ATTENTION BROTHERS!

Livingston Lodge No. 76 F. & M. Pinckney will be host to the City of the Straits Lodge, Detroit on Saturday evening, May 25. The banquet will be served at 6:30 p.m. Following this the Detroit Lodge will confer a third degree. About 75 of the visiting brothers are expected. Don't miss the event.

Kerneth Reardon, Sec'y.

BANDIT SUSPECTS CAUGHT

Last Saturday three bandit suspects were captured after a chase which extended from Brighton to Farmington. The chase began when the girls employed in the Brighton telephone office notified the Brighton marshal that three suspicious-looking men were hanging about the bank building. As the marshal approached the men took alarm and fled in their car. Brighton motorists gave chase, and they were captured at Farmington by Oakland county deputies. It is said that two of the boys were found under a trap door in the floor of the suspect's car and safe blowing tools. The men were turned over to Detroit police on the belief that they might be identified as bank bandits. They gave their names as Joseph Murray, 27 yrs. old, 4336 Lincoln; Fred Campbell, 26 yrs. old, 4324 Third; and William Salm, Farmington.

INSTALLS NEW FOUNTAIN

For months Pinckney coffee fans have installed a new soda fountain. It is of marble and of the latest design, having a capacity of 20 gallons of ice cream. This is the largest fountain ever operated in Pinckney.

BIRTHDAY ANNIVERSARY

When Fred Reed arrived home last Thursday evening he found the house filled with guests who wished him that it was his twentieth birthday. The evening was agreeably spent playing bridge and refreshments were served.

DANCING AT PATTERSON LAKE

As well as a dance at Met Chalkers Dance Hall, Patterson Lake, every Saturday night. Good music and good time guaranteed. Dances for both old and young. Refreshments. Bill $1.00.

BIG GAME THURSDAY

The big ball game of the season is scheduled for Thursday, May 23, when the Pinckney Bloomer Girls meet the Little Giants at the local stadium. Both teams have been practicing hard and a good game should result. Details of the probable start pitching for the home team will be given in the next issue of the Dispatch. One of the umpires will be Fred Reed, in the box. If the game is postponed, both sides will be notified in the Dispatch. Don't miss this event of the season.

JUNIOR GIRL MEETS

Will Moore was one of the Junior Girls Dancers at the 8th annual dance. Each girl was presented with a gift, which was a wash and a comb. When all the dolls are received, the girls will be given a party. A special invitation will be given to the best dancing doll.

These dolls and their gifts are to be sent to the children at the Ann Arbor Hospital.

Games were played. The meeting was adjourned after a luncheon of wafers and ice cream.

JUNE 22 AT WINAN'S LAKE

The annual picnic of the Pinckney high school will be held at Winan's Lake, Coopers, on the 22nd year on Saturday evening, June 22.

LAWN MOWERS REPAIRED

I have an experienced mechanic who is an expert at repairing, painting and putting lawn mowers in first class working order. Bring yours in and let me put it in first class working order.

PLAYS AT DIXBORO MAY 26

The Pinckney-Michigan baseball team will play their first game away from home next Sunday, May 26. When they take on the Dixboro team. This team plays all their home games at Dixboro as grounds are scarce at Ann Arbor which means the teams. A number of Pinckney fans are planning on accompanying the team. In order to get there you should drive to Ann Arbor and take the overhead bridge into lower town then take the paved road to Dixboro. Dixboro is about 5 miles from Ann Arbor. On arriving there turn to the right and there you are.

BIRD CONTEST

The result of the balloting for a state bird conducted by the Michigan Audubon Society, gave the robin first place with 45,541 and elected a sponsor by local enthusiasts secured with 37,155 votes.

The complete vote follows: Robin, 45,541; chickadee, 37,155; blue-bird, 17,124; goldfinch, 15,866; cardinal, 12,288; quail, 8,721; Baltimore Oriole, 6,255; house wren, 5,000; meadow lark, 4,678; noddy blue-bird, 4,277; song sparrow, 3,671; downy woodpecker, 2,643; vesper sparrow, 2,360; whippoorwill, 1,800; bobolink, 1,920; kingbird, 1,800; red wing, 1,320; yellow throat, 1,030; rose breasted grosbeak, 1,000; purple martin, 900; and 69 other birds. ### MOTHER & DAUGHTER BANQUET

The church parson was filled to capacity Friday evening, May 17th, when the annual Mother and Daughter Banquet sponsored by the Kings Daughters took place. A beautiful bouquet of sweet peas was presented to Mrs. Bert VanHaren, for having the largest number of daughters present. There were eight.

Mrs. Leif Sigler also received a souvenir for being the oldest mother present.

After the dinner was served, the guests gathered in the main auditorium of the church for the entertainment program. Mrs. Mabel Seeger, pianist, introduced an Pinckney high school girl choir singing "My Mother". Mrs. Clifford VanHorn and Miss Laura Burnett sang a very pleasing vocal duet. Mrs. N. L. Gooding sang a beautiful solo and the other sisters favored with a violin and piano duet. Mrs. Helen Fuller gave a well written and splendidly delivered toast "My Mother" which was much enjoyed.

Mrs. Mrs. M. S. Maffey of Ann Arbor, a member of the Mich. Child Study Assoc. spoke on "Child Psychology" and gave an interesting experience in the examination of children brought before her at the Psychopathic hospital.

The evening celebration was brought to a close by singing "Good Night, Mothers, Good Night, Daughters."

DROWNS AT ISLAND LAKE

The body of a well dressed young man in his early thirties was washed ashore at Island Lake near Brighton on Friday morning. It is thought the corpse had been in the lake for three weeks. In one of the pockets of the suit he was wearing was found a large paper for John J. M. who had been an aviator in the U. S. Army and had recently returned from St. Louis, Mo. No name was found on the ankles of the man. About two weeks ago a man's suit of clothing was found in the lake. Among the articles in the suit was a pocket watch which was found to be the property of John O'Neil, a well known pilot. The watch was found in the pocket of the suit. The body was found in the lake. The body was found in the lake. The body was found in the lake.

Who makes the best tires today?

ALL facts now unmistakably point to one make of tire as outstandingly the best. We refer to Goodyear.

Claims long ago ceased to sell tires. Car owners have had too much experience to be led by "claims". Most tires are bought today on the basis of their proved performance.

This explains why MILLIONS MORE people ride on Goodyear Tires. Producing millions more tires than any other company, Goodyear is able to give you a much better quality and yet charge no more. When urged to accept another tire as "equal to" or "better than" a Goodyear, PLEASE REMEMBER THE FACTS. Don't be "talked out of" the World's Greatest Tires.

DRY CLEANING AND LAUNDRY GOES MONDAY, WEDNESDAY AND FRIDAY

W. W. BARNARD

Through error, the weather forecast for the coming week was printed in last week's edition of this paper. The report is being given again to bring it closer to date.

WEEK OF MAY 26

Warm weather for the season is expected during the greater share of the week of May 26 in Michigan. Probably the coolest part of the week will fall on or close to Tuesday and Wednesday.

Local storms with some rather heavy rains, thunder showers and high winds will be in progress shortly after the opening days of the week.

Close to the middle days of the week the sky will clear off and there will be a day or two of fair and warm weather.

As the week grows shorter the temperature will grow warmer and at times may verge on the hot side, even this early in the year. In fact, temperatures as high as 98 have been recorded in Michigan this month during past years.

Rainfall during the last days of this month and the first of next will not be very plentiful in Michigan, although there may be some heavy local showers. Severe electrical storms and strong winds will be the main characteristics of the weather at this time.

June Will Be Wet

The average June temperature this year in Michigan will range a little above the seasonal normal, which should give most crops a better chance to pick up. Rainfall will be more than the normal for the state as a whole, benefiting crops on sandy soils but not aiding clay soils particularly unless well drained or on high land.

The coming June will compare quite favorably with the weather the state had in 1920, 1906, 1898 and 1892. During these years the rye crop was little better than average, as also was the tame hay. Barley was quite good and corn averaged little better than normal except in 1892 when there was too much rain.

The Chestnut Bean This wonderful Bean looks like a gigantic pea. When boiled it has a flavor like boiled chestnuts, and is one of the most delicious beans grown. Grows in the form of a tall bush, and is completely covered with pods. For soup and turkey stuffing it can not be surpassed. It is a Spanish Bean, and is known as the "Garbanzo" Bean. After once you grow a few you will want to plant a lot of them. We have but a limited amount of the seed to offer this season, so are selling same in packets only. Packet, 10c; 5 pkts., 50c; 15 pkts., $1.00, postpaid.

It May Be Urgent When your Children Cry for It Castoria is a comfort when Baby is fretful. No sooner taken than the little one is at ease. If restless, a few drops soon bring contentment. No harm done, for Castoria is a baby remedy, meant for babies. Perfectly safe to give the youngest infant. You have the doctors' word for that! It is a vegetable product and you could use it every day. But it's in an emergency that Castoria means most. Some night when constipation must be relieved—or colic pains—or other suffering. Never be without it, and some mothers keep an extra bottle, unopened, to make sure there will always be Castoria in the house. It is effective for older children, too; read the book that comes with it.

CHAPTER XLIII

"Oh, a cocktail, Jack, by all means!" was the answer she made to his question, her eyes looking again into his. Suddenly a quick red stained her brow and neck, as if she had inadvertently given him a flash of her naked soul. He turned hurriedly and began to build the cocktails. She watched him for a moment in silence. Then she moved toward the door. "Bring 'em in the other room, Jack," she said, softly. "We'll make a little ceremony of drinking to the health, the wealth and the happiness of each other!"

Two minutes later, and just as he was placing the drinks on the tiny silver tray he had found, the tinkling melody of a harp struck on his ear from the adjoining room. Then came the sobbing notes of violins and a cello and the deep diapason of a bass-viol, all blending with the voices of singers.

He carried in the tray and placed it on the table in the room's center. Nita sat in a heavy leather chair nearby. The music seemed to come from the very center of the room, but Jack could see no phonograph. The air was that of the beautiful, "In the Valley of the Moon." He looked at the woman in the chair. She was smiling—as a woman smiles who has just acquired the key to a mystifying cross-word puzzle.

"Where is it?" he asked, his curiosity intrigued by the ingenuity of the thing. She glanced at the table on which sat the tray of cocktails. "What's the idea?" she countered, smiling still, her gaze fastened on the glasses. "Are they just for decoration, or do you expect me to do the serving?"

He stared at her, puzzled at her answer to his tentative query. She smiled again at him. Then, as her glance turned again to the tray, he caught the drift, as he thought, of her meaning. They were to drink first, before she told him how she had discovered the secret of the music.

He smiled with a whimsical tolerance and, picking up a glass by its slender stem, he presented it to her. Then he took up his own glass.

"Give me a toast, Jack," she said, softly, holding her glass poised. "Something impromptu and fitting—something of your own!"

He smiled down into the upturned eyes. The harp thrummed, the cello moaned, as the voices sang the refrain, "In the Valley of the Moon." Then he began the toast:

"You may drink to the harp and the cello—
To the music that drives away care—
While I drink to the health, to the glory and wealth
Of Juanita, her eyes and her hair!"

"Waw-neeta!" enunciated Jack, placing his empty glass on the table. "You asked for something impromptu—something fitting the moment. It's awful bunk, of course, and terribly punky, but it's the best I could do on short notice. Anyhow, it mentions the fiddles and the music!"

"The music?" repeated Nita, looking puzzled. "What music?"

As she put the question the singers in the song began again the last line of the refrain, "In the Valley of the Moon."

Jack stared at her. "W-what music? Say, what th—?" she stammered, explosively. Then the sobbing violins, the moaning cellos, and the deep-toned viol took up once more the plaintive, throbbing melody.

Jack laughed, glanced at the woman, and then back at the woman, sitting in the big leather chair, the glass from which she had just drunk held suspended, bottom upward, between her fingers.

"What's th' matter with you, Nita?" he asked, good naturedly. "Trying to make me think I'm fearing things nobody else fears?"

She rose deliberately and placed her glass on the tray. Simultaneous with her movement the music stopped. She looked at him, and her smile seemed like a thing come to stay.

"What are you hearing now, Jack?" she asked softly. Then their glances met again, and held for an instant. Suddenly both burst into laughter.

"Clever, isn't it?" she queried, her black eyes glancing at him. "But—what a scare the thing gave me when I dropped down in that chair, and harps, fiddles and things began to play right under me! Then, as it stopped, I knew, of course, where the music came from, and sat down again. Then I thought I'd have some fun with you, but—"

Even as she was reciting this carefully plotted incident, Nita Aavelle's sub-consciousness was reviewing her purchase in Pittsburgh, several days before, of this musical chair, bought expressly for this planned occasion. The psychology of the thing—the opening it gave her to work up a possible "scene" with Jack—had appealed to Nita's scheming brain.

He stepped across and seated himself in the chair. Instantly the music started. But another record had taken the place of "The Valley of the Moon." The air now being reproduced was that of the once-popular "If Hearts Were Tonight I Lose."

Jack remained seated until the first verse and refrain had been completed. Then he rose. The music ceased.

"Isn't it the funny little coincidence, Jack?" She warbled the last line of the song. "Do you know?" she went on, placing a hand on his shoulder with familiar camaraderie, as she stood by his side, "if it were not for the hideous reality of this—th' frightful hurt it may do my reputation if it ever leaks out—I'd be inclined to enjoy it. Wouldn't you, Jack?"

What could the poor man say—or do? She had been caught in a trap along with him—or so he thought. While in no wise to blame, yet—as he believed—he was the direct cause of the misadventure which was costing her a thousand dollars cash and—if the affair ever came to light—she might be the subject of false comment.

"It's all my fault, Nita—that is, indirectly," said Jack, after a moment or two. "So I cannot, of course, permit you to lose th' thousand dollars. I'll get a check cashed in a day or so and hand it to you in currency. That way nobody but you and I will be wise."

She made no answer for a period of ten seconds, and then she played a trump card.

"Jack," she said, softly, nestling very close to him, as he stood leaning against, and half sitting on the table's edge, "I should have known that's just what you would offer—to reimburse me financially. But I can't let you do that; it wasn't your fault, dear man, half as much as it was mine. If I hadn't coaxed to ride home with you and—and anyhow—"

"But here's one—" He paused momentarily to gape—or yawn—"that ain't a-goin' to go to sleep stardin' up. I'm gonna flop on that sofa there. Old Mother Grundy might think she has something on us, but you and I, Nita, know better; we know she hasn't a darned thing! Still, we'd have one time explaining things. Therefore, we'll do no explaining; we'll just keep mum regarding the essential facts of this adventure. We know—you and I—that we've played th' game, done our part according to all th' rules and regulations."

"But, Nita, girl, you're tired out. You gotta get some rest, some sleep. And so have I. There's no reason and no sense in wearing ourselves out. You take off those crazy, high-heeled shoes that 'you keep steppin' on your skirt with—"

"But, Jack!" expostulated the almost exhausted and thoroughly disgusted Nita, "that fellow told us last night—"

A resounding knock on the door at

"Jack," she said softly, nestling very close to him.

She drew back slightly, so as to look directly into his eyes, knowing intuitively wherein her greater power lay: Then "You've already repaid me, Jack—a hundred times over," she whispered, her red lips close under his right ear.

Nita discovered one more secret of the musical chair. She learned how to make it grind out tunes without being occupied. Simple, when the secret was revealed. So they rolled back the rug and danced. And Jack certainly could dance.

CHAPTER XLIV

"I can't understand where your wife gets the notion, Jack, that Professor Le Tart or Tony is a better dancer than you," said the clever Nita, after the phonograph had run down the second time on a combination waltz-fop trot-hesitation, an invention of Jill's that she had taught Jack, and which he had just been teaching Nita.

"Oh, I'm not in the same class with Le Tart," answered Jack, with all the becoming modesty of the real artist. "He's a regular professional!"

"He's a regular simp!" was the snappy retort. "If you'll let me tell it!"

Nita Ravelle, be it observed, was something of a character student. She was playing a deep game. Not for money, but for something of more importance, even, than money—the love of another woman's husband!

She had made a careful study of Jack Stuart during the brief term of their acquaintance, extending over some three months, and she knew the majority of his likes and dislikes. She knew, too, that if Jack had any enlargement of the ego, it was in relation to his sense of humor. He liked to believe, and to have others believe, that his humor complex was of an exalted type. Nita Ravelle, shrewd as the unscrupulous love-thief is bound to be, had seen beneath the surface of Jack's pretenses, and read there the underlying secret of his honest intent. If what she saw smacked some of boyish idealism, it was in the main clean and decent.

But Nita Ravelle was destined to learn that she still had something to learn about men—particularly Jack Stuart. Of course, Nita was unaware of the reconciliation that had taken place between Jack and Jill, and that Jack, as a result, had made himself the confidante of a very solemn promise. Perhaps had Nita known—

"Listen, thither," lisped Jack, affecting an imitation of a certain little blonde flapper they had just been discussing, as he dropped wearily into a chair. "Lithen till I thpill you an' careful!"

"I am all earth!" exaggeratedly declared his companion. "Go ahead an' thyoot!"

"Well, it's just about like this, Nita," he proceeded, seriously, and without the lip, his gaze fastening on the clock reposing on the dresser. "We've danced our way through—"

Again his sleepy optics turned toward the clock. He scowled, blinked, and finally deciphered the figures—

"through nearly 12 long hours. It was half past eight when we got here, and it's half past eight now. But it was night when we came, and it's daylight now. I'm so tired and sleepy, and you're so tired and sleepy, that we could go to roost, like th' chickens, standing up."

that precise moment interrupted her. She looked at Jack, startled.

"That's th' 'colored gemmun' with our breakfast, I suppose," he said, grinning at her. "Th' one that 'Ennery spoke about last night.' The knock was repeated, even louder.

"Come on in!" called out Jack, in a loud voice, and added, sotto voice: "You gotta key, you bonehead! We haven't!"

As if to verify his words the jangling of keys was heard outside the door, followed by the rattle of one being inserted in the lock. An instant later the door swung open and the tallest, blackest man in the world entered, bearing a huge tray, on which reposed two steaming-hot breakfasts.

The tray bearer placed his burden on the table, straightened and turned around facing Jack and Nita. He was not an inch under six feet, six, Jack estimated in a cursory glance.

But it was the intense, coal blackness of the fellow's skin that drew instant attention. This was accentuated by the mop of snow-white wool surmounting the huge cranium, and the rows of perfect white teeth over which thick, rubbery lips of bluish yellow tint rolled back in a perpetual grin. Taken all in all, thought Jack, he was decidedly a formidable person to tackle. This giant, Jack knew, could break him in two with one hand.

"Yassuh, Mist' Boss an' Lady," the big fellow announced, with a magnificent wave of a hand the size of an ordinary ham. "Boss 'Enry done said las' night to fech two breakfasts at eighty-thuty sha'p. Ah'se a couple minnits late, Boss, 'count o' dat lazy, good 'n' nuttin' Cah'line Brown. She sut'n' an' de no-good-f-r-dest women. Ah'se wah sawn in mah boh'n days. Ah'se don'tole dat women fawty-lebben times dis maw'n'n Ah'se gotta hav' dem two breakfasts at eighty-thuty sha'p."

"Now, don'ts you'uns woly' yoah-self, George Washington Brown," dat wome'n perzasticates.

"Ah'zens don' knows mah biz'ness, Ah'zens does, an' ain't no brack nig-gah mans—"

"Well, that'll be all for this mornin', George Washington," cut in Nita Ravelle's quick, insistent voice on the huge negro's endless explanation. "We've been up all night and we're hungry! I suppose you've got orders from your boss to lock th' door when you go out. All right, George Washington, you may go now!"

"Yassum, Ah'se don' heah's yuh, Ma'am Lady," answered the giant black, talking fast as he backed toward the door, his six feet six bent forward in humble obeisance. He evidently realized this chance to exercise his vocabulary was limited in this case. He would have to hurry.

"Yassum, yuh'uns shuah don' said de trufe, Ma'am, 'bout mah boss sayin' to lock de doah," continued George Washington Brown, his words seeming to tumble over each other in his rush to get them out. "He don't said, say he: 'George,' he says, 'yuh'uns betta be shuah to shet an' lock dat doah, els'n—"

"Oh—for heaven's sake!" broke in the impatient Nita again, her ordinarily low-spoken voice going into a high octave screech. "go tell it to your old woman—if you have one! Scat! Get out! Beat it—get away and let us eat our breakfast before it gets cold!"

With the last words the exasperated Nita, following close on the big black's backward movement, gave the conversational George Washington a final push, as he reached the exit and then literally slammed the door in his face!

Jack Stuart laughed, both amused and surprised, at Nita's exhibition of temper. He was surprised at her nerve in charging the huge negro, and amused at the expression on the black's face—a look of frightened awe.

Had he been in possession of the actual truth he would have seen that Nita, knowing all about George's love to hear himself talk, was in an agony of nervousness lest George Washington reveal to Jack the enlightening fact that Nita and he had met before. This was the real cause of her exasperation, her display of temper.

"I'd bet anything," she said hurriedly, as she joined Jack at the breakfast table where he stood looking down in some wonder at the marvelous breakfasts the tray contained, "that George Washington Brown, as he informed us he was called, is an old slave darkey of the south. I've met his type before, and they'll talk your head off if you let 'em. All you can do is just shut 'em up and push 'em out as I did. Give 'em an inch and they'll take ten miles!"

With the disposal of breakfast, Jack again suggested they get a few hours of sleep. The room was steam heated and comfortable, and the sofa was luxurious. He would need no blankets.

"Ennery said Pete would be here to unlock th' door shortly after noon," he reminded his companion. "Four hours sleep will make us th' more fit to cope with th' situation, whatever it is. Don't you think so?"

"Uh, huh," replied the lady, whose plans somehow seemed to have "gang awry." "I dare say you're right."

Truck and Tractor

A study of the work done by tractors, belt work accounted for 22.8 per cent of the total.

The tractor has displaced the largest number of horses on fruit and crop farms with a large amount of field work. The effect is less apparent on dairy farms where the acreage of land in tilled crops is small. Horses have not been displaced to any great extent in the lighter and more rapid operations of cultivating and haying, harrowing and discing. On fruit and crop farms studied, tractors have replaced from 2.8 to 4.7 horses on the average, but only 1.3 horses were displaced on the average dairy farm studied.

COOLIES TRANSPORT DISMANTLED "CHEVY"

It became necessary a few weeks ago, for the first time in the history of Chevrolet Motor Company, to dismantle a car after sale in order to deliver it to its purchaser. The interesting incident occurred in Acheen, northern Sumatra, an outpost typical of numerous forsaken corners which Chevrolet has been pioneering for years.

One of the last provinces of the Dutch East Indies to submit to Dutch rule, Acheen has never been totally free from recurring outbreaks of trouble. As a result, progress has lagged. Because it is rich in oil and endowed with fertile soil, steps have been taken by the government to penetrate it with roads.

Not long ago the Chevrolet dealer at Langsa received an order from the Department of Public Works for a Chevrolet truck to be delivered to a point where the authorities were busy with a road which is to run from Sigli on the north coast of Sumatra to Meulaboh on the west coast, a distance of about 220 miles. From Meulaboh a road already existed up to a point about 50 miles inland. It was from here that the road was to be cut through the jungle to link up with a similarly short road running inland from Sigli.

Ships do not call at Meulaboh so it was impossible to transport the Chevrolet truck by this means. There was only one solution—the truck had to be dismantled and carried overland by coolies to the scene of operation. The work of dismantling was carried out by the dealer and the weary task of transporting the parts was started.

Without a doubt it was the strangest caravan ever to move across this section of jungle land. A coolie, juggling a wheel, marched a little in advance. The cylinder block was in the custody of particularly rucky pair. And so on. The heavier parts were carried in shifts to divide the work equally.

The route led through almost impenetrable jungle, along narrow mountain paths and over ravines and rivers. On one occasion in the trek, a stream, spanned only by a cable line, blocked the route. Nothing daunted, the expedition chiefs dispatched the coolies with parts for which they were responsible across the stream "on the wire."

Nearly a month was required to complete the jaunt. The day the last of the parts arrived the truck was assembled by the dealer's mechanic. The next day it was doing Trojan duty in the pioneering enterprise.

JACKSON CENTENNIAL

The City of Jackson is preparing for the influx of thousands of visitors during Centennial Celebration which starts Friday evening, June 28th, with the formal opening of the Exposition of Progress. The celebration ends Saturday, July 6th.

A comprehensive program of events has been worked out offering a variety of entertainment for all who visit Jackson during the eight days of this celebration.

The Exposition of Progress will be one of the greatest exhibits of commercial, industrial and civic displays ever seen in this section of the country. In addition to the exposition there will be a parade, athletic events, band concerts, pageants, historical displays showing pioneer implements and vehicle of conveyance, and rare historical relics.

An emotional stirring pageant will present a picture of the history of Jackson from the days of the coming of the first white man to the present day, a thriving industrial and commercial city of 75,000 people. 1000 people will be in the cast of the pageant.

HOWELL WINS 15 TO 11

Howell high school base ball team came over here Tuesday to play a return game and won a farcial game by a score of 15 to 11. The Pinckney team which has been a regular bunch of hitless wonders suddenly came to life and pounded the Howell pitchers for a total of 10 hits in seven innings and might have won if their fielding and pitching had not both been bad. The Howell pitchers besides allowing 10 hits walked six men and hit one batter. Rancour of Howell hit a home run and Lefty Reason of Pinckney scored a three base hit. Pinckney scored 4 times in the seventh and final inning when Jones the Howell pitcher walked 4 men all of whom, scored on the Howell errors.

COUNTY CONVENTION HELD

Regardless of the downpour of rain Tuesday, there was a good attendance at the third annual convention of the Livingston county branch of the International Order of King's Daughters and Sons held in the Methodist church at Howell.

The honor guests were Mrs. Charles Horton, state president, and Mrs. C. M. Calkins, state corresponding secretary, both of Flint; Mrs. Wendell Moore, first state vice president and chairman of Junior King's Daughters; Mrs. Alfred Crittenden, member of the state executive board; Mrs. John McGregor, president of the hospital junior circle, and Mrs. Sarah M. Brace all of Ann Arbor.

With Mrs. E. Clyde Dunning, president of Livingston county branch, presiding, the meeting opened with an address of welcome by Rev. H. F. Schwartkopf of Howell, Methodist church. Convention guests were next introduced by Mrs. Dunning.

A vocal solo was given by Miss Velna Fay, Howell, and was followed by reports of circles by Mrs. Myron W. Hendrick, president, Lakeland circle; Mrs. Earl Baughn, president, Pinckney circle; Mrs. C. L. Warren, president, Brighton circle; Mrs. Arthur Bullis, president, Gregory circle, and Mrs. Nelson Imus, president, Howell circle.

Report of the county vice president Mrs. Telesphore Bourbonnais, Lakeland, preceded reports of the secretary, Mrs. Norman Reason, Pinckney, and the treasurer, Mrs. Fred Teeple, Howell.

Dinner was served by the Ladies' society of the Methodist church. The tables were decorated with the colors of the order, purple and white, and lighted with lavender tapers.

The afternoon session opened with the report of the auditing committee, followed by two vocal solos by Mrs. Frank Fobey, Howell. Next on the program was the junior hour. Isabelle Nash, president, of Happy Helpers' circle, Lakeland, reported for her circle, followed by an exercise by the eight members present, who were dressed in white with purple sashes. Helen Brady of Howell reported for the Little Woman circle, after which the members presented a short play. Mrs. Dunning gave a report of the president, followed by a vocal solo by Mrs. Martin Olson of Brighton. Mrs. Horton gave the address of the convention. Remarks were made by Mrs. Moore, Mrs. Crittenden, Mrs. McGregor, Mrs. Brace and Mrs. C. M. Calkins.

Report of election by Mrs. Bert Daller of Pinckney was as follows: President, Mrs. E. Clyde Dunning vice president, Mrs. Telesphore Bourbonnais; secretary-treasurer, Mrs. Norman Reason. Mrs. Charles Horton confirmed the election.

Vocal solo, Mrs. Earl Baughn, Pinckney. Minutes of the convention were read by the secretary, Mrs. Norman Reason. An invitation from Brighton circle to hold the 1930 convention at Brighton was accepted. The convention closed with prayer of the order, after which many of those in attendance at the convention visited McPherson hospital.

Mrs. Horton, Mrs. Moore and Mrs. Dunning were presented with bouquets of flowers by the junior circle of Howell.

The Probate Court for the County of Livingston

At a session of said Court held at the Probate Office in the City of Howell in said County, on the 13th day of May A. D. 1929.

Present, Hon. Willis L. Lyons, Judge of Probate.

In the Matter of the Estate of Sarah J. Chalker, Deceased.

It appearing to the court that the time for presentation of claims against said estate should be limited, and that a time and place be appointed to receive, examine and adjust all claims and demands against said deceased by and before said court:

It is Ordered, That creditors of said deceased are required to present their claims to said court at said Probate Office on or before the 16 day of September A. D. 1929, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, said time and place being hereby appointed for the examination and adjustment of all claims and demands against said deceased.

It is Further Ordered, That public notice thereof be given by publication of a copy of this order for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing, in the Pinckney Dispatch a newspaper printed and circulated in said county.

Willis L. Lyons, Judge of Probate.

SHEEP DIPPING DEMONSTRATION

On May 29th Co. Apr'l. Agent C. L. Bolander has arranged for two sheep parasite dipping demonstrations.

The demonstrations in the forenoon will be held on the O. W. Sober farm Conway township, starting at 10:00 o'clock. In the afternoon a similar demonstration will be held on the Hosley Bros. farm, Oceola township, at 2:00 o'clock. A standard sized dipping tank will be used at each demonstration. The dipping will be done for the control of both ticks and body lice.

No doubt one of the best investments a farmer can make is to spend a few hours each year and dip his sheep. With the type of tank being used, the work is made very easy. Arrangements will be made to dip other small flocks at these demonstrations also plans will be made to lease the tanks to those interested in having their flocks dipped. V. A. Freeman, specialist of the Animal Husbandry Dept., Michigan State College will be in charge of the meetings and will be glad to discuss other sheep problems at these meetings.

THE TIME TO TREAT SHEEP IS WHEN THEY NEED IT, DON'T WAIT UNTIL YOU HAVE HAD HEAVY LOSSES.

Bureau wool officials who point to the fact that many independent local buyers of wool still hold their purchases of 1928 wool with no profitable offers from the big buyers of the East. In Ohio, it is found, at least 2,000,000 pounds of the 1928 clip is being held by these local buyers, some of whom have three or four thousand pounds on hand.

Carefully graded wool is bringing a price now which is considerably higher than the general country quotations and it is through the pools that practically all graded wool is sold to the big buyers.

DEXTER WINS 3 — 2

Dexter high school came over here last Friday to play Pinckney and won by a score of 3 to 2. The game developed into a pitchers battle between Cushing of Dexter and Reason of Pinckney with the latter taking the decision on account of better control. Each allowed 4 hits. Cushing got 10 strikeouts and Reason 14. The latter gave six bases on balls which proved his undoing. Pinckney scored in the first when Graves walked and scored on an error. Dexter tied it up in the 4th when Smith doubled to right, stole third and scored on a wild pitch. Graves scored again in the 8th on two infield errors. In the 8th Reason walked three men in a row, one was out stealing second but the other two scored on Smith's hit to right. The Pinckney team fielded well but were helpless at bat.

USING FERTILIZERS
The weather conditions they have been, should tempt farmers to use more commercial fertilizers than usual on the corn. No doubt a great deal of the corn in the county this year will be planted late, because of weather conditions. In order to hasten maturity, a commercial fertilizer, strong in phosphorus should be used. In soils where no barnyard fertilizer have been used for the past season it will be necessary to use a complete fertilizer to get the maximum results.

For detailed information on the use of fertilizers on corn and beans farmers should get a copy of Bulletin No. 53, (fifty-three) at the County Agent's office or send for one to the College. A few dollars spent in this way will mean many when the rolls around.

The Humble Thimble
Thimbles are said to have been found in the ruins of the Latin city of Herculaneum, buried by the eruption of Vesuvius that destroyed Pompeii. A. D. Thimbles were made in Amsterdam, Holland, in the Seventeenth century by Nicolas van Ben schoten. The art of making them was carried to England by John Lotting a mechanic from Holland, about the year 1605. His first manufactory was at Islington.

Naturally, an old, worn-out iron fails to do the satisfactory work of its prime. It cannot function as efficiently as when it was new. If your iron is in this condition, it should be replaced. The modern electric iron has numerous points of superiority. It is safe, and economical; it is faster, and enables you to iron in less time. Automatic heat control eliminates the danger of overheating. The modern electric iron relieves hand ironing of much of its drudgery, and will give years of faithful service.

WEEK OF MAY 26

Warm weather for the season is expected during the greater share of the week of May 26 in Michigan.

Local storms with some rather heavy rains, thunder showers and high winds will be in progress shortly after the opening days of the week.

Close to the middle days of the week the sky will clear off and there will be a day or two of fair and warm weather.

As the week grows shorter the temperature will grow warmer and at times may verge on the hot side, even this early in the year.

Rainfall during the last days of this month and the first of next will not be very plentiful in Michigan, although there may be some heavy local showers.

The average June temperature this year in Michigan will range a little above the seasonal normal, which should give most crops a better chance to pick up.

The coming June will compare quite favorably with the weather the state had in 1920, 1906, 1898 and 1892.

JACK and JILL

By CLIFFORD WEBB

(Copyright, 1925, the Central Press Association, Inc.)

CHAPTER XLII

The man with the spotlight and the frapped voice indicated that his clock was ticking to standard adjustment, however, for he said:

"We're 'bout due to 'rive at th' place we're goin' to. Whut you two don't see you won't talk so much about. So I'll just tie these nice, clean kerchiefs over yer lamps to keep out the glare. Lean over this way, please, till I decorates yer!"

The fellow seemed to possess a certain crude sense of humor, and a sarcastic tongue, Jack observed, as he bent his head and submitted to the blindfolding process.

Nita Ravelle made so bold as to protest slightly at the "added indignity," and was told in plain words of

The car that had been traveling several minutes on a level road now began to slow down and suddenly stopped.

"You'll getta chance, maybe, to make the cats and dogs 'round this neck o' woods yowl gobs of grief, young feller, me lad," said the crook, with an evil chuckle, as he grasped Jack's elbow and jerked him to his feet. "So c-mon, you, here's where we take a stop-over! Pete!" raising his voice to address the driver—"escort th' loidy along. An' you, Mister Good-singer, lift up yer dogs, so't yuh don't stub yer toe!"

The grasp on his elbow was that of a powerful man, as Jack took instant notice when they stepped from the car. A wild thought had flashed

"Now you two, listen!" The big man's voice sounded like the bark of a sea lion, hoarse, with a short, spiteful quality in its timber that gave the lie to the seeming sense of humor in his talk. He was looking toward Jack—at least his body was turned in that direction. The mask on his face gave the uncanny impression of a live body with a mannequin's head.

"It's half-past eight," he went on, shooting a swift glance at the small clock on the magnificent dresser that graced one corner of the room. "Pete'n I are goin' 't'own. We can't get back t'night, so that means you'uns have gotta stay here. There's a colored gemman who'll bring your breakfast—and other meals, if you decide to stay any length of time. That'll be up to you'uns after t'morra mornin'."

"Now comes th' funny part. Pete'n I are pertickler. We don't like to be called 'stick-ups.' That's crude stuff. Besides, there's danger in peddlin' of th' swag now'days. It's too easy to identify. We prefers th' real jack—th' long green."

"So Pete'n I invented a new kind of a stick-up, a sorta double-action graft. It'll cost each of you two birds one grand—a t'ousan' apiece—to flap yer wings agen outside this apartmint."

"Now, here 'tis. You, Stuart, must gimme a note to yer missus sayin' fer her t'draw a grand outta de bank, give it to my messenger—an' keep her trap shut tight!"

He turned, facing toward Nita Ravelle, who still stood where she had stopped upon her entrance, her coat and hat still unrecovered. The lady was not forgetting any of the "business" in the little part she was acting. An observer would have assumed that she fully expected to depart from that room very soon—"if not sooner."

"An' you, loidy," continued 'Ennery, briskly, "you gotta gimme a check fer a t'ousan' smackers! Oh, I happens t' know ye've got yer check-book wit' yez. Jes' as soon as I've c'lected these two little o' grand—say by noon t'morra—Pete'll git th' word t' unlock yer dooh. If somp'n prevents me f'm c'lectin' Okay w'y, somp'n'll prevent Pete f'm unlockin' th' door!"

"And now," proceeded the ingenious 'Ennery, propitiatingly, "if you'll kinly fix me up wit' th' credentials, each of yuh, fer c'lectin' a grand apiece, then Pete'n I'll be on our way!"

Jack Stuart stared at the black masked bulk in front of him. Of all the nery hold-ups he had ever heard of, none was anything like this.

"Well, I'll be darned!" he announced, finally, in a tone that implied many things, not the least of which was a mild admiration. "I certainly will be everlastingly flabbergasted if—"

"Lay off 'at stuff, kind sirrah. Git yer fount'n pens t' workin', th' bot' of yuh. Pete'n I ain't got all th' toime in th' world we ain't. So git busy!"

Jack looked at Nita Ravelle. That young woman looked back at him. Then she shrugged her perfect shoulders—under her silver fox fur—and permitted herself the luxury of a tiny sniff. Her classical nose puckered ever so slightly, and just the faintest, most lady-like little snivel sounded. Then:

"It's perfectly outrageous!" she agreed tearfully. "But—" Very rapid flutterings of the eyelids at this point denote tears—suppressed. A slight facial contortion signifies a bad taste in the mouth. This from having to swallow the bitter pill of necessity.

He nodded, and emitted a dismal croak. Then he, too, affected a gesture with the palms of the hands turned outward. This indicated absolute, utter helplessness. Whereupon, as there seemed no other recourse, Jack sat himself down at the ornate writing table and wrote "the note" by dictation from 'Ennery. This is the "note": Mrs. Jack M. Stuart, No. 246 Dennison Apts. Elliston, W. Va.

Please cash check for one thousand dollars and turn over same to bearer. I am being held for ransom, and in lieu of cash my abductors threaten death in manner most unpleasant, or to put it plain, by decapitation. So, if you want me back with my head still on, and all my arms and legs intact, you'll lost no time in following out directions as given. You know my handwriting. Your loving husband, (Signed) JACK M. STUART.

Having perpetrated the above masterpiece of strange diction under disapproved direction and dictation by 'Ennery, the compiler laid down the pen. Chance had supplied him with, and spoke as follows:

"Suffering humanity and equal suffrage! What crime have I ever committed that such punishment as this must be meted out to me? My wife can show that note to any probate judge, and he wouldn't hesitate an instant in granting her a commitment to send me to th' bug-house for th' rest of my natural life! Wow! Wow!"

Nita Ravelle, in the meantime, having her fountain pen and her check book in her handbag, had drawn a check for a thousand dollars payable to bearer, and signed it. She laid the check on the desk where Jack sat in dismal reverie. He glanced carelessly at it and straightened up. 'Ennery picked up the check and note and placed them in his bill-book, where they remained until Nita Ravelle—

"Much obliged to 'ave met yuh, Mist' Stuart an' loidy," he said, biting off his words in the quick staccato fashion of a sea lion's bark. "An' now, as I told yuh before, if ev-rything goes Okay Pete'll unlock th' door t'morra 'bout noon'r little later—maybe! S'long!"

"Now, you two, listen."

one syllable to "shut her trap." After through his mind to wallop his cap-

ity unchord order she subsided meek-ly. They were unquestionably ver-

As he talked 'Ennery had been backing his big body toward the door opening into the hall. Pete stood with his hand on the door's knob. With the last word the two seemed literally to ooze out into the darkness, the dividing door closing noiselessly. A faint click told the two inside they were prisoners.

Jack Stuart turned slowly and looked at his companion in misfortune. She stared at him with questioning eyes. But the question her eyes and lips asked was altogether different from the question she had in mind.

"Whatever are we going to do about it, Jack?" she asked, a wailing note in her melodious tones. In her heart and mind a triumphant voice was chirping joyfully!

"Fools, fools, such silly fools! And he swallowed it all—hook, line, sinker! I wonder what the loving Jill'll say the first morning, when he doesn't show up? And then—"

"Well, this certainly is one fine mess—I don't think!" was the form his answer to her spoken query took. He was merely giving vent to the feeling of helplessness, the impotent rage that welled up in his heart at thought of the $1,000 his good intention was costing him.

Then he noted the slumped shoulders and general air of dejection disclosed in the slim form of Nita Ravelle, as she stood there, a fellow sufferer of his own worthy, but, nonetheless, misguided efforts.

"She's in th' same boat with me," he was acknowledging to himself. "Only," he continued, bolder to the thought, "her position is even worse than mine. Her reputation is at stake, also in addition to her loss of a thousand dollars. And it's all my fault. And yet, if she hadn't asked to ride home with me—"

He stepped over and laid his hand on her arm. Jack was of that temperament that invariably feels the need in moments of distress for some sort of personal touch. He was sorry for her, and sorry for himself, and it was this sentimental situation they faced that made matters the more difficult.

In his mind Jack was thinking:

"This is 'Ennery's apartment—or that of one of his friends in or near town. Otherwise it wouldn't be so well stocked with food and drinkables. He certainly couldn't have fixed things up for us, for he didn't know I was to be at th' Casino tonight. I didn't know it myself until after 3 o'clock today. We'll just sit tight and we'll get a line on Mister 'Ennery yet!"

Something akin to the following was stirring in Nita's thoughts.

"What a merry time there would be, snapping around this joint if this man Jack were to be put suddenly wise to everything! I wonder if he'd slap my face, or just tell me a thing or two? Can't tell. He's Scotch, he's got a bad temper; besides, he doesn't take so much stock in this chivalrous bunk. It's hard to guess what he'd do. And I wonder how he's going to behave tonight? Has he decided to forget that time in Pittsburgh? He never makes the slightest reference to it. Will he confess to Jill about this, I—"

She was standing directly under the cluster of rose-shaded lamps, suspended from the ceiling. The soft, mellow glow from the bulbs brought out the perfection of her marvelous complexion, and "the light that lies in a woman's eyes" was no lie just then in Nita's. Passion smoldered there, needing only a breath to fan it into flame.

Looking into those eyes suddenly as she glanced up, Jack Stuart caught a flash as it were, of that smoldering fire with which he was playing. Sub-consciously, almost, he took a grip on himself. Something like a vague premonition seemed to shoot through him, heart and mind, recalling another occasion. It was just a flash, gone instantly. But it left an impress—the memory of something happened. He must watch his step this night, he told himself, and made a resolution. The woman, her dark, magnetic eyes smiling into his, caught on the waves of her intuitive mind the import of that resolution!

"I must go to work," her inner voice whispered. "But—" She stole a covert look at him—"I gotta go slow. One wrong move just now would blow th' whole works!" What was it he had asked her?

Output of Beet Sugar Showed Decline in 1928

Beet sugar produced from the 1928 crop of beets was approximately 1,061,000 short tons, compared with 1,093,000 short tons in 1927, and 997,000 short tons in 1926, according to a statement April 13 of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, Department of Agriculture. The full text of the statement follows:

Production last year was approximately 86,000 short tons above the average production the five preceding years. The sugar produced from the 1928 beet crop was made from 6,880,000 tons of beets grown on 646,000 acres. Production in 1927 was from 7,443,000 tons of beets grown on 782,000 acres, and the preceding year 6,782,000 tons of beets from 687,000 acres were sliced.

BOARD TO GET 3 NEW PLANES

Three observation planes of the newest type are to be issued to the 2nd Division Air Service, Michigan National Guard, in June, the war department has advised Major Floyd T. Evans, in command of the squadron. Two training ships now comprise the flying equipment.

The planes are being manufactured by the Douglas Aircraft Corp., at Santa Monica, Calif. They will be equipped with large turrets for machine guns, space for aerial cameras and apparatus for sending and receiving messages by radio. They will cost $25,000 each.

On July 13 the planes will go to Grayling for machine gun practice. A silhouette will be set up on one of the lakes and the aviators will have their first taste of machine gun practice since the World war.

Although five observation planes originally were allotted the air unit, Maj.-Gen. C. C. Hammond, chief of the Militia Bureau, informed Evans only three can be properly maintained at the hangar.

"The Militia Bureau appreciates the difficulties encountered by state authorities in securing a location for the air service since it was extended federal recognition May 7, 1926," Hammond wrote. "At this time it was assumed that an adequate flying field and other facilities would be provided within a few months."

"The division of the activities of the air service is very unsatisfactory. (Drills are held at the Municipal Garage; the hangar is at the airport on Plymouth road). Similar divisions of activities have been attempted in other states, proven unsuccessful and been abandoned."

"The plant of a division of aviation in the National Guard should include space in modern hangars for at least eight observation planes. In addition there should be an operations room and facilities for drying parachutes, for radio equipment, a photographic hut, a machine shop and class rooms."

Son: "Father, do the big fishes eat sardines?"

Father: "Yes, my son."

Son: "How do they get them out of the tins?"

"What happened to that chauffeur that came out to help you farm, Ed?"

TO DRILL FOR OIL IN BERRIEN COUNTY

Exploration for oil in North Water-viet is to be started at once by the Blatchford Oil and Gas Exploration company. A well drilling outfit is enroute here by trucks from Toledo, Ohio, and will be set at the location decided upon.

The well drilling outfit is being brought to Water-viet by R. C. Steele of Muskegon, oil drilling contractor, who is said to have the contract for the drilling of the first test well for the Blatchford company.

The location of the first exploration test is reported to be on what was formerly the Frank Blake farm, on the north shore of Paw Paw lake. The property is now owned by J. K. Blatchford.

The officers and directors of the Blatchford company, who it seems are to make the first real exploration test for oil in this county, are as follows: President, J. K. Blatchford, Chicago; vice president, former Congressman William W. Wilson of Chicago; secretary, Warren Nichols, prominent Chicago attorney; treasurer, John Calvey, manager of the Auditorium hotel, Chicago; directors besides the foregoing, W. W. Myers, Denver; L. B. Jenks, of the Youngstown Steel & Tube Co., Geo. White of the Pure Oil company.

Japanese Giant Radish

This is the great Sakurajima Radish from Japan. The largest radish grown, often attaining the enormous weight of 150 pounds and sometimes 20 or 30 pounds. It is a real "novelty" to most Americans, and the taste will immediately convince anyone of its extraordinary quality. The flesh is solid, firm and brittle, and of most excellent flavor. It will grow and thrive in any soil or climate. This is a radish that can be planted in the spring and eaten all summer long, and can also be kept through the winter if dug in the late fall and buried in a box of dry sand in the cellar. As a summer radish it is a wonder, and it will grow and thrive when it is so hot and dry that common radishes would be a failure. By all means try the Sakurajima Radish and you will be surprised at the real value of this monstrous variety. Send for package of the seed today before it is all gone. Package, 10¢; 5¢ each. 25¢; by mail, postpaid. Address: Novelty Garden Club, 58 Market St., Grand Rapids, Mich.

Shore Highway Planned

Grosse Pointe Shores has reached an agreement with the Wayne County Road Commission which calls for the construction at county expense of a parked, double roadway on a 20-foot right-of-way to replace the present 18-foot pavement in Lake Shore road. Work on a sea-wall, part of the project, is already in progress. When the roadway is completed, there will be two 27-foot strips of concrete with a parkway between. Dedications of property to make possible the 120-foot roadway have been obtained by the village and the road soon will be turned over to the county for the period of construction.

STATE WILD LIFE INCREASE PROVEN

"One of the most amazing developments of the state conservation policy," says Conservation Commissioner Harry H. Whiteley, "is the number of complaints reaching the department concerning damage done by deer, bear, beaver, pheasants, and even geese. While there is an unpleasant taste to these complaints they are, nevertheless, testimony as to the efficacy of policies leading to increase wild life."

"The goal is preservation and increase in these species for the hunter and for the lover of nature. That this increase is taking effect is unquestionable. It is proven, despite the complaint of some that they do not get their licenses filled every season. The land owners whose property has to carry the feeding burden, for game has to feed the same as domesticated animals and fowls, knows whether his crops are injured."

"In Montmorency county a local newspaper recently carried a story of 200 deer grazing in a farmer's clover field. An officer of the conservation department made a report that in his winter cruising he discovered a swamp in a county below the straits which contained a winter population of between 500 and 1,000 deer. Recent local stories of the thousands of geese at Lidy Lake, for instance, in St. Joseph county; many reports of damage from bear, repeated evidence of beaver work on upper peninsula streams; items of complaint from lower Michigan farmers concerning the pheasant; all these definitely prove that the conservation department is accomplishing a result which has been hoped for."

Brings New Problem
"Now will come the added problem of coping with the new situation. It is probable that some co-operation with persons who are subject to damage may have to be arrived at, where the damage is really substantial. Increasing game will unquestionably mean greater liberality in seasons and bags, which is the ultra desirability. Education of the property owners to what they can expect in the way of returns under the Horton act of protecting and feeding game birds in the southern area is bound to be a vital question."

"But the happy thing is that there is actual complaint over increasing wild life; the problem of taking care of it can be much more easily handled than the problem of increasing it."

4,690 Licensed to Fly

Aviation, 25 years old, has 21,253 miles of airways over which air mail and passenger planes are now flying 40,000 miles a day, says the American Air Transport Association. From two pilots, Wilbur and Orville Wright, 4,690 persons are now licensed to fly; 3,459 are entitled to fly the air mail and passenger carrying planes by virtue of transport or limited commercial licenses; 1,165 have permits to operate privately owned craft for their own pleasure and 66 have industrial licenses. Thirty-four women have pilot certificates, of whom two are transport pilots, six limited commercial and 26 private.

Losses Shown in Plea To Abandon Rail Line

A continuation of the hearing on the application of the Detroit and Mackinac railroad to abandon the line from Rose City to Emery Junction was held at the federal building, Traverse City.

The hearing was conducted by W. H. Smith of Washington, D. C., examiner for the federal interstate commerce commission, and one witness, C. E. Knickerbocker, consulting engineer and accountant of the railroad, was called. The witness gave a statistical report of the revenues and operating expenses of the road for the past five years.

Abandonment of the northern branch is sought by the D. and M. owing to continued losses suffered in operating the line for the last several years.

Discovers 64 Lakes In Grand Traverse

By actual and official count there are 65 lakes in Grand Traverse county.

This is the finding of County Conservation Officer Frank A. Hoard in a careful survey just completed for a department of conservation records and it will be surprising to many residents who have lived in the county for years.

Long lake is the largest, covering approximately 3,900 acres. The two Interlochen lakes, Wah-be-ka-ness and Wah-be-ka-netta, are next, each with about 2,000 acres. Silver and Five lakes are credited with 800 acres. Boardman lake with 600 and Spider and Arbutus lakes with 525.

Dillman Outlines $30,000,000 Project

Grover C. Dillman, state highway commissioner, speaking at Muskegon recently before the Western Michigan Pike association, outlined plans for a $30,000,000 shore line paved highway, circling the lower peninsula, which would be the most ambitious highway project ever attempted by the state of Michigan. The highway would extend from Detroit along the southern state line to Lake Michigan, and from that point would border two of the Great Lakes, reaching from the Indiana line to the Straits of Mackinac and from there southward to Detroit.

McCoy Wins Big 10 Medal

Ernest McCoy, Detroit, was awarded the Conference medal for proficiency in scholarship and athletics at the University of Michigan by a committee of the board in control of athletics. This award is made annually by each of the Big Ten schools. McCoy, a football and basketball player at Detroit Northwestern high school, has played on three basketball teams at Michigan, two of them being championship winners. He won a baseball letter last year for work as a catcher and outfielder and is first baseman on the team this year. He won a monogram in football last fall.

Glider Defies Wind, Soars 3,000 Feet

More than 2,000 persons saw Professor R. E. Franklin of the University of Michigan and Arthur Kellogg, Jackson aviator, put a glider plane through a series of stunts as a demonstration for members of the newly formed Jackson Glider club. The glider, towed by an automobile, rose to a height of 3,000 feet, although a heavy wind made the glides short. The machine was made at the University of Michigan.

Kalamazoo Firm Expands

Announcement was made recently by Morris Markin, president of the Checker Cab Manufacturing Corporation, Kalamazoo, of a $1,000,000 expansion program to be started immediately. A new building will be erected near the main plant. It will house the body plant which now is located at a distance from the main building.

HOBBS TO QUIT WORK IN ARCTIC

The fourth University of Michigan Greenland expedition has been cancelled and the station at Mt. Evans, from which experiments have been conducted during the last three years, will be closed August 1, it was announced recently by Professor William H. Hobbs, director. Lack of funds is given as the reason.

Transatlantic flights scheduled to be made this summer by way of Greenland will be made before the station closes, Professor Hobbs stated, "and if means are provided later, the original plans may be carried out. The station is being closed with the expectation that it will be opened by other interests."

The work at Greenland was inaugurated in 1926, and was given much prominence last summer, because of the rescue of Hassell and Cramer by members of the expedition. In addition to the work done during the summer, staffs have been maintained each winter, making experiments. It has been Professor Hobbs' object to prove that north Atlantic gales have their source on the great Greenland ice cap.

Richard Lougee, a graduate student, who was appointed active head of the expedition and was to have sailed this month, will remain at Ann Arbor. Professor Hobbs will leave during the summer and will personally supervise the dismantling of the station.

Jackson Planning For Centennial

Pastors of Jackson churches set Sunday, June 20, as centennial Sunday, preceding a week of celebration commemorating the 100th birthday anniversary of the Republican party. Separate denominational services will be held in the morning, and a general outdoor service in the afternoon.

BANISH PILES THE NEW WAY

TWO COLAC PILE PILLS INTERNALLY WITH SWALLOW OF WATER EACH MEAL RELIEF IN ONE DAY IN MANY CASES. 40 Tablets 75 Cents at Drug Stores

SAME PRESCRIPTION HE WROTE IN 1892

When Dr. Caldwell started to practice medicine, back in 1875, the needs for a laxative were not as great as today. People lived normal lives, ate plain, wholesome food, and got plenty of fresh air. But even that early there were dramatic physics and purges for the relief of constipation which Dr. Caldwell did not believe were good for human beings.

The prescription for constipation that he used early in his practice, and which he put in drug stores in 1892 under the name of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is a liquid vegetable remedy, intended for women, children and elderly people, and they need just such a mild, safe bowel stimulant.

This prescription has proven its worth and is now the largest selling liquid laxative. It has won the confidence of people who need it to get relief from headaches, biliousness, flatulence, indigestion, loss of appetite and sleep, bad breath, dyspepsia, colds, fevers. At your druggist, or write "Syrup Pepsin," Dept. BB, Monticello, Illinois, for free trial bottle.

Northern Grown Peanuts

Just as good Peanuts can be grown in the Northern States as in the South provided you plant improved Early Spanish. Everyone should plant at least a few for the children. This is the earliest variety grown and very productive. The pods are small but the nuts are well filled with nuts of the very finest quality. Boys here is a chance for you. Think of growing peanuts in your own garden and having plenty of them to eat. Shell nuts carefully so as not to break inside skin and plant as soon as ground becomes warm, about 3 inches deep, in rows 8 feet apart, and from 10 to 18 inches apart in the row. Pkt. 10c; 5 for 25c; postpaid. Address: Novelty Garden Club, 58 Market St., Grand Rapids, Michigan.

NEIGHBORING NEWS

The reason for the failure of the Linden bank which has gone into the hands of a receiver is that many loans made to farmers are uncollectable.

St. Georges church, Brighton has a membership of 180 and raises $1,000 a year for charities and missions.

Milford suffered a $20,000 fire last week in their business section. The blaze occurred while the Womanless Wedding was being staged by 80 Milford men, many of them members of the fire department. They hastened out to fight the fire without changing their feminine attire and passing motorists gazed in astonishment to see women climbing ladders, handling the hose etc.

Memorial Day will be observed at Brighton this year.

Four boys who escaped from the reform school at Lansing were captured at the Howell fair grounds recently by Officer Hardy.

Birmingham high school will graduate 74 this year.

The recent school election in which the new school was voted favorably on at Stockbridge saw the largest vote cast at any of the four elections $16. Bids for the new building have been already advertised for. They will be opened May 23.

The Stockbridge graduating class this year numbers eight.

Clyde Galloway has purchased the interest of his partner, Frank Raven, in the ice business at Howell.

The Lansing Industrial bank will establish a branch in Howell. They specialize in making loans to wage earners.

William Gear Spencer, president of Hillsdale college is the speaker at the Howell commencement.

ITEMS OF 25 YEARS AGO

From the Dispatch of May 19, 1904 The Young Mens Club are now making plans for their annual field day.

The township gets $202.80 for the May apportionment of the primary school money.

Saturday evening was Fred Read's birthday and the members of his Sunday school class in charge of the teacher, Mrs. Ella Jackson, invaded his home to help him celebrate it. Tiddle winks, checkers and dominoes were indulged in.

The damage suit of Mrs Julia Fitzsimmons vs Edward Reilly was settled out of court, the plaintiff receiving $1125.

The game last Saturday between Pinckney and Howell juniors resulted in a victory for Pinckney 15 to 7. Moran pitched for Pinckney and Kruger and Curdy for Howell. Duffee at first, Sigler at second and Read at short fielded and batted well. The Batchelors Club of Pinckney will give a party at Pinckney Saturday evening.

Miss Mary Roche died at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Kerry Roche, May 16 of lung trouble. The funeral was held this morning at St. Mary's church, Rev. Fr. Commerford officiating.

Miss Ida Markham of Pinckney and James Pinkerton of Duluth, Minn. were married at Jackson Friday by Rev James McGrear. They will live in Minn.

Many farmers had to plant their corn over again as the wet weather rotted it.

POTATO EXCHANGE ESTABLISHES NEW PLAN OF SELLING

Keeping in step with the changing trend of consumer demand, the Michigan Potato Growers Exchange, of Cadillac has gone into the big cities with potatoes of guaranteed quality and has begun selling them in 15 lb. cloth sacks.

Buffalo was the first city where this new sales method was undertaken this season and the first carload of northern Michigan potatoes offered in these convenient sized containers drew 10 and 12 cents per sack than the prevailing market price for just plain spuds.

This was an experiment and followed a recent retail survey in Chicago which showed that the average consumer purchase of potatoes there is about seven pounds at a time. Lack of storage facilities makes it necessary for city housewife to purchase in smaller quantities than was the custom a generation ago, it is found.

The Buffalo experiment with potatoes put up in the small, convenient sized containers brought orders for 2,000 bags within a few hours. The bulk of these orders were from the higher-class residential sections.

The potatoes in the first shipment were graded and packed by Boyne City Farmers' Marketing Association. The sacks used were branded with the "Chief Potosky" trade-mark of the Michigan Potato Growers Exchange. Thus, the trade name could be placed in the homes where demands for specific brands originates. This was the chief purpose of the experiment this winter.

Potatoes are just potatoes to the buyer as long as he sees them taken out of hundred pound bags or bushel crates or barrels but when he notes a trade-mark on a convenient sized bag and learns that a commodity of extra good quality is packed within, a demand for this product is set up. This was found to be the case on the Buffalo market and the Exchange aims to supply that demand for select potatoes in 1929.

PINCKNEY WINS FROM THE ANN ARBOR DAIRY

The Pinckney-Michigan game team broke into the win column when they trimmed the Ann Arbor Dairy team Sunday by score of 16 to 7. Pinckney took the lead in the first when H. Reason first up hit safely, Lickly hit a home run over the right field fence. Eck tripped, Cox singled and Swarthout hit for two bases, four runs scoring. They got another run in the third and Ann Arbor tied it up in the fourth. In the fifth the home team again went into the lead scoring two runs. Cox pitched the last four innings for Pinckney and shut out the opposing team until the ninth when they scored two runs. In the meantime the home team took kindly to offerings of the Ann Arbor pitchers and scored nine more runs in the last two innings putting the game on ice as it were. The Pinckney team secured a grand total of 21 hits of which Eck and Swarthout got four each and Lickly and Cox three apiece. This was the first game for the Ann Arbor team which is a member of the city league and their fielding was ragged n spots.

CURRENT COMMENT

Gov. Green's veto of the capital punishment bill has aroused both favorable and adverse comment as was to be expected. The Detroit Free Press grows nearly hysterical and even intimates that the governor must accept a certain share of the responsibility for the murders that occur in the next two year as that time must elapse before another similar capital punishment bill is possible. We believe the governor gave a number of sound reasons for his veto. Any such important measure as this should be put to a referendum in order to ascertain if it is desired by a majority of the people. He also stated that it was a law aimed at the poor as no one ever heard of a millionaire electrocuted. He also said it would increase the difficulties of conviction as would bring into this state the insanity plea by which Remus, the bootlegger king, was able to cheat capital punishment in Ohio when tried for wife murder.

He recommended stricter observance of the laws particularly in the cities where the so-called crime wave exists.

Monday's papers carried a story of a stampede at the Yankee stadium, New York City Sunday. A mammoth crowd was watching a ball game there between New York and Boston. A heavy downpour of rain fell and notwithstanding fire proof and has innumerable exits, being in fact one of the finest structures of its kind in the world many of them endeavored to crowd through one exit. The result was a railing broke and a number of the people fell to the next story. In this catastrophe 2 people, one a woman, were killed and fifty injured. Dum driven cattle could hardly have shown less presence of mind.

The lowering of lake levels a few years ago caused much concern. It was blamed on the diversion of water by the Chicago sewerage canal and suit was started to stop it. This is still unsettled. Low and behold the levels of the lake are again up to their former levels and then some. For instance along Lake St. Clair where some people have been driven from their homes by floods. So the why and wherefore of the lake levels is still unsolved.

The Stockbridge school bonding proposition carried by a majority of 7 on the fourth vote taken. The school board seems to have been contented to conduct an educational campaign until a sufficient number of the voters came out to the polls to carry it. It was not always thus in the good old days. At one time in a nearby town the leading citizen and capitalist there was desirous of locating a new school which had been voted on, on the old fair grounds there which he had purchased and subdivided. In order to accomplish this he presented his factory employees with stock in the factory. This put them on the tax roll and his project carried. After his fall it was later rescinded and the new school built on the site of the old. Another nearby town carried a school proposition by subdividing ten acres of land and selling lots to non taxpayers. When the school proposition carried the ten acres was chosen as the site for the building.
