MOWERS WINS FOR SUPERVISOR

Despite the inclement weather, 318 votes were cast in Putnam township at the spring election Monday, last. April 307 votes were cast and last fall 365. Walter Mowers was again chosen for supervisor getting a majority of 49. Last year he won out by 34. The rest of the ticket went Democratic by big majorities. Dallas Cox got the largest popular vote of any candidate getting a grand total of 304 votes. However as he ran on both tickets his vote was split, being voted out for justice by C. A. Frost in a not race. For constable he was victorious getting a majority of 60. We understand he expects to qualify this assuring Pinckney of an efficient law enforcing officer. There were 50 Republican straight, 86 Democrat and 175 split, two being thrown out. On the state ticket there was 114 Republican straight, 144 Democrat and 3 Prohibition. The following is the township vote:

ERNEST J. POWELL HERE THURSDAY APRIL 13

The next number on the Pinckney Lecture course is Ernest J. Powell, lecturer. He will give his lecture at the Pinckney Community Hall on Thursday, April 11. The lecture bureau has the following to say about him:

Powell makes the man who says he doesn't like lectures exude apologies from every pore. For the past dozen years thousands of audiences all over America have laughed at his wit, thrilled to his eloquence and been convinced by his sincerity and dramatic fervor. His language is terse and direct, his imagery clear, his wit sharp. Many towns have had him for three or more lectures.

Powell gets the crowd. He goes to the high school every chance he gets. He addresses Lions, Rotary and Kiwanis Clubs, Commercial Clubs and other luncheon clubs absolutely free of charge. When he goes to the high school he talks on reading character. He points out the students who should be engineers, lawyers, and so forth. He tells what the teachers teach. Then he takes the senior and junior classes with their sponsors and analyzes the character of each one. From the time he gets to town until he leaves the next morning the high school and college students keep him busy. Powell is an expert character reader. Nearly every night two-thirds of the audience stand around for an hour or more listening to him talk on how to read characters.

Powell does not lecture on the Lyceum about character reading necessarily but they keep him busy doing that after his lecture is over.

Powell believes in two great forces truth and democracy. He is never radical because he believes the truth lies somewhere between extremes. His belief in the average person's ability to pass sound judgement upon world problems, presented in language which he comprehends, makes Powell singularly effective. Powell is a wit rather than a humorist, for while the audience is laughing with him they are thinking with him.

MINSTREL SHOW DRAWS HUGE CROWD

The minstrel show put on by the Pinckney O. E. S. lodge at the Pinckney Community Hall Monday evening was witnessed by about 400 people and thoroughly enjoyed. This kind of an entertainment is a novelty for Pinckney as it has been many years since one of its nature was put on here. The three Isler sisters on the violin, cornet, and trumpet accompanied by Mrs. Earl Banghn gave several selections before the curtain rose and between the acts which were generously applauded. The minstrel show came next with Mrs. Gertrude Hicks as interloctor and W. M. Kettler and Mrs. Anna Reason as end men. They entertained the audience with a regular old time minstrel show made up of reparte solos, group songs, spirituals and character impersonations all in negro dialect. This was followed by the one act comedy "Oh Doctor" which kept the crowd convulsed with laughter for 40 minutes. Taken all in all it was one grand success and it is to be hoped that many more of them will be staged here in the future.

P. T. A. MEETING

The regular meeting of the P. T. A. will be held at the school house Monday evening, April 8. Two questions of importance are to be voted upon. What is your favorite bird? and summer round up of the children. A good attendance is desired.

WHAT IS YOUR FAVORITE BIRD?

The Michigan Audubon Society wants this question answered before the end of April. During the next two months an intensive campaign will be conducted in schools and among organized groups. Each parent teacher local will want to cast its vote for its choice of the twenty-one bird candidates. Each group is to send in the number of votes cast for each bird. The following is the list of candidates: Chickadee, Downy Woodpecker, Quail, Goldfinch (commonly called the Wild Canary), Cedar Waxwing, Cardinal, Robin, Bluebird, Song Sparrow, Bobolink, Mourning Dove, Baltimore Oriole, House Wren, Brown Thrasher, Rose-breasted Grosbeak, Whipperwill, Purple Martin, Catbird and Kingbird. After the vote is taken, the winner will be declared the official bird emblem of Michigan as soon as the approval of the state legislature can be obtained.

NOTICE

Everybody dumping rubbish on the streets leading to Catholic cemetery or from St. Joseph's church to Esze sisters or on any other street inside corporation limits in Pinckney will be prosecuted. The dumping grounds are in the old gravel pit west of Rex Smith's house. C. H. Kennedy, Pres.

INDIAN DIALECT STUDY IS URGED

Study of the languages of the American Indian, many of which are about to vanish with the disappearance of certain racial strains, offers a fertile and scarcely tilled field for the linguistic scholar, according to Prof. Edwin Sapir of the University of Chicago, who addressed the opening session of the Michigan Academy of Science, Arts and Letters.

Prof. Sapir, commending on the variety and complexity of "The Aboriginal Languages of America," declared that there are to be heard today in California a greater number of tongues than could be collected in the whole history of continental Europe, both ancient and modern.

The learning of Latin, Greek or Sanskrit is child's play compared with acquiring a mastery of the Navajo or Southern Piate languages, he declared, due to the apparent confusion of tenses and the numerous circumlocutions employed by many tribes to supply word deficiencies.

Prof. Sapir said, however, that, despite apparent dissimilarity between the tribal tongues, further study might permit a classification under not more than six general heads.

Such intensive study, he said, unquestionably would show many similarities with the languages of Asia, and might well be expected to throw additional light on early ethnic movements.

"In any case," he said, "the extraordinary flexibility of human expression admirably could be demonstrated."

Several hundred members of the academy accepted the invitation of the university to inspect the new museum building, and examined the special exhibits prepared by the sections on botany, economics and sociology, fine arts, forestry, geography and zoology.

The programs of the various sections, which include the reading of 248 papers, were started Friday and continue through today.

Show Record Number Of Clubs for State

A record number of 4-H clubs and a total membership of 19,022 boys and girls enrolled in those clubs in Michigan during the past year is reported by the state club leader at Michigan State College.

If the percentage of the youngsters who finished their projects can be taken as a measure, 1928 was Michigan's banner year for 4-H clubs as 79.3 per cent of all members completed their allotted work. The clubs provide practical instructive work for boys and girls in all seasons of the year.

Business men's organizations in Michigan cities now are assisting in the leadership of many of the clubs; in several cases the men act as partners of individual club members. The senior partner often loans money to the junior to enable him to purchase livestock or seed. The loan is secured by a note which is paid when the crop or livestock is sold.

4-H club work was organized in all but five Michigan counties last year. Next year's plan made by the state leader calls for 20,000 club members in 80 counties.

Summer camps for Michigan club members are held at East Lansing, Gaylord and Chatham. At these camps contests are held to determine district champions, and final contests are held at the Michigan State Fair to select state champions who represent the state in national competitive events.

Turned It Down

The early magazines turned down all advertising that they could struggle along without.

Harper's monthly refused to publish advertising for thirty-four years after its founding. In the early seventies Fletcher Harper rejected an offer of $18,000 for the use of the last page for a year by the Howe Sewing Machine. The magazine was really a house organ, advertising the books published by Harper Brothers. Advertisements from outsiders were declined.

Scribner's pioneered in approaching the advertisers, and the new advertising agent, who began as a space salesman for the magazines and later shifted his responsibility to the client, in corraling them. Railroads were the first advertisers to venture into the magazines.

Poems That Live

TO A KISS

Soft child of love, thou balmy bliss,
Infer me, O delicious kiss,
Why thou so suddenly art gone,
Lost in the monument thou art won't

Yet go! For wherefore should I sigh?
On Delia's lips, with raptured eye,
On Delia's blushing lips I see
A thousand full as sweet as thee.
—John Wolcot (1738-1819)

Windows Need Specially Planned Treatment

By HILDA HUNT

Almost all rooms of moderate size require at least two separate furniture groupings to preserve the balance. This is necessitated by the location of the windows and fireplace, as well as the dominating pieces of furniture. Where there are large windows in a group, as illustrated, there is a special need for a well-planned arrangement, or otherwise the gorgeous effect of such windows will be entirely lost, or worse yet, turned into a barn-like atmosphere.

Large window space like this is a decided addition to any room, whether it be in a city or the country. Not only does it provide a delightful outlook, but it is the means of furnishing adequate daylight, which is at a premium everywhere. The wise decorator hangs very transparent glass curtains directly against the windows so as not to shut out the light, but which, at the same time, discounts any glare that is equally as harmful as is too little light.

In this room we have the situation of grouping furniture around the French windows at one end of the room and staging a pleasant scene about the fireplace, which is directly opposite. Both of these two centers are equally important, and so dependent on each other. During the colder months of the year all eyes are necessarily centered on the fireplace. But the desire to be able to look outdoors, either at a storm or sunshine, is true of the city as well as the country.

Keynote Informality
Informality is the keynote of this room, with its spacious green denim covered sofa that is flanked by two walnut end tables of interesting shape. Chinese lamps in duplicate are a charming decorative note, and their light is sufficient for illumination and reading. Matching chairs of the colonial barrel type are a delightful addition, not only because of their comfort, but because of their colorful tone and green chintz covers which, oddly enough, are not used for the outside of the chair. A woods brown glazed chintz covers the backs and sides of the chair, harmonizing with the inner fabric as well as the rest of the color scheme of the room.

A tall secretary in walnut adds an air of dignity, while at the same time acting as a nice point in balance between the fireplace at one end of the room and the windows at the other. The window of beige silk draperies, you will notice, are drawn well back, so as not to obstruct either the view or the light. At night they can be drawn across the windows to serve as shades.

LAKEVIEW NOW IN "LITTLE TEN"

Lakeview high school, for several years one of the leading contenders for athletic supremacy among class C schools, has been admitted to the Little Ten conference. This announcement was made following the admission of Lakeview and Howell recently.

The new conference will consist of 12 schools instead of ten as it was formerly composed and will bring into competition some of the strongest athletic teams representing the smaller schools in this part of the state.

The conference as it now stands will be made up of teams from Albion, Marshall, East Lansing, Eaton Rapids, Hastings, Charlotte, Coldwater, Mason, Hillsdale, Lak view, Howell and Grand Ledge.

Lakeview will be obliged to play four other conference schools in each branch of sport in order to be eligible as a title contender. These four games along with others that will make up the Perryman's schedule should provide Lakeview followers with a bevy of contests each year that will be well worthy of the athletic ability they have displayed in the past.

Baptists Provide Missionary For North Michigan

Rev. Arthur A. Glen, formerly pastor of the Baptist church at Twining, has been appointed by the joint boards of the American Baptist Publication society and the Michigan Baptist convention a colporteur missionary for northern Michigan.

His work will be in the out-of-the-way places. He will distribute Christian literature, distribute Bibles, visit homes, giving Christian instruction and hold meetings in homes, school houses and camps. He will resuscitate dead and dying churches and carry on the general work of a missionary.

He will live in Cadillac, but his support will come from First Baptist church of Pontiac.

Mr. Glen is well acquainted with conditions in this territory, having passed a large share of his life on a farm west of Tustin, where his people still live.

Big Rapids to Fete District's Women

The annual convention of the State Federation of Women's Clubs of the northwest district will be held May 16 and 17 in Big Rapids. District President Bernice Clark of Big Rapids announces.

It is customary to have the annual gathering in the city of the president's residence for the purpose of facilitating committee work. Accordingly Big Rapids extended an invitation at the last convention.

The northwest district includes all clubs in western Michigan between Muskegon and the Soo. Approximately 40 clubs are to send 150 delegates. Combined with the Big Rapids membership of 100 the convention promises to be one of the largest held in this city in several years.

The first meeting is to be held in the high school auditorium, but the remaining sessions are to be held in the Presbyterian church.

Gerrit Masselink, president of Ferns Institute, will be the first night speaker. Following his address a gypsy play, under direction of Mrs. F. A. Tippy, will be presented.

Mrs. Eben Mumford of Lansing, state president of the organization, is to attend the convention.

M Will Get Skeleton Unearthed In Mecosta

What may prove to be a valuable animal skeleton for scientific study was unearthed recently by Nelson White of Fork township. The skeleton was found imbedded in marl in Fork township, Mecosta county.

While digging up a wagonload of marl in an old dried lake White struck bones at a depth of seven feet. They were brought to the office of County Agent E. E. Twing, but no one seems to be able to identify what appears to be a prehistoric reptile.

Mr. Twing plans to send the skeleton to the department of natural history at the University of Michigan.

"The Mirror" Wins National Honors

"Perseverance is the road to success" again has proved a true maxim by the achievement of the Mt. Clemens high school bi-weekly newspaper, The Mirror, when it took first place along with nine other schools in the United States in the national contest conducted by the University of Columbia Department of Journalism, March 8 and 9, at New York. The taking of first place puts it in line for the gold medal given by the university. The gold medal winner is the best of the nine winners.

The achievement, which is not a small one, as over 600 school papers were entered in the contest, belongs to the work and effort of the printing instructor, Arthur P. Smith of Mt. Clemens. Working in unison with him is a staff of high school students.

Cheese and Rice Croquettes—Make a thick white sauce of one cup of milk, one-fourth cup of butter and one-third cup of flour. Add one cup grated pimento cheese and stir until melted. Season with salt, pepper and a dash of paprika. Cool, mix with two cups of cold boiled rice and shape. Roll in bread crumbs and dip in a slightly beaten egg diluted with two table-spoons water. Roll in crumbs again and fry in deep fat.

Chocolate Fudge Cake—Cream two-thirds cup butter with one cup sugar, add one cup milk. Sift together one-fourth cup cocoa, one heaping teaspoon baking powder and two and one-half cups of flour. Separate three eggs, beating whites first, to which a pinch of salt has been added, and then the yolks. Add the beaten yolks to the milk mixture, gradually stir in the sifted dry ingredients, and one-half cup walnut meats coarsely chopped. Lastly, fold in the beaten egg whites. Bake in loaf in moderate oven. It can be finished with a fudge frosting. Take one-half cup unsweetened cocoa, one and one-half cups confectioner's sugar, one-third teaspoon salt and blend together. Put one-fourth cup milk on the fire with one and one-half table-spoons butter. Heat to boiling point and gradually stir in cocoa and sugar mixture. Cook seven or eight minutes, being careful not to burn.

The World and All

By CHARLES B. DRISCOLL

IN NEW YORK

A drunken marine, in full uniform, was issuing a challenge to all comers in the main waiting room of Grand Central Terminal on a recent rainy night. He had gained a strategic position commanding one of the principal entrances, and it was apparent that a battle was about to begin.

The landing force had a badly blackened eye, which may have been evidence that he had been repulsed quite recently in a similar movement.

"Step out, step out!" he cried, adding appropriate, but not very religious epithets, and addressing himself, apparently, to the bored commuters who were drifting through to their late trains. There was added a specific statement that the challenger would undertake to whip anybody.

I saw a tall policeman approaching from the east end of the block-long waiting room. He was, I discovered, Officer 953, Hennessey by name. He was taller than the marine, but carried no club in sight.

"Here comes a battle between the landing force and the home defenders!" said I to myself and, with others, paused to watch the outcome. There wasn't any fight. The policeman walked right up to the marine, stopped beside him, spoke to him in a low tone for a few minutes, and walked on, the marine in tow, but not forcefully impelled. The policeman just laid one hand gently on the drunk's arm, and that only occasionally, when there was a slackening of pace.

The bravado of the fighter quieted gradually. He continued to shout for a little while, but his tone kept getting lower and lower. By the time he had walked with the big policeman through the waiting room, around a corner, and through the Concourse, he was talking gently, almost in a whisper. The cop never raised his voice. At the Lexington avenue exit the policeman neither sought a fight nor put his friend out upon the sidewalk, with a last friendly bit of advice.

As a plain citizen, I had to compliment the policeman in person. So many persons in authority would have precipitated a bloody fight. This policeman neither sought a fight nor ran away from one. He performed his duty quietly, unostentatiously, and efficiently.

I wish I could hire a policeman like Hennessey to teach department and technique to at least half the police forces of American cities. That's the kind of an officer I'd decorate with medals.

Living and Loving

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

HUSBANDS MUST STEP TO HOLD WIVES TODAY

Talk about women "holding their husbands." Husbands have to step some to hold the wife these days. Let hubby be off the job for awhile, thinking that keeping house and taking care of the children will keep the little woman busy and out of mischief, and he is doomed to a terrible awakening. More likely than not she's in love with his best friend and contemplating an elopement.

At least that's what I gather from some of the letters I get in which my advice is asked. Keeping everlastingly on the job is the only way to hold a wife these days. Always look your best, men, keep yourselves shaved and neat, bring in the good old dollars, keep pretty speeches always on tap and always be ready to step out with the wife; that is the price of continued matrimony.

"Dear Virginia Lee: I have been married 11 years. I have two children and love them most dearly. My husband has not been able to do anything for me for the past ten years. Of course I know it is wrong, but I can't help it, I am 31 and in love with a man about my age, and I am sure that he loves me. I believe if I could marry him he would be good to me and make me a good home. It certainly would be appreciated if you could give me any advice on this subject.
A. P. D."

Would this man also care for the children? And what would become of your husband? Is he ill or incapacitated in some way that he cannot take care of you? If so, of course your loyalty is to him. You promised to cherish him through "sickness and health, in poverty and riches," didn't you? It never pays to go back on your word. Stand true as long as it is humanly possible, for if you don't you will always be haunted by your conscience and the new husband will feel that as you went back on one man he cannot trust you to be true to him.

Nancy: You did nothing wrong, Nancy. Your boy friend probably did not like the idea of your going sleigh riding with others. It is his place to apologize to you for being almost rude in not speaking when he met you. Let him do it and you have a good time until he gets over his "mad."

Mike: I am afraid you will not take my advice, dear, which is to just be friendly with this boy you like and make no special effort to "win" him. He may wake up all of a sudden to what a nice little girl you are. And the same advice goes to all you little school girls who love a certain boy who pays no attention to you.

Puzzled: Why not let the second boy friend go and correspond with the first one? Then if he wants to come to see you, and you find you still love him, marry him and go with him.

With the Women of Today

One of the charming debutantes who was recently introduced to Washington, D. C., society, was Miss Nanita Miles. She is the daughter of Major and Mrs. Sherman Miles and the grand-daughter of the late General Nelson A. Miles, famous for his record during the Civil and Spanish wars and for his suppression of Indian outbreaks. In 1895 General Miles became the senior officer commanding the United States army.

Makes Fine Books

Miss Elizabeth MacKinstry of New York is proficient in the art of making fine books. She started her career as a violinist, but a serious illness prevented her continuance. She studied sculpture under Rodin in Paris. Miss MacKinstry writes poems, two volumes, "Helens' Mirrors" and "Puck in Pasture," are from her hands, the latter being her work from jacket to end papers.

Heritage Denied

Miss Madge Thurlow Macklin of the University of Western Ontario recently reported that according to her observations, the first born child is not subject to an inheritance of the family diseases, which theory had previously been held by medical men. Her report was made to the American Eugenic Society.

Advanced Legislature

A recent law in Turkey forbids the issuing of marriage licenses except on presentation by each party of a health certificate signed by a government physician or a private physician whose signature is registered at the local health department. Certificates issued by private physicians must be sent to the local health authorities for investigation. The law requires that the men shall be given thorough physical examinations and that the women shall have the hands, throat and mouth examined. All applicants for licenses must present birth certificates.

From Home Maker to President

Fifteen years ago Mrs. Walter C. B. Voight of New York supplemented dishwashing and tending the baby with making slides in her own home for the Radio Mat Slide Company. She is now president of the company, which manufactures 900,000 slides a year.

State Drops Plan To Enlarge Park

Dispute between property owners and the state as to the value of six lots at the entrance to Bay City state park has resulted in the latter dropping negotiations for purchase of the property, according to Lansing dispatches. Director George E. Hogarth of the state conservation commission, said the commission felt an attempt was being made to hold up the state. According to the advices, the state has offered $17,500 for the property, while the owners have set a figure of $55,000 for it. For months the project has been under way with Representative Arthur C. McKinnon of Bay state highway department and the City taking the lead in having the state highway department and the conservation commission proceed with the plans agreed upon.

The Bay City park stood second for 1928 in the matter of attendance.

LEGISLATIVE NEWS

With significant developments along lines of taxation and crime prevention, at the Michigan Legislature last week, observers saw the first actual intimation that the session was about to enter into its early phases of adjournment. The most important function of any legislature is to levy sufficient tax to carry the state along for the next two years. Its next most important task is to bring crime legislation up to the requirements of the times, and once these two things are done, little else of equal importance remains to be accomplished.

The administration-sponsored tax bill designed to raise more than $27,000,000 for institutional buildings during the next four years, was being favorably considered in the house, shortly after its introduction. Thus it was that important barriers to adjournment were being worked loose from their moorings. While the large bills were being subjected to scrutiny, smaller bills were being boiled out like chicks from under an incubator.

Thursday morning saw the criminal code amendments measure, introduced early in the session by Rep. Geo. C. Watson of Cape, favorably reported out by the senate judiciary committee, without amendment, after this measure had been passed in the house. This is the bill which would, in effect, remove liquor law violators from a mandatory life imprisonment provisions of the criminal code, on fourth offense. It would also remove those convicted for fourth offense, for some 200 felonies, from the danger of life imprisonment. Rules were suspended in the senate to allow for quick passage of the measure Thursday afternoon.

Thirty Senators voted for the measure with no opposing votes cast.

The measure introduced by Rep. Alex D. Cuthbertson, of Flint, was passed in the house two weeks ago, to checkmate the administration in its efforts to remove liquor law violators from life imprisonment provision of the code. This would be accomplished by raising the maximum sentence for first violation of the liquor laws, to five years imprisonment, which, with the proposed code amendments, would call for life for fourth offense. The amended code would levy a 7 1/2 to 15 year sentence on fourth liquor law offenders and not life.

When the Cuthbertson bill was passed in the senate on March 21, however, the maximum sentence for first offense was dropped to four years, thus removing liquor law violators from the life imprisonment provisions of the code. But the upper house added a section, admitted by Sen. Leon F. Miner, of Flint, which would impose a mandatory minimum penalty of $50 fine or 50 days in jail for first violation of the liquor laws, not involving a sale. This would mean considerable trouble for the casual possession of liquor, and for the home brewer making his own supply of beer. On the senate amendments, however, the house refused to concur, and the bill was sent back to the senate last Tuesday, where it was tabled by Senator Miner, who said, on the floor that attempts to iron out the difficulties would be made informally, in the near future.

The tax measure calling for an eight-tenths mill tax for four years, which was introduced in the house last Tuesday, was considered favorably by the taxation committee and sent to ways and means committee, the same day, indication that speed would be shown on this highly important measure in its course through the lower house.

Another taxation measure, which has already been passed in the senate, was altered by the house. The House amendments did not suit the senate, with the result that the bill was temporarily shelved in the senate. It was the oil and gas severance tax measure which would impose a 2 per cent monthly tax on the gross market value of such natural products taken in Michigan. The difference of opinion developed over the matter of the division of the money. The measure, from the desk of Sen. Chester M. Howell, of Saginaw, would have divided the money so that the state would get 1 per cent while the remaining 1 per cent would have been divided equally between the county and the township where the tax was levied. The house suggested an equal division between these three political subdivisions. The measure will be ironed out in conference.

A stiff battle arose in the senate, on Tuesday and Wednesday, when Sen. William F. Turner's measure calling for distribution of $2,000,000 annually in the so-called poorer school districts, was finally passed over the strenuous objections of Senator Wood of Detroit, who claimed that Wayne county would pay most of this additional tax.

Senator Turner, in 1927 secured passage of a similar bill, when he was a member of the lower house. This bill would have appropriated $1,000,000 for relief of poorer school districts, but, as there was no tax clause in the measure, the money was never realized. The present measure has a tax clause attached.

Senate judiciary committee, considering capital punishment appointed a sub-committee, to draft a compromise bill consideration of the committee.

The house has passed the bill repealing the Horton corn borer act of 1927, and has sent this measure to the senate for approval.

The senate also approved a house measure, a proposed joint resolution by which the constitution would be amended so as to allow the state to aid in the opening up of rivers and streams of the state. The passage of this measure in the senate is virtual assurance that voters will be asked to express themselves on this question at the general election of November 1930. The constitution at present forbids the state to join in such ventures. The joint resolution was introduced by Rep. Fred C. Holbeck, of Long Lake.

Drainage districts, counties and townships would be protected from fraud or embezzlement on the part of any county official, by a house measure passed in the senate Monday night, after its introduction by Rep. Sheldon Coleman, of Lawton. This measure would provide that in case such irregularities were discovered the county board of supervisors could reimburse the district effected, by a draft on the general fund of the county concerned.

The senate went a long way, Tuesday, in solving the vexatious matter of relations between regular "medics" and members of the other schools of medicine in the state, by the passage on the bill by Rep. Culver providing for a separate state examining board for chiropractors, an object toward which these professionals have striven for many years.

Osteopaths were granted privileges equal to those of regular doctors by a senate measure passed by the upper house, Tuesday. This bill was sent to the house for approval. All healers will have to fulfil the increased provisions of new educational requirements as embodied in the so-called "basic sciences" bill passed in the senate at the same time.

The joint resolution authorizing the state to create home loan districts for the purpose of aiding in the financing of homes for those in the low income brackets, once defeated in the house, was taken from the table Wednesday afternoon and passed. The measure, like all joint resolutions, calls for a constitutional amendment and consequently a vote from the people in November, 1930.

SUNDAY SCHOOL TRAINING CLASS

Of interest to Livingston County Sunday School teachers is the Standard Training School to be held in the Presbyterian church in Howell each evening from April 8 to 12. Under the auspices of the Livingston County Council of Religious Education. The opening class session will be at 7:30. Two class sessions of 50 minutes each will be held each evening with a 20 minute intermission for devotions and inspirational address.

The student may have a choice of two subjects: "The Life of Christ," taught by Rev. H. M. Noble of the Howell Presbyterian church, or "Children's Worsnip," taught by Miss Gene Gatten, Lansing Michigan, who is the Superintendent of the Children's Division of the Michigan Council.

It is hoped that every Sunday School in the county may send in a group of teachers to take this work.

Mrs. J. W. Childs, Sec'y.

Animals and Science.

Animals have not contributed solely to the welfare of human beings, Dr. John A. Kolmer points out in Hygeia Magazine. The lower animals are directly benefited by the advances in biological therapy.

Tetanus antitoxin, for instance, is often used to prevent tetanus in wounded animals. Antianthrax serum combats anthrax in sheep and cattle. A serum for hog cholera is successfully employed by veterinarians. Dogs are vaccinated against rabies. There are also serums for joint-ill of colts; hemorrhagic septicemia of horses, cattle, hogs and sheep; white scours of hogs, cats, dogs and sheep; infectious abortion of cows, and rinderpest of cattle.

CURRENT COMMENT

Putnam did not vote on purchasing a fire engine at the election Monday.

The town board did not believe the proposition would carry unless an extensive educational campaign was put on in its behalf and there was no time to do this. In the meantime the township must pay the village $50 for each run the village engine makes outside the village limits.

Some time ago one of the leading cigarette companies staged a blindfold test of a number of the leading brands of cigarettes on the University campus at Ann Arbor to determine which brand was the most popular. The company putting on the contest won. Now the legislature threatens to investigate the affair as it is said hundreds of students were mailed free cigarettes and many of those who were in the contest were not 18 years old. Many people think the cigarette companies go beyond the limit in the advertising especially with their testimonials from leading ball players, actors, and singers that certain brands of cigarettes were responsible for their success.

If the capital punishment bill is killed in the present session, most of the credit for this must go to Senator Seymour Person of this district. He suggested that an amendment be added to the capital punishment bill to the effect that a wire be run from Jackson state prison to Lansing so that the justices of the supreme court could throw the switch for the electrocution of convicted murderers at Jackson.

Kept Within Law but Got His Shaft Home

A Mount Vernon (N. Y.) lawyer had lost but one case in a practice extending over 25 years. This particular case should never have been lost; the lawyer knew it and was correspondingly angered at the judge, whom he blamed for the loss of the case. Arising from his seat the lawyer addressed the court:

"Your honor, is it against the law to think?"

"Of course not," replied the judge. "Is it against the law to tell what you think?"

"Of course not," replied the judge. "You know very well that it is not."

"Is it against the law to say at all times and anywhere what you honestly think, your honor?"

"Naw, Mr. — your experience teaches you that you can say at all times and anywhere what you really think," said the man on the bench.

"Well, your honor," said the defeated lawyer, "I think that the decision just handed down was rotten."

And he "got by" with it.

WEEK OF APRIL 7

The warm weather and storminess of last week will finish up in Michigan during the opening days of this week. Electrical storms are entirely probable in scattered parts of this state, but high winds and generous showers are most certain. General rain and wind storms will continue over into the middle days of this week.

During early part of week the temperatures will begin falling, so that by Wednesday they will have reached quite a little below normal. Snow flurries or snow storms, even to the extent of blizzards are likely in scattered parts of the state.

After April 10 we are expecting the weather to clear up considerably although there may still be some cloudiness and threatening conditions. Temperatures, at least, will moderate somewhat until the very end of this week, when we are expecting another drop.

Low Sheep Prices Due Now Losses from mid-winter lambing have been quite heavy in central northern Michigan this year due to the severity of the weather, this being but another form of proof of Pritchard's Weather Forecast accuracy. It is this loss at lambing that helps to set sheep prices. A more rough estimate is obtained by the irregular cycle of price.

In the past, the low point of the cycle has been reached three to seven years after the high point. The year 1925 was probably the high point and this would put 1929 close to the low point. In previous cycles the low price point was reached in 1895-6, 1903-4, 1911-12 and in 1920-21. The next low point year is due now.

Sheep numbers continued to increase during 1928 and the lamb crop this year may show some increase above last year, according to a late agricultural report from the government. Michigan alone shows an increase of 66,000 more sheep over a year ago.

JACK and JILL

By CLIFFORD WEBB

(Copyright, 1928, The Central Press Association, Inc.)

"I never heard that Nita Ravelle had anything except the $12,000 yearly alimony she draws in monthly installments—in advance," said Mike, in a confidential talk with Father Pat.

"Jack is making a big mistake in not taking this offer at the works, instead of fooling away his time and money on that 'business'—and that woman!" was the sum and substance of Peter Justin's talk with the priest. And Father Pat agreed with him, in a voice on tout-a-fait, the which, in a mixture of tongues, constitute the last words for absolutely and completely.

could she have spent so much money?

CHAPTER XXIX "Haven't you kept any sort of memorandum?" he asked, eyeing her as if she had suddenly developed some strange mannerism, or outlandish growth. "Didn't you keep any data on what you drew checks for?"

He was, in actual truth, really doubtful regarding her sanity. How could a woman spend all that money and have no better wardrobe than his wife possessed? The most expensive thing she owned was a fur coat that had cost $500. And she hadn't bought any jewelry. Where ances are often very deceptive, and it must be conceded that appearances were again Jill. "What do you think of that, Jill?" erupted Tony, as he burst into the flat one morning at breakfast time (early breakfast at 10 o'clock). He was waving a telegram.

"I'll bequeath him to you, Billie, darling, till you get that left hoof of yours trained," she told the girl whose feet could not keep in tune with the music.

"How nice for you, Billie!" gurgled the angelic Amity, who had a particularly offensive habit of talking "at" people who would talk neither at nor to her, "to have your 'sweeties' handed down to you already trained to kiss by so practiced a teacher!"

"Isn't it th' glorieth truth?" mewed Billie, with a pussy-face grin. "I am th' lucky Jane! How horrible it muth be for a poor female of th' thpepath who livth 30 yearth without ever being kithed by a he-man!"

A purplish tint stained the saffron complexion of Amity Smythe. It was the dark blood of a murderous desire fed by envy, rancor and a long-abiding hatred. To have snatched up the pretty blonde by her pretty neck and choked the life out of her, would, if facial expressions mean anything, have furnished Amity just then with the keenest of joy.

But, in the art of flicking the raw sarcasm, Billie B. was a mere novice as compared to the case-hardened, old-time, sweet Amity. Looking her youthful adversary over as if seeking the most vulnerable spot for sinking her harpoon, the maiden lady unblinded thusly:

"I've got receipts right here for all I've spent," she stated, with ponderous dignity. "They foot up, with stubs for th' furnishings, th' car rent and grocery bill of six hundred to five thousand, seven hundred and sixty in all. My stubs show I've spent one thousand, one hundred. Th' total is six thousand, eight hundred. That leaves a balance of five thousand, five hundred and twelve dollars you have spent. How do yuh explain it? With th' exception of the eight hundred to th' girls, you spent it all! I give you a check-book and you just fritter it away!"

Jill was literally speechless. The stinging bite of a totally unexpected impotency was nipping her. The justification of Jack's accusation was too obvious to make denial anything but ridiculous. The balances in their bankbooks were only too clear. But here—five thousand, five hundred and twelve dollars! How and where had she peddled out over fifty-five hundred dollars in six months? Why Jill didn't tell Jack the truth—that she had bought clothing, food, shoes and other things of actual necessity for scores of poor children in Elliston; had paid the mortgage on the home of Jake Connolly, who had been stricken with rheumatism; that she had sent Jake's oldest daughter through a business college to enable her to help her people. Why she didn't tell him of these things, instead of letting him believe her guilty of foolish expenditure—or even of something evil—can be answered only in one way.

Just as some persons are afflicted with an "inferior complex," so had Jill acquired a "sensitive complex." It hurt her feelings when he took it instantly for granted that she had spent the extra money in some improper way. Then her stubborn pride rebelled, and she refused to answer to anything but her sensitive complex. The result was—misunderstanding, headache and tragedy.

From that morning the "rift in the lute" in the daily lives of Jack and Jill began to widen. He made no move toward the curtailment of her check writing, nor did he again refer to their expenditures. The life craft of the Stuarts continued to drift along with the apparently smooth-running current of everyday affairs. And therein lay their danger; they were drifting.

Gossip began to hook up Jill and Professor Le Tarte, and then started an affair between Jack Stuart and Nita Ravelle. As none of the parties directly concerned seem to pay any attention to the talk, it grew anaemic for lack of sustenance.

But it did not die. There were always embers to be fanned into a flame. Nor did the gossip run exclusively among the women folk. There were men who came, who saw, and then saw to it that others saw as they did.

"Jack Stuart's riding for a tumble if he fools around with that Ravelle woman much longer," said Clyde Cummings, of Cummings and Putnam, realtors. He was speaking confidentially to the junior partner, "Putty."

"Not as big a fall as that wife o' his'll get some o' these days!" asseverated Putty, pursing up his parrot mouth in righteous disapproval of the woman who lacked appreciation of his petting proclivities and refused afterward to dance with him.

lowed, to recall that moment and to marvel at the feeling of antagonism just a glance from the other woman had inspired in her. It seemed almost to predestinate grief and trouble. "When is your opening night, Jill?" The questioner was Mike Sweeney. While Mike and Jill had always been on speaking terms—even visiting terms—their relations never had been really friendly. It was rare that either addressed the other directly, as in the present instance. Jill was a trifle surprised, but she gave no evidence of it in her reply.

"Saturday night," she answered. "We'll take th' early train Saturday morning. It leaves here at 8:10, and gets into Pittsburgh at 12:30 p. m. We go on th' floor at 11 and finish at midnight. Just an hour's work."

"Thome folkth thurtainly are born lucky!" chirped the irrepressible Billie. "Juth think! One hour of dandth—half dothen hourth a week havin' a good time—and gettin' paid for it! I wish I had thom talent. But all I got ith an impediment in my talk, and nobody wantth to buy that!"

Then up spoke Mike again—this time with an astonishing proposal. "What d'yuh say, Jill—Tony and you—if we make your opening night th' occasion for a city party? Our limousine will carry a dozen, if necessary. There would be—let's see—" She counted the names off on her fingers. "There's Jill and her husband, two; Tony, three; Professor Le Tarte, four; Billie and Ann, six; Nita and myself, eight. Just a nice little party!"

She had ignored Amity Smythe as if the latter had not existed. Whether she did it intentionally or not the unkindness of the oversight was just as apparent. Jill Stuart didn't like Amity, and everybody present knew there was almost an open feud between them. Only a few moments before Amity had tossed one of her "bouquets" at Jill, and without the slightest provocation. Obviously, it was not Jill's place to consider Amity Smythe's feelings.

At the same time her innate kindness of heart revolted at the sight of another's hurt. And anyone looking at Amity at that moment would have known she was suffering. To be the only one left out—deliberately cut by the rich and popular young Sweeney girl—was just another thorn in the flesh of the poor soul whose best was never any too good. The open cut had hurt cruelly, no less because she knew that everybody felt she deserved it.

Jill felt her heart swell as she looked at the unfortunate Amity. She knew the girl had never been to the city in her life. Just to go with the party and be one of them, Jill knew, would be a treat to Amity Smythe that few could understand. Instinctively Jill felt everything that Amity felt. She knew just the sense of mortification and loneliness that other was enduring. With the realization of this came the sudden resolution to do an unheard-of thing. She turned to Mike Sweeney.

"Didn't you overlook someone present, Miss Sweeney?" she asked, politely. In view of the fact that it was Tony's and her opening night for which the party had been proposed, she felt that she should have something to say about the arrangements.

Mike Sweeney looked at her questioningly. Jill answered the implied inquiry. "Since you are getting up th' party in honor of Tony's and my opening night, I'd like to ask that you invite Miss Smythe. Just because Amity and I haven't been on th' best of terms lately is no reason for excluding her from parties I attend."

"Why, certainly! I shall be glad, if you wish it, to include Miss Smythe!" exclaimed Mike, her quick Irish brain instantly interpreting the line of thought that had flashed through Jill's mind. There was a new light, one that savored of admiration, in her eyes, as they rested on Jill Stuart's face.

Amity Smythe, for the moment, seemed speechless. That Jill Stuart, the woman she had slurred time and again, the woman to whom she had not spoken to for more than a year, should have turned suddenly and extended her a kindness, compelling attention, she had never dreamed of. As a guest at her party—it was "heaping coals of fire" on Amity's head.

There was, under the circumstances, only one thing she could do. She did it, and she did it with a quiet dignity that surprised every-one present save, perhaps, Ann McGuffy.

Ann didn't like the sarcastic tongue of Amity Smythe. But she had discovered that Amity's tongue was, in reality, her own worst enemy. That Amity knew how and when to play a trump card she proved on that occasion.

WOULD UTILIZE ARMORY AT IONA

A new plan to make the Ionia Armory of even greater service to the community and to forge more strongly the spirit of friendship existing between business men of the city and Company H is announced by Lieut. Chester C. Black, officer in command.

It is hoped to perfect plans for the weekly use of the Armory facilities by business men. As the building provides a gymnasium floor, shower baths and similar facilities it is believed probable business men will welcome the opportunity to use them.

Lieut. Black in announcing the plan stressed the fact the company is not in need of funds and does not care about the financial end of the honorary memberships, but is interested in enlisting the friendship and moral backing of the business men.

Stores Spend Their Money In State

The J. C. Penney Company which operates 44 department stores in Michigan and which recently opened its new building in Battle Creek, spent in taxes, rents, salaries, etc., it is stated, more than two and a half million dollars last year in the state of Michigan. Below is a tabulation of these expenditures:

Rent, taxes, light, heat and water	$ 242,140.87
Advertising, contributions, dues	115,255.12
Salaries paid employees	804,788.51
Merchandise purchased from firms within Michigan	1,327,824.97

Total expenditures within Michigan—$2,512,753.38

In spending two and one-half million dollars which is kept in Michigan, the company point out, this institution is giving employment to thousands of men and women annually, building up real estate values and adding to the industrial prosperity of the state. Over $250,000 will be spent this year in the state in connection with alterations, construction work and repairs on store buildings.

The company has recently invested a considerable sum of money in Battle Creek real estate, having purchased the property on which the new store was constructed. All construction work was done by Battle Creek labor.

THREE RULES

Dr. Caldwell watched the results of constipation for 47 years, and believed that no matter how careful people are of their health, diet and exercise, constipation will occur from time to time. Of next importance, then, is how to treat it when it comes. Dr. Caldwell always was in favor of getting as close to nature as possible, hence his remedy for constipation is a mild vegetable compound. It can not harm the most delicate system and is not habit forming.

The doctor never did approve of drastic physics and purges. He did not believe they were good for human beings to put into their system. Use Syrup Pepsin for yourself and members of the family in constipation, biliousness, sour and crampy stomach, bad breath, no appetite, headaches, and to break up fevers and colds. Get a bottle today, at any drugstore and observe these three rules of health. Keep the head cool, the feet warm, the bowels open. For a free trial bottle, just write "Syrup Pepsin," Dept. BB, Monticello, Illinois.

LEGION LOSES CLAIM TO GUN

After fighting in France in 1917-18 for possession of enemy guns, Jackson veterans of the World War witnessed a second "armistice" in their battle for the possession of an Austrian field piece, presented to the city some time ago for exhibition purposes. And it appears that the Veterans of Foreign Wars have won, with the local post of the American Legion still holding its lines of attack, ready for another onslaught on the enemy front.

At a meeting with City Manager Walter Hodges, as chief arbitrator, it was decided to place the gun in Washington park, near the present soldiers' and sailors' monument.

Recently the city commission ordered it removed from the park to the Jackson Memorial home, headquarters of the legion. The Veterans of Foreign Wars, who claim to be responsible for getting the gun here, objected, hence the rumpus.

Well Blows 2 Tons Of Tools From Hole

Production from the Muskegon oil field was doubled by the Thompson brothers No. 1 well in Laketon township, which hurled two tons of tools and cable from the hole when it came in and blew a stream of oil 150 feet above the derrick. The well is gushing 3,000 barrels of oil daily, it is estimated, and flowing 15,000,000 cubic feet of gas.

Testing 'Em Out

The boss called in his secretary. "Put up a sign outside the office," he said, "that no salesmen are allowed to enter."

"But you just advertised for a salesman."

"That's just the reason. If a man can be stopped by a little sign like that, we don't want him."

WILL COMPLETE ALASKA SURVEY

The hope of locating accurately timber land and sources of water power, as well as gathering data for maps, has prompted the navy to complete an aerial survey of Alaska begun in 1926.

Three Loening amphibian planes from the battle fleet, usually stationed in the Pacific, will be sent to Alaska late in May, the Navy department has announced. They will be accompanied by the U. S. S. "Gannet" as tender and a barge.

Lt. Commander A. H. Radford, U. S. N., has been recommended as officer-in-charge of the expedition. B. H. Sargent of the interior department will probably accompany him, it was announced.

Nearly 15,000 acres are included in the tract to be surveyed. Aerial photographs will be taken from an altitude of 10,000 feet with a T-24 lens camera. The area to be mapped is the Chicago and Baranof islands and the Alaskan-Canadian frontier in southeastern Alaska.

"In addition to the valuable data for maps," the Navy department said, "oblique photographs showing timber areas and water falls to be obtained are of considerable importance to the Bureau of Fisheries and Forestry Bureau."

Interior and Agriculture Departments are to pay $15,000 toward the expense of the expedition.

The survey of Alaska was begun in 1926 when a naval party made aerial photographs of the areas around Ketchikan, Wrangell, Petersburg and Juneau.

Following this earlier work the Interior department told the Navy it would have required ten seasons' work by ground methods to accomplish what the aviator's had done in three months.

In addition to the officer in charge of the expedition a graduate photographic officer and four trained enlisted photographers will probably be detailed to the survey.

The Navy's active interest in conservation, it was pointed out, dates from 1892, when Admiral Evans evicted the seal poachers then prevalent in Alaskan waters.

Convict Road Crew To Be Increased 250

Indication that 750 prison inmates will be used in highway construction this year, an increase of 250 over the number employed last year, according to Warden Harry Jackson of Michigan state prison. Time for starting road work has not yet been determined. Utilization of the Onondaga clay pit barracks will probably result if prisoners are used on state highway M-50 northwest of Jackson, and highway M-60, west of Jackson, the warden said. In that event, he believed, the camp at Cambridge Junction would be abandoned.

Plan $250,000 Clubhouse

Announcement was made recently in Detroit by Fred Wardell, president of the Eureka Vacuum Cleaner company, of plans for the construction of a $250,000 building for the Boys' club of Detroit. The building will be erected on Michigan avenue and will be the first of several units to be built in various parts of the city for the purpose of offering vocational training and club opportunities to youth who lack these advantages. The Boys' Club of Detroit, headed by Fred Wardell, is backed by business men of the city interested in this welfare work.

Port Huron Store Joins Continental Grouping

Continental Department Stores, Inc., the newly organized mid-western store group which now controls department stores in Flint and Lansing, has acquired the J. B. Sperry Company of Port Huron, according to a recent announcement of J. S. Sperry, president of the latter company. Neither the management nor the personnel of the Port Huron store will be changed, it was announced.

Authorized capitalization of the Continental Department Stores, Inc., consists of $5,000,000 in debentures, 200,000 shares of non-par convertible stock sold at $50 a share, and 300,000 shares of non-par common stock sold at $26 a share. Part of these securities remain unissued. The company is expected soon to announce an issue to finance the acquisition of the Sperry store.

The Sperry store was founded in Port Huron about 36 years ago, originally as a hardware store, by J. B. Sperry. After 15 years of operation as a hardware unit, it was changed over to a department store and has grown to be the largest institution of its kind in the city. Last year the gross business of the Sperry store amounted to approximately $1,000,000. Mr. Sperry remains president of the Port Huron store and becomes a director of the Continental chain. Clarence Sperry continues as secretary of the Port Huron unit.

Cadillac to Electrify Its Pumping Station; Change Set For June

Cadillac will have a better city water supply with increased pressure for household use and fire protection, as the result of a decision of the city commission to allow the Consumers Power Company to replace the present steam pumping equipment with electrical units.

The commission met with the special water committee appointed last summer to investigate the water supply and plans of the company for improving the pumping station and intake.

The maximum cost of improvements, chargeable to the water system, shall not exceed $45,000, the commission's resolution specified, and allow a return of 8 per cent on the actual cost of improvements.

Tentative date for the change-over is set for the middle of June.

Jackson Firm Buys Factory In Detroit

All assets of the latter concern have been acquired and Charles W. Walters, formerly president of the Detroit firm, will manage the Detroit plant.

MAKE 1,200,000 DAILY OF NEW SMALL CURRENCY

"The government is now making 1,200,000 of the new and smaller bills that will replace the present currency July 1," said Robert R. Taylor of the Old National Bank & Trust Company.

Mr. Taylor had at this hand a good many interesting points of information concerning the new currency and the magnitude of the effort now being made by the government to replace all of the present large bills by July 1.

"The government Bureau of Engraving and Printing is now devoting 99 per cent of its activity to the making of the new currency," he said, "and even yet the peak is not reached; but will be in the course of the next two weeks."

"The only large size paper money that is now being made is to fill some orders for immediate use by the federal reserve banks. But when these orders are filled no more large bills will be made."

"After that the entire personnel, including 400,000 employees of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing will be at work on the new small bills."

"To date 16,000,000 of the new bills have been completed and are piled up at the bureau."

"By July 1 they expect to have 650,000,000 of these new bills completed."

"So far they have been turning out only bills of the smaller or 'popular' denominations, as they are called—$1, $2, $5, $10 and $20."

"But the processes are now under way for the making of the new bills in the larger denominations, up to $10,000, and they will be making them soon."

"The bureau has just installed eight newly developed numbering and sealing presses and have seven more under contract."

State to Place Signs At Scenic Beauty Spots

Lakes, streams and other scenic beauties of the state bordering on trunk line highways will be marked by signs, Grover C. Dillman, state highway commissioner, announced. The highway department will erect signs at 2,712 places.

When Food Sours

Lots of folks who think they have "indigestion" have only an acid condition which could be corrected in five or ten minutes. An effective anti-acid like Phillips Milk of Magnesia soon restores digestion to normal.

Phillips does away with all that sourness and gas right after meals. It prevents the distress so apt to occur two hours after eating. What a pleasant preparation to take! And how good it is for the system! Unlike a burning dose of soda which is but temporary relief at best—Phillips Milk of Magnesia neutralizes many times its volume in acid.

Next time a hearty meal, or too rich a diet has brought on the least discomfort, try—

DOROTHY FOX FOUND

Dorothy Fox, daughter of Mrs. George Malloch of Detroit and a grand daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Kennedy of this place who has been missing from her home since January 21, was found last Thursday at Gananaque, a town 65 miles east of Montreal, near the Thousand Islands.

A reward was offered for information leading to her whereabouts and a truck driver who drives on a truck line leading from Windsor to Montreal stated that he had picked up a girl corresponding to her and allowed her to ride to Montreal on his truck. Last week Mr. and Mrs. George Malloch, Gerald Kennedy of this place and a detective from Detroit went to Montreal by auto but were unable to find her there. They were informed that a girl answering her description was at Belleville. Search here was without success. However they were told that she might be found at Gananaque and they proceeded there and found her living with a family by the name of McGuire. She willingly returned to Detroit with them, being glad to get home again.

WITH us there is beauty in the service, there is understanding and dignity in the arrangement and real fairness in the financial obligation.

Bird "Alarm Clocks."

Living alarm clocks are quite the thing in Liberia. The little pepper bird takes it upon himself to wake up the Liberians every morning. Possibly the bird is aware that the natives cannot have the regular sort of alarm clocks because the climate takes all the alarm out of them—and life, too.

The pepper bird simply cannot stay still when the sun comes up. He flutters to the housetops, fences and neighboring trees uttering his shrill, excited calls, which have come to mean "Get up." The natives, and the whites as well, can count on him, for he has been found to be dependable. He has been timed and checked, and it was found that his waking cries did not vary more than three minutes from day to day. During the hot part of the day the bird disappears in the woods.—Pathfinder Magazine.
