GO TO SUNDAY SCHOOL

SEPTEMBER 29th

Several counties in the Lansing area are observing Sunday September 29th, as Rally Day in many of their Sunday Schools. Livingston County, through its Council of Religious Education, is observing the day. Posters have been sent to the Sunday School everywhere, and a very cordial response has been received to the invitation to the schools to co-operate in observing the day. Some schools from the nature of their programs or from their peculiar condition are finding it necessary to use some other Sunday than September 29th as official "Rally Day"; but it is thought that most of the schools of the county will use the posters "Go To Sunday School, September 29th", and otherwise join the plan.

Much effective advertising is being done by the papers of Lansing and Livingston County. It is the hope of the church people that Sunday will be a day characterized by a large attendance of boys and girls, men and women at the Sunday School services in the many schools of the county. The thirty three Protestant schools of the county cover every possible district of the county.

In Howell on Sunday evening at 7:30, a union meeting of all of the Sunday Schools of the County that will attend will be held in the Presbyterian Church in the interest of "Religious Education." There will be beautiful music by the choirs of the city; and the address will be given by Rev. E. W. Halpenny, D. D. General Superintendent of the Michigan Council of Religious Education. Many ministers of churches, outside of Howell, have already indicated their intention of asking their congregations to attend. All people of the county are invited to attend, and help make the day one of outstanding importance in the Sunday School history of the region.

FOURTY HOURS DEVOTION

Starting Sunday, Sept. 29 there will be a 40 hours devotion services at St. Mary's Catholic Church, Pinckney. Masses at 7:30 and 9:30 a.m. daily together with evening services concluding Tuesday evening.

JACKSON-RANDALL

The marriage of Mrs. Emily Jackson of Detroit and Mr. Floyd Randall of Lansing occurred at Detroit Saturday, September 21. After a short wedding trip they will be at home to their many friends at Lansing.

Both people are well known here. The bride is the widow of Floyd Jackson, former Pinckney merchant and the groom was formerly a resident of Hamburg township. His first wife who died three years ago was formerly Miss Minnie Hoff of Anderson. Mr. Randall was in the drug business for a number of years and is prominent in Lansing political and lodge circles. At the present time he is census supervisor for this district.

ORGANIZING WINTER 4-H CLUBS

Plans are now being laid for the winter 4-H Club program. County Agent, C. L. Bolander, states that by all indications 4-H enrollments will exceed that of any previous year. Two projects will be generally used for Club work this year, they being handicraft club work for boys and clothing work for girls. Other projects will also be started such as, sheep and forestry club work.

To organize a regular 4-H Club there must be five boys or five girls, ten years old and over, all taking the same project, schools, farmers clubs, or any other organization can sponsor a 4-H club. There is no expense connected with it. The only requirement is that the interested, must select a responsible local leader to be available to help the members and meet with them at their regular meetings.

All those interested in helping to carry on this worthy and most universal type of boys and girls training work should get in touch with County Agr'l. Agent's office.

WANTED AGENT

I wish an agent in Pinckney for the Absopure Electric Ice Box. A liberal proposition if you can produce the business.

R. E. Barron, Howell

ESCAPED CONVICT CAPTURED

Thursday Meymed Ayoud who was serving a sentence of from 1 to 5 years for malicious destruction of property was captured east of Pinckney. He was sent up from Detroit last April. At Jackson he became a probationary prisoner and was working on the prison farm Wednesday he made a break for liberty and got away. The alarm was sent out about noon. A stranger answering the description of the convict stopped near Anderson and asked for something to eat. The officers at Jackson were notified and drove to Pinckney. There trace of him was lost for a time. Boone Amburgey who works on the section told of seeing a stranger on the Grand Trunk tracks east of Pinckney and accompanied the two guards to the place where he was last seen. He was found asleep on a pile of ties near the rail road tracks back of the Charles Brown farm. Being worn out by hunger and exhaustion he readily submitted to arrest and accompanied the guards back to the prison. We understand that Amburgey will be entitled to the $100 reward paid by the state to captors of escaped convicts.

This is the second convict captured here. John Dinkel while village marshal captured one on the G. T. tracks near here a number of years ago and obtained the reward.

SECOND WORLD'S SERIES GAME AT HAMBURG NEXT SUNDAY

The second game of the little world series between Hamburg and Pinckney will be played at Hamburg next Sunday, Sept. 29. In previous years the local team has never been able to win two successive games from Hamburg. In 1927 Cox pitched Pinckney to a 11 to 6 victory but with Zahm in the box Pinckney lost the second contest 7 to 5. In 1923 Pinckney took the opener from them 11 to 2 but lost the return game 5 to 4. Hamburg was confident of Baker's ability to beat Pinckney and their ability to hit Moran and the defeat was unexpected. The interest is intense in the series and a larger crowd is expected next Sunday than was present at the first game. Both teams will have practically the same lineup. The game will start at 3:00 p. m.

BALLOON IS FORCED DOWN

A balloon containing R. K. Lee who is a member of the Detroit Balloon Club was forced down on the farm of Mrs. Eva Clark, about four miles south of town Sunday at 10:30 a. m. Mr. Lee had left Wyandotte at 5:00 a. m. and was approaching Portage Lake when his balloon began to leak gas badly. To avoid being forced down in the lake he was compelled to throw out most of his ballast. The balloon finally came to earth on the Clark farm which is just west of Little Portage Lake.

Mrs. Mabel Smith and son, Donald, of South Lyon were Pinckney visitors Monday evening.

WEEK OF SEPTEMBER 29

Temperatures will regain some of their losses of last week during the opening days of the week beginning September 29. With this increased warmth will come some cloudy weather, some wind and scattered rains.

These unsettled and stormy conditions will last over the first half of the week with some clearing about the middle part.

The last half of the week will probably be most fair, at least to the extent that no severe low pressure areas are expected. There may be some light scattered showers about Friday or Saturday, but will be unimportant in action or results.

Temperatures will be on the increase during the latter part of this week, although the chances are that the night temperatures will show a marked variation from the day-time readings.

October Outlook
This is the month the Indians call "The Moon of the Falling Leaf." It is at this time that on trees a thin corky layer is developed between the leaf stem and the twig and when this is perfected, the leaf drops from its own weight.

We are venturing the prediction that this fall will see the leaves unusually brilliant in coloring. This is not done by the frost, but by the tree itself when it undertakes to withdraw a valuable substance from the leaves into the trunk. The green coloring matter breaks up, displaying the yellow, and according to the acid or alkaline condition produces the vivid fall coloring of red, orange and purple.

The month as a whole in Michigan will be moderately warm and ideal for country trips between rains. We say this latter because it is probable there will be more than the usual amount of rainfall in the state during October. This month will not be particularly favorable for harvesting or plowing for any length of time.

Tennessee
SAME PRESCRIPTION HE WROTE IN 1892

When Dr. Caldwell started to practice medicine, back in 1875, the needs for a laxative were not as great as today. People lived normal lives, ate plain, wholesome food, and got plenty of fresh air. But even that early there were drastic physics and purges for the relief of constipation which Dr. Caldwell did not believe were good for human beings. The prescription for constipation that he used early in his practice, and which he put in drug stores in 1892 under the name of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is a liquid vegetable remedy, intended for women, children and elderly people, and they need just such a mild, safe bowel stimulant.

This prescription has proven its worth and is now the largest selling liquid laxative. It has won the confidence of people who needed it to get relief from headaches, biliousness, flatulence, indigestion, loss of appetite and sleep, bad breath, dyspepsia, colic, fevers. At your druggist, or write "Syrup Pepsin," Dept. BB, Monticello, Illinois, for free trial bottle.

CHATTY GODDESS OF GAB

By BEATRICE BURTON, Author of "HER MAN," "HONEY LOU," "SALLY'S SHOULDER," "MONEY LOVE," "LOVE BOUND," etc.

COPYRIGHT 1929, CENTRAL PUBLISHING CO., CLEVELAND, OHIO.

"Well, no, we don't, to tell the truth," she answered. "I don't know why we don't, for we have good hats and we don't overcharge. . . . But somehow we just don't seem to make expenses. . . . We're selling out. You probably saw the sign in the window."

"Yes, I did. And that's why—" began the woman.
"But Chatty drowned her out. 'I tell Mrs. Mayberry that we're too near the big fashionable shops downtown,'" she went on, rummaging in the bottom of a drawer. "Most all the women in this neighborhood go downtown to shop. . . . Why, you're the very first person who's come in for a hat today."

As usual, Chatty was letting her tongue run away with her—telling all of her own business, and all of poor Mrs. Mayberry's, too.
She turned around from the chest of drawers to find that the customer was backing away towards the street door. She had not even taken off her hat.

"Why, what's wrong? Don't you want a hat?" Chatty started at her in amazement.
The woman shook her head, and pushed the door open.
"No. . . . I tried to tell you I came in because of the sign in the window," she explained. "I—I've been looking around for a little hat shop I could afford to buy. I used to have one—I just happened to be passing, and saw that this one was for sale. But if you haven't any business—why, naturally—I wouldn't want it—would I?"

Jerkily, she finished what she had to say. The street door closed after her. She was gone.
"Well!" Chatty said aloud. "Well, of all things—
"I SHOULD SAY SO—" The sound of Mrs. Mayberry's voice close behind her made her jump. She swung around.

Mrs. Mayberry's eyes seemed to shoot sparks, and her soapy hands went on her lips. "Well, you're a fine kind of a girl!" she cried, and her fury was in her voice. "That woman probably would have bought me out if it hadn't been for you! Here she walks in two minutes after we put that card in the window, all pepped up to buy the store! Think it's the very thing she wants—and then you tell her that we aren't making any money—O-oh, I could shake you 'til your teeth rattled!"

Chatty opened her lips, but said nothing.
"Yes, sure! I could have sold her this store if it hadn't been for you."

and that yard-long tongue of yours!" Mrs. Mayberry was all but crying now.
Suddenly she wheeled and dashed back into the workroom behind the shop. When she came flying out again she had Chatty's hat and her shabby little winter coat in her wet hands.
She threw them down upon the floor.

"Put 'em on, and get out!" she stormed. "Get out of my sight. Go on! Get out!"
Too surprised to speak, or even think clearly, Chatty picked them up without a word, and did as she was told.

It was not until she was almost home that she realized that she had left her handbag behind her in the shop, and that Mrs. Mayberry had not paid her for her week's work. And how noisy and hysterical Mrs. Mayberry had been! Not like her quiet self at all.

"And what did I do to make her so you're not very wet, are you? You came over in your car, of course—but take a look at poor ME! I had to walk home all the way from West River street, and there isn't a DRY thread on me! I'm a walking fountain, no less."

Chattering like a squirrel, she led the way down the short, narrow hall to the "Front Room."
Mrs. Chatterton had left her sewing machine and was standing in the middle of the room with a blue taffeta silk dress across her arms.

"It's all ready for you to try on, Kate," she said to Mrs. Van Nuy. "I think it's prettier now than when it was new."
They had been friends, these two women, for twenty years. Long before Chatty's father had died, and long before Mrs. Van Nuy's husband had made his money, they had been neighbors. And they never had lost track of each other, somehow, and wild! Chatty asked herself, going up the stairs of the apartment where the Chattertons, who saved for a living, tell that woman the simple truth about the store—and why should I keep the truth bottled up inside of me?"

"It's a habit that'll grow on you, Chatty—the talking habit," she warned her.

She felt as though Mrs. Mayberry had done her a great wrong.

Mrs. Chatterton was sitting in the room that the family called the "Front Room."
The "Front Room" was used, for many things. It was a sitting room, and sometimes a dining room. In it Mrs. Chatterton, who saved for a living, greeted her customers, cut out and stitched their dresses together, and tried them on.

"Well, what's happened to my girl?" she asked, looking up in a startled way when Chatty came walking into the flat that she had Saturday noon.
Without stopping to take off her sudden clothes, Chatty dropped down on a chair beside her and told her the whole story.

"She said I talked too much all the time—she said my tongue was a yard long," she wound up her tale of woe. "And then she pushed me out into the rain—and never paid me a penny of my salary for this week!"
Mrs. Chatterton frowned. "Hmm," she said quietly. "She'll have to pay you, of course. And she needn't have been so rough with you. But I suppose she was upset and didn't know just what she was doing. And then, you do talk too much, Chatty. You always have—all your life."

"Chatty's chin went up, and her jaw set in a hard little line.
"Yes, you have!" her mother repeated, looking at her solemnly. "A year ago the people in the flat on the first floor moved out because you let them know that they paid $10 a month more rent than we do—and you know you shouldn't have told it. It's a bad habit—and it's a habit that will grow on you unless you watch it, Chatty. The talking habit."

Chatty glared at her. "That's not true," she declared hotly. "No one can tell me I talk too much! I don't! I'm not deaf and dumb, I admit."
"There's the door bell," her mother broke in quietly. "Do hush up and go and see who it is."

CHAPTER II

Still in her dripping clothes, Chatty flew to open the door of the little flat. Her mother's one and only fashionable customer stood just outside, filling the tiny hallway with the fresh, sweet, woody smell of the violets she wore pinned on her coat.
"It's Mrs. Van Nuy, mother!" Chatty called over her shoulder as she swung the door wide open for the visitor.

"Come right in, Mrs. Van Nuy!" she went on in her quick, bright way. Chatty always talked as if she were short of breath and full of excitement.
"Weren't you the brave lady to come out on a dreadful day like this?" she ran on. "Isn't it the worst weather you ever saw in all your LIFE? But tercup, but she wore her shining hair long, and twisted it into a hard knot at the back of her little head.

She never had used face cream or face powder. Sometimes if her straight, sudden little nose was shiny, she would rub it with a tiny bit of talcum powder—but that was all. She never had polished her nails or tinted them a faint coral pink to make them look like little jewels. She had one pair of silk stockings at a time, wore them only to church on Sunday mornings. All the rest of the week she was perfectly contented with cotton ones.

No man ever yet had turned his head to take a second look at Chatty as she passed him by. Poor she was as small and demure-looking as a little Jenny Wren among all the silk stockings, short skirted, painted beauties that fill the streets. . . . she did not hit the eye.

While wrecking a barn on the property of Mrs. Inez Bagge at Chelsea workmen discovered the arm of a human being, presumably a young lady. The arm had been dissected at the shoulder and although the flesh was dried the veins and muscles showed plainly. The only explanation for its being there is that a doctor owned the house some forty years ago and might have left it there.

"He maketh a path to shine after Him"

—Job, 41:32

SHORTLY after the Civil War, arc lamps began to be used in a few light-houses; even the yacht Napoleon was thus illuminated. While satisfactory for streets and large open spaces, it was not suitable for the illumination of homes or small, confined interiors.

"Let There Be Light"

Thomas A. Edison decided that a system must be developed in which, unlike the series arc lamp systems, any one lamp could be lighted or turned off independent of the others in the system. It was evident to the young inventor, then thirty years old, that if electric lighting was to replace the gas jet, the sine qua non must be an electric lamp economical of current and operating at a safe, low voltage.

FOR two years Mr. Edison and his staff labored through long nights and days without much success. Toying one night with a piece of lampblack mixed with tar (prepared for use in his telephone transmitter) he rolled it between his thumb and forefinger, and the thought struck him that a spiral made of it might be made to emit a good light. The experiment was tried, and it worked but not well enough. The inventor next tried the carbonized remains of a piece of sewing thread. Time after time he attempted to secure the thread in a bulb from which he next exhausted the air; each time the fragile filament would break before the current was turned on.

On October 16, 1879, the staff decided that they would make a lamp before they slept, or die in the attempt. On October 19th and 20th several variations were attempted, all without success. On the morning of the 21st, success crowned the long vigil. The effect was surprising. The slender carbonized sewing thread emitted a beautiful light. "It is as though the Almighty had decreed it," observed Mr. Edison reverentially. Mr. Edison decided to raise the candle power very high to see how long the filament would survive the strain. A high illuminating power was sustained through forty hours; then the soft glow faded and the tiny filament burned itself out.

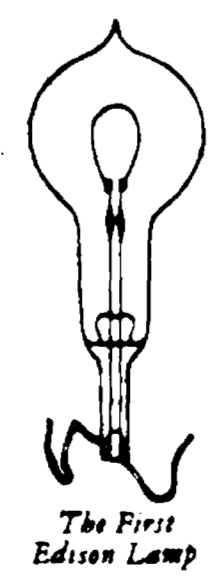

THE pioneer light of the first Edison incandescent lamp had been burning scarcely twenty-four hours, when the entire force in the laboratory at Menlo Park was instructed to carbonize every material which gave the least promise of yielding a satisfactory filament. Platinum and other metals had already been tested. Attention was now turned to cardboard, tissue paper, fish line, shavings from many hundreds of woods, lampwick, plumbago, and an endless variety of substances. Mr. Edison refused to commercialize his achievement until he had improved the filament lamp to withstand a service of 600 hours.

ONE day, early in 1880, he noticed an ordinary palm-leaf fan lying on a laboratory table. He examined it and observed that it had a binding rim of bamboo. He instructed his assistants to carbonize as many filaments as could be made from the long bamboo strip. When these were tried in lamps they proved to be more successful than anything previously used. He dispatched three botanical expeditions to scour almost inaccessible portions of the world for filament fibers, and, after 6000 experiments costing $40,000, the spring of 1881 gave birth to the first incandescent lamp commercially satisfactory to Mr. Edison, this lamp enduring a life test of 1589 hours at 16 candle power.

After reading the test results on this lamp Mr. Edison remarked, "Just wait a little while and we will make electric light so cheap that only the wealthy can afford to burn candles." His prophecy has come to pass.

FOR almost ten years the bamboo filament lamps were unexcelled. The year 1894 saw the adoption of squirted carbon filaments, greatly reducing the cost of manufacture. The well-known "Gem" lamps, in which the carbon filament was metalized, were introduced in 1905, these being superseded in 1911 by the modern high-efficiency tungsten filament, which reduced the current required per candle power by 66 per cent.

The First Edison Lamp

The principle of the electric lamp developed by Mr. Edison in 1879 is still in use today with but few alterations. The shape of the modern lamp is strikingly like Mr. Edison's original, although in the meantime it has assumed diverse other contours.

This is the second of a series of historical mementos published by The Detroit Edison Company in honor of reviewing his influence on the development of the Electric Light and Power Industry. The third will appear in this paper next week

Hon. Lynn C. Gardner

OUR NEXT STATE SENATOR

The following is reprinted from the Fowerville Review as it expresses our sentiments exactly.

When the State of Michigan was re-districted into Senatorial Districts by the 1925 Legislature, Ingham and Livingston counties were made to comprise the Fourteenth District. At that time an agreement was entered into by the leading Republicans of both counties to the effect, that the counties would alternate in the senate chamber, i. e. Ingham County was to have the first Senator for a period of two terms, then Livingston County for a period of two terms, this practice to be followed as long as the district remains such.

At this time the question to confront the Republicans of this county is that on finding the logical person to become a candidate for the next State Senator. Senator Person is serving his second term and declines to become a candidate for a third term. There are several who aspire to that important office, but the general opinion of the public is that our State Representative, Lynn C. Gardner of Isoco Township is the logical person to succeed Mr. Pearson.

Mr. Gardner is serving his third term as State Representative, having succeeded Representative Fuller at this retired to become postmaster at this place. It was during this term that Mr. Gardner was informed by the administration leaders, that if he did not vote as directed, the State Sanatorium would be removed from Livingston County. Mr. Gardner challenged them to do so, and even though greatly handicapped by being opposed by the administration, he stood by his conviction in all his voting. In 1926, Mr. Gardner was elected to his second term by a majority of 1200 votes after a vigorously fought campaign. Shortly after this election Mr. Gardner's name became favorably mentioned as a possible candidate for speaker of the House of Representatives, even though strongly opposed by the anti-administration element. He was unanimously elected to that position, which was an unusual occurrence, as Mr. Gardner was second term man at this time. During his term as speaker, Mr. Gardner, because of his fairness in his committee appointments, and his straight forward manner as presiding officer, won the admiration of all concerned. It was during this session that the Sanatorium fight again loomed up, a certain fraction being determined that it should be removed to Ann Arbor. However, after a bitter fight on the floor of the house, Mr. Gardner succeeded, not only in keeping the institution in this County, but secured a handsome appropriation for improvements, and new buildings, making it a credit to its community, which fact was much appreciated by the citizens of Livingston County. In 1928 Mr. Gardner was elected to his third term without opposition and during this term was instrumental in the passage of several bills that were of vital interest to his constituents. Mr. Gardner has always conducted the office in a straight-forward manner with absolute fairness toward all concerned, welcoming inquiries regarding measures pending, and other matters in connection with his office, at all times being thorough in his explanation concerning the same, never hesitating in giving his opinion as to the merits or demerits of the matter under consideration.

And it is because of the above qualities, that his friends of this county, regardless of party affiliation, are at this time urging him to become a candidate for State Senator at the coming general election. And it is for the same reason that many of the voters of Ingham County, not only from the agricultural districts, but from the industrial districts as well, are indorsing his candidacy.

Mr. Gardner has established a record as to attendance and punctuality, never hesitating to have his name entered on the roll call on the passage of any measure, probably having accomplished more during his three terms of office than any other member during the same period of time, and there is no doubt, because of these sterling qualities, together with his vast experience in legislative matters, that Mr. Gardner is the logical candidate to succeed Senator Person, who made for himself a fine record, during his two terms of office.

PRIMARY SCHOOL FUND RATE $15.75 THIS YEAR

The $20,000,000 primary school fund will shortly be distributed to school districts throughout the state on a per capita basis of slightly more than $15.75 according to computation announced last week by the superintendent of public instruction.

The Michigan school census completed by the department of public instruction last week shows a school population of 1,274,443, an increase of more than 26,000 over the 1928 census. The auditor general will pay out $20,074,266.99 from the primary school fund less the usual deduction of between $1,000 and $2,000 for deficiencies allotted against certain school.

The deficiencies are later made up when the particular school conforms to the laws.

The primary fund is separate from an additional $2,000,000 which will be paid poor districts under the Turner act, with the primary fund, distribution is made on a flat census basis, while the Turner law money distribution must be made with regard to the financial condition of each district in the state.

Amounts to be received by districts can be computed by multiplying the district census by the per capita rate.

PINCKNEY JUNIORS WIN

Capt. Ambrose Kennedy's Junior football team evened matters with Whitmore Lake by trimming them to the tune of 35 to 6. Saturday. LIVINGSTON O. E. S. ASSOCIATION MEETS

Gathering Is Held at Fowlerville with Large Attendance

The 19th annual meeting of the Livingston county association Order of Eastern Stars was held in the opera house at Fowlerville, Tuesday with a large attendance at both afternoon and evening meetings. The afternoon meeting was an open one, one of the hits of the program being a song and dance numbers by little Joe and Virginia O'Leary, of Howell and grandchildren of the county president, Mrs. Emma J. Watson.

The presentation of the flag by the marshal, Mrs. Mary Newman of Fowlerville, with little Christine Calkins, Reona Blackmer and Margaret Hendren, dressed in red, white and blue, as escorts, was another pleasing feature of the program.

Mrs. Mary A. Liddy, worthy matron, of Detroit, gave an address and following the afternoon session a banquet was enjoyed in the Baptist church parlors with places marked for 150.

The evening session was opened by the county president, Mrs. H. J. Watson, of Howell and included a school of instruction, installation of officers and degree work. The retiring county president, Mrs. Watson, and incoming county president, Mrs. Luella Rathbun, of Fowlerville, were both presented with gifts.

The county officers elected and installed are as follows: Mrs. Luella Rathbun, Fowlerville, president; Mrs. Edith Carr, Pinckney, first vice president; Mrs. Leola Boylan, Brighton, second vice president; Mrs. Ross D. EXTRA STRENGTH, STAMINA AND MILEAGE

The greatest problem of heavy duty tire service is heat and friction generated in the thick carcass. Firestone has solved this with the patented Gum-Dipping process—dipping the cords in a rubber solution which saturates and insulates every fiber of every cord with rubber. This is the only known method which carries the rubber to the innermost recesses of the cords, insulating each component part and unifying the whole structure of the tire. The Firestone Service is the best obtainable and we know tires, tire sizes and the operating conditions in this locality. With our complete stock we will save you money and serve you better.

DEDICATE FERRIS INSTITUTE MEMORIAL HALL OCTOBER 19

Ferris Institute Memorial building is now occupied. Dedication of the new building will take place on Homecoming day, Oct. 19.

It is anticipated Ferris will meet Notre Dame B on the gridiron that day, but the program for the dedication has not been completed.

The pharmacy course at the institute has been lengthened to three years, E. J. Parr, head of the department, announces.

The enrollment for the course is larger than ever before, and the number of girls is greater than in any previous year. H. J. Fuller, Des Moines, Ia., and Charles Larwood, Tulsa, Okla., have been added to the teaching course. Larwood will take W. D. Cramer's classes, the latter having been given a year's leave of absence.

Miss Janette B. Higgins, a University of Michigan graduate, is the new principal of the normal department. Miss Charlotte Ross Peoples, Columbia university, has been added to the staff of English instructors.

How Speech By Humans First Came Into Being

Sir Richard Paget described, in a lecture at the Royal Institution of Great Britain, how insects and animals convey their emotions to each other, and how human speech first came into being. He said that the emotional state is very commonly expressed in sound, as, for example, in the love songs of the crickets, birds, and the howls, purrings, grunts, and growls, the joyful barks and whinnies with which we are all familiar in the animal world.

Sir Richard, dealing with the origin of human speech, said, "Primitive man's rudimentary ideas and intentions were expressed by simple pantomime, mostly by his hands, with the co-operation of his body. But all this time man was also developing his arts and crafts. His hands became more and more occupied, and he found it increasingly difficult to talk with his hands full."

"Quite unconsciously he began to use his tongue and lips instead of his hands. In Europe the more southern races, leading easier lives with more hand-leisure, have retained many of their hand-gestures. The northern races, living under more rigorous conditions, have had their hands too full. "The northerners, therefore, were led to gesticulate almost entirely with their tongues and lips."

Federal Government Cuts National Costs

At the end of the last fiscal year the Federal government had a surplus of $185,000,000 in the treasury, five times the estimated surplus. During the year the national debt was reduced $673,000,000 and is now less than $17,000,000,000.

The policy of retrenchment in Federal expenditures, established a few years ago, has resulted in the conversion of savings into tax reduction for the people. Within eight years nearly two million people have been relieved entirely of Federal taxation.

President Hoover has announced that a careful study is being made to determine the possibilities for reducing Federal taxes in the future. This will probably be done, but it will be of little direct benefit to the public if the orgy of spending by local units of government, that has multiplied their cost time and again in recent years, is continued.

Mt. Pleasant Offers Extension Courses

Correspondence courses at Central State Teachers college are now an important link in school life, enrollment this year promising to exceed 1,000.

The department is used mainly by teachers who partially have completed life or degree courses at Central and who carry the correspondence work along with their teaching work in country schools. Full college credit is given these extension courses, and thus many teachers carry on their degree or life certificate work even though unable to attend school in person.

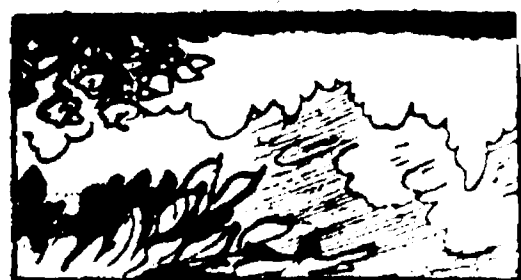

Poems That Live

FRATERNITY

I know not but in every leaf
That sprang to life along with me,
Were written all the joy and grief
Thenceforth my fate to be.

The wind that whispered to the artist,
The bird that sang its earliest lay,
The flower that blossomed at my birth—
My kinsmen all were they.

Ay, but for fellowship with these
I had not been—nay, might not be;
Nor they but vagrant melodies—
Till harmonized by me.
—John Banister Tabb (1845-1909)

These Boys Champs in Their Early 'Teens

Though they are just youngsters these three lads have made a name for themselves in sports. Top, Bradford Miles, 14, of Chicago, hit 299 out of 300 targets in junior matches of national rifle meet for record. Center, Billy Goslin, left, defeats Tom Anderson for junior title in world's championship loe-rolling tourney at Washburn, Wis., and Wakefield, Minn. Bottom, Robert Jacobsen, 13, by beating men three times his age, wins Wisconsin horseshoe pitching championship at Milwaukee.

Reformed Sects Have 56 Churches In Holland Area

That the Reformed Church in America and the Christian Reformed Church in America are firmly entrenched in Holland and vicinity is evidenced from recent statistics which credit the two denominations with a total of 56 churches, representing a constituency of 6,765 families and 16,093 communicant members.

The 29 churches in the Christian Reformed Church in America are affiliated with the classes of Holland and Zeeland, and the 27 churches in the Reformed Church in America are grouped in the Holland classes. The 56 churches in the two denominations are located within a radius of 75 miles.

Holland heads the group with 14 churches, with 15 located in Ottawa county. The first few pioneer churches were organized in 1847 and cover historical periods of 82 years. With few exceptions all the churches are supplied with regular pastors.

Bids for Re-modeling Soldiers' Home Opened

Bids have been opened by State Budget Director George Thompson for remodeling the main four-story building of the Michigan Soldiers' Home. The low bid was $386,783 or $86,783 above the legislative appropriation for the year for this purpose. The bids will be reported to the state administrative board.

Prize School Lunch Box Contained a Real Dinner

The first prize school lunch exhibited at a county fair this fall was an outstanding example of what a lunch should be. It contained all the essential foods required for a growing child, good wholesome materials were used, a suitable container held the neatly wrapped and packed food, and the lunch had an added merit of being different and interesting.

To the mother who packs lunches 20 odd days a month for nine months, the word "interesting" seems misplaced but the appealing feature of the prize lunch was that it contained a surprise. A small oblong package, neatly wrapped, tied and labelled "Surprise Package," was found to contain a small candy bar. Naturally a surprise would be kept until the end of the meal, a logical place for a treat of that sort.

The rest of the lunch expressed the mother's knowledge of what her growing child needed as accurately as the surprise package expressed her ingenuity. There were two kinds of sandwiches: two of whole wheat bread with chopped hard-cooked egg filling and lettuce, and one of white bread with a sweet filling. A half-pint bottle of milk, two small oatmeal cookies and an orange, together with the other things named made a well rounded lunch.

All lunches on display at this particular county fair were examples of "what the well dressed lunch should wear." The containers could be easily washed and aired, many of the boxes were lined with a white paper napkin and sandwiches were carefully wrapped in waxed paper.

Some food features of the other lunches were whole wheat bread, date- and nut sandwiches cut in unusual shapes as a special treat, filled sugar cookies, a few crisp celery stalks, a ripe tomato accompanied by a small shaker of salt, a thermos bottle of cocoa, a straw for the bottle of milk or a spoon to be used in eating the orange. Not a single leaky wedge of pie which might dampen other good food and the spirits of the eater, no black chocolate cake with soft, messy frosting, no thick slices of bread with dry fillings was marked against these lunches. Milk, fruit and carefully made sandwiches were in every lunch. Needless to say, the judge had a real task in selecting the prize winner.

First prize lunches are not difficult to copy. An endless variety in sandwich fillings and fruit are possible. A roll of waxed paper kept expressly for wrapping sandwiches is a great aid to attractiveness and sanitation. A surprise package may contain wholesome candy, a few nuts, raisins, tarts or figs, gum, a special cookie or rare animal crackers or some other favorite article of food. The use of some such feature as this may be a means to induce the underweight child to eat all of his lunch, the understanding to be that the surprise is a reward for a cleaned lunch box.

Stuffed Peppers Baked Potatoes
Quick Oven Scones Salad
Peach Cake Black Coffee
Peppers are plentiful in the market now, and they make a delicious main dish stuffed with a mixture of cooked rice, leftover meat, tomatoes and onion, or with breadcrumbs taking the place of rice, and then baked. I have always felt a little guilty that I never scald my peppers before stuffing and baking, but I did not consider it necessary. Recently I read an article by a household expert who admitted that she did not scald her peppers either.

Today's Recipes

Quick Oven Scones—Two cakes yeast, two cups milk, scalded and cooled; one tablespoon butter, one cup sugar, one-third cup shortening, one egg, one cup raisins, one-half cup citron, six and one-half cups sifted flour, one teaspoon salt. Dissolve yeast and one tablespoon sugar in lukewarm milk, add three cups flour and beat well. Cover and let rise in warm place, free from draught, until light—about one hour. Then add butter and sugar creamed, the egg well beaten, fruit well floured, balance of flour, or enough to make a moderately soft dough, and the salt. Turn on board, knead lightly. Form into twenty round cakes. Cover and allow them to rise fifteen minutes. Then roll one-fourth inch thick, cut across each way nearly through, making an impression of four cakes. Place in well-greased pans. Let rise about one hour, or until double in size. Then brush with egg diluted with water. Bake 15 minutes in moderately hot oven (375 degrees Fahrenheit).

Peach Cake—Split sponge cake—either home made or baker's—put together with sliced peaches and cover with whipped cream.

SUGGESTIONS

Cheese Sandwich Filling
Three-quarters pound snappy cheese (New York), butter size of walnut, one-half teaspoon dry mustard (scant), one teaspoon salt, one teaspoon pepper (scant), dash paprika, one-half cup milk (very scant), one egg. Grate the cheese, melt in a double boiler and add the butter. Beat egg and add milk. Mix dry ingredients and add to the beaten egg and milk. Add all to the milk and cheese, stirring constantly. Cool. Spread one side of the bread with this filling and the other side with butter. Press together and toast. Serve hot.
This filling will keep several days in a closed jar in the ice box. However, it will need creaming before it can be spread on bread.

Steepchase

Put cooked lamb through the food chopper. Season it with minced onion, chopped parsley, salt and pepper, and moisten it with a little white sauce, just enough to hold the meat together.
Form into croquettes, cone-shaped, and set away in ice box for half an hour to cool. Roll in egg mixture, then in bread crumbs, and fry in deep hot fat until browned.
At last minute, drop bacon curls into the hot fat to brown, and serve the croquettes with a bacon curl atop each, fastened on with a toothpick, end of which is concealed with a tiny bit of parsley.

The World and All

By CHARLES B. DRISCOLL

ALL ABOUT LONDON

One of the charms of London is the atmosphere of history that is to be found everywhere.

Of course I ate many times at the Cheshire Cheese, where all Americans eat. I heard nothing but American conversation there, except from the waiters. But, unlike many of our writing tourists, it doesn't make me feel bad to hear Americans talk. I think they talk very well.

I ate where Dickens and Dr. Johnson ate, and rather admired those fine old boys for having chosen so good a place to eat. I visited the Old Curiosity Shop, and mourned a little that it has not been possible to keep it from becoming a souvenir mart.

Westminster Abbey disappointed me at first. The two towers are not quite up to the rest of the structure. They are inadequate. I was glad to learn that they were built long after the rest of the building had been completed, and were not designed by the original architects. But forget the towers, and the old Abbey is a magnificent piece of architecture—from the outside.

Inside, the grand old Abbey has been rather roughly handled. Practically all the modern construction work has an incongruous look. As long as your eye clings to the old work, you are charmed.

But the statuary! Taken in the mass, it is simply frightful. Taken a piece at a time, it is almost without exception in bad taste. There are a few exceptions. There are a few tombs and monuments that would be beautiful if they had elbow room. But the whole effect of the hundreds of marble angels, stone flowers, ridiculous imitations of oak trees and climbing vines, is a nightmare.

I was encouraged when several Englishmen of good standing and respectable intelligence told me that they shared my impressions of the interior of the Abbey, and that there is a very definite movement afoot among English lovers of the beautiful to have the whole chamber of horrors cleared and to have the graves all marked by simple tablets.

London has some fine old buildings, and a few good monuments. St. Paul's of course. The Houses of Parliament and the Law Courts. Several churches.

The business buildings are generally and almost uniformly drab and uninteresting. Bush House, built by the American, Irving T. Bush, is much the best-looking modern building in London. New York, Chicago, Detroit and Cleveland are infinitely more presentable as business centers than London.

But London has abundance of parks, parklets and parkways. Not all grouped in one area, as happens with so many of our American cities, but so well distributed that one is hardly ever out of sight of a spot of green or a glimpse of water.

Living and Loving

"OH DEAR" OR "DARN," IF USED EMPHATICALLY, REALLY SWEAR WORDS

By Virginia Lee

Girls who cause their parents worry are generally users of swear words, it has been found by the ever ready statisticians.

No statistics are available on the amount of cussing among girls generally, and how many girls who do not worry their parents are addicted to the habit.

In my day girls did not swear. You simply did not belong to the best people if you said anything stronger than darn, and even that was considered pretty rough.

Cussing is a habit, just like saying please or thanks. You can put just as much feeling into saying "Oh dear" as you can into saying damn, so that effeminate expression is really swearing, if you want to use it that way.

Swearing is merely giving vent to the emotions of shock or anger. So that the statistics merely show that girls who are behavior problems to their parents are unrestrainedly emotional, lacking in self-control.

"Dear Virginia Lee: I am a boy of 16 and in love with a girl of 14. We used to go together a good bit, but she acts as though she has lost interest in me. How can I get her back? When I am with her I am shy and don't know what to talk about. What should a boy talk about to a girl?"

"B-VILLE."

Find out what she is interested in, clothes, books, music, school, friends, etc., and talk about them. Give her a good time when you are with her and she will be interested in you.

"Dear Virginia Lee: We are two wondering girls coming to you to find out whether this case is jealousy or advice. We were talking to a boy friend the other night and he told us not to go with two certain boys in our neighborhood.
"Shall we pay attention to him? This boy has a steady. Do you think a boy who has a steady and goes with about a dozen other girls when not with her, cares for her? One could have no better friend than this boy."
"BLUE EYES AND BROWN EYES."

As the boy has a girl friend of his own I should think the advice he gave you is likely to be disinterested and that you had better heed it, girls. If the boy's "steady" does not object to his going with others, it is all right.

He might love her, but have an agreement that both could go out with others.

LONELY AND BLUE: No, I don't think the fact that the boys' father calls you flappers has anything to do with their failure to take you riding again. They probably are not as strongly attracted to you girls as you are to them. Don't act or talk like flappers and you won't be classed with them, except as men are quite apt to playfully call all pretty young girls by that name. You can't do anything about the matter except to wave in a friendly way when they pass and hope they'll ask to ride again soon.

BLONDE AND BRUNETTE: If your parents don't disapprove, you are old enough to have schoolboy friends. Don't wave at strange men. Complexion does not make or mar friendships. If a blonde girl and a brunette girl like the same things and have a good time together they will be good friends, otherwise not. Your parents should decide the matter of car riding with boy friends and don't kiss too often or too hard.

SPIDER: As you were in the wrong, at least in part, in your quarrel, don't let pride stand in your way. Call the boy friend up and say you're sorry. He tried to make up afterwards, according to your letter, and you wouldn't, so it's up to you to make the next move.

"My Dear Virginia Lee: I am in love with a young man three years my senior. I am 20. I finished school two years ago and have been going with this young man ever since. He confessed to love me one night and the next morning went away with another girl two years his senior.
"He returned two days later without the young lady and immediately after returning asked me for a date that night. I refused and said that I had another engagement. He left town next day and has not been heard of since. This is two months ago. Did I wrong him? Should I have given him a date after he treated me the way he did?
"Worried."

I think you treated him just as he deserved. Worried. His declaration of love evidently didn't mean a thing or he wouldn't have left with another girl. Try to put him out of your life, as he evidently is not worth of your affection.

PINCKNEY WINS FIRST WORLD SERIES GAME

Moran Allows Five Hits and Pitches a Shutout. Pinckney Gets 13 Hits Off Baker

The Pinckney-Michigamme base ball team got the edge in the world's series being played by Pinckney and Hamburg by taking the opening game by a score of 11 to 0. Jimmie Moran was a complete puzzle to Hamburg letting them down with five hits and getting a well earned shutout. Baker pitched a fairly creditable game for Hamburg until the 8th when the local team got two doubles and four singles off him and scored 6 runs.

In the first inning Spencer first up for Hamburg was safe on Hollis error. Lear was out, Brown unassisted, Winkhouse hit to Moran and Spencer was out at third. Radtke singled to left, Webber struck out. In Pinckney's half Judson fled out to Johnson, Hollis and Beeman struck out. Second inning: Hollis threw out Bennett, Baker struck out, Searles and Johnson singled, Spencer struck out. For Pinck, Eck walked, Richmond bunted and was safe when Baker threw wild to first after fielding it. Cox hit to right scoring both Eck and Richmond. Brown singled over second scoring Cox. Moran hit into a double play, and Lee fled out to center. Third inning: Lear struck out, Hollis threw out Winkhouse, Radtke walked, Webber struck out. For the locals Judson fled out, Lear threw out Hollis and Beeman struck out. Fourth inning: Bennett fled out to Richmond, Baker fled out to Moran, Searles got a hit and Eck threw out Johnson. Last half, Eck singled, Richmond fled out to Webber, Cox hit to the mill pond for three base, Eck scoring. Brown fled out, Moran singled scoring Cox. Lee struck out. In the fifth inning: Judson threw out Spencer, Lear fled to Brown, Winkhouse was safe on Eck's wide throw to Brown, Radtke fled to Judson. Last half Judson fled out to Radtke, Hollis struck out, Webber threw out Beeman. Sixth inning: Webber was safe on Hollis low throw, Bennett hit into a double play, Moran to Hollis to Brown. Judson threw out Baker. Last half: Eck singled, Richmond sacrificed him to second. Webber threw out Cox and Radtke threw out Brown. Seventh inning: Judson threw out both Searles and Johnson and caught Spencer's fly. Last half: Moran fled to Webber, Lee tripled, Judson and Hollis both fled to Webber. Eighth inning: Lear fled out to Hollis, Winkhouse struck out. Last half, Beeman was out. Spencer unassisted, Eck singled to center, Richmond doubled, Eck scoring. Baker threw out Cox, Brown hit to center, Richmond scoring. Moran doubled, scoring Brown, Lee was hit by pitched ball, Judson singled, scoring Judson and Beeman fled out to center. In the ninth inning: Bennett struck out, Baker fled out to Richmond, Searles struck out.

Dexter touchdown was made in the third period on three successive forward passes. Pinckney only tried two passes during the game both of which were successful. Most of Pinckney's gains were made around end and through tackle. Murray Kennedy gained the most yardage for the local team and also played well on defense breaking up several of Dexter's forward passes. The Pinckney backfield which is composed of green men except Capt. Kennedy, showed a number of rough spots especially on blocking and tackling which must be smoothed out before Pinckney takes on stronger teams. Dexter failed to offer the opposition expected and the game was more in the nature of a workout. However there will undoubtedly be much improvement shown by the boys from now on. This week Friday they go to South Lyon to play that team there. Not much is known about this team as Pinckney has not met them for several years but the boys will go all primed to win.

SEPT. 29 TO BE COUNTY SUNDAY SCHOOL RALLY DAY

Sunday School workers, especially those in the Lansing area, are working and planning for a "Rally Day" in the Sunday Schools. At a meeting recently held at Howell, the executive committee of the Livingston County Council of Religious Education and ministers of the county unanimously agreed to make the day one long to be remembered.

All churches are asked to make as much of the day as possible and on the evening of September 29, the date selected for the rally, a union service will be held in Howell, to which all the schools of the county will be invited. A special program will be given, featuring "Christian Education." "Go to Sunday School September 29" posters may be secured at any time from Rev. H. M. Noble of Howell or may be ordered direct from the Michigan Council of Religious Education at Lansing.

WORLD SERIES NOTES

The attendance at this game was the largest this year with the exception of the game picnic day. Fans from Dexter, Chelsea, Stockbridge, Howell and Whitmore Lake were present besides the Pinckney and Hamburg delegations.

Moran pitched one of the best games of the year. He retired the side on four pitched balls in the 7th.

Gus Eck as usual went like a house afire in a Pinckney uniform. A base on balls and three hits gave him a batting average of .1000 for the day.

Home Run Cox was the demon batsman driving in three runs and scoring two more himself.

Judson who played second for the local team is a fielder on the Charley Gehring type. He has been playing for Dexter this summer.

Brown made a nice pickup of Hollis throw to complete a double play in the 6th. He also got two timely hits.

Both the triples made by Cox and Lee were near home runs, going down the bank toward the pond.

Spencer attempted to steal third in the first but was out when he overslid the bag in making a fade way slide.

Beeman who enjoys considerable reputation as a batsman was the only Pinckney player who did not hit safely.

Incidentally this is only the second defeat for Baker in 14 starts.

Well one swallow doesn't make a summer and Pinckney still has the second game to win. Hamburg will have the advantage in this as it will be played at their grounds.
