GAME STARTS AT 3:00 P. M.

NEW STATE HOSPITAL MAY BE LOCATED HERE

Options Taken on 1000 Acres of Land on Northwest Edge of Village. Site to be Decided on in Two Weeks.

Several weeks ago Supervisor Walter Mowers got in touch with the man who has been getting options on desirable sites for new state insane hospital and persuaded him to look this vicinity over. One thousand acres was desired of not too high priced land, suitable for good farming and containing a lake. It must also be connected with a railroad. A site just northwest of this village was selected as suitable as it had all of the above qualifications. The past two weeks have been spent in obtaining options on the desired site and they were all secured Thursday with one exception. The property owners who gave options for thirty days are: the Haze sisters, William Mercer, Mrs. Kovac, Julius Aschenbrener, Ross Hinchey, John Hartman, Will Shehan, John Martin, Wm. Ames, John Ludwig, Frank Mowers, Norman Reason, Frank Matthews, Frank Daniels, and Phillip Grossman. The options were taken by Charles Clark address General Motors Building, Detroit.

Some time ago it was decided to abandon the present location of the state insane asylum at Pontiac as it was too small and the land needed for expansion was priced too high. The legislature appropriated several millions of dollars for the construction of a new one. Options have been secured on a number of suitable sites and the state administrative board is to make its decision in two weeks. Holly, Northville, Ypsilanti and Linden are some of the places where options on suitable locations have been taken. The new asylum would have 3000 inmates and employ 1500 people. The village of Pinckney could not help being materially benefitted by the location of the new hospital here and all people in the village will be on the anxious seat until the location is definitely decided.

LAST HOME GAME SUNDAY

The Pinckney-Michagammé team will play her last home game scheduled next Sunday, August 25 when they meet Chelsea Independents at Pinckney. This team has a good record and it was only by a bit of luck Pinckney was able to defeat them at Chelsea several weeks ago. The locals had only a 3 run lead up to the 8th when they scored 3 more runs. Following this the local team meets Stockbridge at Stockbridge, Labor Day and probably West Point Park there.

ANNUAL LABOR DAY PICNIC

St. Joseph's Parish of Dexter will hold their annual Labor Day Picnic there Monday, Sept. 2 This is in the nature of a home coming as well. There will be two ball games that day. Dexter will meet Chelsea at 9:00 a. m. and Dad Gorman's Northville team at 4:00. A chicken pie dinner will be served at 11:00 and an interesting program. In the evening a dance will take place.

26 CATTLE KILLED BY TRAIN

A revolting tragedy occurred at Dexter Friday evening about 8:30 p. m. Robert Eck assisted by John Bell was driving about 60 head of cattle from the Detroit Edison Co's. farm to his own farm on the west side. As they were crossing the east Mich. Central crossing a freight train struck the herd killing 26 of them. Others were so badly injured that they had to be killed. The track was strewn with dead and mangled cattle for a considerable distance. One of the herd is said to have run all the way to the Boy Scout Camp, about a half a mile away with a broken leg. A Detroit rendering company sent a whole fleet of trucks out Saturday morning for the carcasses. The railroad has a electric warning at the crossing which Messrs. Eck and Bell claim was not ringing at the time they attempted to cross. The cattle belonged to Eck and the loss is estimated at $3,000.

PHILATHEA CLASS MEETS

The Philathea class met at the home of Mrs. Harry Lee at Lakeland Wednesday afternoon. The meeting was called to order by the president, Mrs. Bert Hicks and opened with a hymn, followed by prayer by the teacher, Miss Cella Fish.

In the absence of the secretary, Mrs. Jesse Henry, Mrs. Hendee acted. Miss Fish reported on sick and Mrs. Katherine Hoff on flowers sent. Mrs. M. T. Graves has charge of program and roll call which was answered by a story or song. Mrs. S. H. Carr received prize in a contest.

The class had as guests Mrs. H. M. Atto and children, Catherine, Jean and Junior of Detroit, Mrs. W. C. Wissel of Pittsburg, Pa., Mrs. Robert Boehm and children, Josephine and Louis of Detroit, Augusta Blair of Pontiac and Mrs. Louis Coyle of this place. A hot luck supper was served. Mrs. M. T. Graves will entertain the class in September. Mrs. Lee and Miss Viola Pettys are on the program committee.

DROWNS AT ORE LAKE

Glenn Maxwell, aged 25 years old of Detroit was drowned Sunday while swimming in Ore Lake, near Brighton. The body was recovered later in the day.

LAKELAND JUNIOR KING'S DAUGHTERS

The Junior Kings Daughter of Lakeland have been improving themselves for the purpose of serving, others in need by meeting twice a week under the capable instruction of Mrs. Daniel Noeker of American Red Cross in swimming and life saving.

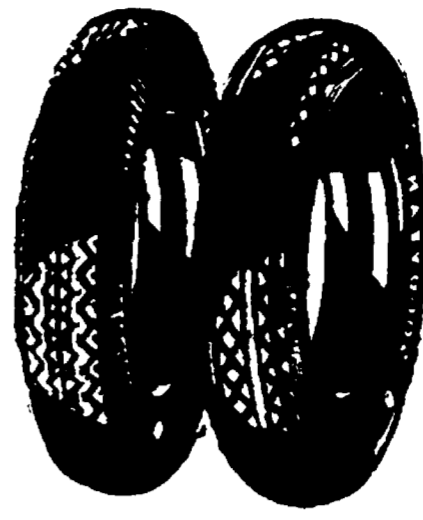

Last Friday Lora Burnett 11 years of age took the Junior test and passed. She received her emblem and certificate from the American Red Cross.

In a short time two other girls will be ready for their test.

These instructions are very valuable. Every man, woman, and child living in this summer resort region should be fitted to care for themselves in case of emergency as well as saving other lives.

DANCING AT PATTERSON LAKE

There will be a dance at Met Chalkers Dance Hall, Patterson Lake, every Saturday night. Good music and good time promised. Dances for both old and young. Refreshments. Bill $1.00

LAKELAND HAPPY HELPERS PICNIC

A happy day was spent at Rush Lake last Wednesday when about 27 Junior King's Daughters and friends met for a day of play.

The picnic was the outcome of the contest with Lora Burnett and Isabelle Nash as captains. Isabelle's team won by five points about $23 was realized by the Juniors through their efforts in the contest.

The day was spent in races, tug of war, boating and swimming at the close of the afternoon they set down to a bountiful supper which was enjoyed by all. They later departed for home tired but looking forward to another picnic next year.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Rattle and family were in Howell Monday evening.

THE QUEEN OF HEARTS

By SEABURY QUINN

"Good evening," Sturdevant greeted, "is Mlle. Sophie at home?"
"The fellow stared at us in bovine noncomprehension."
"I said," repeated Sturdevant, "is Mlle. Sophie at home?" He added a sentence in rumbling gutturals, as unintelligible to me as the gibberish of Chinese laundrymen.
"Nu," replied that individual, shaking his head negatively, but making no effort to take the card.
"Sturdevant sighed with vexation and thrust his hand into his trousers pocket. There came the clink of metal, and he held out three ten-dollar gold pieces cupped in his palm.
"Nu," repeated the servant, shaking his head more decisively than before.
"Sturdevant thrust the coins back in his pocket and took a step away from the door. A second later he turned suddenly, seizing me by the shoulder, spinning me half way round, thrusting his foot forward and tripping me at the same time.
"Look out, Loomis!" he called, and none too soon, for the bearded giant had drawn a heavy knife from his sleeve and hurled it at me. I heard the whir of its blade as it flew past my face, and its clatter as it struck harmlessly on the stone path.
"Grab him!" Sturdevant panted, launching himself through the doorway.
"I made a flying tackle at the fellow's legs; a second later the three of us were thrashing about the thickly carpeted hall, striking, gouging, scratching like enraged Tom cats, but uttering never a sound. Some subtle sixth sense seemed to warn me from outside, and Sturdevant and the burly porter fought in silence as though by mutual understanding.

"There, damn you!" Sturdevant swung his fist to the point of the fellow's jaw, "that settles you."
"It did. The man collapsed like an ox beneath the butcher's mallet, and lay sprawling, appallingly still, on the rich Turkey carpet of the hall.
"Lend me your handkerchief, Loomis," Sturdevant whispered, "we'll just tie this little fellow up in case he gets playful." He bent over the fallen adversary, trussing him up neatly with strips torn from my handkerchief and two of his. "Sorry," I said, "I made a bad break, offering him money," he muttered as he bound the man's wrists behind him. These Slavs are suspicious as pawnbrokers by nature, and the sight of that gold must have convinced him of our bad faith. "Come on, let's see what's here."
"We tiptoed through the wide archway leading to the drawing room. Save for the faint reflection of a street light coming through the window, the place was in perfect darkness. Dimly, we made out several pieces of massive mahogany furniture—a grand piano, its raised cover draped with a heavy silk scarf, a heavily upholstered sofa, a table containing a tray with coffee cups and cigarettes.
"Close behind Sturdevant, I crept into the dining room adjoining. Four wax candles, nearly spent, flickered ambiguously in tall, wrought-silver standards, revealing a table cleared for dessert. Two glasses partly filled with yellow wine, a bowl of hot-house grapes, two Bohemian porcelain dessert plates and a crumpled napkin were on the table. One of the high-straight-backed chairs was moved somewhat back from the table, as though swung back with sudden violence and not yet replaced.
"Sturdevant swept the room with a quick, stock-taking glance, then pointed suddenly to a far corner. I looked where he indicated and saw a heavy, three-paneled screen of black wood, picked out with mother-of-pearl. What did he mean? There was nothing unusual about the screen beyond the fact that it was an exceptionally fine piece of furniture. I looked again, and a shiver of excitement ran through me.
"Glistening faintly, where a vagrant gleam of candle-light found it, was the tip of a shoe—a man's patent leather dress shoe.
"S-s-s-h!" Sturdevant cut off my unspoken question, treating with catlike softness to the corner where the screen stood. He folded back a panel, stooped and straightened up, the body of a young man in his arms.
"Carefully he bore the young chap to the drawing room, laid him on the sofa and bent his head to his breast. A curt nod announced he had caught the rhythm of the boy's heart beats. Next instant he passed his fingers quickly over the unknown's sleek, brilliant hair.

"Blackjack," he announced laconically. "Lump like a goose egg on his occiput."
"He began massaging the man's wrists swiftly, stopping occasionally to strike him smartly on the cheeks with his open hand. After a minute the unconscious boy's eyelids began to flutter, his lips opened and he uttered a low moan.
"Who did it?" Sturdevant hissed, his white mustache less than an inch from the fellow's ear.
"Don't know—hit me from behind, the blighter—wouldn't fight like a man," the youngster muttered thickly. Then, fully awake, he sat forward. "Here, what's up?" he exclaimed. "Sophie! Sophie, where are you?"
"Sturdevant clapped a hand over the boy's lips. "Still, you young fool!" he warned. "D'ye want another crack on the head? What's your name?"
"The young man blinked at him. "What affair's that of yours?" he asked.
"Don't waste time," Sturdevant snapped. "I'm a government agent, if that'll satisfy you," he turned back the lapel of his waistcoat pocket, displaying his secret service badge—"now tell me who you are and what you were doing here when they banged you on the head. Make it short, and don't raise your voice."
"The youth looked from one to the other of us. "I'm Colin MacCampbell," he replied, "and I came here to visit Miss Urbanokoff—Sophie. Last week I asked her to marry me. She put me off; I came for my answer tonight. We'd had dinner, and I think she was going to say yes, when someone—I think it was that damned brute of a butler—hit me an awful bash on the head. That's all I know, except Sophie's gone."
"Where did you meet Miss Urbanokoff, and how long have you known her?" Sturdevant demanded.
"Believe me, I'm not asking from idle curiosity," he hastened to explain, as MacCampbell shot him a look of resentment.
"I met her on the France coming over two months ago," the young man answered. "We were both sailing from Paris. I was scheduled to visit my brother in Manitoba, but—hang it all, man!—I was desperately in love with her, and I've stayed on in New York. I've seen her every chance I had, and I think she got to care for me, too; but lately she's been strange—distant. Half the time she'd refuse me permission to call, and several times she's broken engagements with me. I'd come here by her invitation, and that damned shaggy brute of a butler would tell me she was out."
"Sturdevant heard him in silence, plucking at his neatly trimmed white beard perplexedly.
"Damned if I quite know what we're going to do with you, Mr. Colin MacCampbell," he said. "I suppose we'll have to take you along with us; it won't be safe to leave you wandering around; you're apt to get your head caught in completely if we do."
"Sir Colin MacCampbell," the young man corrected him. "MacCampbell of Dunwoodie."
"Knight or baronet?" Sturdevant asked.
"Baronet."
"Um. And you want to marry Mlle. Sophie?"
"Well, that simplifies matters considerably," Sturdevant commented. "I think you'll have a chance to do some fighting for your princess, young man."
"Princess?" the other echoed. "She's no princess. She's a queen—the Queen of Hearts!"
"Why, so she is," Sturdevant agreed laughingly, "and we're three aces. Aces always did take queens. Eh, Loomis?"
"Right-o," I agreed as we crept through the hall and up the broad stairs.
"As we reached the first landing the hum of a number of voices speaking in concert reached us. By the time we were in the upper hall, we perceived the talk was going on in a front room. We stole down the passage, pausing just outside the zone of light shining through an arched doorway.
"Inside the room the occupants were displayed like characters in a play seen through a theater's proscenium arch. Beside a polished table stood the girl Sturdevant and I sought, lovelier, if possible, than her photograph. Slim and straight as a hazel wand she stood in her simple evening frock of white and silver, a single strand of pearls encircling her soft throat. She was older than her pictured image, and lines of trouble, the etchings of war and revolution, showed in the smooth skin of her face. Three men in evening dress faced her across the room.
"But, messieurs," she was saying, "I do not want that I should go back to Goldovia. My peoples, they would govern themselves from out their own ranks; they have renounced my house as their governors and me as their princess."
"We heard MacCampbell catch his breath sharply, as the significance of the words sank in. Never had it entered his British mind that the girl of his dreams might be a princess of the blood royal.
"Bah! one of the men shot back. "The people—bah! They are dogs, to be governed with the lash. What do they know of government—of statecraft?"
"Republicans are the dreams of fools, the uplifting of the masses, who exist of right only to serve their betters. Look at this America. This is a republic—a republic of fools. After a triumphant war of conquest what do they do? They renounce the victors' spoils; they disclaim all share in the conquered territory."
"It is the will of God," another of the trio added, "that the people be governed by their divinely appointed rulers."
"But the people themselves are their divinely appointed rulers in a republic," the girl answered. "Rulers exist for their people, not people for their rulers, Vladimir. They have said they want no crown, and I want no crown. I have found freedom and love away from my throne. Vladimir, leave my people to enjoy their freedom and me to enjoy my love."

"Bravo!" whispered MacCampbell in my ear.
"The government totters," replied the man addressed as Vladimir. "The red flame of bolshevism already glows against the horizon. Only the return of the monarchy can save our native land. The people are weak; the monarchy would be strong. You, yourself, have said rulers exist for their people, Highness. Forget this personal love, remember your suffering people and come save them, our princess. As he finished speaking, he and his two companions sank to their knees before her.
"The girl wavered, agony of love denied struggling for mastery over the call of spurious duty in her face. "I think it's time we took a hand," Sturdevant whispered. "There being but three of them and three of us, and our cause being just—" he quoted.
"Right-o, Rath-thur!" Sir Colin agreed enthusiastically, and leaping through the archway into the room.
"Co-leen!" the girl cried, her eyes lighting, then, "O-o-o-h!" Vladimir, springing to his feet, cut whipped out a pistol and aimed it at MacCampbell's head.
"Quick as a panther, Sturdevant twisted the ivory handle of his walking stick, jerked it loose from the wood and bared the sword blade concealed within the cane. With the speed of a soldier and the precision of a surgeon he lunged, driving the keen steel through Vladimir's coat and shirt, slitting the muscles of his forearm. The pistol clattered to the floor and Sturdevant kicked it into a corner.
"Hands up!" he roared, flinging away his sword cane and yanking out a pair of automatic pistols, seemingly in a single gesture.
"Reach in my hip pockets, Loomis," he directed, "and get out the handcuffs. Lock these birds together. MacCampbell's too busy to be much help."
"Indeed, he was. As I snapped the manacles over the royalist conspirators' wrists, I caught a tail-eye picture of Sir Colin MacCampbell, Bart., MacCampbell of Dunwoodie—with her Serene Highness, the Princess Sophie of Goldovia that was, clasped in his arms. And the princess was crying.
"Sturdevant cut away Vladimir's coat sleeve and bound up his wound with the real skill of an old campaigner. Then he addressed his prisoners: "Sorry I can't offer you gentlemen better accommodations during a station house cell tonight," he apologized. "Tomorrow morning, bright and early, we'll hunt up a United States commissioner and get you a hearing. Then we can put you up at Ellis Island until your ship sails."
"Ship?" echoed Vladimir.
"Ship? Yes," Sturdevant answered. "You've been conspiring against a friendly government, you know, so we'll just have you deported to the country of your origin. Several people in the republic of Goldovia will be delighted to welcome you home, I'm sure. Count Vladimir."
"Vladimir's face paled as Sturdevant finished, but he recovered his poise instantly. "C'est la guerre," he remarked fatalistically. He bowed politely. "Adieu vous, Monsieur."
"Not this time," Sturdevant answered. "You go first, gentlemen."
"The next evening Sturdevant and I stood in the private office of the Goldovian ambassador.
"Your Excellency," Sturdevant said frigidly, "I have the honor to report that pursuant to instructions from my government I proceeded to New York, located certain conspirators against the peace and government of the Republic of Goldovia, and arrested them. They are now lodged at the government immigration station at Ellis Island, awaiting deportation to Goldovia."
"An' ze woman?" the ambassador asked eagerly. "What of her? Zere can be no peace for my country while Princess Sophie is alive."
"Sturdevant bowed again, and laid a packet of papers on the ambassador's desk.
"Her Serene Highness, the Princess Sophie of Goldovia, is no more," he announced. "She is now Lady Sophie MacCampbell, wife of Captain Sir Colin MacCampbell, Laird of Dunwoodie. These documents—" he spread the formidable, red-sealed papers open before the ambassador's bulging eyes—"are, first, her formal abdication of all right to the Goldovian throne for herself, her heirs and successors, and second, the certified copy of her marriage to Sir Colin."
"The ambassador's little eyes snapped with fury. "An' you tell me zis?" he almost shrieked. "Tell you we must capture zat woman and shoot her. Zis marriage—bah! It amounts to nozing. I well have it break!"
"Sturdevant smiled derisively. "Yes?" he mocked. "Behind that marriage stand the laws of the United States of America and the British Empire. I fear, Mr. Ambassador, that the task of overcoming those obstacles will tax the power even of so mighty a country as the Republic of Goldovia."
"The ambassador gasped.
"I have sir, the honor to wish you a very good evening," said Sturdevant. (The End)

AUTOMATIC ELECTRIC REFRIGERATION

So simple that it may literally be installed and forgotten, an electric refrigerator requires no attention other than an occasional defrosting. It does its work noiselessly, using very little current. It may be moved as readily as a piece of furniture. There is no plumbing necessary, no holes to be bored in the kitchen floor. The refrigerator is simply placed in the most desirable location and plugged into the nearest electric outlet.

THE

Outdoor advertising today has attained a new sphere of usefulness. Not only does the man on the ground read as he runs, but now even the aviator may peruse as he pilots.

To reach travelers in both elements at the same time, the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) has erected the first air-earth bulletin board near Detroit, Michigan. The unusual feature of the sign is that it is erected at a 45 degree angle. This angle makes it readable from both air and earth without distortion. The location is near the Ford airport, below a heavily traveled airway, and close to a main concrete highway and electric car line.

From the road the sign presents an odd appearance which immediately attracts attention. The motorist, perhaps believing that the sign has been partly blown over to this 45 degree angle by the wind, is quickly enlightened by the legend across the bottom which reads: "This is the first bulletin ever erected advertising to people who travel by air."

The erection of this sign is in line with the progressive aviation policy of the Standard Oil Company (Indiana). First to recognize the value of air transportation for industrial purposes by buying an airplane of its own, this company is again first to recognize its importance by building a bulletin board which may be read from the air. The constantly increasing number of air travelers forms a considerable reading public and a large potential market which justifies the use of air advertising. This reading public of the sky, the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) has recognized, and will continue to recognize from time to time by other air-earth bulletins placed at strategic locations.

SCHOOL DAYS ARE COMING

Vacation has just properly begun, in the minds of school youngsters, and it is no time to be thinking of school books and lessons. Yet with August already well spent, their grown-up parents are aware that summer vacation has only a few more days to run and that before long daughter and son will again be traveling the familiar pathways to school.

Thoughtful parents, planning the clothes and school supplies that will be required during the coming year, should also consider the physical needs of their children. It is not enough to send a child to school well fed, well dressed and equipped with a set of books. A healthy body is also essential, for youthful minds cannot conceivably receive full benefit from school room instruction when the body or any of its parts are incapacitated. Indeed, forced attendance at school in the presence of physical defects may result in lifelong injury.

Usually, when a child falls behind in his classes he is termed dullard, much as experience has shown that a bodily ailment, rather than mental inability, is often the actual difficulty. Impaired eyesight, to single out one common physical defect, may be at fault. Poor vision cannot always be discovered by depending upon the child to complain. A child with faulty eyes has no way of knowing that other boys and girls are different. Theodore Roosevelt was a sizeable lad before he discovered that objects easily seen by his schoolmates were only blurs to him. Every child of school age should have a very careful vision test. Any Michigan school that does not have a chart for testing vision may secure one free of charge by notifying the Michigan Tuberculosis Association, Lansing.

Poor hearing is another ailment that may be responsible for failure in school work. Hard hearing children, repeating failed work in the next class, are often placed at the back of the school room because they are bigger than the younger children. The probability that they will fail again increases in ratio as they are moved away from the teacher's desk. Similarly, a number of other physical faults may be responsible for under-par school work.

STATE OF MICHIGAN
The Circuit Court for the County of Livingston in Chancery

Frank H. Durfee and Mary A. Durfee, Plaintiffs, vs.
Job D. Sickels, Francis Crawford, Amasa D. Kneeland, Dewitt C. Kneeland, Miranda Dolph and their unknown heirs, devisees, legatees and assigns, and the unknown wives of Ezra J. Mundy, John B. Kneeland, Aaron S. Robson, and J. Durfee Sickels, Defendants.

Suit pending in the Circuit Court for the County of Livingston in Chancery at Howell, Michigan, on the 8th day of August 1929.

It appearing from the sworn bill of complaint as filed in said cause, that the plaintiffs have not been able after diligent search and inquiry to ascertain whether the said defendants are alive or dead, or where they may reside or if they have any personal representatives or heirs living, or where they or any of them may reside, or whether the title, interest, claim, lien or possible right of these defendants have been assigned to any other person or persons, or whether such title, interest, claim, lien or possible right has been disposed of by will by the said defendants.

And it further appearing that the plaintiffs do not know and have been unable after diligent search and inquiry to ascertain the names of the persons who are included as defendants without being named.

Upon motion, therefore, of Don W. VanWinkle and Willis L. Lyons, attorneys for Plaintiffs it is ordered that the above named defendants and their unknown heirs, devisees, legatees and assigns cause their appearance to be entered herein within three months from the date hereof and that in default thereof said bill will be taken as confessed by said defendants and each and all of them.

It is further ordered that the plaintiffs cause this order to be published within forty days in the Pinckney Dispatch, a newspaper printed, published and circulating in said County, once in each week for at least six successive weeks.

A true copy.

MAIL BOX THEFTS AND CHECK FORGERS

American Bankers Association in Nationwide Warning Exposes Methods and Gives Rules to Combat Them.

NEW YORK—Active operations in many cities of mail box thieves, who open bank communications to customers, containing details of their accounts and cancelled checks showing their banking signatures, and use this material in perpetrating check forgeries, have led the American Bankers Association to issue a nationwide warning to its members with instructions for combating this form of crime. The warning as sent out by James E. Baum in charge of the association's Protective Department says:

"Heavy losses are being sustained through cancelled vouchers and statements stolen from the mail boxes of bank depositors in apartment and office buildings, thus divulging the depositors' balances and supplying models for forged checks. As a step to put customers on guard against these methods, banks are urged to instruct every depositor to whom they mail statements of deposit accounts on the last business day of each month to notify them promptly if such statements are not received by the close of the next day.

"Also banks should educate depositors to safeguard blank checks and cancelled vouchers as they would money. Such paper stolen by forgers soon puts real money in their hands. If all blank checks and cancelled vouchers were securely kept in safes instead of filing cabinets or desks, the check crooks would be denied their chief stock in trade, namely, genuine blank checks and signatures. Warnings to depositors against leaving blank or cancelled checks accessible to sneak thieves or burglars should be sent out at once.

"Estimates broadcast by surety companies indicate that individuals, merchants, hotels and others outside of banking are shouldering more than 99 per cent of the total amount of forgery losses. The bulk of forgery loss on checks is sustained by those who are willing to risk accepting them without reliable proof of identity or title of the presenter.

"Years ago the Protective Department of the American Bankers Association adopted the slogan, 'Strangers are not always crooks, but crooks are usually strangers.' If those outside of banking could be prevailed upon to observe this rule and think about it when considering accepting a check for their merchandise or services, for which they are also asked to give a substantial sum in cash in change, one of the biggest aids to the forgery business would be denied the crooks."

Excommunication Only Way

When Nathaniel Parker Willis wished to withdraw from membership in the Park Street Congregational church in Boston he found there was no place in the ecclesiastical scheme for honorable withdrawal, and so "by the authority of the Lord Jesus Christ," he was "excommunicated from this church," writes Granville Hicks in the American Mercury.

His attempted withdrawal was not a result of disagreement with church doctrine, but of rebellion against church discipline; he liked to go to the theater and he found church attendance a bore.

Several years later he wrote to his fiancée: "I should never have wished to marry you if you had not been religious, for I have confidence in no woman who is not so."

41 Years' Experience behind each DUNLOP

WHEN you buy Dunlop Tires you buy all the world's greatest tire-building experience can give you! Dunlop founded the pneumatic tire industry—more than 41 years ago.

Dunlop has pioneered many major tire improvements. Dunlop was first to develop the straight-side tire—first to own its own rubber plantations—first to weave all its own requirements of cord fabric. Dunlop Tires are better—so much better they will stand even severe abuse.

DUNLOP

With so vast an investment to protect, it is only natural that Dunlop should take extra care in building tires. Special long-staple cotton all the way from Egypt... woven in Dunlop's own mills into special "cable twist" cord fabric... resilient, enduring tread rubber, the product of the toughest compound known... make Dunlops so sturdy that they can stand the most punishing treatment. No matter how you use your car... over concrete highways or thru the dirt roads of back country, Dunlops stand the part. Come in and look at Dunlop Tires... see their extra care for you.

HARVARD MEN LEAD IN U. OF M. FACULTY

The University of Michigan's faculty boasts of more men who earned degrees at Harvard than at any other school, with the exception of Michigan itself, according to figures compiled by Dr. Frank E. Robbins, president's assistant.

More than 100 men, starting with those holding the rank of instructor and continuing on through deans of schools and colleges, are listed. They held a total of 724 bachelor's degrees and 714 degrees earned in graduate work. The University of Michigan conferred 268 of these bachelors' degrees and 348 higher degrees, and Harvard 88 bachelors' degrees and 74 graduate degrees. Eighty-five men reported having taken some work at Harvard.

Other schools ranked as follows, with the bachelors' degrees being listed first and the graduate degrees next: Columbia, 13 and 31; Chicago, 11 and 25; Minnesota, 13 and 10; Illinois, 10 and 16; Wisconsin, 16 and 13. Abdon led the long list of colleges, 10 men reporting that they had earned their bachelors' degrees there and one a higher degree.

Class of 1923, Middleville High; Keeps Up Custom

Members of the class of 1923 of Middleville High school held their annual reunion breakfast at Hubbard's hills, the first Sunday in August. Not an anniversary has passed uncelebrated and the date always is the first Sunday in August.

An informal program of singing and reminiscing is the order of the day.

The class roll is: Mrs. Myrtle VanderMolen Getty, Miss Lorraine Palmer, William Cridler and Glenn Dean, Middleville; Mrs. Dorothy Taylor Brog, Mrs. Ruth Carter Pierce, Henry TenHarkel and Decran Serjan, Grand Rapids; Mrs. Maud Bennett Steeby, Wayland; Mrs. Edna Bender Miller, Caledonia; Mrs. Margaret Parker Felsnaugh, Hastings; Miss Mary Poland, Mt. Clemens; Miss Lucretia Simpson, Detroit; Miss Esther Thaler, Leighton; Mrs. Helen Potts England, Delton, and Burdette Benaway, Chicago. Benaway never has missed a reunion.

Michigan Enrollment For C. M. T. C. Leads U. S.

After an examination of reports on C. M. T. C. enrollment, Lieut. Col. R. V. Venable, in charge of the Grand Rapids district, stated that the sixth corps area is leading the entire country Michigan, with a quota of 1,750, has sent 1,866 men to camps. The enrollment from Kent county was 111, or 16 more than the quota, but the Grand Rapids district sent only 247 out of a 290 quota.

U. of M. Serving Detroit

C. A. Fisher, assistant director of the University of Michigan extension division, announces the opening of a summer office in Detroit at 2326 Woodward avenue. The office is equipped to give full information to professional, business and other people who desire information concerning the university's extension courses. It is not generally known that the University of Michigan offers class work in the city of Detroit. It is true, however, that 36 professors from the university will come into Detroit next fall to teach classes in various subjects. Some of the subjects to be offered by men on the regular staff of the university are: Anthropology, business law, decorative design, adolescent psychology, vocational guidance, engineering, modern history, journalism and contemporary prose.

The One Minute Pulpit

I cried with my whole heart; hear me, O Lord: I will keep Thy statutes. I cried unto Thee; save me, and I shall keep Thy testimonies.—Psalm xxix, 145, 146.

Poems That Live

SONG

My silks and fine array,
My smiles and languished air,
By love are driven away;
And mournful lean despair
Brings me yew to deck my grave:
Such end true lovers have.

His face is fair as heaven
When springing buds unfold:
O why to him wasn't given,
Whose heart is wintry cold?
His breast is Love's all-worshiped tomb,
Where all Love's pilgrims come.

Bring me an ax and spade,
Bring me a winding-sheet;
When I my grave have made,
Let winds and tempest beat:
Then down I'll lie, as cold as clay:
True love doth pass away!
—William Blake (1757-1827)

Sweater Has Place On and Off Lines

By LUCY CLAIRE

Fashion Expert for Central Press

Golf, tennis and horseback riding are the three active sports that call for decidedly sports cut clothes, unless we include aviation. The golfer or the tennis player may show the flair for the flare in a circular or pleated skirt, but frills, ruffles or jabots have no place on the fairway, on horseback or when swinging a racket.

The sleeveless tennis frock, with its colorful short jacket, and the golf skirt with its jumper or sweater, may be worn with all propriety off the court or links, and both are really quite necessary in the vacation wardrobe, even to those who never swing a golf club or a tennis racket.

But though it does not take to frills, jabots and fancy collars, the sweater has become far removed from its humble ancestor of a few years ago. The sweater at the left, for instance, is of rabbit's hair and silk in an angora effect. The belt and trimming on the scarf and sleeves are of flat crepe in a contrasting color. It is very charming with a skirt of silk crepe with pleats well stitched down at the top.

motif trim in a contrasting color, which gives an up-in-the-front effect to the waistline, and is repeated at neck and sleeves. In the sweater just below we find the nautical theme exploited. This model is ambitious in that it portrays a sailboat in applique on a silk embroidered sea, and gives a further nautical touch in the anchor finished neckline. The bandings and anchor are in red, while the sailboat is white and the sweater blue.

The separate skirt shown is ideal for sportswear with the tuck-in blouse. The opening arranged to achieve width in the effect of an inverted pleat at the front. The hip yoke has long ends, one of which passes through the other at the front, and both of which are buttoned at the sides slightly to the back on the yoke.

Work Is Started on Adrian Gymnasium

Construction work on the new Adrian college gymnasium has been started and college officials hope to have the basketball floor ready for the first home game on December 20.

Only the main portion of the structure, 115 by 122 feet, will be finished at this time and as funds become available the building will be completed with one for offices and another for an auditorium. The basement will be finished with lockers and showers for use this season. Contractors have already laid out the site.

Don't for Bathers

Swimming is considered one of the most healthful of sports, yet many lives are lost each year because bathers do not always observe the common sense rules of safety. So if you would avert trouble while swimming or bathing observe these safety precautions:

Don't swim soon after eating, wait at least two hours.

Don't go in the water when you are overheated.

Don't dive into water of unknown depth.

Don't venture into deep water alone.

Don't cry for help as a joke.

Don't go bathing if not well.

Learn how to revive a drowned person—you may save a life some day.

Irritated husband to wife driving a nail: "How do you expect to drive a nail in the wall with a clothes brush? For goodness sakes, use your head."

BINA WEST NAMED TO WELFARE GROUP

Mrs. Bina West Miller, Republican national committee woman from Michigan, has been offered and has accepted an appointment as one of the two Michigan members of the planning committee, which will prepare for the child welfare conference to be called by President Hoover some time within a year. The other Michigan representative is Frank Cody, superintendent of schools, Detroit.

Style Whimsies

A new idea in necklaces consists of as many as 3,000 jeweled beads. The more fashionable necklaces consist of opal beads threaded on silk about 36 inches long, and as many as twenty rows may be used for the complete necklace. Next to opals, small jade beads or others of lapis lazuli are the most fashionable.

A number of the tulle and lace evening frocks of Nicole Groult, Paris, are accompanied by three-quarter length coats of self-fabric and by another of velvet, completing the ensemble.

Just Average

Born Londoner (to London Scot): "Well, if Aberdeenshire is all you say it is, Mr. McGregor, why didn't you stay there?"

"I was not thoct to be of average intellect up there; but I've done vers weel down here!"—Ex.

The World and All

By CHARLES B. DRISCOLL

SEEKING HAPPINESS

It is interesting to see people seeking happiness. I know dozens of men and women who are constantly on the hunt, like bloodhounds on a cold trail.

Many of them have never picked up anything resembling the true scent. Many of them are suffering from the commonest of all delusions about happiness—that it is to be had by the possession of much money, much property, or a conspicuous place in the crowd.

This, of course, is basically unsound. Anyone whose philosophy of life is so ill-formed as to admit of such hypothesis, is destined to fail in his search.

You, see them, worried, strained, eager, annoyed. Just around the corner, they believe, happiness may be found. Just a little more money. Another doubling of income. Another car or house or farm or factory, and they will have happiness within their grasp.

Well, I can't imagine a more futile program than that. Observation and experience of all the ages is disregarded by those who thus think to find happiness.

I can hear the mental comment of the type of seeker I have been writing about, when he has read thus far. "Good," he says. "Here's another fool who doesn't want to make money. Let him starve and be happy, if that's what he wants! I wish more millions were like him. It would be so much easier for me to grab the dough."

Wrong again, Mr. Seeker. I cast no aspersions upon money. I wish I had a great deal more of it than I now have, and I intend to get as much of it as I can get without depriving myself of anything that is more valuable than money.

It would contribute to my happiness to know that my children would be secure in the possession of means to be comfortable after my death.

But do not deceive yourself about "grabbing the dough." That interesting exercise will never make anyone happy. Happiness is an altogether different kind of business than you conceive it to be, if you think it is all related to the possession of cartloads of coin and parcels of realty.

Just as well try to catch a bluebird by putting salt on his tail as try to capture happiness with dollars.

What is required for happiness? Of course there is no universal formula.

But there must be love. There must be calmness of spirit. With these two factors in hand, you will not worry about the rest.

Living and Loving

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

TOO OFTEN WE THINK THAT WE ARE ABUSED INSTEAD OF BLESSED

By Virginia Lee
"It is not modern thought that troubles me," says some one, "but modern want of thought."

Very true. And it's not at all a modern ailment. It's as old as men and women. How often do we excuse ourselves by the words, "I don't think."

Or maybe we do think and we think thoughts that don't help. We think we're abused instead of blessed. We think about the mean traits of those with whom we are associated, not of their good points.

A girl of 21 writes me how unhappy she is at home. Her mother continually finds fault with her, while her older sister does as she pleases. She doesn't sign any name to her letter, but she will recognize it as hers, I am sure.

You're of age, so why not leave home for a time and try being on your own if it possibly can be done? Nothing so gives one the proper perspective on home conditions than living among strangers for awhile. Your mother may be able to appreciate you more if she has to do without you for awhile and you may miss the home atmosphere so much you will be less likely to think you are being discriminated against. It's a great pity when a mother allows one child more privileges than another, making one the goat, so to speak. And in these days of independence no girl has to put up with treatment she thinks is cruel. As to the blame, I would not know where to place it without seeing you in your home and observing your actions and those of your mother.

B. P.: According to doctor's weight chart you should weigh 132 pounds, so you are not overweight. In respect to the young man who is to visit you soon, I will give you the advice one young girl I know gave another whose lover did not come to the point: "Get him in the moonlight, old kid, get him in the moonlight!" And don't be too cold. Give him a chance.

With the Women of Today

By Lillian Campbell

Mrs. Bernice Blackwood, Chicago, will be the keynoter at the convention of the Women's Advertising Clubs of the World to be held in Berlin. She has been chosen to place in nomination for the next president the name of Miss Florence Dart, president of the Philadelphia Women's Advertising club.

Mrs. Blackwood is a former president of the world organization of advertising women. She is secretary of the Advertising Specialty association of Chicago.

While abroad Mrs. Blackwood plans to spend some time in England, France, Germany and the seat of the League of Nations at Geneva, Switzerland. She wants to study the proposed changes in the Gregorian calendar. She states that she has found no real demand on the part of the American public for a thirteen-month calendar, but wants to find out how the leading European peoples feel on the subject.

The Women's Advertising Clubs of the World convention is coincident with that of the International Advertising association.

Plan Clean-up of Chicago

Members of the Women's Chicago Beautiful association have launched a drive of six months' duration to clean up the city before the 1933 world's fair. The members of the association plan to divide the city into districts, headed by women interested in civic affairs, and ask them to appoint their own subcommittees to see property owners, renting agents and tenants to prepare for the exposition. Mrs. Henry W. Hardy is in charge of the organization activities. Mrs. L. V. Rice is chairman of the drive committee.

Child Marriage Opposed by Women
Opposition to child marriage in India is coming from India's own women leaders, according to Miss Margaret Wilson, who is back in the United States after a number of years in Y. W. C. A. work in India. "Reforms are sweeping the country," Miss Wilson declares. "She realizes that she must have more mature mothers of the race; that as a nation she is weaker because of premature motherhood among her women."

STATE MAIL POUNDRAGE HEAVY

Foundage reports of mail carried by planes of the Thompson Aeronautical Corporation in Michigan for the fiscal year ending July 17 shows a total of 154,203 pounds, Charles A. Rheinstrom, general traffic manager for T. A. C., has announced.

"The total amount of air mail carried in Michigan alone last year was over four times that carried by air mail planes in Great Britain," Rheinstrom reported. "British mail planes," he continued, "transported only 37,000 pounds last year."

Outside of Detroit the city sending the greatest amount of air mail for the year was Lansing with 19,135 pounds. Other cities in the order of volume of air mail sent follow: Kalamazoo, 12,932; Grand Rapids, 5,667; South Bend, Ind., 5,019; Bay City, 4,958; Muskegon, 4,914; Saginaw, 4,455; Jackson, 4,038; Pontiac, 4,019; Battle Creek, 3,379; Ann Arbor, 2,633; Flint, 1,523, and Dearborn, 490. The poundage carried out of Detroit was 30,365.

Oil Well Tax Mounts

The 2 per cent tax at the mouth of the well on gas and oil produced in Michigan, as fixed by the last legislature, is now yielding upwards of $10,000 a month. M. B. McPherson of the State Tax Commission, made known in announcing that the collections for June amounted to $8,702.37.

Under the law, the tax is collected by the state tax commission, and is turned over to the auditor general, who places two-fifths in the general fund of the state, and returns two-fifths to the township and one-fifth to the county in which the well is located.

Thousands to See Grade Crossing 'Accident'

Thousands of motorists who visit the West Michigan Fair at Grand Rapids this year, August 26 to 30, will witness all the thrills and horrors of a grade crossing accident without any of the real dangers. They will see a real locomotive on a real railway track collide with a perfectly genuine motor car filled with living passengers.

The spectacle is known as the Grade Crossing Accident and is being put on by J. C. Connolly of Des Moines, Ia., who originated the attraction and who personally supervises the setting up of the railway in the infield in front of the grandstand, and the handling of the locomotive and motor cars used in this extraordinary spectacle, which is intended to be a lesson on careful driving for motorists as well as spectacular exhibition for everyone.

The grade crossing accident is the climax of a demonstration of safety first methods of driving. It is an exact demonstration of the grade crossing accidents that occur in real life with a real train on tracks built exactly as real railway tracks are built, with all the signs and signals that the real railroad provides for the protection of careless drivers. Everything is exactly the same except the loss of life, for the motorists at the fair will leap to safety, a thing usually impossible in a real accident.

This attraction has been so well received that C. Sophus Johnson and Miss Olive Jones, receivers of the fair, tried to get it last year, but Mr. Connolly's previous engagements made this impossible. This year, however, they have been successful and added to the Great Siegfried, the champion ski jumper; Miss Gloria Hall, the aviatrix who guides a driverless motor car by radio from her plane 1,000 feet above the earth; the Winter Garden Revue and all the other unusual amusement features that have been provided this year, there is every indication that the West Michigan Fair this year will be the best attended and most successful in the history of the fair association.

New Generation Taking Reins of Auto Industry

Young men are doing big things in the automobile industry today. E. L. Cord, just over 30, has made an amazing success at Auburn. G. M. Williams, another comparative youngster, is holding the reins at Marmon. James A. Bohannon and Don P. Smith, young in years but long in experience, have been made dual managers of Peerless.

Mr. Bohannon, the new Peerless president, is only 33, yet relinquishes the position of vice president of Marmon to take the job. He went to the Marmon Company seven years ago as purchasing agent and shortly became vice president in charge of engineering and production.

Mr. Smith, who is vice president, is 36, and has spent practically his entire business life selling automobiles. After a highly successful career, first as a motor salesman and later as distributor on the Pacific Coast, he became assistant to the president of the Guardian Detroit Company, acting as advisor on automobile matters for the important Guardian group of financial institutions.

BUSINESS LEVEL ATTAINS HIGHEST POINT IN HISTORY

Business in the United States in 1928 reached the highest level ever attained, continuing the prosperity characteristic of every year, since 1921, and reflecting the steadily increasing efficiency of both industry and trade, the Department of Commerce stated August 3 in a detailed review of the year's activities.

The review is contained in the Commerce Yearbook for 1928 just made public and covering the department's studies, statistical and otherwise, into business and industrial activities. Manufacturing production was the largest ever reached, exceeding that of 1927 by 5 per cent, and that of the depression year, 1921, by 66 per cent, it was pointed out. Of the 12 groups of manufacturing industries distinguished, 9 showed increases in output as compared to 1927, the Yearbook said. Wages paid in factories were the greatest ever reported, with slightly larger earnings per worker, it was stated.

Agricultural production showed a further expansion in 1928, despite the decline in the number of workers on farms, and acreage planted to crops was slightly larger than any other postwar year, it was declared. The weighted index of farm prices averaged for the calendar year 1928 about 6 per cent higher than in 1927, and higher than in any other year since 1920 except 1925.

The general level of commodity prices in 1928 was comparatively steady, though the wholesale price index averaged somewhat that in 1927, it was declared. There was a slight decline in the cost of living index which reflects retail prices, it was said. The value of sales reported by wholesale dealers in 1928 was about one per cent less than the year before, despite some slight rise in price levels, the publication stated. Sales of department stores, chain stores, and mail-order houses made record totals, partly due to a shift in their favor from other classes of stores for which there are no statistical data, it was explained.

Exports were 5.4 greater in value than in 1927, in spite of the fact that there was almost no change in the prices of the commodities sold abroad, it was said. The excess of imports was greater than in any other year since 1921, amounting to $1,038,000,000.

Financial transactions continued to expand and many new records for volume were established. Check payments by banks increased for the country as a whole by 20 per cent, it was stated, and total resources of American banks increased 5 per cent over 1927.

Building Permits Drop In 1929 at Grand Rapids

Investments in building operations in Grand Rapids during the first seven months of 1929 amounted to $3,783,580, or $1,735,890 less than during a similar period last year, according to a report by Building Inspector Ralph E. Seeger. Permits issued in July were for a total of $522,265 as compared with $1,128,975 in July, 1928.

Severe rain and wind storms will be in progress at the beginning of the week of Aug. 25 in most parts of Michigan. Electrical storms will be a prominent feature of this storm period. The storms will last over until close to the middle days of the week.

All during the last half of this week we are expecting temperatures will be close to the seasonal normal with the sky generally fair. The one exception to this prediction will be the increasing cloudiness we are expecting to cover many parts of the state close to Saturday.

Just previous to the end of this week temperatures will become much higher. We look for warm weather for the season at this time—readings that will range close to 80 degrees or above in the southern half of the lower peninsula of Michigan.

Farming Adverse in September

The general farm conditions for the greater part of September in Michigan and in the eastern half of the United States, for that matter, does not promise to be as rosy as early crop reports would suggest. The average crops will not prove to be a success from either a harvesting or financial position. This tendency will show out during most of the fall months, but instead of being a tragedy there will be an inclination towards a quiet readjustment that will benefit all.

Gold Mine of Ideas for Farmers

Here's "the most remarkable book ever published for farmers," says one authority. It is remarkable in the extreme practical nature of its contents, in the wide range of farm subjects covered, in the wealth of illustrations it contains, and in its opportunity for profit.

361 Discoveries

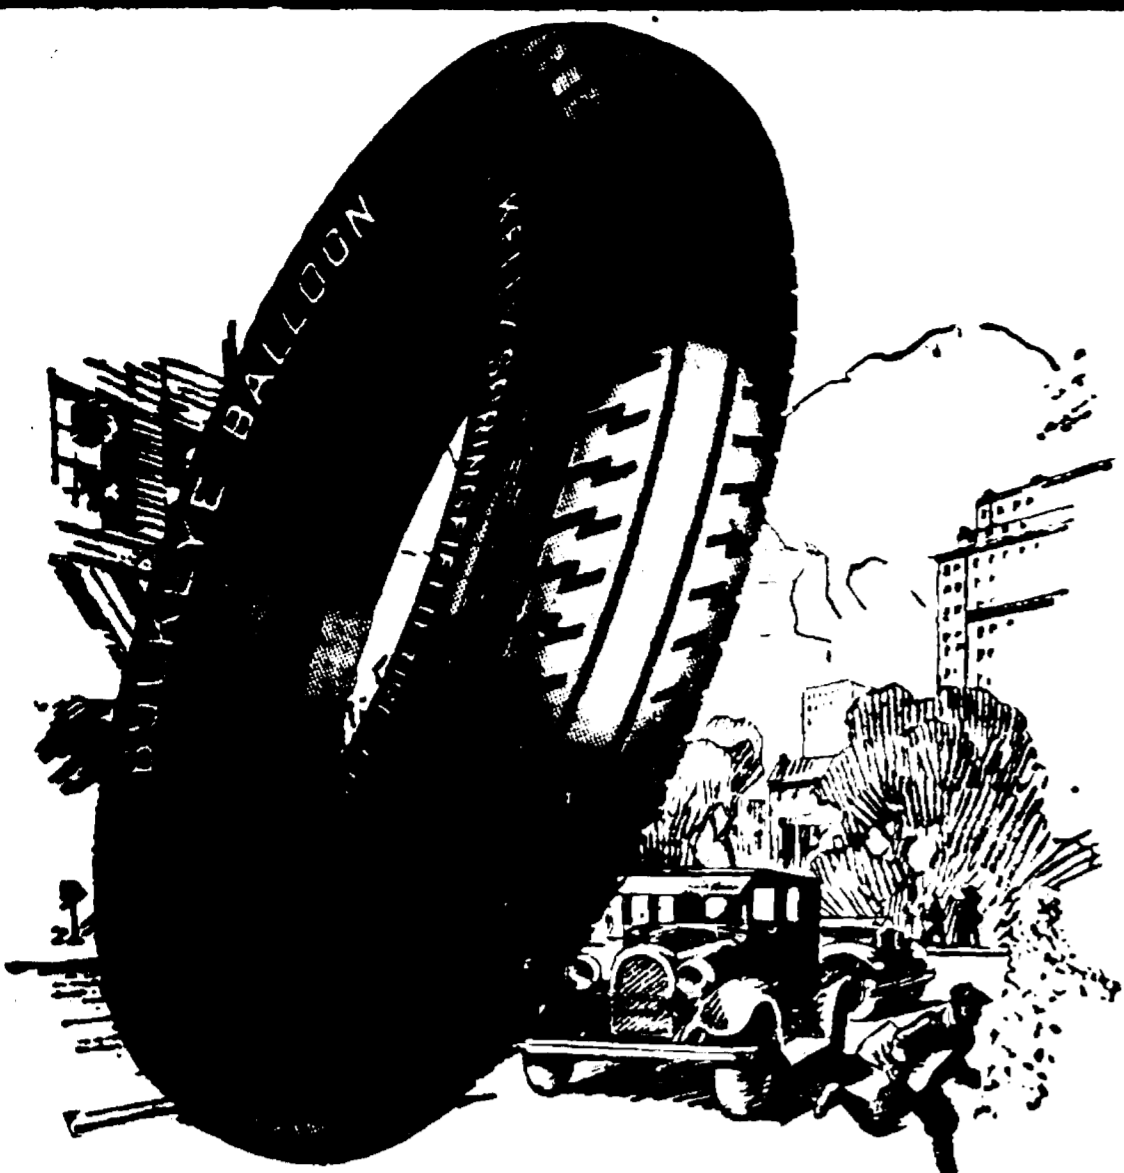

One discovery sometimes makes a fortune. Here are 361 of them, one of which may be a profitable one for you. These discoveries are listed in the book. They are:

- 1. How to make a better plow.
- 2. How to make a better harrow.
- 3. How to make a better mowing machine.
- 4. How to make a better reaper.
- 5. How to make a better binder.
- 6. How to make a better threshing machine.
- 7. How to make a better separator.
- 8. How to make a better chaff cutter.
- 9. How to make a better feed mixer.
- 10. How to make a better silage chopper.
- 11. How to make a better ensilage cutter.
- 12. How to make a better hay rack.
- 13. How to make a better hay fork.
- 14. How to make a better hay conditioner.
- 15. How to make a better hay baler.
- 16. How to make a better hay press.
- 17. How to make a better hay stacker.
- 18. How to make a better hay rack.
- 19. How to make a better hay fork.
- 20. How to make a better hay conditioner.

Suppose you could live your life 417 times. How could you live ahead of other farmers in a way that would insure you more and steady profits? This book enables you to do the next best thing—you pay for the opportunity of 417 lives—417 opportunities of successful farming as told by themselves—leading experts, and many of these opportunities are illustrated with pictures showing the best way to do them—361 crystal clear discoveries. WHITMORE LAKE 3

The Pinckney-Michigamme team won from Whitmore Lake Sunday by a score of 11 to 3. Whitmore Lake had Dagwell, star left hander of the Hoover Ball team of Ann Arbor in the box and the score was tied 3 to 3 up to the 5th when Brown doubled with the bases full scoring three runs. Lee also scored later in the same inning. Dagwell's support went to pieces after this and Pinckney scored a run in the 6th and 3 in the 7th. Whitmore got a run in the first when W. Radtke tripped and scored on Moran's wild throw to get him at the plate. They got another in the second on Mulvaney's error and hits by Soper and Dagwell and scored the last one on E. Radtke's hit and two outs at first.

Dagwell fanned Mulvaney, Kennedy, and Cox in a row to start the game. In the second Swarthout doubled and scored on Doyle's single. Doyle scored on a hit by Lee. In the third Swarthout tripled and scored on an error. In the fourth Cox and Swarthout singled and Doyle and Brown doubled. 4 runs scoring. Mulvaney hit safely and scored in the 6th and Moran scored Brown and Lee with a double in the 7th.

NOTES OF THE GAME

Dagwell is rated as a good pitcher and had the Pinckney hitters baffled up to the 5th inning. At that the poor support accorded him had a great deal to do with the high score.

Moran was slow in getting warmed up and Whitmore touched him up a bit in the early stages of the game.

W. Radtke's triple in the first inning went over Doyle's head. He scored when Moran threw the wild to Lee after taking Doyle's relay.

Swarthout who has been in a slump the last two games came out of it getting a triple, double and single.

Kennedy handled 7 chances at second without an error.

The Whitmore Lake team is entered in the base ball tournament at the Ann Arbor Fair.

The three Radtkes who played with Whitmore are all brothers. Another plays for Hamburg.

Vic Kingsley, ex-South Lyon star played a creditable game at first for Whitmore.

A little better attendance is required. Give Pinckney a Gehring Day once in a while.

The Pinckney outfield only caught one fly during the game.

CURRENT COMMENT

The new Michigan law relating to prohibition law violation goes into effect August 28. At that time all violators must be sentenced under the new law. The law provides for imprisonment for one year and a fine of not less than $1000 or more than $2000. The new amendment reads as follows:

"Any person who, himself, or by his clerk, agent or employee, shall sell or keep for sale, manufacture for sale or have in his possession for sale, any vinous, malt, brewed, fermented, spirituous or intoxicating liquors; or any mixed liquors or beverages, any part of which is intoxicating, shall be guilty of a felony and, upon conviction fine of not less than $1000 nor more than $2000 and to imprisonment in the state prison, Michigan reformatory, or in the Detroit House of correction for a period of not less than one year nor more than four years."

The battle between the sheriff's department of Washtenaw County and the private police at Whitmore Lake still rages. Sheriff Robison is stated as saying he will arrest any of them as they stop any more cars on the highways and that they have only the powers of watchmen and no authority to make arrests. Chief Redfern of the private police threatens to carry the matter to higher officials if he is in any way molested. It would seem that the cottagers should have the right to employ watchmen if they so desired. Apartment house owners in Detroit and other cities have long made use of them.

The state administrative department is looking for a site for the new state hospital has discovered that public mindedness is a negligible quantity in quite a few places. Several suitable sites were selected but in many cases the prices asked for the land were unreasonable. A thousand acres is required. In Washtenaw county one site favored because of its nearness to the U. of M. hospital was dropped, for the time at least, because from $500 to $1000 per acre was asked for the land. In other cases the property owners seemed to see only a chance to enrich themselves at the expense of the state and apparently could not see it at all from the standpoint of public good. It must not be forgotten that if a majority of options are secured the state has the power to condemn the

NEIGHBORING NEWS

The three mail routes out of Linden have been consolidated into two. Eighty acres of land one mile south of South Lyon have been purchased by the Universal Wireless Communication Company of New York for opening a wireless relay station. It is planned to establish twelve of these only one being located in a state. About $70,000 worth of buildings will be built.

After 90 years continuous service the postoffice at Argentine, Mich., has been discontinued. It will be served by Fenton rural routes.

Work on pouring the foundation of the new Stockbridge school started last week. The building will be built of buff colored brick.

Two horses standing under a tree on the William Shear farm near Six Corners were struck by lightning last Tuesday afternoon.

The heavy windstorm Tuesday did considerable damage in the vicinity of Fowlerville. The barn on the Demarest farm occupied by John Mattax blew down, killing one horse. The roof was also blown off the barn on the Hillard Nichol's farm.

Five Brighton men have purchased an airplane and secured a landing field near the Woodlawn Country Club.

The Detroit Edison Company will build a new building in Brighton. Mike Hoffman of Detroit whose car collided with the car of Dr. Amos Winegar, resulting in the later's death a short time ago, was fined $25 by Justice Yelland.

William H. Green, a Holly farmer, has a double harness that has been in continuous use for 48 years. It was made by the late Darwin Beaumont of Clyde.

MONTANA BADGER BRAND ALFALFA The Alfalfa without a failure. Why take chances. Badger Brand costs no more than other brands, but is much better.
