Pinckney-Michagamme

GAME STARTS AT 3:00 P. M.

A BIG TIME ASSURED

At St. Mary's Annual Picnic to be held at Pinckney, Tuesday, August 13

According to all indications the annual picnic which is to be put on at Pinckney Tuesday, August 13 promises to be an unqualified success in every way. The poultry population will suffer serious inroads as all available chickens will be drafted for the chicken dinner which will be served at Laphan's Grove at 11:00 p. m. The exhibits and stands will be abundantly supplied with articles of fancy work and useful things. A short program will also be put on and many old time Pinckneyites will be here to greet old time friends.

At 3:30 p. m. a base ball game will take place between the local Pinckney-Michigamme team and Northville. Harry German, aged 55 years, the pitching marvel of Michigan who has been pitching high class ball for nearly 40 years will pitch for Northville. He expects to be able to show the Pinckney team what curve ball pitching is like but as all pitchers look alike to them this year they have their doubts of this.

In the evening a dance will take place at the Pinckney Community Hall. This will wind up the day's festivities. All roads will lead to Pinckney on Tuesday, August 13.

DIES FROM ACCIDENT INJURY

William F. Enkeman Jr., aged 37 of 1229 Broadway, Ann Arbor died at St. Joseph's hospital there at 10:30 p. m. Friday night as a result of a fractured skull received Thursday afternoon when his soft drink truck overturned and went into the ditch near Chilson. Enkeman had left Ann Arbor to deliver a load of soft drinks at Chilson and was on his way home when the accident occurred. He was rational up to the time of his death and claimed a large truck had crowded him off the road. Two men whom he had picked up on the road were taken into custody by Sheriff Wimbles and held at the Howell jail for questioning. The deceased leaves a widow, mother, four sisters, and two brothers.

DROWNS AT WILLIAMSVILLE LAKE SUNDAY

Thornton Swan, colored, aged 29 years of 6709 Stanford Ave., Detroit, was drowned Sunday at 5:00 p. m. while swimming at Williamsville Lake, west of Gregory. The sheriff's office was notified and Deputies Bert Daller and Claude Pawcett, accompanied by Coroner Crittenden drove to the scene of the tragedy. Several hours of dragging the lake failed to locate the body and it was not recovered until Monday a. m. P. H. Swarthout, Pinckney undertaker, took charge of the body and it was later removed to Detroit.

There is a negro Y. M. C. A. camp at Williams Lake and Swan had come out to spend the day with a party of friends. He leaves a widow, having been married last June.

TWO MEN DROWNED AT WHITMORE LAKE SUNDAY

Two persons lost their lives by drowning at Whitmore Lake Sunday. They were Herman Gembraska, aged 21, of Toledo, and George Diegal, aged 23, of Ecorse. Mr. Gembraska was drowned at 12:30 in 8 feet of water in a spot in the lake opposite the postoffice. He and his companion, W. B. Gray, were on their way home from a trip to Mackinac Island and had stopped at Whitmore Lake. Gray turned in the alarm and the body was recovered by Lawrence Hatto of Ann Arbor. Dr. Downing tried artificial respiration, the pulmotor was obtained from Ann Arbor but all were unsuccessful. Gembraska was teller in the Commercial Saving Bank at Toledo.

Mr. Diegal with his wife and son were spending Sunday at Whitmore and was setting on a raft, at 3:00 p. m. watching the launch races when he fell off into the water. His wife also slipped off into the water but was rescued. Diegal's body was later found in 30 ft. of water by the state police.

UNDESERVED LAURELS

Livingston Lodge No. 76 F. & A. M. of Pinckney, presented Fr. Dorsey with a purse of $250.00 upon his departure for his new appointment at Bad Axe, Livingston County Press.

The above is from the pen of one of our contemporaries and although Pinckney is famous as a city of brotherly love the above is not quite true to fact. The purse of $250 was presented to Rev. Fr. Dorsey by the members of his parish, St. Mary's Catholic Church and although Fr. Dorsey was highly esteemed by the local Masonic Lodge, the books of that organization show no record of any such payment to him.

DEXTER JOINS LEAGUE

The Dexter team has forsaken the ranks of the independent teams and become a member of the Inter-County League. The other members are Hamtramach, Flat Rock, Northville, Plymouth, Wayne, Ypsilanti, Pontiac, and West Point. The team will continue under the management of Gus Eck. Dexter's lineup for the first game was as follows: Blott, c, Haupt, p, Knode, 1b, Tomlin, 2b, Eck, 3b, Oakley, ss, Richmond, lf, Lickly, cf, Stevens and Wedemeyer, rf.

Chelsea has a new ball park and have been giving their team loyal support.

FARM HOUSE BURNS DOWN

The house of the farm owned by William Sarnbarsky on the Howell road caught fire from a defective chimney at about 7:00 p. m. Monday evening and burned to the ground. The Pinckney fire department made the run out there but arrived too late to save the house which burned rapidly on account of the dry weather. The fire department was successful in saving the other farm buildings. Most of the household goods on the first floor were saved by neighbors who arrived early. The house was insured for $2,500 in the Livingston County Mutual. The farm was known as the House farm but was owned by Ernest Frost for a number of years. He sold to Floyd Rouson who in turn sold to William Sarnbarsky about two years ago.

C. H. KENNEDY

Mlle. Olympe Zabriski

By THOMAS BAILEY ALDRICH

We are accustomed to speak with a certain light irony of the tendency which women have to gossip, as if the sin itself, if it is a sin, were of the gentler sex, and could by no means be a masculine peccadillo. So far as my observation goes, men are as much given to small talk as women, and it is undeniable that we have produced the same type of gossip extant. Where will you find, in or out of literature, such another, so full of delightful, chatty busybody as Samuel Pepys, Esq., Secretary to the Admiralty, in the reigns of those fortunate gentlemen Charles II and James II of England? He is the king of tattlers, as Shakespeare is the king of poets.

If it came to a matter of pure gossip, I would back Our Club against the Sorosis or any women's club in existence. Whenever you see in Our Club four or five young fellows lounging in easy chairs, cigar in hand, and now and then bringing their heads together over the small round Japanese table which is always the pivot of these social circles, you may be sure they are discussing Tom's engagement, or Dick's extravagance, or Harry's hopeless passion for Miss Fleuredeley. It is here that old Tippeton gets execrated for that everlasting bot mot of his which was quite a success at dinner parties forty years ago; it is here the belle of the season passes under the scalps of more than a dozen young surgeons; it is here, in short, that everything is canvassed—everything that happens in our set, I mean, much that never happens, and a great deal that could not possibly happen. It was at Our Club that I learned the particulars of the Van Twiller affair.

It was great entertainment at Our Club, the Van Twiller affair, though it was rather a joyless thing, I fancy, for Van Twiller. To understand the case fully, it should be understood that Ralph Van Twiller is one of the proudest and most sensitive men living. He is a lineal descendant of Wouter Van Twiller, the famous old Dutch governor of New York—Nieuw Amsterdam, as it was then; and his ancestors have always been burgo-masters or admirals or generals, and his mother is the Mrs. Vanrensselaer Vanzandt Van Twiller, whose magnificent place will be pointed out to you on the right bank of the Hudson, as you pass up the historic river towards Idlewild. Ralph is about 25 years old. Birth made him a gentleman, and the rise of real estate—some of it in the family since the old governor's time—made him a millionaire. It was a kindly fairy that stepped in and made him a good fellow also. Fortune, I take it, was in her most jocund mood when she heaped her gifts in this fashion on Van Twiller, who was, and will be again, when this cloud blows over, the flower of Our Club.

About a year ago there came a whisper—if the word "whisper" is not too harsh a term to apply to what seemed a mere breath floating gently through the atmosphere of the billiard room—imparting the intelligence that Van Twiller was in some kind of trouble. Just as everybody suddenly takes to wearing square-toed boots, or to drawing his neckscarf through a ring, so it became all at once the fashion, without any preconceived agreement, for everybody to speak of Van Twiller as a man in some way under a cloud. But what the cloud was, and how he got under it, and why he did not get away from it, were points that lifted themselves into the realm of pure conjecture. There was no man in the club with strong enough wing to his imagination to soar to the supposition that Van Twiller was embarrassed in money matters. Was he in love? That appeared nearly as improbable; for if he had been in love all the world—that is, perhaps a hundred first families—would have known all about it instantly.

"He has the symptoms," said Delaney, laughing. "I remember once when Jack Flemming—" "Ned!" cried Flemming, "I protest against any allusion to that business." This was one night when Van Twiller had wandered into the club, turned over the magazines absent in the reading room, and wandered out again without speaking ten words. The most careless eye would have remarked the great change that had come over Van Twiller. Now and then he would play a game of billiards with Bret Harte or John Hay, or stop to chat a moment in the vestibule with Whitelaw Reid, but he was an altered man. When at the club, he was usually to be found in the small smoking room upstairs, seated on a fauteuil fast asleep, with the last number of The Nation in his hand. Once, if you went to two or three places on an evening, you were certain to meet Van Twiller at them all. You seldom met him in society now.

By and by came whisper number two, a whisper more emphatic than number one, but still untraceable to any tangible mouthpiece. This time the whisper said Van Twiller was in love. But with whom? The list of possible Mrs. Van Twillers was carefully examined by experienced hands, and a check placed against a fine old Knickerbocker name here and there, but nothing satisfactory arrived at. Then that same still small voice of rumor, but now with an easily detected staccato sharpness to it, said that Van Twiller was in love—with an actress! Van Twiller, whom it had taken all these years and all this waste of raw material in the way of ancestors, to bring to perfection—Ralph Van Twiller, the net result and flower of his race, the descendant of Wouter, the son of Mrs. Vanrensselaer Vanzandt Van Twiller—in love with an actress! That was too ridiculous to be believed—and so everybody believed it.

Six or seven members of the club abruptly discovered in themselves an unsuspected latent passion for the histrionic art. In squads of two or three they stormed successively all the theaters in town—Booth's, Wallack's, Daly's Fifth Avenue (not burnt down then), and the Grand Opera House. Even the shabby homes of the drama over in the Bowery, where the German Thespis has not taken out his naturalization papers, underwent rigid exploration. But no clew was found to Van Twiller's mysterious attachment. The opera bouffe, which promised the widest field for investigation, produced absolutely nothing, not even a crop of suspicions. One night, after several weeks of this, Delaney and I fanned we caught a glimpse of Van Twiller in the private box of an up-town theater, where some thrilling trapeze performance was going on, which we did not care to sit through; but we concluded afterwards it was only somebody that looked like him. Delaney, by the way, was unusually active in this search. I dare say he never quite forgave Van Twiller for calling him Muslin Delaney. Ned is fond of ladies' society and that's a fact.

The Cimmerian darkness which surrounded Van Twiller's innamorata left us free to indulge in the wildest conjectures. Whether she was black-tressed Malpomea, with bowl and dagger, or Thalia, with the fair hair and the laughing face, was only to be guessed at. It was popularly conceded, however, that Van Twiller was on the point of forming a dreadful mesalliance.

Up to this period he had visited the club regularly. Suddenly he ceased to appear. He was not to be seen on Broadway, or in the Central Park, or at the houses he generally frequented. His chambers—and mighty comfortable ones they were—on Thirty-fourth Street were deserted. He had dropped out of the world, shot like a bright particular star from his orbit in the heaven of the best society.

"Where's Van Twiller?" "Who's seen Van Twiller?" "What has become of Van Twiller?" Delaney picked up the Evening Post, and read—with a solemnity that betrayed young Firkins into exclaiming, "By Jove now!" "Married, on the 10th instant, by the Rev. Friar Laurence, at the residence of the bride's uncle, Montague Capulet, Esq., Miss Adrienne Le Couvreur to Mr. Ralph Van Twiller, both of this city. No cards."

"It strikes me," said Frank Livingstone, who had been ruffling the leaves of a magazine at the other end of the table, "that you fellows are in a great fever about Van Twiller."

"So we are."

"Well, he has simply gone out of town."

"Where?"

"Up to the old homestead on the Hudson."

"It's an odd time of year for a fellow to go into the country."

"He has gone to visit his mother," said Livingstone.

"In February?"

"I didn't know, Delaney, there was any statute in force prohibiting a man from visiting his mother in February if he wants to."

Delaney made some light remark about the pleasure of communing with nature with a cold in her head, and the topic was dropped.

Livingstone was hand in glove with Van Twiller, and if any man shared his confidence it was Livingstone. He was aware of the gossip and speculation that had been rife in the club, but he either was not at liberty or did not think it worth while to relieve our curiosity. In the course of a week or two it was reported that Van Twiller was going to Europe, and go he did. A dozen of us went down to the Scotto to see him off. It was refreshing to have something as positive as the fact that Van Twiller had sailed.

II

Shortly after Van Twiller's departure the whole thing came out. Whether Livingstone found the secret too heavy a burden, or whether it transpired through some indiscretion on the part of Mrs. Vanrensselaer Vanzandt Van Twiller, I cannot say; but the entire story was in the possession of the club. Van Twiller had actually been very deeply interested—not in an actress, for the legitimate drama was not her humble walk in life, but—in Mademoiselle Olympe Zabriski, whose really perilous feats on the trapeze had astonished New York the year before, though they had failed to attract Delaney and me the night we wandered into the up-town theater on the trail of Van Twiller's mystery.

That a man like Van Twiller should be fascinated for an instant by a common circus girl seems incredible; but it is always the incredible thing that happens. Besides Mademoiselle Olympe was not a common circus girl; she was a most daring and startling gymnast, with a beauty and a grace of movement that gave to her audacious performance almost an air of prudery. Watching her wondrous dexterity and pliant strength, both exercised without apparent effort, it seemed the most natural proceeding in the world that she should do those unpardonable things. She had a way of melting from one graceful posture into another, like the dissolving figures thrown from a stereopticon. She was a lithe, radiant shape out of the Grecian mythology, now poised up there above the gas lights, and now gleaming through the air like a slender gilt arrow.

I am describing Mademoiselle Olympe as she appeared to Van Twiller on that occasion when he strolled into the theater where she was performing. To me she was a girl of eighteen or twenty years of age (maybe she was much older, for pearl-powder and distance keep these people perpetually young), slightly but exquisitely built, with sinews of silver wire; rather pretty, perhaps, after a manner, but showing plainly the effects of the exhaustive drafts she was making on her physical vitality. Now, Van Twiller was an enthusiast on the subject of calisthenics. "If I had a daughter," Van Twiller used to say, "I wouldn't send her to a boarding school or a nunnery; I'd send her to a gymnasium for the first five years. Our American women have no physique. They are illies, pallid, pretty—and perishable. You marry an American woman, and what do you marry? A headache. Look at English girls. They are at least roses, and last the season through."

Walking home from the theater that first night, it fitted through Van Twiller's mind that if he could give this girl's set of nerves and muscles to any one of the two hundred high-bred women he knew, he would marry her on the spot and worship her forever. The following evening he went to see Mademoiselle Olympe again. "Olympe Zabriski," he thought, as he sauntered through the lobby, "what a queer name! Olympe is French, and Zabriski is Polish. It is her real name de guerre, of course; her real name is probably Sarah Jones. What kind of creature can she be in private life, I wonder? I wonder if she wears that costume all the time, and if she springs to her heels from a horizontal bar. Of course she rocks the baby to sleep on the trapeze." And Van Twiller went on making comical tableaux of Mademoiselle Zabriski, like the clever, satirical dog he was, until the curtain rose.

This was on Friday. There was a matinee the next day, and he attended it, though he had secured a seat for the usual evening entertainment. Then it became a habit of Van Twiller's to drop into the theater for half an hour or so every night, to assist at the interlude, in which she appeared. He cared only for her part of the programme, and timed his visits accordingly. It was a surprise to himself when he reflected one morning that he had not missed a single performance of Mademoiselle Olympe for two weeks.

"This will never do," said Van Twiller. "Olympe"—he called her Olympe, as if she were an old acquaintance, and so she might have been considered by that time—"is a wonderful creature; but this will never do. Van, my boy, you must reform this altogether." But half past nine that night saw him in his accustomed orchestra chair, and so on for another week. A habit leads a man so gently in the beginning that he does not perceive he is led—what pleasant avenues it leads him! By and by the soft silk threads become iron chains, and the pleasant avenues Avernus!

Quite a new element had lately entered into Van Twiller's enjoyment of Mademoiselle Olympe's ingenious feats—a vaguely born apprehension that she might slip from that swinging bar, that one of the thin cords supporting it might snap, and let her go headlong from the dizzy height. Now and then, for a terrible instant, he would imagine her lying a glittering, palpitating heap at the footlights, with no color in her lips! Sometimes it seemed as if the girl were tempting this kind of fate. It was a hard, bitter life, and nothing but poverty and sordid misery at home could have driven her to it. What if she should end it all some night, by just unclasp that little hand? It looked so small and white from where Van Twiller sat! This frightful idea fascinated while it chilled him, and helped to make it nearly impossible for him to keep away from the theater. In the beginning his attendance had not interfered with his social duties or pleasures; but now he came to find it distasteful after dinner to do anything but read, or walk the streets aimlessly, until it was time to go to the play. When that was over, he was in no mood to go anywhere but to his rooms. So he dropped away by insensible degrees from his habitual haunts, was missed, and began to be talked about at the club. Catching some intimation of this, he ventured no more in the orchestra stalls, but shrouded himself behind the draperies of the private box in which Delaney and I thought we saw him on one occasion.

Now, I find it very perplexing to explain what Van Twiller was wholly unable to explain to himself. He had no wish to speak to her, or to hear her speak. Nothing could have been easier, and nothing further from his desire, than to know her personally. A Van Twiller personally acquainted with a strolling female acrobat! Good heavens! That was something possible only with the discovery of perpetual motion. Taken from her theatrical setting, from her lofty perch, so to say, on the trapeze bar, Olympe Zabriski would have shocked every aristocratic fibre in Van Twiller's body. He was simply fascinated by her marvelous grace and elan, and the magnetic recklessness of the girl. It was very young in him and very weak, and no member of the Sorosis, or all the Sorosistlers together, could have been more severe on Van Twiller than he was on himself. To be weak, and to know it, is something of a punishment for a proud man. Van Twiller took his punishment, and went to the theater, regularly.

"When her engagement comes to an end," he meditated, "that will finish the business."

Mademoiselle Olympe's engagement finally did come to an end, and she departed. But her engagement had been highly beneficial to the treasury-chest of the up-town theater, and before Van Twiller could get over missing her she had returned from a short western tour, and her immediate reappearance was underlined on the playbills.

On a dead-wall opposite the windows of Van Twiller's sleeping room there appeared, as if by necromancy, an aggressive poster with Mademoiselle Olympe Zabriski on it in letters at least a foot high. This thing stared him in the face when he woke up one morning. It gave him a sensation as if she had called on him over night and left her card.

From time to time through the day he regarded that poster with a sardonic eye. He had pitilessly resolved not to repeat the folly of the previous month. To say that this moral victory cost him nothing would be to deprive it of merit. It cost him many internal struggles. It is a fine thing to see a man seizing his temptation by the throat and wrestling with it, and trampling it under foot like St. Anthony. This was the spectacle Van Twiller was exhibiting to the angels.

The evening Mademoiselle Olympe was to make her reappearance, Van Twiller, having dined at the club and feeling more like himself than he had felt for weeks, returned to his chamber and putting on dressing gown and slippers, piled up the greater portion of his library about him, and fell to reading assiduously. There is nothing like a quiet evening at home with some slight intellectual occupation, after one's feathers have been stroked the wrong way.

When the lively French clock on the mantelpiece—a base of malachite surmounted by a flying bronze Mercury with its arms spread gracefully on the air, and not remotely suggestive of Mademoiselle Olympe in the act of executing her grand flight from the trapeze—when the clock, I repeat, struck nine, Van Twiller paid no attention to it. That was certainly a triumph. I am anxious to render Van Twiller all the justice I can, at this point of the narrative, inasmuch as when the half-hour sounded musically, like a crystal ball dropping into a silver bowl, he rose from the chair automatically, thrust his feet into his walking shoes, threw his overcoat across his arm, and strode out of the room.

To be weak and to scorn your weakness, and not to be able to conquer it, is, as has been said, a hard thing; and I suspect it was not with unalloyed satisfaction that Van Twiller found himself taking his seat in the back part of the private box night after night during the second engagement of Mademoiselle Olympe. It was so easy not to stay away!

In this second edition of Van Twiller's fatuity, his case was even worse than before. He not only thought of Olympe quite a number of times between breakfast and dinner, he not only attended the interlude regularly, but he began, in spite of himself, to occupy his leisure hours at night by dreaming of her. This was too much of a good thing, and Van Twiller regarded it so. Besides, the dream was always the same—a harrowing dream, a dream singularly adapted to shattering the nerves of a man like Van Twiller. He would imagine himself seated at the theater (with all the members of Our Club in the parquette), watching Mademoiselle Olympe as usual, when suddenly that young lady would launch herself desperately from the trapeze, and come flying through the air like a firebrand hurled at his private box. Then the unfortunate man would wake up with cold drops standing on his forehead.

There is one redeeming feature in this infatuation of Van Twiller's which the sober moralist will love to look upon—the serene unconsciousness of the person who caused it. She went through her role with admirable aplomb, drew her salary, it may be assumed, punctually, and appears from first to last to have been ignorant that there was a miserable slave wearing her chains nightly in the left hand proscenium box.

That Van Twiller, haunting the theater with the persistency of an executor, conducted himself so discreetly as not to draw the fire of Mademoiselle Olympe's blue eyes shows that Van Twiller, however deeply under a spell, was not in love. I say this, though I think if Van Twiller had not been Van Twiller, if he had been a man of no family and no position and no money, if New York had been Paris, and Thirty-fourth Street a street in the Latin quarter—but it is useless to speculate on what might have happened. What did happen is sufficient.

It happened then, in the second week of Queen Olympe's second unconscious reign, that an appalling Whimper floated up the Hudson, effected a landing at a point between Spuyten Duyvel Creek and Cold Spring, and sought out a stately mansion of Dutch architecture standing on the bank of the river. The Whimper straightway informed the lady dwelling in this mansion that all was not well with the last of the Van Twillers, that he was gradually estranging himself from his peers, and wasting his nights in a playhouse watching a misguided young woman turning unmaidenly somersaults on a piece of wood attached to two ropes.

Mrs. Vanrensselaer Vanzandt Van Twiller came down to town by the next train to look into this little matter. She found the flower of the family taking an early breakfast, at 11 a. m., in his cozy apartments on Thirty-fourth Street. With the least possible circumlocution she confronted him with what rumor had reported of his pursuits, and was pleased, but not too much pleased, when he gave her an exact account of his relations with Mademoiselle Zabriski, neither concealing nor qualifying anything. As a confession, it was unique, and might have been a great deal less entertaining. Two or three times in the course of the narrative the matron had some difficulty in preserving the gravity of her countenance. After meditating a few minutes, she tapped Van Twiller softly on the arm with the tip of her parasol, and invited him to return with her the next day up the Hudson and make a brief visit at the home of his ancestors. He accepted the invitation with outward alacrity and inward disgust.

When this was settled, and the worthy lady had withdrawn, Van Twiller went directly to the establishment of Messrs. Ball, Black & Company and selected, with unerring taste, the finest diamond bracelet procurable. For his mother? Dear, me, no! she had the family jewels.

I would not like to state the enormous sum Van Twiller paid for this bracelet. It was such a clasp of diamonds as would have hastened the pulsation of a patrician wrist. It was such a bracelet as Prince Camaralzaman might have sent to the Princess Badoura, and the Princess Badoura—might have been very glad to get.

In the fragrant Levant morocco case, where these happy jewels lived when they were at home, Van Twiller thoughtfully placed his card, on the back of which he had written a line begging Mademoiselle Olympe Zabriski to accept the accompanying trifle from one who had witnessed her graceful performances with interest and pleasure. This was not done inconsiderately. "Of course I must enclose my card, as I would to any lady," Van Twiller had said to himself; "a Van Twiller can neither write an anonymous letter nor make an anonymous present." Blood entails its duties as well as its privileges.

The casket despatched to its destination. Van Twiller felt easier in his mind. He was under obligations to the girl for many an agreeable hour that might otherwise have passed heavily. He had paid the debt, and he had paid it in prince, as became a Van Twiller. He spent the rest of the day in looking at some pictures at Goupil's and at the club, and in making a few purchases for his trip up the Hudson. A consciousness that this trip up the Hudson was a disorderly retreat came over him unpleasantly at intervals.

When he returned to his rooms late at night he found a note lying on the writing table. He started as his eye caught the words "Theater" stamped in carmine letters on one corner of the envelope. Van Twiller broke the seal with trembling fingers.

Now, this note some time afterwards fell into the hands of Livingstone, who showed it to Stuyvesant, who showed it to Delaney, who showed it to me, and I copied it as literary curiosity. The note ran as follows:

Mr. Van Twiller Dear Sir—I am very grateful to you for that Bracelet. It comes just in the nick of time for me. The Mademoiselle Zabriski dodge is about paid out. My beard is getting too much for me. I shall have to grow a mustash and take to some line of business, I don't know what, but will let you no. You won't feel bad if I sell that Bracelet. I have seen Abrahams Moss and he says he will do the square thing. Please accept my thanks for your Beautiful and Unexpected present.

Yours respectfully servant,
Charles Montmorenci Walters.
The next day Van Twiller neither expressed nor felt any unwillingness to spend a few days with his mother at the old homestead.

And then he went abroad.
(The End)

It is bitter disappointment when you have sown benefits to reap injuries.—Plautus.

WEEK OF AUGUST 4

Most parts of Michigan will be under the influence of severe electrical and wind storms at the beginning of the week of August 4. With these storms will come rather high maximum temperatures. The heat wave and thunder showers will continue until close to the middle days of the week.

About Wednesday or Thursday temperatures will begin cooling off so that readings will be more normal at this time.

Storms of light rains and wind will be general throughout many parts of Michigan during Thursday and Friday.

Saturday will be much cooler than the rest of the week as it is expected the passing storm eddy will bring in the cool winds out of the northwest. The weather at the end of the week is expected to be generally clear.

Best Time This Week

For farming: August 6 and 7, 9, to 11:30 a. m.

For baking: August 8, 9 and 10.

Are You Ready

When your Children Cry for It

Baby has little upsets at times. All your care cannot prevent them. But you can be prepared. Then you can do what any experienced nurse would do—give a few drops of plain Castoria. No sooner done than Baby is soothed; relief is just a matter of moments. Yet you have eased your child without use of a single doseful drug; Castoria is vegetable. So it's safe to use as often as an infant has any little pain you cannot pat away. And it's always ready for the crueler pangs of colic, or constipation, or diarrhea, effective, too, for older children. Twenty-five million bottles were bought last year.

Resurrection Plant

The Genuine "Rose of Jericho"
These peculiar plants are found among the plate and cedars of Palestine. When you get the plant it will have the appearance of a ball of tightly folded leaves, dry and dead. Put it in water and it will open its handsome fern-like foliage, turn green and begin to grow in about twenty minutes. Take it out of the water and it curls up again, brown and becomes dead again. It is capable of apparently dying and coming to life again repeatedly, and will keep in its dead or dormant state for years and reawaken directly upon being placed in water. It is an interesting, curious and most beautiful house plant with fine fern-like leaves of very graceful fragrance. If you want a "talker" that will prove satisfactory under all conditions, don't fail to get one of these marvels of plant life. Grows and thrives in a shallow bowl of water, and is greatly admired by everyone.

GOVERNOR TELLS HOSPITAL COMMITTEE ABOUT PROJECT
Gov. Fred W. Green on Tuesday laid before the state hospital commission at Traverse City the legislative program for the rehabilitation of state insane and hospitalization institutions in which he told of the contemplated $330,000 appropriation for the construction of a new state psychopathic hospital for teaching and laboratory work in connection with the University of Michigan. He said the funds would be released next spring.
Michigan will appropriate $17,217,300 over the next four years for the improvement of mental hospitals, the governor's report said. The program will provide 250 beds for the insane, 25 for epileptics, and 80 for feeble-minded for each 100,000 population in the state.

Major improvements in present hospital plants will be made to take care of the extra load.
Emphasizing the greatest single appropriation in the Hartman act, the governor called attention to the proposed new state hospital, for which $7,500,000 has been appropriated over the next four years.
It will provide 2,800 beds with possibilities for expansion to a peak load of 5,000 beds.
The governor, referring to the rest of the program, declared:
"The Kalamazoo state hospital will be provided with about 600 additional beds for an appropriation of $1,820,500.
"At Traverse City will be added 1,290 beds and general institutional improvements. For this work there is an appropriation of $2,200,000.
"At Newberry state hospital 180 beds will be added at a cost of $929,500. As the area served by the Newberry hospital has almost twice as many beds per 100,000 population as has the remainder of the state, I vetoed a legislative appropriation of $300,000 in the first year for this institution.
The Pontiac state hospital was approved by your commission for an increase in bed capacity of 1,350. The increase was not approved by the legislature in the belief that Pontiac was illogically located within the city limits, and that within a few years the land may be sold at a sum sufficient to replace the institution more advantageously on another site. The appropriation was reduced to a sum sufficient only to take care of the power house requirements. Plans for this work have been drawn, bids taken, and contracts will soon be awarded.
"For the second year of the program $467,300 has been provided for additions to the criminal insane hospital at Ionia. This will provide capacity for 160 additional beds.
"The Michigan farm colony for epileptics at Wahjamega is to be provided with 750 additional beds with an appropriation, starting next year, of $1,400,000. The program includes a receiving hospital of 100 beds.
"Michigan Home and Training school at Lapeer for feeble-minded to be increased 1,540 beds, together with plant improvements, are provided by an appropriation of $2,200,000.
Gov. Green urged the commission to use first year available funds for additional bed capacity as much as possible. The legislature appropriated $3,880,000 for 1930.
"I believe it best to provide capacity 1st and plant improvement second where these factors do not go hand in hand. I think it would be better to provide dormitory space first and receiving hospital space second," the governor said.

ANOTHER EVOLUTION

Back in 1889 the "doctor" used to say: "Now ladies and gents, kindly gather in close around the wagon. Small boys please keep back so that older people wishing to make purchases may get in where they can hear. The boys are going to play on the banjos in just a few minutes—ho, this way, everybody. Now, ladies and gents we are introducing in this locality Doctor Bokakiaks Famous Pain Eradicator for Man or Beast at a price so low as to be amazing. I am not going to ask a dollar for this large, home size bottle. I am not going to ask even 75, 50, 40 or 30 cents. For the breath-taking pittance of 25c a quarter of a dollar, you get the full oversized bottle with complete directions for taking with a rust-proof corkscrew thrown in ABSOLUTELY FREE. Now, as the boys play on the banjos my assistants will pass among you. Remember, this great medicine will cure coughs, rheumatism, headache, colic, spavin, ringworm, soreness, epilepsy etc."
Now in 1929 the story goes like this: "Good evening ladies and gentlemen. The following program is being brought to you by the courtesy of the Choo Choo Chewing Gum Co., makers of chewing gum for engineers—the chew which you apply to your nearest dealer for a sample of this meritorious product. Remember it does not stick to your teeth, enmesh the gums or lose its flavor on the bedpost overnight. Remember the name—Choo Choo Chewing Gum. We will now take a ride on the Choo Choo train, with the famous Choo Choo orchestra as the engineer. There will be a brief pause for station announcements."
GLOVER LOSES WRESTLING TITLE
According to the Flint Journal, Max Glover lost his middleweight wrestling title to Frank Ford of Flint in a match held at Athletic Park on July 22. Ford took first fall in 10 minutes and 4 seconds, lost the second in five minutes and 36 seconds and won the last in five minutes and six seconds. Glover is said to have appeared slow and out of condition in this bout and was no match for the more active Ford.
Two years ago Glover wrestled at Pinckney. It was here that he won the championship from Vanderlinden, the Detroit Belgian. He met Ford twice here losing the first match in a long drawn out contest. In a return match he easily vanquished Ford and will probably do so the next time they meet.

DANCE IN THE EVENING

DO YOU SPEND WISELY?

It is never easy to reduce expenditures or cost of living. If one-half the effort which is made to increase one's personal earnings, were directed toward careful and economical management of one's personal spending, a long step would be taken toward solving our national economic problems.

The average man or woman will readily apply a system of control over the business or household routine as to work to be done—things to be accomplished—but for some unknown reason will not apply the same control to personal financial affairs.

Wise expenditure is not meanness or stinginess, or any particular self-denial—it is simply wise regulation. It is directing the power of money and doing away with its motion.

Sure Sign of Old Age

A young man in Kansas City came downtown on a recent morning looking tired and worn. "No, I'm not sick," he said. "I'm just getting old." Then he explained his thirteen-year-old daughter had had a party the night before. He was trying to help entertain as he always had done at such affairs since she was a baby. Pretty soon his wife beckoned him into the next room, "Paw," she said, "go on upstairs and let the young folks have a good time."—Capper's Weekly.

AUTOMATIC ELECTRIC REFRIGERATION

Science has proved beyond doubt the necessity for keeping foods at a temperature below 50 degrees, and of constantly maintaining this coldness. Above this point, foods spoil rapidly. Unceasingly vigilant, an electric refrigerator keeps foods fresh and wholesome in a dry cold that is always uniform. In hottest summer weather, the temperature is unchanged. Day after day, year after year, an electric refrigerator provides unflinching automatic refrigeration. No attention is necessary other than an occasional defrosting.

Bring Shorter Coats

By Lucy Claire

Longer skirts, higher waistlines and more fitted silhouettes are the outstanding features of the accepted vogue now sponsored by Paris, and already as familiar on this side of the Atlantic as they are over there. There will be little change in the silhouette for many months to come—not before spring, at any rate. The evening ensemble is tremendously important just now. The longer frocks have made it so, for with the dipped panels touching the ground, just any length wrap is not acceptable. It is not enough to have a smart evening frock. It must be in perfect harmony with the coat or wrap worn with it.

The difficult problem of fitting the evening coat to the frock has been solved in two ways. The coat must either be very long and follow the lines of the frock, or it must be short, ending just above the knees, and allowing the much flared and dipping frock skirt to flow out freely below its hemline. The short coat is the most popular, and permits of endless beautiful combinations of fabrics and colors. It gives somewhat of the Grecian lines to the long, slender silhouette.

One can readily see what the ordinary length coat would do to the three frocks sketched, which are typical of the latest silhouette of flare and fit and raised waistline they are wearing. The Patou models, both for afternoon and evening, are making quite a hit with the American women. He has his own original way of handling the waist and hip line which is not quite the fitted princess type, nor yet the distinctly higher waistline. It is more of a happy compromise between the two.

Printed Chiffon Paris Vogue

One of his evening frocks in printed chiffon is shown in the center of the sketch. Printed chiffon, by the way, is enjoying such a tremendous vogue in Paris that couturiers are predicting its continuing into winter, though in more subdued coloring.

One of Patou's most popular afternoon models is shirred over the hip, with the flounce set low on the skirt and a slightly bloused effect front and back achieved by the shirring at the hips. Usually these frocks have little lingerie touches of white at the V neckline and on the cuffs, and there is a jobot bow at the side. In the new silhouette, as shown in the evening frock sketched, he achieves the flat neckline and the slight blouse by means of tucks extending down in the back to form the train or dip.

four different rates of speed—the first slow, the second normal, the third fast and the fourth very rapidly—and to understand them as well as they could. The speed of the reading of each student was taken, and the adjoining questions were answered in order to determine the individual comprehension scores.

The average score which was computed from the reports of all of the students who took the test showed some very striking facts, both in relation to the individuals and the class as a whole. It was found that slow reading is a hinderance rather than a help to the average student, for when he reads at the rate of two and five-tenths words a second he only had an average of 21 correct answers out of 30. Likewise the result of skimming or the very rapid reading was that the accuracy or comprehension rate suffered, for the number of questions answered correctly were only 19, which is a low percentage of 65 per cent. The normal rate of reading for the average student in the class was found to be three and five-tenths words a second, and his comprehension per cent at this rate of speed was 82 1/2 per cent.

Professor McClusky explains these singular statistics by stating that the majority of students are reading at a rate way below their limit of capacity and advised most of them to speed up a bit and become more efficient. He pointed out that not only could the students gain time for more studying, but they could economize on it, so that they would have more time for pleasure. He further states that it would certainly pay most of the students in the University to test themselves as to their reading capacity and then to keep up to the rate at which they find they are able to get the best results.

From this average score Professor McClusky has been able to make the further statement that if every student in the Rhetoric library for one week night would lose this average 17 minutes an hour the group as a whole would waste 136 hours, which is equivalent to 5 days and 16 hours. This is just a little more than one of our school weeks.

State Has 37 Airports

Thirty-seven airports, 16 of which are municipal, have been established in Michigan and 44 others are contemplated, a report of the U. S. Department of Commerce discloses. Nine of the fields are classed as commercial, two are army fields and nine others are listed as auxiliary ports. The other is an emergency field used by planes on regular air routes.

Michigan cities with municipal airports are Albion, Battle Creek, Charlevoix, Detroit, Gaylord, Grand Rapids, Jackson, Kalamazoo, Lansing, Marysville, Menominee, Muskegon, Niles, Pontiac, Saginaw and Ypsilanti.

Poems That Live

THE WAY, THE TRUTH, AND THE LIFE

O, Thou great Friend to all the sons of men,
Who once appeared in humblest guise below,
Sin to rebuke, to break the captive's chain,
And call thy brethren forth from want and woe—
We look to Thee! Thy truth is still Light
Which guides the nations, groping
On their way,
Stumbling and falling in disastrous night,
Yet hoping ever for the perfect day.

Yes; Thou art still the Light, Thou are the Way
The holiest know; Light, Life, the Way of heaven!
And they who dearest hope and deepest pray,
Toil by the Light, Life, Way, which Thou hast given.
—Theodore Parker (1810-1860)

RURAL WOMEN IN M. S. C. GATHERING

The newest quirks for lightening household tasks, methods for selecting fabrics that will wear as they are supposed to do, good music and just plain entertainment have been provided by the program makers who have charge of the women's section of the annual Summer Farmers Day to be held at Michigan State college, Friday, August 2.

Several years ago one of the agricultural divisions of the college invited a group of farmers to inspect the experimental work which was being done by that department. The idea was so popular that other departments held similar meetings later.

It then became necessary to combine the exhibits put on the departments into an all college function. The women who accompanied their husbands to these meetings asked that programs be arranged for them, and this has been done for the past few years.

One of the features, this year will be the awarding of medals to the second group of Master Farm Homemakers to be chosen in Michigan. A banquet for women will also be held Friday evening.

To Launch New Car Ferry Of Pere Marquette Aug. 6

The first of two new Pere Marquette car ferries, City of Saginaw, will be launched in the Manitowoc shipbuilding yards Aug. 6. The City of Flint will slide down the ways six weeks later.

Both boats are to have turbo-electric drive, the first car ferries to be equipped with this type of propulsion. Launching originally was set for July 15, but was postponed.

Wealthy Autoist Faces Sentence

Released on her own bond, Miss Helen Hertz, 19, daughter of John D. Hertz, sportsman and retired taxicab operator of Chicago, faces a possible sentence for driving her car into an automobile in which Miss Dorothy Wilson, 20, of Evanston, Ill., was riding, and seriously injuring her. Police say Miss Hertz crashed a red light.

The World and All

By CHARLES B. DRISCOLL

UP AND DOWN

Elevators are not so common in Europe as in America. In Spain, most of the natives manage to get up and down without machinery. But the hotel at which I stopped in Santander is nothing if not modern. It has fine, large rooms with high ceilings, bathrooms as large as almost any ordinary guest room in a modern American hotel. Also, there was a good telephone in my room. The service was excellent.

Well, of course, this ultra-modern hotel had an "ascensor," elevator. Yes, and announce the fact in all its cards, outdoor advertising, and on its stationery.

The most fun I've had in a hilarious way in Spain has been had in that elevator. It is just big enough for two adults to stand in—if they're real well acquainted, and on the best of terms. I don't know as I'd care to put Clarence Darrow and John Summer into it, but two ordinary fellows might make it all right.

It's automatic. The customer gets in and the attendant closes the door from the outside. The customer could operate it just as well without the aid of an attendant, but labor is not too expensive in Spain, and the attendant has to be employed at something. So you are closed in. The attendant pushes a button, and as likely as not, the little box starts slowly upward.

My room was on the fourth floor. I never got that far without some excitement. The machinery would groan, and the elevator would come to a slow stop, always between floors. Fortunately, the thing had been installed in the well formed by a winding stairway. I was not beyond rescue. But the first time it happened I envisioned a Spanish funeral for an unknown American.

The attendant came running up the stairway, talking rapidly about something very important.

The porter followed, gesticulating and making excited remarks. Then came the landlord, the landlady, a maid or two, and some volunteers.

They reached over from the stairway, pushed doodads, pulled strings and levers, shot and unshot bolts, and made plenty of conversation. The porter managed to climb into the cage with me, and by holding up bits of brass and shouting to those below, got it started.

But the same thing happened every time I took a ride in that much-advertised "ascensor." It furnished me with my daily laughing exercise.

Oh, yes, one more detail that's too good to miss. When you wanted the elevator to come up for you, you telephone to the hotel desk. There were no signals buttons to push.

Living and Loving

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

DIFFERENT RELIGION OF HUSBAND AND WIFE REQUIRES TOLERANCE

By Virginia Lee

Again and again I am asked if I think that marriage between people of different religions is safe. Whether such marriages are likely to be happy.

The answer is, of course, that it depends entirely on the couple. As a general thing, people of similar religious beliefs would be more congenial, and comradeship is the one thing that makes for happiness when the first flush of passion has passed. But it is not necessary for two people to think alike on every point to be congenial.

There is no doubt that religion can be a bitter bone of controversy in a home. So I would say to all young people contemplating matrimony who have this question to settle, don't marry unless you are sure you can always be tolerant and sympathetic with the other's beliefs, even when the children come, and do not insist that your faith is the only right one. Only so can marriage between people of different faiths be successful.

"DEAR VIRGINIA LEE: I have been going with a fellow several weeks and we have learned to love one another. Whenever he comes to see me we sit at home with my parents and our conversation is far from love. My parents object to me going with him because he is a Catholic. And his parents object to his going with me because I am a Protestant, but neither of us cares for religion. He is a good working boy. We are both out of high school and close to 20 years of age. Do you think our parents ought to criticize us for going together?"

"Now, Virginia, please advise us. Shall we keep on going together or shall we stop?"

"BROKEN HEARTED SWEET-HEART"

Could either conscientiously give his faith up and join the church of the other? Or, are you sure you could go to church and allow him to go to his without any criticism or slurring remarks? If you have children, could you decide together to which church they should go until such time as they were old enough to make their own choice? Religion may seem to matter little now, but it will loom bigger after the first flush of all engrossing love has passed and you settle down to live together, especially with two sets of parents-in-law pulling different ways. Better to give one another up now if you are not sure of your reactions to these things, than to marry and fight about them afterwards. It's up to you two and you alone.

"DEAR VIRGINIA LEE: I would like to know if boys will stick by a girl who is quiet, smiling and sympathetic, always ready to aid in solving problems, or if they like girls who are full of pep and don't give a 'kick' what they do? I have always been quite peppy, and since I have entered the business world it has made me quiet and more modest, and my friend has noticed it and wants to know why I'm not peppy any more. Do you think he will continue his love for me if I remain more quiet?"

"Do you think a strong Catholic and a strong Protestant should marry? Will it cause trouble in their future home? Should the girl ask the man to give up his beliefs for her?"

"P. S.—What is Lindbergh's belief, also his wife, Catholic or Protestant?"

I don't believe your boy friend will cease to love you just because you are a little quieter, Sue, dear. Especially if you are "smiling and sympathetic." And I expect that after you have been in business longer you will be just as peppy as ever. Such a difference in religion might make trouble and could only be overcome by both being very tolerant and agreeing about the children, if you had any. No man or woman has a right to ask another to give up his or her beliefs. In fact, I should say, it would be an impossibility anyway. I believe the Lindberghs are both Protestants.

Adults Not Immune
Dr. Jules Blum of the New York city laboratory, recently made a Schick test on the employees of the department of health. His test proved that about one-third of the citizens of New York are not immune to diphtheria, which is considered primarily a childhood disease.

SUGGESTIONS

Summer Rugs Labor Savers
There are many advantages in the use of simple, lightweight rugs over the heavier varieties in summer weather. They help to keep the home cool and attractive, and require little care in themselves. Rugs made of rags or other fabrics may be placed in a tub and laundered in much the same manner as wearing apparel. The fiber or grass rug is best placed on a flat, clean surface, and gently scrubbed on both sides.

In either case, the best results are obtained by the use of plentiful soap-suds and lukewarm water. If the suds become badly soiled, the washing process should be repeated with clean suds and fresh water. Rugs should never be permitted to become so dirty that hard rubbing or scrubbing is necessary. Rinse three times in clear, warm water, remove as much of the water as possible by gentle pressing and place out of doors to dry.

Stains caused by the tin foil wrapping of corsage bouquets will respond readily to washing with soap and water.

Nightly Laundering

Nowadays, more and more girls are forming the nightly laundering habit for reasons of economy as well as good grooming. They have learned through experience that delicate fabrics worn next to the skin give poor service unless the perspiration of the body and the day's accumulation of soil are removed from them with soap and water.

Questioning is not the mode of conversation among gentlemen.—Samuel Johnson.

U. OF M. TO TEST PLANES

University of Michigan has been named by the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce as one of six American universities equipped for research in aeronautical engineering have been selected to test commercial airplanes in accordance with a new code of procedure on standard performance.

The new code, which was drawn up by a committee of the Aeronautical chamber headed by Prof. Alexander Klemin of New York University, is expected to provide manufacturers with a standard basis upon which to compute the speed, rate of climb, ceiling, landing speed and other performance data which characterize the capabilities of their planes.

Michigan at Top, Says Kentucky Man

A prominent resident of Louisville, Kentucky, recently wrote a letter of appreciation to T. F. Marston, secretary-treasurer of the East Michigan Tourist association, for service rendered him by the association. Some portions of the letter are of special interest, particularly because of the character of the author.

"We, a family of five, shall leave for East Michigan, somewhere on Lake Huron, in a few days," he declares, and continues, "It is to be a camping trip of a month or six weeks and with all your data in hand, we can very easily locate a spot to pitch a tent. I spent one season on the Au Sable river with headquarters at Grayling and caught some very nice rainbows and always try to spend a month at least in Michigan during the summer. Your good roads, wonderful camp sites, lakes, rivers and forests, with the co-operative spirit your organization and others maintain, surely places Michigan right at the top for the tourist, camper and fisherman."

Grand Haven Acts To Kill Bitterness

Secretary William Stribley of the Tri-City Chamber of Commerce at Grand Haven has arranged for a joint meeting of the Grand Haven and Muskegon chambers. The purpose of the meeting is to iron out the many misunderstandings that exist between the two bodies.

It is believed that a joint meeting of this nature will serve to promote better harmony between the two cities and wipe out the bitter feelings that have arisen in the past.

Directors of the Grand Haven chamber have passed a resolution calling for a survey of the airport. Mayor Bruno Peter will take the matter before the city commission.

Plans Exposition Of Odd Things as 1929 Fair Feature

After 30 years of "collecting," S. V. R. Simmons of Grand Rapids will hold public exhibition of his cherished articles for the first time at the West Michigan fair, August 26 to 30.

Most other fanciers collect one thing only. Simmons has made collections of stamps, old prints, facsimile signatures, geological specimens, Indian relics, old deeds, badges and banners from the days when American politics was a matter of speeches, banners and bonfires, pottery, shells, coins and other objects of interest.

It almost would be easier to say what Simmons has not collected than to enumerate what he has gathered together.

He has more than 200,000 stamps. Not all of them are postage stamps. Many of them are revenue stamps and some are legal stamps.

His prints, largely of an historical nature, give a consecutive history of the United States from Revolutionary times to the present. He has a collection of fashion plates featuring those from Godey's Lady's Book and Peterson's magazine, but also showing plates of the early days of the present century that offer quite as startling a contrast to present day modes.

There also is a collection of photographs beginning with the earliest tints and ending with motion picture stills that is in itself a history of photography.

A majority of the individual items in the various collections are of no great monetary value, though there are, of course, certain coins and stamps and bits of china that have great intrinsic value. The real value and interest of all of his exhibits is as collections—complete showings of various things over a long period of time, marking changes and improvements.

Officials of P. M. Visit Ludington

Many improvements at Ludington and other points in Michigan are expected to come to head as a result of the inspection tour being made by President John J. Bernet of the Pere Marquette Railway Co. A new ferry slip and extensive track improvements are planned for Ludington, but have been under consideration nearly three months.

President Bernet viewed the site of the proposed slip and inspected the yards for the first time. Total cost of improvement is expected to be $500,000. L. C. Probert, vice president of the Pere Marquette, declared Ludington has possibilities for great industrial development due to its water and rail facilities.

Allegan Advertises Self to Aviators

Through the efforts of Oscar Briggs, post, No. 89, American Legion, the word Allegan in letters 9x12 feet in dimension has been painted on the roof of the grandstand, the main building at the fairgrounds. The lettering was executed by Bill Pehlike, Allegan sign artist, and Ralph LeBlanc, post commander. A large arrow also has been painted on the roof, pointing to the north, with a letter N at the base. Through this effort the legion will get a certificate from Charles A. Lindbergh.

INSTITUTIONS OF MICHIGAN WERE CUT $2,337,260

Appropriations totaling $2,337,260, made by the 1927 legislature for state institutions, were not met by the administrative board during the last two fiscal years because of insufficient funds, according to a compilation completed by William G. Stevenson, head of the state accounting division. The appropriations were nullified July 1, when the state government entered a new biennium.

All the sums which were not paid, were not spread upon the tax rolls by the lawmakers. They were made without tax clauses in the hope that fees and other revenue received by the state would create a surplus that could be used by the administrative board for the purpose authorized.

But no such surplus existed. In fact a deficit of more than $2,000,000 existed in the general fund at the close of the fiscal period.

Stevenson's compilation showed that a large share of the non-tax clause appropriations were for the various state institutions which are in such a deplorable condition that the legislature authorized $22,000,000 for their rehabilitation. Little or no work was done during the last two years to relieve the situation because of the state's financial condition.

The largest appropriation, that was not paid, was for the state public school at Coldwater, an institution which will benefit by the rehabilitation program. Expenditure of $411,000 on improvements for the school was authorized, but could not be met. This money was to be used for five new cottages and new heating and power plants. These needs and others will be recognized by the administrative board during the present year.

The insane hospitals, which are so congested that persons committed by the courts are being turned away, were to receive $325,000 more than they were allowed. However, these institutions are the principal beneficiaries in the new building program.

The amounts of other non-tax clause appropriations which were not received are Michigan Home and Training school, $135,000; University of Michigan heating and power plant, $100,000; School for the Blind, $50,000; equipment for Michigan State college, $213,000; Michigan Farm colony, $55,000; Boys' Vocational school, $230,000; Girls' Training school, $75,000; and Michigan Soldiers' home, $150,000.

A total of $220,000 was appropriated for armories at Grand Rapids, Kalamazoo, Ionia, St. Johns, Belding and Alma. These like the others that were not paid did not include a tax clause.

Lawsuit Decides Title To 12 Inches of Land

After two hours deliberation a circuit court jury returned a verdict involving the right to 12 inches of land and thereby ended a case which had been argued for two days.

John Johnson and his wife acquired title as against his neighbor, Anna Wajciechowski, and settled a dispute which began in a backyard quarrel.

Mosier, Allegan, is president; Charles E. Bassett, Fennville, vice president; Swan M. Sequist, Allegan, secretary; A. Z. Hurteau, Allegan, treasurer.

The prospects for a big days and night fair as well as fast and excellent races on one of the best half-mile tracks in Michigan are very promising.

Sequist, Allegan, concessions, and M. H. Mutchler, Allegan, chief of police.

The leading free attraction is Greer's society circus and rodeo performers. There will be a chariot race at night and fireworks. Art Davis, aviator, will do the delayed parachute drop.

May Establish Chain Of State Airports

A chain of state-owned airports may be established by the new state board of aeronautics, it was indicated at the board's first meeting held in Lansing.

The meeting was called solely to complete organization of the board and the only business transacted was election of William B. Mayo, chief engineer of the Ford Motor Company, chairman.

A proposal by Governor Fred W. Green that the board assume operation of the municipal airport of Lansing, which is on state property, brought to light the fact that all members of the new board favor construction of several state-owned airports at strategic points.

Although the board members conducted their election, the law under which they were appointed does not become operative until August 29. Hence no official action can be taken until that date.

AUTO OUTLOOK BRIGHT FOR LAST SIX MONTHS

Healthy prosperity for the automotive industry during the balance of the year is anticipated by W. R. Tracey, vice president in charge of sales of the Oakland Motor Car company, who states that from a mid-year perspective the outlook for the next six months of 1929 promised a substantial gain over the same period last year.

From information supplied him by several hundred field representatives quartered in all sections of the United States, Mr. Tracey declared that conditions are generally more stabilized than in 1928, when a new high output record was set in the automobile industry, and that people everywhere seem content with the present order of things and confident that America's unprecedented prosperity will be maintained for an indefinite period.

"Coupled with this favorable psychological attitude, which means a 'buying attitude, are basic business barometers pointing the way to another record year," Mr. Tracey declared. "Savings deposits are at a record high; construction is forging ahead unabated; extensive highway construction programs are opening up new outlets for cars and adding to their utility; cattle, hogs and corn are bringing excellent prices; cotton faces a satisfactory year, and the farmer, particularly in view of recent favorable Congressional action, will absorb cars in greater volume than a year ago."

WILLIAMSTON PROVES EASY FOR PINCKNEY-MICHIGAMME

The Williamston Independents proved to be no match for the Pinckney-Michigamme team Sunday who romped away with an easy victory by a score of 15 to 0. Williamston was without the service of three of their star players who were playing with Howell but were confident that they were strong enough to beat Pinckney. Kinne held the local team to three runs the first three innings but was scored on six times in the 4th when Pinckney literally put the game on ice as it were. Moran held Williamston to three hits and not a single man reached third base on him. Pinckney gave him able support only making one error behind him.

Only five Williamston batters reached first safely. Every man on the Pinckney team hit safely one or more times; the Miller brothers getting three each.

Three base hits—Lee, C. Miller. Two base hits—Brown, H. Miller. Struck out by Moran 11, by Kinne 5. Double play—Lee to Brown. Umpires—Mike Roche and Levi Miller.

NOTES OF THE GAME

Kinne is considered a good pitcher. He held Potterville to 6 hits and lost 3 to 0. However he failed to puzzle Pinckney.

Don Swarthout played center field and made a good job of it, making two nice plays.

Roy Reason missed his train and failed to arrive on time to play left field for Pinckney. Hollis Miller replaced him and got 3 hits.

Pinckney expects to use practically the same lineup at Chelsea Sunday.

Gus Eck lost his first Inter-County League game Sunday, being defeated by Pontiac at Keego Harbor 5 to 2.

Mike Roche and Levi Miller, old time ball players officiated as umpires.

Dallas Cox has evidently been playing a great game for the Cadillac team, as he writes us that he has recently received a very flattering offer to join the House of David base ball team. However he was obliged to decline it as after several ineffectual attempts he was unable to grow whiskers.

Pinckney's next home game is August 13 with Harry German's Northville team.

ATTENTION SCHOOL DISTRICT VOTERS

Owing to the fact that some misunderstanding existed with reference to qualifications of voters at the recent annual school election, the following communication from the Department of Public Instruction is herewith submitted to the voters to guide them in future elections.

Your attention is particularly directed to the paragraph relating to the unmarried adults who are tax payers, and regarding whom some question was raised at the last election as to their eligibility to vote.

The paragraph immediately following the above should also be noted, in which it appears that certain married women are disqualified from voting.

Lansing, July 17, 1929
Mr. Ross I. Read,
Pres. Board of Education,
Pinckney, Michigan
Dear Mr. Read:

The qualifications of school electors are as follows:

1. Twenty-one years of age
2. Full citizenship
3. A resident of the district three months previous to election.
4. (a) A parent or guardian of a child of school age, five to nineteen inclusive.

or
(b) The owner of property, real or personal, in the district which is assessed for school taxes.

Anyone possessing qualifications 1, 2, 3, and 4 (a) may vote on the election of school officers but not on a direct tax or a bond issue.

Anyone possessing qualifications 1, 2, 3, and 4 (b) may vote on all questions including a direct tax of a bond issue.

Where a husband and wife own property jointly, which is assessed for school taxes, both may vote on all questions if they are otherwise qualified.

Purchasers of land on a contract, who pay taxes on the land and live thereon, may vote on all questions if otherwise qualified.

Members of a corporation or a stock company are not considered individual taxpayers.

Members of a partnership are individual taxpayers and may vote on all school questions, if otherwise qualified.

In the case of three adult children mentioned in your letter I will say that if they own any property in the district, real or personal, which is assessed for school taxes they have the legal right to vote on all school questions providing they have qualifications 1, 2, and 3 mentioned above.

When the property is owned by the husband and there is not a joint deed the wife has no voice on money matters pertaining to the school unless she owns property in her own name. If she is not a property owner in her own right or through joint deed, and if they have no children of school age in the family, the wife has no right to vote on any school questions.

If I have not answered the questions asked in your letter of July 12 to your satisfaction please write me again at once.

Very sincerely yours,
C. Lloyd Goodrich

CURRENT COMMENT

In looking over the dockets of the different County Courts in this section we are struck by the fact that many of the same cases appear on the docket time after time and it is nothing unusual for a case to run a year before it is brought to trial. This is especially true of damage cases. The postponements seem to work in favor of the big fellow here and the multitude of postponements exhaust the time, money and patience of the litigant and in the end he is forced to settle for a mere pittance. We have often wondered if there was any limit to the number of postponements and would it be possible for a case to drag on indefinitely like the celebrated one indifferently like the celebrated case of Jarndyce vs Jarndyce.

We see where a couple of fake eye doctors fleeced a farmer living near Charlotte out of $1,000 for a fake eye operation. After all the warnings printed about them they still seem able to find victims. If your eyes need attention go to a reputable eye doctor whose guarantee is worth something and don't be the victim of quacks.

Gov. Green went outside the ranks of politicians and appointed Fred Butzel, a Detroit lawyer, Justice to succeed Justice Fellows, deceased. The new justice has never been in politics but has been prominent in Detroit community and Jewish welfare work. He has also acted as attorney for the Scripps family, owners of The Detroit News. But there is probably no significance in this. Seth Pulver of Owosso, Judge Ira Jayne of Detroit and Gen. John P. Kirk of Ypsilanti were all endorsed for the appointment but failed to attain it.
