THE DE WILLO CONCERT CO.

The DeWillo Concert Co. the next number on the Pinckney Lecture Course, Comes on Saturday, March 16. The bureau has the following to say about it:

The DeWillo Concert Co. is in a class by itself as one of the most unique companies in concert work. The concertina grande is an instrument that approaches the pipe organ in tone volume, and is the equal of a concert band in difference of tone qualities, and DeWillo is one of the world's recognized masters of this instrument. He has been engaged in all lines of professional concert work, and has alone taken the place of an entire concert company through a season of summer Chautauquas.

La Naomi Coffin the violinist, for ten years a pupil of the famed Tirindelli, has in four years. Lyceum and Chautauqua, forged to the front rank of lyceum violinist. She is also an accomplished pianist.

Mrs. DeWillo Semrau, soprano and pianist, possesses a sweet voice of wide range. Her gracious personality blends with her sympathetic interpretation, making her work a great success.

More than half of the program of the DeWillo Concert Co. consists of ensemble music, and the variety is unusual and appealing. Mr. DeWillo also gives a group of imitations of birds and animals and familiar musical instruments; plays several descriptive selections; duets with violin and voice; and also plays the piano for some of the solo numbers of the other two members of his company.

A PLEASANT SURPRISE

A goodly number of neighbors and friends of Mrs. L. C. McIntyre gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Rogers last Saturday evening to welcome her back from an extended visit with relatives and friends in Wis. Lively games and stunts was the source of entertainment. A beautiful potluck buffet luncheon was served in well chosen words Mrs. McIntyre expressed her appreciation of the thoughtfulness and kindness of her friends in remembering her in such a pleasant and social way that it was truly a beautiful surprise.

MARGARET MEABON

Margaret Meabon aged 11 yr., daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Meabon Jr. of this village, died at the Lapeer Training School Sunday, March 10, of pneumonia. The funeral will be held from the family home in Pinckney Wednesday at 2:00 p. m. with burial at Plainfield.

NO INQUEST NECESSARY

Monday morning at 1:00 a. m. four strangers motoring through Pinckney routed Will Jeffreys out of bed and informed him that there was a dead man laying along the side of the road between Pinckney and Howell. They wanted the coroner and sheriff notified. Bill explained that Pinckney does not have any such officials but that he would do the best he could. He woke up a number of the inhabitants but found them without much enthusiasm on the subject. At last Postmaster W. C. Miller who used to be sheriff allowed he was not scared of ghosts and offered to head a rescue party. They started to the scene of the tragedy at a high rate of speed but drove all the way to Howell without seeing anyone. Concluding that they had been hoaxed or that some one else had picked up the corpse they started back home again. As they neared the Hause school they saw some one trudging along the road with a suitcase and cane. They overhauled him and solved the mystery for it proved to be Homer Reason of Pinckney. He had been working at Snover, Sanilac county and got into Fenton late Sunday evening when he started to hike home. However as it was dusk he found lifts few and far between and was forced to walk the greater part of the journey. Near Chubb's Corners he had stopped to rest and it was here that he was undoubtedly taken for a corpse by the passing motorists who gave the alarm.

THE KING'S DAUGHTERS MEET

Mrs. Ed Parker entertained members and friends of the King's Daughters at a clever St. Patrick's party last Wednesday afternoon. Following the usual business and devotional session the guests related their best Irish stories and the games "Feeding the Pig" "Something Green" and "Potato Relay" furnished much sport. Mrs. Earl Baughn read a humorous poem entitled St. Patrick's Birthday after which a pot luck lunch was served. The decorations were of shamrocks and other Irish emblems.

SOMETHING DIFFERENT

If you have the blues we absolutely guarantee to drive them away. This performance is put on under the auspices of the Pinckney O. E. S. and staged by twenty five town people.

U. OF M. TO AID BRAZIL FORESTS

The school of forestry and conservation of the University of Michigan is planning to co-operate with the tropical plant research foundation of Washington in an effort to develop a modern forest service and promote profitable utilization of the vast hardwood resources of Brazil.

The plan has been studied thoroughly by Dean Samuel T. Dana of the Michigan school and the board of regents has given its approval.

The Brazilian government recently decided to put into effect a comprehensive forest law, involving organization and development of a modern forest service charged with bringing about the utilization of the forests and of acquiring scientific and economic information.

To carry out its project, the Brazilian government has obtained the assistance of the plant research foundation. The foundation already has mapped out a tentative policy. This policy, approved by the Brazilian government, provides for placing the forest service under the direction of an American forester, with the assistance of a commission of American scientists.

It also provides for surveys of the little known Brazilian forests; for research on the properties and uses of the more important kinds of trees; for development of foreign markets; for education of the public concerning the essential principles involved in a modern program of forest conservation and for training Brazilian foresters in American schools.

The foundation has sought the aid of the University of Michigan, believing it to be well qualified to aid in all phases of the undertaking. This desire for co-operation, it is felt by Dean Dana, affords the university an opportunity for leadership in the country which has 1,000,000,000 acres of forest land containing the largest body of hardwoods in the world and with which trade relations of the United States are almost certain to become increasingly close.

While the work of the Michigan forestry and conservation school has not yet been laid out definitely, it may take the form of giving advice, conducting research and training students. It is believed by Dean Dana it will enable the university to render outstanding service not only to Brazil, but to the United States, which, he holds, will become increasingly interested in South American and particularly Brazilian hardwoods.

Water Carnival Dates at M. S. C. Set for June

The annual senior water carnival will be held at Michigan State College, June 13 and 14, and Warren Shook, Grand Rapids, will be chairman of arrangements. It was decided at the first meeting of the senior class this year. Dates also were set by the seniors for a number of other important spring term events. Swing out will be held May 8; cap night, June 12, and lantern night, in which co-eds will participate, June 17.

Grand Rapids Coed Provides Unusual Formal Decoration

Miss Geraldine Nicholas, Grand Rapids, Olivet college student specializing in art and also student teacher of that subject in Olivet public schools, scored a success as designer of the unusual decorations that featured the annual formal party given by her sorority, Alpha Lambda Epsilon.

The scheme of decoration transformed the auditorium into a representation of "the bottom of the sea." Realistic effects were acquired by Miss Nicholas from a strong dome light in the center, filtering through an artificial ceiling of blue-green representing the surface of the sea. On this floated trailing sea vines and grasses, combined with illusive paintings of vivid sea life.

The orchestra platform represented an alcove of rocks and boulders.

"The robber wore rubbers and walked backwards," deduced Hawkshaw. "Ah!" observed the silly mug. "then we must look for a man with receding gums."

Poems That Live

THE CRUST OF BREAD
I must not throw upon the floor
The crust I cannot eat;
For many little hungry ones
Would think it quite a treat.

My parents labor very hard
To get me wholesome food.
Then I must never waste a bit
That would do others good.

For wilful waste makes woeful want,
And I may live to say,
Oh! how I wish I had the bread
That once I threw away!

Child of Post Nursery Age Has Its Own Room

By Hilda Hunt

After the nursery, what?

All mothers have been confronted with this problem of decoration. For their budding young daughters are not old enough for adult things, and yet they certainly do not belong in the infant class.

Pride in ownership develops very early, so that a room for their very own, decorated to meet their growing needs, becomes a pleasant necessity. The furniture need not be expensive, and certainly must not be elaborate. Simple pieces that are likely to stand the unintentional knocks of robust youth are the wisest.

While the bedroom must serve for play and study as well as sleeping, some sort of an arrangement as illustrated is extremely good. The absence of a formal bed makes all the difference in the world in the appearance. A chest of drawers and a dressing table in no way spoil the effect so long as they are grouped together on one side of the room.

We have chosen a day bed for this "jeune fille's" room. For some reason or other a day bed intrigues these "in between" aged children tremendously. Perhaps their desire to be grown up is satisfied by this informal arrangement. And it makes an ideal center for the pleasant grouping near the window.

Good Light for Reading

And speaking of windows, please notice how we have placed this table. These small daughter can pore over her books, that are kept on convenient shelves, to her heart's content. And there she can study with no straining of eyes, either during the day or at night. For the low lamp with pleated shade and shining copper bowl will cast just the right amount of light on the table.

Color should also play a large part in decorating children's rooms. Soft shades of green and brown are very good, having no irritating qualities and the decided advantage of wearing well. There should not be too much figured material used, for it is diverting and exciting. A moderate amount as shown, brightens the room and exudes cheerfulness. The same rule applies to the wallpaper, which is best in a neutral tone with small figures to break the monotony of a plain surface.

SENIORS GET CALLS FOR MINISTRY

Although the school year in Western Theological seminary does not close until May 8, five members of the class of 1929 already have received the first promises of calls from vacant churches upon their graduation as candidates for the ministry.

The prospective graduates tendered calls and the churches extending the calls are: Second Reformed church, Coxsack, N. Y.; Frederick H. Olert of Holland; Florida church, Minaville, N. Y.; Franklin John Hinkamp of Waupun, Wis.; North Blendon, George Theodor Kots, Fulton, Ill.; Otley, Ia.; Nicolas H. A. Bruinix of Newark, N. J.; Berne, N. Y.; Delbert Lee Kinney of Kalamazoo.

The class numbers seventeen. Rev. T. W. Mullenberg of South Holland, Ill., president of the board of superintendents, will be the speaker for the board at the annual commencement.

The seminary this year will celebrate the sixtieth anniversary of the graduation of its pioneer class of seven candidates for the ministry.

M. S. C. Would Have Campus Roads Paved

The state board of agriculture has decided to ask the state to pave all roads within the confines of the Michigan State College campus. Secretary H. H. Halladay has announced. There are about four miles of roads within the campus and leading to it from the city which need improvement, Secretary Halladay stated.

The state board will not ask for special appropriation, it was said, but will suggest that the state finance the improvements from funds derived from the gasoline tax. The board will ask that the roads be paved to improve them permanently and keep down repair expense.

It is estimated that 100,000 persons visited Michigan State College in 1928. This includes not only the students and faculty members but also large agricultural groups which hold conferences on the campus at various times throughout the college year.

Degrees Given to 16 West Michigan Students at U. of M.

Western Michigan students at the University of Michigan, who complete their work at the close of the first semester and were granted degrees by the board of regents were: Library college—bachelor of arts—Merritt DeJong and Helen M. Robinson, Grand Rapids; Howard T. Stuch, Allegan; John H. Totzke, Benton Harbor; Jay A. Wabeke, Holland; Thaddeus J. Brown, Manistee.

School of Education—bachelor of arts in education—Karl A. Anderson, Grand Rapids; Nyrrh E. Gooding, Fennville; Rosamond W. Indres, Kalamazoo; Paul A. Cook, Muskegon.

College of Engineering—bachelor of science in engineering (mechanical and industrial)—William K. Friend, Grand Rapids; Stanley B. Preston, Battle Creek. Bachelor of science in engineering (electrical)—Kenneth W. Malbins, Nunica. Bachelor of science in engineering (mechanical)—Harry J. Wassink, Holland; Alex G. Hane, St. Joseph. Bachelor of science in civil engineering—Morris C. Woody, Holland.

The regents also appointed a committee composed of Regents W. L. Clements, Bay City; Junious E. Beal, Ann Arbor, and Walter H. Sawyer, Hillsdale, to report to the board the names of all persons suitable for the office of president of the university.

The regents also named Fred M. Taylor professor emeritus. He had completed 50 years of teaching, 37 at the university and 13 at Albion college.

Hart Church Gets Addition to Organ

Workmen from the Watson Organ Co. of Jackson have installed a set of "voice pipes" in the organ in First Congregational church. The set consists of 49 pipes so named because they resemble the human voice.

The church is indebted to a group of about thirty members and friends of the church, who made possible the addition of these pipes.

The World and All

By CHARLES B. DRISCOLL

WASTE OF GOOD LIFE

I know a high-grade physician in New Jersey who has implanted cancer tissue in the healthy flesh of one of his arms, and has been nursing it along for a year.

He has a theory about cancer. He thinks cancer is related in some way to a certain widespread class of diseases, and that it will yield to the same treatment that has been found effective in those diseases.

He doesn't know; can't be sure. But he's going to find out, if possible. Of course he couldn't ask anybody else to act as an experimental laboratory, for there is a deadly risk involved. So he tries it on himself.

If his theory is correct, the doctor will survive. The cancer seemed to flourish in the healthy flesh. It grew to considerable size. Under treatment, it has diminished in a few weeks to small proportions. The doctor thinks he has it whipped.

This is all very well, and if the doctor is right he may be on the verge of a great discovery. But if he is wrong, he probably will die the death that so many have died, of cancer. For when you experiment upon your own body, you take on a heavy wager.

I think it's a shame to waste valuable life that way, while other means are available—or almost available.

Those Chicago killers who lined up their business rivals and shot them down in cold blood—why shouldn't they serve as laboratories to solve this problem, instead of this valuable doctor?

In a New York elevated train a lout of a man became angry because a newspaper in the hands of a swaying standee brushed his face. In drunken rage, the lout stabbed the other passenger through the heart.

Why shouldn't this sodden brute serve as a laboratory for experiments looking toward the elimination of cancer, the common cold, heart disease, and the other ailments that carry off so many worth-while folk every day?

Cuba may beat us to this advanced attitude toward human life. The political wheels are actually turning in that island republic to the end that lives may be saved by the economical use of lives already forfeit to the state.

Let's use our first degree murderers to save lives, instead of just wasting the criminal's life by killing him with electricity or a rope.

Living and Loving

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

FLAPPER CHAMPIONS HER KIND

The modern girl speaks for herself in the following letter. Do you recognize her in yourself, your daughter, your sweetheart? And how does she qualify? Would you exchange her for the old-fashioned type who guiltily dabbed a bit of powder on her nose in secret and occasionally acknowledged to her most intimate friend that she HAD just tried to smoke a cigarette just for fun? She wanted to see what the men saw in the habit.

"Dear Virginia Lee: This is just another letter on that much discussed subject, the flapper girl of today. I'm a girl 20 years old. I wear the latest styles, use powder, rouge and lipstick. I smoke and take a drink when the occasion demands, but I can really say it's the bunk.

"I can cook, sew and keep house. Now, what troubles me most is that I am called a flapper. I really don't mind being called one, but some people think that a flapper is a scandalous sort of person. But under the flapper's paint and dress, she has a heart of gold—I mean nearly all of them have—for there is some bad in all of us. Some things the flapper does are uncalled for. They can't expect boys to think good, clean things about them if they pick up boys at dance halls. They don't have to pet to be popular. Girls, leave married men alone. You are trespassing on someone else's property.

"I would also like to say a few words to the flapper haters. Really, boys, did you ever stop to think that such boys as yourselves are to blame for what some of these modern girls do? You won't go out with a certain girl because she's slow; then, when she tries to learn your game you say she is red hot and you hate all flappers. Suppose when you take girls out you treat them as you would have boys treat your sisters.

"Virginia, I wish you would please publish this letter if you think it is all right. I am a high school graduate and am training to be a nurse. "Girl Friend."

Thanks, Girl Friend, you modern girls always have a champion in me, you know.

"Dear Virginia Lee: I am a boy 17 years old. I have been going with a girl about nine months or more. This girl has proven that she loves me, and I love her. Only the other day I found out that she is about a year and a half to two years older than I. Do you think that this difference is great enough to ruin our happiness? I am considered, due to my physical build, appearance and manners, to be at least 19 or 20.

"A True Lover."
Not a bit, my dear boy. I know two happy couples intimately where the wives are both more than two years older than their husbands.

How to Achieve Beauty

By MME. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

REGAL SPLENDOR HAS NO PLACE IN UNITED STATES

Regal splendor seems to have no place in our democratic, modern America. Romance and adventure we have in plenty. The romance of business, travel and love. The adventure of great achievements—feats of our navigators on the sea and in the air. But royalty, and the lavish display of courts and kings, belongs to other countries, other times. We keep it only in our traditions and in the occasional artistic effects we achieve in our theaters, or in the clothes and decorative backgrounds of some beautiful, queenly women.

There are American women who have the bearing of queens. Tall, regal, splendid. They are of the patrician type, vaguely recalling the days of old Rome with marble columns, wide halls and classic draperies.

But this type of woman today may think her proportions and her general effect out of key with the swift, modern styles of living and dressing; the slim, rapier-like women who move so quickly around her. Actually her distinction and difference are a powerful charm. But she must play up her type and accent it, never try to make herself into something she cannot be.

This type of woman is tall, often large in build. Because of her height, she may be inclined to stoop a little in her constant association with men and women who are shorter. She should watch this tendency and correct it. The proud poise of her head and a dignified, gracious carriage are assets of her type. She need not, literally speaking, ever "stoop to conquer."

As to her figure, unless she is definitely fat, burdened with excess pads of flesh, the tall, queenly woman should not reduce to bring herself within the increasing ranks of the thin woman. There is no beauty in over-thinness, and for the large-boned woman, especially, dieting toward thinness is very likely to result in an effect of gauntness and emaciation. She needs soft, mellowed outlines, beautiful curving contours. She should exercise, however, regularly and often. To keep her figure firm and well proportioned, her movements graceful, dancing of the rhythmic type, and swimming, as well as horseback riding, are the best exercises for her. Because of the perfect classical, clear-cut impression which her regal loveliness should always make, this woman must carefully watch her facial contours. No sagging muscles or drooping chin should be allowed to mar her distinguished outlines.

In make-up, she should keep to the simple, delicately enhancing effects which will emphasize her porcelain or faintly olive-toned skin. If she is inclined to be florid in coloring, she must tone down her makeup, use faint green or lavender powder in the evening, a soft raspberry lip rouge, and definite eye makeup in the tones that suit her hair and eye colors.

Velvet is the material par excellence for this queenly type to wear. And dignified, exquisite lace. Broadcloth and smooth materials for the winter street mode and the close, fashionable, rich-looking furs. In the evening, she wears satin well, or velvet again, and brocade. In the summer her colors are plain street shades, pastel shades and white.

Always, in her clothes, in her make-up and in her jewels—which she wears better than any other type, the regal, patrician woman must strike the note of dignity, restraint, simple elegance and richness. Her beauty requires and rewards perfection in care.

Pot Roast—Wipe the meat, dredge with flour, salt and pepper. Sear in hot fat, add enough boiling water to cover, boil five minutes and simmer until the meat is tender, keeping closely covered. Vegetables may be added during the last hour of cooking. Bay leaf, thyme or other herbs may be added if desired. Before serving thicken according to method for gravy.

Boil this syrup until it threads. Beat five egg yolks in a bowl with a Dover egg beater until thick. Add the syrup very slowly, beating meanwhile, then gradually add a cupful of flour, which has been measured, one-quarter teaspoon of salt added, and then sifted three times. PINCKNEY HIGH SCHOOL GETS SECOND PLACE

The Pinckney high school basketball team defeated St. Mary's team of Chelsea in the state tournament at Ypsilanti last Friday and took second place. This allows them to play in the regional tournament at Ypsilanti this week when they will meet a team from the Wyandotte district. They beat Chelsea by a score of 14 to 13. Chelsea defeated the Detroit Day School Thursday 17 to 6. The Pinckney boys got away to a poor start, being able to advance the ball through their opponents territory readily but most of their shots at baskets went wild. At the half Chelsea led by a score of 9 to 5. In the last half they got going and tied Chelsea in the third period. In the last quarter Har Hall sunk two goals and gave Pinckney a four run lead. However Chelsea made good on a foul goal and also sunk a field goal cutting the lead to one point. The Pinckney team did not show much offensive ability with the exception of Har Hall who scored ten points. Reason and Gorycz both experienced off days at point scoring. The team as a whole showed good defensive ability.

By winning from the Chelsea team Pinckney got into the finals which were held at Ypsilanti Saturday evening before a crowd of 1,000 people including a brass band. Adrian defeated Plymouth for third place in class "B" the only consolation game played. Pinckney and St. Thomas of Ann Arbor met in the second contest for the class "D" title and St. Thomas won 35 to 11. The Ann Arbor team was too big and powerful for the home lads who experienced an off day at basket shooting. They made their best showing in the last quarter when they scored 6 points. Reason got 8 counters for Pinckney and Gorycz 3. This is the best record made by the Pinckney team in these years of tournament competition as it is the first time they ever competed in the finals. Next year they are all primed to win the class "D" title.

University high school won the class "C" title from Saline 43 to 15 and Ypsilanti Central the class "B" from Monroe 21 to 14. The winners will compete at the Normal gym this week.

NOTES OF THE GAME

Most of Pinckney had hired a band which could have copied the title. The Ypsilanti band did not show up until the final quarter of the class "D" game. Then Lefty Reason who had been way off form during the tournament pricked up his ears and to life and scored six points in quick order while the band played "Anna Bonny." At the rate he was going he would have scored a hundred if the game had not ended.

Each of the title winning teams was awarded with an engraved bronze wall plaque.

Pinckney rooters were few and far between. However the Dexter yell team supported them in able fashion during the game with Chelsea. Friday and Pinckney repaid them with interest when the Dexter team met St. Thomas.

Pinckney was the only Livingston County team to reach the finals. Howell and Fowlerville were both eliminated in the first game they played.

Pinckney should have a good team next year as they only lose one man. University high school had the largest wall gang. They were 250 strong led by a uniformed yell master with a megaphone.

THE PUBLIC SQUARE

The following relating to the Public Square is taken from the Dispatch of April 12, 1883.

Proceedings at Chancery were instituted at Howell yesterday to set aside the deed obtained by Miles Bullock from the Kirkland heirs involving the title to the Public Square property in Pinckney. Mr. Bullock and Mr. Havens were served with the proper notice yesterday and we understand that Mr. Pearson will be made a party to the suit, the sheriff having served a notice on him this afternoon.

This is all about the suit stated in the Dispatch of this issue. However the files of the Register of Deeds at Howell show that the suit was brought in the name of the Kirkland heirs against Miles Bullock, Harry Havens and James Pearson. The Pinckney people who started the suit and incidentally put up security for costs were Dr. C. W. Haze, Dr. H. F. Sigler, Charles Plympton, Ed Mann, E. A. Bellinger, Thompson Grimes, Lucy Mann and Frank Reason.

ber: O. D. Weller, Geo. Weller, Wm. H. Pullen, J. A. Tanner and Mrs. G. W. French all of whom, with the exception of the latter, reside in this village and vicinity. Out of the forty acres the Aivin Mann, the Duer and the Mill property have been signed off, but the remainder is at the mercy of the aforesaid heirs to the Weller estate, who will, we are told, soon take proceedings for the adjustment of their rights.

We give the above for what it is worth, and in our opinion it isn't very much. Looks like a thin sort of side-show to the Bullock claim. The real facts in the case are quite different from those stated by the Review. Mr. Weller sold to Sol Peterson, who in time sold to Mr. Kirkland. The fact that Mrs. Weller did not join in the deed would have entitled her to a lower interest had she outlived her husband, but it would have ceased with her death and she died first of course, her interest merged into that of her husband, who had legally disposed of his title thereto. The Review need not fret its rights as soul about our "landed square." Pinckney will soon right things no matter who comes out of the "square deal." There is plenty of land outside of that 16x16 block to build a larger town than Pinckney, ever thought of being and it would be located in a mud hole.

The claim of the Weller heirs was never pressed or brought to court and was probably brought in to becloud the title.

The following account of the trial is taken from the Dispatch of November 8, 1882.

THE PUBLIC SQUARE CASE

Judge Newton Decides that Bullock's Deed was Procured by Fraud.

The long looked for case involving the title to the "public square" property, was opened last Thursday, before Judge Newton, of the Livingston County Circuit Court.

Judge Pearson, of Chicago, and Judge Harmon of Howell, appeared as plaintiff's attorneys, while the defense was presented by Messrs. Montague and Pearson of Howell.

The testimony was varied and somewhat conflicting, but that portion of it relating to Mr. Bullock's proceedings in his effort to get a deed of the property in question, was certainly very damaging to his reputation as a business man and a public official.

The case closed Saturday and Judge Newton's decision was in favor of the plaintiffs, setting aside the deed of the Kirkland heirs to M. W. Bullock, on account of fraud and misrepresentation in procuring it; also the deed of Bullock to Havens, and of Bullock to Pearson on the ground that the same were being fully obtained from them by fraud.

The decision retained practically the whole of the property where it was located. The deed was given by the Kirkland heirs. Of course the defendants have the usual time in which to appeal, and are prepared to say what they please, but we think of what will be the result of the public any reliable information that may come to our hands next week.

In times past, the backbreaking toil of bending over a steaming tub, with wet soapy hands all day, was simply part of woman's work. It was a thing that could not be avoided. But washing for the modern housewife is a different matter—and a far pleasanter one.

Now, her labor is reduced to a few minutes of attention while an electric washer works speedily. The work of turning a wringer is reduced to guiding the clothing through motor-driven rolls. With the up-to-date method, there is no rubbing to pull and stretch fine pieces—no scrubbing to wear and tear good clothes—an electric washer dissolves the dirt.

WEEK OF MARCH 17

Cold weather and storms of snow will open the early part of the week of March 17 in many parts of the state. These conditions may linger along through Tuesday, but immediately following this storm center the barometer will rise and the sky clear off.

During the middle days temperatures will modify somewhat. With this change there will be an increase of winds and clouds with scattered showers or snow flurries. This condition will last throughout the greater part of the rest of the week, with colder weather during the last half.

Spring Dry and Cold

Throughout the lower peninsula of Michigan we are expecting the spring months will be dry and cold, with late frosts. Taking the season as a whole it will not be good for the average farmer, as far as getting a good start on his crops. Neither will it be particularly good for grain already in. Apparently the coal man seems to be about the only one who will keep a smiling face.

When winter storms die down early and summer showers begin late, the stage is set for a rather dry spring. While there may be no moisture laden air all about there may be nothing to make it fall like rain, no strong lows nor strong local pressure changes. This is about what we expect for the next few months.

Best Time This Week

For greenhouse, hothouse or outdoor farming: March 19, 5 to 6, 7-20 to 8:40 a. m. and 11 a. m. to 1 p. m. For fishing: March 19 and 20. For baking: March 19 and 20. Set fowls: March 23. Set ducks, geese and turkeys: All week except Sunday.

CHAPTER XXIII

"Goodness me! I do seem to have started something," snickered the young woman with the baptismal name—no, however, with any evidence of remorse.

"It may seem that way from where you stand, Sweet Amity," purred kitenish Ann McGuffy, with a purr she had sandpapered down by dint of much practice from "puma crescendo" to "pusse cafedo." "but your 'stand' is very shaky. Truth to tell, I doubt if you could start anything bigger'n a musketeer smudge!"

But Ann McGuffy was making that same grievous mistake so many persons have made since creation started person possessing even a tax title to a piece of property the right to sell any products from that property—timber, oil ore or anything else. Do you think these men did wrong in selling that ore and taking their profits, even though they have set the one-fourth share aside for the lost soldier?"

The sister considered the matter from its various angles and perspectives, as outlined by Jack Stuart. Finally she gave voice to her findings.

"I cannot see," she said, speaking slowly, as if weighing her words, "that any wrong has been done any person. If, as you say, the property would have continued to be worthless withing qualifications. "Perhaps we may be of some aid to each other," suggested Le Tarte, in the course of their talk on the way to the house. "I know most of the late steps, some of which you may not be familiar with."

Jill was delighted at the prospect of having a modern dancing school in Elliston, as were the other girls. Jack visually considered the roundly slim and daintily-gowned form of Nita Ravelle and decided that dancing with her would not be so tiresome. Whereupon his nimble brain gave birth to a clever thought.

"What'd'yuh say, Jill?" he made query of the lady who lived in the —failure to credit an adversary with possessing anything worth bothering about. She had a fine and wholesome contempt for Amity Smythe. Serenely contemptuous, therefore, was she of Amity's harpoon. Alas, poor Ann. She was yet to learn that the danger concealed in the velvet paw of the gaudy tiger was not a whit more bone smashing than that which lay in the swift kick of the scrawny jackass!

"Jack, this is a friend of mine from Chicago, Juanita Ravelle."

Came the Saturday afternoon set for the picnic, which was to celebrate Pat Stuart's gift of $50,000 to the hospital. As a mark of their appreciation, the Mother Superior and several of the Sisters of the order, accompanied by Father Ryan, were in attendance for the earlier festivities.

One of the order, Sister Monica, was quite famous for her beauty and the sweetness of her personality. Jack Stuart had become acquainted with her during the two occasions when Jill had been confined in the hospital, and had been surprised at her liberal outlook on life, and at the broad scope of her reading. On this afternoon of the picnic he had come upon her wandering alone through the splendid grove of chestnut trees that graced the estate. Sister Monica, he judged, was still under 30.

"Isn't it wonderful here?" she exclaimed, as Jack came up. She waved her arm in the general direction of Everywhere. Her beautiful gray eyes were shining under the broad, white band across the forehead, and her parted lips revealed perfect white teeth. Looking at her, Jack Stuart marveled that so beautiful a woman would hide herself from a world that she might have had at her feet, figuratively. Suddenly he thought of something regarding which he wanted this woman's opinion.

"Sister Monica," he said, his manner and tone of serious portent, "there's a question I'd like to ask you—a problem of mine on which I'd like your opinion. May I tell it to you?" "Why, of a certainty," she gave answer, and then stood waiting. "In this case," began Jack, "there is a young man with a family, and because of continued strikes the family is in terribly reduced circumstances. One day, while walking through the hills, he discovers indications of oil. He goes back to town, learns the property has been up for sale for 20 years for unpaid taxes, and decides to buy it. With the help of another this is accomplished, although it takes almost every dollar both can raise.

"Now comes the strange part. Six months after buying the property on a tax title, a stranger comes to them with a proposition. He claims to have found deposits of rich mineral in an old pile of ore on the property and offers the two partners $50,000 apiece for a one-fourth share in profits from ore. It then develops that the original owner of the property, supposed to have been killed in the World war, was alive in this country, but his whereabouts is unknown. It is because of this that the profits on ore sale are divided into fourths. This unknown soldier's share, $50,000, is placed in trust for him, and every effort made to locate him. Up to the present time he has not been found.

"Now, th' question, sister, is this: Did these men have any right to sell this valuable ore on no more staple ownership than that given them by a tax title? Bear in mind, this ore had been piled up there on the property for more than half a century, and considered without value. The young soldier thought so little of it he didn't pay taxes on the property, which had been left him by his grandfather. Now he has $50,000 awaiting him, if he returns, or can be found, whereas, if these men had not made their discoveries he would have nothing. What do you think about it? The law gives a out the discoveries of these men, then this unlocated soldier in reality owned nothing of value. It was only by the discoveries made that the property acquired a value. I would say the soldier, if he is found, and his share given him, should consider himself lucky. The others might have kept the whole."

Impulsively, Jack Stuart caught the nun's hand, and with a gesture a bit theatrical, perhaps, even though unintentional, he bent his head and kissed it.

"Thank you, Sister Monica," he said, a very perceptible tremor discernible in his voice, "you have answered my question perfectly, and at th' same time taken a load of worry from my mind!"

He made no offer of taking her any further into his confidence, and after a little more talk he bade her good day and went to find Jill. Sister Monica, he had occasion to recall later in the day, mentioned a desire to see the little brook at the bottom of the vale. Little did either imagine the tragic circumstances under which they were next to meet. Jack found Jill talking with Ann McGuffy. He observed that his wife was wearing a new gown, a beautiful golden brown creation, particularly suitable to her ripe olive complexion. She was radiant with health, and the knowledge of her own good looks. Her slim ankles incased in sheer silk stockings of perfect fit, were a noticeable contrast to the thick ankles of the unsmiling Amity Smythe, who stood nearby. Jack felt a thrill of pride in the possession of his attractive wife. Then the music-box tones of Mike Sweeney's voice struck on his ear in the one-syllable ejaculation: "Jack!"

He turned around, first to observe the alluring Mike in shimmery white silk and orange. Then his gaze shifted. Vaguely, indistinctly, sounded the words of an introduction: "Jack, this is an acquaintance of mine from Chicago, Juanita Ravelle."

He was looking into liquid depths of inky blackness, through which amber rays glinted, flashed and glowed. Black eyes—hypnotic eyes that caught the gaze, intriguing it for a fleeting instant. Suddenly his brain cleared, the thread of thought, tangled momentarily, became taut, the machinery functioned again. "And so, now she's here for a long visit," Mike was saying, in her quick, staccato tones. His readjusted faculties co-ordinated and he envisioned Nita Ravelle minutely. "Dangerous," was the label of Jack's first sub-conscious impression of the Ravelle personality. Dangerous—but devilishly fascinating. Beautiful she was, unquestionably—seductively beautiful and alluring. She seemed, in fact, well equipped with all the requisites of a movie vampir.

"I've got some delicious golden cantelepe on ice," went on Mike, when the introductory formalities were over. "Suppose we go inside?" "Suits me," said Jack, and noted with satisfaction that Nita Ravelle nodded her approval of the move. They rounded up Jill and Ann McGuffy, Billie Brown, Tony and a newcomer whom Tony introduced as Professor Francois Le Tarte, a teacher of dancing, recently from Pittsburgh and formerly of New York. The professor, Tony informed them, had rented the Vosberg hall in Elliston and expects soon to form a dancing club.

Professor Francois Le Tarte was the typical product of the night club in the big city. Tall, good looking and graceful, suave but not too suave, and gifted with a few boyish mannerisms, he made friends quickly, especially with the women. But like the other newcomer to Elliston, a close observer and student of character would have said he should be labeled "dangerous." Tony evidently had told his new friend of his sister's dansame apartment with him. "What'd'yuh say to a small party some evening next week at our place? We've had nobody there for a month."

Jill exhibited no enthusiasm over the suggestion. "Small party is what it would be," she reminded him. "We can't dance, as you should remember, as any noise is forbidden after 12."

CHAPTER XXIV

"Be warned, friends all," continued Jill, for the benefit of those within hearing, "against the 'conveniences' of the apartment house. 'You've no idea how many different ways th' word 'don't' can be applied until you come to live in a place like th' New Denison. No, Jack," she concluded, "if we're gonna give any party, let us give it at th' Palace hotel."

"K. O.," agreed Jack. And so it was settled. A moment later Mike escorted the little coterie into the Sweeney dining room.

From the interior of a colossal side-board she brought forth a large glass dish covered with iced canteleupe.

Meanwhile, outside in the warm sunshine of the September afternoon, crowds of people rambled through the woods and along the river bank on the estate of The House That Jack Built.

In a grove of lofty maples were tables loaded down with eatables, fruits ice cream in lavish abundance, furnished by Pat Sweeney for the appetites of the guests.

Father Ryan hurried through the lanes of tables to a group of representative citizens, including Pat Sweeney. The latter noted the worried look in the eyes of the priest as he approached.

"What's th' matter, Father?" he inquired, solicitously.

The padre placed a hand on the other's arm and led him a few steps away.

"It is Sister Monica," he said, anxiously shaking his voice. "She's been missing for two hours, an unheard-of thing. Mother Martha is terribly worried, for the sister expected to stay only an hour. Something must have happened to her. Do you think she could have gone to the house?"

"We'd better go and see, Father," said the host of the day, and excusing himself to his curious guests standing nearby, he piloted the worried dominie out of the grove and up one of the numerous paths to a side entrance of the old manor house. In the dining room they came upon the remnants of Mike's informal party. This consisted of Jack Stuart, Mike and Ann McGuffy. The others, Tony, Nita Ravelle, Jill and the dancing professor, had gone for ice cream and cake.

The disquieting news of Sister Monica's strange disappearance put a sudden damper on the spirits of everybody present. Then Jack Stuart recalled hearing the sister speak of wanting to revisit "the little brook at the foot of the hill."

"I think I know th' place she meant," he told his anxious listeners. "I'll hurry, down there while you look elsewhere."

The "brook at the foot of the hill," the spot Jack had in mind, was reached, as he knew, by a steep path that ran down the side of a gorge. It was not necessarily a dangerous path, nor was it altogether a safe one. From where he had left Sister Monica the distance to this brook was, perhaps, 80 rods, less than a quarter of a mile. He started out on the run, and then slowed down to a fast walk, mindful of this need he might have later for his strength. This proved to be a wise forethought.

Had he taken the obvious way he would have missed Sister Monica by a distance of 20 feet. But he chose—without thinking—the longer route, and so came upon her, where, with her last remaining strength, she had dragged herself from the scene of her accident. She was barely conscious—just able to speak when he found her.

"My—right—foot!" she gasped, as Jack bent over her. "I—slipped—at—the—creek. A—piece—of—broken—bottle—cut—through—shoe—on—side. I—tried—to—bind—it—with—strip—torn—from—underskirt. It—bled—terribly. I'm—so—so—weak—"

Jack had already seen the gaping wound, having removed the blood-soaked, inadequate bandage. She, herself, had removed her shoe and had made use of her black cotton stocking as a tourniquet just below the knee. As he saw the cut closer, a terrible fear gripped his heart. An artery had been severed—of that he was sure by the quantity of blood in evidence. She, being a nurse, had understood the necessity for a tourniquet and had fastened it as tightly as possible without a stick which she had been unable to find among the rocks. Jack soon remedied this by twisting a long pencil he carried into a knot in the stocking.

There was only one thing to be done. He must carry her up the hill, so as to lose no time in getting surgical help to her. Fortunately, she was a lightweight of no more than 120 pounds, and Jack Stuart was a big, strong man.

Mike Sweeney was the first to sight him as he emerged from the chestnut grove with the black-robed figure clasped in his arms. She rushed up, white with anxious excitement.

"Hurry an' get out your big car!" he told her, briefly. "Sister Monica fell—cut her foot terribly. Lost a lot of blood. We must get her to th' hospital—quick!"

She nodded understandingly. Mary Elizabeth, as already shown, lost no time in nervous fluttering in the face of emergency. Just as on a previous occasion, she acted first and talked afterward. In this instance she asked no useless question, but turned at once and ran to do his bidding. As she passed the side door of the house, Father Ryan, Pat Sweeney and Ann McGuffy came out.

"Jack—found her!" Mike cried, pausing just long enough to speak. "She fell—cut her foot—bleeding awful—must get her to hospital—I'm going now for th' big car!"

At the corner of the house she turned her head and called back: "Tell Jack I'm hurrying!" And hurry she did. It was, in fact, only a few minutes after his arrival with his now almost totally unconscious burden, that Mike drove up to the side door in the big limousine. Father Ryan, in the meantime, had telephoned instructions to the hospital to be ready for an emergency operation.

Fifteen minutes later the car stopped under the portico of the hospital. Father Ryan leaped out and ran ahead to hurry preparations. Jack, with the now wholly unconscious form of Sister Monica clasped in his arms, followed swiftly in the wake of the Mother Superior, who had been anxiously waiting to conduct them to the operating room.

Two doctors took his burden from him, the first time she had left his arms since he had started with her up the winding, rock strewn path of the gorge. With Father Ryan, Mike and her father, and Ann McGuffy, who, he entered a nearby room to await the report of the two doctors. It came two minutes later, and fear was born anew in their hearts.

"Sister Monica is right at death's door," said Dr. Allen, the house surgeon, in the short, crisp tones of one who knows that a wasted second may mean the loss of a human life. "A blood transfusion is immediately necessary. Not a minute is to be lost—not a second. A strong, pure-blooded, healthy person under 30 is—"

"Would I answer requirements, doctor?" cut in Jack, eagerly. "I know my blood is O. K., for I was examined two weeks ago for life insurance and passed all tests. And I've got more blood than any one man needs! What'd'yuh say, doctor?"

"I say 'come with me, young man,' and may God bless you!" barked the doctor, gladly, and catching the volunteer by the arm he yanked him in the direction of the surgery.

"If you need any good Irish blood, doctor, I'll be waiting!" cried Ann McGuffy, tears streaming down her cheeks and her nose all red and swollen.

"Me, too, doctor!" said Mike.

"May I need yuh—both—can't tell!" called back the surgeon, as he rushed his first victim along. "There's been a lot of blood lost!"

PROOF OF DYES is in the dyeing! Words won't dye a dress, or coat, or sweater. It takes real anilines to do that. That's why Diamond Dyes contain from three to five times more anilines than any other dye—by actual test. It's the anilines in Diamond Dyes that do the work; that give the colors such brilliance; such depth and permanence. It's real aniline that keeps them from giving things that re-dyed look; from spotting or streaking. Next time you have dyeing to do—try Diamond Dyes. Then compare results. See how soft, bright, new-looking the colors are. Observe how they keep their brilliance through wear and washing. Your dealer will refund your money if you don't agree Diamond Dyes are better dyes. The white package of Diamond Dyes is the original "all-purpose" dye for any and every kind of material. It will dye or tint silk, wool, cotton, linen, rayon or any mixture of materials. CURRENT COMMENT

Saline again defeated a bond issue to build a new school last week. This is the second time the proposition has been turned down by about the same majority, 40 votes. Saline is only postponing the inevitable. That town is rapidly growing with the result the school is badly overcrowded and it is necessary to house part of the pupils in temporary wooden structures.

Most of the schools of the state had teams entered in the state basketball tournaments last week. The winners play in the regional contests this week and then in the finals at the Olympia amphitheatre, Detroit the following week. Then the winners are supposed to go to Chicago to compete in the national tournament. Considerable opposition has developed toward the Chicago meet as it takes the players away from school for a week or more at a time.

Putnam township may vote on the proposition to buy a community fire engine at the spring election April 1. The town board are planning to go to Detroit to see the firm which sells the fire trucks Wednesday. After that it will be decided whether the question will be brought to a vote or not. Dexter, Chelsea Stockbridge and Hartland are some of the towns which have purchased such trucks. There the money was raised by popular subscription. This is hardly a fair method as the man who does not subscribe to the purchase of it gets the same protection as the one who does.

OUR professional vision leads us to the utmost in improvement of our service. All that can be done to make this a ritual a lasting memorial is accomplished by us.
