are not greatly concerned about national farm relief, unless such relief would furnish some aid in the form of assistance in getting out their crops and getting them ready for market.

Notwithstanding the inroads made by blight in the celery fields last fall several hundred cars of celery and celery cabbage has been shipped by truck and train since these crops were ready for shipment.

The harvest of the onion crop was not as expensive, neither did it involve so much labor as attended the harvesting and shipment of the celery and celery cabbage. The returns from the onion crop were much larger per acre. No onions have sold for less than $2 a 100 pounds and several large crops netted $3.10 a hundredweight. Several farmers report upward of 700 bushels of onions per acre.

Bangor Leghorn on Way to Record

A beautiful White Leghorn hen from the flock of H. A. Keister at Bangor is well on its way toward establishing a new world's egg laying record in the seventh international egg laying contest at Michigan State college. She produced 29 eggs during the first 30 days of the contest.

Pinecroft Poultry farm of Owosso had the high individual Barred Rock. She laid 25 eggs in November. Elmer Haines of Vassar was the owner of the high White Leghorn. She laid 24 eggs in 30 days.

The high Rose Comb Rhode Island hen was the property of Mrs. E. S. Travis of Vicksburg, while the leading Brown Leghorn was entered by Miss Ethel Lindsley, Saline.

A pen of White Leghorns was leading the contest on Dec. 1. It was entered by J. A. Hanson, Corvallis, Ore., who also had the leading pen at the start of the sixth contest. H. B. Pulton & Sons, East Tawas, owned the leading pen of Barred Rocks. The leading White Rocks were entered by Elmer Haines of Vassar. Mrs. Travis' pen of Reds and Miss Lindsley's pen of Brown Leghorns were leading those respective breeds.

Electricity Makes Hens Lay More Eggs

On the Department of Agriculture's experimental poultry farm at Beltsville, Md., electric lights are used to lengthen the work day of the laying hens. They are usually started about the first of October and continued until the middle of March.

A White Leghorn pullet last year laid 310 eggs working throughout the fall and winter by the aid of electric lights to get sufficient feed for her production.

In two years' tests in which lights were used at Beltsville from about November 1 to March 20 the production of a pen of 50 pullets was increased the first year by 50.2 dozen eggs, the value of which was $27.96 greater than the production of 50 pullets working under similar conditions producing 60.6 dozen eggs more than a pen of 50 pullets in an unlighted pen. The value of the increase was $34.42. One 75-watt light was used for each pen an average of 2 1/2 hours daily for 140 days.

An average length of day of 12 to 13 hours gives the best results, according to the department. Longer light periods force the hens too much. Morning lights are the easiest and most practical because they can be turned on automatically and no dimming is required as in the case of evening lighting. The use of lights does not pay, however, unless the best attention is also given to feeding, management, and housing of the flock. Grain should be put in the house after the pullets have gone to roost so as to be available for their early morning feed.

Gluttony Kills Bass

A black bass weighing three pounds, two ounces, was found dead in DuMont lake by William Hale and Charles Waite. The bass had undertaken to swallow a seven-inch calico bass and the head of the calico had become entangled in the gills of the larger fish.

The black bass apparently had tried to dislodge the troublesome meal, but the spiny fins of the calico had pierced the membranes of the upper and lower jaws with the result that the big bass could not rid itself of its unwelcome captive.

Bank Beavers Work Boldly

Under state's protective laws bank beavers line both banks of Ontonagon and Iron rivers plying their lumbering interests so boldly that frequently they put on a daylight shift.

Both rivers are now ice covered for the winter season, yet one large poplar tree not 20 feet distant from one bank beaver's runway, still withstands his efforts to fell. After getting a good running start on the tree, Mickey cut down and hauled several small poplars, then again attacked the larger one. Trappers insist that bank beavers are those lazy fellows who, not meeting the standard set in colony homes, are kicked off the plantation, so to speak, and left for themselves.

Talks to Talkies

That talking movies never will replace the spoken drama is the belief of Alexander Moissi, German star, touring America. "To suppose that any mechanical device ever could satisfactorily reproduce the elusive fascination of the personality of an artist is absurd," he declares.

Without a Conny

Ralph Heard, well-to-do Boston architect, has found himself in the position of being a man without a country. Because of some mystery as to his parentage, he has been refused passports by the United States government. He has been trying desperately to have his country identify him and plans to ask the legislature of Massachusetts to pass a special act granting him the right of citizenship.

China's Golf Pro

Charles Chung, who is reputed to be the only golf professional in all of China, has arrived in the United States. He was good enough to defeat Willie Hunter of the United States during the Hawaiian open championship at Honolulu recently. Photo shows him on his arrival at Los Angeles.

Tiny Broadway Star Heads Entertainment Revue

Lucille Elmore, One of Original "Stepping Stones," to Appear Here Soon.

THE LUCILLE ELMORE REVUE

Lucille Elmore, niece of Fred Stone, the famous comedian, and the charming "Little Red Riding Hood" from the original Broadway cast of "Stepping Stones," has been secured for an engagement here.

Miss Elmore and her company will present a revue (a form of entertainment that has almost taken possession of the theatres in the metropolitan centers) which depends for its appeal on cleverness rather than on smashing size or bizarre sensationalism. It will consist of a succession of individual stunts, monologues, characterizations, songs—in short a few chapters out of musical comedy of the Fred Stone brand—clean, wholesome fun with all the suggestiveness and questionable features left out.

There are many singing numbers and close harmony duets of the Duncan Sisters type. Miss Elmore impersonates all sorts of noted people, does a comical ventriloquist number, mimics noted personages and performs other stunts too numerous to mention.

Jean Harper sings beautiful Indian and Spanish songs in costume, does a rag-doll dance and many other interesting specialties. Betty Postlethwaite is pianist, singer, and all-round entertainer.

NEIGHBORHOOD NEWS

The death of Mrs. James Mynahan who was killed by an automobile while crossing a dark street has started an agitation for better lighted streets in Howell.

The Fowlerville City Opera House is having new scenery and curtains painted.

A big evergreen tree has been transplanted to the Fenton City Park where it will remain as permanent Christmas tree.

The schools of Linden are closed until Jan. 7 on account of flu.

County Clerk John Hagman has sent notices to the city and township clerks that a general primary election will be held in the several judicial circuits of the state on Monday, March 4, 1929, for all political parties, for the purpose of nominating candidates for office of circuit judge.

The village council of Fowlerville undertook to make an ice skating rink in that village just north of Grand River street, in the east part of town. They flooded a low place of something over an acre, but the porous condition of the ground allowed the water to sink away rapidly and the project had to be abandoned much to the disappointment of the young people.

The Methodist church at Howell recently received $1,900 from the estate of the late Anna Miller. This is to apply on the indebtedness caused by the addition built a few years ago.

The 75th anniversary of the opening of the Michigan State Normal College at Ypsilanti will take place on Jan. 13 and 14, 1929.

Ten cars and trucks were more or less smashed within three miles of Fowlerville. Thursday morning one man had his skull fractured and one boy had his arm broken. The pavement was very slippery but the speed was not diminished until the crash came.

Saline will vote on a bond issue of $175,000 for the erection of a new school Jan. 15. The present building has been used 60 years. The assessed value of the district is $1,407,600.

JEFFERSON PARKER

Jefferson Parker was born in Steuben County, New York, in 1847, and passed away at his home in Pinckney Dec. 30, 1928, at the age of 81 years.

At an early age, he moved with his parents to Mich. which State has since claimed his residence. When still a boy in his teens he enlisted his services in the cause of the Civil War serving with the 7th and 11th Mich. Regiments, and thus being numbered among the few remaining veterans of this war.

In 1869, he was united in marriage to Rose Leland who preceded him in death by several years. A son, Frank Parker of Flint and a daughter Mrs. Fred Bowman of this village survive him.

For many years Mr. Parker served as assistant at the Teeple Hardware Store and by a singular coincidence his death preceded that of Mr. Teeple by only a comparatively few hours.

Having been also employed for several years as caretaker of the Public School Building Mr. Parker had gained wide acquaintance which ripened into friendship, rough his always kindly disposition and he will be greatly missed in village associations.

He was a faithful member of the Methodist Church for half a century; and Rev. Schwartzkopf of the Howell M. E. church performed the funeral and burial rites.

ELLA A. PAISLEY

Ella A. Paisley was born Ella A. Beeman, the youngest daughter of Seth and Barbara Beeman, at Canandaigua N. Y. March 15th 1848. She was educated at Canandaigua and in 1869 was united in marriage to Edwin A. Darwin of Putnam township. They had one son Roy R. Darwin now residing at Lansing Mich. Mr. Darwin died as a result of an accident in Feb. 1874.

In the year of 1882 Ella Darwin was married to Mr. A. J. Paisley of Detroit, Mich. one daughter was born to this union. Mrs. F. M. Gibbs of Detroit Mich.

Mrs. Paisley fell and fractured her right thigh Nov. 23rd and was taken from the home of her son in Lansing to the Edward W. Sparrow hospital where she was making good headway towards recovery when she was stricken with influenza which developed into pneumonia that resulted in her death Dec. 20th.

The funeral services were held from Swarthouts funeral home Dec. 26. She was interred in the Pinckney cemetery.

Mrs. Paisley was well known among the older residents of this vicinity where she resided when first married and later made her home on the Darwin farm 2 miles south of Pinckney.

Besides Roy R. Darwin and Mrs. Gibbs she leaves one grandson Seth E. Darwin of Pontiac Mich.

CURRENT COMMENT

The battle at Ann Arbor between the Democrats and Anti-Democrats has reached the stage where threats are being hurled. The Anti-Democrats threaten to shut off all appropriations for the University in the legislature unless the dormitory project is abandoned.

Mrs. Etha Miller, the Lansing liquor seller still continues to draw front page headlines. Senator Peterson her lawyer, now announces that a defense fund is being raised to appeal her case. In case of her release from prison the Moderation league should vote her a pension.

It is doubtful if the death of President Coolidge would have been given more front page space and headlines than was devoted to announcing the death of Tex Richard, Monday by the leading dailies of the land. Tex was the world's greatest promoter of pugilism. He paid the largest purses, charged the largest admissions and broke the world's attendance record every time he staged a prize fight. The columns now being devoted to his death is only the tribute the world pays to success no matter in what branch it may be achieved.

In the last session of Congress in the neighborhood of a hundred bills were introduced to repeal, change or amend the Volstead Act. None of these bills were ever voted on, all dying in the committee. Now it is announced that twenty new bills will be introduced in the next session of congress for the same purpose. We doubt if it is ever intended that these bills will be brought to a vote. However they give certain congressmen elected from wet districts a chance to pass the buck and put the blame for their failures to carry out their campaign pledges on their fellow congressmen.

PINCKNEY 13, ANN ARBOR 19 Pinckney lost to the Broadway Leaders of Ann Arbor here Saturday evening by a score of 19 to 13. The game was fairly even except in the third quarter when the visitors scored 9 points giving them a lead Pinckney could not overcome.

MICHIGAN FARM PRODUCTS

Michigans farm products this year were valued at $236 478,000, an increase of $8,861,000 over the valuation for 1927, in a report by the Federal agricultural statistician issued this week.

The states bean crop jumped in value from $14,433,000 in 1927 to $26,335,000 this year for the greatest increase. Corn products increased $9,807,000 in valuation.

Eleven out of 18 major crops suffered a decline in valuation over 1927 figure, but the great increase in bean and corn valuation offset this loss. Potatoes, with a production of 23,802,000 bushels this year, against 23,120,000 bushels last year, heavily slumped in total valuation for the greatest decline. The crop this year brought $14,711,000 a cut of $5,487,000 under the 1927 valuation.

Crops which showed an increase in valuation were: Corn, barley, buckwheat, cloverseed tame hay, beans, apples, peaches, and grapes. Crops declining in value were: Winter and spring wheat, oats, rye, potatoes, sugar beets, cloverseed, tame hay, wild hay, com-

During Air Thieves. Explorers in Alabama report there are many birds of prey in the country, the most daring of which and the most common, is the Hawk. Flocks of them will sit the hours in the trees near the camp waiting for an opportunity to steal a meal from the cook tent. In this they will often take great chances and they have been known to dart across the cook's fire and steal food from his pans on the stove. They have no hesitation in attacking the red man any more than they do a man.
